God, and of one and the same nature; but at other times they that heard him, perceived it very well; and so, in this place, they were for stoning him to death. Wi.

VER. 28. When you shall have lifted up, &c. That is, have put me to the death of the cross; (see John iii. 14. and xii. 32.) you, that is, many of you, shall know, and believe in me, as your Messias. Wi.

VER. 31. If you persevere in the true faith, and in the observance of my words, you shall be my disciples indeed. It is not sufficient to believe; you must likewise do what my words command you to do: nor will it be sufficient to have the true faith for a time; you must persevere in that faith to the end. S. Aug. Ven. Bede. S. Chrys. Theophyl. Euthym. &c.—Faith alone without perseverance, or abiding in God's commandments, will not suffice. B.

VER. 32. And the truth shall make you free. They were affronted at these words, as if he hinted they were slaves, and not a free people. They tell him, therefore, that they were never slaves to any one. They can only pretend this of themselves: for, their forefathers were slaves to the Egyptians, to the Babylonians, &c. and besides they were now the subjects, if not slaves, to the Romans. But Christ speaks of the worst of slaveries, and tells them that such as live in sin, are slaves to sin. Wi.

VER. 35. Now the servant abideth not in the house for ever, nor has a right to live in that manner as a son and a child of the family has to live in his father's house. A slave or servant, though he live ever so long in his master's house, his condition is quite different from that of a son of the family: and thus Christ puts them in mind that though they be of the race of Abraham, and in that sense can pretend to be his children, yet having made themselves slaves to sin, and remaining in that sin, by which they refuse to believe in him, their Messias, they are not the spiritual children of Abraham, nor can they inherit the promises made to Abraham, till, by the grace of Christ, they believe in him, and become his adoptive children. Wi.

VER. 36. Man never was without free-will; but, having the grace of Christ, his will is truly made free from the servitude of sin. S. Austin, tract. 41. in Joan.

VER. 37. You, That is, many of you, seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you; that is, is not rightly understood, nor received by you: you reject my doctrine, and are displeased with it. Wi.

VER. 38. The things that you have seen with your father. That is, you follow the suggestions of the devil, whom, (v. 44.) in plain terms, he calls their father. Wi.

VER. 39. Not only faith but good works make men children of Abraham. See James, c. ii.

VER. 41. We are not born of fornication; we have one Father, God. These Jews perceived that Christ had hinted that they were not the true and faithful sons of Abraham; and therefore they replied in this manner. But Christ an-42 Jesus therefore said to them: If God were your father, verily you would love me. For I proceeded and came from God: for I came not of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do you not know my speech? Because you cannot hear my word.

44 *You are of your father, the devil, and the desires of your father you will do. He was a murderer from the beginning, and he abode not in the truth: because truth is not in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father thereof.

45 But if I say the truth, you believe me not.

46 Which of you shall convince me of sin? If I say the truth to you, why do you not believe me?

47 ^bHe that is of God, heareth the words of God. Therefore, you hear them not, because you are not of God.

48 The Jews, therefore, answered, and said to him: Do we not say well that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?

49 Jesus answered: I have not a devil: but I honour my Father, and you have dishonoured me.

50 But I seek not my own glory: there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 Amen, amen, I say to you, if any man keep my word, he shall not see death for ever.

52 The Jews, therefore, said, Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets: and thou sayest, If any man keep my word, he shall not taste death for ever.

53 Art thou greater than our father, Abraham, who answered, if God was your Father, if you were his dutiful children, you would also believe in me, and love me; for I have proceeded from him, and am come from him, his true Son: and now sent into the world by him. But you cannot hear my word, because you will not, by your own wilful obstinate blindness. Wi.

* 1 John iii. 8.

VER. 44. You are of your father, the devil, and have made yourselves his slaves.—He was a murderer from the beginning of the world, having brought both a corporal and a spiritual death by sin, upon all mankind.—He abode not in the truth, in the ways of truth and obedience to God.—He is a liar, and the father thereof: that is, the father of lies. I speak truth, being truth itself. Wi.—S. Austin compares heretics, who drive Christians out of the Church, to the devil, who was the cause of our first parents' banishment from paradise. Cont. lit. Petil. l. ii. c. 13.

VER. 51. He shall not see death, he shall not die, for ever. That is, he shall not incur an eternal death, as they who die in sin: but they understood his words of the death of the body. Wi.—You accuse me of being possessed with a devil, because I preach to you a doctrine far different from what you are accustomed to hear; but I speak nothing but the truth; I give honour to my Father, I execute his orders; and the words I now speak to you, are the words of eternal life. Whoever observes them shall not die. Moses promised a long life to those who observed what was commanded in the old law, and offered them as their reward goods and temporal prosperity. But I now offer you an eternal life. Believe my words, keep them, and observe my ordinances, and you shall not feel the death of the soul, the second, eternal, and most miserable of deaths. Calmet.

VER. 56. Abraham, your father, rejoiced that he might see my day, my entrance into this world, my incarnation, my birth, my manifestation in Israel, my death and passion. S. Irenaeus, Origen, S. Cyril, &c.—He waited with impatience for the deliverance of the whole world. He saw it, and was glad. He saw it in spirit, for God revealed it to him. He saw it approaching in the birth of his son Isaac, and in the miraculous deliverance of his dear son, when he was commanded to offer him in sacrifice to the Lord. The vivacity of his faith made him, as it were, present at the time of my birth, though then so far off. S. Chrys. Leont. Theophyl. Euth.—It is not unlikely that this patriarch, and the others who were with him, detained in limbo, were apprised of the incarnation and coming of the Messiah, which would fill them with an effusion of inexpressible joy. S. Chrys.—Christ here teaches us two things. 1. That he was before Abraham. 2. That the Jews were not true sons of Abraham, now treating so rudely him, who, even before his coming, had given the patriarch so much joy. Calmet.

VER. 58. Before Abraham was made, I am. S. Christ here speaks of his eternal existence as God. S. Aug. shews this by these very words, I am. He does not say, before Abraham was made, I was made: because, as the Son of God, he never was made: but I am which shews his eternal divine nature. Wi.

is dead? and the prophets are dead. Whom dost thou make thyself?

54 Jesus answered: If I glorify myself, my glory is nothing: it is my Father that glorifieth me, whom you say that he is your God.

55 And you have not known him, but I know him: And if I should say that I know him not, I should be like to you, a liar. But I know him, and keep his word.

56 Abraham, your father, rejoiced that he might see my day: he saw it, and was glad.

57 The Jews then said to him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?

58 Jesus said to them, Amen, amen, I say to you, before Abraham was made, I am.

59 Then they took up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple.

CHAP. IX.

He gives sight to the man born blind.

AND Jesus passing by, saw a man that was blind from his birth.

2 And his disciples asked him: Rabbi, who hath sinned, this man, or his parents, that he should be born blind?

3 Jesus answered: Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents, but that the works of God should be made manifest in him.

4 I must work the works of him that sent me, whilst it is day; the night cometh, when no man can work.

5 As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world.

6 When he had said these things, he spat on the ^b 1 John iv. 6.

* V. 1. In multis Latinis et Græcis codicibus invenitur. S. Hierom. See the Greek edition of the New Testament, at Amsterdam, ex officina Westenianna, an. 1711, in notis Criticis in fine, p. 17.

† V. 9. Ἀπὸ τῆς συνειδήσεως, διεγχεόμενος.

† V. 25. Principium qui et loquor vobis. S. Aug. reads, quia loquor vobis, as we find in some Greek MSS. and in S. Cyr. p. 511. In the common copies we read, τὴν ἀρχὴν, ὅτι καὶ λαλῶ ὑμῖν. And as τὴν ἀρχὴν is in the accusative case, so we may take principium; and to be taken adverbially, to signify the same as primum, a principio, imprimis. Maldonat. is of the same opinion, as well as many others, and brings examples to shew that τὴν ἀρχὴν (i. e. κατὰ τὴν ἀρχὴν) is often taken for primum; and so the sense will be, I am what I told you from the beginning, i. e. the Messiah, and this I now tell you again. We may also take notice, that the Greek construction is hard to be accounted for, τὴν ἀρχὴν ὅτι, not ὅτι, qui, nor ἕ, to agree with ἀρχή.

§ V. 58. Abraham fieret, ego sum; πρὶν Ἀβραὰμ γενέσθαι, ἐγὼ εἰμι. S. Aug. (tract. xliii. in Joan. num. 17. p. 588.) intellige, fieret ad creaturam, sum vero pertinere ad divinam substantiam: non dixit, antequam Abraham esset, ego eram, . . . neque dixit, ego factus sum . . . agnoscite creatorem, discernite creaturam.

CHAP. IX. VER. 2. When Christ healed the paralytic, he dismissed him with this injunction: Behold thou art made whole; now sin no more. From this the disciples concluded, that his infirmity was sent him in punishment of former sins. When, therefore, they saw this man afflicted with blindness, they inquired of their divine Master, whether it was on account of his or his parents' sin. S. John Chrys. hom. lv. in Joan.

VER. 3. When Christ says that neither he nor his parents had sinned, we must not understand that he was born without original sin, nor even that he had not committed other sins. For both he and his parents had sinned; but the meaning is, that this blindness was not a penal blindness inflicted in punishment of any sin either himself or his parents had committed; but, as is afterwards subjoined, it was sent him for the manifestation of the glory of God. S. Austin, tract. xlii. in Joan.

VER. 4. Whilst it is day. That is, during all the time of this mortal life; the night comes, that is, death. Wi.—He speaks of that night of which mention is made in S. Matt. c. xlii. Cast him into exterior darkness. This is a night in which none can work, but only receive the reward of their labours. If you wish to work, work now whilst you live; for beyond the grave there is neither faith, nor labour, nor repentance. S. Chrys. as above.

VER. 5. Thus the day of which I am to avail myself is the time of my mortal life; and the night which is to follow this, is that of my death. V.

VER. 6. He spat on the ground. With clay and spittle he cured the blind (1411) ground, and made clay of the spittle, and spread the clay upon his eyes ;

7 And said to him : Go, wash in the pool of Siloe, (which is interpreted, Sent). He went, therefore, and washed, and he came seeing.

8 The neighbours, therefore, and they who had seen him before that he was a beggar, said : Is not this he that sat, and begged ? Some said : This is he.

9 But others, No : but he is like him. But he said : I am he.

10 They said, therefore, to him : How were thy eyes opened ?

11 He answered : That man who is called Jesus, made clay, and anointed my eyes, and said to me ; Go to the pool of Siloe, and wash. And I went, I washed, and I see.

12 And they said to him : Where is he ? He saith ; I know not.

13 They bring him that had been blind, to the Pharisees.

14 Now it was the sabbath, when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes.

15 Again, therefore, the Pharisees asked him how he had received his sight. But he said to them : He put clay upon my eyes, and I washed, and I see.

16 Some, therefore, of the Pharisees said ; This man is not of God, who keepeth not the sabbath. But others said ; How can a man that is a sinner do such miracles ? And there was a division among them.

17 They say, therefore, to the blind man again ; What sayest thou of him that hath opened thy eyes ? And he said ; He is a prophet.

18 The Jews then did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind and had received his sight, until they called the parents of him that had received his sight :

19 And asked them, saying ; Is this your son, who you say was born blind ? How then doth he now see ?

20 His parents answered them, and said : We know that this is our son, and that he was born blind :

21 But how he now seeth, we know not : or who hath opened his eyes, we know not : ask himself ; he is of age ; let him speak for himself.

22 These things his parents said ; because they feared the Jews : for the Jews had already agreed among themselves, that if any man should confess him to be Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue.

23 Therefore did his parents say ; He is of age ; ask himself.

24 They, therefore, called the man again that had been blind, and said to him : Give glory to God. We know that this man is a sinner.

25 He said then to them ; If he be a sinner, I know not : one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I see.

26 Then they said to him ; What did he to thee ? how did he open thy eyes ?

27 He answered them : I have told you already, and you have heard : why would you hear it again ? will you also become his disciples ?

28 They reviled him, therefore, and said ; Be thou his disciple : but we are the disciples of Moses.

29 We know that God spoke to Moses : but as to this man, we know not from whence he is.

30 The man answered, and said to them ; Why herein is a wonderful thing, that you know not from whence he is, and he hath opened my eyes :

31 Now we know that God doth not hear sinners : but if a man be a worshipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth.

32 From the beginning of the world it hath not been heard, that any man hath opened the eyes of one born blind.

33 Unless this man were of God, he could not do any thing.

34 They answered, and said to him : Thou wast wholly born in sins, and dost thou teach us ? And they cast him out.

35 Jesus heard that they had cast him out : and when he had found him, he said to him ; Dost thou believe in the Son of God ?

36 He answered, and said ; Who is he, Lord, that I may believe in him ?

37 And Jesus said to him ; Thou hast both seen him, and it is he who talketh with thee.

38 And he said ; I believe, Lord. And falling down, he adored him.

39 And Jesus said ; For judgment I am come into this world ; that they who see not, may see, and they who see, may become blind.

man, to make the miracle more visible. Wi.—From the example of Jesus Christ, religious ceremonies are introduced in the administration of the sacraments ; and can the Church be blamed for copying her divine Founder ? A.

VER. 7. The fountain of Siloe was at the foot of the walls of Jerusalem, to the east, where its waters were collected in a reservoir for the benefit of the city. Thither our Saviour sent the blind man. The word Siloe signifies sent, and was a figure of Christ, who was sent by his eternal Father into the world to enlighten all men, of whom this blind man was the emblem. The pool of Siloe represents the sacrament of baptism, by which we are sanctified and made Christians. It is still to this day held in great veneration by the Turks, who think its waters very beneficial in diseases of the eyes. Calmet.—Its waters signify those of divine grace and light, communicated to the faithful soul through Jesus Christ, who was sent of God. V.—Thus Sedulius :

Cognoscite cuncti,

Mystica quid doceant animos miracula nostros.
Cæca sumus proles miseræ de fœtibus Hevæ,
Portantes longo natus errore tenebras.
Sed dignante Deo mortalem sumere formam
Tegminis humani, facta est de Virgine nobis
Terra salutaris, quæ fontibus oblita sacris
Clara renascentis referat spiracula lucis.

VER. 17. The Hebrews gave the name of prophet to all those who were honoured by the Almighty in a particular manner. And it was a maxim amongst them, that a prophet could dispense with the law of the sabbath. Cal.—Do you (1412) wish to know what he believed Jesus to be ? asks S. Austin. And falling down, he adored him. Before, he regarded him as a holy man, as a prophet ; but he did not adore him until he understood him to be the Son of God ; whereas no sooner did he know this, than, falling down, he paid him that sovereign worship which is due to God alone. Calmet.

VER. 22. The Jews had already agreed, or combined together, that if any one owned him for the Messiah, he should be turned out of their synagogues, as a person excommunicated. Wi.

VER. 24. Give glory to God, before whom thou art speaking, and tell us the truth. It could not be this man who cured thee ; for we know he is a sinner, who seduceth the people. V.—So say our separated brethren, when they derogate from miracles done by saints, pharisaically pretending the glory of God, as if it were not God's glory when his servants act by his power and virtue. Witness Peter's shadow, (Acts v.) and Paul's handkerchiefs that cured diseases and expelled wicked spirits. Acts xix. 11, 12.

VER. 27. I have told you already, and you have heard. In almost all Greek MSS. we now read, and you have not heard. Beza, with good reason, here prefers the Latin Vulgate, as more correct than the Greek. Wi.

VER. 28. They reviled him with scornful* and disdainful language. Wi.

VER. 31. God doth not hear sinners. That is, in so particular a manner, as to work miracles in favour of them and their doctrine. Wi.

VER. 32. From the beginning of the world it hath not been heard. Though we read of many miracles done by Moses and the prophets, this, saith he, is the first example of any man receiving his sight who had been born blind. Wi.

40 And some of the Pharisees, that were with him, heard: and they said to him; Are we also blind?

41 Jesus said to them; If you were blind, you should not have sin: but now you say, We see; Your sin remaineth.

CHAP. X.

Christ is the door, and the good shepherd. He and his Father are one.

AMEN, amen, I say to you; he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up another way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2 But he that entereth in by the door, is the shepherd of the sheep;

3 To whom the porter openeth: and the sheep hear his voice, and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

4 And when he hath let out his own sheep, he goeth before them: and the sheep follow him, because they know his voice.

5 But a stranger they follow not, but fly from him, because they know not the voice of strangers.

6 This parable Jesus spoke to them. But they understood not what he was speaking to them.

7 Jesus, therefore, said to them again; Amen, amen, I say to you, I am the door of the sheep.

8 All they who came, are thieves and robbers, and the sheep heard them not.

VER. 39. For judgment I am come into this world. Christ said (c. iii. 17.) that God did not send his Son to judge the world: the same he repeats; (John xii. 47.) nor is this contradictory to those words: the meaning here is not that he is come to exercise the office of a judge, but he tells them what will be the consequences of his coming, and their refusing to believe in him, that they shall be justly punished with the greatest severity for their wilful blindness. Wi.—Jesus Christ came into the world that the pagans, who were yet in darkness, might receive light, and that the Jews, who enjoyed the light, might fall into darkness. The Jews were thus condemned, on account of their presumption and hardness of heart, and grace was granted to the Gentiles to enter into the true Church. These are the designs of the Almighty upon mankind, some of whom remain in infidelity, whilst others receive the light of faith; but all is done by the secret and impenetrable decrees of the justice and wisdom of God. The Holy Ghost, by these words, tells us only what was to be the event, not what was the cause of these things. We must seek for the cause of them in the malice of the heart of man, and in the depth of the judgments of God. Cal.—I am come, &c. Not that Christ came for that end, that any one should be made blind; but that the Jews, by the abuse of his coming, and by their not receiving him, brought upon themselves this judgment of blindness. Ch.

VER. 40-41. The Pharisees then replied: and are we also blind? Jesus said to them: if you were blind, by ignorance in not having heard of me, and my doctrine, you might be excused for not believing; but now saying, we see: and having been yourselves in the occasions and opportunities of seeing, your sin remaineth, and you in your sins. Wi.—If you were blind, &c. If you were invincibly ignorant, and had neither read the Scriptures, nor seen my miracles, you would not be guilty of the sin of infidelity: but now, as you boast of your knowledge of the Scriptures, you are inexcusable. Ch.—If you had humility enough to acknowledge your blindness and ignorance, and seriously to seek for a remedy, you would soon be delivered from sin, and freed from the evil of blindness. But filled as you are with presumption, you remain still in blindness, which, as it is voluntary, is at the same time criminal and inexcusable. This is your evil; this your sin. Calmet.—We here see that it is judged by truth itself far better not to read the Scriptures at all, than to read them with bad dispositions; not to see the miracles of Jesus Christ, than to refuse our assent to their author. At the present day all read the Scriptures, but do we see any marked improvement in the moral world? The text, without any comment, is given to Churchmen and to Dissenters: the latter gladly accept the offering, because, as the Rev. Frederick Noland observes, (in his objections of a Churchman to uniting with the Bible society, p. 34) “the authorized version is in many places accommodated to their peculiar opinions, through the conciliatory spirit of the Church, which revised the text for the purpose of doing their objections away.” And in his note on this part, he adds: “The last revision of the translation of the Bible was undertaken, as is notorious, for the purpose of removing certain objections made to the old version by the non-conformists. That the execution has been answerable to the intent, is evident from the fact of the Dissenters having withdrawn their exceptions, and adopted the version. Comp. Nichols. Defens. Eccles. Anglic. p. 33. Pierre. Vindic. Fratr. Dissent. p. 60-67.” Thus (Acts xiv. 23.) “χειροτονήσαντες δὲ ἀδελφοὺς προσβύτην κατ’ ἐκκλησίαν.” When they had ordained them elders by election, in every church. Bp’s Bible. When they had ordained them elders in every church. Authora vera. These words, as applied to S. Paul and S. Barnabas, who had merely received first orders, (Acts xiii. 2.) form in the former version an argument against presbyters’ right to ordain, and in the latter one in favour of that practice.” As a further accommodation, he says the word elders was substituted

9 I am the door. If any one enter by me, he shall be saved: and he shall go in, and go out, and shall find pastures.

10 The thief cometh not, but to steal, and to kill, and to destroy. I am come that they may have life, and may have it more abundantly.

11 I am the good shepherd. *The good shepherd giveth his life for his sheep.

12 But the hireling, and he that is not the shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth: and the wolf snatcheth, and scattereth the sheep:

13 And the hireling fleeth, because he is a hireling: and he hath no care for the sheep.

14 I am the good shepherd, and I know mine, and mine know me.

15 ^bAs the Father knoweth me, and I know the Father, and I lay down my life for my sheep.

16 And other sheep I have, that are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold, and one shepherd.

17 Therefore doth the Father love me: *because I lay down my life, that I may take it again.

18 No man taketh it away from me: but I lay it down of myself, and I have power to lay it down; and for presbyters, &c. “Independency in the very nature of it is schism; for every congregation is a distinct church.” Sherl. Def. of Stillingfl.

* Isai. xl. 11. Ezeq. xxxiv. 23. and xxxvii. 24.—^b Matt. xi. 27. Luke x. 22.—^c Isai. liii. 7.

* V. 28. Maledixerunt, ἐλοιδόνησαν, reviled, rather than cursed.

CHAP. X. VER. 1, &c. In this parable the fold is the Church: the good shepherd, and also the door is Christ: the thieves and robbers are false guides; the hirelings, such ministers as seek their own profit and gain, and a good living, as they call it; the wolves, heretics; the sheep not yet brought into the fold, the Gentiles not then converted. Wi.

VER. 3. His own sheep by name. By this is signified the particular care. Wi.

VER. 4. He goeth before them, leads them by his instructions and example. Wi.

VER. 8. All they who came are thieves, meaning those who came of their own accord, without being sent: not so the prophets, who had their mission from God. Wi.

VER. 11. How happy are we in having such a shepherd, so great, so good, so loving, so careful of our true welfare! O he is the true shepherd indeed, that came down from heaven to seek the poor sheep that was lost; and when he had found it, took it upon his own shoulders to carry it home with joy to his heavenly fold. How dearly has his sheep cost him, for truly has he made good in himself this sentence, that the good shepherd giveth his life for his sheep. Let us then ever follow and obey, love and embrace this true shepherd of our souls. Meditations for every Day, vol. ii. p. 417. The good pastor gives his life for his sheep; he exposes himself to every danger to save them, no inclemency of the weather, no frost or cold, no rains or tempests, can drive him from looking over his sheep, to defend them from the attacks of wolves, &c. and like Jacob he might say, day and night was I parched with heat, and with cold, and sleep departed from my eyes. Gen. xl. Or, like David speaking to Saul: “Thy servant kept his father’s sheep, and there came a lion or a bear, and took a ram out of the midst of the flock; and I pursued after them, and struck them, and delivered it out of their mouths; and they arose up against me, and I caught them by the throat, and I strangled them, and killed them.” 1 Kings xvii. This is a model of a true pastor. But Jesus Christ has done more than this for us. He has exposed his life and his repose, he has spilled his blood, he delivered himself to the fury of his enemies, and has offered himself as a victim on the cross to his eternal Father, to free us, his lost sheep, from the most cruel wolf, the devil. And ever since his death he has always protected his Church, assisted and consoled his distressed flock under all their sufferings, pouring into their hearts the consolations of the holy Spirit, and sending to them holy teachers, to govern and lead them in the holy path of salvation. Such were the apostles and their successors, the bishops and priests of the holy Catholic Church, whom he has sent, and will continue to send, to govern his flock to the end of time. Calmet.

VER. 13. Every bishop and pastor is bound to abide with his flock in the time of danger, and persecution, except himself be personally sought for, rather than the flock, or the flock itself forsake him. In such cases the pastor may fly, as the apostles did, and S. Athanasius and others. S. Athan. Apol. de sua fuga. S. Aug. ep. 180.

VER. 14. I know mine, and mine know me. To know, in the style of the holy Scriptures, is to love and approve. Wi.

VER. 15. I lay down. That is, in a short time shall lay down my life for my sheep: for all, and in a special manner for my elect. See v. 28. Wi.

VER. 16. One fold. In the Greek one flock. The signification is the same: that is, there shall be one church of Jews and Gentiles converted. Wi.

I have power to take it up again. This commandment I have received from my Father.

19 A dissension rose again among the Jews for these words.

20 And many of them said: He hath a devil, and is mad: why hear you him?

21 Others said; These are not the words of one that hath a devil: Can a devil open the eyes of the blind?

22 And it was the feast of the dedication at Jerusalem, and it was winter:

23 And Jesus walked in the temple, in Solomon's porch.

24 The Jews, therefore, came round about him, and said to him; How long dost thou keep our minds in suspense? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly.

25 Jesus answered them; I speak to you, and you believe not: the works that I do in the name of my Father, they give testimony of me:

26 But you do not believe, because you are not of my sheep.

27 My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me:

28 And I give them life everlasting: and they shall not perish for ever, and no man shall snatch them out of my hand.

29 That which my Father hath given me, is greater than all: and no one can snatch them out of the hand of my Father.

* 1 Mac. iv. 56. and 59.

VER. 17. Therefore doth the Father love me, because I lay down my life, &c. Christ here speaketh of himself, as made man for the redemption of mankind: or rather, as he was our Redeemer, both God and man: for he laid down his life, and died as man, and had power to take it again, as God. Yet the command of laying it down, he as man received from the Father: thus as man, he was obedient to him even to the death on the cross. See Philip. ii. 8. Wi.

VER. 23. In the gallery of Solomon, which was near the temple, supposed to be attached to the eastern gate of the court, and called beautiful. See Acts iii. 2.

VER. 24. If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly. S. John Baptist had told them several times who Jesus was. See Jo. c. i. He himself had not only owned it in plain terms to the Samaritan woman, (Jo. iv. 26) but he had frequently delivered this truth so openly to them, that he came from heaven, that he was sent into the world that all men should be saved by believing in him, that he was the Son of God, and one with the Father, that they easily perceived he made himself God: but these men would have him to declare it again, that they might accuse him. Wi.

VER. 25. The works and miracles that I do in the name of my Father, they give testimony of me, and shew who I am, being foretold by the prophets. See Jo. v. 31, &c. Wi.

VER. 26. Because you are not of my sheep, refusing to believe in me, and to follow my doctrine, by your own wilful blindness. Wi.

VER. 27. Christ here says that his sheep hear his voice, and follow him: but let us ask ourselves, Do we cling close to this heavenly shepherd? Do we follow him, both by our faith and by our lives? Do we know him, and hear his voice? Do we fly from strangers, the world, the flesh, and the devil? If so, we are his sheep indeed; and if we persevere, he will bring us, in spite of the world, the flesh, and the devil, to the pastures of eternal life. But if we run away from our shepherd, to follow these strangers, we must expect to fall a prey to wolves. Med. vol. ii. p. 417.

VER. 28. They shall not perish for ever: and no man shall snatch them out of my hand. He speaks of his elect, of those whom he called by a special Providence and mercy, whom he blessed with more than ordinary graces, and with the gift of final perseverance to the end in his grace. Wi.

VER. 29. That which my Father hath given me, is greater than all. We may look upon this as the true reading by Tertullian, S. Hilary, S. Amb. S. Aug. &c. The ancient Fathers make use of these words, to shew the eternal procession of the Son from the Father; and that they are one in nature, substance, power, &c. This reading in the ordinary Greek copies is now different. My Father, who gave me them, (the sheep) is greater than all. No one can snatch, or pull them by force, out of the hand of the Father. He had said just before, no one shall, or can snatch them, out of my hand. And this shews that the hand, that is, the power of the Father and the Son, is equal, is one and the same. See S. Aug. S. Chrysostom, &c. Wi.

VER. 30. I and the Father are one,† or one being, not one person, nor one by an union of affection only, but in nature, substance, power, and other perfections, as appears by the whole text: for Christ here tells them that none of his elect shall perish, because no one can snatch them out of his hands, no more than out of 30 I and the Father are one.

31 The Jews then took up stones, to stone him.

32 Jesus answered them; Many good works I have shewn to you from my Father: for which of those works do you stone me?

33 The Jews answered him; For a good work we stone thee not, but for blasphemy: and because that thou, being a man, makest thyself God.

34 Jesus answered them; Is it not written in your law: † I have said, you are gods?

35 If he called them gods to whom the word of God was spoken, and the Scripture cannot be broken;

36 Do you say of him, whom the Father hath sanctified and sent into the world, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God?

37 If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not.

38 But if I do: though you will not believe me, believe the works; that you may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in the Father.

39 They sought, therefore, to take him: and he escaped out of their hands.

40 And he went away again beyond the Jordan into that place where John was baptizing first, and there he abode:

41 And many resorted to him, and they said: John indeed did no sign.

42 But all things whatsoever John said of this man were true. And many believed in him.

† Psal. lxxxi. 6.

the hands of his Father: and then adds, that he and his Father are one, or have one equal power: and if their power, says S. Chrys. is the same, so is their substance. Christ adds, (v. 38.) that the Father is in him, and he in the Father; which also shews an union of nature and substance, and not only of love and affection, especially when taken with other words of our Saviour Christ. Wi.

VER. 31. Then took up stones, &c. because, said they, being a man, thou makest thyself God. The Jews, says S. Aug. understood well enough what the Arians will not understand, that from Christ's words it followed that he was one and the same God with the eternal Father. Wi.—The Jews, in opposition to our Saviour's doctrine, took up stones to destroy him, in order that he might preach no more to them. So heretics at the present time exercise the odium of their impiety against the same Lord, by perverting his holy doctrines, and, as much as in them lies, pulling him and his servants down from the glorious seats of heavenly bliss. S. Aug.

VER. 34. This is addressed to princes established to govern the people of God. They are the image of God on earth by the authority they exercise, and which they have received from Him.—Is it not written in your law, (under which were also comprehended the Psalms) I have said: you are Gods? &c. Christ here stops the mouths of the Jews, by an argument which they could not answer, that sometimes they were called Gods, who acted by God's authority. I have said: you are Gods. Psal. lxxxi. 6. But then he immediately declares, that it is not in this sense only that he is God. 1st, Because he has been sanctified by the Father, which S. Aug. and others understand of that infinite sanctification, which he has necessarily by always proceeding from the Father. Others expound it of a greater sanctity and fullness of grace above all other saints, given to him, even as he was man. But 2dly, he adds at the same time, and confirms what he had often told them, that he was the Son of God, sent into the world: that his works shew that he was in the Father, and the Father in him. By this they saw that he was far from recalling or contradicting what he had said before. And therefore (v. 30.) they sought to apprehend him, and put him to death for blasphemy. Wi.—Elohim, which name of God was so called from judging, and may be interpreted judges. M.

VER. 39. And he escaped out of their hands; perhaps making himself invisible, or hindering them by his divine power. Wi.

* V. 29. Pater meus quod dedit mihi, majus est omnibus. See Tertul. l. cont. Praxeas. c. xxii. p. 513. C. Ed. R. S. Hilary. l. vii. de Trin. p. 930. Ed. Ben. S. Amb. l. iii. de Sp. S. c. 18. Ed. Par. 1586. S. Aug. tract. 49. in Joan. p. 616. Quid dedit filio Pater majus omnibus? ut ipse illi esset Unigenitus Filius. S. Chrys. takes notice, that by the hand of the Father, is here understood his power. And that it follows from hence, that the power or hand of the Father and the Son is equal, is one and the same; and if their power, says he, is the same, so is their substance, el δὲ ὁμοῦς ἡ αὐτὴ, ἐν ὅλῳ δὲ καὶ ἡ οὐσία. Ep. 54. in Joan. 363. tom. viii. nov. Ed. Ben.

† V. 30. Unum sumus, ἐν ἑκένῳ, i. e. says S. Chrys. secundum potentiam. κατὰ τὴν δύναμιν ἐν ἑκένῳ λέγουν. See S. Cyril, p. 667. S. Aug. tract. 49. p. 617. Huc usque Judæi tolerare potuerunt . . . tunc vero more suo diu ad lapides concurrunt.

CHAP. XI.

Christ raises Lazarus to life. The rulers resolve to put him to death.

NOW there was a certain man sick, named Lazarus, of Bethania, of the town of Mary, and of Martha, her sister.

2 (And Mary was she that anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair: whose brother, Lazarus, was sick.)

3 His sisters, therefore, sent to him, saying; Lord, behold, he whom thou lovest, is sick.

4 And Jesus hearing it, said to them; This sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God: that the Son of God may be glorified by it.

5 Now Jesus loved Martha, and her sister, Mary, and Lazarus.

6 When he had heard, therefore, that he was sick, he still remained in the same place two days.

7 Then after that he said to his disciples; Let us go into Judea again.

8 The disciples say to him; Rabbi, the Jews but just now sought to stone thee: and goest thou thither again?

9 Jesus answered: Are there not twelve hours of the day? If a man walk in the day, he stumbleth not, because he seeth the light of this world:

10 But if he walk in the night, he stumbleth, because the light is not in him.

11 These things he said: and after that he said to them; Lazarus, our friend, sleepeth: but I go that I may awake him out of sleep.

12 His disciples, therefore, said; Lord, if he sleep, he shall do well.

13 But Jesus spoke of his death: and they thought that he spoke of the repose of sleep.

14 Then, therefore, Jesus said to them plainly; Lazarus is dead.

15 And I am glad, for your sake, that I was not there, that you may believe: but let us go to him.

16 Then Thomas, who is called Didymus, said to his

* Matt. xxvi. 7. Luke vii. 31. Infra xii. 3.

ideo irati sunt, quia senserunt non posse dici, Ego et pater unum sumus, nisi ubi aequalitas est Patris et Filii. . . . Ecce intelligunt Judæi, quod non intelligunt Ariani.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. At the end of the preceding chapter, we are told that Jesus went into the place where John was first baptizing. This place, as may be gathered from S. John, (c. i. v. 28. and 41.) was Bethania; but not the Bethania where the sisters of Lazarus resided. The Bethania where Christ was at this time was beyond the Jordan, and was likewise called Bethanbara; whereas the Bethania where Lazarus lay sick, was two miles to the south of Jerusalem, and formed a part of the suburbs of that city. It is called the town of Martha and Mary, because they lived there; in the same manner as Bethsaida is called the city of Peter and Andrew. Calmet.

VER. 4. This sickness is not unto death. That is, though he truly die, it is not designed that he remain dead. Wi.—This sickness is not unto death; because his death itself was not unto death, but rather to the working of a great miracle, by which men were brought to the true faith, and thus avoided an eternal death, S. Austin, tract. 49. in Joan.—Lazarus indeed died of this sickness, but he did not die as other men, to continue dead; for Jesus raised him again to the glory of God. SS. Cyril, Chrys. &c.

VER. 9. Some, by the day in this place, understand the time preceding the Passion of our Saviour; and, by the night, the time of his Passion. Theophy.—By this he encouraged his disciples, assuring them that the day of his sojournment on earth was not yet over; and therefore that the Jews, with all their malice and hatred, could not hurt him. But when the night (the time of his Passion) comes, then their power over him commenced. This is your hour, says he to them, and the power of darkness. Calmet.—The Hebrews then divided the day into twelve parts of equal duration, from the rising to the setting sun. V.

VER. 11. Lazarus . . . sleepeth. It is strange that the disciples could imagine that Christ spoke of an ordinary sleep, and that he would go two or three days' journey to awake him. Nothing but the fear and concern they were under, could make them think so. Wi.

fellow-disciples: Let us go also, that we may die with him.

17 Jesus therefore came: and found that he had been four days already in the grave.

18 (Now Bethania was near Jerusalem, about fifteen furlongs off.)

19 And many of the Jews were come to Martha, and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother.

20 Martha, therefore, as soon as she heard that Jesus was come, went to meet him: but Mary sat at home.

21 Martha therefore said to Jesus: Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died:

22 But now also I know that whatsoever thou wilt ask of God, God will give it thee.

23 Jesus saith to her; Thy brother shall rise again.

24 Martha saith to him; I know that he shall rise again, ^bin the resurrection at the last day.

25 Jesus said to her; I am the resurrection, and the life: ^ahe that believeth in me, although he be dead, shall live:

26 And every one that liveth, and believeth in me, shall not die for ever. Believest thou this?

27 She saith to him; Yea, Lord, I have believed that thou art Christ, the Son of the living God, who art come into this world.

28 And when she had said these things, she went, and called her sister, Mary, secretly, saying; The master is come, and calleth for thee.

29 She, as soon as she heard this, riseth quickly, and cometh to him.

30 For Jesus was not yet come into the town: but he was still in that place where Martha had met him.

31 The Jews, therefore, who were with her in the house, and comforted her, when they saw Mary that she rose up speedily and went out, followed her, saying; She goeth to the grave to weep there.

32 When Mary, therefore, was come where Jesus was, seeing him, she fell down at his feet, and saith to ^b Luke xiv. 14. ^a Supra v. 2.—^c Supra vi. 40.

VER. 12. To men indeed he was dead, but to God he slept. For the Almighty as easily raised him from his grave, as man can raise the slumberer from his bed. S. Aust. tract. 49. in Joa.

VER. 15. When Christ says, that you may believe, we must not suppose he means, that they might begin then for the first time to believe, but that their faith, already begun, might be increased; for the faith of the disciples still stood in need of miracles, to make it grow more strong and rooted. S. Aust. as above.

VER. 16. Thomas . . . said: let us also go, that we may die with him. That is, with Jesus: this he said, exhorting the other disciples not to fear. Wi.—The words, Thomas and Didymus, have the same radical signification; both meaning twins.

VER. 18. About fifteen furlongs. About two Italian miles. Wi.

VER. 21. If thou hadst been here. These words shew that the faith of the two sisters was but weak; as if the Son of God was not everywhere: or as if he could not restore him to life when dead and buried. Wi.—Martha believed in Christ, but not as she ought to have done. She did not yet believe him to be God, but addresses him as one who is remarkable for virtue, and approved of by heaven. S. Chrys. hom. 61. in Joan.

VER. 23. Thy brother shall rise again. Martha took notice that Christ did not express, whether immediately, or at the general resurrection, which she and the Jews generally believed. Wi.

VER. 25. I am the resurrection, and the life. That is, the author of both. Wi.—I am the resurrection, I am he who will at the last day raise him up; I can, therefore, if I will, raise him up now also. S. Aust.

VER. 27. Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God. Martha breaks out into an act of perfect faith. See C. i. v. 49. Wi.

VER. 31. It was customary to visit, occasionally, the sepulchres, there to weep over the deceased. V.

VER. 33. He groaned in the spirit, and troubled himself. The Latin and Greek, both in this and the 38th verse, express a more than ordinary inward trouble. Christ, as he was truly man, had the affections and passions of human nature, yet so that he was master, even of the first motions, which could not raise in him; Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.

33 When Jesus, therefore, saw her weeping, and the Jews that were come with her weeping, he groaned in the spirit, and troubled himself.

34 And said; Where have you laid him? They say to him; Lord, come and see.

35 And Jesus wept.

36 The Jews, therefore, said; Behold how he loved him.

37 But some of them said; *Could not he that opened the eyes of the man born blind, have caused that this man should not die?

38 Jesus, therefore, again groaning in himself, cometh to the sepulchre: Now it was a cave: and a stone was laid over it.

39 Jesus saith; Take away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him; Lord, by this time he stinketh, for he is now of four days.

40 Jesus saith to her; Did not I say to thee, that if thou believe, thou shalt see the glory of God?

41 They took, therefore, the stone away: And Jesus, lifting up his eyes, said; Father, I give thee thanks that thou hast heard me.*

42 And I knew that thou hearest me always; but because of the people who stand about, have I said it: that they may believe that thou hast sent me.

43 When he had said these things, he cried with a loud voice: Lazarus, come forth.

44 And presently he that had been dead came forth, bound feet and hands with winding-bands, and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus said to them; Loose him, and let him go.

45 Many, therefore, of the Jews, who were come to Mary and Martha, and had seen the things that Jesus did, believed in him.

46 But some of them went to the Pharisees, and told them the things that Jesus had done.

* Supra ix. 6.—b Infra xviii. 14.

him any disturbance or disorderly inclinations. He permitted, therefore, and, as it is said, raised in himself these affections of compassion and grief at this time. Wi.

VER. 34. Where have you laid him? He asks what he knows, says S. Aug. to raise their attention, their faith, hope, &c. Wi.

VER. 35. Jesus wept. A mark of his human nature, when he was going to give them a proof of his divinity, in raising the dead to life. Wi.—The tears of the disconsolate sisters called forth tears from the tender commiseration of Jesus. Nor was it unworthy the Son of God to shed tears. See Luke xix. 41. About to give proofs of his divinity in raising the dead, he is pleased to give, first, undoubted proofs of his humanity, that he might shew himself both God and man.

VER. 39. Take away the stone. He could have done this by his word and command; or he could have made Lazarus come out without taking off the stone; he needed not to pray, who could do and command every thing. Wi.

VER. 41. Father, I give thee thanks, that thou hast heard me. He knew that what he asked, even as man, must needs be granted; but he prayed for our instruction. Wi.—Christ was about to pray for the resurrection of Lazarus; but his eternal Father, who alone is good, prevented his petition, and heard it before he presented it. Therefore does Christ begin his prayer, by returning his almighty Father thanks for having granted his request. Orig. tract. 18. in Joan.

VER. 43. He cried with a loud voice: Lazarus, come forth. His will had been sufficient. He calls upon the dead man, says S. Chrys. as if he had been living; and it is no sooner said than done. Wi.

VER. 44. Loose him, and let him go. Christ, says S. Greg. by giving these orders to his apostles, shews that it belongs to his ministers to loose and absolve sinners, when they are moved to repentance, though it is God himself that forgiveth their sins; and they by his authority only. Wi.—Lazarus comes forth bound from the sepulchre, that he might not be thought to be a phantom; and that the bystanders might themselves loose him, and touching and approaching him, might know for certain that it was he. S. Chrys. hom. lxiii. in Joan.—S. Cyril and S. Austin both adduce this verse to shew the power of priests in absolving sinners. See Cyril l. vii. c. ult. in Joan. and Aug. tract. 49. in Joan.

VER. 47. The chief priests . . . said: what do we? &c. as if they had said: (1416)

47 The chief priests, therefore, and the Pharisees, gathered a council, and said; What do we, for this man doth many miracles?

48 If we let him alone so, all men will believe in him: And the Romans will come, and take away our place and nation.

49 ^b But one of them, named Caiphas, being the high priest of that year, said to them; You know nothing at all.

50 Neither do you consider that it is expedient for you that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not.

51 And this he spoke not of himself: but being the high priest of that year, he prophesied that Jesus should die for the nation.

52 And not only for the nation, but to gather together in one the children of God, that were dispersed.

53 From that day, therefore, they devised to put him to death.

54 Wherefore Jesus walked no more openly among the Jews, but he went into a country near the desert, unto a city that is called Ephrem, and there he abode with his disciples.

55 And the Pasch of the Jews was at hand: and many from the country went up to Jerusalem before the Pasch, to purify themselves.

56 They sought, therefore, for Jesus: and they discoursed one with another, standing in the temple: What think you, that he is not come to the festival day? And the chief priests and the Pharisees had given a commandment, that if any man knew where he was, he should tell, that they might apprehend him.

CHAP. XII.

The anointing of Christ's feet. His riding into Jerusalem upon an ass. A voice from heaven.

NOW *six days before the Pasch, Jesus came to Bethania, where Lazarus had been dead, whom Jesus raised to life.

* Matt. xxvi. 6. Mark xiv. 8.

why are we so slow, so remiss, and indolent in our proceedings against this man, when we daily see what numbers he draws after him by his miracles? Wi.

VER. 48. The Romans will come upon us, in case he be admitted as our great Messiah, and our King. Wi.

VER. 49. But one of them, named Caiphas, being the high priest, &c. He said not this, says the evangelist, of himself, but as the high priest of that year. The spirit of prophecy was given him, and he foretells that Jesus was to lay down his life both for the nation of the Jews, and for all mankind. The gift of prophecy itself does not make a man holy. It was also given to the wicked Balaam. Num. c. xxiv. Wi.—It is supposed that he exercised the sacrificial office alternately with his father-in-law, Annas, who, as we have seen in Luke iii. 2. was also high priest. V.

VER. 50. How great is the power of the Holy Ghost! From a wicked mind he brings forth the words of prophecy. And how great is the power attached to the pontifical dignity! For Caiphas having become high priest, though unworthy of that dignity, prophesies, not knowing indeed what he says. The Holy Ghost makes use of his tongue only, but touches not his sinful heart. S. Chrys. hom. lxiv. in Joan.

VER. 51. The same words have an impious and sacrilegious sense in the intention of the high priest, the enemy of Jesus Christ: and a divine and prophetic sense, in the intention of the Holy Ghost. V.—We here behold the privilege of the office and order, though in a wicked person; and as we have the assistance of God for the utterance of truth, which Caiphas neither meant nor knew, we may rest satisfied that Christ will not leave Peter's chair; (Luke xxii. 32.) whose faith he promises should never fail, though the occupants be as bad as their enemies describe them.

VER. 54. Ephrem was a small city or town in the neighbourhood of Bethel. Some suppose it to be the same as Ephron, mentioned in 2 Par. xiii. 19, and 1 Mac. v. 2 Mac. xii. 17. Eusebius and S. Jerom say it was situated about 20 miles to the north of Jerusalem. Calmet.—Here he remained with his disciples till the time in which he had resolved to deliver himself up into the hands of his enemies. V.

VER. 55. This was the last Pasch that our Saviour kept upon earth, and 2 And they made him a supper there: and Martha served, but Lazarus was one of them that were at table with him.

3 Mary, therefore, took a pound of ointment of right spikenard, of great price, and anointed the feet of Jesus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the house was filled with the odour of the ointment.

4 Then one of his disciples, Judas Iscariot, he that was about to betray him, said;

5 Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?

6 Now he said this, not because he cared for the poor, but because he was a thief, and having the purse, carried what was put therein.

7 But Jesus said; Let her alone, that she may keep it against the day of my burial.

8 For the poor you have always with you: but me you have not always.

9 A great multitude, therefore, of the Jews knew that he was there: and they came, not for Jesus's sake only, but that they might see Lazarus, whom he had raised from the dead.

10 But the chief priests thought to kill Lazarus also:

11 Because many of the Jews, by reason of him, went away, and believed in Jesus.

12 And on the next day a great multitude, that was come to the festival day, when they had heard that Jesus was coming to Jerusalem;

13 Took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried: Hosannah, blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, the king of Israel!

14 *And Jesus found a young ass, and sat upon it, as it is written;

15 Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold, thy king cometh, sitting on the colt of an ass.

16 These things his disciples did not know at the

* Zach. ix. 9. Mark xi. 7. Luke xix. 35.

the one on which he suffered death for our salvation. Calmet.—It is well called the Pasch of the Jews, and not of the Lord, since on it they were laying snares to apprehend their Saviour. Origen.—Thus making this day of festivity a day of murder. S. Chrys. hom. lxxv. in Joan.—They went up so early to purify themselves by the sacrifices ordered by the law. V.

VER. 56. He had not then arrived, because He would not expose himself to the fury of his enemies before his own time. V.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. On the tenth day of the month the Jews were accustomed to collect the lambs, and other things in preparation for the ensuing great feast. On this day, likewise, they generally had a small feast, or treat for their friends, at which time Jesus coming to Bethania, joined his friends in their entertainment. This was most likely in the house of Lazarus, Martha and Mary. Martha served at the table herself, thinking herself happy in waiting on Jesus, whom she considered as her Lord and God. Lazarus was one of them that were at table, to shew himself alive, by speaking and eating with them, and thus confounding the inexcusable incredulity of the Jews. And Mary too shewed her loving attachment to Jesus, by anointing his feet with her precious ointment. Theophyl. S. Aug. and S. Chrys.

VER. 6. Judas did not then begin to be wicked; he followed Christ, not in heart, but in body only. This our Master tolerated, to give us a lesson to tolerate the bad, rather than divide the body. S. Aug. in Joan. tract. 50.

VER. 8. Me you have not always with you. He speaks of his corporal presence; for by his majesty, by his providence, by his ineffable and invincible grace, he ever fulfils what he said, (Matt. xxviii.) Behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world. S. Aug. tract. 50 in Joan.

VER. 10. To kill Lazarus. A foolish thought, says Aug. as if Christ who had raised him to life from a natural death, could not also restore him to life, when murdered by them. Wi.—O foolish thought, and blinded rage! As if you could, by putting Lazarus to death, take away power from the Lord; as if Christ, who had already raised one that had died, could not as easily have raised one that was slain. But, lo! he has done both. Lazarus dead, he hath restored to life, and himself slain, he hath raised to life. S. Aug. tract. 50. in Joan.

VER. 19. Do you see that we prevail nothing? * Thus said the Pharisees, being vexed that so many followed Christ, even after they had ordered, that whosoever owned him, should be turned out of their synagogues; and after they had employed men to apprehend him, but to no purpose. Wi.

first: but when Jesus was glorified, then they remembered that these things were written of him, and that they had done these things to him.

17 The multitude, therefore, gave testimony, which was with him, when he called Lazarus out of the grave, and raised him from the dead.

18 For which reason also the people came to meet him: because they heard that he had done this miracle.

19 The Pharisees, therefore, said among themselves; Do you see that we prevail nothing? Behold, the whole world is gone after him.

20 Now there were certain Gentiles among them, that came up to adore on the festival day.

21 These, therefore, came to Philip, who was of Bethsaida, of Galilee, and desired him, saying; Sir, we wish to see Jesus.

22 Philip cometh, and telleth Andrew: again Andrew and Philip told Jesus.

23 But Jesus answered them, saying; The hour is come that the Son of man should be glorified.

24 Amen, amen, I say to you, unless the grain of wheat falling into the ground, die, 25 Itself remaineth alone. But if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. ^b He that loveth his life, shall lose it: and he that hateth his life in this world, keepeth it unto life everlasting.

26 If any man minister to me, let him follow me: and where I am, there also shall my minister be. If any man minister to me, him will my Father honour.

27 Now is my soul troubled. And what shall I say? Father, save me from this hour. But for this cause I came unto this hour.

28 Father, glorify thy name. A voice, therefore, came from heaven: I have both glorified it, and I will glorify it again.

29 The multitude, therefore, that stood and heard,

^b Matt. x. 39. and xvi. 25. Mark viii. 35. Luke ix. 84. and xvii. 33.

VER. 20. Gentiles . . . came up to adore. These either were proselytes who had been Gentiles, and now had embraced the Jewish law: or they were such among the Gentiles, who owned and served the one true God, as Cornelius did, (Acts, c. x.) but did not submit themselves to circumcision, and all the other Jewish rites and ceremonies. These could only enter into that part of the temple, called the court of the Gentiles. Wi.

VER. 24. Unless the grain of wheat. The comparison is this, that as the seed must be changed, and corrupted in the ground, before it fructify, so the world would not be converted but by Christ's death. Wi.—By this grain of corn our Saviour means himself, who was to die by the infidelity of the Jews, and be multiplied by the faith of the Gentiles. S. Aug. tract. 51. in Joan.

VER. 26. We must minister to Jesus by seeking not our own things, but the things of Christ; that is, we must follow him, we must walk in his footsteps, we must perform the corporal works of mercy, and every other good work, for his sake, till we come to put in practice the most perfect act of charity, the laying down of our lives for our brethren. Then will he crown us with this greatest of rewards, the happiness of reigning with him. And where I am, there shall my minister be. S. Aug. tract. 51. in Joan.

VER. 27. Now is my soul troubled. Christ permitted this fear and horror to come upon his human nature, as he did afterwards in the garden of Gethsemani. Father, save me from this hour; yet he presently adds, but for this cause I came unto this hour; that is, I came into this world for this end, that I might die on a cross for all mankind. In like manner, when he had said in the garden, let this cup pass from me, he presently joined these words: but not my will, but thine be done. Wi.—Lest the disciples, upon hearing our Saviour exhorting them willingly and courageously to suffer death, should think within themselves, that he could well exhort them to these things, being himself beyond the reach of human misery, he assures them in this place, that he himself is in agony, and yet does not refuse to die for them. S. Chrys. hom. lxvi. in Joan.

VER. 28. Father, glorify thy name, by my sufferings and death, as well as by many miracles that shall follow. A voice came from heaven, and so loud, that some there present compared it to thunder: and at the same time these words were heard: I have glorified it, thy name, and I will glorify it again, by a number of ensuing miracles at Christ's death, at his resurrection and ascension, as well as by all those miracles, which the apostles and disciples wrought afterwards. Wi.

said that it thundered. Others said; An Angel spoke to him.

30 Jesus answered, and said; This voice came not for mine, but for your sake.

31 Now is the judgment of the world: now shall the prince of this world be cast out.

32 And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all things to myself.

33 (Now this he said signifying what death he should die.)

34 The multitude answered him: We have heard out of the law, that Christ abideth for ever: and how sayest thou, The Son of man must be lifted up? Who is this Son of man?

35 Jesus, therefore, said to them; Yet a little while, the light is among you. Walk whilst you have the light, that the darkness overtake you not: and he that walketh in darkness, knoweth not whither he goeth.

36 Whilst you have the light, believe in the light, that you may be the children of light. These things Jesus spoke, and he went away, and hid himself from them.

37 And whereas he had done so many miracles before them, they believed not in him:

38 That the saying of Isaias, the prophet, might be fulfilled, which he said; 'Lord, who hath believed our hearing? And to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed?

39 Therefore they could not believe, for Isaias said again;

40 'He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their heart, that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their heart, and be converted, and I should heal them.

Ps cix. 4. and cxvi. 2. Isai. xl. 8. Eze. xxxvii. 25.—^b Isai. liii. 1. Rom. x. 16.
^c Isai. vi. 9. Matt. xiii. 14. Mark iv. 12.

VER. 30. As the soul of Christ was troubled, not on his own account, but for the sake of the people; so this voice came from heaven, not for his sake, but for that of the people. What it announced was already known to him; the advantage and instruction of the Jews was its end, object, and motive. S. Aug. 52. tract. in Joan.

VER. 31. Now is the judgment of the world: Their condemnation, says S. Chrys. for not believing.—The prince of this world, that is, the devil, shall be cast out from that great tyranny, which he had over mankind, before Christ's incarnation. Wi.—By these words Christ informs the Gentiles that wished to see him, that soon he would punish the incredulous Jews, and cast off their synagogue, for their malice and insatiable hatred against him; and that the prince of this world, that is, the worship of idols, should be destroyed, and all called to the true faith. Calmet.

VER. 32. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth: that is, on the cross. See the same expression, Jo. iii. 14. and viii. 28.—I will draw all things, all nations, to myself by faith. Wi.

VER. 34. How sayest thou the Son of man must be lifted up? By these words of the people, Christ, in this discourse must have called himself the Son of man, though it is not here mentioned by the evangelist. The people also tell him, they had heard that their Messiah was to abide for ever: which was true as to his spiritual kingdom of grace, not as to such a glorious temporal kingdom, as they imagined. Wi.

VER. 35. Yet a little while,† that is, for a very few days, I, who am the light of the world, am with you. Wi.—How much do the Jews now do, and yet they know not what they do: but like men that are walking in the dark, they think they are in the right way, when alas! they are quite the contrary. S. Chrys. hom. lxvi. in Joan.

VER. 39. They could not believe,† that is, they would not, says S. Aug. or it could not be, considering their wilful obstinate blindness. Wi.—But where then is the sin, if they could not believe? They could not believe, because they would not. For as it is the glory of the will of God, that it cannot be averse to its own glory, so it is the fault of the will of man, that it cannot believe. S. Aug. tract. 53. in Joan. They could not believe. Since the prophet has foretold it, and he cannot but say the truth, it is impossible that they should now believe. Not but they had it in their power to believe; and had they believed, the prophet would never have foretold the contrary. S. Chrys. hom. lxvii. in Joan.

VER. 40. He hath blinded their eyes, &c. See Matt. xiii. 14. Wi.—God blinded the Jews, not by filling them with malice, but by refusing them his graces, of 41 These things said Isaias, when he saw his glory, and spoke of him.

42 However, many of the chief men also believed in him: but because of the Pharisees, they did not confess it, that they might not be cast out of the synagogue.

43 For they loved the glory of men, more than the glory of God.

44 But Jesus cried out, and said; He that believeth in me, doth not believe in me, but in him that sent me

45 And he that seeth me, seeth him that sent me.

46 I am come a light into the world; that whosoever believeth in me, may not remain in darkness.

47 And if any man hear my words, and keep them not, I do not judge him: for I came not to judge the world, but to save the world.

48 He that despiseth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him.^a The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day.

49 For I have not spoken of myself, but the Father who sent me, he gave me commandment what I should say, and what I should speak.

50 And I know that his commandment is life everlasting. The things, therefore, that I speak, even as the Father said unto me, so do I speak.

CHAP. XIII.

Christ washes his disciples' feet: the treason of Judas: the new commandment of love.

BEFORE * the festival day of the Pasch, Jesus knowing that his hour was come, that he should pass out of this world to the Father: having loved his own who were in the world, he loved them to the end.

2 And when supper was done, the devil having now put into the heart of Judas, the son of Simon, the Iscariot, to betray him:

Luke viii. 10. Acts xxviii. 26. Rom. xi. 8.—^d Matt. xvi. 16.—^e A. D. 83. Matt. xxvi. 2. Mark xiv. 1. Luke xxii. 1.

which they had made themselves unworthy, and which they before abused and despised. It was their perverse will, their pride, presumption, and obstinacy, that brought on them this judgment. S. Aug.

VER. 43. For they loved the glory of men. This was one of the chief obstacles of their belief: yet many even of the chief of them believed in him; but durst not own it for fear of being disgraced, and turned out of their synagogues. Do not human considerations, and temporal advantages, hinder men from seeking out, and embracing the truth?

VER. 45. He that seeth me, seeth him that sent me. In what sense these words are true, see John xiv. v. 9. where they are repeated again, and with other expressions to the same sense. Wi.

VER. 47. I do not judge him. To judge here, may signify to condemn. S. Aug. expounds it in this manner: I do not judge him at this my first coming. S. Chrys. says, it is not I only that judgeth him, but the works also that I do.

* V. 19. Quia nihil proficimus. In most G. copies, and also in S. Chrys. we read: you see that you prevail nothing; as if these words had been spoken by some of Christ's friends, to make his adversaries desist. Θεωπεῖτε ἐνὶ οὐκ ἀποκρίσεσθαι οὐδὲν.

† V. 35. Adhuc modicum lumen in vobis est, ἔτι μικρὸν φῶς ἐστὶν ὑμῶν ἐν. They mistake, who take modicum for an adjective, that agrees with lumen.

† V. 39. Non poterant credere. S. Aug. (tract. 53.) Quare autem non poterunt, si a me queratur, citò respondeo, quia nolabant.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Before the festival day, or feast of the Pasch. See the note on this word Pasch, Matt. xxvi. v. 2. Here when S. John says, before the festival day, he means in the evening, or latter evening after sunset, on the 14th day of the month of Nisan, when the great feast of Azyms or unleavened bread was begun, (for the Jews began their feasts from sunset on the foregoing day) so that the hours from sunset, at least, on the 14th day of the month of Nisan (at which time the paschal lamb was to be eaten with unleavened bread) belonged to the first, and great day of Azyms, which lasted till sunset on the 15th day of the month Nisan. S. John therefore says, the day before, meaning after sunset on the 14th day of the month; but yet it was part of the same great feast, which was kept on the 15th day. See also the note Matt. xxvi. v. 17. Wi.

VER. 2. And when supper was done. By this we must not understand, that the supper was over; for we afterwards find that Jesus again sat down, and gave bread to the traitor. But these words only mean, that all had partook of re-

3 Knowing that the Father had given him all things into his hands, and that he came from God, and goeth to God;

4 He riseth from supper, and layeth aside his garments: and having taken a towel, he girded himself.

5 After that, he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the feet of the disciples, and to wipe them with the towel, wherewith he was girded.

6 He cometh, therefore, to Simon Peter. And Peter saith to him: Lord, dost thou wash my feet?

7 Jesus answered, and said to him: What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter.

8 Peter saith to him: Thou shalt never wash my feet. Jesus answered him: If I wash thee not, thou shalt have no part with me.

9 Simon Peter saith to him: Lord, not only my feet, but also my hands and my head.

10 Jesus saith to him: He that is washed, needeth not but to wash his feet, but is clean wholly. And you are clean, but not all.

11 For he knew who he was that would betray him: therefore he said; You are not all clean.

12 Then after he had washed their feet, and taken his garments, having sat down again, he said to them: Know you what I have done to you?

13 You call me, Master, and Lord: and you say well, for so I am.

14 If I then, being Lord and Master, have washed your feet: you also ought to wash one another's feet.

15 For I have given you an example, that as I have done to you, so you do also.

16 "Amen, amen, I say to you; The servant is not greater than his lord: neither is the apostle greater than he that sent him.

17 If you know these things, you shall be blessed if you do them.

18 I speak not of you all: I know whom I have chosen: but that the Scripture may be fulfilled: "He that eateth bread with me, shall lift up his heel against me."

19 At present I tell you before it come to pass: that when it shall come to pass, you may believe, that I am he.

20 "Amen, amen, I say to you, he that receiveth whomsoever I send, receiveth me: and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me."

21 When Jesus had said these things, he was troubled in spirit: and he protested, and said; "Amen, amen, I say to you, that one of you will betray me."

22 The disciples, therefore, looked one upon another, doubting of whom he spoke.

23 Now there was leaning on Jesus's bosom one of his disciples, whom Jesus loved.

24 Simon Peter, therefore, beckoned to him: and said to him; Who is it, of whom he speaketh?

25 He, therefore, leaning on the breast of Jesus, saith to him; Lord, who is it?

26 Jesus answered: He it is, to whom I shall reach bread dipped. And when he had dipped the bread, he gave it to Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon.

27 And after the morsel, Satan entered into him. And Jesus said to him; That which thou dost, do quickly.

28 Now no man at the table knew for what purpose he said this to him.

* Matt. x. 24. Luke vi. 40. Infra xv. 20.—^b Psal. xl. 10.

freshment, and might be therefore said to have supped. S. Aug. tract. 55. in Joan.—He knew that he went out from God, and would return to God; but at the same time, he did not leave God, when he went out from him, nor us, when he returns to him. S. Aug. as above.—And though he went out from God, and returns to him, yet here he condescends to perform the office, not of the Lord God of the universe, but of a man and a slave; (S. Aug.) and this, says S. Chrys. (hom. lxxix. in Joan.) that he might tread all pride under foot: doing every thing himself on this occasion, to teach us with what eagerness we ought to perform the duties of humility.

VER. 4. He riseth from supper; that is, after supper was done, or ended, as it is here said, (v. 2. and 1 Cor. xi. 25) girded himself like a servant, to wash and wipe the feet of his apostles. Wi.—If we compare the text of the four evangelists, it will appear that the washing of the feet preceded the institution of the blessed Eucharist, of which S. John is silent. V.

VER. 5. S. Ambrose and S. Bernard shew that this washing was mysterious, and significative of the very great purity expected of those that receive the blessed Eucharist.

VER. 6. Lord, dost thou wash my feet? My master, my Lord, the true Son of the living God, wilt thou wash the feet of me, thy servant, thy disciple, a poor vile sinner? this must not be. Wi.

VER. 8. If I wash thee not, thou shalt have no part with me. At this, Peter, as one thunderstruck, replied: Lord, not my feet only, but my head; whatever my Lord pleaseth. Wi.

VER. 10. He that is washed, &c. The feet are always apt to contract some dust or dirt; and in the mystical sense, he that is washed by the sacraments of baptism, or penance, from greater sins, must still endeavour to cleanse, and purify his affections from lesser failings of human frailty. And you, my apostles, are clean from greater offences, but not all of you, meaning the traitor Judas. Wi.—It is impossible that the extremities of the soul (if we may be allowed the expression) should not, as long as we tread upon this earth, receive some stain or other; although in the opinion of men, the soul appear just. Many indeed after baptism, are covered with the dust of sin, even to the head, but those who are disciples indeed, need only to wash their feet. Origen, tract. 32. in Joan.—The foulness of the feet, when the rest is clean, signifies the earthly affections, and remains of former sins remitted, which are to be cleansed by devout acts of charity and humility. S. Amb. l. iii. de Sacram. c. 1. S. Ber. de cen. Dom. ser. 1.—Though his disciples were clean, still he washed their feet, conformably to that of the Apocalypse, c. xxii. "He that is clean, let him be cleansed still." Origen, tract. 32. in Joan.

VER. 14. You also ought to wash one another's feet. Not that he made this a standing precept according to the letter; but designed it as a lesson of humility.

* Matt. x. 40. Luke x. 16.—^d Matt. xxvi. 20. Mark xiv. 18. Luke xxii. 21.

We find this custom literally observed in several churches, as it is now done every year by diverse prelates, and by Christian kings and princes. Wi.—He gives us an example of a more elevated act of virtue, that we may at least learn to practise the lower degrees of it. For he indeed was their Lord, but when we perform this office, we can but do it to our fellow-servants. S. Chrys. hom. lxxix. in Joan.—This it is, blessed Peter, which you were ignorant of, but which he promises to explain afterwards. S. Aug. tract. 58. in Joan.

VER. 18. Shall lift up his heel against me. It is the sense of those words, (Psal. xl. 10.) hath supplanted me; and they were spoken of Judas's sin in betraying Christ. Wi.—Jesus Christ applies in this place to the perfidy of Judas, that which David appears to have said on occasion of the perfidy of Achitophel, who was thus a figure of the perfidious Judas. V.

VER. 23. One of his disciples. S. John himself was lying at table in (or to wards) the bosom of Jesus.* These words seem to express the manner that the Jews were placed at table. They had couches about a table, to lean or lie upon; and three for example upon each couch. The master, or head of the company, was placed in the midst; so that we may suppose, that Christ was placed on one of these couches in the midst, S. Peter on one side of him, and S. John on the other; and that S. John, in that resting and leaning posture, had his head all the time turned, and inclined towards Christ's bosom: yet it can scarce be imagined, that his head laid continually upon our Saviour's breast or bosom; for this posture would have been very uneasy to Jesus, or to any one. S. John then leaned all supper time towards Jesus's bosom or breast, but not upon it. Wi.—Whilst all were fearing for themselves, and Peter, the very head of the apostles, was trembling, S. John rests; reposing on the bosom of Jesus. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxi. in Joan.

VER. 25. When Christ had said, one of you is to betray me, S. Peter whispered with S. John, by turning to him behind Jesus's back, and desired him to ask, who this was: now when John had leaned down upon the breast of Jesus, or as the Greek hath it, falling down on the breast of Jesus, as a person may do in a great concern, or fit of grief, he said, Lord, who is it? This posture seems to have been only for that moment of whispering, and to have been different from the posture of eating at table. Wi.

VER. 27. Satan entered into him, who presently went out with great anger and indignation. It was then night, likely about nine o'clock. Wi.—That which thou dost, do quickly. It is not a license, much less a command, to go about his treason: but a signification to him, that Christ would not hinder or resist what he was about, do it as soon as he pleased: but was both ready, and desirous to suffer for our redemption. Ch.—Christ does not by these words exhort the traitor, much less command him, to perform his wicked deed; but he means to reprobate it, and at the same time testify that he would not hinder his being 29 For some thought, because Judas had the purse, that Jesus had said to him: Buy those things which we have need of for the festival day: or that he should give something to the poor.

30 He then having received the morsel, went out immediately. And it was night.

31 When, therefore, he was gone out, Jesus said; Now is the Son of man glorified: and God is glorified in him.

32 If God be glorified in him, God will also glorify him in himself: and immediately will he glorify him.

33 Little children, yet a little while I am with you. You shall seek me: and as I said to the Jews, Whither I go, you cannot come: so now I say to you.

34 I give you a new commandment: That you love one another, as I have loved you, that you also love one another.

35 By this shall all men know that you are my disciples, if you have love one for another.

36 Simon Peter saith to him: Lord, whither goest thou? Jesus answered: Whither I go, thou canst not follow me now: but thou shalt follow me afterwards.

37 Peter saith to him: Why cannot I follow thee now? I will lay down my life for thee.

38 Jesus answered him: Wilt thou lay down thy life for me? Amen, amen, I say to thee, the cock shall not crow, till thou deny me thrice.

CHAP. XIV.

Christ's discourse after his last supper.

* Supra vii. 84.—b Lev. xix. 18. Matt. xxii. 39. Infra xv. 12.

betrayed. S. Chrysa. hom. lxxi. in Joan.—It is the voice not of command, but of permission, not of a person in fear, but of one prepared for death. S. Leo.

VER. 81. Jesus said: now is the Son of man glorified: the time is at hand, when he shall be glorified by miracles at his death, resurrection, &c. Wi.

VER. 84. The commandment of mutual love had been previously given, but evidently misconstrued and abridged by the Jews to friends only, to this life only, and for earthly respects: but Jesus Christ reneweth it and enlargeth it after the form of his own love towards us, and giveth grace to observe it. B.

VER. 86. You cannot follow me yet to the dying for justice sake, for you are not yet prepared for martyrdom; you cannot yet follow me to the glory of my body, when risen from the dead, but must wait till the general resurrection; you cannot follow me to the bosom of my Father, being not yet sufficiently perfected in charity. S. Aug. tract. 64. in Joan.

VER. 87. This commandment was already in the old law, where it is written, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself; how then does our Saviour call it a new command? It is new, not because we simply love one another; but because we love one another, as he has loved us: not as men love one another, as being fellow creatures, but united in love, as being all the children of the Most High; that so we may be brethren to his only begotten Son, bearing to all the same love that he has borne to us. S. Aug. tract. 64. in Joan.—By this shall I more-over know that you truly love me. V.

VER. 88. The love which S. Peter bore our Saviour was exceedingly tender, but it was not yet sufficiently strong. S. Bern. Sermon. iv. in Cant.—Jesus therefore asks him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for me? Do you think yourselves sufficiently strong to perform this heroic act for love of me? so far are you from exposing your life for me, that you will shortly deny me. Menochius.

* V. 28. Erat recumbens in sinu Jesu, v. 28. And cum recubisset super pectus Jesu, v. 28. In the Greek, v. 28, ἀνακείμενος ἐν τῷ κόλπῳ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ; and v. 28, ἐκπαιδὼν ἐν τῷ στήθεσ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ. The word ἀνακείμενος from ἀνακίωμαι, seems to express no more than the manner in those days of leaning, or lying at table: as in the Latin, accumbere, or discumbere; but ἐκπαιδὼν, from ἐκπίπτειν ἐν τῷ στήθεσ, signifies a bowing or falling down on Christ's breast, as it were in a fit of trouble or grief. See the author of the Analysis, diss. xxxvi. S. Chrysa. (hom. lxxii. p. 423, tom. 8, Nov. Ed. Ben.) seems to make a difference betwixt these two expressions, when he says: Joannes . . . in sinu Jesu recubat, nec recubat solum, sed in pectus incidit: neque hoc solum quæsitum dignum est, &c. δ' Ἰωάννης ἀνάκειται εἰς τὸν κόλπον τοῦ Ἰησοῦ, καὶ οὐκ ἀνάκειται μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῷ στήθεσ ἐκπίπτει, καὶ οὐ τοῦτο μόνον ἀξίον ζητήσεως, &c.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. After having answered the questions of S. Peter, Jesus again addresses himself to his disciples, and bids them not to be afflicted or troubled, at what he says to them. Many Greeks and Latins begin this chap. thus: Jesus said to his disciples, let not your hearts be troubled. S. Chrysa.—Euthym. Leont. Theophyl. Theodor. &c. agree, that our Saviour wished to encourage his apostles, who were so much troubled, because he had said, that Peter should deny him. They thought within themselves, if Peter, who is the strongest, and LET not your heart be troubled. You believe in God, believe also in me.

2 In my Father's house there are many mansions. If not, I would have told you: that I go to prepare a place for you:

3 And if I shall go, and prepare a place for you: I will come again, and will take you to myself, that where I am, you also may be.

4 And whither I go you know, and the way you know.

5 Thomas saith to him: Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way?

6 Jesus saith to him: I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No man cometh to the Father, but by me.

7 If you had known me, you would surely have known my Father also: and from henceforth you shall know him, and you have seen him.

8 Philip saith to him: Lord, shew us the Father, and it is enough for us.

9 Jesus saith to him: Have I been so long a time with you; and have you not known me? Philip, he that seeth me, seeth the Father also. How sayest thou, Shew us the Father?

10 Do you not believe, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? The words that I speak to you, I speak not of myself. But the Father who abideth in me, he doth the works.

11 Believe you not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me?

* Matt. xxvi. 85. Mark xiv. 29. Luke xxii. 28.

most resolute amongst us, shall so far forget himself, as to deny his master, what will become of us? Jesus seeing their anxiety, tells them not to be troubled; but to believe in him, and in his words, for he had said, that he would not lose any, whom his Father had given him; (John c. vi, v. 39.) and that whosoever should believe in him, should have life everlasting. c. iii, v. 15.—Let not your heart be troubled. Christ here begins those incomparable discourses to his apostles, which are set down in the four next chapters. His sufferings and death now approaching, he forewarns them not to be troubled. You believe in God, and put your trust in him; believe also, and trust in me, no less than in him. Wi.

VER. 2. In my Father's house. He does not say of your Father: for though God be the Father of all by creation, and of the just, by the grace of adoption; yet Christ in several places, calls him his Father, in a quite different sense, that is, as he was his eternal Father, as the ancient interpreters observe. Wi.—These many mansions signify different degrees of glory in heaven. S. Jer. l. ii. adv. Jovin.

VER. 3. I will come again: not only by rising the third day, but at your death, and at the day of judgment: that where I am, you also may be, and may receive the reward of eternal happiness in my kingdom.

VER. 4. And whither I go, you know, and the way you know. Thomas replied, we know neither. Jesus saith to him, I am the way. They knew it says S. Aug. (tract. 69.) but they did not know, that they knew it: they knew their Master, Jesus Christ, and he was the way: they also knew, that is, believed, the kingdom of heaven, but they knew not, that he was returning thither: for as yet their imaginations were upon a temporal kingdom.—I am the way; by my doctrine and example: I am the Truth, by my promises; and I am Life, by the graces I offer and give. Wi.

VER. 7. If you had known me, you would surely have known my Father also. That is, (say S. Chrysa. S. Cyril, &c.) did you know me to be his true, and eternal Son, you would always know him to be the Father from all eternity. And from henceforth, especially from the coming of the Holy Ghost, you shall know him with a more perfect knowledge. And you have seen him, not as to the divine nature: in this manner, you have neither seen him, nor me. But,

VER. 9. He that seeth me, seeth the Father also:† that is, he seeth him, who is not a man only, but who also, by my divine nature, am one and the same with the Father: so that he who believes, and as it were sees, or knows by faith, who I am, cannot but know, that I am one with my eternal Father; not one person, as the Sabellians fancied, but one in nature and substance. The ancient Fathers take notice against the Ariana, that these words, and others that follow in this chapter, could not be true, if Christ was no more than a creature, though ever so perfect, there being an infinite distance betwixt God and the highest of his creatures. Wi.

VER. 10. Do you not believe that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? These words confirm the equality of the Father and the Son: nor can they be expounded of an union of affection only, by what Christ told them before. Jo. v. 17. 19. As the Father worketh till now, so I work: and whatsoever things the Father worketh, these also in like manner the Son doth. Wi.—In the Son and in the Father, there is one and the same essence, the same wisdom, the same power;

12 Otherwise believe for the works themselves. Amen, amen, I say to you, he that believeth in me, the works that I do, he shall do also, and greater than these shall he do: because I go to the Father.

13 *And whatsoever you shall ask the Father in my name, that will I do: that the Father may be glorified in the Son.

14 If you shall ask me any thing in my name, that I will do.

15 If you love me, keep my commandments.

16 And I will ask the Father, and he shall give you another Paraclete, that he may abide with you for ever,

17 The Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, nor knoweth him: but you shall know him; because he shall abide with you, and shall be in you.

18 I will not leave you orphans: I will come to you.

19 Yet a little while: and the world seeth me no more. But you see me: because I live, and you shall live.

20 In that day, you shall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you.

21 He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them: he it is that loveth me. And he that loveth me, shall be loved by my Father: and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

22 Judas saith to him, not the Iscariot, Lord, how is it, that thou wilt manifest thyself to us, and not to the world?

23 Jesus answered, and said to him: If any one love me, he will keep my word, and my Father will love him, and we will come to him, and will make our abode with him:

24 He that loveth me not, keepeth not my words. And the word which you have heard is not mine: but the Father's who sent me.

25 These things have I spoken to you, remaining with you.

26 But the Paraclete, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he will teach you all things, and bring all things to your mind, whatsoever I shall have said to you.

27 Peace I leave with you, my peace I give to you: not as the world giveth, do I give to you. Let not your heart be troubled, nor let it be afraid.

28 You have heard that I said to you: I go away, and I come again to you. If you loved me, you would indeed be glad, because I go to the Father: for the Father is greater than I.

* Matt. vii. 7. and xxi. 22. Mark xi. 24. Infra xvi. 28.

so that what the Son says, he does not say it of himself, and what the Son does, he does not do it of himself; but it is the Father, who abideth in the Son, who both acts and speaks.

VER. 12. And greater than these shall he do, because I go to the Father. Christ speaks of the greatness of visible miracles, and tells them, that after his ascension, they shall be enabled, even to do greater miracles than he has yet shewn to the world. He would give this power to his disciples, who were to convert the world; and perhaps the greatest miracle of all, was the conversion of the whole world. WI.—Behold another proof of my divinity, viz. the wonderful miracles those perform, who believe in me. An impostor may seduce the vulgar with false miracles, or, perhaps, with real wonderful prodigies; but he cannot confer that power on others. Behold, I have performed miracles by my own power, without any deceit, and always with a sovereign authority. I have given those, who believed in me, power to work in my name, as great, and even greater miracles, than I have done myself. All this I have done, to shew you, that I am equally God with the Father. I truly am so, then, for it would be impossible for God to assist an impostor, a liar, and an enemy to his honour and glory. Calmet.

VER. 13. That will I do. He does not now say, this the Father will do: to shew that the power of both is equal, and the same. WI.

VER. 15. Instead of afflicting yourselves at our separation, and my going to the Father, you ought, if you truly love me, to testify your affection, by a faithful observance of my commandments. Behold, this is the best proof you can give me of your attachment: better far than any exterior signs of grief and tenderness. S. Chrys.

VER. 16. Paraclete. This is a comforter: or also an advocate: inasmuch as by inspiring prayer, he prays, as it were, in us, and pleads for us.—For ever. Hence it is evident, that this spirit of truth was not only promised to the persons of the apostles, but also to their successors, through all generations. Ch.—I have not changed the word Paraclete, which signifies, both an advocate and a comforter. He shall remain with you, and in you, for ever. What greater happiness, what greater security for the faithful, than to have this divine promise, the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, remaining with the Church for ever, to protect her, and preserve her from all errors and heresies? WI.—If the Holy Ghost had been promised only to the apostles, their successors could not have challenged the promise. But the promises and privileges were not merely personal, but attached to their office perpetually. Hence, the Holy Ghost, in every age and clime, perpetually watches over the Catholic Church, and preserves her from both open and secret attacks of her enemies.

VER. 19. The world seeth me no more, after my death; but you shall see me, conversing with you for forty days, after my resurrection. WI.

VER. 20. In that day, when I am risen again, or when the Holy Ghost is come, you shall know that I am in the Father, and how, and in what manner: as also, how I am in you, and you in me. Our Saviour Christ, on several occasions, speaks of different ways of being united, or of being one; as first, of being one in nature and substance, and by such an union, as agrees only with the divine persons, who are one in all things. 2dly, Persons may be one, or united in affection and love, which also, as to its most perfect manner, agrees only with the three divine persons; but a similitude, and an imitation of this union of love, is found among creatures, both when they love God, and when for God's sake, they love one another: yet these unions are as different as God, and his creatures. The Arians and Socinians lay hold on these expressions, and of the words, (c. xvii. v. 21.) when Christ prays, that his disciples may be one, as he and his Father are one, which words imply no more than a similitude, and an imitation of that union of love (with which the three divine persons love one another) though at an infinite distance. If the old or new Arians examined, with a sincere desire of finding the truth (which they ought to seek from many passages in the New Testament, as well as from the sense and tradition of the Church, guided by the promised Spirit of Truth) they might certainly find how different is the union of nature and substance of the eternal Son with his eternal Father, and of that union of the three divine persons, when they are said to be one, from that inferior and lesser union of love and affection, by which either God loves his adoptive children, his faithful servants, or they love one another: they would easily discover, that many things are said of the unity and union of the divine persons, which could not be true, unless they were one and the same God, co-eternal and consubstantial, which by no means can be said of God and his creatures, nor of the union of affection only, by which the creatures love one another. WI.

VER. 21. Now that Christ in this place speaks only of this imperfect union of affection, appears by the following words: he that keepeth my commandments, loveth me: and he that loveth me, shall be loved by my Father, and I will love him, and I will manifest myself to him: that is, by particular graces and favours, and by a recompense of glory in the next life. WI.

VER. 22–25. Lord, how is it? Lit., what is done, or, what will be done, that thou art about to manifest thyself to us, and not to the world? This apostle imagined, that the Messiah would make manifest his glory of a temporal kingdom, not to them only, but to all the world. But Christ, by his answer, lets him know, that he spoke only of a manifestation of his love to those that loved him. If any man love me, my Father will love him, and we will come to him, that is, the three divine persons, will come to his soul, in a special manner, so as to bless him with an infusion of graces, and make our abode in his soul. WI.

VER. 26. The Paraclete, the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, as proceeding also from me: and therefore Christ saith, in the next chapter, (v. 26) that he himself will send him from the Father. He will teach you all things, &c. He will give you a more perfect knowledge of all those truths, which I have taught you. WI.—Teach you all things. Here the Holy Ghost is promised to the apostles, and their successors, particularly, in order to teach them all truth, and to preserve them from error. Ch.—The Scripture, in different places, remarks, that the apostles did not understand the accomplishment of prophecies, as soon as they were fulfilled. Luke xxiv. 27. They could not draw the comparison between the actions of our Saviour, and the figures of the old law: but no sooner had the Holy Ghost descended upon them, than they explained the Scriptures, their hearts and eyes being opened and enlightened, by the light of the Holy Spirit. Calmet.—See c. xvi. v. 12. and 13.

VER. 28. The Father is greater than I. According to the common exposition, Christ here speaks of himself, as made man, which interpretation is drawn from the circumstances of the text, Christ being at that time, going to suffer, and die, and shortly after to rise again, and ascend into heaven, all which agree with him, as man, and according to his human nature. But the Arians can take no advantage from these words, (though with divers of the ancient Fathers, we should allow them to be spoken of Christ, as the Son of God:) the Father may be said in some manner to be greater than the Son, if we consider the order of the divine processions, that is, that the Father is the first person, and proceeds from no other; whereas the Son proceeds from the Father. If any one, says S. Chrys. will contend, that the Father is greater, inasmuch as he is the cause, from which the Son proceedeth, we will bear with him, and this way of speaking: provided he grant that the Son is not of a different substance, or nature, S. Athanasius allows the same, and takes notice, that though the Father is said 29 And now I have told you before it come to pass: that when it shall come to pass, you may believe.

30 I will not now speak many things with you. For the prince of this world cometh, and in me he hath not any thing.

31 But that the world may know that I love the Father, *and as the Father hath given me commandment, so I do. Arise, let us go hence.

CHAP. XV.

A continuation of Christ's discourse to his disciples.

I AM the true vine; and my Father is the husbandman.

2 Every branch in me, that beareth not fruit, he will take away: and every one that beareth fruit, he will purge it, that it may bring forth more fruit.

3 Now you are clean, by reason of the word, which I have spoken to you.

4 Remain in me: and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, unless it abide in the vine: so neither can you, unless you abide in me.

5 I am the vine: you the branches: he that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit: for without me you can do nothing.

6 If any one remaineth not in me, he shall be cast forth as a branch, and shall wither, and they shall gather him up, and cast him into the fire, and he burneth.

* Acts ii. 28.—† Supra xiii. 10.

to be greater, yet he is not said to be better, nor more excellent, than the Son; because they are one and the same in substance, nature, and other perfections. Wi.—The enemies of the divinity of Christ here triumph, and think they have the confession of Christ himself, that he is less than the Father. But if they would distinguish the two natures of Christ, their arguments would all fall to the ground. Jesus Christ, as man, and a creature, is inferior to his Father, the Creator; but, as God, he is, in every respect, equal to him. S. Basil, S. Aug. &c.—Others, likewise, answer it thus: Following the confused opinion of the world, and even of the apostles themselves, who as yet only considered Christ as a prophet, and as a man, eminent in virtue and sanctity, he was less than the Father. S. Chrys. Leont. Theophyl. Enthym.—And likewise the title of Father, (as we generally use the word) is greater, and much more honourable, than that of Son; and in this respect, Christ is inferior to his Father. S. Athanas. S. Hilary. S. Epiph. S. Greg. Nazianz. and S. Cyril.—But this appellation, though really true, does not destroy the equality of the persons, because Christ has declared, in numerous other places, that he is equal to the Father; that he is in the Father; and that he and the Father are one. The apostles ought to have rejoiced that Christ was going to the Father, who was superior to him, considering him in his human nature; because, then, would the Son shew forth his honour and glory to be equal to the Father's, in heaven. This would have been a mark of a pure, solid, and disinterested love, which ought to have inspired the apostles, if they truly loved their divine Master. Calmet.—Protestants assume to themselves the liberty of making the Bible only, the exclusive rule of faith, yet refuse this privilege to others. Thus Luther insisted, that his catechism should be taught, and followed. Calvin burnt Servetus for explaining his faith, by his own private interpretation of the Bible, particularly of these words, the Father is greater than I. The Church of England compels every clergyman to swear to the Thirty-nine Articles, and has inflicted the severest penalties on such as interpreted the Bible according to the principles of Socinus; and on Catholics, who understand the words of Jesus Christ, This is my body: this is my blood, in the literal and obvious sense of the words. As long as each individual is at liberty to expound Scripture by the private spirit, it is a great injustice to compel any one, by penal laws, to yield his judgment to any authority, that is not less fallible than his own.

VER. 31. As the Father hath given me commandment, so I do.—He again speaks of himself, as man. Arise, let us go hence. Yet by c. xviii. v. 1. Christ still continued the like instructions, either in the same place, or in the way to Gethsemani. Wi.

* V. 7. Cognoscitis eum, in the present Greek copies (one excepted) we read, cognoscitis, γινώσκετε; Maldonatus judges it the true reading. But not only S. Aug. and the Latin Fathers, but even S. Chrys. reads it in the future tense, γινώσκειτε: and takes particular notice of this reading. τὸ μὲν μάλιστα, hom. lxxiii. tom. 8. p. 432. Ed. Montfaucon.

† V. 9. Qui videt me, videt & Patrem See S. Chrys. ep. 55. p. 435. Nov. Ed. si alterius esset substantia, non hoc dixisset, et de tripas obstat ἡν, οὐκ ἂν τοῦτο εἶπεν. See S. Cyr. p. 777.

‡ V. 28. Pater major me est, ὁ πατὴρ μείζων μου ἐστίν. S. Chrys. hom. 48. p. 443. nov. Ed. Si quis verò dixerit majorem esse Patrem, ut filii principium, non hinc (1422)

7 If you remain in me, and my words remain in you: you shall ask whatever you will, and it shall be done to you.

8 In this is my Father glorified, that you bring forth very much fruit, and become my disciples.

9 As the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you. Remain in my love.

10 If you keep my commandments, you will remain in my love, as I also have kept my Father's commandments, and do remain in his love.

11 These things I have spoken to you: that my joy may be in you, and your joy may be filled.

12 This is my commandment, that you love one another, as I have loved you.

13 Greater love than this no man hath, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

14 You are my friends, if you do the things that I command you.

15 I will not now call you servants: for the servant knoweth not what his lord doth. But I have called you friends: because all things whatsoever I have heard from my Father, I have made known to you.

16 You have not chosen me: but I have chosen you, and have appointed you, that you should go, and should bring forth fruit, and your fruit should remain: that whatsoever you shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it to you.

† Supra xiii. 34. Ephes. v. 2. 1 Thess. iv. 9.—‡ Matt. xxviii. 19.

contradicemus, καθ' ὃ ἄλλος τοῦ υἱοῦ, οὐδὲ τοῦτο ἀντιπράττειν. See S. Athan. Orat. 1. Cont. Arianos, p. 362. Ed. Ben. non dixit, Pater prestantior est me, κρείττον μου ἐστίν, qui eum alium a Patris natura, esse suspicaretur, sed major dixit, non quidem magnitudine quadam, aut tempore, sed quia ex ipso Patre gignitur, &c. See S. Aug. tract. 78. p. 699. propter formam servi, dicit, Pater major me est, &c.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. I am the true vine. Christ, says S. Aug. speaks of himself, as man, when he compares himself to a vine, his disciples to the branches, and his Father to the husbandman. He himself, as God, is also the husbandman. —Without me, you can do nothing, that shall be meritorious of a reward in heaven. Wi.—These words are supposed to have been spoken by our Saviour, when on the road, as he was going from the house, where he had supped, to the garden of Olives. It was then about midnight. Calmet.—Though many other interpreters think they were spoken before Jesus Christ left the house.

VER. 2. He here shews, that the virtuous themselves stand in need of the help of the husbandman; therefore the Almighty sends them tribulations and temptations, that they may be cleansed, and rendered firm, like the vine, which, the more it is pruned, the more vigorous are its shoots. S. Chrys. hom. lxxv. in Joan.

VER. 3. See supra xiii. 10.

VER. 7. On account of our being in this world, we sometimes ask for that, which is not expedient for us. But these things will not be granted us, if we remain in Christ, who never grants us any thing, unless it be profitable to us. S. Aug. tract. 81. in Joan.—If we abide in Christ, by a lively faith, and his words abide in us by a lively, ardent charity, which can make us produce the fruits of good works, all that we ask, will be granted us. V.—These conditional expressions, if you remain in the vine, if you keep my commandments, &c. give us to understand, that our perseverance and salvation are upon conditions, to be fulfilled by us.—S. Aug. de cor. & gra. c. 13.

VER. 8. It is the glory of the husbandman, to see his vine well cultivated, and laden with fruit. And it is the glory of God, my Father, to see you filled with faith, charity, and good works, and to behold you usefully employed, in the conversion of others. Then will men, seeing your good works, and the fruit of your preaching, among all nations, glorify γὰρ heavenly Father, as the author of all these blessings. S. Matt. v. 16. Calmet.

VER. 10. As I also have kept my Father's commandments. He still speaks of himself, as man. Wi.—This frequent admonition, of keeping the commandments, proveth, that a Christian's life consists not in faith only, but in good works. B.

VER. 14. You are my friends. A wonderful condescension, says S. Aug. in our blessed Redeemer, who was God as well as man, to call such poor and sinful creatures, his friends; who, when we have done all we can, and ought, are still but unprofitable servants. I have called you my friends, because I have made known to you, &c. We can only understand these words, as S. Chrys. takes notice, of all things which they were capable of understanding, or which it was proper to communicate to them; for, as Christ tells them in the next chap (v. 12.) I have many things to say to you, but you cannot bear them now. Wi.

VER. 16. O ineffable grace! For what were we, before Christ chose us, but wretched and abandoned creatures! Such we were; but now we are chosen, in 17 *These things I command you, that you love one another.

18 If the world hate you, know ye that it hated me before you.

19 If you had been of the world, the world would love its own; but because you are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you.

20 Remember my word that I said to you: *The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, *they will also persecute you: if they have kept my word, they will keep yours also.

21 But all these things they will do to you for my name's sake: because they know not him that sent me.

22 If I had not come, and spoken to them, they would not have sin: but now they have no excuse for their sin.

23 He that hateth me, hateth my Father also.

24 If I had not done among them the works that no other man hath done, they would not have sin: but now they have both seen, and hated both me and my Father.

25 But that the word may be fulfilled which is written in their law: *They have hated me without cause.

26 *But when the Paraclete is come, whom I will send you from the Father, the Spirit of truth, who order that we may become good by the grace of Him that hath chosen us. S. Aug. tract. 86. in Joan.

* 1 John iii. 11. and iv. 7.—Supra xiii. 16. Matt. x. 24.

VER. 18. If the world hate you. The wicked, unbelieving world, hate and persecute you, as they have done me; remember, that the servant must not desire to be treated better than his master. Wi.

VER. 20. Here Christ predicts, that many will be deaf to the words of his Church, as they have neglected to attend to his precepts.

VER. 22. They would not have sin, or would not be guilty of sin: that is, they might be excused, as to that not believing me to be their Messiah: but after so many instructions, which I have given them, and so many, and such miracles done in their sight, which also were foretold of their Messias, they can have no excuse for their obstinate sin of unbelief. They have hated both me, and my Father: that is, by hating me, the true Son, who have one and the same nature with my Father, they have also hated him, though they pretend to honour him as God. See on this chap. S. Aug. (tract. 81.) and S. Chrys. (hom. lxxvi.) lat. edit. hom. lxxvii. in Joan. in the Greek.

VER. 24. How can this be true, that Christ wrought greater wonders than any one else had ever done? We find recounted in the Old Testament, the miracles of Elias and Eliseus, who raised the dead to life, healed the sick, and brought down fire from heaven; of Moses, who afflicted Egypt with plagues, divided the Red Sea, for the passage of the Israelites, and brought water from the rock; of Josue, who stopped the waters of the Jordan, for the passage of the children of Israel, and in the battle of Gabaon, made the sun and moon stand still; in all which miracles, there appears a greater manifestation of power, than in any of the miracles wrought by our Saviour, during his ministry. But to this may be answered, that the miracles of our Saviour were much more numerous than those of any of the saints of the Old Testament, even of Moses himself; particularly when we compare the few years which he preached, and manifested the glory of his Father by his miracles, with the long life of Moses: Christ did not preach full four years, whereas Moses governed the people forty years. Again, if the miracles of Jesus were not of so astonishing a nature, at least they always had for their object, the healing of the sick, and the good of the people; which the prophets have given us, as the distinguishing characteristics of the miracles of the Messiah. Add to this, the ease and authority with which he performs them, which are most sensible proofs of their superiority. But what chiefly distinguishes his miracles, from those of the other saints, is, that he performed them in proof of his divinity, and of his mission, as the deliverer of Israel: whereas the prophets only perform miracles, as the ministers of the Lord, and as so many voices, which foretold the Messiah. Besides, if the ancient saints could work miracles, they never could confer that power upon others, as Christ did upon his disciples, of which the Jews themselves were witnesses, in all the places whither Christ sent his disciples. We omit mentioning his resurrection, which at this time he had not performed, but had already foretold, and which was the greatest miracle that has ever been performed. Calmet.

VER. 26. Whom I will send. The Holy Ghost is sent by the Son: therefore he proceedeth from him also, as from the Father; though the schismatical Greeks think differently; (B.) otherwise, as Dr. Challoner says, he could not be sent by the Son.

VER. 27. You shall give. He vouchsafes to join together the testimony of proceedeth from the Father, he shall give testimony of me:

27 And you shall give testimony, because you are with me from the beginning.

CHAP. XVI.

The conclusion of Christ's last discourse to his disciples.

THESE things have I spoken to you, that you may not be scandalized.

2 They will put you out of the synagogues: yea, the hour cometh, that whosoever killeth you, will think that he doth a service to God.

3 And these things will they do to you, because they have not known the Father, nor me.

4 But these things I have told you: that when the hour of them shall come, you may remember that I told you.

5 But I told you not these things from the beginning, because I was with you: And now I go to him that sent me: and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou?

6 But because I have spoken these things to you, sorrow hath filled your heart.

7 But I tell you the truth: it is expedient for you that I go: for if I go not, the Paraclete will not come to you: but if I go, I will send him to you.

8 And when he is come, he will convince the world of sin, and of justice, and of judgment.

* Matt. xxiv. 9.—Ps. xxiv. 19.—Luke xxiv. 49.

the Holy Ghost, and of the apostles; that we may see the testimony of truth, jointly to consist in the Holy Ghost, and in the prelates of the Catholic Church. See Acts, xv. 28.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. Which the persecutions you will have to suffer, on the part of man, may possibly occasion, particularly with the weak.

VER. 4. That when the hour of them shall come, you may remember that I told you.* This is both the sense and the construction, by the Greek text, which here determines the construction of the Latin. Wi.

VER. 5. None of you asketh me, whither goest thou? S. Peter had put this question, c. xiii. 36. and Thomas, c. xiv. 5. The meaning, then, of Christ's words here, seems to be, that having told you, I am going to leave you, and also going to him that sent me, you do not ask, says S. Cyril, to be fully and thoroughly informed about it. Wi.—You suffer yourselves to be entirely overcome with grief; and none of you inquire of me, whither I am going. You look on my departure as an eternal separation between us, and take leave of me, as if we were never to meet again. But be persuaded; my absence will only be for a short continuance; and this absence will be honourable and glorious for me, and extremely advantageous for you. If you were fully persuaded of this, you would inquire, how long I should be absent, and whither I was going; as one friend in the act of parting, is always accustomed to ask another. But you only torture your minds with the pain and grief you will have to suffer at my loss. Menoc. Tirin. &c.

VER. 6. Sorrow hath filled your heart: and this sorrow hindereth you from asking, what you should earnestly desire to know. Wi.—Peter had put the question above, xiii. 36. and Thomas, c. xiv. 5. But Jesus Christ means, that they did not persevere in their questions, so as to obtain satisfactory information, where, when, and for what end he was going, and how soon he was to return to them, or if to return at all. For it is customary with friends, to put the most minute questions on all these heads to friends, when they are about to be separated from each other. Menochius.

VER. 7. I tell you . . . it is expedient for you that I go: that I leave you, as to my corporal presence: that I suffer death, for the redemption of all men. And if I go not, the Paraclete will not come, according to the order of the divine decrees: his coming to sanctify you with his gifts, and to teach you all things, is not to be till after my ascension. When I am gone, I will send him to you. The Father and I will send him, for he proceedeth from both. Wi.

VER. 8. He will convince†, or convict the world. Others translate, he will reprove the world of sin, &c. These words have occasioned a great many expositions. I here follow S. Cyril, that the Holy Ghost will condemn the Jews, and all obstinate unbelievers, of their sin, in not believing, after so many miracles, and so many pregnant motives, that ought to induce them to submit to the Christian faith. 2dly. Of justice, by shewing the justice and innocence of Christ, and also, that true justice and sanctification cannot be obtained, but by his grace. 3dly. Of judgment, by shewing that the world, and the prince of this wicked world, the devil, is justly condemned, his empire in a great measure destroyed, and that all the wicked will be justly condemned, and punished with him. Wi.—The Holy Ghost, by his coming, brought over many thousands, 1st. To a sense of their sin, in not believing in Christ. 2dly. To a conviction of the justice of Christ, now sitting at the right hand of his Father. And 3dly. To a right apprehension of the 9 Of sin indeed: because they have not believed in me.

10 And of justice: because I go to the Father, and you shall see me no longer:

11 And of judgment: because the prince of this world is already judged.

12 I have yet many things to say to you: but you cannot bear them now.

13 But when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will teach you all truth: for he shall not speak of himself, but what things soever he shall hear, he shall speak: and the things that are to come, he will shew you.

14 He shall glorify me: because he shall receive of mine, and will declare it to you.

15 All things whatsoever the Father hath are mine. Therefore, I said, that he shall receive of mine, and will shew it to you.

16 A little while, and now you shall not see me, and again a little while, and you shall see me: because I go to the Father.

17 Then some of his disciples said one to another, What is this that he saith to us: A little while, and you shall not see me, and again a little while, and you shall see me: and because I go to the Father?

18 They said, therefore, What is this that he saith, A little while? we know not what he speaketh.

19 And Jesus knew that they wished to ask him: and he said to them: Of this do you inquire among yourselves, because I said, A little while, and you shall not see me; and again a little while, and you shall see me.

20 Amen, amen, I say to you, that you shall lament and weep, but the world shall rejoice; and you shall be made sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

21 A woman, when she is in labour, hath sorrow, because her hour is come: but when she hath brought forth the child, she remembereth no more the anguish, for joy that a man is born into the world.

22 So also you now indeed have sorrow, but I will see you again, and your heart shall rejoice: and your joy no man shall take from you.

23 And in that day you shall not ask me any thing. Amen, amen, I say to you: If you ask the Father any thing in my name, he will give it you.

24 Hitherto you have not asked any thing in my name: Ask, and you shall receive, that your joy may be full.

25 These things I have spoken to you in proverbs. The hour cometh when I will no more speak to you in proverbs, but will shew you plainly of the Father.

26 In that day you shall ask in my name, and I say not to you, that I will ask the Father for you.

27 For the Father himself loveth you, because you have loved me, and have believed that I came forth from God.

28 I came forth from the Father, and am come into judgment prepared for them that choose to follow Satan, who is already judged and condemned. Ch.—The Greek text, in addition, has ὅτι οὐ πιστεύουσιν εἰς ἐμὲ. Because they have not believed in me. This accusation and conviction of sin, cannot naturally fall on any, but the incredulous Jews. S. Aug. V. Bede, S. Chrys. Theophyl. and many others, are of opinion, that this sin was their disbelief in Jesus, after all the miracles he had done in their presence, after so many prophecies so clearly accomplished in his person, after so many prodigies and wonders, which happened at his death, at his resurrection, and after his resurrection. They are accused, and convicted of sin, particularly by sensible effects of the Holy Spirit, in the apostles, by the gift of miracles and tongues, and that supernatural knowledge, which was communicated, not only to the apostles, but also to all the first Christians. These are the means, which the Paraclete, the consoling and assisting Spirit, makes use of, to condemn, and convince the world of sin; that is, of incredulity, which is the source and foundation of all other sins. The world had calumniated and despised its Saviour. It had condemned him, as a liar, as a seducer, magician, a man possessed by the devil, a destroyer of the law of God. To which the Son of God made no resistance; he only replied, that he did not wish to take the execution of justice upon himself, and that he was not come into the world to judge the world. Therefore, he committed all to the Holy Spirit, who, in the persons of the apostles, did justice to the Son, by shewing to the whole world, his doctrines, his life, his miracles, and the accomplishment of all the ancient prophecies in his person. All that the apostles preached, they confirmed by most stupendous miracles, gained the hearts of pagans to believe Jesus as their Redeemer, and called down imprecations upon the heads of the incredulous Jews, who had rejected a prophet, visibly sent by God, a Saviour and Redeemer of his people, who, in his person, bore all the characters of the divinity. Calmet.

* Matt. vii. 7. and xxi. 22. Mark xi. 24. Luke xi. 9. Supra xiv. 18. James i. 5.

VER. 13. When he, the Spirit of Truth, is come, he will teach you all truth; will direct you and the Church, in the ways of truth. For he shall not speak of himself, or of himself only, because, says S. Aug. he is not from himself, but proceedeth from the Father and the Son. Whatsoever he shall hear, he shall speak; this his hearing, says S. Aug. is his knowledge, and his knowledge is his essence, or being, which from eternity is from the Father and the Son. The like expressions are applied to the Son, as proceeding from the Father. Jo. v. 30. and viii. 16. &c. Wi.—If he shall teach all truth, and that for ever, (c. xi. v. 26.) how is it possible, that the Church can err, or hath erred in matters of faith, at any time, or in any point of doctrine? In this supposition, would not the Holy Ghost have forfeited his title of Spirit of Truth?

VER. 15. All things whatsoever the Father hath, are mine. The obvious sense of these words, shews, that the Son hath the same nature, and the same substance with the Father, and that he is one, and the same God with him. And by Christ's adding: therefore he (the Holy Ghost) shall receive of mine, we are taught, that the third person proceeds both from the Father, and the Son, and that he receives, and has the same perfections. Wi.

VER. 16. A little while, and now you shall not see me, &c. Many expound these words in this manner: that after a little while, you shall not see me, because even to-morrow, I shall be taken from you by death: and again, after a little while, you shall see me, because the third day I shall rise again, and converse with you, till my ascension. S. Aug. gives another interpretation, (tract. 101.) that by the first little while, may be understood, the short time till Christ's ascension, and by the latter little while, the short time that the apostles were to live in this world; after which they should see, and enjoy Christ for ever in the kingdom of heaven. And this exposition seems to agree better with the following promise. Wi.—In a few hours, I shall be separated from you, to be delivered up to my enemies, and put to the cruel death of the cross; and after a short time, I shall rise again; then you shall see me in my new state of glory. S. Chrys. both SS. Cyrils, Theophyl. Euthym. S. Aug. and others, interpret this verse differently thus: Not long hence, I shall be entirely separated from you; you shall not see me, because I shall go to the Father, by my ascension; but you shall see me again, after a short time, at my second coming, to judge the living and the dead. All the time, that shall pass between my ascension, and my second coming, is in the eyes of God only as a moment. For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday, which is past and gone. Psal. lxxxix. v. 4. And the apostle calls all time a moment, a time that soon passes. 1 Cor. vii. and 2 Cor. iv.

VER. 20. Your sorrow shall be turned into joy, chiefly at the end of your mortal life; then you shall have a joy, never to be taken from you. Wi.

VER. 22. The joy you will feel at my resurrection, shall ever be unalterable, and unremitting, because there I shall give you assurances and proofs of your future resurrection, and immortality. As you have been partners in my labours, in my ignominies, and in my sorrows, so also shall you have a share in my glory, in my resurrection, and immortal bliss. Behold, these will rise to your ever unalterable and permanent joy. This is the opinion of S. Chrys. S. Cyril, Theophyl. and others.

VER. 23. In that day, &c. or at that time, in that happy state, you shall not ask, you shall not need to ask me any questions: nor even desire to have any happiness, but what you will enjoy. But now if you ask, that is, petition for any thing of the Father in my name, he will give it you, whatever graces or assistances you stand in need of; ask them in my name, as I am your chief Mediator, through whose merits all shall be granted you. This is the constant practice of the Church, to ask for all graces through our Lord Jesus Christ. Wi.—In my name. In consequence of this promise, the Church concludeth all her prayers, even those that are addressed to the saints, Per Christum Dominum nostrum, through Christ our Lord.

VER. 24. Hitherto you have not asked any thing in my name: by the merits of me, your Mediator and Redeemer. They were not yet acquainted, says S. Cyril, with this manner of praying and petitioning, as they were afterwards. Wi.

VER. 26-27. In that day . . . I say not to you that I will ask the Father for you, or shall need to ask the Father for you, though I am your Redeemer, your chief Advocate and Mediator, by dying for all the world.—For the Father himself loveth you, because you have loved me, and have believed that I came forth from God, sent to be your Redeemer.—I came forth from the Father, both as begotten of him from all eternity; and I also came into the world, as sent from him to become man, to become the Redeemer of the world, both as God and man. Now I am going, as man, to leave the world, and go to the Father, with whom I am, and have always been, as God. Wi.

the world: again I leave the world, and I go to the Father.

29 His disciples say to him: Behold now thou speakest plainly, and speakest no proverb.

30 Now we know that thou knowest all things, and thou needest not that any man ask thee: by this we believe, that thou camest forth from God.

31 Jesus answered them: Do you now believe?

32 *Behold the hour cometh, and is now come, that you shall be dispersed, every man to his own, and shall leave me alone: and yet I am not alone, because the Father is with me.

33 These things I have spoken to you, that in me you may have peace. In the world you shall have distress: but have confidence, I have overcome the world.

CHAP. XVII.

Christ's prayer for his disciples.

THESE things Jesus spoke, and lifting up his eyes to heaven, he said; Father, the hour is come, glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify thee.

2 ^bAs thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he may give life everlasting to all whom thou hast given him.

3 Now this is life everlasting, that they may know

* Matt. xxvi. 81. Mark xiv. 27.—^b Matt. xxviii. 18.

VER. 29, &c. In this we believe that thou camest forth from God; that is, we are more confirmed than ever, that thou art the Messiah, the true Son of God. Yet S. Chrys. S. Cyril, and S. Aug. take notice, that their faith was but imperfect, till after Christ's resurrection, and the coming of the Holy Ghost; and therefore Christ answered them, (v. 31. &c.) Now do you believe? the hour cometh, that you shall be dispersed, &c. Wi.

* V. 4. Ut cum venerit hora eorum, reminiscamini quia Ego dixi vobis, &c. where the construction is not hora eorum, but reminiscamini eorum, &c.

† V. 8. Arguet mundum, &c., which S. Cyr. expounds by κατακρίναι. See S. Aug. interpretation on that verse, tract 95. p. 733.

† V. 13. Non loquetur a semetipso, S. Aug. says on these words, (tract. 99.) quia non est a semetipso. Sed quæcumque audiet, loquetur . . . ab illo audiet, a quo procedit . . . a quo est illi essentia, ab illo scientia; & audientia nihil aliud est quam scientia.

§ V. 23. Non me rogabit quicquam, &c. ἵνα ῥησέτω, which commonly signifies to ask questions: but when it follows, ἀλλήλους τὸν πατέρα, this is properly to petition for.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1 Glorify thy Son, by signs and miracles, lest dying so disgraceful a death, I seem to be no more than another man; that thy Son may glorify thee, that my death may make thee praised and glorified. Wi.

VER. 2. Power over all flesh, that he may give life everlasting to all whom thou hast given him.* He speaks of himself, as made man, and the Redeemer of mankind. If we ask, who are they, who in this sense are said to be given to Christ: it is true, only the elect, or predestined, are given by a special and uncommon mercy. In this sense S. Aug. says, (tract. 111. p. 779.) They are not said to be given, to whom he shall not give life everlasting. Yet not only the elect, but all believers, nay, all men whatsoever, may be said to be given to him, inasmuch as by his coming to redeem all, sufficient helps and means are offered to all men, whereby they may be saved: and inasmuch as Christ came, suffered, died, and offered up his death for all men. See 2 Cor. v. 15. Wi.—Thou hast given him power over all flesh; by this our Saviour shewed, that his preaching was directed, not to the Jews only, but to every nation of the earth. Are then all saved? Christ has done sufficient for the salvation of all, and if they are not saved, it is the fault, not of him that speaketh, but of those that receive not his word. S. Chrys. hom. lxxix. in Joan.

VER. 3. This is life everlasting; that is, the way to life everlasting, that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent. The Ariana, from these words, pretended that the Father only is the true God. S. Aug. and divers others answer, that the sense and construction is, that they may know thee, and also Jesus Christ thy Son, whom thou hast sent to be the only true God. We may also expound them with S. Chrys. and others, so that the Father is here called the only true God, not to exclude the Son, and the Holy Ghost, who are the same one true God with the Father; but only to exclude the false gods of the Gentiles. Let the Socinians take notice, that (1 Jo. v. 20.) the Son of God, Jesus Christ, is expressly called the true God, even with the Greek article, upon which they commonly lay so much stress. Wi.—Life everlasting. Both the life of glory in heaven, and of grace here, consisteth in the knowledge of God; the former in perfect vision, the latter in faith working by charity. For knowledge of God, without keeping his commandments, is not true knowledge, but unprofitable knowledge. 1 Jo. xi.

thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

4 I have glorified thee upon the earth: I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do:

5 And now glorify thou me, O Father, with thyself, with the glory which I had with thee, before the world was.

6 I have manifested thy name to the men whom thou hast given me out of the world. Thine they were, and to me thou gavest them: and they have kept thy word.

7 Now they have known that all things which thou hast given me are from thee.

8 Because the words which thou gavest me, I have given to them: and they have received them, and have known for certain that I came forth from thee, and they have believed that thou didst send me.

9 I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them whom thou hast given me: because they are thine:

10 And all mine are thine, and thine are mine: and I am glorified in them.

11 And now I am no more in the world, and these are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, keep them in thy name, whom thou hast given me: that they may be one, as we also are.

VER. 5. And now, glorify thou me, O Father, with thyself, with the glory which I had with thee, before the world was. Glorify me, is the same as make me known to men; so that the sense may be, make men know, that I had the same glory with thee, before the world was created, and from all eternity. Others understand, that Christ as man, here prays that his eternal Father would make known to men, that glory, which it was decreed from eternity should be given him: that is, that all creatures should be made subject to him, even as he was man, and appointed to be judge of the living and the dead. See 1 Cor. xv. 28. Ephes. i. 22. Wi.

VER. 6. To the men whom thou gavest me out of the world. By whom we may understand his apostles and disciples. They were thine, and also mine, as I am God. See v. 10.—And to me thou gavest them, inasmuch as I am become man, their Saviour, their Redeemer, &c. Wi.—Had then the Father any thing which the Son had not? By no means. But Christ, as Son of God, had from eternity what he had not as Son of man; because he had not yet taken flesh of his virgin mother. All that he had as God, he attributes to his Father. S. Aug. tract. 106. in Joan.

VER. 7-8. Now they have known that all things which thou gavest me, are from thee. That is, says S. Aug.† they now know, and will know more perfectly hereafter, that I myself am from thee, or proceed from thee, and am sent by thee to redeem the world. Wi.

VER. 9. I pray for them, I pray not for the world. That is, now in this prayer, whereas I desire special graces and assistances for them, to discharge their duty, as my apostles; yet we must take notice, that (v. 20.) Christ prayed for all those, who should believe in him. He also prayed (Luke xxiii. 34.) for all, even for those that crucified him, Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do. Wi.—The prayer I now offer up to thee, O my Father, is all in behalf of my disciples, it is not for the world. I pray not now for the incredulous Jews, nor for such of the Gentiles as shall afterwards believe in me; for them I will pray at another time. At present I speak to thee for my apostles only: they call for my first care, because they are thine, and thou has given them to me.—Calmet.—Jesus Christ prayed with an absolute and an efficacious prayer, for all those, for whom his prayer was to be heard: he begged for them, whatever his Father had predestinated to give them, but he asked for nothing, that his Father had predestinated not to give them.

VER. 10. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine. They must needs be equal, says S. Aug. to whom equally belong all things, and all persons; on which words S. Chrys. also says, (hom. lxxxi.) Do you see the equality? Wi.—And all mine are thine, and thine are mine: as if he said, whatever thou hast given to me, remains still thine, for mine are thine; and whatever is thine, is likewise mine, for thine are all mine. S. Chrys. hom. lxxx. in Joan.

VER. 11. And now I am no more in the world: that is, I am now leaving the world, as to a corporeal and visible presence: yet S. Aug. takes notice, that Christ saith afterwards, (v. 13.) these things I speak in the world: therefore he was still for some short time in the world. And as to his true invisible presence with his Church, he gave us this promise, (Matt. xxviii. 20.) Behold I am with you all days, even to the end of the world.—Keep them in thy name, whom thou hast given me.† Christ, as man, says S. Aug. asks of his Father, to preserve those disciples whom he had given him, who were to preach the gospel to the world.—That they may be one, as we also are. These words cannot signify an equality, nor to be one in nature and substance, as the divine persons are one, but only that they may imitate, as much as they are able, that union of love and affection. See S. Chrys. S. Cyril, and S. Aug. on these words. Wi.—Here Jesus Christ prays especially, that the apostles and his Church may be kept in unity of religion, and free from schism.

12 While I was with them, I kept them in thy name. *Those whom thou gavest me, I have kept: and none of them hath perished, but the son of perdition, ^bthat the Scripture may be fulfilled.

13 And now I come to thee: and these things I speak in the world, that they may have my joy filled in themselves.

14 I have given them thy word, and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world: as I also am not of the world.

15 I do not ask that thou take them away out of the world, but that thou preserve them from evil.

16 They are not of the world: as I also am not of the world.

17 Sanctify them in truth. Thy word is truth.

18 As thou hast sent me into the world, I also have sent them into the world.

19 And for them do I sanctify myself: that they also may be sanctified in truth.

20 And not for them only do I pray, but for those also who through their word shall believe in me.

21 That they all may be one, as thou, Father, in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me:

22 And the glory which thou hast given me, I have given to them: that they may be one, as we also are one.

* Intra xviii. 9.—^b Ps. cviii. 8.—^c 2 Kings xv. 23. Matt. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32.

VER. 34. While I was with them, I kept them in thy name. He still speaks, says S. Chrys. as man, and after a human manner, by mentioning the advantage they seemed to enjoy, as long as he conversed visibly with them on earth, not that his invisible presence should be less beneficial to them.—And none of them hath perished, except the son of perdition. the wretched Judas, whose fall was foretold in the Scriptures. Psal. cviii. He hath perished, that is, now is about being lost, by his own fault, says S. Chrys. on this place. And S. Aug. on Psal. cxxxviii. How did the devil enter into the heart of Judas? he could not have entered, had not he given him place. Wi.—That the Scripture may be fulfilled: this does not any ways shew, that it was the will of God that Judas should be lost; but only that what happened to Judas was conformable to the prophecies, and not occasioned by them. Who will doubt, says S. Aug. (lib. de Unit. Eccl. c. ix.) but that Judas might, if he pleased, have abstained from betraying Christ. But God foretold it, because he foresaw clearly the future perversity of his disposition. Calmet.—See above, (xiii. 18.) one of the principal passages of Scripture relative to the treachery of Judas, in which the traitor's crime had been predicted.

VER. 14. He tells his Father the reason why the world hated them, because they were not of the world. By generation, indeed, they were of the world; but by regeneration, they were not of the world. Thus they became like to himself, being born again of that Holy Spirit, by whose all powerful operation, he took upon himself the form of a servant. But although they were not of the world, still was it necessary that they should remain in the world; therefore he continues, I ask not that thou wouldst take them out of the world. S. Aug. tract. 167. in Joan.

VER. 18. As thou hast sent me into the world, I also have sent them into the world. He speaks of that mission, which agreed with him, as man, and become man for the salvation of mankind, to which also the apostles, and their successors were to co-operate, as the ministers and instruments of Christ, by virtue of their mission from him. Wi.—For the same intent as Christ himself was sent, were the apostles sent also: whence S. Paul says, God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself, and he has placed in us the word of reconciliation. 2 Cor. v. 19. Glossarium.

VER. 19. And for them do I sanctify myself. S. Aug. expounds it, I sanctify them, who are my members, in myself. The interpretation of S. Chrys. and S. Cyril, seems preferable, that to sanctify in the style of the Scriptures, is oftentimes the same as to offer up a sacrifice: so the sense here is, I sacrifice, and offer up myself on the cross for them and all mankind. Wi.—By this Christ shews, that he sanctified the apostles, by sanctifying himself; because they are the members of his body. S. Aug. tract. 107. in Joan.—Or, according to S. Chrys. I offer myself up to be the victim in their behalf. For victims, and whatever is dedicated to God, are called holy. He, their head, was offered up, and they also are immolated, according to that of the apostle, Rom. xii. Exhibit your members a living sacrifice, holy, &c. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxi. in Joan.

VER. 20. After having prayed for his apostles in particular, he now begins to pray for all that would afterwards, by their preaching, believe in his name; (S. Aug. tract. 109. in Joan.) and by this he likewise comforts his disciples, shewing them, that they would prove the instruments of the salvation of others. S. Chrys. hom. 80 in Joan.—This divine prayer of Jesus Christ is a great comfort to all 23 I in them, and thou in me: that they may be made perfect in one: and the world may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast also loved me.

24 Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me: that they may see my glory, which thou hast given me: because thou hast loved me before the foundation of the world.

25 Just Father, the world hath not known thee: but I have known thee: and these have known, that thou hast sent me.

26 And I have made known thy name to them, and will make it known: that the love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

CHAP. XVIII.

The history of the Passion of Christ.

WHEN *Jesus had said these things, he went forth with his disciples over the brook Cedron, where there was a garden, into which he entered with his disciples.

2 Now Judas also, who betrayed him, knew the place: because Jesus had often resorted thither together with his disciples.

3 *Judas, therefore, having received a band of soldiers, and servants, from the chief priests and the Pharisees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons.

Luko xxii. 89.—^d Matt. xxvi. 47. Mark xiv. 43. Luke xxii. 47.

Christians; it is introduced in the holy Canon of the Mass, before the consecration, as here it was made just before his visible sacrifice on the cross. B.

VER. 21. Christ does pray that his disciples may be one, as he and his heavenly Father are one; not that the unity may resemble the unity of persons in the divinity, by a perfect and exact likeness; but only as far as it is possible for men to imitate the perfections of God, as when he says, "Be ye merciful as your heavenly Father is merciful." S. Chrys. hom. lxxxi. in Joan.

VER. 22. The glory which thou gavest me, I have given to them. S. Chrys. expounds this of the power of working miracles: S. Aug. rather understands the glory of heaven, which he had given, prepared, and designed to give them in heaven. This seems to be the sense by the 24th verse, where he says, Father, I will that where I am, they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me. Wi.

VER. 26. I will make thy name known to them, by giving them, by means of the Holy Ghost, a perfect knowledge. For if they know Thee, they will likewise know that I am not different from Thee, but thy own well beloved Son. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxi. in Joan.

* V. 2. Ut omne quod dedisti ei, det eis vitam eternam, ἵνα πάντες διδωκὰς ὡς ἐπὶ δόσιν αὐτοῖς ζωὴν αἰώνιον. That is, ut omnibus quos dedisti, &c.

† V. 3. Ut cognoscant te, &c. S. Aug. tract. 105. p. 671. Ordo Verborum est, ut te, & quem misisti Jesum Christum, cognoscant solum verum Deum. See also S. Amb. (l. v. de fide, c. ii. t. 4. p. 138.) where he treats of this verse at large. S. Chrys. gives this interpretation, (hom. lxxix.) Solum verum Deum, &c. ad eorum qui diu non sunt differentiam. In the Greek, (hom. lxxx. p. 474. t. 8.) Ed. Montfaucon. πρὸς ἀντιδιαστολὴν τῶν ἀπὸ θέντων θεῶν φησι. So likewise S. Greg. Naz. Orat. xxxvi. p. 586.

‡ V. 7. Quia omnia quae dedisti mihi, abs te sunt. That is, says S. Aug. (tract. 106. p. 767.) cognoverunt, quia abs te sum, &c.

§ V. 11. Serva eos in nomine tuo, quos dedisti mihi. Some Greek MSS. have in nomine tuo, quod dedisti mihi, ὃ δίδωκας μοι. Or, as S. Cyril reads, ἐν ὀνόματι σου ὃ δίδωκας μοι. which is the same by a Grecism, as ὃ δίδωκας.—Ut sint unum sicut & nos. S. Chrys. says, non equalitate, sed pro humanā facultate, or quantum hominibus fas est, ὡς ἀνθρώποις δυνατόν. (hom. πβ. p. 484.) nov. Ed. Ben.

|| V. 12. Cum essem, cum eis, &c. He speaks, says S. Chrys. as man, ὡς ἀνθρώπος διαλέγεται. hom. πα. p. 480.—Ibid. nisi filius perditionis, εἰ μὴ, &c. nisi, it is not, ἀλλὰ, sed.—Non perdam, that is, says S. Chrys. in the same place, quantum in me erit, non perdam . . . non me impellente, vel relincente: quod si sponte resiliant, non ex necessitate traham. εἰ δὲ ἀφ' αὐτῶν ἀποδηῶσι, πρὸς ἀνάγκην οὐκ ἔλαω. S. Aug. Quomodo diabolus intravit in cor Judæ, non intraret, nisi ille locum daret.

¶ V. 19. Sanctifico meipsum. Quid est hoc, says S. Aug. (tract. 108.) nisi eos in meipso Sanctifico, quoniam membra ejus sunt! S. Chrys. (hom. πβ. p. 484.) Offero tibi Sacrificium, προσφέρω σοι θυσίαν. S. Cyril says the same, l. xi. in Joan. p. 989.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 1. Over the torrent, or brook Cedron, which ran betwixt Jerusalem and Mount Olivet, in the valley of Cedron, or of Henuim, or of* 4 Jesus, therefore, knowing all things that were to come upon him, went forward, and said to them: Whom seek ye?

5 They answered him; Jesus of Nazareth. Jesus saith to them; I am he. And Judas also, who betrayed him, stood with them.

6 As soon then, as he had said to them; I am he, they went backward, and fell to the ground.

7 Again, therefore, he asked them; Whom seek ye? And they said: Jesus of Nazareth.

8 Jesus answered, I have told you, that I am he: if, therefore, you seek me, let these go their way.

9 That the word might be fulfilled which he said; *Of them whom thou hast given me, I have not lost any one.

10 Then Simon Peter having a sword, drew it, and struck the servant of the high priest, and cut off his right ear. And the name of the servant was Malchus.

11 Then Jesus said to Peter: Put up thy sword into the scabbard. The chalice which my Father hath given me, shall I not drink it?

12 Then the band, and the tribune, and the servants of the Jews, took Jesus, and bound him:

13 And they led him away to ^bAnnas first; for he was father-in-law to Caiphas, who was the high priest of that year.

14 Now Caiphas was he, ^cwho had given the counsel to the Jews; that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

15 And Simon Peter followed Jesus, and so did another disciple. And that disciple was known to the high priest, and went in with Jesus into the court of the high priest.

16 But Peter stood at the door without. ^dThen the other disciple, who was known to the high priest, went out, and spoke to the portress, and brought in Peter.

* Supra xvii. 12.—^b Luke i. 1. 2.—^c Supra xi. 49.—^d Matt. xxvi. 58. Mark xiv. 54. Luke xxii. 55.—^e Matt. xxvi. 57. Mark xiv. 53.

Josaphat, not of Cedars, as in many Greek copies. See the history of Christ's Passion. Matt. xxvi. and xxvii. Wi.

VER. 5. Jesus here asks them, whom they were seeking, not as if he were ignorant of their errand, but to shew them, that of their own power they could do nothing, because, though he, whom they sought, was present, and stood before them, yet, they did not know him. Theophyl.—The darkness of the night could not have been the reason why they did not see him, because, as the evangelist observes, they had lanterns and torches with them, and if they could not see him, at least they might have known him by his voice; for how could Judas, their leader, who was one of his own apostles, be unable to know him by his voice. S. Chrys.

VER. 6. Jesus again shews the Jews his power, and works another miracle before them, to give them another opportunity of being converted; but they would not; they still persevere in their hardness of heart; he therefore now delivers himself up to them, as now they can have no excuse for their incredulity. ^f Chrys.

VER. 13. Some are of opinion that Annas and Caiphas both dwelt in the same house. V.

VER. 15. Peter followed Jesus, but at a distance, for he was afraid. And so did another disciple. S. Jerom. and S. Chrys. and after him, Theophyl. with some others, believe that this other disciple was S. John himself. Calmet.

VER. 17. S. John gives here Peter's first denial, which is reunited to the other two by all the preceding evangelists. This is one of the circumstances, which the others may have neglected, to unite three similar facts, and relating to the same object. V.—S. Peter, the prince and head of the Church, was permitted to fall, to teach him to treat with more mildness and condescension those, whom he would afterwards have to raise out of the same miserable state of sin. One weak and frail man is placed over another, that seeing him unhappily fallen, he may give him his kind and helping hand, to free him from that unhappy state, in which he knows himself to have been. S. Chrys.—Of all which our divine Saviour suffered in the court of Caiphas, nothing so much affected him as the dangerous fall of Peter, the chief of all his apostles, who had received the most signal favours from him. He had boasted that very night, 17 The maid therefore that was portress, saith to Peter; Art thou not also one of this man's disciples? He saith: I am not.

18 Now the servants and officers stood at a fire of coals, because it was cold, and warmed themselves: and with them was Peter also standing, and warming himself.

19 The high priest then asked Jesus of his disciples, and of his doctrine.

20 Jesus answered him: I have spoken openly to the world: I have always taught in the synagogue, and in the temple, whither all the Jews resort: and in secret I have spoken nothing.

21 Why askest thou me? ask them who have heard what I have spoken to them: behold they know what things I have said.

22 And when he had said these things, one of the officers standing by, gave Jesus a blow, saying; Answerest thou the high priest so?

23 Jesus answered him; If I have spoken evil, give testimony of the evil: but if well, why strikest thou me?

24 ^aAnd Annas sent him bound to Caiphas, the high priest.

25 And Simon Peter was standing, and warming himself. ^bThey said, therefore, to him: Art not thou also one of his disciples? He denied it, and said, I am not.

26 One of the servants of the high priest, a kinsman to him whose ear Peter cut off, saith to him; Did I not see thee in the garden with him?

27 Then Peter again denied: and immediately the cock crew.

28 ^cThen they led Jesus from Caiphas to the governor's hall. And it was morning: and they went not into the hall, ^dthat they might not be defiled, but that they might eat the Pasch.

29 Pilate, therefore, went out to them, and said; What accusation bring you against this man?

Luke xxii. 54.—^f Matt. xxvi. 69. Mark xiv. 67. Luke xxii. 56.—^g Matt. xxvii. 2. Mark xv. 1. Luke xxiii. 1.—^h Acts x. 28. and xi. 8.

that although all the rest of the disciples should abandon their master, he would never forsake him. Yet, see the weakness and inconstancy of human nature; at the voice of a poor maid, he forthwith denies his master; repeats his denial a second, and a third time, and even swears with an imprecation, that he never knew the man. O what is man, when he confides too much in himself! Let us look to ourselves, and see, that we never fall into the same unfortunate state. But if we have the misfortune to imitate this apostle in his fall, let us likewise imitate him in his speedy repentance: for immediately after his fall, going out, he wept bitterly; a practice which, it is said, he ever after retained, as often as he heard the cock crow. Butler's Lives of the Saints.

VER. 21. Why askest thou me? Caiphas, in quality of judge, was to examine the crimes laid to the charge of the accused, by the testimony of the witnesses. Wi.

VER. 24. Annas sent him bound to Caiphas. Christ was but a little while there: for both the box on the ear, given to our Saviour, and S. Peter's denial, were at the house of Caiphas: so that S. John does not here observe the order of time. Wi.

VER. 28. That they might eat the Pasch. They, who by the Pasch will always understand the paschal-lamb, look upon it certain from these words, that the Scribes and Pharisees at least, had deferred eating the paschal-lamb, till Friday the 15th day, in the evening: but there are passages in the Scripture, which shew, that the word Pasch, or Phase, comprehends, not only the paschal sacrifice of the lamb, but also the sacrifices, that were to be eaten with unleavened bread, during the seven days of the paschal solemnity, as Deut. xvi. 2. thou shalt offer up the Phase, or Pasch, to the Lord, of sheep and oxen. And 1 Paralip. xxiv. 8. They gave to the priests to make the Phase, or Pasch, in altogether two thousand six hundred small cattle, and three hundred oxen. The oxen, therefore, were also given, to make up the Pasch, and were comprehended by the word Pasch, or Phase. It might, therefore, be these paschal sacrifices, and not the paschal-lamb, which the priests designed to partake of, and therefore would not enter into the palace of Pilate. See Tillemont against Lamy, on the 2nd passage out of S. John, tom. ii. p. 696. See also the Lexicon of Mr Heure on the word Pâque. Wi.

30 They answered, and said to him; If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up to thee.

31 Pilate then said to them; Take him you, and judge him according to your law. The Jews, therefore, said to him; It is not lawful for us to put any one to death.

32 ^aThat the word of Jesus might be fulfilled, which he said, signifying what death he should die.

33 ^bPilate, therefore, went into the hall again, and called Jesus, and said to him; Art thou the king of the Jews?

34 Jesus answered; Sayest thou this thing of thyself, or have others told it thee of me?

35 Pilate answered; Am I a Jew? Thy nation and the chief priests have delivered thee up to me: what hast thou done?

36 Jesus answered; My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, my servants would certainly strive that I should not be delivered to the Jews: but now my kingdom is not from hence.

37 Pilate, therefore, said to him; Art thou a king then? Jesus answered; Thou sayest that I am a king. For this was I born, and for this came I into the world, that I should give testimony to the truth: every one that is of the truth, heareth my voice.

38 Pilate saith to him; What is truth? And when he had said this, he went forth again to the Jews, and saith to them; I find no cause in him.

39 ^cBut you have a custom that I should release one unto you at the Pasch: will you, therefore, that I release unto you the king of the Jews?

40 Then they all cried again, saying; Not this man, but Barabbas. Now Barabbas was a robber.

CHAP. XIX.

The continuation of the history of the Passion of Christ.

THEN, ^dtherefore, Pilate took Jesus, and scourged him.

2 And the soldiers plating a crown of thorns, put it upon his head: and they put on him a purple garment.

3 And they came to him, and said; Hail, king of the Jews: and they gave him blows.

4 Pilate, therefore, went forth again, and saith to

^a Matt. xx. 19.—^b Matt. xxvii. 11. Mark xv. 2. Luke xxiii. 3.
^c Matt. xxvii. 15. Mark xv. 6.

VEN. 35. It pleased God, that Christ, who was to die both for the Jews and the Gentiles, should be betrayed by the one, and put to death by the other. B.

• V. 1. Cedron, not Cedrorum. In most Greek copies τῶν Κέδρων. In some MSS. τὸν Κέδρον. So the Protestant translation, the brook Cedron.

CHAP. XIX. VEN. 1. Pilate's motive, for ordering our Saviour to be scourged, was no other than this; that the Jews might be satisfied with these his numerous sufferings, and might no longer seek his death. For the same reason, likewise, he permitted his soldiers to inflict those unheard of cruelties, related in the sequel. S. Aug. tract. 110. in Joan.

VEN. 11. Unless it were given, or permitted thee from above. Therefore, he that delivered me to thee, hath the greater sin. Some expound this of Judas; others, rather of the high priest Caiaphas, with the Jewish council: for they could not be ignorant that Jesus was their Messiah, having seen the miracles Jesus did, and knowing the predictions of the prophets. W.—Lest any should think, from what our Saviour had said, that Pilate was not in fault, in this place, he here adds, that he that had delivered him up, had the greater sin: God, indeed, had permitted it; but still these instruments of his death were not without fault. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxiii. in Joan.—Christ had been delivered into the power of Pilate through envy, and Pilate was about to exercise that power through fear. But though this last motive of fear can never justify any one, who condemns the innocent, yet still it is much more pardonable than the motive of them; Behold I bring him forth to you, that you may know that I find no cause in him.

5 (So Jesus came forth bearing the crown of thorns, and the purple garment.) And he saith to them; Behold the man.

6 When the chief priests, therefore, and the officers, had seen him, they cried out, saying; Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate saith to them; Take him, you, and crucify him; for I find no cause in him.

7 The Jews answered him, We have a law; and according to the law he ought to die, because he made himself the Son of God.

8 When Pilate, therefore, had heard this saying, he feared the more.

9 And he entered into the hall again, and he said to Jesus; Whence art thou? But Jesus gave him no answer.

10 Pilate, therefore, saith to him; Speakest thou not to me? knowest thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and I have power to release thee?

11 Jesus answered; Thou shouldst not have any power against me, unless it were given thee from above. Therefore, he that hath delivered me to thee, hath the greater sin.

12 And from thenceforth Pilate sought to release him. But the Jews cried out, saying; If thou release this man, thou art not Cæsar's friend. For whosoever maketh himself a king, speaketh against Cæsar.

13 Now when Pilate had heard these words, he brought Jesus forth: and sat down in the judgment-seat, in the place that is called Lithostrotos, and in Hebrew, Gabbatha.

14 And it was the Parasceve of the Pasch, about the sixth hour, and he saith to the Jews: Behold your king.

15 But they cried out: Away with him, away with him, crucify him. Pilate saith to them; Shall I crucify your king? The chief priests answered; We have no king but Cæsar.

16 Then, therefore, he delivered him to them to be crucified. And they took Jesus, and led him forth.

17 ^eAnd bearing his own cross, he went forth to that place which is called Calvary, but in Hebrew, Golgotha:

Luke xxiii. 17.—^d Matt. xxvii. 27. Mark xv. 16.—^e Matt. xxvii. 88 envy, which was the incentive of the Jewish multitude. S. Aug. tract. 116. in Joan.—Judas delivered Jesus into the hands of the priests, but both the priests and the people delivered him up to Pontius Pilate.
Mark xv. 22. Luke xxiii. 33.

VEN. 14. The Parasceve of the Pasch; that is, the day before the paschal sabbath. The eve of every sabbath was called the Parasceve, or day of preparation. But this was the eve of a high sabbath, viz. that which fell in the paschal week. Ch.—It was about the sixth hour when they crucified him. S. Mark, in his gospel, says, it was at the third hour that Jesus was crucified. These two evangelists are easily reconciled, if we consider that according to the custom of the Jews, all that took place between the third hour and sixth hour of their day, was said to have happened in the third hour: their days being divided into four parts of three hours each, in the same manner as the nights were into four watches, of three hours each. S. Mark, therefore, might say very well, that the crucifixion of our Saviour took place in the third hour: though it might have been towards the conclusion of this general division of the day: whilst S. John, with a reason equally as good, says that it happened about the sixth hour. John Nicolaus, in his marginal notes on S. Thomas Aurea Catena.

VEN. 17. S. John makes no mention of what took place on the way to Calvary, when Jesus, being worn out by fatigue, could not proceed any farther, and they were obliged to relieve him of his burden, and to give it to a man, named Simon, of Cyrene, to carry for him, as is related in S. Matt. xxvii. 32. and S. Mark, xv. 21. Calmet.—For the honour paid in the early ages to the holy cross. See S. Cyril, l. vi. cont. Julian. S. Jer. ep. xvii. S. Paulin. ep. xi.

18 Where they crucified him, and with him two others, one on each side, and Jesus in the midst.

19 And Pilate wrote a title also; and he put it upon the cross. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH, THE KING OF THE JEWS.

20 This title, therefore, many of the Jews read; because the place, where Jesus was crucified, was near to the city; and it was written in Hebrew, in Greek, and in Latin.

21 Then the chief priests of the Jews said to Pilate; Write not, The king of the Jews: but that he said, I am the king of the Jews.

22 Pilate answered; What I have written, I have written.

23 Then the soldiers, when they had crucified him, took his garments, (and they made four parts, to every soldier a part) and also his coat. Now the coat was without seam, woven from the top throughout.

24 They said then one to another; Let us not cut it, but let us cast lots for it, whose it shall be; that the Scripture might be fulfilled, saying, ^bThey have parted my garments among them; and upon my vesture they have cast lot. And the soldiers indeed did these things.

25 Now there stood by the cross of Jesus, his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene.

26 When Jesus, therefore, saw his mother, and the disciple standing, whom he loved, he saith to his mother; Woman, Behold thy son.

27 After that, he saith to the disciple; Behold thy mother. And from that hour the disciple took her to his own.

^a Matt. xxvii. 35. Mark xv. 24. Luke xxiii. 34.—^b Psal. xxi. 19.
^c Psal. lxxviii. 22.

VER. 19. He is the king, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles also. But it is not without reason, that he is called king of the Jews. For they were the true olive (Rom. xi.); and we, the wild olive, have been ingrafted, and made partakers of the virtue of the true olive. Christ, therefore, is the king of the Jews, circumcised, not in the flesh, but in the heart, not according to the letter, but the spirit. S. Aug. tract 118. in Joan.

VER. 20. As there were probably many Gentiles at Jerusalem at this time, on account of the festival day, this inscription was written in three different languages, that all might be able to read it. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxiv. in Joan.—It was written in Hebrew, on account of the Jews, who gloried in the law of God; in Greek, on account of the wise men of all nations; and in Latin, because of the Romans, who at that time commanded almost every nation of the earth. S. Aug. tract. 118. in Joan.

VER. 23. They made four parts. Christ's upper garment had seams, which the four executioners could easily divide; but his under garment, or vest, was without seam, so that being cut, it would have been of no use. Wi.—This coat without seam is a figure of the unity of the Church. S. Cyp. de unit. Eccles.—The Rev. Fred. Nolan, of Woodford, in Essex, in his late work, entitled, Objections of a Churchman to uniting with the Bible Society, after quoting 2 Pet. iii. 16, 17, says: "That the Bible may, therefore, prove the remote, but innocent cause of harm, is not, I apprehend, to be disputed, if we are to admit of its own authority:" p. 23, and again, p. 24, "that the present mode of circulating the Scriptures must prove a most effectual specific for multiplying sects and schisms; and consequently, for increasing, to an indefinite degree, the greatest evil, under which Christianity has suffered, from the time of its promulgation, down to the memorable epoch of this happy invention, for the establishment of Christian faith, and the extension of Christian unanimity." P. 62. ibid. "That the Bible is the foundation of our religion, is new doctrine, unless in the divinity of the convective. We are built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." Eph. ii. 20. On this foundation others still build, who are labourers together with God; (1 Cor. xi. 9. 10.) of which divine co-operation the successors of the apostles have an express promise, to the end of the world. Matt. xxviii. 20. And by persons thus authorized (John xx. 21.) apostolical tradition has been delivered down to the present day, p. 63. The one body, of which our Lord was resolved his Church should consist, was to have one faith, (Eph. iv. 4, 5.) it was to contain no schism, (1 Cor. xii. 25.) but the present confederacy is formed on the principle of combining every sect and party, and thus, while we have received an express prohibition against associating with those, who reject apostolical traditions, committed to the Church." 2 Thess. iii. 6. 14. In a foot-note on the above, the learned divine very appositely cites S. Ignatius, in which quotation we find these 28 Afterwards Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, said; I thirst.

29 Now there was a vessel set there full of vinegar. And they putting a sponge full of vinegar about hyssop, put it to his mouth.

30 When Jesus, therefore, had taken the vinegar, he said; It is consummated. And bowing his head, he gave up the ghost.

31 Then the Jews, (because it was the Parasceve) that the bodies might not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that was a great sabbath day) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

32 The soldiers, therefore, came; and they broke the legs of the first, and of the other that was crucified with him.

33 But when they came to Jesus, as they saw that he was already dead, they did not break his legs.

34 But one of the soldiers opened his side with a spear, and immediately there came out blood and water.

35 And he that saw it, gave testimony; and his testimony is true. And he knoweth that he saith true, that you also may believe.

36 For these things were done, that the Scripture might be fulfilled; ^dYou shall not break a bone of him.

37 And again another Scripture saith; ^eThey shall look on him whom they pierced.

38 And after these things, Joseph of Arimathea (because he was a disciple of Jesus, but secretly, for fear of the Jews) besought Pilate that he might take emphatic words: Μη πλάνασθε ἀδελφοί μου, ἐν τοῖς σχίζοντι ἀκολουθεῖ, βασίλειαν θεοῦ οὐ κληρονομεῖ. Be not deceived, my brethren, not only acknowledged schismatics, but whoever shall join with a schismatic, shall not inherit the kingdom of God. The same apostolic Father, in another part, adds: he who corrupts the faith of God, for which Christ suffered, shall go into unquenchable fire: ἐὶς το πῦρ τὸ ἀδύνατον χωρῆσαι. S. Alexander, in the fourth century, says of the Arians; that seamless garment, which the murderers of Jesus Christ would not divide, these men have dared to rip asunder. Τοῦ ἀρρεκτον χιτῶνα σχίσαι βολήσαν.

^d Exod. xii. 46. Num. ix. 12.—^e Zach. xii. 10.—^f Matt. xxvii. 57.
Mark xv. 43. Luke xxiii. 50.

VER. 25. There stood by the cross . . . his mother. And so near to him, that from the cross he both spoke to her, and also to S. John. Wi.

VER. 26. Though there were other holy women standing by the cross, he takes notice of none but his mother, teaching us, by this, what we owe to our parents. For although it is our duty to disown them, when they place obstacles in our way to salvation; yet when they do not thus impede us, we owe every thing to them, and must prefer them to all. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxiv. in Joan.—We learn also here, what should be our respect and confidence in this Virgin Mother, so highly honoured by her divine Son.

VER. 27. The disciple took her to his own home, or into his own care, not for his mother, by the Greek expression. See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. Wi.

VER. 31. Because it was the Parasceve. It is also called, (v. 14.) the day of preparation of the Pasch. Lit. the Parasceve of the Pasch. And (v. 31.) the Jews, because it was the preparation, that the bodies might not remain on the cross on the sabbath, for that was a great sabbath day, &c. Some pretend, by these expressions, to prove that Friday, the year Christ suffered, was not the first and great day of the feast of Azymis, but only the day of preparation, and that on Friday night the Jews eat the paschal lamb, and not the night before, or Thursday night, as Christ had done with his disciples. But according to the common exposition, Friday is here called the day of preparation, for the great and solemn sabbath, which happened in the paschal week. See Tillemont on the 5th passage out of John, p. 698. § 11. and 12. Wi.

VER. 34. There came out blood and water, which naturally could not come from a dead body. Wi.—Hence it is, that the sacred mysteries flow; as often, therefore, as thou approachest the awful cup, approach it as if thou wert going to drink from thy Saviour's sacred side. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxiv. in Joan.—The holy Fathers say, that the spouse of Jesus Christ was here taken out of his side, whilst sleeping on the cross, as Eve was from Adam's side, when he was cast asleep in Paradise.

VER. 36. You shall not break a bone of him. This, which was literally spoken of the paschal lamb, (Exod. xii. 46.) the evangelist applies to Christ, of whom the lamb was a figure. Wi.—This had been said of the paschal lamb, which was a figure of Jesus Christ. Exod. xii. 46. and Numb. ix. 12.

away the body of Jesus. And Pilate permitted him. He came, therefore, and took away the body of Jesus.

39 And Nicodemus also came; *he who at first came to Jesus by night, bringing a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about a hundred pound.

40 They took, therefore, the body of Jesus, and bound it in linen cloths with the spices, as it is the custom with the Jews to bury.

41 Now there was in the place, where he was crucified, a garden; and in the garden a new sepulchre, wherein no man had yet been laid.

42 There, therefore, because of the Parasceve of the Jews, they laid Jesus, for the sepulchre was nigh at hand.

CHAP. XX.

Christ's resurrection, and manifestation to his disciples.

AND ^bon the first day of the week, Mary Magdalene cometh in the morning, it being yet dark, to the sepulchre; and she saw the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

2 She ran, therefore, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple whom Jesus loved, and saith to them; They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him.

3 Peter, therefore, went out, and that other disciple, and they came to the sepulchre.

4 And they both ran together, and that other disciple out-ran Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

5 And when he stooped down, he saw the linen cloths lying; but yet he went not in.

6 Then cometh Simon Peter, following him, and went into the sepulchre, and saw the linen cloths lying,

7 And the napkin, that had been about his head, not lying with the linen cloths, but apart, wrapt up into one place.

* Supra iii. 2.—^b Matt. xxviii. 1. Mark xvi. 1. Luke xxiv. 2.—^c Matt. xxviii. 1.

VER. 37. This text is from Zachary, xii. 10. and seems to refer most literally to Jesus Christ.

VER. 39. About a hundred pound. This seems a great quantity. It may be, they did not use it all. And besides, it was the custom of the Jews, at their great burials, to cover the body with spices and perfumes. Wi.

VER. 41. This is added, lest it should be said, that it was not Christ, but some other, that rose from the dead; or at least, that he rose by the virtue of some other person reposing there. Calmet.

* V. 27. Accepit eam discipulus in sinu. Not in sinu. his fũ ſina.

CHAP. XX. VER. 1. As our Saviour had been interred in great haste, the holy women who had before accompanied Jesus in all his journeys, brought perfumes to embalm his sacred body again, in a manner more proper, than Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathea had been able to do before. S. John makes mention of Mary Magdalene only, because it was his intention to give a particular relation of all that she did; but we learn from the other evangelists, that there were three holy women at the sepulchre together, viz. Mary Magdalene, Mary, the mother of James, and Salome. Calmet.—This was on the first day of the week, the morning of the sabbath. V.—Christ rose again, leaving the stone and seals still lying on the sepulchre. But as this was to be believed by others also, after the resurrection, the tomb was opened, and thus the belief of what had taken place, propagated. This it was that struck Magdalene; for as soon as she saw the stone rolled from the sepulchre, without entering, or even looking into it, she immediately ran, in the ardour of her affection, to carry the news to the disciples. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxiv. in Joan.

VER. 6. He saw the linen cloths lying. S. Chrys. takes notice, that Christ's body being buried with myrrh, the linen would stick as fast to the body as pitch, so that it would be impossible to steal, or take away the body without the linen cloths. Wi.

VER. 9. He saw and believed. He did not yet believe that Jesus was risen from the dead, because he was still ignorant that he was to rise from the dead. For although the apostles had so often heard their divine Master speak in the most plain terms of his resurrection, still being so much accustomed to parables, 8 Then that other disciple also went in, who came first to the sepulchre; and he saw, and believed.

9 For as yet they knew not the Scripture, that he must rise again from the dead.

10 The disciples therefore went away again to their home.

11 *But Mary stood without at the sepulchre, weeping. Whilst she was then weeping, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre:

12 And she saw two Angels in white, sitting, one at the head, and one at the feet, where the body of Jesus had been laid.

13 They say to her; Woman, why weepest thou? She saith to them; Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.

14 When she had said this, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing: and she knew not that it was Jesus.

15 Jesus saith to her; Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She thinking that it was the gardener, saith to him; Sir, if thou hast taken him away, tell me where thou hast laid him: and I will take him away.

16 Jesus saith to her; Mary. She turning, saith to him; Rabboni, (that is to say, Master).

17 Jesus saith to her; Do not touch me, for I have not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say to them; I ascend to my Father and to your Father, to my God and your God.

18 Mary Magdalene cometh, and telleth the disciples; I have seen the Lord, and these things he said to me.

19 ^aNow when it was late that same day, the first of the week, and the doors were shut, where the disciples were gathered together for fear of the Jews: Jesus came and stood in the midst, and said to them; Peace be to you.

Mark xvi. 5. Luke xxiv. 4.—^d Mark xvi. 14. Luke xxiv. 36. 1 Cor. xv. 5.

they did not understand, and imagined something else was meant by these words. S. Aug. tract. 120. in Joan.

VER. 14. It may be asked, why Magdalene, after putting the question to the angels, turns round, without waiting for the answer. No doubt, as soon as she had spoken, the heavenly messengers perceived their Lord behind Mary, and by their looks and actions, gave her to understand that they beheld the Lord. This caused her immediately to look behind her. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxv. in Joan.

VER. 15. If thou hast taken him away. Thinking him, as the evangelist remarks, to be the gardener, how comes it, that without saying whom she sought, she asks if he had taken him away? Because such was the ardour of her love, that she could not imagine any one could think of any other but him, of whom her own mind was so full. S. Greg. hom. xxv. in Evan.

VER. 16. Jesus saith to her, Mary. Magdalene, now in grief and tears, knew not Jesus, till he called upon her by her name, and with his usual voice: then with joy, she cried out, Rabboni, Master. And Jesus saith to her, touch me not, &c. The meaning of which words seems to be: I am not yet leaving thee, nor ascending to the Father, so that thou mayest have time enough to embrace my feet afterwards; now go to my disciples, &c. Wi.—Magdalene, having inquired where he had placed him, appears to have turned towards the angels, to inquire the cause of the awe and reverence she had observed in them. Upon this, Jesus calls upon her by name, and she, turning again towards him, discovers him by his voice. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxv. in Joan.

VER. 17. I will not leave you again; be not in a hurry to touch me; you shall all have this pleasure. I will remain with you some time, before my ascension. Announce my resurrection to my apostles. You shall see me again. This is the interpretation most modern commentators put upon this place. Others suppose, that Magdalene imagined he was risen from the dead to live with men as before, like Lazarus. He addresses these words to her to disabuse her of this notion. Calmet.

VER. 19. And the doors were shut, or being shut; and remaining still shut, his glorified body entered by penetration through the doors, as he did at his resurrection. Maldonate takes notice, that Calvin was the first that denied this, against the belief of all the ancient Fathers and interpreters, who call this a miracle of divine power. Wi.—The same power which could bring Christ's 20 And when he had said this, he shewed them his hands, and his side. The disciples, therefore, were glad, when they saw the Lord.

21 He said therefore to them again; Peace be to you. As the Father hath sent me, I also send you.

22 When he had said this, he breathed on them, and he said to them: Receive ye the Holy Ghost:

23 "Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them: and whose you shall retain, they are retained.

24 Now Thomas, one of the twelve, who is called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came.

25 The other disciples, therefore, said to him; We have seen the Lord. But he said to them; Unless I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the place of the nails, and put my hand into his side, I will not believe.

26 And after eight days, his disciples were again within, and Thomas with them. Jesus cometh, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said; Peace be to you.

* Matt. xviii. 18.

whole body, entire in all its dimensions, through the doors, can, without the least question, make the same body really present in the sacrament; though both the one and the other be above our comprehension. Ch.—Therefore it is a want of faith to limit the power of Christ, by the ordinary rules of place, and to deny that he can be in the blessed Sacrament, and on as many altars as he pleaseth. We do not still join with the Ubiquists or Brentiani, who, quite contrary to the Zuinglians, maintain, that the humanity of Jesus Christ is in every place where his divinity is. This is contrary to faith. B.

VER. 21. As the Father hath sent me. The word mission, when applied to our Saviour Christ, sometimes signifies his eternal procession from the Father, and sometimes his mission, as he was sent into the world to become man, and the Redeemer of mankind: the first mission agrees with him, as the eternal Son of God; the second, as man, or as both God and man. The mission which Christ here gives his apostles, is like this latter mission, with this great difference, that graces and divine gifts were bestowed on Christ, even as man, without measure: and the apostles had a much lesser share in both these missions. See S. Aug. l. iv. de Trin. c. xix. xx. tom. 4. p. 329. and seq. Wi.—Jesus Christ here shews his commission, and so giveth power to his apostles to forgive sins, as when he gave them commission to preach and baptize throughout the world, he made mention of his own power. Hence, whosoever denies the apostles, and their successors, the right of preaching, baptizing, and remitting sins, must consequently deny that Christ, as man, had the power to do the same. S. Cyprian, in the 3d cent. ep. lxxiii. says: "for the Lord, in the first place, gave to S. Peter, on whom he built his Church, super quem edificavit Ecclesiam, the power that what he loosed on earth, should be loosed also in heaven. And after his resurrection, he speaks also to his apostles, saying, as the Father sent me, &c. whose sins you shall forgive," &c. Why, on this occasion, passing over the other apostles, does Jesus Christ address Peter alone? Because he was the mouth, and chief of the apostles. S. Chrys. de Sacerd. l. ii. c. 1.

VER. 22. Receive ye the Holy Ghost. It was said, (John vii. 39.) that the Spirit was not yet given, because Jesus was not glorified. The sense must needs be, that the holy Spirit was not given in that solemn manner, nor with so large an effusion of spiritual gifts and graces, till the day of Pentecost, after Christ's ascension; but the just, at all times, from the beginning of the world, were sanctified by the grace of the Holy Ghost, as no doubt the apostles were, before this time. Now at this present, he gave them the power of forgiving sins. Wi.—Some say, that our Saviour did not then confer the Holy Ghost on his disciples, but only prepared them for the receiving of the Holy Ghost. But surely we may understand, that even then they received some portion of spiritual grace, the power, not indeed of raising the dead, and working other miracles, but of forgiving sins. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxv. in Joan.—S. Cyril of Alexandria, speaking of the remission of sins, promised in this text, asks, "How then, or why, did Christ impart to his disciples a power, which belongs to the divinity alone? It seemed good to him, that they, who had within themselves his divine Spirit, should likewise possess the power of forgiving sins, and of retaining such as they judged expedient; that Holy Spirit, according to his good pleasure, forgiving and retaining, through the ministry of men." In Joan. l. xii. c. 1.

VER. 23. Whose sins you shall forgive, &c. These words clearly express the power of forgiving sins, which, as God, he gave to his apostles, and to their successors, bishops and priests, to forgive sins in his name, as his ministers, and instruments, ever though they are sinners themselves. For in this, they act not by their own power, nor in their own name, but in the name of God, who as the principal cause, always remitteth sins. This is generally allowed to be done by God's ministers in the sacrament of baptism, as to the remission of original sin; and the Catholic Church has always held the same of God's ministers, in the sacrament of penance. (See the Protestant Common Prayer Book, in the Visitation of the Sick.)—Whose sins you shall retain, they are retained: by which we see, that to priests is given a power to be exercised, not only by forgiving, but also by retaining; not only by absolving and loosing, but also by binding, by refusing, or deferring absolution, according to the dispositions that are found in sinners.

27 Then he saith to Thomas; Put in thy finger hither, and see my hands, and bring hither thy hand, and put it into my side: and be not incredulous, but faithful.

28 Thomas answered, and said to him; My Lord, and my God.

29 Jesus saith to him; Because thou hast seen me, Thomas, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and have believed.

30 "Many other signs also did Jesus in the sight of his disciples, which are not written in this book.

31 But these are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God: and that believing you may have life in his name.

CHAP. XXI.

Christ manifests himself to his disciples by the sea side, and gives Peter the charge of his sheep.

AFTER this Jesus manifested himself again to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias. And he manifested himself after this manner:

* Infra xxi. 25.

when they accuse themselves of their sins. From hence must needs follow an obligation on the sinner's part, to declare, and confess their sins in particular, to the ministers of God, who are appointed the spiritual judges, and physicians of their souls. A judge must know the cause, and a physician the distemper: the one to pronounce a just sentence, the other to prescribe suitable remedies. Wi.—See here the commission, stamped by the broad seal of heaven, by virtue of which, the pastors of Christ's Church absolve repenting sinners upon their confession. Ch.

VER. 24. Thomas . . . was not with them. Yet no doubt the like power of forgiving sins was given to him, either at this time or afterwards. See S. Cyril. Wi.

VER. 25. I will not believe. S. Cyril thinks, that the grief and trouble S. Thomas was under, might partly excuse his want of belief; however, we may take notice with S. Gregory, that his backwardness in believing, was permitted for the good of Christians in general, that thereby they might be more convinced of Christ's resurrection. Wi.—The doubts of S. Thomas are of greater advantage to the strengthening of our faith, than the ready belief of the rest of the apostles. For when he proceeded to touch, to assure his faith, our minds, laying aside every, even the least doubt, are firmly established in faith. S. Greg. Great.

VER. 27. Put in thy finger hither. Christ, to shew he knew all things, made use of the very same words in which S. Thomas had expressed his incredulous dispositions. Our blessed Redeemer would have the mark of the spear, and the print of the nails to remain in his glorified body, to convince them it was the same body: and that they might be for ever marks of his victory and triumph over sin and the devil. The evangelist does not say, that S. Thomas went and touched Christ's body, though it is very probable he did as he was ordered. But how could a body that entered in, when the doors were shut, be felt, or be palpable? S. Chrys.† answers, that Christ at that time permitted his body to be palpable, and to resist another body, to induce S. Thomas to believe the resurrection; and that when he pleased, his body could not be felt. In like manner, his body was either visible or invisible, as he had a will it should be. In fine, he could eat in their sight, though he stood not in need of any nourishment. See S. Aug.

Be not incredulous, but faithful. In the Greek, be not an unbeliever, but a believer.—My Lord, and my God; that is, I confess thee to be my Lord, and my God; and with the Greek article, to be him, that is, the Lord, and the God. Wi.

* V. 19. 29. Cum fores essent clausæ: januis clausis, τῶν θυρῶν κεκλεισμένων. See S. Amb. in Psal. cxviii. S. Aug. tract. 121. in Joan. De Agone Christiano. c. 24. 4. 6. p. 257. Epist. ad Volusianum. t. 3. p. 405. where he says, demus Deum aliquid posse, quod nos fateamur investigare non posse. In talibus rebus tota ratio facti est potentia facientis. See S. Cyr. on this place, l. xii. p. 1092. 1103. and 1107. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxv. p. 315. Lat. Ed. hom. lxxxvii. Ed. Ven. p. 520. τὸ γὰρ οὐδὲν λατῶν καὶ κοῦφον ὡς κεκλεισμένων εἰσελθεῖν τῶν θυρῶν. &c. See S. Jerom ad Eustochium in Epitaph. Paulæ. t. 4. p. 685. and l. i. cont. Jovin. t. 4. p. 178. S. Leo. serm. i. de Resurr. S. Epiphani. her. lxiv. p. 593. Ed. Petav. &c.

† V. 23. Whose sins you shall forgive, &c. See S. Cyr. l. xii. in Joan. p. 1101. μετανοοῦσι συγγινώσκοντες. S. Chrys. hom. lxxxvi. p. 517. nov. Ed. Magna est sacerdotum dignitas, quorum remiseritis peccata, &c. See also l. iii. de sacerdot. t. 1. p. 383. nov. Ed. Ibid. noli esse incredulus, sed fidelis, καὶ μὴ γίνου ἀπίστος, ἀλλὰ πιστός.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 3. How comes it that Peter, after his conversion, should return to his fishing, when Jesus Christ had said, that he that sets his hand to the plough, and looks back, is not worthy of the kingdom of heaven? The employments they applied to before their conversion, without being guilty of sin, these they might, without fault, exercise, after their conversion: therefore Peter returned to his fishing; but S. Matthew never returned to his custom-house, because when once converted, we never can be allowed to give ourselves to these employments, which of themselves lead to sin. And there are many pursuits,

2 There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas, who is called Didymus, and Nathanael, who was of Cana, in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two others of his disciples.

3 Simon Peter saith to them; I go a fishing. They say to him; We also come with thee. And they went forth and entered into a ship: and that night they caught nothing.

4 But when the morning was come, Jesus stood on the shore: yet the disciples knew not that it was Jesus.

5 Jesus therefore said to them; Children, have you any meat? they answered him; No.

6 He saith to them; Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and you shall find. They cast, therefore: and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes.

7 That disciple, therefore, whom Jesus loved, said to Peter; It is the Lord. Simon Peter, when he heard that it was the Lord, girded his coat about him, (for he was naked) and cast himself into the sea.

8 But the other disciples came in the ship, (for they were not far from the land, but as it were two hundred cubits) drawing the net with fishes.

9 As soon, then, as they came to land, they saw hot coals lying, and a fish laid thereon, and bread.

10 Jesus saith to them; Bring hither of the fishes which you have now caught.

11 Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land, full of great fishes, one hundred and fifty-three. And although there were so many, the net was not broken.

12 Jesus saith to them; Come, and dine. And none of them who were at meat, durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord.

13 And Jesus cometh and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish in like manner.

14 This is now the third time that Jesus was manifested to his disciples, after he was risen from the dead.

15 When, therefore, they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter; Simon, son of John, lovest thou me more than these? He saith to him; Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith to him; Feed my lambs.

16 He saith to him again; Simon, son of John, lovest thou me? He saith to him; Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith to him; Feed my lambs.

17 He saith to him the third time; Simon, son of John, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved, because he said to him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said to him; Lord, thou knowest all things: thou knowest that I love thee. He said to him; Feed my sheep.

18 Amen, amen, I say to thee: *when thou wast younger thou didst gird thyself, and didst walk where thou wouldst: But when thou shalt be old, thou shalt stretch forth thy hands, and another shall gird thee, and lead thee whither thou wouldst not.

* 2 Pet. i. 14.

which can scarcely, or not at all, be followed without sin. S. Greg. hom. xxiv. in Evan.

VER. 5. Have you any meat? Have you any thing to eat? This is what is literally signified, both in the Latin and in the Greek text. Wi.

VER. 7. It is the Lord. S. Chrysostom says, we may here see the different characters of the two apostles, Peter and John; the former is more ardent, the latter more sublime; the first more vehement, the last more penetrating; for these reasons, John was the first to know Christ, Peter the first to hasten to him. Num. lxxxvi.

VER. 8. The evangelist praises Peter, and excuses the other apostles: all come to Christ; the former leaving his boat, his companions, his nets and prey, arrives more expeditiously; the latter with the impediments of the boat and nets, &c. &c. arrive also, but not so readily; a just figure this of religious, who leave all to go directly to God, and of those who remain in the world, and have to navigate a treacherous element with imminent danger of shipwreck. Maldonatus.—The poet Sedulius writes thus on the nets:

Pendula fluctivagum traxerunt retia prædam,
Per typicam noscenda viam; nam retia dignis
Lucida sunt præcepta Dei, quibus omnis in illa
Dextra parte manens concluditur, ac simul ulnis
Fertur apostolicis Domini ad vestigia Christi.

VER. 9. Hot coals lying, and a fish laid thereon, and bread. The fish caught in the net were not yet drawn to land. These things, then, were created out of nothing, or miraculously transported thither, by the divine power. Wi.

VER. 11. Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land, full of great fishes, one hundred and fifty-three; a figure of the great number to be converted by the labours of the apostles. Wi.

VER. 12. And none of them who were at meat, durst ask him, who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord. It is likely he appeared to them with a countenance different, and brighter than before his death; yet they were presently so convinced it was Jesus, that they were ashamed to ask or doubt of it. Wi.

VER. 14. This is now the third time that Jesus was manifested to his disciples. He had appeared to them more than thrice, even the very day of his resurrection. Matt. xxviii. 16. Here it is called the third time either because it was the third different day; or because it was the third time that he had then appeared to a considerable number together. After this, he appeared to them frequently, and conversed with them for forty days, till his ascension. See Acts, i. 3. 1 Cor. xv. 5. Wi.—This must be understood of the third day, or of the third time, that our Saviour appeared to his apostles assembled: the first day, being the day of his resurrection; the second, eight days after, when S. Thomas saw, and believed; and on this day of their fishing. S. Aug. tract. 122. in Joan.—The evangelists relate ten different manifestations of our Saviour, after his resurrection. First, he was seen by the women at the sepulchre; 2dly, he was again seen by the same holy women, returning from the sepulchre; 3dly, by S. Peter; 4thly, by the two going to Emmaus; 5thly, by many at Jerusalem, when Thomas was not with them; 6thly, at the time when S. Thomas saw him; 7thly, at the sea of Tiberias; 8thly, by the eleven on a mountain of Galilee, according to S. Matthew; 9thly, according to S. Mark, by the disciples, at their refreshment, because he was going to sup with them no more; and 10thly, on the day of his ascension, raised from the earth into heaven. S. Aug. de Concord. Ev. lib. iii. c. 25.

VER. 15. Simon, son of John, lovest thou me more than these? That is, more than any one of these love me. Christ puts this question thrice to S. Peter, that this triple protestation of love, says S. Aug. might correspond to his triple denial. S. Peter did not answer that he loved him more than the rest did, which he could not know, but modestly said: yea, Lord, thou knowest I love thee: and the third time, thou knowest all things, and the hearts of all men, thou knowest how much I love thee. At every protestation, Jesus answered, feed my lambs; and the third time, feed my sheep. To feed, in the style of the Scriptures, is to guide, rule, and govern. S. Ambrose and some others take notice, as if by the lambs, might be understood the people, and by the sheep, those placed over them, as bishops, priests, &c. but others make no such difference in this place, betwixt lambs and sheep, only as comprehending all the members of Christ's Church, of what condition soever, even the rest of the apostles. For here it was that Christ gave to S. Peter that power which he had promised him, (Matt. xvi. 18.) that is, He now made S. Peter head of his whole Church, as he had insinuated at the first meeting, when S. Andrew brought him to our Saviour, when he changed his name from Simon to Peter: again, when he chose him, and made him the first of his twelve apostles; but particularly, when he said, thou art Peter, (a rock) and upon this rock will I build my Church, &c. Upon this account the Catholic Church, from the very first ages, hath always revered, and acknowledged the supreme power of the successors of S. Peter, in spirituals, over all Christian Churches. This appears also by the writings of Tertullian, of S. Irenæus, of S. Cyprian, of the greatest doctors and bishops, both of the west and east, of S. Jerom, S. Augustin, of S. Chrysostom, in several places, of the first general Councils, particularly of the great Council of Chalcedon, &c. Wi.—Simon (son) of John. The father's name is here added, to discriminate him from Simon Thaddeus, that every one might know that the chief care of the universal Church was not given to any other apostle but Peter. This Simon of John is the same as Simon Barjona. See Matt. xvi. 17. Menochius.—S. Peter had three times renounced his master; and Jesus, to give him an opportunity of repairing his fault by a triple confession, three several times demanded of him, if he loved him more than these? That, as S. Augustin remarks, he who had thrice denied through fear might thrice confess through love. Calmet.

VER. 16-17. The lambs and the sheep of our Saviour here mean the faithful, who compose his Church, without any distinction of Jew or Gentile. S. Peter, by these words, is appointed to take charge of the whole flock, as being the chief and prince of the apostles. He is, in some manner, the pastor, not of the sheep only, but of the pastors themselves. They have each their own flock to look after; but to him is committed the care of all; he alone is the pastor of all. Calmet.—Feed my sheep. Our Lord had promised the spiritual supremacy to S. Peter; (S. Matt. xvi. 19.) and here he fulfils that promise, by charging him with the superintendency of all his sheep, without exception; and consequently of his whole flock, that is, of his whole Church. Ch.

VER. 18. Thou shalt stretch forth thy hands... signifying by what death he should glorify God; that is, that a cross should be the instrument of his death and martyrdom.—Whither thou wouldst not: which is no more than to say, that a violent death is against the natural inclination of any man, even though he be ever so willing, and disposed to undergo it. Wi.—By this is meant the martyrdom of S. Peter, which took place thirty-four years after this. He was first cast into prison, and then led out to punishment as Christ had foretold him. He 19 And this he said, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had said this, he saith to him; Follow me.

20 Peter turning about, saw that disciple whom Jesus loved, following, *who also leaned on his breast at the supper, and said; Lord, who is he that shall betray thee?

21 Him, therefore, when Peter had seen, he saith to Jesus; Lord, and what shall this man do?

22 Jesus saith to him; So I will have him to remain till I come, what is it to thee? follow thou me.

* Supra xiii. 23.

stretched out his arms to be chained, and again he stretched them out, when he was crucified; for he died on the cross, as the ancients assure us. Calmet.

VER. 21. Lord, what shall this man do? S. Chrysostom thinks, it was the love and friendship, that S. Peter had for S. John, that moved him to ask this question. Wi.

VER. 22. Jesus saith: so I will have him remain,† &c. That is, in case I will have him remain; or, as it is in the Greek, if I will have him remain, what is that to thee? It is thy duty, and thy concern, to follow me. Wi.—When Christ told S. Peter to follow him, he meant, that he should go like himself to the death of the cross; but when he says of S. John, So I will have him to remain till I come, he insinuates that his beloved disciple should not undergo a violent death; but remain in the world, till he should visit him by death, and conduct him to glory. It may likewise be understood of the Revelations, in which our Saviour manifested himself in his glory to this his beloved disciple. In the Greek it is, if I will have him to remain; and this is the true reading, according to Estius, and Jansenius, bp. of Ghent, authorized by many Latin copies. Others refer these words of Christ to his coming to destroy Jerusalem: an epoch which S. John survived.

VER. 23. This saying, therefore; § that is, a report went about among the disciples, that John was not to die. But S. John himself, as S. Aug. and S. Chrysa. observe, took care to tell us, that Christ said not so. Nor do we find any sufficient grounds to think that S. John is not dead. Wi.

VER. 24. This is that disciple, &c. Some conjecture, that these words were added by the Church of Ephesus. But the ancient Fathers, S. Chrysa. S. Cyril, S. Aug. expound them as they do the rest, without any such remark. Nor is it unusual for a person to write in this manner of himself, as of a third person. It is what S. John hath done of himself, c. xix. v. 85. Wi.—Some conjecture, that these words were added by the Church of Ephesus, to point out S. John to be the real author of this history, and to record their own assent to this his testimony. But the ancient Fathers give no such comment. Nor is it unusual for a person to write of himself, as of a third person. It is what S. John hath done before.

VER. 25. The world itself, I think, &c. It is an hyperbolical way of speaking, says S. Cyril, common enough, even in the holy Scriptures; and only signi-

23 This saying, therefore, went abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die. And Jesus did not say to him, He should not die: but, So I will have him to remain till I come, what is it to thee?

24 This is that disciple who giveth testimony of these things, and hath written these things: and we know that his testimony is true.

25 *But there are also many other things which Jesus did, which if they were written every one, the world itself, I think, would not be able to contain the books that should be written.

* Supra xx. 30.

fies, that a very great number of things, which Christ did and said, have not been recorded. Wi.—This is a figure of speech, called hyperbole, and only means, that it would require many, many books, to contain all the various actions and sayings of our divine Lord.

* V. 5. Numquid pulmentarium habetis? μή τι προσφάγιον.

† V. 15. He made S. Peter head of his whole Church. See Tertul. l. de pudicitia, p. 556. Ed. Rig. where he calls the successor of S. Peter, Pontificem maximum, & Episcopum Episcoporum. S. Iren. l. iii. c. 3. S. Cyp. ep. 55. p. 84. Ed. Kig. Navigare audent & ad Petri Cathedram, atque ad Ecclesiam principalem. See S. Jerom. epist. lvii. and lviii. p. 175. nov. Ed. S. Aug.—S. Chrysa. on this place, hom. lxxxviii. p. 525. nov. Ed. Cur. aliis prætermisiss (Petrum) alloquitur? he answers, ἑκκλῆσιος ἡν τῶν Ἀποστόλων, καὶ σὺν τῶν μαθητῶν, καὶ κορυφὴ τοῦ χυροῦ, coetus illius caput. . . fratrum præfecturam auscipe; ἡγχιπύεται τὴν προστασίαν τῶν ἀδελφῶν. And a little after, p. 527. putting the objection, why S. James, and not S. Peter, was made bishop of Jerusalem, he answers; because S. Peter was to be over the whole universe; τῆς οἰκουμένης ἡγεμονίας, &c. The same S. Chrysa. l. ii. de Sacerd. c. 1. tom. 1. p. 372. nov. Ed. Ben. qua de causa ille sanguinem effudit suum? certe ut oves eas acquireret, quarum curam tum Petro, tum Petri Successoribus committeret.—Cone. Chalced. Lab. tom. 4. p. 565. The Council thus writes to S. Leo; omnibus constitutus interpres, quibus tu quidem tanquam caput membris præerans, &c. πᾶσι ἱμῶν καθορισμένος, &c. And p. 368. Petrus per Leonem ita locutus est; Περὶς διὰ Διονύσιον πάντα ἐξερῶντος. See the Annot. Matt. xvi. v. 18.

‡ V. 22. Sic eum volo manere, ἵνα ὑμῶν ὅλην μένῃ.

§ V. 23. S. Aug. tract. 124. p. 819. D. Hanc opinionem Joannes ipse abstulit, non hoc dixisse Dominum, aperta contradictione declarans: cur enim subjungeret, non dixit Jesus, non moritur, nisi ne hominum cordibus quod falsum fuerat inhereret? &c.—So S. Chrysa. says, he spoke this to prevent or correct this mistake. p. 528. διορθῶν.

|| V. 25. Nec ipsum arbitror mundum, &c. S. Cyril on this expression, p. 1123. υπερβολικῶς. See S. Aug. at the end of his 124. tract. where he says, such hyperboles are found elsewhere in the holy Scripture.

THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.

S. LUKE, who had published his gospel, wrote also a second volume, which, from the first ages, hath been called the Acts of the Apostles. Not that we can look upon this work, as a history of what was done by all the apostles, who were dispersed in different nations; but we have here a short view of the first establishment of the Christian Church, a small part of S. Peter's preaching and actions, set down in the first twelve chapters, and a more particular account of S. Paul's apostolical labours, in the following chapters, for about thirty years, till the year 63, and the 4th year of Nero, where these acts end. Wi.—S. Luke, after giving us the history of the life, actions, miracles, sufferings, and instructions of Jesus Christ, in his gospel, here gives us the life and actions of the apostles, the primitive Christians, and particularly all that relates to S. Paul, by way of an appendix. And what could be give more useful or more important to the Church, whether we consider the noble examples he offers for our imitation, or the excellent lessons for our improvement in spiritual wisdom? He describes in this book the accomplishment of many things that had been predicted by Jesus Christ, the descent of the Holy Ghost, the prodigious change effected in the minds and hearts of the apostles: we behold here the model of Christian perfection, in the lives of the first Christians, and the practice of the most eminent virtues, in the conduct of the blessed apostles; the miraculous operations of the holy Spirit, in the conversion of the Gentiles, and this wonder of wonders, the foundation of the holy Catholic Church, the establishment of the spiritual kingdom of God, promised through all the inspired oracles, and the daily addition which the Lord made to his Church, of such as should be saved. c. ii. v. ult. and c. xv. v. 5.—S. Luke has entitled this work, the Acts of the Apostles, that we may seek therein, says S. Chrysostom, (tom. 5. hom. xii.) not so much the miracles that the apostles performed, as their good deeds, and eminent virtues. In appearing to give us a simple history, says S. Jerom, this holy physician furnishes us with as many remedies, to cure the maladies of our souls, as he gives us words for our instruction. Ep. 103.—It is thought, that his principal design was to oppose to the false acts of the apostles, that were then in circulation, a true and authentic history of the actions of S. Peter and S. Paul. The Catholic Church has ever held this work in such great esteem, that it has not only superseded every pretended history of the kind, that preceded it, but also every ascetic one that has succeeded it. S. Aug. de consen. Evang. l. iv. c. 8.—It is very probable, that S. Luke wrote his acts at Rome, whilst he was near S. Paul, during the time of his confinement, for he remained with him till his deliverance. There can be no doubt that the work was written in Greek, and in a more pure and polished style, than we find in any other writing of the New Testament. S. Luke generally cites the Septuagint, apparently because he was ignorant of the Hebrew; and because, S. Paul more frequently having to preach to the Gentiles, preferred citing the sacred text in the language known in common, sooner than in Hebrew, which was understood by few. See S. Jer. in Isai. vi. and again, tradit. Hebr. in Genes. 45.—The Catholic Church has ever admitted this book into the canon of Scriptures; though many heretics, says S. Augustine, have rejected it, ep. 253. and l. de util. cred. 7. S. Chrysostom, (hom. i. in Acta) complains, that this book, in his time, was not sufficiently attended to, which he esteems as no less useful than the gospel itself. Erasmus, in his preface to the Acts, says, that he had, in the first instance, some notion of adding this book to S. Luke's gospel, as they are both addressed to the same person, and the Acts are no inconsiderable part of the sacred history; for, as the gospel shews the seed committed to the earth, and sown in the field, the Acts represent it as taking root, shooting up, and producing its fruit.—The Acts have not uniformly held the same place in the Testament which they hold at present. Sometimes this book was inserted immediately before the book of Revelation, as S. Augustine and others insinuate. At other times, we find it between the epistles of S. Paul and the canonical epistles. Some persons express their surprise, that S. Luke, who was the inseparable companion of S. Paul, has not given the account of S. Paul's martyrdom. S. Chrysostom (hom. i. in Acta) gives an excellent solution: "the apostles, and other apostolic men, wrote little, but did a great deal." The martyrdom of S. Paul, that took place in the public theatre of Rome itself, and before the eyes of all the Christians of this capital of the world, could not remain unknown, but the voyages and other circumstances of his life, too useful to the Church to be suffered to pass into oblivion, called for the exertions of S. Luke's eloquent pen, which, though admirably accommodated to an historic design, is not wholly free from Hebraisms, and Syriacisms. The Acts of the Apostles include the history of the infant Church, from the day of our Lord's ascension into heaven, till the deliverance of S. Paul, two years after his arrival at Rome, i. e. a space of thirty years, from the year 33, to the year 63 of Jesus Christ, or from the 19th year of Tiberius, till the 9th year of Nero. This golden book paints, as it were, the face of the primeval Christian Church; it places before our eyes the singular providence of God, in founding and protecting his Church, and how the apostles, (in spite of every opposition of the armed power of the whole world, to oppress the gospel,) without any foreign assistance of learning, credit, power, or expectation of any temporal advantages, but relying solely on the power of truth, and the virtue of the holy Spirit, laboured in the propagation of the faith, without intermission, till the power of God, under the ignominy of the cross, became eventually triumphant. See Wm. Whitfield Dakins, LL.D. in his prolegomena.—It may be divided into four parts. In the first eight chapters, S. Luke gives the origin and progress of the Christian Church among the Jews. From the 9th to the 16th, he shews how widely it was spread among the Gentiles: from the 16th to the 20th, the diverse peregrinations of S. Paul, till his last journey to Jerusalem: and from the 20th to the end, with what patience he underwent innumerable sufferings, trials, and indignities, with what magnanimity he made head against the violent surges of persecution, and his astonishing equanimity under every possible calamity.—This account, which is not continued beyond his two years' imprisonment in Rome, contains a general sketch of the history of the Church during the epoch it describes of thirty years. The leading facts therein contained are, the choice of Matthias to be an apostle, in the room of Judas; the descent of the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost; the preaching, miracles, and sufferings of the apostles at Jerusalem; the conversion of S. Paul; the call of Cornelius, the first Gentile convert; the persecution of the Christians, by Herod Agrippa; the preaching of Paul and Barnabas to the Gentiles, by the express command of the Holy Ghost; the decree made at Jerusalem, declaring that circumcision, and a conformity to other Jewish rites and ceremonies were not necessary in Gentile converts; the miraculous cures performed by the handkerchiefs and aprons which had only touched the body of S. Paul; whilst the latter part of the book is exclusively confined to the history of S. Paul, of whom, as we have already seen, S. Luke was the constant companion for several years.—The place of its publication is doubtful. A learned prelate advances, that the probability appears to be in favour of Greece, though some contend for Alexandria, in Egypt. This latter opinion rests upon the subscriptions at the end of some Greek manuscripts, and of the copies of the Syriac version; but the best critics think, that these subscriptions, which are also affixed to other books of the New Testament, deserve but little weight; and in this case they are not supported by any ancient authority. But the sentiment of this learned prelate, does not bias the opinion we gave at the beginning, and which we find confirmed by Alban Butler, in his life of S. Luke, vol. x. p. 432. where he says, "that S. Luke attended S. Paul to Rome, whither he was sent prisoner from Jerusalem in 61. The apostle remained there two years in chains; but was permitted to live in a house which he hired, though under the custody of a constant guard; and there he preached to those who daily resorted to hear him. From ancient writings and monuments belonging to the Church of S. Mary in via lata, which is an ancient title of a Cardinal Deacon, Baronius, in his Annals ad an. 55, and Arringbi, in his Roma Subterranea, l. iii. c. 41. tell us, that this Church was built upon the spot where S. Paul then lodged, and where S. Luke wrote the Acts of the Apostles."

CHAP. I.

The ascension of Christ. Matthias is chosen in place of Judas.

THE former treatise I made, O Theophilus, of all things, which Jesus began to do and to teach,

2 Until the day *on which, giving commandments by the Holy Ghost to the apostles whom he had chosen, he was taken up:

3 To whom also he shewed himself alive after his passion, by many proofs, for forty days appearing to them, and speaking of the kingdom of God.

4 And eating with them, ^bhe commanded them, that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but should wait for the promise of the Father, *which you have heard (saith he) by my mouth.

5 For John indeed baptized with water, but you

* A. D. 33.—^b Luke xxiv. 19. John xiv. 26.—^c Matt. iii. 11. Mark i. 8.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. S. Luke, who was the author of this history, alludes, in this verse, to his gospel, which he calls his first discourse. In that he informs us, not only of the actions, but also of the doctrines of our Saviour. These words, to do and to teach, are the abridgment of the whole gospel: here he gives us the Acts of the Apostles, that is, an history of their travels and preaching. In the beginning of this work he speaks of all the apostles, and what they did before their dispersion. As soon as he comes to the mention of S. Paul, he takes notice of no one else, but is entirely taken up with the narrative of his actions. He addresses his book to Theophilus, which signifies a friend of God, or one who loves God, as if he intended to dedicate it to all the faithful, who believed in, and loved God. But it is most probable that this was some distinct person, well known to S. Luke, and illustrious for his birth, because he gave him the title of ἀγαπῆστε, most excellent. Calmet.

VER. 2. Until the day on which, giving commandments by the Holy Ghost to the apostles whom he had chosen, he was taken up. As the Scripture was written without distinction of verses, and without any stops, or commas, (which were added afterwards) the construction, and joining of the words in this verse, is ambiguous. The question is, with what part of the verse these words, by the Holy Ghost, are to be joined. The sense might be, 1. that he was taken up by the Holy Ghost: but this is generally rejected. 2. That he gave his commandments by the Holy Ghost to his apostles; that is, says S. Chrys. that he gave them spiritual commands, that came from the Holy Ghost, or from his holy Spirit. 3. The most probable exposition seems to be, that he gave his special commandments to his apostles, or to those whom he chose to be his apostles, by the Holy Ghost, or by his holy and divine spirit. Wi.—The power to preach, to baptize, to remit sins, and generally the whole commission and charge of the government of his Church after him in his name, and with his authority; which government was given them, together with the Holy Ghost, to assist them therein for ever. B.

VER. 3. Apparing, &c. Why did he not appear to all, but only to his disciples? Because to many of them, who did not know the mystery, he would have shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

6 They, therefore, who were come together, asked him, saying; Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel:

7 But he said to them; It is not for you to know the times or moments, which the Father hath put in his own power:

8 ^aBut you shall receive the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you, *and you shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and even to the uttermost part of the earth.

9 And when he had said these things, while they looked on, he was raised up: and a cloud received him out of their sight.

Luke iii. 16. John i. 26.—^d Infra ii. 2.—^e Luke xxiv. 46.

seemed a phantom. For if the disciples themselves were diffident, and terrified, and required to touch him with their hands, how would others have been affected? But we know from their miracles, the truth of the resurrection, which is made evident to all succeeding generations. Perhaps the apostles did not perform miracles. How then was the world converted? This is a fact which cannot be denied, and that it should have been brought about by twelve poor illiterate fishermen, without miracles, would be the greatest of all miracles, far beyond the reach of all human means. S. Chrys. hom. i. c. 1. on Acts.—"And speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God," as we read in the Greek, and in the Protestant version, that is, pertaining to the Church, which is the kingdom of God, τὰ κατὰ τῆς βασιλείας τοῦ θεοῦ, which plainly makes for unwritten traditions. Estius.

VER. 4. And eating with them. * This is a literal translation from the vulgar Latin. But the Prot. translation from some Greek copies, would have it, And being assembled together, he commanded them, &c. Mr. Bois defends the Latin Vulg. and even by the authority of S. Chrys. who doubtless understood the Greek text, as well as any one, and who takes the Greek word here to signify eating: for he observes that the apostles elsewhere prove Christ's resurrection by his eating and drinking with them. Acts x. 4. S. Jer. also says, the derivation of the Greek word, is from eating salt together. Wi.

VER. 5. Baptized with the Holy Ghost, that is, cleansed, and sanctified by the plentiful graces he shall pour upon you. Wi.

VER. 6-7. Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel? Some of them, as S. Chrys. observes, had still their thoughts upon a temporal kingdom of the Messias. Christ, to divert them from such imaginations, tells them, their business is to be witnesses of his doctrine and miracles, particularly of his resurrection, even unto the utmost bounds of the earth, to all nations of the world. Wi.

VER. 9. He was raised up. Raised himself up, and ascended, &c. Wi.

VER. 10. Behold two men, that is, two angels, stood by them in white apparel. Wi.

10 And whilst they were beholding him going up to heaven, behold two men stood by them in white garments;

11 Who also said; Ye men of Galilee, why stand you looking up to heaven? This Jesus, who is taken up from you into heaven, so shall he come as you have seen him going into heaven.

12 Then they returned to Jerusalem, from the mount that is called Olivet, which is near Jerusalem, within a sabbath-day's journey.

13 And when they had entered in, they went up into an upper room, where abode Peter and John, James and Andrew, Philip and Thomas, Bartholomew and Matthew, James, of Alphaeus, and Simon Zelotes, and Jude, of James.

14 All these were persevering with one mind in prayer with the women, and Mary, the mother of Jesus, and his brethren.

15 In those days Peter, rising up in the midst of the brethren, said: (now the number of persons together, was about a hundred and twenty.)

16 Men, brethren, the Scripture must be fulfilled, "which the Holy Ghost foretold by the mouth of David, concerning Judas, who was the leader of them that apprehended Jesus:

17 Who was numbered with us, and had obtained part of this ministry.

18 ^b And he indeed hath possessed a field of the reward of iniquity, and being hanged, burst asunder in the midst: and all his bowels gushed out.

* Ps. xl. 10. John xlii. 18.—^b Matt. xxvii. 7.

VER. 11. So shall he come, as you have seen him going. This word going, says S. Chrys. sufficiently intimates, that he ascended by his own power: for so will he come by his own power to judge the world. Wi.—Jesus Christ shall come on the last day, in the same body, in the same majesty, to judge the living and the dead. This he had likewise promised, in more than one place of the gospel, speaking of the vengeance, which he will exercise on the city of Jerusalem. S. Jerom. S. Hilary, and many other ancients, have believed that the Son of God will appear again on Mount Olivet, and that all people shall be assembled to judgment. S. Jerom. super Joel iii. 2. S. Hilary, super Matt. xxiv. 32.—And that same body, which thus ascended to heaven, and which will thus descend, is given us in the blessed Sacrament. "O miracle! exclaims S. Chrysostom, He that sitteth with his Father above, is at the same time handled by men below. Jesus Christ ascending to heaven, both hath his flesh with him above, and hath left it with us below. Elias being taken up, left his disciple, Eliseus, his mantle and double spirit, but the Son of Man ascending, left his own flesh to us." L. iii. de Sacerd. hom. 2. ad pop. Ant. hom. de divit. et paup.—Sulpicius Severus, and S. Paulinus, assure us, that the marks of the feet of our Saviour were imprinted in the place off which he rose to heaven; and S. Aug. informs us, that many in his time went to Judea, to venerate these sacred marks. Ven. Bede testifies the same in the eighth age. In the time of Constantine the great, the empress Helen built a church on the place. Calmet.

VER. 12. Sabbath-day's journey. It cannot now be precisely determined what this distance was, but it is most probable, that it was about a mile. On particular occasions, it perhaps was allowed to exceed a little. Calmet.

VER. 13-14. Into an upper room, to be more retired in prayer. There they were persevering with one mind in prayer. These few words denote to us three dispositions to receive the Holy Ghost. 1. Prayer. 2. Perseverance in it. 3. To be of one mind, perfectly united in charity, and the love of one another. Wi.—This is the last mention that is made in Scripture of the blessed Virgin Mary. She lived the rest of her time with the Christians (as here she is particularly named and noted amongst them) and especially with S. John, the apostle, to whom our Lord recommended her. S. John xix. 26. 27. She undoubtedly communicated to the evangelists many circumstances relative to the actions, words, and mysteries of her divine Son.

VER. 15. Peter, rising up, &c. Peter, says S. Chrys.† on this place, who was prince, or chief of the apostolical college, who had authority over them all, who by his place and dignity, might, without them, have chosen, and appointed a new apostle to succeed Judas, (Christ having said to him, confirm thy brethren,) &c. yet he consults them. Wi.—Here Peter acts and ordains in virtue of his supremacy, and the other apostles agree to his appointment.

VER. 18. Possessed a field. Judas is here said to have done, what was done by others, with the thirty pieces of money, the reward of his iniquity. And being hanged, that is, as S. Matt. says, (a. xxvii. 6.) having hanged himself, he burst asunder. The Greek has it, falling headlong,† as perhaps he did, by the judgment of God, from the place or tree where he hanged himself. Wi.—Judas did 19 And it became known to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: so that the field is called in their tongue, Haceldama; that is, The field of blood.

20 For it is written in the book of Psalms: "Let their habitation become desolate, and let there be none to dwell therein: "and let another take his bishoprick.

21 Wherefore of these men who have companied with us, all the time that the Lord Jesus came in and went out among us, 22 Beginning from the baptism of John, until the day wherein he was taken up from us, one of these must be made a witness with us of his resurrection.

23 And they appointed two, Joseph, called Barsabas, who was surnamed Justus, and Matthias.

24 And praying, they said; Thòu, O Lord, who knowest the hearts of all men, shew which of these two thou hast chosen,

25 To take the place of this ministry, and apostleship, from which Judas hath by transgression fallen, that he might go to his own place.

26 And they gave them lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven apostles.

CHAP. II.

The disciples receive the Holy Ghost. Peter's sermon to the people. The piety of the first converts.

AND when the days of the Pentecost were accomplished, they were all together in one place:

2 And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a mighty wind coming, and it filled the whole house where they were sitting.

* Ps. lxxviii. 26.—† 1's. cviii. 8.

not possess the potter's field, but he furnished the price to buy it, giving back the thirty pieces of silver. Menochius.—We often say in common, that we have done what happens in consequence of any action of ours, though it was not in our first intention. Calmet.

VER. 20. His bishoprick. The words were prophetically spoken in the Psalms, of the traitor Judas. Wi.—Let their habitation. In some MS. copies, in both Greek and Syriac, we read him. In the Psalms, the text was written against the Jews, the persecutors of Christ in general; but in this place, Peter applies it to Judas in particular. Estius in dif. loca.

VER. 21. Came in, and went out among us. That is, conversed with us. Wi.

VER. 25. To his own place of perdition, which he brought himself to. Wi.

VER. 26. And he gave them lots, which they might lawfully do, when they knew that both of them were fit, and every way qualified for the office. Wi.—Lots. This method of deciding the election of ministers by lots, is one of those extraordinary methods which was inspired by God; but can seldom or ever be imitated. Where both candidates appeared equally worthy, as in the present case, and human judgment cannot determine which is to be preferred, it cannot be said that it was wrong to decide it by lots. Thus were avoided any of the evil consequences which might have happened by one party being preferred before the other. S. Augustin observes, that in a doubtful case, where neither part is bad, to decide by lots is not in itself wrong. Sors enim non aliquid mali est, sed res est in dubitatione humana divinam indicans voluntatem. In Psalmi xxx. A.

* V. 4. συναλιζόμενος, A salis & mensæ communione. Some copies συναλειζόμενος.

† V. 15. S. Chrys. δι-γ-τοῦ χοροῦ πρώτος, &c.

‡ V. 18. Suspensus crepuit medius, πρηνὴς γενόμενος.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Altogether in one place.* The Greek signifies, were all of one mind. Wi.

VER. 2. A sound, &c. Perhaps this was a kind of thunder, accompanied with a great wind, which filled with terror and awe the whole company, and disposed them to receive the gift of heaven with humility and fervour. This noise appears to have been heard over a great part of the city, and to have gathered together a great crowd, who came to learn the cause. This noise and wind were symbols of the divinity. It was thus also that formerly on Mount Sinai, thunder and lightning, the dark cloud, the smoking mountain, &c. marked the majesty of God. Calmet.—Jesus Christ, our Pasch, to answer perfectly the figure, was offered on the day of the great Jewish passover; so fifty days after, for accomplishing the like figure of the law given on Mount Sinai, He sent down the Holy Ghost on the day of their Pentecost, which meaneth fifty. But our feasts, as S. Augustin remarks, besides the remembrance of benefits past, contain great mysteries also of the life to come. Ep. cxix. c. 16.

3 And there appeared to them cloven tongues, as it were of fire, and it sat upon each of them :

4 *And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they began to speak with divers tongues, according as the Holy Ghost gave them to speak.

5 Now there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men out of every nation under heaven.

6 And when this voice was made, the multitude came together, and was confounded in mind, because that every one heard them speaking in his own tongue.

7 And they were all amazed, and wondered, saying ; Behold are not all these, who speak, Galileans ?

8 And how have we every one heard our own tongue wherein we were born ?

9 Parthians, and Medes, and Elamites, and inhabitants of Mesopotamia, Judea, and Cappadocia, Pontus and Asia,

10 Phrygia, and Pamphylia, Egypt and the parts of Lybia about Cyrene, and strangers of Rome, 11 Jews also, and Proselytes, Cretes, and Arabians : we have heard them speak in our own tongues the wonderful works of God.

12 And they were all astonished, and wondered, saying one to another ; What meaneth this ?

13 But others mocking, said ; These men are full of new wine.

14 But Peter, standing up with the eleven, lifted up his voice, and spoke to them : Ye men of Judea, and all ye that dwell in Jerusalem, be this known to you, and with your ears receive my words.

15 For these are not drunk, as you suppose, seeing it is but the third hour of the day :

16 But this is that which was spoken of by the prophet, Joel ;

17 ^b And it shall come to pass in the last days, (saith the Lord) I will pour out of my Spirit upon all flesh : and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams.

18 And upon my servants indeed, and upon my handmaids, will I pour out in those days of my Spirit, and they shall prophesy :

19 And I will shew wonders in the heaven above, and signs on the earth beneath : blood and fire, and vapour of smoke.

20 The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and manifest day of the Lord cometh.

21 *And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord, shall be saved.

22 Ye men of Israel, hear these words : Jesus, of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you, by miracles and wonders, and signs, which God did by him in the midst of you, as you also know ;

23 This same being delivered up by the determinate counsel and foreknowledge of God, you have crucified and put to death by the hands of wicked men :

24 Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the sorrows of hell, as it was impossible that he should be held by it.

25 For David saith concerning him ; ^d I foresaw the Lord always before my face : because he is at my right hand, that I may not be moved :

26 For this my heart hath been glad, and my tongue hath rejoiced : moreover, my flesh also shall rest in hope :

27 Because thou wilt not leave my soul in hell, nor suffer thy holy one to see corruption.

* Matt. iii. 11. Mark i. 8. Luke iii. 16. John vii. 39. Supra i. 8. Infra xi. 16.

VER. 3. Tongues . . . of fire. The Hebrews use the name tongue, for almost any thing pointed. Thus they say, a tongue of the earth, for a promontory. Josue xv. 6. A fiery tongue for a flame in shape of a tongue. Isa. v. 24. The expression, therefore, in this place, may mean nothing more than sparks, or rather flames, which appeared above all who were in the house.—Sed et Latinis quod extremum et acutur est lingua dicitur, quare scopulos summos & invios linguas dixit Cesar. P.—By the fiery tongues is signified the efficacy of the apostles' preaching, and the gift of tongues bestowed upon them. M.

VER. 4. Began to speak divers tongues. Perhaps the apostles spoke only their own tongue, and the miracle consisted in each one's understanding it as if they spoke it in his language. S. Greg. Nazianzen. orat. xlv.—But S. Augustin and most others, understand the text literally ; though the apostles had not this gift on all occasions, nor on all subjects, and therefore sometimes stood in need of interpreters. Vide S. Aug. in Psalm xvii. Expos. 2. and Serm. 188.—The same Father observes, that the conversion of all nations to the Church, and their being united in one faith, all having one language or confession, is a perpetuation of the same miracle in the Church.

VER. 14. But Peter standing up, &c. A wonderful change which the Holy Ghost, at his coming, in a moment wrought in the apostles, as we see in the person of S. Peter, who before, when questioned by a silly girl, denied his master, now he values not all the Sanhedrim of the Scribes, Pharisees, and magistrates ; he boldly and publicly charges them with the murder of Jesus, their Lord, and their Christ. v. 36. Wi.—As the prince of the apostolic college, and head of the Church, under Jesus Christ, hence Peter speaks in the name of the other apostles also, gives an account of the miracle, and promulgates the evangelical law. M.—Newly replenished with all knowledge and fortitude, and full of the holy Spirit, he here maketh his first sermon. B.

VER. 15. About nine in the morning. On festival days, the Jews did not eat till the morning devotions were finished, about mid-day. V.

VER. 17. In the last days, or the latter days, meaning the time of the Messiah, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh, that is, all persons. See Joel ii. 28. Wi.

VER. 19. I will shew wonders, &c. These prodigies are commonly expounded of those that shall forerun the last day ; or of the prognostics of the destruction of Jerusalem, which was a figure of the destruction of the world. Wi.—Blood, fire, &c. These prodigies were accomplished at our Saviour's death, or before the destruction of Jerusalem. We must not expect in these prophecies, where the descriptions are so grand, pathetic, and hyperbolical, to find that the accomplishment of them is literal, and precisely according to terms. The sun shall suffer an eclipse, the moon turn red, like blood, &c. Calmet.

VER. 22–23. Jesus, . . . a man, who suffered as man, though he was both God and man.—Delivered by the determinate decree, or counsel ; to wit, by that eternal decree, that the Son of God should become man. He mentions this decree, and foreknowledge of God, to signify that Christ suffered not by chance, nor unwillingly, but what God, and he as God, had decreed. Wi.—By the determinate, &c. God delivered up his Son ; and his Son delivered up himself, for the love of us, and for the sake of our salvation ; and so Christ's being delivered up was holy, and was God's own determination. But they who betrayed and crucified him, did wickedly, following therein their own malice, and the instigation of the devil ; not the will and determination of God, who was by no means the author of their wickedness ; though he permitted it ; because he could, and did draw out of it so great a good, viz. the salvation of man. Ch.

VER. 24. Having loosed the sorrows of hell, &c. In the ordinary Greek copies, of death. As to the sense of this place, 1. It is certain Christ suffered the pains and pangs of a violent death. 2. That his soul suffered no pains after death, nor in any place called hell. 3. We believe, as in the Apostles' Creed, that his blessed soul descended into hell, that is, to that place in the inferior parts of the earth, (Ephes. iv. 9.) which we commonly call Limbus Patrum, not to suffer, but to free the souls of the just from thence.—As it was impossible he should be held there, either by death, or hell, his soul being always united to the divine person ; and his rising again being foretold in the Psalms, in the words here cited. Wi.—Having overcome the grievous pains of death, and all the power of hell. Ch.—Not that Jesus suffered any thing after his death ; that was impossible. But these pains were loosed in his regard, because he was preserved from them, as the bird is preserved from the nets of the fowler, which are broken before it is taken in them. S. Aug. ep. ad Olimp. xcv.—Moreover he loosed others of those pains. Idem, l. xii. c. 13. de Gen. ad lit.

VER. 27. Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell. This is also the Prot. translation ; and the manner in which Beza translates it, is both very false and ridiculous, thou shalt not leave my carcass in the grave. For allowing that the Latin and Greek word, which is here translated hell, may signify sometimes, the grave, yet no excuse can be made for putting carcass, where the Greek, as well as Latin, signifies the soul. And for the doctrine of Christ's descending into hell, even the learned Dr. Pearson on the Creed, observes with Catholics, that the article of the creed, wherein we say, he descended into hell, cannot be the same as to say, his body descended into the grave, because in the foregoing words we profess 28 Thou hast made known to me the ways of life: thou shalt make me full of joy with thy countenance.

29 Ye men, brethren, let me freely speak to you of the patriarch, David, "that he died, and was buried: and his sepulchre is with us to this present day.

30 Whereas, therefore, he was a prophet, and knew ^b that God had sworn to him with an oath, that of the fruit of his loins one should sit upon his throne, 31 Foreseeing he spoke of the resurrection of Christ, ^c for neither was he left in hell, neither did his flesh see corruption.

32 This Jesus hath God raised up again, whereof we are all witnesses.

33 Being exalted, therefore, by the right hand of God, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost, he hath poured forth this which you see and hear.

34 For David did not ascend into heaven: but he himself said; ^d The Lord said to my Lord, sit thou on my right hand, 35 Until I make thy enemies thy footstool.

36 Therefore let all the house of Israel know most assuredly, that God hath made this Jesus, whom you have crucified, both Lord and Christ.

37 Now when they had heard these things, they had compunction in their heart, and they said to Peter and to the rest of the apostles; What shall we do, men, brethren?

38 But Peter said to them; Do penance, and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, that he was dead and buried. Wi.—Beza plainly confesseth that he translateth the text thus: Thou shalt not leave my carcass in the grave, against the doctrine of purgatory, and Christ's descending into hell, although he alloweth, that most of the ancient Fathers were in that error. Thus opposing himself to plain Scripture, and to the ancient Fathers, perverting the former, and condemning the latter, to overthrow an article of the apostles' creed. He descended into hell. New Test. in 1556.

^a 8 Kings ii. 10.—^b Ps. cxxxi. 11.

VER. 31. Foreseeing he (David) spoke of the resurrection of Christ. S. Peter shews them that the prophetic words of the Psalm, agree not to David in person, he being dead, and his body having remained in the grave, without rising from the dead. Wi.

VER. 33. He hath poured forth this, which you see, and hear, by the effects, by the noise, as it were of thunder, by our speaking languages, &c. Wi.—It does not appear that the holy Spirit was visible to the multitude, whom S. Peter addressed. But they perceived sensible marks of his presence, in the great noise, which had called them together, and the divers tongues spoken by illiterate men, who had never studied. A.

VER. 37. They had compunction in their heart, with sorrow for their sins, especially against their Messias. Wi.

VER. 38. Be baptized: believing and making profession to believe, and hope for salvation, by the merits of Jesus Christ. Thus you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, the grace of God, and perhaps those other gifts of speaking with tongues, working miracles, &c. Wi.—The gift of the Holy Ghost. That is, justifying grace, which is infused in our hearts by the laver of regeneration. The exterior gifts of the Holy Ghost, the gift of tongues, of miracles, prophecy, &c. were, in the beginning of the Church, more regularly the consequences of confirmation or imposition of hands. Calmet.

VER. 39. The promise is to you. The good tidings of salvation were first announced to the Jew, then to the Gentile; first to the domestics, then to the strangers, who are far off. It is rather singular, that S. Peter, after here so clearly shewing that the Gentiles are called to the faith, should afterwards have made such objections to go to baptize Cornelius, because he was a Gentile. This can only be reconciled, by supposing, he did not know distinctly the time nor the manner of their vocation. Calmet.

VER. 40. And with a great many other words did he testify and exhort them. S. Luke only gives an abridgment of those exhortations, which S. Peter, and the apostles frequently gave to all the people. S. Peter, as S. Chrys. observes, and as we see in these Acts, was the mouth of all the rest. And on this first day of Pentecost, about three thousand were converted. Wi.

VER. 42. In the communication of the breaking of bread, by which some understand their ordinary meals, and eating together; others, of the celestial bread of the holy Sacrament, rev. aprou, panis illius, scilicet Eucharistie. The Eucharist is called both by S. Luke and S. Paul, the breaking of bread. M. in v. 42 and for the remission of your sins: and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39 For the promise is to you, and to your children, and to all that are far off, whomsoever the Lord our God shall call.

40 And with a great many other words did he testify and exhort them, saying; Save yourselves from this perverse generation.

41 They therefore that received his word were baptized: and there were added in that day about three thousand souls.

42 And they were persevering in the doctrine of the apostles, and in the communication of the breaking of bread, and in prayers.

43 And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the apostles in Jerusalem, and there was great fear in all.

44 And all they that believed were together, and had all things common.

45 They sold their possessions and goods, and divided them to all, according as every one had need.

46 And continuing daily with one accord in the temple, and breaking bread from house to house, they took their meat with gladness and simplicity of heart:

47 Praising God together, and having favour with all the people. And the Lord added daily to their society such as should be saved.

CHAP. III.

The miracle upon the lame man, followed by the conversion of many.

NOW Peter and John went up to the temple at the ninth hour of prayer.

^c Ps. xv. 10. ^d Isai. xlii. 85.—^e Ps. cix. 1.

48.—In the Syriac, for aprou, is a term that means Eucharist, both here and in Acts xx. as the learned Joannes Harleminius remarks in Indice Bibliorum.—S. Luke also gives here some account of the manner of living of these first Christians. 1. They were together, united in perfect charity. 2. They were frequently in the temple, and praying together. 3. They had all possessions in common. 4. They went from house to house to convert souls, taking the food they found with joy, and simplicity of heart, their number daily increasing. 5. S. Luke says they were in favour, and esteemed by all the people. 6. The apostles did many prodigies and miracles, to confirm their doctrine, which struck others with great terror and horror for their past lives. Wi.

VER. 44. This living in common is not a precept for all Christians, but a life of perfection and counsel, for such as are called to it by heaven. See S. Augustin in Ps. cxii. and ep. cix. the practice of which is a striking proof of the one true Church, which has come down from the apostles.

VER. 46. In the temple. Although by the death of our Saviour, the ceremonies and sacrifices were abrogated, and the new alliance had succeeded to the old, still it was not in the design of God, that the faithful should separate themselves from the rest of the Jews, or entirely give up the observances of the law. They continued to observe them, as long as the utility of the Church required it, but they observed them not as Jews. Thus they avoided giving scandal to the weak, and deriving them from submitting to the doctrine of the Church. They disposed them insensibly to a more pure and spiritual worship. S. Chrys. in Act. hom. vii.—This was burying the synagogue with honour.

VER. 47. More and more he added daily to the Church, as it is clearly expressed in the Greek, προσέτιθετο τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, that we may see the visible propagation and increase of the same. We may here, and throughout the whole book, observe a visible society of men joined in Christ, which visible society may be traced through ecclesiastical history, down to our days, and which will continue, in virtue of Christ's promise, to the end of time, as the point of union, by which the true disciples of Jesus Christ are to be connected together in one body, and one spirit; "one Lord, one faith, one baptism." Eph. iv. 5. This book can shew the true Church ever visible, and ever speaking with authority to all that do not willingly shut their eyes, as plainly as the gospel doth shew the true Christ. "Every where the Church proclaims the truth; she is the candlestick, with the seven lamps (Exod. xxv.); bearing the light of Christ, ἐνθάμνος," says S. Irenæus; which light nothing can obscure. Hence S. Chrysostom says, "sooner shall the sun be extinguished, than the Church be obscured;" ὀκλιότερον τὸ ἥλιον σβεσθῆναι, ἢ τὴν ἐκκλησίαν ἀφανισθῆναι.

* V. 1. Pariter in eodem loco. ὑποθέμενον ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ, concorditer.

† V. 24. Solutis doloribus Inferni, λύσας τὰς δολύβους ἰδόν, though in the common Greek copies, δαράντων. See S. Chrys. hom. vi.

‡ V. 27. My soul in hell. Animam meam in Inferno, τὴν ψυχὴν μου σὺς Ἰδόν. (1437)

2 And a certain man who was lame from his mother's womb, was carried; whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple, which is called the Beautiful, that he might beg alms of them that went into the temple.

3 He, when he had seen Peter and John about to go into the temple, begged to receive an alms.

4 But Peter, with John, fixing his eyes upon him, said; Look upon us.

5 But he looked earnestly upon them, hoping that he should receive something from them.

6 But Peter said; Silver and gold I have none: but what I have, I give thee: in the name of Jesus Christ, of Nazareth, rise up, and walk.

7 And having taken him by the right hand, he lifted him up, and forthwith his feet and soles became firm.

8 And he leaping up, stood, and walked: and entered with them into the temple, walking and leaping, and praising God.

9 And all the people saw him walking and praising God.

10 And they knew him, that it was he who sat for alms at the Beautiful gate of the temple: and they were filled with wonder and amazement at that which had happened to him.

11 And as he held Peter and John, all the people, amazed, ran to them to the porch which is called Solomon's.

12 Which Peter seeing, made answer to the people: Ye men of Israel, why wonder you at this? or why look you upon us, as if by our strength or power, we had made this man to walk?

13 The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son, Jesus, whom you indeed delivered up and denied before the face of Pilate, when he judged he should be released.

14 But you denied the Holy and the Just one, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you.

15 But the author of life you killed, whom God hath raised from the dead, of which we are witnesses.

16 And his name, through the faith of his name, hath made this man strong whom you have seen and known: and the faith which is by him, hath given this perfect soundness in the sight of you all.

17 And now, brethren, I know that you did it through ignorance, as also your rulers.

18 But those things, which God had foretold by the mouth of all the prophets, that his Christ should suffer, he hath so fulfilled.

19 Repent, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out:

20 That when the times of refreshment shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send him who hath been preached unto you, Jesus Christ,

21 Whom heaven indeed must receive until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of his holy prophets from the beginning of the world.

a A. D. 38.—b Matt. xxvii. 20. Mark xv. 11.

Luke xxiii. 18. John xviii. 40.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. To the temple. Though the Jewish ceremonies were shortly to cease, yet it was not unlawful to follow them; and they went to the temple as a proper place for prayer. Wi.—The ninth hour, that is, about three in the afternoon. But we must here observe, that the Hebrews divided the light into twelve hours, and the dark into twelve; so that their hours would be of unequal length: longer in summer, shorter in winter. Menochius.—The custom of praying three times in the day, is ancient among the Jews. Daniel at Babylon opened his window on the side which looked towards the temple of Jerusalem, and three times a day bent his knees before the Lord. The ancient Fathers of the Church have strongly recommended this established custom of praying three times in the day, morning, noon, and evening. It is indeed not a precept, but a religious observation, to which she invites all her children. See S. Clem. of Alex. Constit. lib. vii. c. 24. Tertullian de Jejuniis, &c.—In Catholic countries, the toll of a bell at morning, noon, and evening, announces the time for the recital of the Angelus Domini, a short prayer, in honour of the incarnation. At these moments, all, however employed, whether at labour in the field, or at home, all cease from their employment, till they have recited the prayer. The repetition of this, and similar practices, cannot be too strongly recommended to Catholics of the present day. They are of singular advantage in recalling the soul, which is too easily dissipated and distracted, to God, her first beginning, and her last end. A.

VER. 4. Look upon us. S. Peter said this to raise his attention and expectation, but the poor man thought of nothing but an alms. Wi.

VER. 6. But what I have, I give thee. Though S. Luke told us, (c. ii. 43.) that the apostles did many miracles and prodigies, yet this is the first specified. In the name of Jesus of Nazareth, (known by that name, though of Bethlehem) arise, and walk. In the name of Jesus, lately nailed to a cross. Wi.—This is not the shadow of a great name, magni nominis umbra, but the truth of what it signifies, a Saviour. Not without reason is this name in the Canticles compared to oil, in its three-fold properties, of affording light, food, and medicine. When preached, it enlightens; thought on, it feeds us; and called on, it assuages our grief. Whence has such a sudden light of faith spread over the world, but in preaching the name of Jesus? How did this light shine, and attract the eyes of all, when proceeding like lightning from the mouth of Peter, it strengthened the weakness of the lame man's feet, and enlightened the minds of many spiritually blind? Did he not then scatter fire, when he exclaimed, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, arise, and walk! This name is food too. Are you not refreshed, as often as you recall it to your mind? What is as powerful in consoling the mind? What so soon repairs our wearied senses, and gives new vigour to our strength; encourages virtues, cherishes chaste affections? All food is dry to me, if not seasoned with this oil; insipid, unless sprinkled with this salt. If you write, I relish it not, unless I read the name of Jesus. If you read, or speak, I take no pleasure in it, unless I hear the name of Jesus. Jesus is honey in the mouth, music to the ear, but ecstasy to the heart. This is also my medicine. Are you sad? let Jesus enter your heart, and thence ascend upon your tongue. And behold, at the rising of this star, every cloud will retire, and serenity return.

Do you fall into a crime, or run on the brink of despair: call on this name of life, and you shall be restored to life, &c. S. Bernard, Sermon. xv. super Cant. prope medium.

VER. 11. As he held Peter and John. That is, kept close by them, and with them, out of joy and gratitude. Wi.

VER. 12. Peter seeing, made answer to the people. This is the second sermon, that is related, which, as S. Chrys. observes, was spoken publicly in the temple. —Why look you upon us? S. Peter, at the beginning, takes care to give the glory to God. Wi.

VER. 13. Who does not admire, in this second discourse of S. Peter, as well as in his first, the prudence and discretion, with which he blames the Jews! He reproaches them, but with such mildness, as not to offend them, and dispenses to them truths in proportion to their capacity to bear them; after the example of his master and Saviour, he sweetens the bitterness of the truth, by furnishing them with an excuse. They sinned through ignorance. Calmet.

VER. 14–15. The just one, and the holy one, even the author of life you killed: he that is the just one promised, the Messiah, the Son of God, and true God. Wi.

VER. 17. You did it through ignorance, but such as could not excuse the chief of you. Wi.

VER. 20. The times of refreshment. The time of eternal rest and happiness, &c.—These words, you may be saved, must be understood, to make the sense complete. Wi.

VER. 21. Whom heaven indeed must receive, as also in the Prot. translation not contain: nor can any argument be drawn from hence, that Christ's body cannot be truly at the same time in the holy Sacrament, especially after a different manner. The true sense of these words is, that heaven is the place of Christ's abode, till the day of judgment, and that it was in vain for them to think that he would come to take possession of any temporal kingdom. Wi.—The restitution of all things. Jesus remains in heaven, till his second coming to judge the living and the dead. That is the great day, when every thing shall be finally settled, and restored to its proper order. He shall avenge the injuries done to God; restore peace to the afflicted just men of the earth, and justice to their persecutors. He shall exalt his Church, and himself receive the homage of adoration, from every tribe of men. Calmet.—See 2 Peter iii. 13. which text, together with what we read in this place, joins inseparably the last coming of Jesus Christ, with the universal re-establishment promised in both these passages, and completely excludes the Millennium, which some erroneously expect to take place between the accomplishment of the first and second of these events. See Bossuet's reflexions on the 20th ch. of the Apocalypse, where the errors of many Protestant writers, especially of Dodwell, are refuted. To shew that the error of the Millennium cannot be assigned as a general cause which impelled the primitive Christians to martyrdom, it will suffice to produce this decisive passage of S. Justin, who, after Papias, was the first supporter of that system: speaking to Tryphon concerning this temporal kingdom, which Christ was to enjoy here below, in the re-established Jerusalem with the saints risen from the dead, for a thousand years, he says: "I have already confessed that many others, with myself, were 22 For Moses indeed said; *A prophet shall the Lord, your God, raise up unto you out of your brethren, like unto me: him you shall hear, according to all things whatsoever he shall speak to you.

23 And it shall be, that every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people.

24 And all the prophets, from Samuel and afterwards, that have spoken, have foretold these days.

25 You are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made to our fathers, saying to Abraham: ^bAnd in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed.

26 To you first God, raising ^cup his Son, sent him to bless you: that every one should convert himself from his wickedness.

CHAP. IV.

Peter and John are apprehended. Their constancy. The Church is increased.

AND ^aas they were speaking to the people, the priests, and the officer of the temple, and the Sadducees, came upon them,

2 Being grieved that they taught the people, and preached through Jesus the resurrection from the dead:

3 And they laid hands on them, and put them in custody till the next day: for now it was evening.

4 But many of them, who had heard the word, believed: and the number of the men was made five thousand.

5 And it came to pass on the morrow, that their

^a Dent. xviii. 15.—^b Gen. xii. 3.—^c A. D. 83.—^d Ps. cxvii. 22. Isai. xxviii. 16.

of this opinion; . . . but there are many others, and persons of sound faith, and exemplary conduct, who reject this opinion." In dialog. cum Tryph. n. 84.—Clement of Alexandria, S. Cyprian, and Origen, lay down principles diametrically apposite to this system. It has also been expressly combated by Caius, and by S. Denis of Alexandria, one of the greatest luminaries of the third century, as we learn from Eusebius, and S. Jerom.

VER. 22. Moses said. He brings them this testimony of Moses concerning the Messias, to shew the punishment they deserve for not receiving him. Wi.

VER. 23. Which will not hear that prophet. S. Peter's argument is this. If disobedience to the ordinances of God by the voice of Moses, was punishable with death, how much more severe will be the punishment of those, who refuse obedience to the doctrines of Jesus, to whom all the prophets bore testimony, and whom the apostles then preached. How different is this system of submission to the teaching of the prophets, and apostles, from that libertinism, which undermines the whole fabric of religion, by taking away from the Church the power of commanding, and from the disciple the necessity of obeying. By what wonderful and progressive shades of light was the prediction of this great prophet made to man! From the fall of Adam, it was predicted, that the seed of the woman would crush the serpent's head. Many ages after, God manifested that from Abraham's loins the Redeemer should spring, "in whom all nations should be blessed." The promise is renewed to Isaac, and that he is to spring from his son, but not from Esau, but from Jacob; and of the twelve sons of Jacob, the posterity of Juda is to have the privilege of bestowing a Messias to the world, and the token of its accomplishment is, "the failure of the sceptre in the posterity of Juda." After a long series of events, and of ages, an humble shepherd is chosen in the tribe of Juda: he is led to the throne; and to this man, David, it is repeated, that from him the Messias shall spring, and that his kingdom shall have no end. The oracle is so explicit in the psalms of that king, and in the writings of successive prophets, that it not only expresses the race, the tribe, the family, but also the character of the mother, the place of his birth, the precise period or the event, the ministry, the power, the dignity, the circumstances of his death, the change of the covenant, and conversion of the world. The particular prophecies, in their accomplishment, were a visible earnest to the Jews of the accomplishment of the prophecies relative to the Messias. Hence Pascal very justly remarks: "The prophets mingle particular prophecies with those of the Messias; that the prophecies regarding the Messias may not be without proof, and that the particular prophecies may not be without effect." Pensées. xv.—These oracles, which during a period of four thousand years, have been delivered to the world, and which have been completely and visibly fulfilled, still exist in books, scrupulously preserved by the greatest enemies of Christ, and of his holy religion, and satisfactorily demonstrate Jesus Christ to be the great prophet, and the Christian religion to be the new covenant, which had been announced so many ages before, in so many different manners.

VER. 25-26. You are the children . . . to you first God raising up his Son. He gives them encouragement, that not only the promise of sending the Messias was rulers, and ancients, and Scribes, were gathered to gether in Jerusalem:

6 And Annas, the high priest, and Caiphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the priestly race.

7 And setting them in the midst, they asked; By what power, or in what name, have ye done this?

8 Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said to them; Ye rulers of the people, and ancients, hear:

9 If we this day are examined concerning the good deed done to the infirm man, by what means he hath been made whole,

10 Be it known to you all, and to all the people of Israel, that in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, of Nazareth, whom you crucified, whom God hath raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you, whole.

11 ^dThis is the stone which was rejected by you, the builders; which is become the head of the corner:

12 Nor is there salvation in any other. For there is no other name, under heaven, given to men, whereby we must be saved.

13 Now they, seeing the constancy of Peter and John, knowing that they were illiterate and ignorant men, they wondered: and they knew them, that they had been with Jesus:

14 Seeing also the man standing with them, who had been healed, they could say nothing against it.

15 But they commanded them to go aside out of the council: and they conferred among themselves, made to them, but that he came, and is to be preached to them: and that the blessings of his coming are first offered to them. Wi.

Matt. xxi. 42. Mark xii. 10. Luke xx. 17. Rom. ix. 33. 1 Pet. ii. 7.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. The officer (of the guard) of the temple; lit. the magistrate of the temple.* But this magistrate, by the Greek, was an officer over soldiers; we may presume, over those who were to guard the temple. Wi.

VER. 2. The resurrection. This vexed particularly the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection: and they had great power among the Jews. Wi.

VER. 4. Five thousand. Not that hereby is meant the whole number of the believers, but five thousand, by this miracle and preaching, were added to those that believed before. Wi.—Here again we remark the visible increase of the Catholic Church, by the preaching of the word.

VER. 5. Their rulers, &c. The chief of them, and Annas the high priest; perhaps he had lately succeeded Caiphas, high priest of the year before. Wi.

VER. 7. By what authority? Is it by your own authority, or that of some other, you have healed this lame man? They wished to know if it was a true miracle, or the effects of some secret magic or enchantment. The knowledge of this kind of affairs belonged to them. It was their duty to repress the attempts of false prophets, seducers, and magicians. But they might easily discover that the apostles were far removed from any thing of this kind. The simple narration of the fact was enough to acquit them. Calmet.

VER. 10. Name of our Lord Jesus. From this, S. Chrysostom takes occasion to make several pathetic exhortations against swearing and profaning this adorable name. What profit do you propose to yourselves by abusing this name? Is it to gain credit to your discourse? So you will tell me; but, believe me, you are mistaken: if people saw you respected oaths, and were afraid to make free with them, then they would believe you. Not when you give them to understand that you undervalue them, by your frequent abuse of them. Break then so profane a custom. It will cost you neither money nor labour to do so: you are not required to part with any gratification for this purpose. Use only at the beginning a little diligence, and you will easily overcome so idle a practice. Wish, and it is done. S. Chrys. super Act. sparsim. A.—Whom you crucified. S. Peter, without fear or apprehension, openly and boldly tells them of their heinous crime: that Christ is the head corner stone, which they had rejected, as Christ himself had told them, (Matt. xii. 10.) and that there is no other name under heaven given to men to be saved by. Wi.

VER. 13. The constancy of Peter and John, surprised the council very much. They admired their knowledge of the Scriptures, seeing them men without learning or letters,† and (as they are called idiots) they could not find how to contradict the fact, the man that was healed, being there present. Wi.—Here, with the Jewish people, you may admire the constancy, wisdom, and learning of the apostles, after the coming of the Holy Ghost, who, before that event, were simple, unlettered, and timorous men. See v. 19; and again, C. v. 29.

VER. 16. What shall we do to these men? They were perplexed, says S. Chrys. and in greater fear than the apostles. They saw they could do nothing but threaten and charge them to speak no more of Jesus. Wi.

16 Saying; What shall we do to these men? for a notable miracle, indeed, hath been done by them, it is manifest to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: it is manifest, and we cannot deny it.

17 But that it may be no further divulged among the people, let us threaten them, that they speak no more in this name to any man.

18 And calling them, they charged them not to speak at all, nor teach in the name of Jesus.

19 But Peter and John answering, said to them; If it be just in the sight of God, to hear you rather than God, judge ye.

20 For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.

21 But they, threatening them, sent them away, not finding how they might punish them, because of the people: for all men glorified what had been done, in that which had come to pass.

22 For the man was above forty years old, in whom that miraculous cure had been wrought.

23 And being let go, they came to their own company, and related all that the chief priests and ancients had said to them.

24 Who, having heard it, with one accord lifted up their voice to God, and said; Lord, thou art he that didst make heaven and earth, the sea, and all things that are in them:

25 Who, in the Holy Ghost, by the mouth of our father, David, thy servant, hast said; "Why have the Gentiles raged, and the people devised vain things?"

26 The kings of the earth stood up, and the princes assembled together against the Lord, and against his Christ.

* Ps. ii. 1.

VER. 19. But Peter and John stopped their mouths, by asking them, if it was reasonable for them to hearken to men rather than to God. For we, say they, (v. 20.) cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard. Wi.

VER. 20. We have seen and heard. From these words, S. Chrysostom makes some important remarks on the conduct of Christians. On returning from the theatre, or any public meeting, each can relate what he has seen and heard. This is the fruit they reap from attending at public places of amusement; and would to God it were merely pleasure unmingled with poison. But on returning from Church, where they have been for instruction, they remember nothing, speak of nothing they have seen or heard. All is silence. Not even a thought is turned on what has been performed. Hom. x. in Act.—It is a curious fact, which the apologists for the innocence of modern plays would do well to attend to, that the theatre has always been avoided by the good and the virtuous of every age. When one of the ancient Fathers was exorcising a female demoniac, who had been possessed at the theatre, and bade the devil to depart; No, replied he, I had a right to take possession of her, for I found her in my own house. A.

VER. 21. Threatening them. Here commences the history of the first persecution of religious opinion, which the passions of men have continued, and swelled to such a frightful length. But on this, as on all other occasions, it has defeated its own purpose, by adding firmness and constancy to the persecuted. Truth is not to be overpowered by violence. In vain have the kings and princes of the earth risen up against the Lord, and against his Christ.—When will men learn, that charity is the principle of conversion!—That is an unheard-of kind of preaching, said the great Pope, S. Gregory, which exacts belief by stripes. He was on this occasion reprehending the false zeal of certain indiscreet Christians at Rome, who were for compelling the Jews to become converts. A.—The amiable Fenelon, in a letter to Prince Charles, the son of our James the Second, says: "No human power can force the impenetrable intrenchments of the human mind. Compulsion never persuades—it only makes hypocrites. When kings interfere in matters of religion, they do not protect it; they enslave it. Give civil liberty to all; not by approving all religions, as indifferent, but, by permitting in others, what God permits."

VER. 23. Being let go, they came to their own company, relating with simplicity all that had happened.

VER. 24. With one accord. With one mind, as in the Greek, and with one voice, being inspired by the Holy Ghost, they fell to prayer. Wi.

VER. 30. That thou stretch forth thy hand. Lit. in this that thou stretch forth thy hand to cures, &c. They pray to God, that he would continue to confirm their preaching by miracles. Wi.

(1440)

27 For of a truth there assembled together in this city, against thy holy child, Jesus, whom thou hast anointed, Herod, and Pontius Pilate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israel, 28 To do what thy hand and thy counsel decreed to be done.

29 And now, Lord, behold their threatenings, and grant to thy servants, with all confidence to speak thy word, 30 By stretching forth thy hand to cures, and signs, and wonders, to be done by the name of thy holy Son, Jesus.

31 And when they had prayed, the place was shaken wherein they were assembled: and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and they spoke the word of God with confidence.

32 And the multitude of the believers had but one heart and one soul: neither did any one say, that any of the things which he possessed was his own, but all things were common to them.

33 And with great power did the apostles give testimony of the resurrection of Jesus Christ, our Lord: and great grace was in them all.

34 For neither was there any one among them that wanted. For as many as were owners of lands, or houses, sold them, and brought the price of the things they sold, 35 And laid it down before the feet of the apostles. And distribution was made to every one, according as he had need.

36 And Joseph, who by the apostles was surnamed Barnabas, (which is by interpretation the son of consolation) a Levite, a Cyprian born, 37 Having land, sold it, and brought the price, and laid it at the feet of the apostles.

VER. 31. The place was shaken. Much in the same manner, as at the first coming of the Holy Ghost.—They were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Their hearts were inflamed and excited by a new motion of grace. Wi.

VER. 32. All things were common. Happy would it be for society, if the rich of the present day were to imitate, in some degree, this charity of the first disciples, by distributing to those that want. Both would hereby become more happy; nor would the rich derive less pleasure from such actions, than the poor. S. Chrys. hom. xi. in Acts.—That cold and fatal word, mine, and thine, which has caused so many misfortunes and wars, was banished from among them. Id. hom. de S. Philogon.—Some take this to be the origin of a monastic life: but according to the Fathers, it is rather its progress and increase; for it began in the family of Jesus Christ. The apostles, indeed, may be said to institute here that common life, which they led under Christ, our Lord, and of which Peter speaks: behold, we have left all. This life, by S. Augustin and others, is called apostolic, and there among all, wives are particularly specified. Cajetan thinks no vow was required: S. Augustin is of a different sentiment. Serm. x. de diversis & alibi.

VER. 33. And great grace was in them all. All of them were present, were replenished with extraordinary graces of charity, zeal, &c. Wi.

VER. 36-37. Joseph . . . surnamed Barnabas, the son of consolation, &c. He seems to be mentioned as the first that sold all he had, and brought the price, and laid it at the feet of the apostles. Wi.—There was at that time a great number of Jews established in this city. V.

VER. 37. Sold it, &c. It is probable, that the faithful of Palestine disposed of all their property, because they knew that presently Judea would be delivered up to its enemies, and they would be obliged to fly, to avoid the persecution of their countrymen, as well as of strangers. D. Thomas ad Galatas. xi.—At the feet of the apostles, out of respect. Thus, the Sunamites fell down and embraced Eliseus's feet. Many that asked favours of Christ, fell down at his feet, and Mary kissed his feet. Such are the signs of reverence paid both to Christ, and to other sacred persons, prophets, apostles, popes. See in S. Jerom, how the people of Jerusalem flocked together to the venerable bishop Epiphanius, in Cyprus, presenting their children for his blessing, kissing his feet, plucking the hem of his garment, so that he could not move for the throng. S. Jer. Ep. lxi. c. 4. cont. error. Jovin.

* V. 1. An officer of the guard of the temple. Magistratus templi, στυγερὸς τοῦ ἱεροῦ.

† V. 13. Sine literis, ἀγπαρῆς. Idiotæ, ἰδιῶται, plebei.

‡ V. 23. Ad suos, πρὸς τοὺς ἰδίους.

§ V. 30. In eo quod extendas, ἐν τῷ ἰκτείνειν, by stretching forth, &c.

CHAP. V

The judgment of God upon Ananias and Saphira. The apostles are cast into prison.

BUT ^aa certain man, named Ananias, with Saphira, his wife, sold a field,

2 And by fraud kept part of the price of the field, his wife being privy thereto, and bringing a certain part of it, laid it at the feet of the apostles.

3 But Peter said: Ananias, why hath Satan tempted thy heart, that thou shouldst lie to the Holy Ghost, and by fraud keep part of the price of the field?

4 Whilst it remained, did it not remain to thee? and when sold, was it not in thy power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thy heart? Thou hast not lied to men, but to God.

5 And Ananias hearing these words, fell down, and gave up the ghost. And great fear came upon all that heard it.

6 And the young men, rising up, removed him, and carrying him out, buried him.

7 And it came to pass, about the space of three hours after, that his wife also not knowing what had happened, came in.

8 And Peter said to her: Tell me, woman, whether you sold the field for so much? And she said: Yea, for so much.

9 And Peter said unto her: Why have you agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold the feet of those, who have buried thy husband, are at the door, and they shall carry thee out.

10 Immediately she fell down before his feet, and gave up the ghost. And the young men coming in, found her dead; and carried her out, and buried her by her husband.

* A. D. 38.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. It is believed by many of the Fathers, that the resolution which the faithful made of selling their property, and laying the price at the feet of the apostles, implied a vow of reserving nothing for themselves, but giving all to the community; and that the crime of Ananias and Saphira consisted in the violation of this vow; on which account they regarded them as sacrilegious, and plunderers of sacred things. See S. Basil, Serm. i. de instit. Monac. S. Cyprian, lib. i. ad Quir. &c.—For, without this supposition, we cannot, as Menochius justly remarks, account for the sudden and severe punishment inflicted on the offending parties.

VER. 2. *By fraud kept part. Ananias, and his wife Saphira, had made a promise or vow, to put into the common stock the price of what they had to sell. When they had sold the field, they resolved by mutual consent to keep for their private use part of the money, and to bring in the rest, as if they had received no more. The whole price being promised, and by that means consecrated to God, S. Aug. calls it a sacrilegious fraud, and S. Chrys. a theft of what was already made sacred to God. Wi.

VER. 3. Why hath Satan tempted thy heart?† The present Greek copies, filled thy heart. Vi.

VER. 4. Did it not remain to thee? That is, no one forced thee to make such a promise.—And being sold, was it not in thy power, and at thy free disposal, before such a promise? but promises and vows must be kept. Thou hast not lied to men, but to God, by lying to the Holy Ghost. Wi.—Thou hast not lied to men, only and principally, but to God also; for he had also lied to Peter, and the other apostles. Menochius—“If it displeased God,” says S. Augustin, “to withdraw part of the money they had vowed to God, how is he angry, when chastity is vowed and not performed! . . . let not such persons think to be condemned to corporal death, but to everlasting fire.” Serm. x. de diversis.—S. Gregory, on this same subject, says: “Ananias had vowed money to God, which afterwards, overcome by diabolical persuasion, he withdrew; but with what death he was punished, thou knowest. See, then, what judgment thou art to expect, for withdrawing, not money, but thyself, from Almighty God.” l. i. ep. 33.

VER. 5. Ananias . . . fell down and gave up the ghost. S. Aug. says,‡ this severe judgment was to strike a terror of such dissembling fraudulent dealings into the new Church. It was also to shew that S. Peter, and the apostles, had the gift of prophecy. Wi.—Origen thinks his death was occasioned by the sudden fright and shame, with which he was seized. Pliny relates a similar accident in the sudden death of Diodorus Dialecticus, lib. vii. cap. 53.—Menochius and Cornelius a Lapide think, that God struck him interiorly, as Peter spoke. . . . There are likewise different opinions among the Fathers, respecting the salvation

11 And there came great fear upon the whole church, and upon all that heard these things.

12 And by the hands of the apostles many signs and wonders were wrought among the people. And they were all, with one accord, in Solomon's porch.

13 But of the rest, no one durst join himself to them: but the people magnified them.

14 And the multitude of men and women, that believed in the Lord, was more increased,

15 Insomuch, that they brought out the sick into the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that when Peter came, his shadow, at the least, might overshadow any of them, and they might be delivered from their infirmities.

16 And there came also together, to Jerusalem, a multitude out of the neighbouring cities, bringing sick persons, and such as were troubled with unclean spirits: who were all healed.

17 Then the high priest, rising up, and all that were with him, (which is the heresy of the Sadducees) were filled with indignation.

18 And they laid hands on the apostles, and put them in the common prison.

19 But an Angel of the Lord, by night opening the doors of the prison, and leading them out, said:

20 Go, and, standing, speak in the temple, to the people, all the words of this life.

21 They having heard this, entered early in the morning into the temple, and taught. Now the high priest coming, and they that were with him, called together the council, and all the ancients of the children of Israel; and sent to the prison to have them brought.

22 But when the officers came, and having opened the prison, found them not, returning back, they told,

23 Saying; The prison indeed we found shut with of Ananias and Saphira. Some are of opinion, that as their fault was great, they died, and perished in their sin. But the ideas we are fond to cherish of the infinite mercy of God, would rather incline us to say, with S. Augustin, “I can believe that God spared them after this life, for his mercy is great. . . . They were stricken with the scourge of death, that they might not be subject to eternal punishment.” S. Aug. Serm. cxlviii. olim. 10. et in Parmen.—S. Benedict also, in the 57th chapter of his rule, insinuates, that their death was only corporal. A.—It is not unreasonable, that the first violators of laws, should be punished with severity. It was thus that the Almighty treated Adam, the adorers of the golden calf, the first who broke the sabbath-day, &c. to prevent the effects of bad example. Calmet.

VER. 7. Not knowing. Because no one durst tell her; so much did they honour, fear, and obey S. Peter. S. Chrys. hom. xii.—She came in; Peter did not call her, but waited, to afford her an opportunity of repenting. Cæcumenius.

VER. 8. Yea, for so much. That is, for the same sum as Ananias mentioned. This the wife said, not knowing what had before happened to her husband. Wi.

VER. 12. Solomon's porch. This was outside of the temple, open to all, Jews and Gentiles, pure and impure. They assembled here because it was a large place, where they could speak to many assembled. Had it been within the temple, the priests would have interrupted them, and not have wanted pretexts to silence them. Calmet.

VER. 13. Of the rest, no one durst join himself to them. That is, none of those that did not believe: yet the people praised them, and the number of the faithful increased. Wi.

VER. 15. On . . . couches, meaner beds for the poorer sort.—That Peter's shadow, &c. Thus was partly fulfilled what Christ had foretold, (Jo. xiv. 12.) that his disciples should do even greater miracles than he had done. Wi.—S. Ambrose compares with these miracles wrought by S. Peter's shadow, those which the linen cloths, that had touched the relics of the holy martyrs, also wrought. Epis. liv. Si inanis quædam species vacuæ imaginis habere potuit in se vim salutis, quanto plus de corpore meruerunt attrahere salubritatis sacris impressa membris vincula passionis! If the empty appearance of an unsubstantial shadow possessed the power of giving health, how much more efficacy must the chains of the martyrs have drawn from the holy members, which they bound!—In appendice operum. S. Aug. serm. cccii.—S. Augustin, speaking of the miracles performed by the saints now reigning in heaven, says: “If the shadow of Peter's body could afford help, how much more now the fulness of his power! And if then a certain little wind of him, passing by, did profit them that humbly asked, how much more the grace of him, now being permanent and remaining!” Serm. xxxix. de sanctis.

all diligence, and the keepers standing before the doors: but opening it, we found no man within.

24 Now, when the magistrate of the temple, and the chief priests, heard these words, they were in doubt concerning them what this would come to.

25 But a man coming, told them: Behold, the men whom you put in prison, are standing in the temple, and teaching the people.

26 Then went the magistrate with the officers, and brought them without violence: for they feared the people, lest they should be stoned.

27 And when they had brought them, they set them before the council. And the high priest asked them, 28 Saying; Commanding, we commanded you, that you should not teach in this name: and behold, you have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine, and you have a mind to bring the blood of this man upon us.

29 But Peter answering, and the apostles, said: We ought to obey God rather than men.

30 The God of our fathers hath raised up Jesus, whom you put to death, hanging him upon a tree.

31 Him hath God exalted with his right hand, to be Prince and Saviour, to give repentance to Israel, and remission of sins.

32 And we are witnesses of these things, and the Holy Ghost, whom God hath given to all that obey him.

33 When they had heard these things, they were cut to the heart, and they thought to put them to death.

34 But one in the council rising up, a Pharisee, by name Gamaliel, a doctor of the law, respected by all the people, commanded the men to be put forth a little while.

35 And he said to them; Ye men of Israel, take

VER. 26. Then went the magistrate: § which by the Greek was a military officer. But he did not bind them like prisoners, for fear of a tumult, but desired them to go along with them to the sanhedrim. Wi.—Without violence. They persuaded them to appear willingly before the sanhedrim, thinking, perhaps, moreover, that they could not bind them, whom the walls of the prison could not confine. The apostles here, and on all other occasions, shew the most astonishing examples of patience, constancy, and obedience to the laws of the country. Menochius.—O Jews! why do you shut your eyes against the light? why so blindly mad? You say the apostles took Christ from the tomb. Tell me, then, who stole the apostles from under your locks and bolts? Who conveyed them from your prison through the midst of your guards, without alarming them? Shall the evidence of the miracle serve only to make you the less open to conviction? Ven. Bede. D. Carthus.

VER. 28. Commanding, we commanded you. That is, charged you severely.—You have a mind to bring the blood of this man upon us. You will make us pass for guilty of the murder of the Messias. Wi.

VER. 29. Peter answered boldly, We ought to obey God, rather than men. And withal adds, that God had raised from death Jesus, the Prince and Saviour of mankind, by whose merits all might find repentance, and forgiveness of their sins; that they were witnesses of his resurrection, &c. Wi.

VER. 33. They were cut to the heart; ¶ exasperated to fury and madness, and were for killing them. Wi.

VER. 34. Gamaliel. He that had been S. Paul's master, according to S. Chrys. advised them to forbear, and do nothing rashly. Meddle not with these men; lit. go from them. ¶ For, saith he, if this be the work of men only, it will soon fall to nothing; but if it be from God, you cannot hinder it, and you will only make yourselves guilty, by resisting the designs of God. They consented to him, so far as not to put them to death; but they made them be scourged, which they rejoiced at; and they dismissed them with reiterated threats. Wi.—Gamaliel was the master of S. Paul, Barnabas, Stephen, and others, and favoured the Christians. S. Clement and Ven. Bede think he was then a Christian, but concealed his conversion at the instigation of the apostles, that he might have an opportunity of defending Christ in the council. He afterwards professed his faith publicly, and was canonized with his son Abibas. See Baronius, 3d of Aug. Tinnus.

VER. 39. Time, and the evident success of Christ's Church, prove it to be of God. No violence of the Jews, no persecution of heathen princes, no attempts of domestic adversaries, heretics, schismatics, or evil livers, have been able to prevail against it. Men of superior abilities have made violent attacks against it; their memory, and that of their disciples, has either been buried and forgotten, or liveth only in malediction and infamy. Let, then, no Catholic be dispirited, because modern heresies continue; Arian and other heresies have con-heed to yourselves, what you are about to do with these men.

36 For before these days rose up Theodas, affirming himself to be some body, whom a number of men, about four hundred, joined; who was slain: and all who believed him, were dispersed, and brought to nothing.

37 After this man rose up Judas, of Galilee, in the days of the enrolling, and drew away the people after him: he also perished: and all who adhered to him, were dispersed.

38 And now, therefore, I say to you, refrain from these men, and let them alone: for if this counsel, or work be of men, it will come to nothing:

39 But if it be of God, you cannot overthrow it: lest perhaps you be found even to fight against God. And they agreed with him.

40 And calling in the apostles, after they had scourged them, they charged them not to speak at all in the name of Jesus, and they dismissed them.

41 And they indeed went from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were accounted worthy to suffer reproach for the name of Jesus.

42 And they ceased not every day in the temple, and from house to house, to teach and preach Christ Jesus.

CHAP. VI.

The ordaining of the seven deacons. The zeal of Stephen.

AND *in those days, the number of the disciples increasing, there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, for that their widows were neglected in the daily ministration.

* A. D. 33.

tinued much longer, have been more powerfully supported by temporal power, and yet have come to nothing. The Catholic religion was the first, and it will be the last religion.

VER. 41. Rejoicing. The joy of the apostles on the present occasion, is one of the greatest of miracles. Only the yoke of Jesus could make this sweet. But so the faithful servants of God have always found it. In tribulation, they abounded in inward peace and joy, which made them insensible of their exterior sufferings. A.

* V. 2. Defraudavit, evocatores. Intervertit aliquid de pretio. S. Aug. serm. xxvii. de verbis apostoli. Sacrilegii damnatur, & fraudis. See S. Chrys. hom. xii. in Acta.

† V. 3. Tentavit. In all Greek copies at present, ἐπλήρωσεν. But S. Epiphanius. Har. lix. p. 500. reads ἐπλήρωσεν.

‡ V. 5. See S. Aug. l. iii. cont. Parmen. c. i. p. 56. tom. 9. nov. Ed.

§ V. 26. Magistratus, ὁ στρατηγός.

¶ V. 33. Discebanantur, ἀσπλυντο; which Arius Montanus translates furebant.

¶ V. 34. Discedite ab istis, ἀποστρέψατε.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Of the Grecians against the Hebrews.* By the Grecians are many times understood the heathens or pagans, as Acts xiv. 1. xviii. 4. &c. but here by Grecians (which some translate Hellenists or Grecians) we may understand those new converted Christians, who had been Jews before, but who had been born in places where the Greek tongue was spoken; as by the Hebrews, we may understand those converted to the Christian faith, who were of the Jewish race, born, and bred in those places, where they spoke not Greek, but Syriac, which was then the language of the Jews. This difference is grounded on the Greek text.—Their widows were neglected; that is, they seemed less regarded, or less favoured in the daily distributions, than such as were of the Jewish race, and spoke the language of the Jews, as it was then spoken in Palestine. Wi.—They were most probably both of Jewish origin, and received their different appellations according to the language they spoke. The former were also frequently called Hellenists. Calmet.—It is not certain in what the Greek widows were despised. Some imagine, that a preference was given to their rivals, in the distribution of offices, that they were appointed to the meaner charges, and oppressed with too much labour. But it is most natural to suppose, that the complaints regarded the alms that were distributed, and that the necessities of both parties were not supplied, without the appearance of partiality. Menochius.—For c. iv. we read neither was there any one among them that wanted; and distribution was made to every man, according as he had need; and the multitude of believers had but one heart and one soul. But nothing in human institutions is so good, as not to 2 Then the twelve calling together the multitude of the disciples, said: It is not reasonable that we should leave the word of God, and serve tables.

3 Therefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of good reputation, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business.

4 But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word.

5 And the saying pleased all the multitude. And they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas, a proselyte of Antioch.

6 These they set before the apostles: and they, praying, imposed hands upon them.

7 And the word of the Lord increased, and the number of the disciples was multiplied very much in Jerusalem: a great multitude also of the priests obeyed the faith.

8 Now Stephen, full of grace and fortitude, did great wonders and miracles among the people.

9 But some of the synagogue, that is called of the Libertines, and of the Cyreneans, and of the Alexandri-ans, and of those that were of Cilicia, and Asia, rose up disputing with Stephen:

10 And they were not able to resist the wisdom and the spirit which spoke.

11 Then they suborned men to say, that they had heard him speaking words of blasphemy against Moses and against God.

12 They stirred up therefore the people, and the ancients, and the Scribes: and running together they took him, and brought him to the council.

13 And they set up false witnesses, who said: This man ceaseth not to speak words against the holy place, and the law.

14 For we have heard him say, that this Jesus, of Nazareth, shall destroy this place, and shall change the traditions, which Moses delivered to us.

15 And all that sat in the council looking intently upon him, saw his face as the face of an Angel.

CHAP. VII.

Stephen's speech before the council: his martyrdom.

THEN the high priest said: Are these things so?

2 He said: Ye men, brethren, and fathers, give require occasional reform, owing either to the wickedness or negligence of man. E. in dif. loc.

* A. D. 33.

VER. 2. And serve tables. The apostles did not judge it proper for them to be so much employed in managing that common stock, out of which every one, as they stood in need, were supplied, as to meat, and all other necessities: this took up too much of their time, which might be better employed in preaching, &c. Wi.—Word of God. The most essential duty of an apostle and bishop, is to announce the word of God. S. Paul would not even baptize, lest it should be a prejudice to the performance of this great duty, for which he had been sent. Many think, that this ministry of the tables, here signifies, not only the distribution of corporal nourishment, but the dispensing of the holy Eucharist. As sacred and divine as was this latter duty, the apostles preferred before it, their obligation of preaching. Calmet.

VER. 3. Look ye out among you seven men, and men of a good repute and character, full of the Holy Ghost. Wi.—Diverse circumstances prove, that they were chosen to be about the altar also. They were to be full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom: they received the imposition of the apostles' hands, and in them S. Paul requirerh, in a manner, the same conditions as in bishops; all which would not have been necessary for any secular stewardship. See Acts xiii. 3. Immediately after their ordination, they preached, baptized, disputed, as we see in S. Stephen, &c. &c. Hence S. Ignatius: "it is ours to please by all means the deacons, who are for the ministry of Jesus Christ; for they are not servitors of meat and drink, but ministers of the Church of God. For what are deacons but imitators or followers of Christ, ministering to bishops, as Christ to his Father, and working unto him a clean and immaculate work, even as S. Stephen to S. James?" Ep. ad Tral.

VER. 5. By the names of these seven, it would appear, that they were all Greeks. The reason of this, most probably, is to silence more effectually all future murmurs, by giving to the aggrieved party protectors of their own nation. Tirinus.—The history of Stephen occurs hereafter. Philip, in the 8th chapter, is called an evangelist, that is, a preacher of the gospel. By Eusebius, Tertullian, and others, he is called an apostle, that is, an apostolic man. See Lives of the Saints, and Rom. Martyrology, June 6.—S. Jerom says, his tomb, and that of his four daughters, the prophetesses, was to be seen at Cæsarea, in Palestine. Ep. ad Eustoch.—Of the rest, except Nicolas, nothing certain is known: their acts have perished. Nicolas, as appears from the text, was a proselyte, first to Judaism, then to Christianity. S. Epiphanius, and many others, accuse him of being, by his incontinency, the author, or at least the occasion of the impure sects of Nicolaites and Gnostics. Clement of Alexandria, and S. Augustin, acquit him of this, and attribute the above heresies to an abuse of some expressions, which he uttered in his simplicity, and which were susceptible of a good and bad sense. See Baronius and Tillemont.

VER. 6. And they, that is, the apostles, laid, or imposed hands upon them. These deacons, therefore, were designed and ordained for a sacred ministry, and not only to manage the common stock, and temporals of the faithful. This is proved, 1. By the qualifications required in such men, who were to be full of the Holy Ghost. 2. This is evident from their ecclesiastical functions mentioned in this book of the Acts, and in the epistles of S. Paul, and by the ancient Fathers. S. Stephen and S. Philip immediately preached the gospel, as we find in this, and the 8th chapter; they baptized those that were converted. In the first ages they assisted the bishops and priests at their divine office, and distributed the sacred chalice, or cup of the holy Eucharist. They succeeded as it were, to the Levites of the old law. And in the chief Churches, the deacons, or the archdeacons in the first ages, had the chief administration of the ecclesiastical revenues, as we read of S. Laurence, at Rome. Wi.—Imposed hands upon them. Notwithstanding the opinions of some, that these deacons were only the dispensers of corporal food, and therefore very different from the ministers of the altar, who now bear that name, it must nevertheless be observed, that the most ancient Fathers, SS. Justin, Irenæus, &c. have acknowledged in them the twofold character, and always style them the ministers of the mysteries of God. At the commencement of Christianity, the faithful generally received the holy Eucharist after a repast, which they took together, in imitation of our Saviour, who instituted the Sacrament after supper. Now the deacons, who presided over the first tables, after having distributed the corporeal food to the assembly, ministered also the food of life, which they received from the hand of the bishop. Thus were they ministers of both the common and sacred tables. Afterwards they had assistants called sub-deacons, and as among the Gentile converts, there did not exist that community of goods, as at Jerusalem, their chief employment became to serve the bishop in the oblation of the holy sacrifice. Calmet.

VER. 9. Called of the Libertines.† That is, of the synagogue of those, whose fathers had been made slaves under Pompey, and the Romans, but who had again been restored to their liberty, and had been made free. There were other synagogues for the Jews of Cyrene, of Alexandria, &c. No doubt but S. Stephen had converted many of them; and the chiefs of these synagogues, not being able to dispute with him, or to answer the spirit of wisdom, which directed him, they suborned witnesses. Wi.

VER. 11. Who should say, that they heard him speaking words of blasphemy against Moses, and against God, against the law and the temple: that Jesus would destroy the temple. These accusations were forged; for the apostles themselves still frequented the temple, and Jesus came to fulfil the law, as to its moral precepts. Wi.

VER. 13. It was true that Jesus would destroy the place, and change their traditions, yet they were false witnesses, because they deposed, that Stephen had made these assertions, which he had not, purposely to excite the Jews to rise up against him, and put him to death. Besides, had Stephen spoken what was advanced against him, they still would have been false witnesses, for the words were in fact words of truth, which these suborned men called, words of blasphemy. See v. 11.

VER. 15. Saw his face, as it were the face of an angel. All in the council, or sanhedrim, saw an extraordinary and charming brightness in the countenance of Stephen, which struck them with admiration and fear. Wi.—Angel. His face shone with a wonderful brightness, an emblem of his interior perfection. In this he was like Moses, whose countenance was so bright, that the Jews could not steadfastly behold it. By this the beholders had an opportunity of being converted, had they so wished, or were rendered inexcusable for their neglect. It is also a testimony of the great sanctity of the deacon. This same miracle is not recorded to have happened to any other but Moses, and our Lord at his transfiguration. D. Dion. Carthus.—Although this appearance, in an inferior degree, has been not unfrequently observed in the constant and cheerful countenance of the martyrs before their persecutors, and of privileged saints, whilst they were happily employed in their intimate communications with heaven.

* V. 1. Græcorum Ἀλλημιστῶν, not Ἀλλημῶν. See also Acts ix. 29. and xi. v. 20. See Legh Critica Sacra.

† 9. Libertinorum, Διβερινῶν, which Greek word is taken from the Latin. S. Chrys. hom. xv. says, ἀπελευθερωτοὶ οὐκ ἔτι καλοῦνται, &c.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Are these things so? The high priest speaks after this mild manner, being either terrified, or charmed with his angelical countenance. S. Stephen's design in this discourse, was to shew them, first, that he was falsely accused of speaking either against Moses, or the law, for which he shews so great a veneration. 2. He puts them in mind, that the true worship of God may subsist without a temple, as it did in the time of Abraham, and the patriarchs, be-ear. The God of glory appeared to our father, Abraham, when he was in Mesopotamia, before he dwelt in Charan,

3 And said to him: ^aGo forth out of thy country, and from thy kindred, and come into the land which I will shew thee.

4 Then he went out of the land of the Chaldeans, and dwelt in Charan. And from thence, after his father was dead, he removed him into this land, in which you now dwell.

5 And he gave him no inheritance in it, no not the pace of a foot: but he promised to give it to him in possession, and to his seed after him, when he had no child.

6 And God said to him: ^bThat his seed should sojourn in a strange country, and that they should bring them under bondage, and treat them ill for four hundred years:

7 And the nation which they shall serve, I will judge, said the Lord: and after these things they shall go out and shall serve me in this place.

8 ^cAnd he gave him the covenant of circumcision: and so he begot Isaac, and circumcised him the eighth day: and ^dIsaac, Jacob: and Jacob, the twelve patriarchs.

9 And the patriarchs, moved with envy, ^esold Joseph into Egypt: and God was with him.

10 And he delivered him out of all his tribulations: and gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh, king of Egypt, and he appointed him governor over Egypt, and over all his house.

11 Now there came a famine over all Egypt, and Chanaan, and great tribulation: and our fathers found no food.

12 ^fBut when Jacob had heard that there was corn in Egypt, he sent our fathers first:

13 ^gAnd at the second time Joseph was known by his brethren, and his kindred was made known to Pharaoh.

^a Gen. xii. 1.—^b Gen. xv. 18.—^c Gen. xvii. 10.—^d Gen. xxi. 24.—^e Gen. xxv. 25. Gen. xxix. 32. and xxxv. 22.—^f Gen. xxxvii. 28.—^g Gen. xli. 37.—^h Gen. xlii. 2.

fore the law was given, or the temple built. 3. That as their forefathers had been rebellious to Moses, and disobedient to the prophets, whom they many times persecuted even to death, so they had lately resisted, persecuted, and crucified their Messias. Wi.

VER. 7. Not the pace of a foot; not so much as a foot of land, that is, to dwell in, th. gh he bought there a place to bury in. Gen. xxiii. 9. Wi.

VER. 6. For four hundred years, counting from the birth of Isaac, which was twenty-five years after the call and promises made to Abraham. It is certain the Israelites were not four hundred years in Egypt. Wi.—Four hundred. These words are taken from the fifteenth chapter of Genesis, in which Moses mentions the same number of years. This calculation is made from the entry of Abraham into Chanaan, to the departure of the Israelites out of Egypt. Strictly, the Israelites did not remain in Egypt more than two hundred and fifteen years.

VER. 7. The nation which they shall serve, I will judge. The meaning is, that God would afflict the Egyptians with divers plagues, or visible punishments, before they dismissed the Israelites. Wi.

VER. 8. The covenant, or the testament, and alliance of circumcision, by which the Israelites should be known to be the elect people of God. Wi.—Literally, he gave them the alliance of circumcision; he made with him an alliance, of which circumcision was the seal. V.

VER. 10. Gave him favour and wisdom in the sight of Pharaoh. Some understand divine graces, and gifts of prophecy, and the like: others, that he made him find favour in the sight of king Pharaoh, who appointed him to be governor of Egypt. Wi.

VER. 16. Which Abraham bought . . . of the sons of Hemor, the son of Sichem. This purchase made by Abraham must be different from the purchase of a field made afterwards by Jacob. Gen. xxxiii. 19. See a Lapidé, the author of the Analysis, dissert. 23. P. Alleman, &c. Wi.—Abraham bought. There must be an error of the copyist in this verse. Either the word Abraham ought to be omitted, or changed into Jacob. For it is plain, from Gen. xxxiii. 19. that the (1444)

14 And Joseph sending, called thither Jacob, his father, and all his kindred, seventy-five souls.

15 ^hSo Jacob went down into Egypt, and ⁱhe died, and our fathers.

16 And they were translated to Sichem, and were laid in the sepulchre, ^jwhich Abraham bought for a sum of money of the sons of Hemor the son of Sichem.

17 And when the time of the promise drew near, which God had promised to Abraham, ^kthe people increased and were multiplied in Egypt, 18 Till another king arose in Egypt who knew not Joseph.

19 The same dealing craftily with our race, afflicted our fathers, that they should expose their children, to the end they might not be kept alive.

20 ^lAt the same time was Moses born, and he was acceptable to God, and he was nourished three months in his father's house.

21 But he being exposed, Pharaoh's daughter took him up, and nourished him for her own son.

22 And Moses was instructed in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and he was powerful in his words, and in his deeds.

23 And when he was full forty years old, it came into his heart to visit his brethren, the children of Israel.

24 ^mAnd having seen one suffer an injury, he defended him: and striking the Egyptian, he avenged him who suffered the injury.

25 And he thought that his brethren understood that God, by his hand, would save them: but they understood it not.

26 ⁿAnd the next day he shewed himself to them when they were at strife: and would have reconciled them in peace, saying; Men, ye are brethren, why hurt ye one another?

27 But he that did the injury to his neighbour, thrust him away, saying: Who hath appointed thee prince and judge over us?

^k Gen. xlv. 3.—^l Gen. xlv. 5.—^m Gen. xlix. 32.—ⁿ Gen. xxiii. 16. and l. 5. and 18. Josue xxiv. 32.—^o Ex. i. 7.—^p Ex. ii. 2. Heb. xi. 23.—^q Ex. ii. 12.—^r Ex. ii. 13.

latter bought the land from the sons of Hemor. The Hebrew says, he bought it for one hundred kesitha, which some translate pieces of silver; others, lambs. As for Abraham, and Jacob, they were buried in the cavern of Mambré, which Abraham had purchased from the children of Heth. Gen. xxiii. Calmet.—It is supposed that originally the name of Jacob was given, abridged JAB, and that the first letter having disappeared, the two remaining letters were taken by misprision, for the abridgment of the name of Abraham. Hemor was the father of Sichem, and here the Greek text simply calls him Hemor of Sichem. V.

VER. 19. Dealing craftily, circumventing craftily, afflicting, and endeavouring to extirpate the race of the Israelites. Wi.

VER. 20. Moses . . . was acceptable to God. Greatly favoured both with gifts of nature and grace. Some expound it, was extremely fair or beautiful. Wi.

VER. 21. Philo believes that the princess feigned him to be her own child, Moses denied that he was, and would not take advantage of this adoption. Heb. xi. 24.

VER. 22. In words and in deeds. Moses was persuasive and powerful in reasoning; but had an impediment in his speech, as we know from Exod. iv. 10. and vi. 12. He possessed, moreover, strength, energy, and grandeur, in his discourse. Of this we have abundant proofs in his books. He is imitable in narrating, as often as he writes laws, composes canticles, or makes harangues. He is simple, clear, sublime, vehement, concise, prolix, and rapid, in turns, as the nature of his subject requires. He was likewise powerful in work. All his conduct was wise, virtuous, enlightened, as well in affairs of policy, as in war. He was an able captain, before he put himself at the head of the Israelites. Calmet.—Josephus assures us that he became a great conqueror.

VER. 23. Moses fled upon this word; because he perceived the murder he had committed was become public, though he thought it to be secret. Menochius. He fled, to avoid the anger of the king, into Madian, where during his sojourning, he had two sons of Sephora, whom he married there. V.—Moses or Moyses, in the Egyptian dialect, means, saved from water. He slew the Egyptian by 28 Wilt thou kill me, as thou didst yesterday kill the Egyptian?

29 And Moses fled upon this word: and became a stranger in the land of Madian, where he begat two sons.

30 And when forty years were expired, there appeared to him in the desert of Mount Sinai an Angel, in a flame of fire, in a bush.

31 And Moses seeing it, wondered at the sight: and as he drew near to view it, the voice of the Lord came to him, saying;

32 I am the God of thy fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. And Moses being terrified, durst not behold.

33 And the Lord said to him; Loose the shoes from off thy feet; for the place wherein thou standest, is holy ground.

34 Seeing, I have seen the affliction of my people, which is in Egypt, and I have heard their groaning, and am come down to deliver them. And now come, and I will send thee into Egypt.

35 This Moses, whom they refused, saying, Who hath appointed thee prince and judge? him God sent prince and redeemer, by the hand of the Angel, who appeared to him in the bush.

36 He brought them out, doing wonders and signs in the land of Egypt, and in the Red sea, and in the desert for forty years.

37 This is that Moses who said to the children of Israel; A prophet will God raise up to you of your own brethren, as myself: him shall you hear.

38 This is he who was in the church in the wilderness, with the Angel, who spoke to him on Mount Sinai, and with our fathers: who received the words of life to give to us.

39 Whom our fathers would not obey: but thrust him away, and in their hearts turned back into Egypt,

40 Saying to Aaron; Make us gods to go before us: for as to this Moses, who brought us out of the land of Egypt, we know not what is become of him.

41 And they made a calf in those days, and offered sacrifice to the idol, and rejoiced in the works of their own hands.

42 And God turned, and gave them up to serve the host of heaven, as it is written in the book of the prophets; Did you offer victims and sacrifices to me for forty years in the desert, O house of Israel?

43 And you took unto you the tabernacle of Moloch, and the star of your god; Rempham, figures which you made to adore them. And I will carry you away beyond Babylon.

44 The tabernacle of the testimony was with our fathers in the desert, as God ordained for them, speaking to Moses that he should make it according to the form which he had seen.

45 Which also our fathers receiving, brought in with Jesus, into the possession of the Gentiles, whom God drove out before the face of our fathers, until the days of David:

46 Who found grace before God, and desired to find a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

47 But Solomon built him a house.

48 Yet the most High dwelleth not in houses made by hands, as the prophet saith;

49 Heaven is my throne, and the earth my foot-

^a Exod. iii. 2.—^b Exod. vii. 8. and ix. 10. and xi. 14.—^c Deut. xviii. 15.

^d Exod. xix. 8.—^e Exod. xxxii. 1.—^f Amos v. 25.—^g Exod. xxv. 40.

^h Josue iii. 14. Heb. viii. 9.—ⁱ 1 Kings xvi. 13.—^k Ps. cxxxix. 5.—^l 2 Kings vi. 1. 1 Par. xvii. 12.—^m Infra xvii. 24.—ⁿ Isai. lxvi. 1.

particular inspiration of God, as a prelude to his delivering the people from oppression and bondage. v. 25. supra.—But such particular and extraordinary examples are not to be imitated. Ch.—He was inspired to stand up, as the Egyptian law required, in defence of the innocent. S. Thom. ii. 2. q. 60.

VER. 30. In a flame of fire, in a bush. Lit. in the fire of a flame of the bush. The sense must be, that the bush seemed on fire, and in a flame, and yet was not consumed. Wi.

VER. 33. Loose the shoes. This was a method of testifying respect among the eastern nations. The Mahometans do not wear their shoes in their mosques. The Jewish priests served in the temple with their shoes off. The angel who appeared to Josue ordered him also to take off his shoes. Jos. v. 16. If the apparition of an angel, or of God himself, could make the place and ground holy so as to deserve external signs of respect, and veneration from Moses; how much more the corporal birth, abode, and miracles of the Son of God in Jewry, and the blessed Sacrament, must make that country, and all Catholic chapels and altars, holy! Is it not then the height of blindness to tax with superstition, the reverence Christians pay to things or places, rendered holy by the presence, or wonderful operations of God.

VER. 35. Moses, whom they refused. Lit. denied. So have you rejected, and denied Jesus, of whom Moses prophesied, when he said that God would raise up to them a prophet like to himself, and commanded them to hear him. Wi.—Redeemer. In Greek ῥυτὴρ; Protestant version, Deliverer; though the learned Polus, in his Synopsis Criticorum, on this place, says, "that no greater injury is done to God, by calling Moses a Redeemer, in this place, than by calling him a Mediator, in Gal. iii. 19. He is called a Redeemer, says this learned Protestant commentator, in as much as he led forth, and preserved the people of God safe by the blood of a lamb, and thus exhibited a figure of the true redemption, through the blood of Christ." We all own that Jesus Christ, as having paid the ransom of our delivery with his own blood, is, strictly speaking, our only true Redeemer, and Advocate with his Father, who asks and obtains all things immediately by his own merit; but this does not exclude the prayers of the saints, both alive and dead. Did not the apostles pray for the people, and desire the people to pray for them? "Our Lord Jesus Christ still intercedes for us, and all the martyrs that are with him, pray for us: nor will their intercession cease, till we cease our groanings," says S. Augustine, in Pa. lxxxv. in fine.

VER. 38. This is he who was in the Church in the wilderness, after God had by him delivered their Fathers out of their slavery in Egypt.—An angel spoke to him on Mount Sinai. By this S. Stephen owns that the law was given by an angel to Moses: and also shews how falsely he was accused to have spoken against Moses, or against the law.

VER. 39. Whom our Fathers would not obey, murmuring, and rebelling from time to time. And in their hearts turned back into Egypt, as they shewed, by wishing themselves there again. Wi.

VER. 40. Saying to Aaron, make us gods: forcing him, in a manner, to make them the golden calf, while Moses was receiving the law from God. Wi.

VER. 42. And God turned. Turned as it were from them, punishing them, by permitting them to serve the host of heaven, the sun, moon, and stars. Wi.

VER. 43. And you, that is, your forefathers, took unto you the tabernacle of Moloch. He reproaches the Jews with their idolatry and worship of different false gods, from time to time, notwithstanding God's comminations by the prophets, of which he puts them in mind by these words, and I will translate you beyond Babylon. The prophet Amos, c. v. v. 27. out of whom S. Stephen takes this citation, says, beyond Damascus, but the sense is the same, being a prediction, that the ten tribes of Israel should be carried away captives beyond Damascus by the Assyrians, and even beyond Babylon into Media, Persia, &c. Wi.

VER. 44. The tabernacle of the testimony, in which was the ark of the covenant, as they were made by Moses, which were moved from place to place with the Israelites in the wilderness; and which Jesus, or Josue, brought with the people, into the possessions of the Gentiles, that is, into the land of Chanaan, which had been before possessed by the Gentiles.—This tabernacle, in which was kept the ark, remained with the Israelites till the time of David, or rather of Solomon, who built the temple. Wi.

VER. 48. But the most High dwelleth not in houses made by hands. God is every where, nor is his presence confined to the temple, which was already once destroyed; and what if it be destroyed again, as Christ foretold? God must still be adored, worshipped and served, as he was before the temple was first built, which was only by Solomon. Wi.—Dwelleth not in houses. That is, so as to stand in need of earthly dwellings, or to be contained or circumscribed by them. Though otherwise, by his immense divinity, he is in our houses, and every where else; and Christ in his humanity dwelt in houses: and is now on our altars. Ch.—It is not so much for God, as for ourselves, that we build temples, and it is a pure effect of his goodness and mercy, that he permits us to build them to him. Places consecrated in a particular manner to his service, where he gives the most sensible marks of his presence, are of assistance to us, when we render our homage, address our vows, and offer our prayers to the Deity. S. Stephen's design in this part of his discourse, is to prove that the true religion may subsist without the temple; therefore, that he could not be guilty of blasphemy, supposing he had even used the words which the malice of the Jews put into his mouth, that Jesus of Nazareth would destroy this place. Chap. vi. 14.

VER. 51. Ye stiff-necked, and uncircumcised in heart. S. Stephen, inspired by stool. What house will you build me, saith the Lord, or what is the place of my rest?

50 Hath not my hand made all these things?

51 Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye always resist the Holy Ghost: as your fathers did, so do you also.

52 Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? And they have slain them who foretold of the coming of the Just One: of whom you have been now the betrayers and murderers:

53 Who have received the law by the disposition of Angels, and have not kept it.

54 Now hearing these things, they were cut to the heart, and they gnashed with their teeth at him.

55 But he being full of the Holy Ghost, looking up steadfastly to heaven, saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing at the right hand of God. And he said: Behold I see the heavens opened, and the Son of man standing at the right hand of God.

56 And they crying out with a loud voice, stopped their ears, and with one accord rushed violently upon him.

57 And casting him out of the city, they stoned him: and the witnesses laid down their garments at the feet of a young man, whose name was Saul.

58 And they stoned Stephen, invoking and saying; Lord Jesus, receive my spirit.

59 And falling on his knees, he cried out with a loud voice, saying; Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell asleep in the Lord. And Saul was consenting to his death.

CHAP. VIII.

Philip converts the Samaritans, and baptizes the eunuch.

AND *at that time there was raised a great persecution against the church, which was at Jerusalem, the Holy Ghost, knowing he should die a martyr, boldly reproaches them for persecuting the prophets, for putting to death the just one, that is, the Messiah, foretold by the prophets. Wi.—Observe the holy indignation of S. Stephen at the obduracy of the incredulous Jews!

VER. 54. They were cut to the heart: exasperated even to rage and madness. See c. v, v. 33. gnashing their teeth with indignation. Wi.

VER. 55. This is the comfort of all martyrs. B.—This the support of every Christian under the severest trials of either mind or body: this the sweetener of every burthen and cross.

VER. 56. Stopped their ears, crying out, blasphemy: and they stoned him to death. He praying for them, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit, in imitation of his Lord and Master, our Saviour Christ. And reposed in the Lord. Lit. sleep. In most Greek copies are now wanting, in the Lord; but it is no doubt the sense. Wi.—Rushed in violently upon him. This proceeding, without any sentence, or form of law, was altogether irregular; and never used in the better times of the Jewish government. This was called, judgment of zeal, and only allowed in one instance, viz. when any one came to draw the people to idolatry. Afterwards, this kind of proceeding was extended to other crimes. See Deut. xiii. 6. Num. xxiv. 1 Mac. xi. 24, &c.

VER. 58. Invoking. See with what arms S. Stephen defended himself against the fury of his enemies. He put on charity for a breast-plate, and by that came off victorious. By his love of God, he resisted the enraged Jews; by the love he bore his neighbour, he prayed for those that stoned him. Through charity, he admonished them of their errors, in order to their amendment; through charity, he besought the divine goodness not to punish their crimes against him. Leaping on charity, he overcame the cruelty of Saul, and merited to have him a companion in heaven, who had been his chief persecutor on earth. S. Fulgentius, Serm. de S. Steph.—We here again see the powerful intercession of the saints; “for,” says S. Augustin, “if Stephen had not thus prayed, the Church would not have to glory in a S. Paul. Si Stephanus non sic orasset, Ecclesia Paulum non haberet.” Serm. i. de S. Steph.

* V. 8. Testamentum, τὴν διαθήκην. See Heb. ix. 16.

† V. 20. Gratus Deo. ἀρετὸς τῷ θεῷ. Acceptable to God. It may also signify, beautiful in the sight of God, that is, in the style of the Scriptures, very beautiful.

‡ V. 30. In igne flammæ rubi, ἐν φλογὶ πυρὸς βάρου. In flamma ignis rubi.

§ V. 38. In the assembly. Lit. in Ecclesia, ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ.

|| V. 57. Obdormivit in Domino. ἐκοιμήθη.

and they were all dispersed through the countries of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles.

2 And devout men took care of Stephen's funeral, and made great mourning over him.

3 But Saul ravaged the church, entering into the houses, and, dragging away men and women, committed them to prison.

4 They, therefore, who were dispersed, went about preaching the word of God.

5 And Philip going down to the city of Samaria, preached Christ to them.

6 And the people were attentive to those things which were said by Philip, with one accord hearing, and seeing the miracles which he did.

7 For unclean spirits, crying with a loud voice, went out of many who were possessed.

8 And many taken with the palsy, and that were lame, were healed.

9 There was therefore great joy in that city. But a certain man, named Simon, who before had been a magician in the city, seducing the people of Samaria, giving out that he was some great one:

10 To whom all hearkened, from the least to the greatest, saying; This man is the power of God, which is called great.

11 And they were attentive to him, because for a long time he had bewitched them with his sorceries.

12 But when they had believed Philip preaching of the kingdom of God, in the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women.

13 Then Simon himself believed also: and being baptized, he adhered to Philip. Seeing also the wonders and exceeding great miracles which were done, he was struck with amazement.

* A. D. 33.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Were dispersed. During this great persecution of the Church, those who could not conceal themselves, were dispersed into different countries. Thus did the Almighty make use of the malice of his enemies, to the greater exaltation and glory of his own name. For those who fled, carried with them the light of the gospel, wherever they went. Tirinus.—They were burning torches, which communicated of their holy fire to every place, in which they were scattered. S. Aug. Serm. cxvi.—Thus was the gospel disseminated from Jerusalem into all Judea and Samaria.—And Samaria. Though our Saviour in his life time had forbid them to preach to the Samaritans, (Matt. x. 5.) they now knew that the time of that precept was past. Wi.

VER. 2. Took care. In an ancient work, which gives the history of the finding of S. Stephen's body, generally considered authentic, and printed at the end of the 7th vol. of S. Augustin's works, we find the following account. “Stephen having been stoned without the northern gate, lay there without burial one day and a night, according to the order of the Jewish rulers, that his body might become a prey to birds and beasts, but God did not suffer either to touch it.”—“Then I, Gamaliel, compassionating these servants of Jesus Christ, and desiring to have some share in the faith and religion of this holy man, sent among the Jews some Christians who feared God, dwelling at Jerusalem, to take away privately the body, and bring it in my chariot to my country house, where it was deposited in my tomb towards the east, and we mourned over it for forty days,” &c. It is an injury to pray for a martyr, who ought to assist us by his prayers. S. Aug. Serm. xvii.—We see great devotion used in burying his body, and four centuries afterwards, at the finding and translating thereof. Very many miracles were performed on that occasion, as S. Augustin witnesses in his work de Civitate Dei. l. xxii. c. 8. and Serm. de S. Steph. T. viii.

VER. 10. This man is the power of God, which is called (that is, which is truly) great. Simon pretended to be God, and the great God. See S. Iren. l. i. c. 20.

VER. 11. He had bewitched them with his sorceries, or magic*: he had put them out of their wits, turned their heads, charmed them, stupefied them. Wi.

VER. 13. Simon himself believed. That is, pretended to believe, that he might obtain the power of speaking tongues, and working miracles, which was frequently imparted to the faithful at baptism. Menochius.—He was filled with pride and presumption, says S. Aug. He wished to imitate the prodigies of the apostles, but loved not their justice, nor the truth they preached. He entered into the Church, and desired baptism, not to obtain the grace of justification, but to have an occasion of extolling himself. He wished to walk in wonders above himself. In Psalm cxxx.

14 Now when the apostles, who were in Jerusalem, had heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent to them Peter and John.

15 Who when they were come, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost:

16 For he was not yet come upon any one of them, but they were only baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

17 Then they laid their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost.

18 And when Simon saw, that by the imposition of the hands of the apostles, the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money,

19 Saying: Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I shall lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said to him:

20 May thy money perish with thee: because thou hast thought that the gift of God could be purchased with money.

21 Thou hast no part, nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God.

22 Do penance, therefore, for this thy wickedness: and pray to God, if perhaps this thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee.

23 For I see thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bonds of iniquity.

24 Then Simon answering, said; Pray you to the Lord for me, that none of these things which you have spoken, may come upon me.

25 And they indeed having testified, and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel to many countries of the Samaritans.

VER. 15. The Holy Ghost, which the apostles came to give the Samaritan Neophytes, was not the spirit of grace, of justice, and of sanctity, for that they had received at baptism; but the spirit of strength, to confess with confidence and freedom the name of Jesus, and the supernatural and miraculous graces, usually at that time granted to the faithful, by the imposition of hands. Philip did not administer the sacrament, because he could not; he was not a bishop. Hence now in the Church, we see only the chief pastors do it, præcipuos et non alios videmus hoc facere. See S. Chrysost. hom. xviii. in Acta.—There is no mention here, it is true, of unction, but the most venerable antiquity clearly specifies it. S. Cyprian, in the third age, says: "it is moreover necessary, that he who has been baptized, should be anointed, that having received the chrism, that is, the unction, he may be the anointed of God." Ep. lxx.—In the next age, S. Pacianus writes: "Do you say that this (the power of remitting sins) was granted only to the apostles! Then I say, that they alone could baptize, and give the Holy Spirit, for to them alone was the command of doing it given. If, therefore, the right of conferring baptism, and of anointing, descended to their successors, to them also has come the power of binding and loosing." Ep. 1. ad Sym. Bibl. Max. T. iv. p. 307.

VER. 17. They received the Holy Ghost. Not but that they had received the grace of the Holy Ghost at their baptism; but not that plenitude of grace, and those gifts, which they received from bishops in the sacrament of confirmation. This sacrament, as S. Chrys. observes, † S. Philip, the deacon, had not power to give. Wi.

VER. 18. Simon . . . offered them money. From hence it is called the sin of simony, to buy, sell, or give money for benefices, and spiritual things. It was vanity that made Simon desire this power. Wi.—Hence to give or receive money in exchange, or as a price for any spiritual good whatever, is justly esteemed sinful. It is called simony, from the name of the person, who was first engaged in this sin. A.—Simon acts the part of a tempter to the apostles, and wishes to draw them into prevarication, by offering money for what was above all price, and of what they were not the proprietors, but the dispensers. S. Clement. Rom.

VER. 20. May thy money perish with thee; or go with thee to perdition. This was a prophecy, says S. Chrys. of S. Peter, who saw him incorrigible, and that he would not repent. Wi.

VER. 21. Nor lot in this matter. Lit. in this saying. Wi.

VER. 22. That perhaps this thought of thy heart may be forgiven thee. The word perhaps, as the interpreters commonly observe on this and other places, many times does not imply any doubt or uncertainty. There could be no doubt, says S. Chrys. only as to his repenting: if he repented, it is certain he would find remission of his sins. Wi.—S. Augustin (ep. cviii.) understands the text, μετανοήσας ἀνά, &c. of penance done for heinous offences in the primitive Church, and teaches us to translate it thus, as it is in the Vulg. both here and 2 Cor. xii. 21. Apoc. ix. 21. and adds, that very good men do daily penance for venial sins, by fasting, prayer, and alms.

26 Now an Angel of the Lord spoke to Philip, saying: Arise, and go towards the south, to the way that goeth down from Jerusalem to Gaza; this is desert.

27 And rising up, he went. And behold a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch, of great authority under Candace, queen of the Ethiopians, who had charge over all her treasures, had come to Jerusalem to adore:

28 And he was returning, sitting in his chariot, and reading Isaias, the prophet.

29 And the Spirit said to Philip: Go near, and join thyself to that chariot.

30 And Philip running thither, heard him reading the prophet, Isaias, and he said: Thinkest thou that thou understandest what thou readest?

31 He said: How can I, unless some one shew me? And he desired Philip to come up, and sit with him.

32 And the place of the Scripture, which he was reading, was this: *As a sheep he was led to the slaughter: and like a lamb without a voice before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth.

33 In humility his judgment was taken away. Who shall declare his generation, for his life shall be taken away from the earth?

34 And the eunuch answering Philip, said: I beseech thee, of whom doth the prophet speak this? of himself, or of some other?

35 Then Philip, opening his mouth, and beginning at that Scripture, preached to him Jesus.

36 And as they went on their way, they came to a certain water: and the eunuch saith; See, here is water; what hindereth me from being baptized?

* Isai. liii. 7.

VER. 23. In the gall of bitterness. In the bitter gall of hypocrisy, in the bonds, fetters, and chains of sin and iniquity. Wi.

VER. 24. Pray . . . for me. Instead of following the advice of S. Peter, he begs them to pray, not that God would touch his heart, and give him repentance; but that the evils might not fall upon him. In this he is a true model of false penitents, who hate not the sin, but fear the punishment, which is the consequence of it. He afterwards left the East, and went to Rome, under the reign of Claudius. SS. Justin, Irenæus, and others say, the senate adored him as a divinity. Having undertaken to fly in the air, in the presence of the emperor and senate, when he had raised himself to a certain height, he was brought down by the prayers of SS. Peter and Paul, and died a few days after, of the wounds he received by the fall. Calmet.—See also Euseb. Theod. S. Aug. &c.

VER. 26. This is desert. In construction, whether we regard the Latin or Greek, to be desert, may either agree to the way leading to Gaza, or the city itself, which formerly had been almost destroyed. Wi.—To the site of old Gaza, which was then a desert; above which was built the new Gaza, nearer the sea. V.—Beza frequently makes very free with S. Luke, and in his annotations, an. 1556, says the text is wrong; it cannot be so.

VER. 27. An eunuch. It is likely a proselyte converted to the Jewish religion. He shews his zeal and devotion, says S. Chrys. not only by coming to Jerusalem, but by reading the prophets in his chariot. Wi.

VER. 31. How can I, unless some one shew me, &c. or be a guide to me, as in the Greek. Let every one, and especially the unlearned, take good notice of these words, not to wrest the Scriptures to his own perdition. To follow his own private judgment, or his private spirit, is to make choice of a blind and incompetent guide, as to the sense of the Scriptures, and the mysteries of faith. See the preface to the gospel of S. John. Wi.—It appears this eunuch was not one of those, who are now so commonly seen, who think the Scripture is every where plain, and the sense open to every body. Such would do much better to acknowledge, that they stand in need of a guide. Grotius, hic.—S. Jerom, in his letter to Paulinus, printed at the head of the Latin Bibles, shews the necessity of an interpreter. The apostles themselves could not understand the Scriptures till Christ gave them the knowledge; tunc aperuit illis sensum ut intelligerent scripturas. Lu. xxiv. 45.

VER. 32-33. As a sheep, or a lamb, &c. The eunuch, by divine Providence, was now reading the 53d chap. of Isaias, which is of Christ, and his sufferings.—In humility his judgment was taken away. The sense seems to be, that Christ having humbled himself, so as to undergo an unjust judgment, or condemnation to die on the cross, hath been again raised from the dead, and delivered from that judgment by his glorious resurrection, and ascension. Wi.

VER. 36. Here is water. This shews, that baptism is to be given with water. Wi.

VER. 37. If thou believest, &c. The Scripture many times mentions one disposition, when others no less necessary are supposed, as here a sorrow for sins

37 And Philip said: If thou believest with thy whole heart, thou mayest. And he answering, said: I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God.

38 And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they both went down into the water, Philip, and the eunuch, and he baptized him.

39 And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord took away Philip, and the eunuch saw him no more. And he went on his way rejoicing.

40 But Philip was found in Azotus, and passing through, he preached the gospel to all the cities, till he came to Cæsarea.

CHAP. IX.

Paul's conversion and zeal. Peter heals Æneas, and raises Tabitha to life.

AND *Saul, still breathing out threatenings, and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went to the high priest,

2 And asked of him letters to Damascus to the synagogues: that if he found any men and women of this way, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem.

3 ^bAnd as he went on his journey, it came to pass that he drew near to Damascus: and suddenly a light from heaven shined round about him.

4 And falling on the ground, he heard a voice saying to him: Saul, Saul, why dost thou persecute me?

5 And he said: Who art thou, Lord? And he: I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest. It is hard for thee to kick against the goad.

6 And he, trembling and astonished, said: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?

7 And the Lord said to him: Arise, and go into the city, and there it shall be told thee what thou must do. Now the men who went in company with him, stood amazed, hearing indeed a voice, but seeing no one.

8 And Saul arose from the ground, and his eyes being open, he saw nothing. But they leading him by the hands, brought him to Damascus.

* A. D. 84. Gal. i. 13.—^b Infra xxii. 6. and xxii. 10. and xxvi. 12.

a firm hope, love of God, &c. Wi.—Faith is thus seen to be a necessary pre-disposition in the adult, for the reception of baptism. They must answer for themselves; but infants are baptized in the faith of the Church. Their sponsors, who receive them from the font, answer for them. D. Dionys. Carthus.—And as the defilement was not personal, but that of others, so are they purified by the faith of others.

VER. 38. We are not to suppose that in the administration of the sacraments in the primitive Church, nothing more was done than what we read, totidem litteris, in the Scripture. S. Augustin answers this, when he says: "inasmuch that he saith, Philip baptized him, he would have it understood, that all things were done, which though in the Scripture, for brevity sake, they are not mentioned, yet by order of tradition we know were to be done."

* V. 11. Dementasset, ἐξερῶσαι abrois. So v. 15. Stupens admirabatur, the same word, ἐξερῶσαι.

† V. 17. S. Chrys. hom. xviii. ὅδὲ γὰρ εἶπεν ἑξουσιῶν.

‡ V. 31. Et quomodo possum, nisi aliquis ostenderit mihi? ἔδωκε γὰρ τὴν ἐξουσίαν αὐτῷ.

CHAP. IX. VER. 4. Why dost thou persecute me? My disciples, my brothers, and my friends. The head speaks for the members, and by a figure of speech, calls them itself. S. Aug. in Pa. xxx.—Here Jesus Christ identifies himself with his Church, as on a former occasion, when he said: he that heareth you, heareth me; and he that despiseth you, despiseth me. Lu. x. 16.

VER. 5. To kick against the goad. Others translate against the pricks; others, against the sting. The metaphor is taken from oxen kicking, when pricked to go forward. Wi.

VER. 7. There it shall be told thee, &c. The Almighty having established a Church, and ministry, the depositories of his doctrines, does not, even on this extraordinary occasion, transgress his own laws; but sends him to the ministers of religion, that instruction may be imparted through them, as through its proper channel. This observation is worthy the notice of the self-inspired of the present day, who pretend to receive their light direct from heaven. Nothing (1448)

9 And he was there three days, without sight, and he neither eat nor drank.

10 Now there was a certain disciple at Damascus, by name Ananias: and the Lord said to him in a vision: Ananias. And he said: Behold I am here, Lord.

11 And the Lord said to him: Arise, and go into the street, that is called Strait, and seek in the house of Judas, one named Saul, of Tarsus: for behold he prayeth.

12 (And he saw a man named Ananias coming in, and laying his hands upon him, that he might receive his sight.)

13 But Ananias answered: Lord, I have heard from many of this man, how great evils he hath done to thy saints in Jerusalem:

14 And here he hath authority from the chief priests to bind all, that invoke thy name.

15 And the Lord said to him: Go, for this man is a vessel of election to me, to carry my name before the Gentiles, and kings, and children of Israel.

16 For I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name.

17 And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house: and laying his hands on him, he said: Saul, brother, the Lord Jesus hath sent me, he who appeared to thee in the way as thou camest, that thou mayest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost.

18 And immediately there fell from his eyes as it were scales, and he received his sight: and rising up, he was baptized.

19 And when he had taken meat, he was strengthened. And he was with the disciples who were at Damascus, for some days.

20 And immediately he preached Jesus in the synagogues, that he is the Son of God.

21 And all were astonished that heard him, and said: Is not this he who in Jerusalem attacked violently those who called upon that name: and came hither for can be more opposite to the spirit of the gospel than such delusion. A.—Hear the great S. Augustin: "Paul, though with the divine and heavenly voice prostrated and instructed, yet was sent to a man to receive the sacraments, and to be joined to the Church." De Doct. Chris. l. i. in prom.—Hearing, &c. This may be reconciled with what is said in the 22d chap. by supposing they heard only S. Paul speak, or heard only a confused noise, which they could not understand. Calmet.

1 Cor. xv. 8. 2 Cor. xii. 2.—^a Infra xxii. 12.

VER. 8. And his eyes being open, either by himself, or by others, he saw nothing. See the circumstances related again, e. xxii. and xxvi. Wi.

VER. 9. Three days. During the time, he neither eat nor drank, to testify his sorrow for his past conduct. He likewise spent the time in prayer, to prepare himself for the reception of grace. S. Chrys. hom. xix.

VER. 12. And he saw a man, &c. This verse, which is by way of a parenthesis, contains the words of the historian, S. Luke, telling us what S. Paul saw in a vision, and what the Spirit at the same time revealed to Ananias. Wi.—This verse is a parenthesis. It contains not the words of Christ to Ananias, but S. Luke here relates what was shewn to Paul, at the time Ananias entered. This vision was shewn to him, that he might know Ananias was sent by God. Menochius.

VER. 15. A vessel of election. A chosen elect vessel, and minister of the gospel. Wi.—Ἐκδοὺς ἐκλογῆς, an organ, or instrument. Thus Polybius uses the word, speaking of Damocles, ὅδὲ ἦν ὑπερπεριτὸν ἐκδοὺς, he was an excellent and choice character.

VER. 17. Laying his hands on him. This imposition of hands, made use of on different occasions, was to pray that he might receive his sight, as well as the grace of the Holy Ghost, which God sometimes gave to persons not yet baptized, as to Cornelius. Acts x. 44. Wi.—This imposition of hands, was not the same as that, by which the faithful were confirmed, or ordained ministers, but a ceremony commonly used by the apostles to restore health to the sick. If Saul, in consequence, receives the Holy Ghost, it was an extraordinary miraculous event, which was not an unfrequent circumstance in the infancy of Christianity. The Almighty, who establishes the laws of grace, can dispense with them himself whenever he pleases. Calmet.

PALESTINE

in the time of CHRIST

Scale
English 10 Miles

A

33

B

32

C

31

A

33

B

32

C

31

this purpose, that he might lead them bound to the chief priests?

22 But Saul increased much more in strength, and confounded the Jews who dwelt at Damascus, affirming that this is the Christ.

23 And when many days were passed, the Jews consulted together to kill him.

24 But their laying in wait was made known to Saul. And they guarded the gates also day and night, that they might kill him.

25 But the disciples taking him by night, conveyed him away by the wall, letting him down in a basket.

26 And when he was come into Jerusalem, he tried to join himself to the disciples, and they were all afraid of him, not believing that he was a disciple.

27 But Barnabas took him and brought him to the apostles, and related to them how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken to him, and how in Damascus he had acted confidently in the name of Jesus.

28 And he was with them, coming in and going out, in Jerusalem, and acting confidently in the name of the Lord.

29 He spoke also to the Gentiles, and disputed with the Grecians: but they sought to kill him.

30 Which when the brethren had known, they brought him down to Cæsarea, and sent him away to Tarsus.

31 Now the church had peace throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and was edified, walking in the fear of the Lord, and was filled with the consolation of the Holy Ghost.

32 And it came to pass, that Peter, as he passed through, visiting all, came to the saints, who dwelt at Lydda.

33 And he found there a certain man, named Æneas, lying on his bed for eight years, who was ill of the palsy.

* 2 Cor. xi. 32.

VER. 23. When many days were passed. By the account S. Paul gives of himself, (Gal. a. i.) soon after his conversion he went into Arabin, and about three years after he might come to Damascus. Then it seems to have happened that they were for killing him, for becoming a Christian; and the brethren saved his life, by conveying him down the walls of the town in a basket. After this, he went to Jerusalem, where the disciples knew little of him, and were afraid of him, till S. Barnabas introduced him to the apostles, and gave an account of his conversion. Wi.—Many days. That is, three years. For Saul went for a time from Damascus to Arabia. Gal. i. 17, and 18. It was on his return from thence, that the Jews conspired against his life, as is here related. Tirinus.

VER. 27. Brought him to the apostles Peter and James. See Gal. i. 18. and 19.

VER. 29. He spoke also to the Gentiles, and disputed with the Grecians, or Hellenists.* See c. vi. v. 1. By the Gentiles, many understand those who had been Gentiles, and were become proselytes or converts to the Jewish religion, and not those who still remained Gentiles. And by the Greeks, or Hellenists, they understand Jews, who had lived in places where they spoke Greek, not Syriac, whom S. Paul endeavoured to convert to the Christian faith. Wi.

VER. 31. The Church visibly proceedeth still with much comfort and patience; she is perfected by persecution, and by means of the promised infallible protection, she has ever proved herself invulnerable to all the envenomed shafts of her adversaries.

VER. 35. Saron, or Assaron, is a mountain and city mentioned by Josue, xii. 18. From it all the plain from Cæsarea of Palestine to Joppe, is called Saron. It is a rich fertile country. Tirinus.

VER. 36. Tabitha, in Syriac, means the same as Dorcas in Greek, that is, a wild goat. *V.—*See here the powerful effects of good works, and alms-deeds; they reach even to the next life. *B.—*Hence that of the wise man, alms free from death.

VER. 37. Washed. This custom of washing the dead was observed among the Greeks, Romans, Hebrews, and most other nations. It is still practised in 34 And Peter said to him: Æneas, the Lord Jesus Christ healeth thee: arise, and make thy bed. And immediately he arose.

35 And all that dwelt at Lydda, and Saron, saw him: and they were converted to the Lord.

36 And in Joppe there was a certain disciple, named Tabitha, which, being interpreted, is called Dorcas. This woman was full of good works and alms-deeds, which she did.

37 And it came to pass in those days, that she was sick, and died. Whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper chamber.

38 And Lydda being near to Joppe, the disciples hearing that Peter was there, sent two men to him, requesting: Delay not to come to us.

39 And Peter rising up, came with them. And when he was arrived, they brought him into the upper chamber: and all the widows stood round about him weeping, and shewing him the coats and garments, which Dorcas had made them.

40 And having put them all out, Peter kneeling down, prayed; and turning to the body, he said: Tabitha, arise: And she opened her eyes: and seeing Peter, sat up.

41 And giving her his hand, he raised her up. And when he had called the saints and the widows, he presented her alive.

42 And it was made known throughout all Joppe; and many believed in the Lord.

43 And it came to pass, that he stayed many days in Joppe, with one Simon, a tanner.

CHAP. X.

Cornelius is received into the Church. Peter's vision.

NOW there was a certain man in Cæsarea, named Cornelius, a centurion of the band, which is called the Italian,

2 A religious man, and one that feared God, with all his house, giving much alms to the people, and praying to God always:

* A. D. 38.

monasteries, and formerly was observed with much ceremony. S. Chrysostom observes, that our Saviour's body was washed and embalmed. The same custom is mentioned both in Homer and Virgil:

*Corpusque lavant frigentis, et unguunt.—*And again,

Date, vulnera lymphis abluiam.—Æneid. iv.

—Tertullian, in his Apology, testifies, that the Christians performed that office to the dead. It was a proof of their respect for the image of God impressed upon his creature, and for the character of Christian, which these persons have borne during their lives. It was likewise a sign of the confidence they had in a future resurrection.

VER. 39. Xirōv was the under garment, ἱματίον the upper.

VER. 40. And having put them all out, not to disturb him while he prayed.—Sat up, raised herself a little: and Peter taking her by the hand, lifted her quite up, and calling in the company, presented her to them alive and well. Wi.

VER. 41. Raising the dead to life can only be the work of God. This woman was raised to life for the comfort of the faithful, and the conversion of others. She herself might likewise have an opportunity of acquiring greater merit, otherwise the repose of another life is preferable to a return to the miseries of this world. D. Dion. Carthus.

VER. 43. In the Greek is added: instructing the new converts, and fortifying them in the faith they had just embraced.

* V. 29. Loquebatur quoque Gentibus, & disputabat eum Græcis. In almost all Greek copies, there is nothing for Gentibus, and we only read, he spoke and disputed with the Grecians, or Hellenists; ἐπὶ τοῖς Ἑλλησιν. See c. vi. v. 1.

CHAP. X. VER. 1 A cohort, with the Romans, was a body of infantry 500 strong. There were ten cohorts in each legion. There were, generally speaking, two centurions appointed to the command of each cohort. V.

VER. 2. A religious man, and one that feared God. He was not a Jew, yet believed in one God.—Always, that is, frequently praying, and giving alms. In 3 He saw in a vision manifestly, about the ninth hour of the day, an Angel of God coming in to him, and saying to him: Cornelius.

4 And he beholding him, being seized with fear, said: What is it, Lord? And he said to him: Thy prayers, and thy alms, have ascended for a memorial in the sight of God.

5 And now send men to Joppe, and call hither one Simon, who is surnamed Peter:

6 He lodgeth with one Simon, a tanner, whose house is by the sea side: he shall tell thee what thou must do.

7 And when the Angel who spoke to him was departed, he called two of his household servants, and a soldier, that feared the Lord, of them who were under him:

8 To whom, when he had related all, he sent them to Joppe.

9 And on the next day, whilst they were going on their journey, and drawing near to the city, Peter went up to the higher parts of the house to pray, about the sixth hour.

10 And being hungry, he was desirous to taste something. And as they were preparing, there came upon him an ecstasy of mind.

11 And he saw heaven opened, and a certain vessel descending, as it were a great sheet, let down by the four corners from heaven to the earth,

12 In which were all manner of four-footed beasts, and creeping things of the earth, and fowls of the air.

13 And there came a voice to him: Arise, Peter, kill, and eat.

14 But Peter said: Far be it from me, Lord, for I have never eaten any common and unclean thing.

15 And the voice spoke to him again the second time: That which God hath purified, do not thou call common.

the Rheims Testament we find this note: "Hereby it appeareth, that such works as are done before justification, though they suffice not to salvation, yet are acceptable preparatives for the grace of justification, and such as move God to mercy. . . though all such preparative works come also of grace." These Doctay divines did not hold with the Quenellists that a true faith, or the habit of faith, must needs be the first grace. Wi.—Cornelius religiously observed the law of nature, and the principal points of the Jewish moral law, though he did not profess Judaism. Calmet.—He was an admirable example of virtue before his knowledge of Christianity. He feared God, and brought up his family in the same holy fear. He was leader of the first band, and consequently had the eagle, the Roman ensign, carried before him. Four hundred men were under his command. Tironius.—His former goodness could no longer avail him, unless he were, by the bond of Christian society and peace, incorporated with the Church; he is therefore ordered to send unto Peter, that by him he may learn Christ, by him he may be baptized." S. Aug. l. i. de bap. c. 8.—Alms. Nothing is more efficacious than the alms of a man, whose hands have not been defiled by injustice. It is a clear stream, refreshing in the heat of day, and imparting verdure to every plant that is near it. It is a fountain springing to eternal life. It is a tree, whose branches reach even to heaven, and which produces its eternal fruit in abundance, when death has removed from you all that is temporal. Waste not, then, your treasures in selfish gratifications, the fruit of which is sorrow; but feed the poor, and the hungry. Plant and sow in their hands, and your produce will be great; no soil is more fertile. S. Chrys. hic. hom. xxii.

VER. 8. He saw in a vision manifestly. An angel appearing visibly to him. Wi.

VER. 9. Stated hours for prayer were appointed both in the old and new law. Of this S. Cyprian writes: "In celebrating their prayers, we find that the three children of Daniel observed the third, sixth, and ninth hour. Thus afterwards, at the third hour, the Holy Ghost descended upon the apostles, fulfilling the grace of our Lord's promise; at the sixth hour, Peter going up to the higher room of the house, was both by voice and sign from God instructed, that all nations should be admitted to the grace of salvation, of which he before doubted; and our Lord being crucified at the sixth hour, at the ninth washed away our sins by his blood. But to us, besides the seasons observed of old, the set times of praying are increased; for we must pray in the morning early, that the resurrection of our Lord may be celebrated by morning prayer; in the morning early will I stand before Thee, early in the morning wilt thou hear my voice. Ps. v. Towards the evening also, when the sun departeth, we must of necessity pray again." De Orat. Dom. No. 15. S. Jerom, writing to Eustochia, a virgin, and a religious, (1450)

16 And this was done thrice: and presently the vessel was taken up again into heaven.

17 Now, whilst Peter was doubting within himself, what the vision which he had seen should mean, behold the men who were sent by Cornelius, inquiring for Simon's house, stood at the gate.

18 And when they had called, they asked, if Simon, who is surnamed Peter, lodged there?

19 And as Peter was thinking on the vision, the Spirit said to him: Behold three men seek thee.

20 Arise, therefore, go down, and go with them, doubting nothing: for I have sent them.

21 Then Peter going down to the men, said: Behold I am he whom you seek: what is the cause, for which you are come?

22 They said, Cornelius, a centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and that hath good testimony from all the nations of the Jews, received an answer of a holy Angel, to send for thee into his house, and to hear words from thee.

23 Then bringing them in, he lodged them. And the day following, he arose and went with them: and some of the brethren from Joppe, accompanied him.

24 And the day after he entered into Cæsarea. Now Cornelius was waiting for them, having called together his kinsmen, and special friends.

25 And it came to pass, when Peter was come in, Cornelius met him, and falling down at his feet, worshipped.

26 But Peter raised him up, saying: Arise, I myself also am a man.

27 And talking with him, he went in, and found many that were come together.

28 And he said to them: You know how abominable a thing it is for a man that is a Jew, to keep company with, or to come to, one of another nation:

(ep. 22.) says, "though the apostle bid us to pray always, and, to holy persons, their very sleep is prayer; yet we must have distinct hours for prayer, that if perhaps we be otherwise occupied, the very time may admonish us of our duty. The third, sixth, ninth hour, morning early, and evening, no man can be ignorant of."

VER. 10. There came upon him an ecstasy of mind*. This is the true sense by the Greek. I have never yet eaten any unclean thing. This seems to have happened, an. 35. Till then the apostles followed the ceremonies of the law of Moses. It may seem strange that even S. Peter should not know that the ceremonial precepts of the law were to be abolished. It may be answered, that S. Peter and they, were only ignorant of the time, when they were to be laid aside; and so S. Chrysostom says, that the conversion of Cornelius, with all its circumstances, was to convince the Jews, rather than the apostles, that those ceremonies were no longer obligatory. W.

VER. 15. God hath purified. Not that the Almighty had already sanctified the Gentiles; but he had called them, that they might become so. He had thrown down the wall of separation, which had stood between Jew and Gentile; he had made one fold to contain all the sheep under one shepherd. Jesus Christ, by his blood, had generally reconciled all mankind to his Father. In this sense all were pure; that is, all had a right, as all were called, to partake of the merits of the Son of God. All had a right to communicate in the truths of the gospel, and in the sacraments, which were the appointed channels, through which the graces and merits of Jesus Christ were applied. Calmet.—Here, then, God first announced to Peter, that the time was come to preach to the Gentiles unto salvation, no less than to the Jews; with full freedom to eat all meats, without respect to the prohibition of some made in the old law. B.

VER. 25. Cornelius . . . worshipped.† Some think Cornelius might look upon S. Peter as more than a man, and offer to him divine worship: but by prostrating, he might only intend to pay such honour to him, as is paid to persons eminent in dignity, especially according to the custom of the eastern people. Wi.

VER. 26. S. Chrysostom (hom. xxi. in Act.) thinketh Peter refused this homage through humility, because this falling down, προσκύνησις, is frequently used in Scripture towards men. S. Jerom (adv. Vigil. c. ii.) holds the contrary sentiment.

VER. 28. Abominable a thing. The Jews extended their aversion to the Gentiles to an unnatural length; hence the frequent accusations of the latter, that they were a nation the enemies of mankind. Josephus defends his nation against the imputation. He allows that Moses forbids them to admit strangers into their but God hath shewed to me, to call no man common or unclean.

29 Wherefore, making no doubt, I came wher I was sent for. I ask, therefore, for what cause you have sent for me?

30 And Cornelius said: Four days ago, until this hour, I was praying in my house at the ninth hour, and behold a man stood before me in white apparel, and said:

31 Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thy alms are remembered in the sight of God.

32 Send, therefore, to Joppe, and call hither Simon, who is surnamed Peter: he lodgeth in the house of Simon, a tanner, by the sea side.

33 Immediately, therefore, I sent to thee: and thou hast done well in coming. Now, therefore, all we are present in thy sight, to hear all things whatsoever are commanded thee by the Lord.

34 Then Peter, opening his mouth, said: In truth, I perceive ^a that God is no respecter of persons.

35 But in every nation, he that feareth him, and worketh justice, is acceptable to him.

36 God sent the word to the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ: (he is Lord of all).

37 You know the word which hath been published through all Judea: ^b for it began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached, 38 Jesus, of Nazareth: how God anointed him with the Holy Ghost, and with power, who went about doing good, and healing all that were oppressed by the devil: for God was with him.

39 And we are witnesses of all things, which he did in the land of the Jews, and in Jerusalem, whom they killed, hanging him upon a tree.

40 Him God raised up the third day, and gave him to be made manifest,

41 Not to all the people, but to witnesses pre-

^a Deut. x. 17. 2 Par. xix. 7. Job xxxiv. 19. Wisd. vi. 8. Eccli. xxxv. 15. Rom. ii. 11. Gal. ii. 6.

solemnities, and exercises of religion, but not to refuse any thing which common humanity demands of all. Jos. lib. ii. con. App.

VER. 35. In every nation, &c. That is to say, not only Jews, but Gentiles also, of what nation soever, are acceptable to God, if they fear him, and work justice. But then true faith is always to be presupposed, without which, (saith S. Paul, Heb. xi. 6.) it is impossible to please God. Beware then of the error of those, who would infer from this passage, that men of all religions may be pleasing to God. For since none but the true religion can be from God, all other religions must be from the father of lies; and therefore highly displeasing to the God of truth. Ch.—He that feareth him, and worketh justice. So he calls the prayers, alms-deeds, and charitable works of this Gentile Cornelius. Wi.

VER. 36. God sent the word. By this word, some understand the eternal Word, the Son of God; but by the next verse, we may rather expound it of the word of the gospel preached. Jesus Christ... he is Lord of all things. A proof of Christ's divinity. Wi.

VER. 37. For it began, or its beginning was, &c.

VER. 39. Whom they killed. At the very first, says S. Chrys. the apostles preached Christ crucified, and tell them they had put to death on a cross the Lord of all things, the judge of the living and the dead. Wi.—We may here admire how wonderfully Peter adapts his discourse to the capacity of his hearers. When speaking to the Jews, he proves Jesus to be their Messiah, from the testimony of their prophets. On the present occasion, he only just alludes to the prophets, but confirms his discourse by the testimony of the miracles which Jesus had wrought in public, and were known to all the world. Calmet.

VER. 40. Jesus Christ did not announce his resurrection, and other mysteries, to all at once, but to a chosen few, who were to be governors of the rest; teaching us thereby, that we have to learn our religion, and every thing necessary to salvation, from the Church of God, speaking to us by her ministers.

VER. 42. The living and of the dead. This may be understood of the elect, who live by grace, and the reprobate, who are spiritually dead; or perhaps more literally, of those who shall be found living upon earth at the second coming of Christ, and of all who have died from the commencement of the world to the end of time. S. Aug. Enchirid.

ordained by God, even to us, who eat and drank with him, after he rose again from the dead.

42 And he commanded us to preach to the people, and to testify that it is he who hath been appointed by God to be the judge of the living and of the dead.

43 ^c To him all the prophets give testimony, that through his name all receive remission of sins, who believe in him.

44 While Peter was yet speaking these words, the Holy Ghost fell upon all them that heard the word.

45 And the faithful of the circumcision, who had come with Peter, were astonished because the grace of the Holy Ghost was also poured out upon the Gentiles.

46 For they heard them speaking with tongues, and magnifying God.

47 Then Peter answered: Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?

48 And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Then they entreated him to stay with them some days.

CHAP. XI.

Peter defends his having received the Gentiles into the Church. Many are converted at Antioch.

AND the apostles and brethren who were in Judea, heard that the Gentiles also had received the word of God.

2 And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they who were of the circumcision, disputed against him,

3 Saying: Why didst thou go in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them?

4 But Peter began and declared to them the matter in order, saying:

5 I was in the city of Joppe, praying, and I saw in an ecstasy of mind a vision, a certain vessel descending, as it were a great sheet let down from heaven by four corners, and it came even to me.

Ephes. vi. 9. Col. iii. 25. 1 Pet. i. 17.—^b Luke iv. 14.—^c Jer. xxxi. 84. Mic. vii. 18.

VER. 44. The Holy Ghost fell upon all them, and made his coming known in some visible manner and exterior signs, as on the day of Pentecost. The Christians who had come with S. Peter, who before had been Jews, were astonished to see that such extraordinary gifts of the Holy Ghost were given to uncircumcised Gentiles. Wi.

VER. 47. Can any man forbid water? &c. Or doubt that these, on whom the Holy Ghost hath descended, may be made members of the Christian Church, by baptism, as Christ ordained? Wi.—Such may be the grace of God occasionally towards men, and such their great charity and contrition, that they may have remission, justification, and sanctification, before the external sacraments of baptism, confirmation, and penance be received; as we see in this example: where, at Peter's preaching, they all received the Holy Ghost before any sacrament. But here we also learn one necessary lesson, that such, notwithstanding, must needs receive the sacraments appointed by Christ, which whosoever contemneth, can never be justified. S. Aug. sup. Levit. q. 84. T. 4.

* V. 10. Mentis excessus, ἐκστασις ἐπ' αὐτὸν ἔκστασις.

† V. 25. Procidens ad pedes ejus adoravit, περὶ ἐπὶ τοὺς πόδας προσεκύνησεν. The same word is often used for a civil worship.

‡ V. 36. τὸν λόγον, verbum, but in the next verse for verbum, ῥῆμα.

§ V. 39. S. Chrys. hom. xxiii. videns eos nunquam occultare crucem, ὁρῶν αὐτοὺς οὐδ' αὖτ' κρύπτουσαν τὴν σταυρὸν.

CHAP. XI. VER. 2. Disputed against him. S. Epiphanius makes Cerinthus, who was the next heresiarch to Simon Magus, the author of this dispute. He likewise says it was he, who excited the Jews against S. Paul, (Acts xxi.) and that the first Council of Jerusalem was convened to condemn him. S. Epiph. hæres. 28. c. ii.

VER. 3. And didst eat with them. The Jews looked upon it as a thing altogether abominable, for them to eat with uncircumcised Gentiles; but S. Peter satisfied them, or silenced them by a plain and sincere recital of his vision, and of what happened at the house of Cornelius. Wi.

6 Into which looking I considered, and saw four-footed creatures of the earth, and beasts, and creeping things, and fowls of the air :

7 And I heard also a voice, saying to me : Arise, Peter, kill and eat.

8 And I said : Not so, Lord : for nothing common or unclean hath ever entered into my mouth.

9 And the voice answered the second time from heaven : What God hath made clean, call not thou common.

10 And this was done three times : and all were taken up again into heaven.

11 And behold immediately there were three men come to the house wherein I was, sent to me from Cæsarea.

12 And the spirit said to me, that I should go with them, nothing doubting. And these six brethren went with me also, and we entered into the man's house.

13 And he told us, how he had seen an Angel in his house, standing and saying to him : Send to Joppe, and call hither Simon, who is surnamed Peter, 14 Who shall speak to thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved.

15 And when I had begun to speak, the Holy Ghost fell upon them, as upon us also in the beginning.

16 And I remembered the word of the Lord, how he said : "John indeed baptized with water, but you shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost.

17 If then God gave to them the same grace, as to us also who have believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, who was I, that I could withstand God ?

18 When they had heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying : God then hath also to the Gentiles given repentance unto life.

* Matt. iii. 11. Mark i. 8. Luke iii. 16. John i. 26. Supra i. 5. Infra xix. 4.

VER. 18. They held their peace, and glorified God, that the gate of salvation was also opened to the Gentiles. Wi.

VER. 20. *Some of them, at Antioch, spoke also to the Grecians : by which many understand, to the Gentiles, though in most Greek copies we read, to the Hellenists. Wi.

VER. 24. Multitude was added, as before, (c. x.) a few were added to the visible Church. Ever since Christ's ascension, this Church has been notoriously seen. Of her ministers, their preaching has been open, their sacraments visible, their discipline visible, their persecutions visible, their wonderful increase visible, and their manifestly divine protection visible, and known to all the world. Whilst all that have separated themselves by schism from this venerable body, have fallen into discredit, and most into complete oblivion. The Catholic Church was the first, and it will be the last.

VER. 25. To seek Saul, who had retired for a while, to his native city, Tarsus. These two remained at Antioch about a year, during which time they reaped a plentiful harvest. Wi.

VER. 26. At Antioch the disciples were first named Christians, when S. Paul and S. Barnabas were preaching there. Before that, they were called the disciples of Jesus, and sometimes Nazarenes, (see Acts xxiv. 5.) or perhaps Galileans. This honourable name of Christians, distinguished them from Gentiles, and Jews, and from all heretical sects, who generally had some name from the authors of such sects, as Simonites, Cerinthians, Nicolaites, &c. Of which see S. Epiphanius. The faithful had also after some time the name of Catholics, being taught in the apostles' creed to believe the Catholic Church. And S. Augustin, in several places, takes notice, that no heretics could ever get themselves called by this name ; nor can they to this present. See S. Aug. de util. credendi. c. viii. de vera relig. c. vii. cont. epist. fundam. c. iv. Whosoever is of the true faith of Christ, may justly say, Christian is my name, Catholic my surname : a greater honour, and a greater advantage, than to be of any royal family. Wi.—The faithful disciples, believers, &c. as before they were called, now received the name of Christians. It is not certain whether they took the name themselves, or it was given them out of disrespect, by the pagans. Galileans was a term of reproach likewise given to the Christians. S. Peter, in his first epistle, uses the appellation of Christians ; but it does not appear that S. Paul ever did in any of his writings. Calmet, Trinus, &c.—The name of Christian should be common to all the faithful, and all other new names of sectaries abhorred. "If you hear," says S. Jer. any where such as are said to be of Christ, "not to have their name from Christ, but from some other, as Marcionites, Valentinians, (as now also Lutherans, Calvinists, &c. &c. &c.) know that they belong not to the Church of Christ, but 19 And they indeed, who had been dispersed, by the persecution that arose on occasion of Stephen, went about as far as Phoenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, speaking the word to none, but to the Jews only.

20 But some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene, who, when they had entered into Antioch, spoke also to the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

21 And the hand of the Lord was with them : and a great number believing, was converted to the Lord.*

22 And the report of these things came to the ears of the church that was at Jerusalem, and they sent Barnabas as far as Antioch.

23 Who when he was come, and had seen the grace of God, rejoiced : and exhorted them all with purpose of heart to continue in the Lord.

24 For he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith. And a great multitude was added to the Lord.

25 And Barnabas went to Tarsus, to seek Saul : whom, when he had found, he brought to Antioch.*

26 And they conversed there in the church a whole year : and they taught a great multitude, so that at Antioch the disciples were first named Christians.

27 And in these days there came prophets from Jerusalem to Antioch.

28 And one of them, named Agabus, rising up, signified by the spirit, that there should be a great famine over the whole world, which came to pass under Claudius.

29 And the disciples, every man according to his ability, resolved to send relief to the brethren who dwelt in Judea :

30 Which also they did, sending it to the ancients by the hands of Barnabas and Saul.^d b A. D. 41.—c A. D. 41.—d A. D. 42.

to the synagogue of Antichrist." S. Pacianus, in his letter to Sympronian, says, when heresies had arisen, and endeavoured by diverse names to tear the dove of the Lord and Queen in pieces, the faithful required their surname : hence they who before were called Christians, are now surnamed also Catholics. Christian is my name and Catholic my surname. By this term Catholic, the apostles, in their creed, have distinguished the one true visible Church from all and every other congregation, sect, or party. This mark is so self-evident, that S. Augustin hesitates not to say : "In the lap of the Church the very name of Catholic keepeth me." Cont. ep. fund. c. iv.—Again, in his book on the utility of believing, he says : "If after these troubles of mind you still are tossed and vexed, and wish for peace, follow the way of Catholic discipline, which from Christ himself, by the apostles, hath proceeded even unto us, and shall proceed from hence to the latest posterity." 1 Tim. iii. 15.

VER. 29. Who dwell in Judea. Most of the faithful in Jerusalem, who wished to live perfect lives, had sold their possessions, and placed the price in the hands of the apostles ; and many others, who had not voluntarily relinquished their property, had probably lost most of it in the persecutions. Hence arose the particular distress of the brethren in Jerusalem, to relieve which the Gentiles made collections. It was meet, that they who had been made partakers of their spiritual goods, should now in time of need administer to them of their temporal substance. De Dion. Carth.—Imitate the alms of these primitive Christians, and make to yourselves provision against another life. Oh how many are now clothed in silks, and abound in pleasures, but are naked and void of every thing, that will bear examination on the day of final judgment ! S. Chrys. hom. xxvi. in Act.

VER. 30. Sending it to the ancients ;† elders, &c. In this and diverse other places, are not to be understood such as were elder in age, but such as had offices and dignities, and by divine authority, and who with a due subordination were to govern the Church : so that by this word, were signified apostles, bishops, and priests. But of this more hereafter. Wi.—The ancients or priests, seniores, presbyteros. This is the first place in the New Testament, where priests are mentioned. Some interpreters think, that by this word, ancients, are meant the apostles ; but this is not likely. The apostles must at that time have been dispersed over all the world. Others think it was some of the older deacons, who had charge of the alms. We like the opinion of those who think it means priests, subordinate to the apostles, who had the charge of governing the faithful, in their absence. Thus the Christian Church will appear modelled after the form of the synagogue. First, the bishop, who presides, corresponds to the head of the synagogue ; the priests, to the ancients, who sat on the right and left of the

CHAP. XII.

Herod's persecution. Peter's deliverance by an Angel. Herod's punishment.

AND "at the same time Herod, the king, stretched forth his hands, to afflict some of the church.

2 And he killed James, the brother of John, with the sword.

3 And seeing that it pleased the Jews, he proceeded to apprehend Peter also. Now it was in the days of the azymes.

4 Whom when he had apprehended, he cast into prison, delivering him to four files of soldiers, to be kept, intending after the Pasch to bring him forth to the people.

5 Peter, therefore, was kept in prison. But prayer was made without ceasing, by the church, to God, for him.

6 And when Herod would have brought him forth, that very night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains: and the guards before the door kept the prison.

7 And behold an Angel of the Lord stood by him: and a light shined in the room: and he striking Peter on the side, raised him up, saying: Arise quickly. And the chains fell off from his hands.

8 And the Angel said to him: Gird thyself, and put on thy sandals. And he did so. And he said to him: Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

9 And going out, he followed him, and knew not that what was done by the Angel was true: but thought he saw a vision.

chief; and the deacons, to the disciples of the Scribes, who studied the law. It must be allowed that many passages occur in Scripture, which it seems necessary to explain of priests of the second rank. S. Paul, (1 Tim. v. 1. 17. 19.) S. James (v. 14.) orders the priests to be called in to anoint the sick man, which cannot be explained of bishops, as there was only one in each town. It must nevertheless be observed, that this same word ancient, or priest, is often used in Scripture, and primitive writings, to designate a bishop. Calmet.

* V. 20. Ad Græcos, πρὸς τοὺς ἑλληνιστάς, and in some MSS. ἑλληνάς.

† V. 30. Ad seniores, πρὸς τοὺς πρεσβυτέρους. This Greek word πρεσβύτερος, in our Latin Vulg. is sometimes translated presbyter, sometimes senior, sometimes major natu, and is commonly put to signify bishops, or priests, as shall be seen hereafter.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Herod. Agrippa, made king by the emperor Caius. See Jos. vi. 18. Antiq. c. viii. and l. xix. c. 5. put to death James the greater, brother to John. Wi.—This man was the same as Agrippa, by which name he is most commonly known. He was brother to the famous Herodias, who was the cause of S. John the Baptist's decollation, (Calmet) and son-in-law of Herod the Great, by his father Aristobulus. V.

VER. 2. S. James the elder, brother of S. John, the evangelist.

VER. 3. The days of the azymes. By this we may know about the time when S. James was executed. Peter was to be reserved till after the Pasch, because it was not usual for the Jews to put any one to a violent death on a festival day. They would not damp the joy of the solemnity by such actions. Menoch.—Nothing can be more illiberal, nothing more unfounded, and unjust, than the accusation advanced by the translators of the Bible dedicated to King James. In their preface they say, that the Catholics keep the words, azymes, holocaust, pasch, &c. in their version, purposely "to darken the sense, that since they must needs translate the Bible, yet by the language thereof, it may be kept from being understood." See the splendid Oxford edit. an. 1770.—So far from this, we open the window, to let in the light; we break the shell, that the kernel may be eaten: we put aside the curtain, that a sight may be had into the holy place; we remove the cover of the well, that the good and humble may get to the water of life. If we retain certain words in the original tongue, it is for the same reason as our adversaries retain others, such as Amen, Sabaoth, Alleluia, Jehova, &c.

VER. 4. *To four files of soldiers. To four times four soldiers, or to sixteen soldiers, each band or file consisting of four.

VER. 6. With these two chains, according to the Roman custom, S. Peter must have been fastened to the two soldiers, that guarded him. Yet Peter slept secure, trusting in that Providence which sleepeth not.

VER. 7. An Angel. This was probably his Angel guardian. It has always been the constant belief of the Church, that each individual is put under the protection of a tutelar Angel. A.—S. Bernard, on these words of the psalm, he has given his Angels charge over thee, thus expresses himself: Wonderful conde-

10 And having passed through the first and the second ward, they came to the iron gate that leadeth to the city, which of itself opened to them. And going out, they passed on through one street: and immediately the Angel departed from him.

11 And Peter coming to himself, said: Now I know truly, that the Lord hath sent his Angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

12 And considering he came to the house of Mary, the mother of John, who was surnamed Mark, where many were assembled, and praying.

13 And when he knocked at the door of the gate, a damsel came to hearken, named Rhode.

14 And as soon as she knew Peter's voice, she opened not the gate for joy, but running in, she told that Peter stood before the gate.

15 But they said to her: Thou art mad. But she affirmed that it was so. Then said they: It is his Angel.

16 But Peter continued knocking. And when they had opened, they saw him, and were astonished.

17 But he beckoning to them with his hand to hold their peace, told how the Lord had brought him out of prison, and he said: Tell these things to James and to the brethren. And going out, he went into another place.

18 Now as soon as it was day, there was no small confusion among the soldiers, what was become of Peter.

• A. D. 42.

ascension! and truly great love! He has given his Angels charge over thee, to guard thee in all thy ways. What is man, O God, that thou shouldst thus be mindful of him, or the son of man, that thou shouldst look upon him! What reverence, devotion, and confidence, should this word inspire in us! Reverence their presence, be grateful for their good will; have confidence in their protection; walk with circumspection; your Angel is present. In every abode, in every place, respect his presence. Let us love them too, destined to be in future our co-heirs; in the mean time, our guardians and patrons. What have we to fear under such guides! They cannot be overcome nor seduced; much less can they lead us astray. They are faithful, they are prudent, they are powerful. Why do we fear! Let us follow them; let us stick close to them; and we shall dwell under the protection of the God of heaven. If a grievous temptation urges; if great tribulation hangs over you; call upon your leader your helper in opportunities, in tribulations; call upon him, and say, save us, or we perish, &c. S. Bern. Serm. in Psalm. Qui habitat.—A light shined in the room. To Peter only; not to the rest. Wi.

VER. 11. Peter coming to himself. Being now sensible that all was true. Wi.

VER. 12. And considering or reflecting, what was best to be done. Wi.

VER. 15. Thou art mad, or talkest idly.—Then said they, it is his Angel. It seems ridiculous to translate here a messenger. Does a messenger speak with the very voice of him that sends him? S. Chrys.† and others on this place observe, that they believed that every one, at least of the faithful, hath a good Angel. Wi.—"If proper Angels," saith S. Chrysostom, (T. iii. hom. 7. in laud. Paul.) "be deputed by our Lord to such as have only charge of their own existence, (as Israel said, Gen. xlviii. 16. the Angel that delivereth me from all evils, bless these boys) much more are super-human spirits at hand to help those unto whom the charge and burden of the world is committed." Such persons as can believe that God permits evil spirits to tempt us, can find no difficulty surely in believing that the same good, just, and merciful Creator will permit good spirits to guide, protect, and assist us. Repeated proofs of both are found in holy writ. The learned Protestant commentator, Polus, on this text, says: Hujusmodi visis assueverat eo tempore Ecclesia, quas etiam novit fideles presidio angelorum esse circumscriptas. The Church at that period had been accustomed to similar apparitions, nor is she ignorant that the faithful are secured by the protection of Angels. T. iv. p. 1494.

VER. 17. He went into another place. Did not think fit to stay in the city of Jerusalem. S. Chrys. takes notice, that upon another occasion, when he was delivered by an Angel out of prison, he went boldly the next day, and preached in the temple. c. v. 19. but there he was ordered by an Angel so to do; now to stay without such orders, would have been rashly to expose himself, and in a manner tempting God. Wi.—Peter retired to another place, that he might not rashly expose himself to future danger. It is not just to depend on supernatural assistance, when human means are adequate to the effect. S. Chrys. hom. xxvi.—S. Peter desires they will announce his miraculous delivery to James, the then bishop of Jerusalem, and to the Christians, that they might see the effect of their prayers for him. S. James had, beyond a doubt, ordered general supplications to be made by all the brethren for S. Peter. B.

19 And when Herod had sought for him, and found him not, having examined the keepers, he commanded they should be led to execution: and going down from Judea to Cæsarea, he abode there.

20 And he was angry with the Tyrians and the Sidonians. But they with one accord came to him, and having gained Blastus, who was the king's chamberlain, they desired peace, because their countries were nourished by him.

21 And upon a day appointed, Herod, arrayed in royal apparel, sat on the judgment-seat, and made an oration to them.

22 And the people with acclamations cried out: It is the voice of a god, and not of a man.

23 And forthwith an Angel of the Lord struck him, because he had not given the honour to God: and eaten up by worms, he expired.*

24 But the word of the Lord increased and multiplied.

25 And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, having fulfilled their ministry, taking with them John, who was surnamed Mark.

CHAP. XIII.

Saul and Barnabas are sent forth by the Holy Ghost. They preach in Cyprus and in Antioch of Pisidia.

NOW there were in the church, which was at Antioch, prophets and teachers, among whom was Barnabas, and Simon, who was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manahen, who was the foster-brother of Herod, the tetrarch, and Saul.

2 And as they were ministering to the Lord, and fasting, the Holy Ghost said to them: Separate me

* A. D. 42.—^b Supra xi. 30.—^c A. D. 42.

VER. 19. Should be led away to punishment or death, according to the sense both of the Latin and Greek text. Wi.

VER. 20. In the Greek, he was preparing to make war against them. These applied not to agriculture, but drew their support from Judea, Samaria, and Galilee. V.

VER. 23. Struck him. Josephus relates, that when Herod saw he must die, he replied to the flatteries of the people, "See, he whom you call a god, is snatched out of life, in spite of himself. The necessity of suffering death proves the falsity of your words; but we must submit to the will of God." Antiquit. lib. xvii. c. 9. et de Bello. lib. i. c. 21.—Princes may take warning from this example, not to take delight in the praises and flatteries of their subjects, so as to forget themselves to be men, and the God of heaven to be the supreme Lord of all, to whose just tribunal princes and subjects are equally amenable. A.—Eaten up by worms. A visible judgment of God, for his pride and vanity. Wi.

VER. 25. Returned from Jerusalem, to Antioch, the capital of Syria. Wi.—This John Mark, the companion of SS. Paul and Barnabas, was not the evangelist who bore that name; but a cousin of Barnabas, son of Mary, in whose house the apostles generally assembled at Jerusalem. Calmet.

* V. 4. Quatuor quaternionibus, τέσσαρες τετραθύνες στρατιῶνων.

† V. 15. It is his Angel. S. Chrysa. on these words, hom. xxvi. Ex hoc verum est quod unusquisque Angelum habet; ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐστὶ ἕκαστος ἄγγελος ἑαυτοῦ.

‡ V. 19. Jussit eos duci, διαχθῆναι.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. Manahen . . . foster-brother to Herod, or nursed with the same milk. Wi.—It would appear from his having been brought up with Herod, that he was of noble parentage. He is likewise believed to have been one of the seventy-two disciples. The Latins keep his feast on the 24th of May. Calmet.

VER. 2. As they were ministering to the Lord. Mr. N. and some others translate, offering up sacrifice. There are indeed good grounds to take this to be the true sense, as the Rhemish translators observed, who notwithstanding only put ministering, lest, (said they) we should seem to turn it in favour of our own cause, since neither the Latin nor Greek word signifies of itself to sacrifice, but any public ministry in the service of God; so that S. Chrysa. says, when they were preaching. Wi.—Separate me. Though Paul and Barnabas are here chosen by the Holy Ghost for the ministry, yet they were to be ordained, consecrated, and admitted by men; which loudly condemns all those modish and disordered spirits, that challenge and usurp the office of preaching, and other sacred and ecclesiastical functions, without any appointment from the Church. B.—Consider, says S. Chrysostom, by whom they are ordained: by Lucius, of Cyrene, and Manahen, rather than by the Spirit. The less honourable these persons are, the more signal is the grace of God." (1454)

Saul and Barnabas, for the work to which I have taken them.

3 Then they fasting and praying, and imposing their hands upon them, sent them away.

4 So they being sent by the Holy Ghost, went to Seleucia: and from thence they sailed to Cyprus.

5 And when they were come to Salamina, they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews. And they had John also in their ministry.

6 And when they had gone through the whole island as far as Paphos, they found a certain man, a magician, a false prophet, a Jew, whose name was Bar-jesu,

7 Who was with the proconsul, Sergius Paulus, a prudent man. He, sending for Barnabas and Saul, desired to hear the word of God.

8 But Elymas, the magician, (for so his name is interpreted) withstood them, seeking to turn away the proconsul from the faith.

9 Then Saul, otherwise Paul, filled with the Holy Ghost, looking upon him,

10 Said: O thou full of all guile, and of all deceit, son of the devil, enemy of all justice, thou dost not cease to pervert the right ways of the Lord.

11 And now behold the hand of the Lord upon thee, and thou shalt be blind, not seeing the sun for a time. And immediately there fell on him a mist and a darkness, and going about, he sought some one to lead him by the hand.

12 Then the proconsul, when he had seen what was done, believed, marvelling at the doctrine of the Lord.

13 And when Paul, and they who were with him, had sailed from Paphos, they came to Perge, in Pam-

VER. 3. Fasting and prayer, imposing their hands upon them. By which is clearly expressed, the manner in which the ministers of God were, and are still ordained bishops, priests, deacons in the Church. Wi.—Interpreters are much divided in opinion, whether this imposition of hands be a mere deputation to a certain employment, or the sacramental ceremony, by which orders are conferred. SS. Chrysostom, Leo, &c. are of the latter opinion; nor does it any where appear that S. Paul was bishop before this. Arator, sub-deacon of the Church of Rome, who dedicated in the year 544 his version of the Acts of the Apostles into heroic verse to Pope Virgilius, attributes this imposition of hands to S. Peter:

—Quem mox sacrauit euntem

Imposita Petrus ille manu, cui sermo magistri

Omnia posse dedit.

—See his printed poems in 4to. Venice, an. 1502. Arator was sent in quality of ambassador from Athalaric to the emperor Justinian.—Following the practice of the apostles, the Church of God ordains a solemn and general fast on the four public times for ordination, the ember days, as a necessary preparation for so great a work, and this S. Leo calls also an apostolical tradition. See S. Leo, serm. ix. de jejun. and ep. lxxx. c. 1. and serm. iii. and iv. de jejun. 7. mensis.—Nor was this fasting a fasting from sin, as some ridiculously affirm, for such fasting was of universal obligation: nor was it left to each one's discretion, as certain heretics maintained. Vide S. Aug. hæres. liii.

VER. 5. In the synagogues of the Jews, preaching first the gospel to them. Wi.

VER. 6. A magician . . . whose name was Bar-jesu, son of Jesus, or Josue. In Arabic, Elymas is the same as magician. This man did all he could to dissuade the proconsul, Sergius Paulus, from embracing the Christian faith. Wi.—Salamina was the capital of the island of Cyprus, and at the eastern extremity, as Paphos was at the western. A. D. 45.

VER. 9. Then Saul, who also is Paul. This is the first time we find the apostle called Paul. Some, therefore, think it was given him when he converted this proconsul, Sergius Paulus. Others, that Saul being a Hebrew word, the Greeks, or rather the Romans, turned it into Paul. Wi.—This is the first place in which this apostle is called Paul. He took this name out of respect to the illustrious convert he had made in the person of the proconsul, the governor of the island. Menochius.—Or, more probably, his former name, by a small change, was modelled into Paulus, which was a sound more adapted to a Roman ear. He begins to bear this name only, when he enters on his mission to the Gentiles. Calmet.

VER. 10. Son of the devil. Sharp language, when grounded on truth, may be used against those who hinder the conversion of others. S. Chrysa. says, he was struck with this blindness only for a time, to make him enter into himself, and be converted. Wi.

phylia. *But John departing from them, returned to Jerusalem.

14 But they passing through Perge, came to Antioch, in Pisidia: and entering into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, they sat down.

15 And after the reading of the law and the prophets, the rulers of the synagogue sent to them, saying: Ye men, brethren, if you have any word of exhortation to make to the people, speak.

16 Then Paul rising up, and with his hand bespeaking silence, said: Ye men of Israel, and you that fear God, give ear:

17 The God of the people of Israel chose our fathers, and exalted the people, when they were sojourners^b in the land of Egypt, *and with a mighty arm brought them out from thence, 18 ^aAnd for the space of forty years endured their manners in the desert.

19 And destroying seven nations in the land of Chanaan, *he divided their land to them, by lot, 20 As it were, after four hundred and fifty years: *and after these things he gave them judges, until Samuel, the prophet.

21 And afterwards *they desired a king: and God gave them Saul, the son of Cis, a man of the tribe of Benjamin, forty years.

22 *And when he had removed him, he raised them up David to be king: to whom giving testimony, he said: I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man according to my own heart, who shall do all my will.

23 Of this man's seed God, 'according to his promise, hath raised up to Israel a Saviour, Jesus, 24 *John first preaching before his coming the baptism of penance to all the people of Israel.

25 And when John was fulfilling his course, he said: I am not he, whom you think me to be: but behold he cometh after me, the shoes of whose feet I am not worthy to loose.

26 Men, brethren, sons of the race of Abraham, and whosoever among you fear God, to you the word of this salvation is sent.

27 For they who inhabited Jerusalem, and the rulers thereof, not knowing him, nor the voices of the prophets, which are read every sabbath, judging him, have fulfilled them,

28 And finding no cause of death in him, *they petitioned of Pilate, that they might put him to death.

29 And when they had fulfilled all things that were written of him, taking him down from the tree, they laid him in a sepulchre.

30 *But God raised him up from the dead the third day: who was seen for many days by those,

31 Who went up together with him from Galilee to Jerusalem: who, to this present time, are witnesses of him to the people.

32 And we declare to you that the promise which was made to our fathers, 33 This same hath God fulfilled to our children, raising up Jesus again, as in the second Psalm also is written: *Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

34 And to shew that he raised him up from the dead to return now no more to corruption, he said thus: *That I will give you the holy things of David sure.

35 And, therefore, in another place also he saith: *Thou shalt not suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.

36 For David, after he had served in his generation, according to the will of God, *slept: and was laid unto his fathers, and saw corruption.

37 But he whom God hath raised from the dead, saw no corruption.

38 Be it known, therefore, to you, men, brethren, that through him forgiveness of sins is preached to you: and from all the things, from which you could not be justified by the law of Moses,

39 In him every one, who believeth, is justified.

40 Beware, therefore, lest that come upon you which is said in the prophets:

* A. D. 42.—^a Exod. i. 1.—^b Exod. xiii. 21. and 22.—^c Exod. xvi. 8.—^d Josue xiv. 2.—^e Judges iii. 9.—^f 1 Kings viii. 5. and ix. 16. and x. 1.—^g 1 Kings xiii. 14. and xvi. 8.—^h Ps. lxxxviii. 21.—ⁱ Isai. xi. 1.—^j Matt. iii. 1. Mark i. 4. Luke iii. 8.

VER. 14. Antioch. Many cities in Asia Minor bore this name. It is related that Seleucus Nicanor built many, and called them by this name, in honour of his father Antiochus. Tirinus.—Pamphylia and Pisidia were two provinces in Asia Minor.—The sabbath-day. Some not only understand, but even translate, the first day of the week: but here is rather meant the Jewish sabbath, as S. Paul went into their synagogues. And in this his first sermon to them, which S. Luke has set down, he speaks nothing that could offend or exasperate the Jews, but honourably of them, to gain them to the Christian faith; he commends in particular David, whose Son they knew the Messiah to be: and of whom he tells them, that God had given them their Saviour, Jesus. He mentions this high eulogium, which God gave of David, Ps. lxxxviii. 21. that he was a man according to God's heart, who in all things should fulfil his will, that is, as to the true worship of God; though he fell into some sins, of which he repented, and did penance. Wi.

VER. 19. These seven nations are the Chanaanites, the Hethites, the Hevites, the Pherezites, the Gergesites, the Jebusites, and the Amorhites. Jos. iii. 10. and alii.

VER. 20. Chronology only gives about 350 years from the entrance into the land of promise to the end of Samuel's judicial government, who was the last of the judges. V.

VER. 24, &c. He then brings the testimony, which John the Baptist gave of Jesus, as it is likely many of them had heard of John, and of the great esteem that all the people had of his virtue and sanctity. He tells them that salvation was offered and sent them by Jesus, against whom the chief of the Jews at Jerusalem obtained of Pilate a sentence, that he should be crucified; but that God raised him up from the dead the third day. And we, says he, publish to you this promise, the Messiah, promised to our forefathers.

VER. 33. He then shews them that Jesus was their Messiah, and the Son of ^a Matt. iii. 11. Mark i. 7. John i. 27.—^b Matt. xxvii. 20. and 23. Mark xv. 18. Luke xviii. 21. and 23. John xix. 15.—^c Matt. xxviii. Mark xvi. Luke xxiv. John xx.—^d Ps. ii. 7.—^e Is. lv. 8.—^f Ps. xv. 10.

God, begotten of his Father from eternity, who rose from the dead, and he applies these words, (Ps. ii. 7.) to prove Christ's resurrection, thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee. It is true, these words regard chiefly the eternal generation of Christ, as they are applied by S. Paul, (Heb. i. 5.) but the resurrection was a necessary consequence of his divinity, since death could have no power over him. S. Paul here also proves Christ's resurrection by the following predictions. Wi.—Second psalm. The oldest copy reads, first psalm. The difference is merely in words; for the division of the psalter at present is very different from what it formerly was: sometimes a single psalm of ours being divided into many, and many of our divisions making only one, according to the Hebrews. The latter are not even now agreed among themselves on the same division of the psalms. Calmet.—Some suppose, that what we call the first psalm was originally looked upon as a preface to the psalter; others, that our first and second psalms united in one. Mat. Polus.

VER. 34. I will give you the holy things of David sure. These are the words of the prophet Isaias, lv. v. 3. According to the Sept. the sense is, I will faithfully fulfil the promises I made to David. Ch.

VER. 35. In another place also he saith, (Ps. xv. 10) thou wilt not suffer thy holy one to see corruption. That is, Christ's body to be corrupted in the grave. See the words of S. Peter, Acts ii. 27. Wi.

VER. 36. After he had served in his generation. That is, in his life-time, saw corruption, or was corrupted in the grave. Wi.

VER. 37–38. Justified. That your sins being forgiven by the merits of Christ, you may be truly just in the sight of God. Wi.

VER. 39. The law of Moses was then imperfect. I shew you its completion, by preaching to you Christ, whom it foretold. You would violate the law of Moses by opposing the new law, to which he leads you. Tirinus.

VER. 40. See then that you reject not this divine Saviour, lest what has been 41 *Behold, ye despisers, and wonder, and perish : for I work a work in your days, a work which you will not believe, if any man shall tell it you.

42 And as they went out, they desired them that on the next sabbath they would speak these words to them.

43 And when the synagogue was broken up, many of the Jews, and of the strangers who served God, followed Paul and Barnabas : who, speaking to them, persuaded them to continue in the grace of God.

44 But the next sabbath-day, the whole city almost came together, to hear the word of God.

45 And the Jews seeing the multitudes, were filled with envy, and contradicted those things which were said by Paul, blaspheming.

46 Then Paul and Barnabas said boldly : To you it behoved us first to speak the word of God : but seeing you reject it, and judge yourselves unworthy of eternal life : behold we turn to the Gentiles.

47 For so the Lord hath commanded us : ^bI have set thee to be the light of the Gentiles : that thou mayest be for salvation unto the utmost part of the earth.

48 And the Gentiles hearing this, were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord : and as many as were pre-ordained to eternal life, believed.

49 And the word of the Lord was published throughout the whole country.

50 But the Jews stirred up religious and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised a persecution against Paul and Barnabas : and cast them out of their borders.

51 *But they shaking off the dust of their feet against them, came to Iconium.^a 52 And the disciples were filled with joy and with the Holy Ghost.

^a 3 Kings ii. 10. Hab. i. 4. —^b Isai. xlix. 6.

denounced by the prophets fall upon your incredulous heads: I will abandon the holy place which I entrusted to you; I will cease to look upon you as my people; I will transfer my kingdom to the Gentiles. V.

VER. 41. Ye despisers† of the favours offered you, behold, wonder, &c. This citation is out of Habacuc, (c. i. v. 5.) according to the Sept. The prophet, by these words, foretold to the Jews in his time the evils that would come upon them in their captivity in Chaldea, but S. Paul here applies them at least to the miseries that the incredulous Jews would incur, if they obstinately refused to believe in Christ. Wi.

VER. 44. The whole city. Not only Jews, but a great many Gentiles, which exasperated the envious Jews. Wi.

VER. 48. As many as were pre-ordained to eternal life,† by the free election, and special mercies, and providence of God. Wi.—Some understand this as if it meant, predisposed by their docility, to receive the word of life. But the Fathers unanimously understand it literally of predestination, which is defined by S. Thomas, serm. i. qu. 23. a. 1. "The disposition of God, by which he prepares, what he will himself perform, according to his infallible foreknowledge." In other words, it is the manner in which God conducts a reasonable creature to its proper destiny, which is eternal life. In this mystery of the Catholic faith, which cannot be clearly explained to human understanding, because it is a mystery, there are nevertheless several points, which we know for certain. 1st. Though it is certain, that this decree of the Almighty is infallible, and must have its effect, yet it is far removed from the blasphemy of Calvinists, who pretend that it destroys free-will, and therefore removes all motives of exertion to good works. 2d. For it is a point of Catholic faith, that this foreknowledge of the Almighty no ways interferes with man's liberty, but leaves him still a perfectly free agent, and therefore responsible for his actions. 3d. It is likewise decreed by the Council of Trent, that no one can certainly know that he is of the number of the predestinated, without a special revelation to that effect. These are the most essential points, which it concerns us to know of this doctrine. As to the consequences which may be drawn from these positions, it were better for us to submit our understandings to the obedience of faith, than entangle ourselves in a maze of abstruse errors, far removed from our comprehension. Would that this sober line of conduct were pursued by many moderns, who at present talk and write so much on this subject, and to such little purpose. How excellently well does the great genius of the Latin Church, S. Augustin, say : Melius est dubitare de oc-
(1456)

CHAP. XIV.

Paul and Barnabas preach in Iconium and Lystra : Paul heals a cripple ; they are taken for gods. Paul is stoned. They preach in Derbe and Perga.

AND it came to pass in Iconium, that they entered together into the synagogue of the Jews and spoke, so that a great multitude both of the Jews and of the Greeks did believe.

2 But the unbelieving Jews, stirred up, and incensed the minds of the Gentiles against the brethren.

3 A long time, therefore, they abode there, acting confidently in the Lord, who gave testimony to the word of his grace, granting signs and wonders to be done by their hands.

4 And the multitude of the city was divided : and some indeed held with the Jews, but some with the apostles.

5 And when there was an assault made by the Gentiles and the Jews, with their rulers, to treat them contumeliously, and to stone them :

6 *Understanding it, they fled to Lystra and Derbe cities of Lycaonia, and to the whole country round about, and were there preaching the gospel.

7 Now there sat a certain man at Lystra disabled in his feet, lame from his mother's womb, who never had walked.

8 This man heard Paul speaking : who looking upon him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, 9 Said with a loud voice : Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped up and walked.

10 And when the multitudes had seen what Paul had done, they lifted up their voice in the Lycaonian tongue, saying : The gods, in the likeness of men, are come down to us.

11 And they called Barnabas, Jupiter : but Paul, Mercury ; because he was the chief speaker.

^a Matt. x. 14. Mark vi. 11. Luke ix. 5.—^d A. D. 42.—^e A. D. 43.

cultis, quam litigare de occultis! How much wiser and better is it to confess our ignorance on mysteries, than idly to dispute on mysteries! l. viii. de Gen. ad litt. c. 5.

VER. 51. Shaking off the dust, &c. See the Annotations, Matt. x. 14.

* V. 2. Ministrantibus illis, λειτουργούντων δὲ αὐτοῖς. Erasmus translates, Sacrificantibus, but S. Chrysa. τοῖς αὐτοῖς κερτυνόντων, prædicantibus.

† V. 41. Habac. i. 5. In the Latin text, and according to the Hebrew, aspi- cire in Gentibus : but in the Sept. and Greek here, ἰδεῖν καταφρονέει.

‡ V. 48. Præordinati, τεταγμένοι, on which S. Chrysa. says, τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἀφωρισμένοι, prædefiniti.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. And of the Greeks. Which is here put for the Gentiles. Wi.

VER. 2. The unbelieving Jews stirred up, &c. It would hence appear, that the former were not very scrupulous in the means they took to oppose the gospel. They, who would have been dreadfully scandalized to have spoken to a Gentile for any good purpose, are not very nice in having intercourse with them to irritate them against the apostles. Such is the general conduct of men whose religion is vain. That sacred name is used for a pretext to authorize the most unwarrantable actions. A.

VER. 3. To the word of his grace. That is, of the gospel, and the law of grace. Wi.

VER. 8. Perceiving that he had. It does not appear that S. Paul had any previous conversation with the man he healed on this occasion, or demanded from him any testimony of his faith. But he saw that he had faith, perhaps by inspiration, or by the confidence and eagerness the lame man may have shewn in his countenance and actions. Calmet, &c.

VER. 11. And they called Barnabas, Jupiter. Perhaps because he was of taller and finer stature; for, according to Nicephorus (hist. ii. 87.) S. Paul was very low in size, and much bent; hence S. Chrysostom says of him, tri- cubitalis est, & cælos transcendit, though not more than three cubits high, he yet transcends the heavens, and hence for his eloquence, he was called Mer- cury. Jupiter was said to take Mercury with him, as may be seen in Amphi- tryone Plauti 12 The priest also of Jupiter, that was before the city, bringing oxen and garlands before the gate, would have offered sacrifice with the people.

13 Which when the apostles, Barnabas and Paul, had heard, rending their clothes, they ran among the people, crying out,

14 And saying: Men, why do ye these things? We also are mortals, men like unto you, preaching to you to be converted from these vain things to the living God, *who made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are in them:

15 Who in past generations suffered all nations to walk in their own way.

16 Nevertheless he left not himself without testimony, doing good from heaven, giving rains, and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness.

17 And speaking these things, they scarce restrained the people from sacrificing to them.

18 Now there came thither certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium: and having persuaded the multitude, and stoned Paul, they dragged him out of the city, thinking him to be dead.

19 But as the disciples stood round about him, he rose up and entered into the city, and the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe.

20 And when they had preached the gospel to that city, and had taught many, they returned again to Lystra and to Iconium, and to Antioch:

21 Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith: and that through many tribulations we must enter into the kingdom of God.

22 And when they had ordained for them priests in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, in whom they believed.

23 And passing through Pisidia, they came into Pamphylia.

24 And having spoken the word of the Lord in Perge, they went down to Attalia:

25 ^b And thence they sailed to Antioch, from whence they had been delivered to the grace of God, unto the work which they accomplished.

26 And when they were come, and had assembled the church, they related what great things God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith to the Gentiles.

27 And they abode no little time with the disciples.

CHAP. XV.

A dissension about circumcision. The decision and letter of the council of Jerusalem.

AND *some coming down from Judea, taught the brethren: That unless you be circumcised after the manner of Moses, you cannot be saved.

2 And when Paul and Barnabas had no small contest with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas and certain others of the other side, should go up to the apostles and priests to Jerusalem, about this question.

3 They, therefore, being brought on their way by the church, passed through Phœnice and Samaria, re-

* Gen. i. 1. Ps. cxlv. 6. Apoc. xiv. 7.

^b Supra xiii. 1.—A. D. 49. Gal. v. 2.

VER. 12. Garlands. These might be for the victims, as they generally were crowned, or had gilded horns.

Victima labe carena, præstantissima forma, Sistiatur ante aras, viliis præsignis et auro.—Ovid.
—Or they might be for the two pretended gods, as it was usual to crown their statues. Pliny, lib. xvi. c. 4.—The priests likewise themselves, who sacrificed, wore crowns. Virgil. Æneid ii.

VER. 14. We also are mortals. The enraptured people wished to pay divine homage, θεῶν, to the apostles, and therefore they indignantly reject the proffered honours. The Catholic Church has but one external sacrifice, and this she offereth to God only, and "neither to Peter nor to Paul, saith S. Augustin, though the priest that sacrificeth, standeth over their bodies, and offereth in their memories." 1. viii. de Civit. Dei. c. 27.

VER. 15. Suffered all nations to walk in their own way. Lit. dismissed all nations, suffering them to run on in their idolatry, and other sins, not favouring them with a written law, as he did the Jews, &c. Wi.

VER. 16. He left not himself without testimony. Inasmuch as the Gentiles had always the light of reason, and such lights, that by the created things of this world, and from the visible effects of God's providence, they might have come to the knowledge of the true God, the creator of all things. See Rom. a. i. Wi.—God did not leave himself without testimony among the Gentiles. He did not leave them without the means of discovering the way which led to him. They had the law of nature engraved in their hearts, the knowledge of good and evil, &c. Menochius.—Therefore they were inexcusable, if they did not know him. The invisible things of God, his eternal divinity might have been known to them from the consideration of the visible creation. Rom. i. 20.

VER. 21. Through many tribulations. Our daily offences require the paternal chastisement of the Almighty. The concupiscence of the flesh too, which wills against the spirit, must be subdued by punishment. We then to you, lovers of this world, who wish to pass your lives without tribulation, enemies of the cross. Senseless creatures, is the disciple above his master? Did it not become Christ first to suffer, and thus to enter into his glory? and shall we pretend to enter by any other means? &c. H. Denis. Carthus.

VER. 22. *When they had ordained for them priests. The Prot. translation, following the grammatical etymology of the Greek word presbyter, always puts elders. Yet they of the Church of England allow, and maintain, that by this Greek word in this, and many other places, are signified the ministers of God, known by the name of bishops or priests, according to the ecclesiastical use of the same word. It is evident that here are not meant elders, as to age and years. Nay, though we adhere to the grammatical signification, we should rather translate priests, since the English word priest, as well as the French word prêtre, come from presbyter. But of this word more hereafter. We may also take notice, that the Calvinists here translate, ordained by election, pretending by the derivation of the Greek word, that church ministers were only chosen, and deputed by the votes and suffrages of people; and not by any ordination, or consecration by a bishop; nor by any character or sacrament of order. But their argument from this Greek word is frivolous, and groundless, as hath been shewn by Mr. Bois on this verse, by Mr. Legh in his Critica Sacra, &c. Wi.—We see from this text, 1st, that SS. Paul and Barnabas were bishops, having authority to confer holy orders: 2d, that there was even then a difference betwixt bishops and priests, though the name in the primitive Church was often used indifferently; 3d, that fasting and praying were constant preparatives for holy orders. B.

VER. 24. This Antioch was a sea-port in Pamphylia. V.

VER. 25. From whence they had been delivered, up to their ministry, and their apostolical mission by the grace of God; that is, where they had been first chosen by the direction of the Spirit of God, ordained priests and bishops, and had received power, and graces to discharge their offices of apostles. Wi.

VER. 27. No little time. It is not precisely known how long he remained there, nor what he did. S. Luke relates nothing of what happened from the 46th year of Christ to the 51st, in which the Council of Jerusalem was held. It is probable S. Paul spent that time in carrying the gospel among the neighbouring provinces. Calmet.

* V. 22. Cum constituerent presbyteros, ἡγουμένους ἀποστόλους. Mr. Bois on this verse: Si unum loquendi potius quam syllabas ipsas, quibus inhære sæpe parum tutum est, respicias, ἡγουμένους, nihil aliud declarat, quam constituere, creare, ordinare. See Mr. Legh, in thesaurus linguæ græcæ.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. Unless you be circumcised. Many who had been converted from Judaism, held that none, not even converted from paganism, could be saved, unless they were circumcised, and observed the other ceremonies of the law of Moses. Wi.—See Gal. v. 2.

VER. 2. *To the apostles and priests, where we find again presbyters in Greek, meaning bishops and priests. Wi.—Paul... should go to... Jerusalem. We learn from Gal. ii. 2. 4. that S. Paul undertook this journey in consequence of a divine revelation, and was accompanied by Barnabas, and Titus, the latter of whom he would not suffer to be circumcised. Such confidence had he in the rectitude of the opinion he defended. From the example of S. Paul and S. Barnabas, apostles, and men full of the Spirit of God, we learn, that as often as any contest arises about faith, recourse should be had to the supreme visible authority established by Jesus Christ, to have all differences adjusted. This is the order of divine Providence with regard to the Church; without it truth and unity could not be preserved; without it, the Church of God would be more defective and inefficient than any human government. Tell the Church: and if he will not hear the Church, let him be to thee as the heathen and the publican. Matt. xviii. 17.

lating the conversion of the Gentiles: and they caused great joy to all the brethren.

4 And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received by the church, and by the apostles and ancients, declaring how great things God had done with them.

5 But there rose up some of the sect of the Pharisees that believed, saying: They must be circumcised, and be commanded to observe the law of Moses.

6 And the apostles and ancients assembled to consider of this matter.

7 And when there was much disputing, Peter rising up, said to them: *Men, brethren, you know that in former days God made choice among us, that the Gentiles by my mouth should hear the word of the gospel, and believe.

8 And God, who knoweth the hearts, gave them testimony, ^bgiving the Holy Ghost to them as well as to us.

9 And made no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith.

10 Now, therefore, why tempt you God, to put a yoke upon the necks of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?

11 But by the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we believe to be saved, as they also.

12 And all the multitude held their peace: and gave ear to Barnabas and Paul, relating what great signs and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them.

13 And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying: Men, brethren, hear me.

14 Simon hath related how God first visited the Gentiles, to take out of them a people to his name.

15 And to this agree the words of the prophets, as it is written:

16 *After these things I will return, and will rebuild the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down, and I will rebuild the ruins thereof, and I will set it up:

17 That the rest of men may seek after the Lord, and all nations upon whom my name is invoked, saith the Lord, who doth these things.

18 To the Lord was known his own work from the beginning of the world.

19 Wherefore I judge that they, who from among the Gentiles are converted to God, are not to be disquieted.

20 But that we write to them, that they refrain themselves from the pollutions of idols, and from fornication, and from things strangled, and from blood.

21 For Moses, from ancient times, hath in every city them that preach him in the synagogues, ^dwhere he is read every sabbath.

22 Then it pleased the apostles and ancients, with the whole church, to choose men of their own company, and to send them to Antioch, with Paul and Barnabas; Judas, who was surnamed Barsabas, and Silas, chief men among the brethren, 23 Writing by their hands. The apostles and ancients, brethren, to the brethren of the Gentiles, that are at Antioch, and in Syria, and Cilicia, greeting.

24 Forasmuch as we have heard, that some, who went out from us, have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, to whom we gave no commands:

25 It hath seemed good to us, assembled together, to choose out men, and send them to you, with our dearly beloved Barnabas and Paul,

26 Men who have given their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

27 We have sent, therefore, Judas and Silas, who themselves also will, by word of mouth, tell you the same things.

28 For it hath seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us, to lay no further burthen upon you, than these necessary things:

* Supra x. 20.—^b Supra x. 45.

^c Amos ix. 11.—^d Supra xiii. 27.

VER. 7. Former days. Lit. in the days of old; that is, at the conversion of Cornelius, many years ago, about the year 35; and it was now 51. Wi.—S. Peter at the head of the Council, spoke first; S. James as Bishop of Jerusalem, spoke next, and all, as S. Jerom says, came into the sentence of Peter. Ep. lxxxix. ad S. Aug. c. 2.

VER. 10. Why tempt you God, by calling in question what he hath sufficiently attested, and approved, and by being incredulous to his promises of giving salvation to the Gentiles, and to all nations. Wi.

VER. 11. In the historical sense he is speaking of the prosperity of the house of Juda, in the reign of Ezechias, or their return from captivity. But in this respect, it is certain that the prophecy never had its entire accomplishment. The passage in the text is cited from the Septuagint. The Hebrew is, "I will raise up the house of David . . . that it may possess all the nations," &c. Now it is true that the nations never were subject to the house of David, or known by the name of the people of God; but by their vocation to the gospel, as S. James explains it. Calmet.

VER. 18. To the Lord was known his own work. He bringeth it to pass, as he hath decreed, though his decrees are to us unknown. Wi.

VER. 19. Wherefore I judge, and join my judgment with Peter. S. Chrys. thinks that James had a special authority in the Council, as bishop of Jerusalem, and because of the great veneration, which those zealous for the Jewish law had for him: but his power was certainly inferior to that of S. Peter, who was head of all, as S. Chrys. teacheth, hom. iii. on the Acts.

VER. 20. Things strangled and from blood. In these prohibitions, the Church indulged the particular feelings of the Jews, that the bond of union between them and the Gentiles might be more closely united; the latter in these two instances giving way to the prejudices of the former, who in their turn gave up much, by submitting to the abolition of the ceremonial law of Moses. This prohibition was of course only temporary, and to cease with the reasons, which gave rise to it. Menochius.—The Jews had such a horror of blood, that they considered those who eat it as defiled, and violators of the law of nature. The Lord had in effect from the beginning forbidden the use of blood to Noe, (Gen. ix. 4.) which he likewise repeated in the strongest terms in Leviticus viii. 26. By this (1458)

we see the great authority of God's Church, and Councils, which may make permanent or temporary decrees, such as are fitting for the state of the times or peoples, without any express Scripture at all, and by this authoritative exaction, things become of strict obligation, which previous to it, were in themselves indifferent. B.

VER. 21. For Moses . . . hath in every city. Not only the Jews, but the Christians converted from Judaism, still followed the ceremonies of the law of Moses. Wi.—Let not the Jews complain, that we abandon Moses, and destroy the law by this regulation. No: it shall subsist for ever in a more perfect state, read in the synagogue, and revered by the Church. Calmet.—Others give a different explanation of this verse. Let the Jews, say they, follow Moses, and hear him in their assemblies; we have other laws, and enjoy other privileges. Tirinus.

VER. 23. The brethren of the Gentiles. Hence we see, that the letter, with the decree of the Council, only regarded those converts, who had been Gentiles: neither are they forbidden to use the Jewish ceremonies, but a declaration is made, that they have no obligation to follow the said ceremonies and precepts, as it will appear by other places. Wi.

VER. 24. Some who went out from us, from Jerusalem, and pretended to speak our mind, and in our name, but we gave them no such commission. Wi.—A proper description of heretics, schismatics, and seditious preachers, who go out from their own superiors, and pretend to teach and preach without any mission, et quomodo predicabunt nisi mittantur; how can they preach, unless they are sent! Rom. x. 15.

VER. 28. It hath seemed good to the Holy Ghost, and to us. To us in these matters, wherein by the promises of Christ, we are directed by the Holy Ghost, the spirit of truth, &c.—Than these necessary things. Necessary at this juncture, and always, if we except that order of abstaining from blood, and things strangled, which was not a perpetual, unchangeable precept, but to last only for a time, as S. Chrys. observes. Wi.—This is the first general council held in the Church, and the model of all succeeding ones. In it the apostles, in a commanding and authoritative manner, laid down the law, which was to be the guide of the faithful, knowing they had a right to impose any regulations in the Church, and that they could not employ this authority but to good purposes, directed as they were 29 That you abstain from things sacrificed to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication: from which things keeping yourselves, you shall do well. Fare ye well.

30 They, therefore, being dismissed, went down to Antioch: and when they had gathered together the multitude, they delivered the epistle.

31 Which when they had read, they rejoiced for the consolation.

32 But Judas and Silas, being prophets also themselves, comforted the brethren with many words, and confirmed them.

33 And having remained there some time, they were dismissed with peace, by the brethren, to those who had sent them.

34 But it seemed good to Silas to remain there: and Judas alone set out for Jerusalem.

35 But Paul and Barnabas continued at Antioch, teaching and preaching with many others the word of the Lord.

36 * And after some days, Paul said to Barnabas: Let us return and visit the brethren in all the cities, wherein we have preached the word of the Lord, to see how they do.

37 And Barnabas wished to take along with him John also, who was surnamed Mark.

38 But Paul desired that he (as having departed from them out of Pamphylia, and not gone with them to the work) might not be received.

39 And there was a dissension, so that they departed one from another, and Barnabas indeed taking Mark, sailed to Cyprus.

40 But Paul, choosing Silas, departed, being delivered by the brethren to the grace of God.

* A. D. 51.—b Supra xiii. 18.

by the unerring spirit of truth, which Christ had promised (Matt. xxviii. 20.) should remain with his Church for ever. Hence it would appear that we have no more ground for refusing obedience to the voice of the Church at present, than at her first establishment: and that those who will not hear the Church now, speaking in her Councils, would with as little ceremony have opposed the apostles on this occasion, had they lived at the time. By what spirit of seduction has been introduced, and spread, to such an alarming extent, the opinion, that Christianity (the very leading feature of which is to hear and to obey) authorizes unrestricted liberty? Is then authority an unmeaning word? A.

VER. 29. From blood, and from things strangled. The use of these things, though of their own nature indifferent, was here prohibited, to bring the Jews more easily to admit of the society of the Gentiles; and to exercise the latter in obedience. But this prohibition was but temporary, and has long since ceased to oblige; more especially in the western churches. Ch.—See note on v. 20. supra.

VER. 31. We may here briefly remark, that the controversy was finally adjusted by the decree of the Council. 2dly, That all, not only the Gentiles, but the abettors and masters of the former dissension, experienced great consolation in the promulgation of the decision, receiving it as the resolve not of mere mortal men, but of the Holy Ghost. It hath seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us.

VER. 32. Judas and Silas, being prophets, that is, preachers, as the word prophet, is divers times taken. Wi.—Not only such were called prophets, as had the gift of predicting future events, but such moreover as had the gift of interpreting Scripture, and of speaking of the things of God. V.

VER. 39. There was a dissension,† or dispute, with reasoning, and arguing upon the matter. S. Paul represented to S. Barnabas, that he was not for having John Mark to be their companion, because he had before left them, but S. Barnabas was for having with them his kinsman Mark; and the dispute was such, that upon it S. Paul and Barnabas separated; which gave occasion to the preaching of the gospel in more places. See S. Chrys. hom. xxxiii.—The fault in this contention lay with S. Barnabas; δ Πάυλος τὸ δίκαιον, δ Βαρνάβας τὸ φιλόδημον: Paul sought what was just; Barnabas what was pleasing to nature. The Greeks, moreover, remark, that this severity of Paul was of service in strengthening the too pliant character of Mark, and as such he is saluted by Paul. Col. iv. 10. They separated, as formerly Abraham and Lot, without prejudice to their friendship. Gen. xiii. 9. Mat. Polus synop. criticorum, fol. 4. p. 1528.

* V. 2. πρεσβυτέρους; presbyteros. For the same Greek word we sometimes find in the vulgar Latin, presbyteros, sometimes seniores, sometimes majores 41 And he went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches: commanding them to keep the precepts of the apostles, and the ancients.

CHAP. XVI.

Paul visits the churches. He is called to preach in Macedonia. He is scourged at Philippi.

AND * he came to Derbe and Lystra. And behold there was a certain disciple there named Timothy, the son of a Jewish woman who believed, his father being a Gentile.

2 To this man the brethren, who were in Lystra and Iconium, gave a good testimony.

3 Him Paul would have to go along with him: and taking him, he circumcised him, because of the Jews, who were in those places. For they all knew that his father was a Gentile.

4 And as they passed through the cities, they delivered to them the decrees to keep, that were decreed by the apostles and ancients, who were at Jerusalem.

5 And the churches indeed were confirmed in faith, and increased in number daily.

6 Now having passed through Phrygia, and the country of Galatia, they were forbidden, by the Holy Ghost, to preach the word of God in Asia.

7 And when they were come into Mysia, they attempted to go into Bithynia, and the Spirit of Jesus permitted them not.

8 And when they had passed through Mysia, they went down to Troas:

9 And a vision was shewn to Paul in the night: A man of Macedonia standing, and beseeching him, and saying: Pass over into Macedonia, and help us.

10 And as soon as he had seen the vision, immedinatu: yet it is generally a word of dignity in the ministry of Christ, signifying those who were afterwards known by the name of bishops or priests. When mention is made of πρεσβύτερος, or seniores, of the old law, I have translated elders: but where the ministers of the new law are understood, when in the Latin we have presbyteri, I have put priests; when maiores natu or seniores, I have put in English seniors, bishops or priests, being to be understood.

* A. D. 51.

† V. 39. Dissentio, παροξυνεῖς, acris disceptatio. See S. Chrys.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 3. Circumcised him. Not to obstruct the conversion of the Jews; and because it was still lawful to observe the Jewish ceremonies, though the obligation of keeping the old law had ceased. Wi.—This S. Paul did in order to gain the Jews, and make Timothy acceptable to them. Tirinus.—To the Jew, says he, (1 Cor. ix. 20.) I became a Jew, that I might gain the Jew. If he refused to circumcise Titus, in order to vindicate the Christian's independence of the Mosaic ceremonies; he now submits to the observance of them, to shew there is nothing of itself bad in them, and that they might without crime be practised, till time by degrees had abolished them. S. Aug. ep. lxxxii. ad S. Hieronymum.

VER. 4. Here, as well as in the last verse of the former chapter, we see S. Paul ordering the new converts, wherever he went, to receive, as their rule of conduct, the ordinances of the apostles and priests assembled in Jerusalem.

VER. 6. They were forbidden by the Holy Ghost, to go, and preach at that time in the Lesser Asia, perhaps because their preaching in Macedonia was more necessary; or because S. John was to be sent into Asia. Wi.—Forbidden. Why! Because they were not yet prepared to receive the gospel; or, perhaps, these provinces were reserved for S. John, as Bithynia was for S. Luke. Menochius.—S. Leo compares this question to many others respecting the inscrutable judgments of God. Why did not the Son of God come into the world many ages before? Why did he suffer so many to die in ignorance? Why are there yet so many in infidelity? Why, in one family, does one believe and is converted, while another remains in darkness, and crime? Who shall account for the exercise he pleases to make of his rigour, or his mercy, when all were justly victims of the former! S. Leo de vocat. Gentium. lib. ii. c. 2.

VER. 7. The spirit of Jesus permitted them not. It is the same spirit, which just before was called the Holy Ghost: for the Holy Ghost is the spirit of Jesus, as proceeding from the Son as well as from the Father. Wi.

VER. 9. A vision, &c. The tutelar angel of the province, according to most interpreters, under the form of a Macedonian, who implored S. Paul in behalf of the province he guarded.

ately we sought to go into Macedonia, being assured that God had called us to preach the gospel to them.

11 So sailing from Troas, we came with a direct course to Samothracia, and the day following to Neapolis:

12 And from thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of part of Macedonia, a colony. And we were in this city some days, conferring together.

13 And upon the sabbath-day, we went forth without the gate by a river side, where it seemed that there was prayer: and sitting down, we spoke to the women that were assembled.

14 And a certain woman, named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, one that worshipped God, heard us, whose heart the Lord opened to attend to the things which were spoken by Paul.

15 And when she was baptized, and her household, she besought us, saying: If you have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my house, and remain. And she constrained us.

16 And it came to pass, as we went to prayer, a certain girl, possessed with a pythonical spirit, met us, who brought her masters much gain by divining.

17 The same, following Paul and us, cried out, saying: These men are the servants of the most high God, who announce to you the way to salvation.

18 And this she did many days. But Paul being grieved, turned, and said to the spirit: I command thee, in the name of Jesus Christ, to go out of her. And he went out the same hour.

19 But her masters seeing that the hope of their gain was gone, apprehending Paul and Silas, they brought them into the market-place to the rulers;

20 And presenting them to the magistrates, said: These men disturb our city, being Jews:

21 And preach a fashion which it is not lawful for us to receive, nor observe, being Romans.

22 And the people ran together against them: and the magistrates tearing off their clothes, commanded them to be beaten with rods.

* 2 Cor. xi. 25. Philip. i. 18. 1 Thess. ii. 2.

VER. 10. We. This change in the narration from the third, to the first person, we sought, &c. is remarkable. It is hence inferred, that S. Luke, the author of this book, joined S. Paul at Troas, and became his inseparable companion. Calmet.—It is, however, probable, that as the narrative in the first person changes again at the end of this chapter, and is not resumed, till the fifth verse of the 20th chap. that S. Luke was absent on some mission during the time that elapsed between this and their sailing from Philippi, as mentioned hereafter. Chap. xx. v. 6. Tirinus.

VER. 13. *There was prayer. The Greek word signifies either prayer itself, or an oratory, or place to pray in. Wi.—Not every prayer is here understood, but that which was joined in the celebration of the sacred mysteries. Estius in diffic. loca. See 1 Cor. vii. and Acts vi.

VER. 16. A pythonical spirit. A spirit pretending to divination, to tell secrets, and things to come. See 2 Kings xxviii. Isaiah viii. 19. Wi.—A divining spirit, which pretended to foretell things to come. It is strictly forbidden every where throughout the old law to have any dealings with persons of this description. Deut. xviii. 10. Levit. xx. ult. &c. Hence it would appear that these superstitions were of early practice among mankind. It is lamentable that the present age is still credulous enough to believe in such impostures. The ignorance of mankind, it appears, has always been made a source of emolument to the designing. A.

VER. 17. These men are the servants of the most high God. Evil spirits in possessed people, are sometimes forced to tell the truth. Wi.

VER. 18. Observe here that the servants of God have a power granted them of controlling wicked spirits, according to the promise of our Lord, Luke ix. and x. Hence the seventy disciples, returning, said: Lord, even the devils are subject to us in thy name. Est. in diffic. loc.

VER. 20. Jews. This was the name the first Christians went by among the pagans. Indeed our Saviour's being born of that nation, and his disciples adorning the same God, and following the same morality and Scriptures as the Jews, 23 And when they had laid many stripes upon them they cast them into prison, charging the jailor to keep them securely.

24 Who having received such a charge, thrust them into the inner prison, and made their feet fast in the stocks.

25 And at midnight, Paul and Silas praying, praised God: and they who were in prison heard them.

26 And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken. And immediately all the doors were opened: and the bands of all were loosed.

27 And the keeper of the prison being awakened, and seeing the doors of the prison open, drawing his sword, would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had fled.

28 But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying: Do thyself no harm, for we are all here.

29 Then calling for a light, he went in, and trembling, fell down at the feet of Paul and Silas:

30 And bringing them out, he said: Masters, what must I do, that I may be saved?

31 But they said: Believe in the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

32 And they spoke the word of the Lord to him, and to all that were in his house.

33 And he taking them the same hour of the night, washed their wounds: and he himself was baptized, and all his family forthwith.

34 And when he had brought them into his own house, he laid the table for them, and rejoiced with all his family, believing God.

35 And when it was day, the magistrates sent the serjeants, saying: Let those men go.

36 And the keeper of the prison told these words to Paul: The magistrates have sent to have you discharged: now therefore depart, and go in peace.

37 But Paul said to them: After having beaten us publicly, uncondemned, men that are Romans, they cast us into prison: and now do they thrust us out privately? Not so: but let them come, were sufficient reasons to make them confounded. When Suetonius relates that Claudius banished the Jews from Rome, he means the Christians. Calmet.

VER. 21. There was a standing decree of the senate, which forbade the introduction of any new divinity, without the formal consent of the senate. V.

VER. 24. Made their feet fast in the stocks. By the Latin and Greek text, they made them fast with wood. Wi.

VER. 26. All the doors were opened. This made the jailor conclude the prisoners had made their escape. And he being answerable for them, and expecting to be put to death, was for stabbing himself. Wi.

VER. 33. Was baptized, being first told what he was to believe, and do. Wi.—Hence Catholics draw a very plausible argument for the baptism of infants, as it is very probable there were some infants in the family. See Estius in diffic. loc.

VER. 35. Sent the serjeants,† vergers, or such like officers. Wi.

VER. 37. Romans. S. Paul inherited his right of citizenship from his father; it does not appear how Silas obtained it, perhaps by purchase. There is no proof that Silas was a freeman of Rome. D. Dion. Carthus.—It was forbidden by the Porcian and Sempronian laws, for a Roman citizen to be scourged, unless he was likewise convicted of a capital crime. Cicero pro Rabirio. Facinus est vinciri civem Romanum: scelus verberari. Id. cont. Verrem. The Romans were always very jealous of the dignity of their city. We cannot but admire S. Paul's astonishing desire of suffering for the name of Jesus, in concealing a circumstance, the very naming of which would have saved him the cruel scourging he suffered. If he now refuses to go out of the prison privately, it is to vindicate his honour, and to avert the scandal, which the new converts would naturally feel, in seeing their master treated as a criminal. He exemplified in this instance S. Augustin's principle; "Our lives are necessary for ourselves, but our reputation for others." A.—Estius declares, that Silas was also a Roman citizen, and that from this circumstance he probably received a Roman name, as Paul did. For in other parts of Scripture we find him styled Silvanus, (2 Cor. i. 19.) and at the commence-

38 And discharge us themselves. And the serjeants told these words to the magistrates. And they were afraid, hearing that they were Romans :

39 And coming, they intreated them : and bringing them out, they desired them to depart out of the city.

40 And going out of the prison, they entered into the house of Lydia : and having seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

CHAP. XVII.

Paul preaches to the Thessalonians and Bereans. His discourse to the Athenians.

AND "when they had passed through Amphipolis and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where there was a synagogue of the Jews.

2 And Paul, according to his custom, went in to them : and for three sabbath-days he reasoned with them out of the Scriptures,

3 Laying open and inculcating that the Christ was to suffer, and to rise again from the dead : and that this is the Jesus Christ, whom I preach to you.

4 And some of them believed, and were joined to Paul and Silas, and of those who served God, and of the Gentiles, a great multitude, and noble women not a few.

5 But the Jews moved with envy, taking with them some wicked men of the vulgar sort, and making a tumult, set the city in an uproar : and besetting Jason's house, sought to bring them out to the people.

6 And when they had not found them, they dragged Jason and certain brethren to the rulers of the city, crying out : That they who disturb the city, are come hither also, a A. D. 51.

ment of both the epistles to the Thessalonians.—Not so ; but let them come, &c. S. Paul patiently submitted himself to be whipped in a most disgraceful and cruel manner, which he could easily have prevented or put a stop to, by saying, I am a Roman citizen. Afterwards, when they were for setting him at liberty, he claims his privilege, he puts all the magistrates in a fright ; they run to ask him pardon, and entreat him with all civility to leave the town, which he does not think fit to do, till he visited his brethren and friends. Wi.

* V. 13. Oratio, προσευχή, preces, oratio & Oratorium.

† V. 35. Lictores, παῖδες, vergers, rod-bearers.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 2. It was customary with S. Paul to open the Scriptures first to the Jews, (Acts xiii. 46.) and to argue with them from the law and the propheta. Acts xxviii. 28. S. Paul made use of the same passages of Scripture to convince the Jews, as Jesus Christ did on a similar occasion. Mat. Polus.

VER. 3. That the Christ was to suffer. The suffering of Christ was the great stumbling-block to the Jews, which S. Paul now attempted to removè, by shewing them from the Scripture, that this was one of the necessary characters of the Messias, contained in the prophets. All the other marks were likewise accomplished in Christ. D. Dion. Carth.—And that this is Jesus Christ, whom I preach to you. The transition from an oblique to a direct mode of speech is very common, especially in the holy Scriptures.

VER. 4. And some of them, that is, of the Jews, in whose synagogue he preached, believed, and of those that worshipped God, that is, of those who adored the only true God, though they had not submitted themselves to circumcision, and to the ceremonies of the Jewish law, and of the Gentiles, that is, of such as till that time had been heathens, and idolaters ; so that here three sorts of persons were converted by S. Paul : 1. Jews ; 2. worshippers of the true God that were not Jews ; and 3. Gentiles. In this book of the Acts, mention is several times made of worshippers, to wit, of God, by which many understand Jewish proselytes : but as they neither were Jews already, nor perhaps ever designed to become Jews, we may distinguish two sorts of the Jewish proselytes. Some were proselytes to the Jewish religion, by a submission to circumcision, and to all the precepts and ceremonies of the Mosaic laws. These are also by some called proselytes of the covenant, being as much Jews as they who had been always so. Others are called proselytes of the gate, or proselytes to the God of the Jews, but not to the religion of the Jews. Of such seems to have been Cornelius, the centurion. Acts x. Lydia, Acts xvi. 14. and Titus Justus, Acts xviii. 7. Such also seems to have been the eunuch of Candace, the queen of the Ethiopians, Acts viii. Naaman, the Syrian, after he was cured of his leprosy, (4 Kings v. 17.) and many others, that lived in Judea, and in other countries. These, therefore, are called worshippers, meaning of the true God, though they embraced not the legal precepts and ceremonies of the Jews. See Monsr. Heure's Dictionary. Wi

7 Whom Jason hath received, and these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying : that there is another king, Jesus.

8 And they stirred up the people, and the rulers of the city hearing these things.

9 And having taken satisfaction from Jason, and the rest, they let them go.

10 But the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night to Berea. Who when they were come thither, entered into the synagogue of the Jews.

11 Now these were more noble than those of Thessalonica, who received the word with all eagerness, daily searching the Scriptures, whether these things were so.

12 And many indeed of them believed, and not a few of honourable Gentile women and men.

13 But when the Jews in Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was also preached by Paul at Berea, they came thither also, stirring up, and troubling the multitude.

14 And then the brethren immediately sent away Paul, to go to the sea : but Silas and Timothy remained there.

15 And they that conducted Paul, brought him as far as Athens, and receiving a commandment from him to Silas and Timothy, that they should come to him with all speed, they departed.

16 Now whilst Paul waited for them at Athens, his spirit was excited within him, seeing the city given up to idolatry.

17 He disputed, therefore, in the synagogue with the Jews, and with them that served God, and in b A. D. 52.

VER. 6. Who disturb the city,† put it in an uproar. In the ordinary Greek copies, for the city, we read the whole world. Wi.

VER. 7. Another king. These Jews suppress, with great artifice, their true cause of vexation against the apostles, and change a mere question of religion, into one of temporal policy. The accusation of raising up a new power in opposition to Cæsar's, had been sufficiently refuted and disavowed before Pilate by the author of our religion, and was therefore too gross to be repeated now. My kingdom, says our blessed Saviour, is not of this world. There is no necessary connection between spiritual and temporal power. It is thus that the abettors of persecution are never at a loss for pretext, when necessary. Mad zeal is not scrupulously nice in the choice of arguments. A.

VER. 10. Synagogue. In flying from the face of persecution in due season, S. Paul has imitated the instruction and example of his master. When his labours are unsuccessful in one place, he renews them in another, and wherever he is, his object is always the same, to announce the truth to the Jews first, then to the Gentiles. D. Carthus.

VER. 11. These were more noble than those of Thessalonica. According to the common exposition, the sense is, that these of Berea, were of a more noble and generous disposition of mind, not carried away with envy and malice, like those of Thessalonica.—Searching the Scriptures, or those places of the prophets by which S. Paul proved that Jesus was the Messias, who was to suffer death, &c. Wi.—Daily searching the Scriptures, &c. The sheep are not hereby made judges of their pastors, the people of the priests, and lay men and women of S. Paul's doctrine. The Bereans did not read the Old Testament (and the New was not then published) to dispute with the apostle, or to sanction his doctrines : but it was a great comfort and confirmation to the Jews that had the Scriptures, to find, even as S. Paul said, that Christ was God, crucified, risen, and ascended to heaven ; which by his expounding they understood, and never before, though they read them, and heard them read every sabbath. So it is a great comfort to a Catholic to see in the Scriptures the clear passages that prove the truth or his tenets, and shew the grounds of his hopes. But this by no means authorizes him to be judge of the true pastors of the Church, whom he is commanded by Jesus Christ to hear and obey, and from whom they are to learn the genuine sense of the Scriptures.

VER. 16. Lactantius ridicules the folly of idolatry in a neat strain of irony, which he introduces by the following verses from Lucilius :

Ut pueri infantes credunt signa omnia athena
Vivere et esse homines ; sic isti omnia ficta
Vera putant, &c.

—The poet compares these fools to children. I think them worse ; for the latter only take the statues for men, they for gods. Age causes the error of the one, folly of the other. These soon cease to be deceived, but the folly of those lasts, and increases always. Lact. de fals. Relig. lib. i the market-place, every day, with those that were present.

18 And certain Epicurean and Stoic philosophers disputed with him, and some said: What is it that this babbler would say? But others: He seemeth to be a preacher of new gods: because he preached to them Jesus, and the resurrection.

19 And taking him, they brought him to the Areopagus, saying: May we know what this new doctrine is, which thou speakest of?

20 For thou bringest certain new things to our ears: We would know, therefore, what these things mean.

21 (Now all the Athenians, and strangers that were there, employed themselves in nothing else but either in telling or in hearing something new.)

22 But Paul, standing in the midst of the Areopagus, said: Ye men of Athens, I perceive that ye are in all things over-religious.

23 For passing by, and seeing your idols, I found an altar also, on which was written: TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. What, therefore, you worship without knowing it, that I preach to you.

24 *God, who made the world and all things therein,

* Gen. i. 1.

VER. 18. Epicurean and Stoic philosophers. The former of these philosophers held as their doctrine, that the Almighty did not interfere by his providence in the government of the world; that the soul did not subsist after the body; and consequently, that there was no future state of retribution. The latter denied that man had liberty of action, and maintained, that all things happened by destiny and fatal necessity. These were the two opposite sects S. Paul had to contend with. Calmet.—The Stoics believed in the immortality of the soul, and came the nearest to the Christian religion: but both Stoics and Epicureans, with all pagan philosophers, denied the resurrection of bodies; hence S. Augustin says, the faith of a resurrection is peculiar to Christians. Estius—What is it that this babbler would say? A word of contempt, which some translate, this prattler. It is thought to be a metaphor from birds picking up little seeds, or the like, for their food; and to signify, that S. Paul has picked up words and sentences without any solid meaning. Wi.

VER. 19. To the Areopagus. In this place sat the Athenian judges: but some think that by this word may be here signified, some large hall or court, joining to the Areopagus, where all sorts of people met. Wi.—The Areopagus was the supreme and most famous tribunal of all Greece, before which all great causes were tried. The persons who composed it were much renowned for their wisdom. Cicero, and many other Romans, were ambitious of the honour of being an Areopagite; but the power of Athens being now much diminished, this court had sunk in importance, and was now not much more than the shadow of a great name. Calmet.

VER. 22. Over-religious. Or very superstitious. To be superstitious, or given to superstition, is commonly taken for a vain and groundless religious worship, but it is also sometimes used in a good sense. And perhaps S. Paul, in the beginning of his speech to so many men of learning, does not so openly blame them for being vainly and foolishly superstitious, but by their inscription, to the unknown God, he takes notice how nice and exact they pretended to be, in not omitting to pay some kind of homage to any god, or gods of all other nations, whom they might not know. For some interpreters think, that by this altar they designed to worship every god of any nation, who was not come to their knowledge: or to worship that great God hinted at in the writings of Plato: or as others conjecture, the God of the Jews, of whom they might have heard such wonders, and whose name the Jews themselves said to be unknown, and ineffable. However, from this inscription S. Paul takes an occasion, with wonderful dexterity, with sublime reflections, and with that solid eloquence, of which he was master, and which he employed, as often as it was necessary, to inform them, and instruct them, concerning the works of the one true God, of whom they had little knowledge, by their own fault: that this one true God made the world, and all things in it: that from one man he raised all mankind: that his presence is not confined to temples made by the hands of men, being every where, and in all creatures, preserving them every moment: that in him we live, move, and have our being, or subsist: that it is he, who hath determined the time, limits, or bounds of every empire, and kingdom, and of every man's life: that this true God, who made, preserves, and governs all things in heaven and on earth, cannot be like to gold, silver, or any thing made by the art, or fancy of men. He puts them in mind that according even to one of their own heathen poets, Aratus, men themselves are the offspring of God, being blessed with a being and knowledge above all other creatures in this world: who by the light of reason ought to seek God, and by considering the visible effects of Providence over the world, and the creatures in it, might come to the knowledge of this one God, the author of all, at least to an imperfect knowledge of him, as men find out things by feeling, or as it were, groping in the dark. He he being the Lord of heaven and earth, dwelleth not in temples made with hands.

25 Nor is he served by the hands of men, as though he needed any thing, seeing it is he who giveth to all life, and breath, and all things;

26 And hath made of one, all mankind, to dwell upon the whole face of the earth, determining appointed times, and the limits of their habitation.

27 That they should seek God, if haply they may feel after him or find him: although he be not far from every one of us.

28 For in him we live, and move, and have our being: as some also of your own poets said: For we are also his offspring.

29 Being, therefore, the offspring of God, we must not suppose the Divinity to be like unto gold or silver, or stone, the graving of art, and device of man.

30 And God, indeed, having overlooked the times of this ignorance, now declareth to men, that all should every where do penance, 31 Because he hath appointed a day wherein he will judge the world in equity, by the man, whom he hath appointed, giving faith to all, by raising him up from the dead.

b Supra vii. 48.

then adds, (v. 30.) that having, as it were, overlooked, and permitted men for many ages to run on in this ignorance and blindness, in punishment of their sins, (this their ignorance of one true God, the author of all things, being wilful and inexcusable) now the same true God hath been pleased to announce to all men, that henceforward they acknowledge, and worship him, that they repent, and do penance for their sins. Wi.

VER. 23. It may be asked, why they had not implicit faith, worshipping the true, though unknown, God? 1st. because the worship of the true God can never exist with the worship of idols; 2d. because an explicit faith in God is required of all; 3d. because it is repugnant to implicit faith, to admit any thing contrary to it, as comparing this unknown God with the pagan idols; for God to be at all, must be one. Lucan towards the end of his 2d book, hath these words:

—Et dedita sacris

Incerti Judæa Dei.

—What, therefore, you improperly worship, that I preach to you, and instruct you in the true worship, far different from what you pay to your strange gods.

VER. 24. God . . . dwelleth not in temples. He who is infinite cannot be confined to space; nor stand in need of what human hands can furnish. Temples are not for God, but for man. It is the latter who derives assistance from them. The same may be observed of all exterior acts of worship. They are serviceable, inasmuch as they proceed from, or powerfully assist, interior devotion, by the impressions which exterior objects leave upon the soul. The reciprocal action of one upon the other, in our present state of existence, is great and inevitable. A. See c. vii. sup. v. 48.—God, indeed, dwelleth in the temple, yea, and in the soul of the just man, but he is not confined there, as the idols were to their temples. Hence the prayer of Solomon at the consecration of the temple: if heaven, and the heaven of heavens cannot contain thy immensity, how much less this house, which I have erected! God dwelleth there, then, to receive the prayers and sacrifices of the faithful, but not as though he needed any thing. See v. 25.—God is not contained in temples; so as to need them for his dwelling, or any other uses, as the heathens imagined. Yet by his omnipresence, he is both there and every where. Ch.

VER. 27. Feel after him. Si forte attrahent eum, si ἄραγε ψυλαφίσταιν. It signifies palpare quasi in tenebris. Wi.

VER. 28. S. Paul here cites Aratus, a Greek poet, and his own countryman, a native of Cilicia.

VER. 29. Cherubim, with extended wings, were ordered by God to be made, and placed over the propitiatory; (Exod. xxxvii. 7.) the brazen serpent is declared by Jesus Christ himself to have been a figure of him; therefore to blame the universally received practice of the Catholic Church, with regard to pictures and images, betrays either great prevention, or great ignorance. S. Gregory says: "What writing does for readers, that a picture does for the ignorant; for in it they see what they ought to follow, and in it they read, who know no letters." And he sharply rebukes Serenus's indiscreet zeal for removing pictures, instead of teaching the people what use may be made of them. l. ix. ep. 9.

VER. 30. Overlooked. Despiciebat, τρεψίδω. It may either signify looking down on the ignorant world, and so taking pity of it; or rather that God having overlooked, and permitted mankind to go on so long in their sins, now invites them to repentance, by sending Jesus, their Saviour and Redeemer. See the Analysis, disert. xxxiv. Wi.

VER. 31. Because he hath appointed a day for judging all men with equity, by the man, to wit, Christ Jesus, a man, and also his true Son, whom he has appointed to be their judge; and by raising him (Jesus) from the dead, he hath 32 And when they had heard of the resurrection of the dead, some indeed mocked: but others said: We will hear thee again concerning this matter.

33 So Paul went out from among them.

34 But certain men adhered to him and believed: among whom was also Dionysius, the Areopagite, and a woman, named Damaris, and others with them.

CHAP. XVIII.

Paul founds the church of Corinth: and preaches at Ephesus, &c. Apollo goes to Corinth.

AFTER *these things, departing from Athens, he came to Corinth.

2 And finding a certain Jew, named Aquila, a native of Pontus, who had lately come from Italy, with Priscilla, his wife, (because Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome) he came to them.

3 And because he was of the same trade, he remained with them, and wrought: (now they were tent-makers by trade.)

4 And he reasoned in the synagogue every sabbath, introducing the name of the Lord Jesus, and he persuaded the Jews and the Greeks.

5 And when Silas and Timothy were come from Macedonia, Paul was earnest in preaching, testifying to the Jews that Jesus is the Christ.

6 But they contradicting and blaspheming, shaking his garments, he said to them: Your blood be upon your own heads: I am clean: from henceforth I will go to the Gentiles.

7 And departing thence, he entered into the house of a certain man, named Titus Justus, one that worshipped God, whose house joined to the synagogue.

8 And Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, believed made it credible, and given sufficient proofs of this truth, that every one shall rise from death. Wi.

* A. D. 52.—b A. D. 54.

VER. 32. When they heard of the resurrection of the dead. This seemed so impossible, even to the philosophers among them, that some of them presently laughed, and made a jest of it. Others said, we will hear thee on this another time, and some believed. Wi.

VER. 34. Dionysius the Areopagite. This illustrious convert was made the first bishop of Athens. The martyrologies say, S. Paul raised him to that dignity. It is the same person, who, observing the convulsions of nature, which paid homage, as it were, to its God, expiring upon the cross, and not knowing the cause, is said to have exclaimed: Either the universe is falling to ruin, or the God of nature must be suffering. It appears from his writings, that he was, previous to his conversion, of the Platonic school. Ven. Bede was mistaken in supposing that he was afterwards the bishop of Corinth, of that name, who so successfully employed his pen for the good of the Church. This Dionysius lived a whole century after the Areopagite. Estius.

* V. 4. De colentibus Gentilibusque. In the common Greek copies, there is no and, but only of the worshipping Gentiles, τῶν δὲ σεβουσίων ἑλλήνων, but in other copies, καὶ ἑλλήνων.

† V. 6. Qui urbem concitant, in the common Greek copies, οὐκυμίνην, orbem: so that this difference might happen in the Latin, by the change of one letter only of orbem, for orbem: but some Greek MSS. have τὴν πόλιν, civitatem.

‡ V. 18. Semini-verbius, δ σπέρματος λόγος, the critics derive it from λέγειν σπέρματα, colligere semina.

§ V. 22. Superstitiosiores δειδαίμονοσεβείς, from δέω, timeo, and δαίμων. Δειδαίμονια is sometimes taken in a good sense for religio, as also superstitio in Latin. See Budæus, and Plutarch apud Scapulam. See also Suidas.

| V. 23. Ignoto Deo, ἀγνωστῷ θεῷ. See Corn. a Lapide.

CHAP. XVIII. VER. 3. Critics are divided in their opinions about the nature of S. Paul's employment: but it is generally supposed to be making tents of skins, such as were formerly used by travellers and soldiers. Tirinus.—Hence the expression, esse sub pellibus. The apostle submitted to this labour, that he might be no burden to those to whom he preached the gospel. S. Aug. tract. in Joan.—The Jews, with their characteristic good sense, in matters of this kind, made it the first duty of parents, to teach their children some trade, by which they might gain their livelihood. To neglect this was supposed to be equivalent to teaching them to steal. Hence their learned men were likewise practitioners in the Lord with all his house: and many of the Corinthians hearing, believed, and were baptized.

9 And the Lord said to Paul in the night, by a vision; Fear not, but speak, and hold not thy peace:

10 Because I am with thee: and no man shall set upon thee to hurt thee: for I have much people in this city.

11 And he stayed there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them.

12 But when Gallio was præconsul of Achaia, the Jews with one accord rose up against Paul, and brought him to the judgment-seat, 13 Saying: That this man persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law.

14 And when Paul was beginning to open his mouth, Gallio said to the Jews: If it were some matter of injustice, or a heinous deed, ye Jews, I should with reason bear with you.

15 But if they be questions of a word, and of names, and of your law, look you to it: I will not be judge of such matters.

16 And he drove them from the judgment-seat.

17 And all laying hold on Sosthenes, the ruler of the synagogue, beat him before the judgment-seat: and Gallio cared for none of those things.

18 But Paul, when he had stayed yet many days, taking leave of the brethren, he sailed from thence into ^bSyria, (and with him Priscilla and Aquila,) ^chaving shorn his head in Cenchra: for he had a vow.

19 And he came to Ephesus, and left them there. But he himself entering into the synagogue, reasoned with the Jews.

20 And when they intreated him to make a longer stay, he consented not, in some laborious trade. They were ignorant of the distinction between low and honourable professions, which refinement and vanity have introduced among us. Every employment was honourable, which was conducive to the good of their neighbour, and compatible with virtue and modesty; and the more so, in proportion as the wants of mankind made it more necessary. See Fleury's Manners of the Israelites. Passim.

c Num. vi. 18. Infra xxi. 24.

VER. 4. Introducing the name of the Lord Jesus. These words are found in few Greek copies, and so are omitted in the Protestant translation. Wi.

VER. 5. No further mention is made of Silas in these Acts. Some martyrologists think he died in Macedonia by martyrdom. He is honoured in the Church as a saint, and sometimes, as well as S. Barnabas, obtains the title of apostle. Calmet. See the annotations, c. xvi. v. 37.

VER. 6. Shaking his garments. See Matt. x. 14. Your blood be upon your own heads: that is, you are guilty of your own perdition: we have discharged our duty by preaching to you. Wi.

VER. 12. This Gallio was brother to the great Seneca, Nero's preceptor, as that author himself assures us. Pref. lib. v. Quæst. Natur. He was called Anneus Novatus, but took the name of Gallio by adoption, and was made præconsul by his brother's interest, whose honours and disgraces he equally participated. Being condemned to death by Nero, he laid violent hands upon himself. It is probable S. Paul became acquainted with Seneca. S. Jerom and S. Augustin say, many letters passed between them, which are not now extant. Tirinus. See also Eusebius. An. Christi 68.

VER. 17. Beat him. It is uncertain whether the Jews themselves beat Sosthenes, being perhaps vexed at him, for not managing well the cause; or whether he was struck by the attendants of the præconsul, to force him away, when he would not desist, nor retire. See the Analysis, dissert. xxxv. Wi.

VER. 18. Shorn, &c. It was customary among the Jews to make vows of abstaining from all inebriating liquor, not to cut their hair for a limited time, &c. This was the vow of the Nazarites, mentioned Num. vi. 18. Acts xxii. 24. S. Paul had probably taken upon himself some obligation of this kind; perhaps in condescension to the Jews, who were yet weak in faith. The time being now expired, he cut his hair as before. It was lawful for converts to observe these legal ceremonies, till the gospel was perfectly established, provided they did not place their hopes of salvation in them, or believe that the faith and grace of Christ were ineffectual without them. D. Carthus.—For he had a vow, that is, Paul, not Aquila. This seems to have been such a vow, as those called Nazarites, used to make, of abstaining from wine for a time, of not cutting their hair, and of making some offerings in the temple at Jerusalem. Wi.

21 But taking his leave, and saying: I will return to you again, God willing, he departed from Ephesus.

22 And going down to Cæsarea, he went up, and saluted the church, and so came down to Antioch.

23 And after he had spent some time there, he departed, passing in order through the country of Galatia and Phrygia, confirming all the disciples.

24 Now, a certain Jew, named Apollo, a native of Alexandria, an eloquent man, came to Ephesus, one mighty in the Scriptures.

25 This man was instructed in the way of the Lord: and being fervent in spirit, spoke, and taught diligently the things that are of Jesus, knowing only the baptism of John.

26 This man, therefore, began to speak boldly in the synagogue. Whom when Priscilla and Aquila had heard, they took him to them, and expounded more perfectly to him the way of the Lord.

27 And whereas he was desirous to go to Achaia, the brethren exhorting, wrote to the disciples to receive him. Who, when he was come, helped them much, who had believed.

28 For he with might convinced the Jews in public, shewing, by the Scriptures, Jesus to be the Christ.

CHAP. XIX.

Paul establishes the church at Ephesus. The tumult of the silversmiths.

AND *it came to pass, while Apollo was at Corinth, that Paul having passed through the upper parts, came to Ephesus, and found certain disciples:

2 And he said to them: Have you received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? But they said to him: We have not so much as heard whether there be a Holy Ghost.

3 And he said: In what then were you baptized? Who said: In John's baptism.

* A. D. 54.—^b Matt. iii. 11. Mark i. 8. Luke iii. 16.

VER. 22. He went up. To Jerusalem is most probably understood, that being the chief object of S. Paul's journey. It seems rather extraordinary that S. Luke should have omitted the express mention of the city. But having told us his object was to be at Jerusalem, he perhaps thought it was enough to say, he went up. Calmet.—In Palestine, the expression, to go up, was sometimes taken for going up to Jerusalem. John vii. 8. 10. xii. 20. Acts xxiv. 11. And reciprocally in c. xxiv. 1. to go down, is taken for going down from Jerusalem to Cæsarea. V.—Ibid. In the Scripture, when Antioch and Cæsarea are simply mentioned, Antioch, in Syria, and Cæsarea, in Palestine, are uniformly designated.—To Cæsarea, not in Cappadocia, but in Palestine, from whence he went up to Jerusalem, and then down to Antioch, in Syria. Wi.

VER. 24. Apollo . . . one mighty in the Scriptures. Lit. powerful in the Scriptures, yet knew no baptism, but that of John. Wi.—When we consider the great harvest, and few labourers, and the small time that the apostles could give to any one place for instructions, we shall not be so much surprised, that this zealous convert should not yet be perfectly instructed in every doctrine of Christianity. This happened about twenty years after our Lord's ascension. He is the same person as is mentioned 1 Cor. iii. 7. A.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Disciples. These were apparently disciples of S. John the Baptist, who believed in Christ from his testimony, and had received no farther instruction, nor any baptism but John's. Calmet.

VER. 2. S. Paul first inquires of them, if they have received the Holy Ghost by confirmation. Their answer is probably not to be interpreted with rigour; since they must have heard something of the holy Spirit, so often mentioned in the Old Testament, by whom the prophets are said to speak, &c. They meant, they did not know there was in the Church, any means of communicating this Spirit to the faithful. Idem.

VER. 5. Baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, so called to distinguish it from the baptism of John, and that of Christ was given in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, according to the command of Christ himself. Wi.

VER. 6. Imposed his hands on them, by which imposition of hands, was given the Holy Ghost in the sacrament of confirmation. Wi.

VER. 12. Aprons. It is likely such as he used in working, cured diseases, and cast out devils. What wonder, then, if God work miracles by the relics of martyrs and saints, to testify the sanctity of his servants, and to encourage others (1464)

4 Then Paul said: ^bJohn baptized the people with the baptism of penance, saying; That they should believe in him who was to come after him, that is to say, in Jesus.

5 Having heard these things, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.

6 And when Paul had imposed his hands on them, the Holy Ghost came upon them, and they spoke with tongues and prophesied.

7 And all the men were about twelve.

8 And entering into the synagogue, he spoke boldly for the space of three months, disputing and persuading concerning the kingdom of God.

9 But when some were hardened and believed not, but spoke evil of the way of the Lord before the multitude, departing from them, he separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus.*

10 And this continued for two years, so that all that dwelt in Asia, heard the word of the Lord, Jews and Gentiles.

11 And God wrought by the hand of Paul more than common miracles:

12 So that even there were brought from his body to the sick handkerchiefs and aprons, and the diseases departed from them, and the wicked spirits went out of them.

13 Now ^dsome also of the Jewish exorcists, who went about, attempted to invoke over them, that had evil spirits, the name of the Lord Jesus, saying: I conjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth.

14 And there were certain men, seven sons of Sceva, a Jew, a chief priest, who did this.

15 But the evil spirit answering, said to them: Jesus I know, and Paul I know: but who are you?

16 And the man, in whom the evil spirit was, leaping upon them, and mastering them both, prevailed both to give them a reasonable honour, and to imitate their lives? Wi.—Thus was fulfilled the promise which Christ had made his disciples, viz that they should perform greater miracles than he himself had done. S. Chrysostom repeats more than once, that these clothes raised the dead, and that the apostles' shadow chased away all maladies, and triumphed over death. Perhaps the unprejudiced reader may observe in this verse some reason for paying due regard to the relics, or whatever has belonged to the saints.

John i. 26. Supra i. 5. and xi. 16.—^c A. D. 55.—^d A. D. 56.

VER. 13. The Jewish exorcists. Among the Jews were some, who by calling upon the name of the true God, sometimes cast out evil spirits. But these sons of Sceva seeing S. Paul cast out devils, by calling upon the name of Jesus, thought fit to do the same, though they did not believe in Jesus Christ. And God punished them in this manner, as it is here related, at least two of them. Wi.—It is uncertain whether the Jews really possessed the power of exorcising demoniacs. From the 12th chapter of S. Matthew, one would be inclined to the affirmative opinion, as our Saviour seems to mention it as a thing well attested. The Jews pretended they received their exorcisms from Solomon. On the other hand, neither the Old nor New Testament ever approve of this power in them nor is it any where mentioned in Scripture that Solomon was the author of any such things. The old law was particularly severe in condemning every kind of enchantment. It is certain, that they, in the time here spoken of, added much superstition and magic to these rites. Tirinus et alii.—Josephus mentions remarkable instances of their power in exorcisms performed in his own presence, and in that of the emperor Vespasian, and his whole army. Lib. ii. c. 25. De Bello.—Extraordinary things might possibly be performed by magic and collusion between these impostors and the demons. That this power of expelling devils, resides in the Church, every page of primitive ecclesiastical history, testifies. Scripture is also equally explicit on this subject. The exorcisms, says S. Cyprian, are the spiritual torments and scourges of the demons. Ep. ad Demetrium.—It was for this reason the Jews, on this occasion, used the name of Jesus; a name terrible to the infernal spirits, to add power to their imprecations. Tertullian urges facts of this power in the Christians, with much energy and eloquence, in his Apology. Prudentius has recorded the same, with equal elegance, in his verse—

—Torquetur Apollo.

Nomine percussus Christi, nec fulmina verbi Ferre potest. Agitant miserum verbera lingua.

against them, so that they fled out of that house naked and wounded.

17 And this became known to all the Jews and the Gentiles who dwelt at Ephesus: and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified.

18 And many of those who believed, came confessing and declaring their deeds.

19 And many of those who had followed curious arts, brought their books together, and burnt them before all: and computing the price of them, they found the money to be fifty thousand pieces of silver.

20 So mightily increased the word of God, and was confirmed.

21 Now these things being ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying: After I have been there, I must also see Rome.

22 So sending into Macedonia two of those that ministered to him, Timothy and Erastus, he himself remained for a time in Asia.

23 Now at that time there arose no small disturbance about the way of the Lord.*

24 For a certain man, named Demetrius, a silversmith, who made silver temples for Diana, brought no small gain to the craftsmen:

25 Whom calling together, with the workmen of like occupation, he said: Ye men, know that our gain is by this trade:

26 Now you see, and hear, that this Paul, by persuasion hath drawn away a great multitude, not only at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, saying: That they are no gods which are made with hands.

27 So that not only this our craft is in danger of being vilified, but also the temple of great Diana shall be thought nothing of, yea, and her majesty shall begin to be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth.

28 Having heard these things, they were full of anger, and cried out, saying: Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

29 And the whole city was filled with confusion, and they rushed with one accord into the theatre, having

* A. D. 57.

VER. 18. Confessing and declaring their deeds, as penitents do in the sacrament of penance, and not only in general declaring or confessing themselves sinners. See Matt. iii. 6. Wi.

VER. 19. Curious arts. By which are here meant books of divination and magic art, to which study the Ephesians were much addicted. The price of the books burnt, amounted to a great sum, even computing the 50,000 denarii, each of them at sevenpence half penny English money. Wi.—The value of the books here destroyed might have amounted to £1000 sterling. The Christian emperors, Constantine the Great, Valentinian, Theodosius, Marcian, and Justinian, have made laws not less strict for destroying, than those of the Church for prohibiting, the use of wicked books, where danger is likely to ensue. The danger of reading them is set forth by Eusebius, l. vii. c. 6; by S. Austin, l. iii. de bap. c. 14; by S. Gregory, l. v. ep. 64.—Such baneful productions should be destroyed; for although they may possibly produce no bad effect during the life of the present possessors, no one can pretend to say into what hands they will afterwards fall, nor what evil they may hereafter occasion.

VER. 21. I must also see Rome. It is what S. Paul earnestly desired, and what the Spirit now revealed to him. See Rom. i. Wi.

VER. 23. About the way of the Lord; that is, about Christian faith, and religion. Wi.—A great source of these troubles that ensued, was the preaching of the gospel.

VER. 24. Who made silver temples for Diana.* Perhaps figures of Diana's temple in silver; or boxes and shrines, in which was the statue or figure of Diana. Wi.

VER. 27. In danger of being vilified, and Diana of losing her reputation. They ought to have reflected, says S. Chrys. (hom. xlii.) that if such a poor man, as Paul, could destroy the worship, and the majesty of this great goddess, whom, caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, companions of Paul.

30 And when Paul would have entered in unto the people, the disciples suffered him not.

31 And some also of the rulers of Asia, who were his friends, sent unto him, desiring that he would not venture himself into the theatre.

32 Now some cried out one thing, some another. For the assembly was confused, and the greater part knew not for what cause they were come together.

33 And they drew forth Alexander out of the multitude, the Jews thrusting him forward. And Alexander, beckoning with his hand for silence, would have given the people satisfaction.

34 But as soon as they perceived him to be a Jew, all with one voice, for the space of about two hours, cried out: Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

35 And when the town-clerk had appeased the multitudes, he said: Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper of the great Diana, and of Jupiter's offspring?

36 Since, therefore, these things cannot be contradicted, you ought to be quiet, and do nothing rashly.

37 For you have brought hither these men, who are neither guilty of sacrilege, nor of blasphemy against your goddess.

38 But if Demetrius, and the craftsmen who are with him, have a cause against any man, the courts of justice are open, and there are proconsuls: let them accuse one another.

39 And if you inquire after any other matter, it may be decided in a lawful assembly.

40 For we are in danger of being arraigned for this day's uproar: there being no man guilty (of whom we can give an account) of this concourse. And when he had said these things, he dismissed the assembly.

CHAP. XX.

Paul passes through Macedonia and Greece: he raises a dead man to life at Troas. His discourse to the clergy of Ephesus.

AND after the tumult ceased, Paul calling to him the disciples, and exhorting them, took his leave, and set forward to go into Macedonia.

as they say, all the world adored, how much greater and worthy of adoration must the God be, by whose power Paul could do this? Wi.

VER. 28. Great is Diana of the Ephesians. This they shouted out without intermission for about two hours, though the greatest part knew not why they had met together. A true representation of an unthinking rash mob. Wi.

VER. 31. Some also of the rulers of Asia. They are called friends to S. Paul, but it is uncertain whether they were Christians, or others, who favoured him, and wished him well. Wi.

VER. 35. The town-clerk, &c. Lit. the scribe, or the recorder of the city.—Jupiter's offspring.† His daughter, according to the poets. The Greek text seems to signify a statue, or figure of Diana, which was pretended to have fallen from heaven, and from Jupiter. Wi.—Is a worshipper. Νεωκόρον ὄντων; the word Νεωκόρον is found in this sense in the Arundelian marbles, and more frequently on ancient coins and inscriptions. Its derivation is from νέω, a temple, and κόρον, a virgin, or rather κοσιή, to cleanse and decorate; as if this city were especially destined to ornament the Diana of Ephesus, which the people supposed came to them not by the work of man, but a present from heaven.

VER. 37. Nor of blasphemy against your goddess. S. Chrys. takes notice, that to calm the people, he says more than was true. Wi.

* V. 24. Ædes argenteas, ναὸς ἀργυρεῖς.

† V. 35. Jovisque proles, καὶ τοῦ ἑωκερός. Simulachri a cælo dilapsi. See Suidas.

CHAP. XX. VER. 6. We. From the change of the narration to the first person again, it would appear S. Luke had rejoined the apostle. This writer modestly omits the reason of his accompanying S. Paul, who tells us it was at (1465)

2 And when he had gone over those parts, and had exhorted them with many words, he came into Greece :

3 Where, when he had spent three months, the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria : so he took a resolution to return through Macedonia.

4 And there accompanied him Sopater, the son of Pyrrhus, of Berea, and of the Thessalonians, Aristarchus, and Secundus, and Gaius of Derbe, and Timothy : and of Asia, Tychicus, and Trophimus.

5 These having gone before, waited for us at Troas.

6 But we sailed from Philippi after the days of the azymes, and came to them to Troas in five days, where we abode seven days.

7 And on the first day of the week, when we assembled to break bread, Paul discoursed with them, being to depart on the morrow, and he continued his speech until midnight.

8 And there were a great many lamps in the upper chamber, where we were assembled.

9 And a certain young man, named Eutychus, sitting on the window, being oppressed with a heavy sleep, as Paul was long preaching, by occasion of his sleep fell from the third loft down, and was taken up dead.

10 To whom, when Paul went down he laid himself upon him : and embracing him, said, Be not troubled ; for his soul is in him.

11 Then going up, and breaking bread and tasting : and having talked a long while to them until day-light, so he departed.

12 And they brought the youth alive, and were not a little comforted.

13 But we going on board the ship, sailed to Assos, there intending to take in Paul : for so he had appointed, himself purposing to travel by land.

14 And when he had met with us at Assos, we took him in, and came to Mitylene.

15 And sailing from thence, the following day we

* A. D. 68.

his own request, (2 Cor. viii. 19.) that no suspicion might be entertained that he applied improperly the money, which he was commissioned to carry to the distressed brethren in Jerusalem. Tirinus.

VER. 7. *On the first day of the week. The interpreters generally take notice with S. Chrys. that the Christians, even at this time, must have changed the sabbath into the first day of the week, as all Christians now keep it. Which change (even as to the manner of keeping one of God's ten commandments) was made by the Church.—To break bread, meaning the blessed sacrament, as it is commonly expounded. Wi.—S. Paul did here break bread on a Sunday, as it is broken in the sacrament of the body of Christ, and delivered a discourse to the people, both before and after the celebration of the divine mysteries. S. Aug. ep. lxxxvi. ad Casulanum. Ven. Bede in xx. Act.

VER. 10. His soul is in him. He was taken up dead, v. 9. These words then of S. Paul, may either signify that now he is again alive, or will be in a very short time, as when Christ said, (Math. ix. 24.) The girl is not dead, but asleep. Wi.

VER. 12. Alive. This accident, which gave occasion to a great miracle, was ordained by the particular providence of God, in order to confirm the preaching of S. Paul, and to fix more deeply in the hearts of his disciples the words of their dear Master, who was just going to leave them. Admire likewise the apostle's solicitude for his neighbour's salvation, in prolonging his instructions through the whole night, which preceded his departure. D. Carthus.

VER. 17. He called the ancients of the Church. We might translate the bishops, as the very same persons in the 28th verse are called bishops. Wi.

VER. 19. With all humility ; that is, of heart, or mind, as the Greek word signifies. He knew, says S. Chrys. how necessary this virtue of humility was for the ministers of the gospel.—With tears of charity and compassion, under temptations, trials, and persecutions. Wi.

VER. 20. I have kept back, &c. I have discovered to you every thing which can be useful to your salvation. Neither fear, nor any human considerations, have prevailed over me to disguise or suppress the truths, which might be serviceable to you. This is the model of a good pastor. Full of doctrine, and of zeal, (1466) came over against Chios : and the next day we arrived at Samos : and the day following we came to Miletus.

16 For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, lest he should be delayed any time in Asia. For he hastened on, if it were possible for him to keep the day of Pentecost at Jerusalem.

17 And sending from Miletus to Ephesus, he called the ancients of the church.

18 And when they were come to him, and were together, he said to them : You know from the first day that I came into Asia, in what manner I have been with you all the time,

19 Serving the Lord with all humility, and with tears, and temptations, which befell me from the snares of the Jews :

20 How I have kept back nothing that was profitable to you, but have preached it to you, and taught you publicly, and from house to house,

21 Testifying both to Jews and Gentiles penance towards God, and faith in our Lord Jesus Christ.

22 And now behold bound in the spirit, I go to Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there :

23 Only that the Holy Ghost in every city witnesseth to me, saying : That chains and afflictions wait for me at Jerusalem.

24 But I fear none of these things : neither do I count my life more precious than myself, so that I may consummate my course, and the ministry of the word, which I have received from the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God.

25 And now behold I know that all you, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more.

26 Wherefore I take you to witness this day, that I am clear from the blood of all.

27 For I have not spared to declare to you all the counsel of God.

28 Take heed to yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath placed you bishops, to rule he communicates what God puts into his heart, and charity inspires him to speak, with abundance, with discretion, without jealousy, without fear. A good shepherd, S. Bernard used to say, has always bread in his scrip, and his dog in his keeping. The dog is his zeal, which must be chained, governed and moderated. His scrip, full of bread, is his mind, filled with all knowledge, which he is always in the state of dispensing as food to his flock.

VER. 22. Bound in the spirit, led by inspiration of the Holy Ghost. Wi.—Chained, and forced, as it were, by the Holy Spirit, who offers me a sweet violence ; or I am so strongly persuaded of the chains, which await me at Jerusalem, that I already feel myself bound in idea. Calmet.—I now go to Jerusalem for the fourth time, attracted by the Holy Ghost, who is the author and governor of all my actions, that where I have shewn myself the greatest enemy of the Church, there I may suffer tribulations in defence of the same Church, and for Christ, her divine spouse. Tirinus.

VER. 23. In every city. There were in every city Christian prophets, who foretold to Paul the tribulations which awaited him. It appears, then, that the apostle did not know these things by immediate revelation made to himself, but by that made to the prophets. Of this we have a proof in the next chapter.

VER. 24. Neither do I count my life (lit. my soul) more precious than myself, having consecrated all my endeavours, my thoughts, my life, my whole self, body and soul, to God's service. Wi.

VER. 25. I know, &c. It appears sufficiently evident, from many parts of S. Paul's epistles, that he not only designed, but likewise, according to the opinion of the most able critics, actually did revisit the churches in Asia. On this occasion, then, he only expresses his belief, his conviction, that he should see them no more, judging it impossible for him to escape all the dangers that were prepared for him. Calmet.—All you. Although S. Paul might return again to the same place, he might truly say of so great an assembly, that all of them should not see him again. Wi.

VER. 28. Take heed to yourselves, and to all the flock. The ministers of the gospel must in the first place take care of the salvation of their own souls and in the next place of the salvation of their flock, of the souls committed to the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

29 I know, that after my departure, ravenous wolves will enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

30 And of y^eur own selves will rise up men speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them.

31 Therefore watch, keeping in memory, that for three years I ceased not night and day, with tears admonishing every one of you.

32 And now I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, who is able to build up, and to give an inheritance among all the sanctified.

33 I have not coveted any man's silver, gold, or apparel, as 34 You yourselves know: *that as for such things as were needful for me, and for them that are with me, these hands have furnished.

35 I have shewed you all things, how that labouring so you ought to support the weak, and remember the word of the Lord Jesus, how he said: It is more blessed to give, than to receive.

36 And when he had said these things, kneeling down, he prayed with them all.

37 And there was much weeping among them all: and falling on Paul's neck, they kissed him, 38 Being grieved most of all for the word which he had said, that they should see his face no more. And they conducted him to the ship.

CHAP. XXI.

Paul goes up to Jerusalem. He is apprehended by the Jews in the temple.

AND ^bwhen it came to pass that, being parted from them, we set sail, we came with a direct course to Coos, and the day following to Rhodes, and from thence to Patara.

2 And having found a ship sailing over to Phœnice, we went aboard, and set sail.

3 And when we had discovered Cyprus, leaving it on the left hand, we sailed into Syria, and came to Tyre: for there the ship was to unlade her burden.

4 And finding disciples, we remained there seven

* 1 Cor. iv. 12. 1 Thess. ii. 9. 2 Thess. iii. 8.

their care, and to the Church; especially such ministers of God as are bishops,† placed, by divine institution, to govern the Church, or the churches under them. The word bishops, by its derivation, signifies overseers, or superintendents; but the signification is to be taken and expressed by the custom and ecclesiastical use of words. Wi.

VER. 32. To the word of his grace, to the protection of God's grace, given to those that preach the gospel, and administer the sacraments instituted by Christ. — Who is able to build up, to finish that building, of which the foundation is laid by my preaching. Wi.

VER. 34. These hands have furnished, by labouring to maintain myself, &c. Wi.

VER. 35. It is more blessed to give than to receive. We find not these words of Christ in the gospels. S. Paul might have them from the apostles. Wi.—Among the many excellent good things our dear Lord said, and which are not mentioned in the gospel, this is one: "it is a more blessed thing to give, than to receive;" which did men justly weigh. they would be more ready to give alms, were it only for their own account. Thrice happy then are they who assist their indigent neighbour to the utmost of their power, and for the pure love of God! A.

VER. 37. They kissed him. These marks of tenderness are dictated by nature, and have always been used between friends, who were separating from each other, or who meet after a long absence. The Scripture furnishes us with numberless examples of it. Calmet.—He likewise prayed, as he usually did, when he bade his last farewell. See his last ^adiscus with the Tyrians, (c. xxi. 5, 6.) where they all kneeled down to pray on the shore. This is also reasonable, and becoming a Christian. It is a sign of communion and mutual charity, and implores a prosperous voyage for those who were departing, whilst those who remained, cherish in their mind the remembrance of the virtues of their absent friend. Menochius.—The mind of man cannot conceive a finer subject for the painter than this melting separation. After the discourse, we see S. Paul falling on his knees, and praying with them all for the last time; a general burst of days: who said to Paul through the Spirit, that he should not go up to Jerusalem.

5 And the days being expired, departing, we went forward, they all bringing us on our way, with their wives and children, till we were out of the city: and kneeling down on the shore, we prayed.

6 And when we had taken leave of one another, we took ship: and they returned home.

7 But we having finished the voyage by sea from Tyre, came down to Ptolemais: and saluting the brethren, we abode one day with them.

8 And the next day departing, we came to Cæsarea. And entering into the house of Philip, the evangelist, ^cwho was one of the seven, we abode with him.

9 And he had four daughters, virgins, who did prophesy.

10 And as we remained there for some days, there came from Judea a certain prophet, named Agabus.

11 And when he was come to us, he took Paul's girdle: and binding his own feet and hands, he said: Thus saith the Holy Ghost: The man whose girdle this is, the Jews shall so bind in Jerusalem, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

12 And when we had heard this, both we, and they who were of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

13 Then Paul answered, and said: What do y^e mean, weeping and afflicting my heart? For I am ready not only to be bound, but also to die in Jerusalem, for the name of the Lord Jesus.

14 And when we could not persuade him, we ceased, saying: The will of the Lord be done.

15 And after those days, being prepared, we went up to Jerusalem.

16 And there went also with us some of the disciples from Cæsarea, bringing with them one Mnason, a Cyprian, an old disciple, with whom we should lodge.

17 And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly.

^b A. D. 58.—^c Supra vi. 5. and viii. 5.

tears takes place, when they are told that they are to see their father's face no more; they fall upon his neck and kiss him; and with hearts full of grief and gratitude, they accompany him on his way to the very ship which is to transport their father, friend, and benefactor, to other souls, who wanted the charitable assistance of the man of God.

* V. 7. Una Sabbati; that is, prima sabbati, in rē mē rān capbāriūn. S. Chrys. says hom. xv. κεριακή ἡν, erat dies Dominica.

† V. 28. Episcopos, ἐπισκοπος, from ἐπισκοπεῖν, or ἐπισκοπεῖν, diligenter inspicere, &c.

CHAP. XXI. VER. 1. Coos and Rhodes are islands in the Archipelago.

VER. 3. Cyprus, an island in the Mediterranean, to the east of Patara and Rhodes.

VER. 4. Not go up to Jerusalem. S. Paul says in the foregoing chapter that he was pressed by the Holy Ghost to go to Jerusalem; and do these prophets now advise him to stay away, and disobey the inspiration? No: their dissuasion was not the effect of inspiration, but the expression of their tenderness and affection for him, which made them fear what they saw he was going to endure. D. Carthus.—Hence S. Paul disregarded their entreaties, as well as the imminent dangers that every where stared him in the face. See his heroic answer to the melting entreaties of the faithful of Cæsarea, and their final acquiescence: "the will of the Lord be done." Infr. v. 14.

VER. 8. Philip, the evangelist, so called from his preaching the gospel, though he was one of the seven, that is, of the seven deacons. Wi.

VER. 9. Prophecy. It is supposed that these daughters of S. Philip had made a vow of virginity, or at least remained in that state out of a motive of religion. S. Jerom thinks in reward of this they were gifted with a prophetic spirit. Lib. i. c. 24. cont. Joy.—Others think that by prophesying is meant interpreting the Scriptures, or singing the praises of God. Estius.

18 And the day following Paul went in with us to James, and all the ancients were assembled.

19 And when he had saluted them, he related particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentiles, by his ministry.

20 But they hearing it, glorified God, and said to him: Thou seest, brother, how many thousands there are among the Jews who have believed: and they are all zealous for the law.

21 Now they have heard of thee, that thou teachest those Jews, who are among the Gentiles, to forsake Moses: saying, that they ought not to circumcise their children, nor to walk according to the custom.

22 What is it, therefore? the multitude must needs come together: for they will hear that thou art come.

23 Do, therefore, this that we say to thee: We have four men, who have a vow upon them.

24 Taking them, purify thyself with them: and pay for them, *that they may shave their heads: and all will know that the things which they have heard of thee, are false: but that thou thyself also walkest keeping the law.

25 As for those of the Gentiles who have believed, ^bwe have written, decreeing that they should refrain themselves from that which has been offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication.

26 Then Paul taking the men, the next day being purified with them, entered into the temple, giving notice of the accomplishment of the days of purification, until an oblation should be offered for every one of them.

27 But while the seven days were drawing to an end, those Jews who were of Asia, when they saw him in the temple, stirred up all the people, and laid hands upon him, crying out;

28 Men of Israel, help: This is the man that teacheth all men every where against the people, and the law, and this place: and moreover hath brought in Gentiles into the temple, and hath violated this holy place.

29 For they had seen Trophimus, the Ephesian, in the city with him, whom they supposed that Paul had brought into the temple.

30 And the whole city was in an uproar: and there was a rush of the people. And seizing Paul, they drew him out of the temple: and immediately the doors were shut.

31 And as they were seeking to kill him, it was told the tribune of the band; That all Jerusalem was in confusion.

32 Who forthwith taking with him soldiers and centurions, ran down to them. And when they saw the tribune and the soldiers, they left off beating Paul.

33 Then the tribune coming near, took him, and commanded him to be bound with two chains: and demanded who he was, and what he had done.

34 And some cried out one thing, some another, among the multitude. And when he could not know the certainty, because of the tumult, he commanded him to be brought into the castle.

35 And when he was come to the stairs, it happened that he was carried by the soldiers, because of the violence of the people.

36 For the multitude of the people followed after, crying out: Away with him.

37 And as Paul was about to be brought into the castle, he saith to the tribune: May I speak something to thee? Who said: Canst thou speak Greek?

38 Art not thou that Egyptian, who before these days didst raise a tumult, ^aand didst lead forth into the desert four thousand men that were murderers?

39 But Paul said to him: I am indeed a Jew, a man of Tarsus, in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city. And I beseech thee, permit me to speak to the people.

40 And when he had given him leave, Paul standing on the stairs, beckoned with his hand to the people. And a great silence being made, he spoke to them in the Hebrew tongue, saying:

^a Num. vi. 18. Supra xviii. 18.

^b Supra xv. 20. and 29.—^c A. D. 55.

VER. 18. To James, the bishop of Jerusalem, where all the seniors, that is, the bishops and priests, had assembled. Wi.

VER. 20. How many thousands. In the Greek, how many ten thousands. Wi.

VER. 21. To forsake Moses. In the Greek, to depart or apostatize from Moses and the law. This is more than was true. For S. Paul circumcised Timothy, (c. xvi.) and did not absolutely hinder converts who had been Jews, from practising the Jewish ceremonies. Wi.—There is a manifest falsity in this accusation against S. Paul. He had never commanded or advised the Jews, to whom he had preached, to renounce the law, abandon the ceremonies of Moses, or reject the ancient customs of the nation. He had never hindered any one from following in this respect the bias of his inclinations. He had indeed defended the liberty of the converts from these ceremonies; he had taught that Christ had taken away the necessity of this yoke; but he left them at liberty still to carry it if they pleased. Calmet.—For these things were not then to be sought after as necessary, nor yet to be condemned as sacrilegious. The law of Moses at that time was dead, but not deadly. S. Aug. ep. lxxii.—These considerations will sufficiently explain the apostle's motive for submitting on this occasion to one of their ceremonies. He became all to all, that he might gain all to Christ. A.

VER. 23. Who have a vow upon them. On which account they will have sacrifices offered for them in the temple. Wi.

VER. 24. Bestow on them. It was thought a merit among the Jews to bear the expenses of any vow which another had made. They thus became partakers of it; in the same manner as at present those, who have not the courage to forsake the world by solemn vows, seek to have some share in the merits of those who do forsake it, by contributing part of their substance to their support. Calmet.

VER. 30. The doors were shut, lest the temple should be profaned by Gentiles entering into it. Wi.—The temple was an asylum, but not for those men who were justly pursued. Hence the Jews looking upon Paul as a blasphemer, they did not think they violated this asylum by forcibly removing Paul from the temple; but lest he might return, they fastened the entrance-gates.

VER. 33. Two chains, for his hands and feet; or perhaps one chain was put on each hand, which was likewise tied to a soldier on each side of him, who led him. This was the Roman custom of binding prisoners. See Seneca, ep. v. et lib. de tranquill. animi x. See supra xii. 6, 7.

VER. 34. Into the castle.^a Neither the Latin nor the Greek word signifies a castle, but rather a camp, or a place walled, or with a trench about it. It is true, we may here understand the tower, called Antonia; but within its court might be tents for soldiers, where there was so great a number: for we see that Lysias could send away 470 with S. Paul, besides those that might stay behind. Wi.

VER. 37. Canst thou speak Greek? We cannot doubt but S. Paul had in Greek spoke already to the tribune: upon which he said, dost thou speak Greek? and then asked him, if he were not that seditious Egyptian, who had headed so many murderers? Wi.

VER. 38. This Egyptian coming to Jerusalem, and professing himself to be a prophet, had persuaded the people to accompany him to Mount Olivet, pretending he would throw down the walls of the city only by a word. Felix, the Roman governor, attacked the deluded multitude, and killed 400. The leader escaped, and was heard of no more. This was in the 18th year of Claudius, about three years before S. Paul's apprehension. Menochius.—These rebels are called murderers, Σικαποῖ, Sicarii, from Σίκα, a small dagger, which they concealed under their cloak. Some of them were the retainers of Judas Galileus; others Hessians, who fought with the greatest animosity against the Romans, and suffered the most cruel death, sooner than to acknowledge Cæsar for lord and master. Some again suppose that the word σικαποῖ is only a corruption of the words, οἱ καίτοι, Scripturarii, a name given to the Esseni. Consult. Joa. Antiq. xx. 7.

VER. 39. I am indeed a Jew, by birth and education. Wi.

VER. 40. He spoke in the dialect of the country, which was partly Hebrew

CHAP. XXII.

Paul declares to the people the history of his conversion. He escapes scourging by claiming the privilege of a Roman.

MEN, *brethren, and fathers, hear ye the account which I now give you.

2 And when they heard that he spoke to them in the Hebrew tongue, they kept the more silence.

3 And he saith: I am a Jew, born at Tarsus, in Cilicia, but brought up in this city, at the feet of Gamaliel, taught according to the truth of the law of the fathers, zealous for the law, as also all you are this day:

4 ^bAnd I persecuted this way unto death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women,

5 As the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the ancients: ^cfrom whom also receiving letters to the brethren, I went to Damascus, to bring them bound from thence to Jerusalem, that they might be punished.

6 And it came to pass, as I was going and drawing near to Damascus, at mid-day, that suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me:

7 And falling on the ground, I heard a voice saying to me: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

8 And I answered: Who art thou, Lord? And he said to me: I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

9 And they that were with me, saw indeed the light, but they heard not the voice of him that spoke with me.

10 And I said: What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said to me: Arise, and go to Damascus: and there it shall be told thee of all things thou must do.

11 And whereas I did not see for the brightness of that light, being led by the hand by my companions, I came to Damascus.

12 And one Ananias, a man according to the law, having a good character from all the Jews dwelling there,

13 Coming to me, and standing by me, said to me:

* A. D. 58.—^b Supra viii. 3.—^c Supra ix. 2.

and partly Syriac, but the Syriac greatly prevailed; and from the steps, ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀναρᾶσι, which led to the fortress of Antonia. Here a Roman cohort was lodged; it was situated to the north-west, and joined the temple. The flight of steps was occupied by the lowest orders of the people. Thus Cicero ad Atticum: Gradus templorum ab infima plebe completi erant; and again, pro Cluentio: gradus concitatis hominibus narrat.

* V. 34. In castra, which in the plural number, is not a castle: neither doth καριμβολή, which is in the Greek, signify a castle.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. Hear ye the account. In the Greek, to the apology, or defence. Wi.—S. Paul, in this exordium, as also in Acts vii. 2, shews himself not ignorant of the art of pleading. He adds the name of Fathers, supposing there may be some of his hearers of senatorial dignity, and others deserving the title for their rank and age. Mat. Pol.

VER. 3. The scholars sat much below their master; and the nearest the master were such as had made the greatest proficiency. Philo de Essenis.

VER. 4. This way. That is, the Christian faith, which now I profess. Wi.

VER. 5. As the high priest doth bear me witness. That is, as the letters which he gave me, bear witness. Wi.

VER. 9. Heard not the voice. To reconcile this with c. ix. v. 7. where it is said that they heard the voice; it may be answered that they heard a noise, and a voice, but heard it not distinctly, nor so as to understand the words. Wi.—They heard not the voice of him who spoke to the apostle, but they heard the latter speak; (Acts ix. 7.) or perhaps they heard a noise, which they could not understand. They perhaps heard the voice of Paul answering, but not that of Christ complaining.

VER. 14. Shouldst . . . see the Just One. Our Saviour appeared to S. Paul, as it is said; (c. ix. 7.) and he is divers times, both in the Prophets and in the Testament, called the Just One. Wi.—To see and hear the Just One; Him, who is just by excellence, that you also may prove a witness of his resurrection from the dead.

VER. 16. Wash, &c. The contrition and charity of S. Paul had, no doubt, merited for him the remission of his sins at the moment of his conversion. Still Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And I the same hour looked upon him.

14 And he said: The God of our fathers hath pre-ordained thee that thou shouldst know his will, and see the Just One, and shouldst hear the voice from his mouth.

15 For thou shalt be his witness to all men, of those things which thou hast seen and heard.

16 And now why delayest thou? Rise up, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling upon his name.

17 And it came to pass, when I was come again to Jerusalem, ^aand was praying in the temple, that I was in a trance,

18 And saw him, saying unto me: Make haste, and go quickly out of Jerusalem: because they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

19 And I said: Lord, they know ^athat I cast into prison, and beat in every synagogue, them that believed in thee.

20 And when the blood of Stephen, thy witness, was shed, ^aI stood by and consented, and kept the garments of them who killed him.

21 And he said to me: Go, for unto the Gentiles afar off will I send thee.

22 And they heard him until this word, and then lifted up their voice, saying: Away with such a one from the earth: for it is not fit that he should live.

23 And as they cried out, and threw off their garments, and cast dust into the air, 24 The tribune ^acommanded him to be brought into the castle, and to be scourged, and tortured: that he might know for what cause they cried out thus against him.

25 And when they had bound him with thongs Paul saith to the centurion standing by him: Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?

^a A. D. 37.—^a Supra viii. 3.—^f Supra vii. 57.—^g i. e. Lysias.

were these effects to be attributed to the desire of the sacrament of baptism, without which the council of Trent defines that the forgiveness of sins, and the punishment due to them, are not obtained. It likewise added a new degree of lustre to his innocence and purity. Tirinus.—Calling upon his name. In such manner, says S. Chrys. (hom. xlvii.) as we invoke the only true God; and as we invoke the saints, and pray to them, that they would pray for us. Wi.

VER. 17. To Jerusalem . . . that I was in a trance. This might be when he went to Jerusalem, three years after his conversion, or at some other time. It might be in this ecstasy that he was wrapt to the third heaven, as he tells the Corinthians, 1 Cor. xv. 9. Wi.

VER. 20. Of Stephen, thy witness. Or thy martyr, as the Greek word signifies. Wi.

VER. 21. Hence we see that not only principals, but all that consent to the persecution of God's servants for the cause of religion, do highly offend; and this S. Paul mentions here, that the mercy of God may be more remarkably glorified in him hereby. B.

VER. 22. This word. That is, until he told them that God had sent him to preach to the Gentiles, whom they could not bear to hear preferred before themselves. Not that the Jews forbade preaching to the Gentiles; on the contrary, our Saviour reproached the Pharisees, that they would go over land and sea for the sake of making one proselyte. They were likewise enraged that S. Paul had not laid on the Gentiles the heavy yoke of the law. Calmet.—Hence they exclaim: take away this wicked man from amongst us, for it is a sin to let him live. V.

VER. 23. Throw off their garments. Or pulling them open to shew themselves ready to stone him. Wi.—This is nicely descriptive of the fury of a populace, who, when unable to vent their rage in some more effectual way, indignantly throw into the air, and against the object of their indignation, such harmless trifles as dust, clothes, &c. Menochius.

VER. 25. A Roman. That is, a Roman citizen, a freeman of Rome. Wi.—The apostle, on this occasion, not to injure the faith of some weak Christians, who might be scandalized at his public disgrace, prevents the scourging, which on another occasion he patiently submitted to. By the thongs he was probably bound to a pillar; (Tirinus) or being tied hand and foot, was stretched on the 26 Which the centurion hearing, went to the tribune, and told him, saying: What art thou about to do? For this man is a Roman citizen.

27 Then the tribune coming, said to him: Tell me, art thou a Roman? But he said: Yes.

28 And the tribune answered: I obtained the freedom of this city with a great sum. And Paul said: But I was born so.

29 Immediately, therefore, they that were about to torture him, departed from him. The tribune also was afraid after he understood that he was a Roman citizen, and because he had bound him.

30 But on the next day, wishing to know more diligently, for what cause he was accused by the Jews, he loosed him, and commanded the priests to come together and all the council: and bringing forth Paul, he set him before them.

CHAP. XXIII.

Paul stands before the council: the Jews conspire his death. He is sent away to Cæsarea.

AND *Paul looking upon the council, said: Men, brethren, I have conversed with an entire good conscience before God until this present day.

2 And the high priest, Ananias, commanded them who stood by him, to strike him on the mouth.

3 Then Paul said to him: God shall strike thee, thou whited wall. And thou sitting dost thou judge me according to the law, and, contrary to the law, command me to be struck?

4 And they that stood by, said: Dost thou revile the high priest of God?

* A. D. 58.—^b Exod. xxii. 28.

ground, with his face downwards. This was frequently done among the Romans. Calmet.—See also Gretser de cruce, l. i. c. 10; who declares that it was the Roman custom to bind to a stake or pillar, such as were condemned to be flogged.

VER. 28. Civilitatem; that is, Civitatem, Grace, πολιτειαν, the rights of citizenship. These privileges were granted by Antonius to the city of Tarsus. Ap-pianus civilium 5.

VER. 29. The same law which forbade a Roman citizen to be scourged, forbade him also to be bound. S. Aug. lib. i. de Serm. Dni. c. 29.—It was under Claudius that the abuse of buying the freedom of Rome was introduced. At first the name of a Roman was esteemed much, and bought at a great price. Now (such is the emptiness and vanity of titles) it is refused, and despised; nay, it is fled from, and reckoned disgraceful. Salvian. De Gubern. Dei, lib. v.—If S. Paul, on this occasion, makes use of his privilege, it is not that he was unprepared, or afraid to die for Christ; but because it was lawful to use ordinary means to extricate himself from difficulties, and preserve himself for future services to religion. D. Dion. Carthus.

* V. 1. Quam reddo rationem, ἀκούσατε . . . τῆς ἀπολογίας.

CHAP. XXIII. VER. 1. With an entire good conscience. With an upright sincerity. But S. Paul is far from excusing himself from all sin. He laments elsewhere his blind zeal in persecuting the Christians. See 1 Cor. xv. 9. Wi.

VER. 3. *God shall strike thee, thou whited wall. These words are rather by way of a prophecy. Wi.—Whited wall. That is, hypocrite, for pretending to judge me according to law; whereas, against all sense of justice, thou strik'st me before my condemnation; nay, even without giving me a hearing. The Fathers admire, on this occasion, the greatness of mind and freedom S. Paul exhibited, in reproving the great. Tirinus.—This expression was not the angry words of an irritated man, nor the effect of personal resentment, but the just freedom which insulted innocence may lawfully use in its own defence. A.—It was likewise a prophecy of what was going to happen. To those who do not consider it, it may seem a curse; but to others a prophecy, as it really was. S. Aug. lib. i. cap. 19. de Verb. Dni.—For S. Chrysostom relates that the high priest, being thunder-struck by this answer, became speechless and half dead; so that not being able to reply a single word, the bystanders did it for him. Tirinus.—It was also, as Ven. Bede says, to shew that the Jewish priesthood was to be destroyed, as now the true priesthood of Christ was come and established. Bede in hunc locum.

VER. 5. I knew not, &c. Some think S. Paul here speaks ironically, or to signify that now he could be no longer high priest, since the Mosaic law, with its rites and ceremonies, was abolished. But S. Chrys. rather judges that S. Paul, having been long absent from Jerusalem, might not know the person of the high priest, who was not now in the sanhedrim, but in the place whither the tribune had called the council, and who did not appear with that habit, and 5 And Paul said: I knew not, brethren, that he is the high priest. For it is written: ^bThou shalt not speak evil of the prince of thy people.

6 And Paul knowing that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, cried out in the council: Men, brethren, ^cI am a Pharisee, the son of Pharisees: concerning the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question.

7 And when he had said this, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the multitude was divided.

8 ^dFor the Sadducees say that there is no resurrection, neither Angel, nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both.

9 Now a great clamour was raised. And some of the Pharisees rising up, contended, saying: We find no evil in this man: what if a spirit hath spoken to him, or an Angel?

10 And when there arose a great dissension, the tribune, fearing lest Paul should be torn in pieces by them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the castle.

11 And the night following the Lord standing by him, said: Be constant: for as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness also at Rome.

12 And when it was day, some of the Jews assembled together, and bound themselves with a curse, saying: that they would neither eat, nor drink, till they had killed Paul.

^c Philip. iii. 5.—^d Matt. xxii. 28.

those marks which distinguished him from others. Wi.—It seems rather surprising that S. Paul did not know that he was the high priest. The place which he held in the council, one would suppose, would have been sufficient to have pointed him out. The apostle's absence from Jerusalem is perhaps a sufficient reason to account for his not knowing this circumstance; especially, as the order of succession to the priesthood was at that time much confused and irregular, determined by favour of the Roman emperor, or by purchase. Calmet.—At all events, any difficulties we may now find in assigning a probable or true reason, are merely negative arguments; and therefore too futile to be an impeachment of the apostle's veracity. A.—S. Cyprian supposes that S. Paul, considering the mere shadow of the name of priest, which Ananias then held, said: I knew not, brethren, that he is high priest. Ep. lxxv. nu. 2. S. Chrysostom says, that the apostle here shews the wisdom of the serpent; but that in his preaching, teaching, and patience, he used the simplicity of the dove.

VER. 6. I am a Pharisee, the son of Pharisee.† It may signify only a disciple of the Pharisees, though the common Greek copies have of a Pharisee. Wi.—The address of the apostle in this is great. Knowing the different dispositions of his judges, he throws disunion into their councils, in order to draw himself from danger. Such innocent artifices are allowed in the defence of a just cause. It is one of our Saviour's counsels, to use the prudence of the serpent. S. Gregory, in his Morality, (lib. xxxiv. cap. 3. and 4.) and S. Thomas in his Sum. Theol. (2. 2. quæst. 37. art. 2.) observe, that on similar occasions you may, without sin, cause divisions among the wicked; because their union being an evil, it is consequently a good thing that the enemies of peace and righteousness should be divided in sentiments and interests. It must, however, be acknowledged that this principle is very easily stretched beyond its proper limits, and therefore ought not to be acted upon but with the greatest caution and prudence. Calmet.—S. Paul knew from divine revelation that he was to go to Rome; but this did not hinder the apostle from taking every prudent care of his own life; as we may see from the following chapter.

VER. 7. There arose a dissension. By the Greek, a division, or schism among them, occasioned by S. Paul's declaring himself for the resurrection, which made the Pharisees favour him, and incensed the Sadducees. Wi.

VER. 11. Be constant . . . so must thou bear witness also at Rome; and so needest not fear to be killed by them. Wi.

VER. 12. Bound themselves. The Greek is, anathematized, that is, submitted themselves to a curse, if they did not kill Paul. It was a great imprecation, the violation of which would have been equivalent to renouncing their belief in God. See to what degree of iniquity this nation is come. When any good is in contemplation, none are found to undertake it: whilst all, even the priests too, are ready to concur in any wicked design. S. Chrys. in Act. hom. xlix.—To take an unlawful oath is one sin; but to keep it, is another and greater sin: as when Herod, to keep his oath, put to death John the Baptist. Matt. iv. 9

13 And they were more than forty men that had made this conspiracy.

14 They came to the chief priests, and the ancients, and said: We have bound ourselves under a great curse that we will eat nothing, till we kill Paul.

15 Now, therefore, do you with the council signify to the tribune, that he bring him forth to you, as if you meant to know something more certain concerning him. And we, before he come near, are ready to kill him.

16 And when Paul's sister's son had heard of their lying in wait, he came, and entered into the castle, and told Paul.

17 Then Paul calling to him one of the centurions, said: Bring this young man to the tribune, for he hath something to tell him.

18 So he took him, and brought him to the tribune, and said: Paul, the prisoner, desired me to bring this young man to thee, who hath something to say to thee.

19 And the tribune taking him by the hand, went aside with him privately, and asked him: What is it that thou hast to tell me?

20 And he said: The Jews have agreed to desire thee, that thou wouldst bring forth Paul to-morrow into the council, as if they meant to inquire something more certain concerning him:

21 But do not thou give credit to them: for there lie in wait for him more than forty men of them, who have bound themselves by oath neither to eat nor to drink till they kill him: and they are now ready waiting for thy promise.

22 The tribune, therefore, dismissed the young man, charging him to tell no man that he had made known these things to him.

23 Then having called two centurions, he said to them: Make ready two hundred soldiers, to go as far as Cæsarea, and seventy horsemen, and two hundred spearmen, for the third hour of the night:

24 And provide beasts, that they may set Paul on, and bring him safe to Felix, the governor.

25 (For he feared lest the Jews might take him away by force, and kill him, and he should afterwards be slandered, as if he was to receive money.)

26 And he wrote a letter after this manner: Claudius Lysias, to the most excellent governor, Felix, greeting.

27 This man being seized by the Jews, and ready to be killed by them, I rescued coming in with the soldiers, having understood that he is a Roman:

28 And wishing to know the cause which they objected to him, I brought him forth into their council.

29 Whom I found to be accused of questions of their law: but having nothing laid to his charge worthy of death, or of chains.

30 And when it was told me that they had prepared an ambush for him, I sent him to thee, signifying also to his accusers to plead before thee. Farewell.

31 Then the soldiers, according as it was commanded them, taking Paul, brought him by night to Antipatris.

32 And the next day, leaving the horsemen, to go with him, they returned to the castle.

33 Who, when they were come to Cæsarea, and had delivered the letter to the governor, presented Paul also before him.

34 And when he had read it, and had asked of what province he was: and understood that he was of Cilicia:

35 I will hear thee, said he, when thy accusers come. And he commanded him to be kept in Herod's judgment-hall.

CHAP. XXIV.

Paul defendeth his innocence before Felix, the governor. He preaches the faith to him.

AND after five days, the high priest, Ananias, came down, with some of the ancients, and one Tertullus, an orator, who went to the governor, against Paul.

2 And Paul being cited, Tertullus began to accuse him, saying: Whereas through thee we live in much peace, and many things are rectified by thy provision;

3 We accept it always, and in all places, most excellent Felix, with all thankfulness.

4 But that I be no further tedious to thee, I beseech thee, of thy clemency, to hear us in a few words.

5 We have found this a pestilent man, and an exciter of seditions among all the Jews throughout the whole world, and author of the sedition of the sect of the Nazarenes:

6 Who also attempted to profane the temple: whom we apprehended, and would have judged according to our law.

7 But Lysias, the tribune, coming upon us, took him away with great violence out of our hands,

8 Commanding his accusers to come to thee: from

VER. 35. This was a palace erected by Herod the Great; in which the governors had taken up their habitation. V.

* V. 3. Percutiet, τίπτειν ας μέλλει, futurum erit ut te percutiat.

† V. 6. Filius Phariseorum; and so divers of the best Greek MSS. φαρασαίου; but the common Greek, υἱὸς φαρασαίου.

‡ V. 13. Devoverunt se, ἀνασπάσαντες.

CHAP. XXIV. VER. 1. Ananias went down to Cæsarea, where Paul was then confined. This is the sense of the Greek.

VER. 2. *By thy provision. Lit. thy providence, by thy prudence. WI.—Though Felix governed Judea in the arbitrary manner mentioned in the note on the last chapter, he had nevertheless done some good, which is recorded to his honour. See Joseph. Ant. xx. 6. 11. and Bel. Jud. xii. But had this not been the case, a public orator seldom scruples to gain over the man by praises, whose judgment he seeks. S. Paul was not ignorant of this rule of rhetoric, though he refuses to imitate Tertullus by pressing flattery into his service, as we observe below, v. 10. and Acts xxii. 1. 3. See also the exordiums of Cicero pro Roscio pro Milone, &c. &c.

VER. 5. A pestilent,† or pernicious, and pestiferous man; Greek, one that is a plague.—Author or ringleader of the seditious sect, &c. WI.

him, thou, judging, mayest know concerning all these things, of which we accuse him.

9 And the Jews also assented, and said that these things were so.

10 Then Paul answered, (the governor making a sign to him to speak) Knowing that for many years thou hast been judge over this nation, I will with good courage answer for myself.

11 For thou mayest understand, that there are yet but twelve days, since I went up to adore in Jerusalem:

12 And neither in the temple did they find me disputing with any man, or causing any concourse of the people, neither in the synagogues, 13 Nor in the city: neither can they prove to thee the things of which they now accuse me.

14 But this I confess to thee, that according to the way, which they call a heresy, so do I serve the Father, and my God, believing all things which are written in the law and the prophets:

15 Having hope in God, which these also themselves look for, that there shall be a resurrection of the just and unjust.

16 In this I myself also study to have always a conscience without offence towards God, and towards men.

17 Now, after many years, I came to bring alms to my nation, and offerings, and vows.

18 *In which they found me purified in the temple: not with a crowd, nor with a tumult.

19 But certain Jews of Asia, who ought to be present before thee, and to accuse, if they had any thing against me:

20 Or let these men themselves say, if they found in me any iniquity, when standing before the council,

21 Except it be for this one voice only, that I cried out, standing among them: ^bThat concerning the resurrection of the dead am I judged this day by you.

^a Supra xxi. 26 —^b Supra xxiii. 6.

VER. 8. From him thou . . . mayest know. By the construction it is doubtful whether from Lysias, or from S. Paul. Wi.—Behold them here ready to support the heads of accusation I have brought forward, and which are moreover so self-evident, that the party accused will not dare to deny them. V.

VER. 10. In the apostle's speech we observe nothing of the flattery, which characterized the opposite party. It would have been unworthy of his just cause. Calmet.—He observes he had been governor of the province many (eight or nine) years, to insinuate, that had he been a seditious man, as he was accused, Felix would not have failed to have heard of his misdeeds before. Menochius.

VER. 11. Since I went up from Cæsarea to Jerusalem, not to profane the temple, or excite sedition, but to adore the one true God.

VER. 12. In Jerusalem there was only one temple, nor could there, by an express command of the Almighty, be any more throughout the whole kingdom. (Perhaps the Almighty may have wished by this singular circumstance to have impressed more forcibly on their minds the absolute necessity of unity in religion. A.) But there were many synagogues, which were a kind of schools, in which the law was publicly taught, and the people assembled to read the Scriptures, and to pray. Calmet.

VER. 14. The Father,† and my God. In the Greek, the Lord of our fathers. Wi.—According to the way. The Protestant version has sect for way; but in this, as well as in many other points, the original is not attended to, in which we read κατὰ τὴν ὁδόν, as in our translation.

VER. 22. Felix . . . knowing most certainly of this way. That is, knew even by Lysias's letter, that Paul and the Christians were not guilty of any thing against Cæsar, but only accused of disputes relating to the Jewish law. Wi.

VER. 25. Felix being terrified, &c. When S. Paul spoke of God's judgments, and hinted at such sins as his conscience reproached him with. Wi.—Whoever knows the infamous character of Felix and Drusilla, will not fail to admire the apostle's fortitude, that he durst speak (as formerly the Baptist did to Herod,) to them on the subject of justice and chastity. Suetonius says of the former, that he married three queens. Drusilla, one of the three, was Herod's daughter, and wife of Aziz, king of Emesa, whom he had seduced by the enchantments of a Jew of Cyprus. Hence it is not surprising he was terrified at the thoughts of a future judgment, when expounded by a S. Paul, whose zeal to make these wicked people enter into themselves, hurried him beyond the bounds of worldly prudence, but made such impression on his hearers, as to disarm the indignation his (1472)

22 And Felix put them off, knowing most certainly of this way, saying: When Lysias, the tribune, shall come down, I will hear you.

23 And he commanded a centurion to keep him, and to let him be easy, and that he should not hinder any of his friends to minister to him.

24 And after some days, Felix coming with Drusilla, his wife, who was a Jewess, sent for Paul, and heard from him the faith, which is in Christ Jesus.

25 And as he treated of justice, and chastity, and of the judgment to come, Felix being terrified, answered: For this time, go thy way: but at a convenient time, I will send for thee.

26 Hoping also withal, that money would be given him by Paul: on which account also frequently sending for him, he spoke with him.

27 But ^awhen two years were ended, Felix had for successor Portius Festus. And Felix being willing to gratify the Jews, left Paul bound.

CHAP. XXV.

Paul appeals to Cæsar. King Agrippa desires to hear him.

NOW ^dwhen Festus was come into the province, after three days he went up to Jerusalem from Cæsarea.

2 And the chief priests, and principal men of the Jews, went to him against Paul: and they besought him,

3 Requesting favour against him, that he would command him to be brought to Jerusalem, laying wait to kill him in the way.

4 But Festus answered: That Paul was to be kept in Cæsarea: and that he himself should very shortly depart.

5 Let them, therefore, saith he, among you that are able, going down with me, accuse him, if there be any crime in the man.

^e A. D. 60.—^d A. D. 60.

discourse was calculated to produce. See Josephus, ut supra. Tiranus, Calmet, and others. Next to the worship of God, the Christian religion requires of its followers, in the first instance, justice and chastity. Felix was unjust, avaricious, cruel; and both Felix and Drusilla were guilty of adultery. Such was the wickedness of the Gentiles in those degenerate days, that fornication was not looked upon as a crime. How much had they deviated from the excellent maxim we read and admire, inter Socraticas disputationes! omnem virtutem niti continentia, et incontinentem nihil a bellis brutissima differre; that all virtue was built upon continency, and that the incontinent man differed in nothing from the most brute beast.—At a convenient time I will send for thee. Such is the expedient Felix has recourse to, to silence the voice of conscience: and in this how often is he not imitated by the sinner, who dreads nothing so much as to enter into himself. Why put that off to another time, which will never arrive? Or why delay till death a repentance, which like the remorse of the damned, will then be as unavailing, as it will be eternal!

* V. 3. Per tuam providentiam, προνοίας, a prudent foreseeing.

† V. 5. Hominem pestiferum, λοιμὸν, pestem.

‡ V. 14. Patri & Deo. τῷ πατρὶ καὶ θεῷ.

CHAP. XXV. VER. 1. Festus having arrived at his province, goes to Jerusalem to be inaugurated. The Jews took this opportunity of requesting S. Paul might be sent to Jerusalem, that they might accomplish the iniquitous purport of their vow. Such consequence did they attribute to the death of this one man, that they had no greater favour to ask of their new governor at his auspicious entry among them. Tiranus.

VER. 4. It would appear, from their first request being peremptorily denied them, how little solicitous their governors were to please them. The successors of Felix and Festus were not better disposed than their predecessors. Their extortions and oppressions were pushed so far, that the Jews attempted at last to deliver themselves by rebellion, which proved their utter ruin and extirpation. Indeed it was in vain to resist, for they already began to feel the truth of our Saviour's prediction, in their subjugation to the Gentiles. Josephus bears ample testimony to the fulfilment of the prophecy. De bel. Jud. lib. ii. c. 16. &c. A.

VER. 5. Among you that are able.* It may signify, such as are powerful among you, or such as are able by health, and willing Wi.

6 And having remained among them no more than eight or ten days, he went down to Cæsarea, and the next day he sat in the judgment-seat: and commanded Paul to be brought.

7 And when he was brought, the Jews that were come down from Jerusalem, stood about him, objecting many and grievous accusations which they could not prove:

8 Paul making answer; That neither against the law of the Jews, nor against the temple, nor against Cæsar, have I offended in any thing.

9 But Festus being willing to gratify the Jews, answered Paul, and said: Wilt thou go up to Jerusalem, and there be judged of these things before me?

10 Then Paul said; I stand at Cæsar's tribunal where I ought to be judged: To the Jews I have done no injury, as thou very well knowest.

11 For if I have injured them, or have committed any thing that deserveth death, I refuse not to die: but if there be nothing of these things whereof they accuse me, no man can deliver me to them. I appeal to Cæsar.

12 Then Festus having conferred with the council, answered: Hast thou appealed to Cæsar? To Cæsar thou shalt go.

13 And after some days, king Agrippa and Bernice came down to Cæsarea, to salute Festus.

14 And as they stayed there many days, Festus told the king of Paul, saying; There is a certain man left prisoner by Felix, 15 Concerning whom, when I was at Jerusalem, the chief priests, and the ancients of the Jews, came to me, desiring judgment against him.

16 To whom I answered: It is not the custom of the Romans to condemn any man, before that he who is accused have his accusers present, and have liberty of making his defence, to clear himself of the things laid to his charge.

17 When, therefore, they were come hither, without any delay, on the day following, sitting on the judgment-seat, I commanded the man to be brought forth.

VER. 8. Paul making answer, † or his apology, by the Greek. In the Latin, giving an account. In like manner, (v. 16.) have liberty given to defend himself: in the Greek, to make his apology. In the Latin, till he take a place of defending himself.

VER. 10. S. Paul, seeing Festus only sought a plea to get rid of his cause, by putting it into the hands of the Sanhedrim, appeals to Cæsar. According to the ordinary rules of jurisprudence, appeals are only made after sentence is pronounced; but Roman citizens had a privilege of anticipating the sentence, when the judge did any thing contrary to justice; as Festus evidently did in this case, by wishing to deliver Paul, a Roman citizen, to the tribunal of his declared enemies, the Jews. The apostle knew he was secured by making this appeal: as the Roman law declared provincial governors violators of the public peace, who should either strike, or imprison, or put to death a Roman citizen, that appealed to the emperor. Calmet.—Hence Pliny sent some Christians to Rome for this same reason, as he writes himself in his epistles. Lib. x. ep. 97. Fuerunt alii similis amentia, quos, quia cives Romani erant, annotavi in urbem remittendos.

VER. 13. Agrippa. This was son of the king of the same name, who imprisoned S. Peter, and put S. James to death. Bernice was his sister, and one of the most infamous of women. Her character has merited her a place in one of Juvenal's satires, 5th.

VER. 19. Their own superstition. ‡ Their particular religion, and manner of worshipping their God. Wi.

VER. 21. Augustus Nero, who was then the Roman emperor.

VER. 22. Agrippa has the same curiosity of hearing Paul, as Herod formerly had of seeing Jesus. The apostle's name had, no doubt, become famous enough to reach the ears, and arrest the attention of Agrippa. Curiosity is certainly not the best motive a person can bring with him to the investigation of religious truth: still it may occasionally become productive of good. The king was half-persuaded to embrace the Christian faith. A better motive, or more serious at-

18 Against whom, when the accusers stood up, they brought no cause wherein I suspected evil:

19 But had certain questions of their own superstition against him, and of one Jesus deceased, whom Paul affirmed to be alive.

20 And as I was in doubt of this manner of question, I asked him whether he would go to Jerusalem, and there be judged of those things.

21 But Paul appealing to be reserved to the hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept, till I might send him to Cæsar.

22 Then Agrippa said to Festus: I would also hear the man myself. To-morrow, said he, thou shalt hear him.

23 And on the next day, when Agrippa, and Bernice were come with great pomp, and had entered into the hall of audience, with the tribunes and principal men of the city, at the command of Festus, Paul was brought forth.

24 And Festus saith: King Agrippa, and all ye men who are here present with us, you see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews solicited me at Jerusalem, petitioning and crying out that he ought not to live any longer.

25 Yet have I found nothing that he hath committed worthy of death. But he himself appealing to Augustus, I have determined to send him.

26 Of whom I have nothing certain to write to my lord. Wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and especially before thee, O king Agrippa, that examination being made, I may have something to write.

27 For it seemeth to me unreasonable, to send a prisoner, and not to signify the things laid to his charge.

CHAP. XXVI.

Paul gives an account to Agrippa of his life, conversion, and calling.

THEN *Agrippa said to Paul: Thou art permitted to speak for thyself. Then Paul stretching forth his hand, began to make his answer.

* A. D. 60.

tention, may induce some to embrace the truth, which accident may first have discovered to them. A.

VER. 26. To my lord. This was a title the emperors afterwards took, but which Augustus and Tiberius are said by Pliny, in his epistle to Trajan, and by Tertullian, to have refused, as too assuming and too high, ut nimis sublimem atque gloriosum. This was perhaps done, that none might bear the title at a time when the Lord of lords was to appear on the earth. Tirinus.—Whilst we can approve and admire the motives which actuated the emperors in refusing this title, we cannot go the lengths which some modern enthusiasts do, (mostly Americans, quakers, &c.) who pretend it is blasphemy to call a mortal man a lord, as if that name were incommunicable to any but the Creator of the universe. Whence they derive this article of faith it will not be easy for us to guess; certainly not from Scripture, in which the word Dominus or Lord, applied to man, occurs almost as frequently as King. Certainly not from our Saviour's words, who gives both himself and others this title, (Mark xiv. 14. et alibi passim) nor from S. Paul's doctrine, who also uses this word indiscriminately through his epistles, Gal. iv. 1. Eph. vi. v. &c. Hence we are justified in retaining this practice, in opposition to their cavils; and in treating that opinion as superstitious and void of foundation, which makes it a necessary part of religion to use no titles. A.

* V. 5. Qui potentes estis, of δυνατοὶ ἐν ἑμῖν.

† V. 8. Paulo rationem reddente, ἀπολογουμένον. V. 16. Locum defendendi accipiat, τόπον ἀπολογίας λαβόν.

‡ V. 19. De sua superstitione, περὶ τῆς ἰδίας δεισιδαιμονίας.

CHAP. XXVI. VER. 1. S. Paul having obtained liberty of speaking, stretches out his right hand, disengaged from his cloak. We must recollect that S. Paul still bore his chains about him, those chains in which he gloried; (v. 26.) it is therefore necessary to suppose that his left hand only was tied; or, what is less

2 I think myself happy, O king Agrippa, that I am to answer for myself this day before thee, concerning all the things of which I am accused by the Jews,

3 Especially, as thou knowest all, both customs and questions, which are among the Jews: wherefore I beseech thee to hear me patiently.

4 And my life indeed from my youth, which was from the beginning among my own nation in Jerusalem, all the Jews do know:

5 Having known me from the beginning, (if they will give testimony) that according to the most sure sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee.

6 And now I stand under judgment for the hope of the promise which was made by God to our fathers:

7 Unto which our twelve tribes, serving night and day, hope to come. For which hope, O king, I am accused by the Jews.

8 Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?

9 And I indeed thought that I ought to do many things in opposition to the name of Jesus of Nazareth.

10 *Which also I did at Jerusalem, and many of the saints I shut up in prisons, having received authority from the chief priests: and when they were put to death, I brought the sentence.

11 And I punished them often in every synagogue, and compelled them to blaspheme: and being yet more mad against them, I persecuted them, even unto foreign cities.

12 *Whereupon when I was going to Damascus with authority and permission of the chief priests, 13 At mid-day, O king, I saw in the way a light from heaven above the brightness of the sun, shining about me and them that were in company with me.

14 And when we were all fallen down to the ground, I heard a voice speaking to me in the Hebrew tongue: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? It is hard for thee to kick against the goad.

15 And I said: Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord answered: I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest.

16 But rise up and stand upon thy feet: for to this end have I appeared to thee, that I may make thee a minister and a witness of those things which thou hast seen, and of those things wherein I will appear to thee,

17 Delivering thee from the people, and from the nations, unto which now I send thee,

18 To open their eyes, that they may be converted from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan to God, that they may receive forgiveness of sins, and a lot among the saints, by the faith that is in me.

19 Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not incredulous to the heavenly vision:

20 *But preached first to them that are at Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the country of Judea, and to the Gentiles, that they should do penance, and turn to God, doing works worthy of penance.

21 For this cause the Jews, when I was in the temple, ^ahaving apprehended me, attempted to kill me.

22 But being aided by the help of God, I continue to this day witnessing both to small and great, saying no other things than those which the prophets and Moses did say should come to pass:

23 That Christ should suffer, and that he the first of the resurrection from the dead, should shew light to the people and to the Gentiles.

24 As he was speaking these things, and making answer, Festus said with a loud voice: Paul, thou art beside thyself: much learning doth make thee mad.

25 And Paul said: I am not mad, most excellent Festus, but I speak words of truth and sobriety.

26 For the king knoweth of these things, to whom also I speak with confidence: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him. For neither were any of these things done in a corner.

27 Believest thou the prophets, O king Agrippa? I know that thou believest.

28 Then Agrippa said to Paul: In a little thou persuadest me to become a Christian.

29 And Paul said: I would to God, that both in a little and in much, not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, should become such as I also am, except these chains.

30 And the king rose up, and the governor, and Bernice, and they that sat with them.

* Supra viii. 3.—b Supra ix. 2.

* Supra ix. 20.—d Supra xxi. 31.

likely, that these chains were not so tight nor heavy as to hinder the easy motion of the right. It is observed by Apuleius, that orators in this action closed the two shorter fingers, and had the others extended. Calmet.

VER. 5. According to the most sure sect. In the Greek, the most exact or approved: for such was esteemed that of the Pharisees. Wi.

VER. 6. For the hope of the promise. That is, of the promised Messiah, and of salvation by him. Wi.

VER. 8. He speaks now to the Sadducees, who denied the resurrection. Can you say it is impossible for Him, whom you all allow to be omnipotent, to raise any of the dead to life? Is it not easier to reanimate a body, whose parts are dissolved by death, than create what had no existence? "And why should He, who daily from the corrupted seed brings forth plants, leaves, wood, not be able to call back into their primitive state the flesh and bones from the dust into which they have been dissolved." S. Greg. hom. xxvi. in Evang.

VER. 10. I brought the sentence.† That is, from those who in the great council were judges of life and death, to those officers who were to put the sentence in execution. This seems to be the sense of these words, rather than, I voted, or gave my voice in condemning them; for we have no grounds to think S. Paul was one of the council, or of the judges. Wi.

VER. 14. It is generally supposed that S. Paul addresses king Agrippa in the Greek language, which was the common tongue of a great part of the East. V.

VER. 16. Wherein I will appear to thee. From whence interpreters take notice, that Christ divers times appeared to S. Paul to reveal things to him. Wi.

VER. 17. Delivering thee, &c. That is, from many attempts, both of the Jews and Gentiles, against thee. Wi.

VER. 18. That they may be converted from the darkness of error to the (1474) light of the gospel, and from the power of Satan to the liberty of the children of God.

VER. 23. That Christ should suffer, &c. Lit. if Christ be possible. If, here is expounded not as implying a condition, but as an affirmation; so that the sense is, that Christ, according to the predictions of the prophets, was to suffer, was to be the first that should rise from the dead, &c. Wi.—First, &c. Many had been raised from the dead before Jesus; the child of the widow of Sarepta, Lazarus, and others. How, then, is Jesus first? He is the first who rises not to die again; and as such the Messiah is always represented by the prophets. Others were raised from the dead, but returned again to their graves. Jesus dies no more. He is the first too who raises himself. Calmet.

VER. 24. It is not surprising that Festus should have taken S. Paul for a madman. The resurrection of the dead, remission of sins, receiving baptism, and faith, announcing light to the nations, &c. were subjects completely unintelligible to a Roman. To a Jew the terms were customary and common. The eloquence and manner in which he spoke on these subjects, might shew him to be a man of great learning.

VER. 28. In a little thou persuadest me to become a Christian. According to the common exposition, Agrippa speaks in a jest, and ironically; and as for the words, they are the same as, thou almost persuadest me, &c. Wi.

VER. 29. Except these chains. That is, I heartily wish all men in the same condition as myself, not only to be prisoners as I am, but to be Christians, as I am. Wi.

* V. 5. Certissimam, ἀκριβεστάτην, accuratissimam.

† V. 10. Ego sententiam detuli, καθήνεκα ψήφον, calculum, suffragium. It

31 And when they were gone aside, they spoke with each other, saying: This man hath done nothing deserving death or chains.

32 And Agrippa said to Festus: This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed to Cæsar.

CHAP. XXVII.

Paul is shipped for Rome. His voyage and shipwreck.

AND *when it was determined that we should sail into Italy, and that Paul, with the other prisoners, should be delivered to a centurion, named Julius, of the band Augusta,

2 *Going on board a ship of Adrumetum, we weighed anchor, commencing to sail by the coast of Asia; Aristarchus, the Macedonian, of Thessalonica, continuing with us.

3 And the next day we came to Sidon. And Julius treating Paul courteously, permitted him to go to his friends, and to take care of himself.

4 And when we had launched from thence, we sailed under Cyprus: because the winds were contrary.

5 And sailing over the sea of Cilicia and Pamphylia, we came to Lystra, which is in Lycia:

6 And there the centurion finding a ship of Alexandria, sailing to Italy, he put us aboard her.

7 And when for many days we had sailed slowly, and were scarce come over against Gnidus, the wind not permitting us, we sailed near Crete, by Salmone:

8 And with much difficulty sailing by it, we came to a certain place which is called Good-havens, near to which was the city of Thalassa.

9 And when much time was spent, and when sailing now was dangerous, because the fast was now past, Paul comforted them,

10 Saying to them: Ye men, I see that the voyage begins to be with injury and much damage, not only of the lading and ship, but also of our lives.

11 But the centurion believed the pilot and the master of the ship more than those things which were said by Paul.

was the custom for judges to give their votes either by taking up a white or a black stone: that is, a white stone, if the persons judged were found not guilty, and a black stone, if guilty: so Ovid,

*Mos erat antiquis niveis, atrisque lapillis,
His damnare reos, illis absolvere culpa.*

—So that ψῆφος was a lapillus, or a little stone made use of in giving sentence, and from thence taken for the sentence itself.

CHAP. XXVII. VER. 2. Adrumetum. In the Greek, Adrametum, which seems to be the best reading: the former was in Africa, the latter in Asia; and the ship was to make for the coasts of Asia and not those of Africa.—Being about to sail by the coast of Asia.* Lit. beginning to sail; the sense can only be designing to sail that way, as appears also by the Greek. Wi.

VER. 4. We sailed under Cyprus. That is, north of Cyprus, betwixt the coasts of Cilicia and Cyprus, leaving it on our left, instead of leaving it on our right hand. Wi.

VER. 7. We sailed hard by Crete, now Candia, near by Salmone, sailing betwixt them. Wi.

VER. 8. Called Good-havens, a port on the east part of Crete, near the city of Thalassa, in the Greek text Lasea. Wi.

VER. 9. *The fast was now past. An annual fast. Some take it for the fast of the Ember-days, which Christians keep in December: but S. Chrys. and others expound it of the Jewish fast of expiation, in their seventh month, Tisri, answering to our September or October. WI.—Most interpreters understand this of the solemn fast of expiation, mentioned in Leviticus (xvi. 29. and xxiii. 27.) which fell about the end of September and beginning of October. At this time sailing on the Mediterranean is dangerous. Though this phrase is at present obscure to us, we must recollect that S. Luke was writing for Christians, who being for the most part converted Jews, easily understood the expression. Calmet.

VER. 10. Ye men, I see, &c. This S. Paul foretells as a prophet. Wi.

VER. 12. Phœnice, on the south part of Crete, a convenient haven to ride safe in, lying by south-west and north-west. WI.

12 And whereas it was not a commodious haven to winter in, the greatest part gave counsel to sail thence, if by any means they might reach Phœnice, to winter there; which is a haven of Crete, looking towards the south-west and north-west.

13 And the south wind blowing gently, thinking that they had obtained their purpose, when they had loosed from Asson, they sailed close by Crete.

14 But not long after there arose against her a tempestuous wind, called Euroaquila.

15 And when the ship was caught, and could not bear against the wind, giving up the ship to the winds, we were driven.

16 And running under a certain island that is called Cauda, we had much work to come by the boat.

17 Which being taken up, they used helps, undergirding the ship, and fearing lest they should fall into the quicksands, they let down the sail-yard, and so were driven.

18 And we being mightily tossed with the tempest, the next day they lightened the ship.

19 And the third day they cast out with their own hands the tackling of the ship.

20 And neither sun nor stars appearing for many days, and no small storm pressing, all hopes of our safety were now lost.

21 And after they had fasted a long time, Paul standing forth in the midst of them, said: You should indeed, O ye men, have hearkened to me, and not have put off from Crete, and have saved this harm and loss.

22 And now I exhort you to be of good cheer. For there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but only of the ship.

23 For an Angel of God, whose I am, and whom I serve, stood by me this night, 24 Saying: Fear not, Paul, thou must be brought before Cæsar: and behold God hath given thee all them that sail with thee.

* A. D. 60.—b 2 Cor. xi. 25.

VER. 14. *Called Euroaquila. In the Prot. translation, Euroclydon, as in many Greek copies. In others Euraculon, which Dr. Wells prefers. Wi.

VER. 16. An island that is called Cauda. In some Greek copies Clauda, which the Prot. have followed; in others Caudos.—We had much work to come by the boat, or to hoist up the skiff belonging to the ship; which we did, lest it should be broken to pieces by the wind against the ship, or separated from it. Wi.

VER. 17. *They used helps, undergirding the ship. Perhaps bracing or binding about the vessel with ropes or chains, lest she should be torn asunder.—Into the quick-sands. Lit. into a syrtis, such as are on the coasts of Africa, whither now they were almost driven.—They let down the sail-yard. This seems to be the sense of these words letting down the vessel. Some translate striking the sail; but others think they were in apprehension for the mainmast. Wi.

VER. 18. They lightened the ship by throwing overboard part of their loading and goods. Some call it, they made the jetsam. Wi.

VER. 19. The tackling, or furniture of the ship that they could spare; others express it, they threw out the lagam. Wi.

VER. 21. Not . . . have saved this harm and loss, which you have brought upon you by not following my advice. Wi.—All the company being in consternation and hourly expectation of death, did not think of taking meat. For it appears they did not want provisions, and nothing else forced them to fast. Calmet.—The mildness of S. Paul's address to them on this occasion is admirable. He mixes no severe rebuke for their past want of confidence in his words, but seems only solicitous for their future belief. In telling them that none of them should perish, he does not utter a mere conjecture, but speaks with prophetic knowledge; and, if he says they were all given to him, it was not to enhance his own merit, but to engage their faith and confidence in his veracity. S. Chrys. Act. hom. lii.

VER. 23. An Angel of God. Lit. of the God whose I am; that is, whose servant I am. Wi.

VER. 24. God hath given thee all them; that is, the true God, maker and master of all things. It is sometimes a great happiness to be in the company of the 25 Wherefore, ye men, be of good cheer: for I believe God that it shall so be as it hath been told me.

26 But we must come into a certain island.

27 Now after the fourteenth night was come, as we were sailing in the Adria about midnight, the ship-men deemed that they discovered some country.

28 And they sounded, and found twenty fathoms: and going on a little farther, they found fifteen fathoms.

29 Then, fearing lest we should fall upon rough places, they cast four anchors out of the stern, and wished for the day.

30 But as the ship-men sought to fly out of the ship, having let down the boat into the sea, under pretence as though they would have cast anchors out of the fore-ship,

31 Paul said to the centurion and to the soldiers: Unless these stay in the ship, you cannot be saved.

32 Then the soldiers cut off the ropes of the boat, and let her fall off.

33 And when it began to be light, Paul besought them all to take food, saying: This day is the fourteenth day that you expecting, remain fasting, taking nothing.

34 Wherefore, I pray you, to take some food for your health's sake: for there shall not a hair of the head of any of you perish.

35 And when he had said these things, taking bread, he gave thanks to God in the presence of them all: and when he had broken it, he began to eat.

36 Then were they all of better cheer, and they also took food.

37 And we were in all, in the ship, two hundred and seventy-six souls.

38 And when they had eaten enough, they lightened the ship, casting out the wheat into the sea.

39 And when it was day, they knew not the land: but they discovered a certain creek having a shore, into which they thought, if they could, to thrust the ship.

saints, who by their prayers to God, help us. Wi.—S. Paul prayed that all in the vessel with him might be saved; and an angel was sent to assure him his prayer was heard. If such was the merit of the apostle whilst yet in this mortal body, that the Almighty, in consideration of it, granted the lives of 276 persons, what do you think, will be his interest before God, now that he is glorious in heaven? S. Jerom contra Vigilant.

VER. 27. In the Adria. Not in what we call the Adriatic gulf, or sea of Venice, but that which lies betwixt Peloponnesus, Sicily, and Italy. Wi.

VER. 30. The ship men . . . having let down the boat into the sea; that is, had begun to let it down with ropes, &c. Wi.

VER. 31. Paul said . . . unless these stay. Providence had ordered that all should escape, but by helping one another. Wi.

VER. 33. Taking nothing. That is, without taking a full meal, but only a morsel now and then, and nothing to speak of. Wi.—Though S. Chrysostom understands these words in their full rigour, and therefore supposes them to have been supported by a miracle; yet it is not requisite to adhere to the severity of these words in the interpretation of them. Not having had time to prepare any regular meal during that time, they may justly be said to have taken nothing, though they had occasionally eaten a little now and then to support nature. Such exaggerations in discourse are common. Interpretes passim.

VER. 40. Loosing also the rudderbands. Some ships are said heretofore to have had two rudders: and this ship perhaps had two, unless here the plural number be put for the singular, which is not uncommon in the style of the Scriptures.—And hoisting up the main-sail. The word in the text may signify any sail, either the main, or mizen-sail, which latter by the event was more than sufficient. Wi.

VER. 41. Into a place where two seas met. It happened that there was a neck or tongue of land, which being covered with the waves, they who were strangers to the coast did not discover: this stranded the ship, the prow sticking fast, and the poop being torn from it, so that the vessel split by the violence of the winds and sea. Wi.

VER. 44. The rest . . . they carried on planks. That is, let them be carried on 40 And when they had weighed the anchors, they committed themselves to the sea, loosing also the rudderbands: and hoisting up the main-sail to the wind, they made towards the shore.

41 And when we had fallen into a place where two seas met, they ran the ship aground: and the fore-part indeed sticking fast, remained immovable: but the hinder-part was broken with the violence of the sea.

42 And the soldiers' counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them, swimming out, should escape.

43 But the centurion, willing to save Paul, forbade it to be done: and he commanded them who could swim, to cast themselves first out, and save themselves, and get to land.

44 And the rest, some they carried on planks, and some on those things that belonged to the ship. And so it came to pass, that every soul got safe to land.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Paul, after three months' stay in Malta, continues his voyage, and arrives at Rome. His conference there with the Jews.

AND when we had escaped, then we knew that the island was called Melita. But the barbarians shewed us no small courtesy.

2 For kindling a fire, they refreshed us all, because of the rain which was falling, and of the cold.

3 And when Paul had gathered together a bundle of sticks, and had laid them on the fire, a viper coming out of the heat, fastened on his hand.

4 And when the barbarians saw the beast hanging on his hand, they said one to another: Undoubtedly this man is a murderer, who, though he hath escaped the sea, yet vengeance suffereth him not to live.

5 And he indeed shaking off the beast into the fire, suffered no harm.

6 But they supposed that he would begin to swell up, and that he would suddenly fall down, and die. But after they had waited a long time, and seeing that no harm was done to him, changing their minds, they said he was a god.

planks; and all got safe to land, in number two hundred and seventy-six souls, or persons. Wi.

* V. 2. Incipientes navigare, μὴλοντες πλεῖν, navigaturi.

† V. 9. Jejuniū præterisset S. Chrys. ὁμ. 17. νηστεῖαν τῶν ἰουδαίων.

‡ V. 14. Euroaquilō εὐροακιδῶν. Dr. Wells prefers the reading of εὐρακιδῶν.

§ V. 17. Accingentes navem, ὑποζωνόντες τὸ πλοῖον, bracing the ship with something.

|| V. 17. Submisso vase, χαλάσαντες τὸ σκεῦος. The word σκεῦος, has many significations, and may be taken for the ship, or any part of it: here it may signify the main-mast, which they might take down, lest it should be torn away.

¶ V. 41. In locum dithalassum, εἰς τόπον διθάλασσον.

CHAP. XXVIII. VER. 1. Melita, now called Malta, famous for being the residence of, and giving the title to, the military order of Knights, who strenuously resisted the Turks, when they threatened to overrun Christendom. The inhabitants are called Barbarians, not as a term of reproach, for the manner he speaks of their humanity testifies the contrary; but in the classical sense of the word, it was applied by the Greeks and Romans to all who did not speak either of those languages. Their hospitality was rewarded by the light of faith, which they still maintain, although infidels have sometimes for a century had dominion over this island. Tirinus, &c.

VER. 4. Murderer. In this instance we see how unfounded are the judgments of men. As if the misfortune itself were not sufficient to endure, the man upon whom any temporal calamity falls, must be also judged to be an object of divine vengeance. How cruel and preposterous, yet how common are such proceedings! Whence can it happen that man is so forward to think evil, so slow to suspect good in his neighbour? A.—Not to live. The inhabitants of this island, called Barbarians, had a notion of a Deity, and also that murder was against the law of God and nature. Wi.

VER. 6. That he would suddenly fall down and die. It is not then by the natural situation and temper of the air, that this island has no venomous creatures. Wi.

7 Now in those places were possessions of the chief man of the island, named Publius, who received us, and for three days entertained us courteously.

8 And it happened that the father of Publius lay sick of a fever, and of a bloody flux. To whom Paul entered in: and when he had prayed, and laid his hands on him, he healed him.

9 Which being done, all that had diseases in the island came, and were healed:

10 Who also honoured us with many honours, and when we were setting sail, they laded us with such things as were necessary.

11 * And after three months, we sailed in a ship of Alexandria, that had wintered in the island, whose sign was the Castors.

12 And when we were come to Syracuse, we remained there three days.

13 From thence coasting, we came to Rhegium: and after one day, the south wind blowing, we came the second day to Puteoli:

14 Where finding brethren, we were invited to stay with them seven days: and so we went for Rome.

15 And from thence, when the brethren had heard of us, they came to meet us as far as Appii-forum and the Three taverns: whom when Paul saw, he gave thanks to God, and took courage.

16 And when we were come to Rome, Paul was permitted to dwell by himself, with a soldier that guarded him.

17 And after the third day, he called together the chief of the Jews. And when they were assembled, he said to them: Men, brethren, I, having done nothing against the people, or the custom of our fathers, was delivered up a prisoner from Jerusalem into the hands of the Romans:

18 Who when they had examined me, would have let me go, for that there was no cause of death in me:

19 But the Jews opposing it, I was forced to appeal to Cæsar, not that I had any thing to accuse my nation of.

20 For this cause, therefore, I desired to see you, and to speak to you. Because that for the hope of Israel, I am bound with this chain.

21 But they said to him: We neither received letters concerning thee from Judea, neither did any of the brethren that came hither, relate or speak any evil of thee.

22 But we desire to hear from thee what thou thinkest: for as concerning this sect, we know that it is every where gainsayed.

23 And when they had appointed him a day, there came very many to him to his lodgings; to whom he expounded, testifying the kingdom of God, and persuading them concerning Jesus, out of the law of Moses and the prophets, from morning till evening.

24 And some believed the things that were said: and some believed not.

25 And when they agreed not among themselves, they departed, Paul saying this one word: Well did the Holy Ghost speak to our fathers by Isaias, the prophet, 26 ^bSaying: Go to this people, and say to them: With the ear you shall hear, and shall not understand: and seeing, you shall see, and shall not perceive.

27 For the heart of this people is grown gross, and with their ears have they heard heavily, and their eyes they have shut: lest perhaps they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

28 Be it known, therefore, to you, that this salvation of God is sent to the Gentiles, and they will hear it.

29 And when he had said these words, the Jews went out from him, having much discussion among themselves.

30 And he remained two whole years* in his own hired lodging: and he received all that came in to him, 31 Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching the things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, without prohibition.

* A. D. 61.—^b Isai. vi. 9. Matt. xlii. 14. Mark iv. 12. Luke viii. 10.

John xii. 40. Rom. xi. 8.—^c Until A. D. 63.

VER. 16. To dwell by himself, with a soldier that guarded him. S. Paul was chained, as it appears by the 20th verse: and it was the custom to fasten one end of the chain by a lock to the prisoner's wrist, and the other end of the chain to the wrist of the soldier who was to guard him. In most Greek copies we read: the centurion delivered the prisoners to the captain of the guards: as it is in the Prot. translation, and very probable; but these words are not found in divers Græc MSS. nor were read by the ancient interpreter of the Latin Vulgate. Wi.—S. Chrysostom attributes this liberty S. Paul enjoyed at Rome of going whither he liked, to their admiration of him. Hom. liv. in Acts.—Others to the moderation of Afranius Burrus, who was prefect of the Prætorium in the year 61, and who used his authority, as long as he possessed any over Nero's mind, to repress that emperor's bad inclinations, and direct his councils with wisdom. Calmet.

VER. 17. Chief of the Jews. We have seen before, that the emperor Claudius banished all Jews from Rome. It would appear from this verse, that many of the principal Jews returned at his death, which happened five years before S. Paul's arrival. Calmet.

VER. 20. Because that for the hope of Israel. That is, of the Messiah, so long expected and hoped for by the Israelites. Wi.—According to the Roman custom, S. Paul must have been fastened by the right hand to one end of a chain, the other end of which chain held to the left hand of the soldier who guarded him. V.

VER. 22. It is every where gainsayed. Here we observe one of the characters of the true religion. It is contradicted and spoken against. As singular as this may appear, it is however true. Jesus, the author of that religion, had foretold it should be so. If the world hateth me, it will hate you also. The situation of the Catholic religion in this country, at present, is something similar to what is related here of Christianity: and those who have the candour to inquire seriously into its merits, have generally the reward of being convinced, and of believing in it. Christianity, like some plants, grows the better for being trodden upon. A.

VER. 30. Two whole years in his own hired lodging. That is, in the lodgings which S. Paul was permitted to hire for himself, and to live there, with a soldier chained to him for his guard. Happy soldier, if he knew how to make use of such a favourable opportunity! We may take notice by all this narration of S. Luke, (as when he says here, v. 16, when we arrived at Rome, &c.) that he was all the way in the ship with S. Paul. Wi.

VER. 31. Here terminates the history of S. Paul, as contained in the Acts of the Apostles. The other actions of this great apostle, for want of being recorded, are involved in much obscurity. That he obtained his liberty again, and made many voyages to carry the light of the gospel into many countries, is certain: but nothing is known as to the manner or time. He finished his labours by martyrdom, being beheaded at Rome in the 86th of the Christian æra, and the 13th of Nero. What a degree of virtue might we not attain, were we animated by the spirit and courage of a S. Paul. Let us at least try to imitate his example; and, if in dangers and difficulties we cannot clothe our souls in adamant, as he did, we may certainly avoid yielding ingloriously to every light impression. Let us at an humble distance tread in his footsteps and live so that we may navigate in safety the boisterous ocean of life, and by the grace of Jesus Christ arrive at the port, where danger is no more to be apprehended. S. Chrys. hom. lv. in Act. ad finem.

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE ROMANS.

AFTER the Gospels, which contain the history of Christ, and the Acts of the Apostles, which contain the history of the infant Church, we have the Epistles of the Apostles. Of these fourteen have been penned on particular occasions, and addressed to particular persons, by S. Paul; the others of S. James, S. Peter, S. John, and S. Jude, are called Catholic Epistles, because they are addressed to all Christians in general, if we except the two latter short epistles of S. John.—The epistles of S. Paul contain admirable advice, and explain fully several tenets of Christianity: but an humble and teachable mind and heart are essentially requisite to draw good from this inexhaustible source. If we prepare our minds by prayer, and go to these sacred oracles with proper dispositions, as to Jesus Christ himself, not preferring our own weak judgment to that of the Catholic Church divinely inspired, and which he has commanded us to hear, and which he has promised to lead in all truth unto the end of the world, we shall improve both our mind and heart by a frequent and pious perusal. We shall learn there that faith is essentially necessary to please God; that this faith is but one, as God is but one; and that faith which shews itself not by good works, is dead. Hence, when S. Paul speaks of works that are incapable of justifying us, he speaks not of the works of moral righteousness, but of the ceremonial works of the Mosaic law, on which the Jews laid such great stress as necessary to salvation.—S. Peter (in his 2d Ep. c. iii.) assures us that there were some in his time, as there are found some now in our days, who misconstrue S. Paul's epistles, as if he required no good works any more after baptism than before baptism, and maintaining that faith alone would justify and save a man. Hence the other apostles wrote their epistles, as S. Austin remarks in these words: "therefore because this opinion, that faith only was necessary to salvation, was started, the other apostolical epistles do most pointedly refute it, forcibly contending that faith without works profiteth nothing." Indeed S. Paul himself, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, (C. xiii. 2.) positively asserts: if I should have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.—This epistle, like most of the following, is divided into two parts: the first treats of points of doctrine, and extends to the eleventh chapter inclusively; the second treats of morality, and is contained in the last five chapters: but to be able to understand the former, and to practise the latter, humble prayer and a firm adherence to the Catholic Church, which S. Paul (1 Tim. c. iii.) styles, the pillar and ground of truth, are undoubtedly necessary. Nor should we ever forget what S. Peter affirms, that in S. Paul's epistles there are some things hard to be understood, which the unlearned and the unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, to their own destruction. S. Peter, Epis. ii. c. iii. v. 16. A.—S. Paul had not been at Rome when he wrote this epistle, which was in the year fifty-seven or fifty-eight, when he was preparing to go to Jerusalem with the charitable contributions and alms, collected in Achaia and Macedonia, for the benefit and relief of the poor Christians in Judea, and at Jerusalem; and after he had preached in almost all places from Jerusalem even to Illyria, Illyrium, or Illyricum. See this Ep. c. xv. It was written in Greek. It is not the first epistle in order of time, though placed first, either because of the dignity of the chief Christian Church, or of its sublime contents.—The apostle's chief design was not only to unite all the new Christian converts, whether they had been Gentiles or Jews, in the same faith, but also to bring them to an union in charity, love, and peace; to put an end to those disputes and contentions among them, which were particularly occasioned by those zealous Jewish converts, who were for obliging all Christians to the observance of the Mosaic precepts and ceremonies. They who had been Jews, boasted that they were the elect people of God, preferred before all other nations, to whom he had given his written law, precepts, and ceremonies by Moses, to whom he had sent his prophets, and had performed so many miracles in their favour, while the Gentiles were left in their ignorance and idolatry. The Gentiles, now converted, were apt to brag of the learning of their great philosophers, and that sciences had flourished among them: they reproached the Jews with the disobedience of their forefathers to God, and the laws he had given them; that they had frequently returned to idolatry; that they had persecuted and put to death the prophets, and even their Messiah, the true Son of God. S. Paul shews that neither the Jew nor the Gentile had reason to boast, but to humble themselves under the hand of God, the author of their salvation. He puts the Jews in mind, that they could not expect to be justified and saved merely by the ceremonies and works of their law, though good in themselves; that the Gentiles, as well as they, were now called by the pure mercy of God; that they were all to be saved by believing in Christ, and complying with his doctrine; that sanctification and salvation can only be had by the Christian faith. He does not mean by faith only, as it is one particular virtue, different from charity, hope, and other Christian virtues; but he means by faith, the Christian religion, and worship, taken in opposition to the law of Moses and to the moral virtues of heathens. The design of the Epistle to the Galatians is much the same. From the 12th chapter he exhorts them to the practice of Christian virtues. Wi.

CHAP. I.

He commends the faith of the Romans, whom he longs to see. The philosophy of the heathens, being void of faith and humility, betrayed them into shameful sins.

PAUL, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God,

2 Which he had promised before by his prophets in the holy Scriptures,

3 Concerning his Son, who was made to him of the seed of David, according to the flesh,

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Called to be an apostle, or a called apostle.* That is, not only having the name of an apostle, but having his call to this high function, and his mission from God.—Separated unto the gospel of God. He means that he was separated from others, and appointed by the Holy Ghost to preach the gospel, as we read Acts xiii. 2. when the Holy Ghost to those of the Church at Antioch said, Separate me Saul and Barnabas, for the work unto which I have taken them. Wi.

VER. 2. Which he had promised before, &c. That is, God before, in the Scriptures, promised the blessings, which are now come by the preaching of the gospel, and that they should come by his Son. Wi.

VER. 3. Who was made to him of the seed of David, according to the flesh. The sense is, that God promised, that he who was his true and only Son from eternity, should also become his son, as man; that the same son should be man, as well as God, when the word was made flesh, or when that divine person should be united to our human nature. Thus the same person, who was his only begotten Son from eternity, being made man, and of the seed of David, by his incarnation, was still his Son, both as God, and also as man. Wi.—The Greek text has not the particle ei, (to him) but only τοῦ γενόμενον ἐκ σπέρματος Δαβὶδ. But S. Irenæus, (lib. iii. ch. 18.) S. Ambrose, S. Jerom read, Qui factus est ei. And also (1478)

4 Who was predestinated the Son of God in power, according to the spirit of sanctification, by the resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ from the dead:

5 By whom we have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith, in all nations for his name,

6 Among whom are you also the called of Jesus Christ:

7 To all that are at Rome, the beloved of God, called to be saints. Grace to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

S. Aug. in his unfinished exposition of the epistle to the Romans; though before in his book against Faustus, (lib. xi. ch. 14.) he reads it otherwise. Calmet.

VER. 4. Who was predestinated the Son of God. The learned bishop of Meaux, Bossuet, in his second Pastoral Instruction, in which he condemned the French translation of Mons. Simon, (p. 127.) takes notice, that according to S. Paul, and the constant doctrine of S. Aug. and S. Thomas, Christ as man, or the human nature of Christ united to his divine person, was predestinated without any precedent merits, by a free and liberal predestination of God's goodness. Wi.—Christ, as man, was predestinated to be the Son of God; and declared to be so (as the apostle here signifies) first by power, that is, by his working stupendous miracles; secondly, by the spirit of sanctification, that is, by his infinite sanctity; thirdly, by his resurrection, or raising himself from the dead. Ch.

VER. 5. By whom, i. e. by this same Jesus Christ, God and man, we, I, and the rest of the apostles, have received this grace and apostleship, this mission and commission from him, of preaching his gospel, and teaching his doctrine.—For obedience to the faith in all nations; that is, to bring all nations to the obedience and profession of his new law and doctrine. Wi.

VER. 6. Among whom are you also the called of Jesus. That is, you also are a part of those, who by his mercy, are called to this faith and belief in him. AN 8 First, I give thanks to my God, through Jesus Christ, for you all, because your faith is spoken of in the whole world.

9 For God is my witness, whom I serve with my spirit in the gospel of his Son, that, without ceasing, I make a commemoration of you

10 Always in my prayers: beseeching, if by any means I may at length have a prosperous journey, by the will of God, in coming to you.

11 For I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual grace, to strengthen you:

12 That is to say, that I may be comforted together in you, by that which is common to us both, your faith and mine.

13 And I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that I have often purposed to come to you, (and have been hindered hitherto) that I might have some fruit among you also, even as among other Gentiles.

14 To the Greeks, and to the Barbarians, to the wise, and to the unwise, I am a debtor:

15 So (as much as is in me) I am ready to preach the gospel to you also that are at Rome.

16 For I am not ashamed of the gospel. For it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth, to the Jew first, and to the Greek.

17 For the justice of God is revealed therein from faith to faith: as it is written: "The just man liveth by faith.

18 For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven, against all impiety and injustice of those men that detain the truth of God in injustice.

19 Because that which is known of God is manifest in them. For God hath manifested it to them.

20 For the invisible things of him, from the creation of the world, are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made: his eternal power also and divinity: so that they are inexcusable.

21 ^bBecause that, when they knew God, they did not glorify him as God, nor give thanks: but became vain in their thoughts, and their foolish heart was darkened:

22 For professing themselves to be wise, they became fools.

23 ^aAnd they changed the glory of the incorruptible God, into the likeness of the image of a corruptible man, and of birds, and of four-footed beasts, and of creeping things.

24 Wherefore God gave them up to the desires of their heart, ^dto uncleanness: to dishonour their own bodies among themselves.

25 Who changed the truth of God into a lie: and worshipped and served the creature rather than the Creator, who is blessed for ever. Amen.

26 For this cause God delivered them up to shameful affections. For their women have changed the natural use into that use which is against nature.

27 And in like manner the men also, leaving the natural use of the woman, have burned in their lusts one towards another, men with men working that which is filthy, and receiving in themselves the recompense which was due to their error.

28 And as they liked not to have God in their knowledge; God delivered them up to a reprobate sense, to do those things which are not convenient,

29 Being filled with all iniquity, malice, fornication, avarice, wickedness, full of envy, murder, contention, deceit, malignity, whisperers,

30 Detractors, hateful to God, contumelious, proud, haughty, inventors of evil things, disobedient to parents,

^a Habac. ii. 4. Gal. iii. 11. Heb. x. 38.—^b Ephes. iv. 17.—^c Ps. cv. 20. Jer. xi. 10.

^d Gal. v. 19. Ephes. iv. 19. and v. 3. Col. iii. 5. 1 Thes. ii. 3. and iv. 7.

beginning from those words in the third verse, who was made to him, &c. till the end of the sixth verse, are to be taken as within a parenthesis, which is not unusual in the style of S. Paul. Then he goes on after this long parenthesis. Wi.

VER. 7. To all that are at Rome . . . called to be saints. That is, who not only are named saints, but who by such a call from God, are to be sanctified by his grace, and to become holy, or saints. Wi.

VER. 8. In the whole world. That is, to all, or almost all the Roman empire. Wi.

VER. 9. God is my witness. I call God to witness. It is an oath. Wi.

VER. 14. I am a debtor. That is, I am bound to preach the word of God to all. Wi.—By Greeks, in this place, are understood the Romans also, and by Barbarians, all other people who were neither Greeks nor Romans. The Greeks called all barbarians, who did not speak the Greek language, even the Latins themselves. But after the Romans became masters of the world, they were excepted, through policy, from the number of barbarians, and particularly after they began to cultivate the science of the Greeks.

Græcia victa ferum victorem cepit, et artes Intulit agresti Latio.

—S. Paul says, that he is a debtor both to Greeks and barbarians, to the wise, the philosophers, those who pass for sages amongst the pagans, and to the simple, ignorant, unlettered class of mankind: not that he had received any thing at their hands, but because it was his duty, in quality of apostle, to address himself to the whole world, and preach to the great and to the small, to the learned and the unlearned. Calmet.

VER. 15. S. Paul was even anxious to go and deliver the word to the Romans. Hence Mat. Polus, in his reflections on this verse, puts the following words into the mouth of the Apostle: Lucifuga non sum: ostendi id Antiochiam, Athenis, Ephesi et Corinthi: paratus sum & in illa splendidissima urbe Roma ostendere.

VER. 16. For it is the power of God unto salvation to every one; that is, it brings powerful helps to all, both Gentiles and Jews, in order to their salvation. —To the Jew first, inasmuch as the gospel is to be first preached to the Jews. Wi.—The promises of salvation were first made to the Jews. Jesus Christ preached to the Jews only, and forbad his disciples, during his life-time, to preach to any other nation. And after his resurrection, when they had full powers to preach every where, they did not turn to the Gentiles, till the Jews had refused to hear them. A miracle was necessary to determine S. Peter to communicate the gospel to the uncircumcised; and S. Paul, in every place, first addressed himself to the Jew, and then to the Gentile. The apostle here sweetly endeavours, in an indirect manner, to silence the presumption of the Romans, who seemed to raise themselves above the Jews, and believed they had merited the grace of vocation to the faith. Calmet.

VER. 17. For the justice of God. He does not here mean that justice, by which God is just in himself, but that justice, or sanctification, which he communicates to men, and by which they are justified and sanctified.—From faith to faith. That is, by faith, and an increase in faith, inasmuch as, by increasing in faith, we advance in virtues; as it is written, (Hab. ii. 4.) the just man liveth by faith; including the love of God, hope, and other virtues. Wi.

VER. 18. For the wrath of God is revealed, &c. He begins to speak of the heathens, and of the wicked world, whose sins God punisheth from time to time with visible chastisements of plagues, famines, wars, &c. and that because they detain the truth of God in injustice, or in iniquity, that is, because they have not honoured God, even according to the knowledge which he has given them of him, especially their philosophers. Wi.

VER. 19–20. That which is known of God. Or may be easily known of God, is manifest in them. The light of reason demonstrates to them the existence of one God, the maker and preserver of all things. This is made known to them from the creation of the world, or from the creatures in the world: the Creator may be discovered by the creatures, and as S. Chrys. here says, every Scythian, every barbarian, may come to the knowledge of God by the wonderful harmony of all things, which proclaims the existence of God louder than any trumpet: but having known him, they did not glorify him; they acted contrary to their knowledge, abandoning themselves to idolatry, and the vain worship of many gods, and to all manner of vices and abominations against the light of reason. Wi.

VER. 24. Wherefore God gave them up, &c. That is, as S. Chrys. says, permitted them, in punishment of their wilful blindness, to fall into the foulest, most shameful, and unnatural sins of uncleanness here described. Wi.

VER. 25. God delivered them up. Not by being author of their sins, but by withdrawing his grace, and so permitting them, in punishment of their pride, to fall into those shameful sins. Ch.

VER. 27. Receiving in themselves the recompense . . . due to their error. That is, were justly punished for their wilful blindness and error, by which they had worshipped and adored creatures, instead of the Creator, idols instead of the one true God. Wi.

VER. 29. Being filled with all iniquity. He passeth to many other sins and crimes of the heathens. Wi.

31 Foolish, dissolute, without affection, without fidelity, without mercy.

32 Who, having known the justice of God, did not understand that they, who do such things, are worthy of death: and not only they who do them, but they also who consent to them that do them.

CHAP. II.

The Jews are censured, who make their boast of the law, and keep it not. He declares who are the true Jews.

WHEREFORE thou art inexcusable, O man, who-soever thou art that judgest.* For wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself: for thou dost the same things which thou judgest.

2 For we know that the judgment of God is, according to truth, against them that do such things.

3 And thinkest thou this, O man, that judgest them who do such things, and dost the same, that thou shalt escape the judgment of God?

4 Or despisest thou the riches of his goodness, and patience, and long-suffering? b knowest thou not that the benignity of God leadeth thee to penance?

5 But according to thy hardness, and impenitent heart, thou treasurest up to thyself wrath, against the day of wrath, and revelation of the just judgment of God,

6 c Who will render to every man according to his works:

7 To them indeed, who, according to patience in good work, seek glory, and honour, and incorruption, life everlasting:

8 But to them who are contentious, and who obey not the truth, but give credit to iniquity, wrath and indignation.

9 Tribulation and anguish upon every soul of man

* Matt. vii. 2.—b Wisd. ix. 24. 2 Pet. iii. 2.—c Matt. xvi. 27.—d Deut. x. 17. 2 Par. xix. 7. Job xxxiv. 19. Wis. vi. 8.

VER. 30. Hateful to God. The Greek may also signify, haters of God. Wi. —θεοσυγγίς means either haters of God, or hated by God. Menochius.—Disobedient to parents. The Greek literally signifies, Not listening to the advice of their parents; who rise up against them, and refuse to obey. Calmat.

VER. 31. Dissolute, rude in their manners, and behaviour. Some, from the Greek, understand breakers of their word; but this would be the same as without fidelity, which we find afterwards in the same verse. Wi.

VER. 32. This passage in the present Greek versions is rather different from the Vulgate: but the text of the Vulgate is conformable to the most ancient Greek manuscripts, of which some are more than twelve hundred years old. Οἱ τίνες τὸ δικαίωμα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐπιγινώσκοντες οὐκ ἐβόησαν ὅτι ἡ τὰ τοιαῦτα πράσσοντες ὀφείλουσαν θανάτου εἶναι, οὐ μόνον οὐδ' οἱ ποιοῦντες αὐτὰ, ἀλλὰ καὶ οἱ συνευκαλοῦντες τοῖς πράσσουσιν. Vide Var. Lect. Mill. in hunc locum et Prolegom. 41. 42.

* V. 1. Vocatus, κλητός Ἀπόστολος. Also v. 6. and 7. κλητός.

† V. 4. Qui prædestinatus est. S. Chrys. ὁμ. a. p. 7. Ed. Sau. πὶ οὖν ἐστιν προορισμένος; δειχθέντος, ἀποφαιέντος.

‡ V. 20. Chrys. hom. ii. p. 20. τῆς πάντων ἀρμονίας σάλπιγγος, λαμπρότερον βοῶσης.

§ V. 24. τὸ δὲ παρόντων, ἐν ταῖς ἐλασίαις ἐστι.

|| V. 30. Deo odibiles. θεοσυγγίς.

¶ V. 31. δουλοῦς. See 2 Tim. iii. 8. δούλους, sine fœdere.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Wherefore thou art inexcusable, &c. He seems to give a general admonition to every one, both Jews and Gentiles, not to blame, judge, or condemn others, when perhaps he, or those of his religion, may be guilty of the like sins. Let him rather call to mind the just judgment of God, which, they that are sinners, cannot escape. Let him also reflect, that if God hath hitherto deferred to punish him, it hath been through the riches and abundance of his goodness, patience, and long-forbearance, or longanimity: that he must take care not to harden his heart any longer, lest he heap up to himself a fatal treasure at the day of judgment, when God will render to every one according to his works, and not according to his faith only, says S. Chrys. hom. v. Wi.

VER. 5. The apostle is evidently speaking to the converted Jews, and not to the Gentiles. For the Gentiles believed in certain judges in hell, who passed sentence on every one as soon as he departed out of life. This is what the learned call poetical theology, and considered as fabulous. But besides a particular judgment at the hour of death, the Hebrews believed in a general judgment of all men, or at least of all the just, in the valley of Jehosaphat; (1480) that worketh evil, of the Jew first, and also of the Greek.

10 But glory, and honour, and peace, to every one that worketh good, to the Jew first, and also to the Greek 11 d For there is no respect of persons with God.

12 For whosoever have sinned without the law, shall perish without the law: and whosoever have sinned in the law, shall be judged by the law.

13 e For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified.

14 For when the Gentiles, who have not the law, do by nature those things that are of the law, these having not the law, are a law to themselves:

15 Who shew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience bearing witness to them, and their thoughts between themselves accusing, or excusing them,

16 In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men, by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel.

17 f But if thou art called a Jew, and retest in the law, and makest thy boast of God,

18 And knowest his will, g and approvest the things that are more profitable, being instructed by the law,

19 Art confident that thou thyself art a guide of the blind, a light of them that are in darkness, 20 An instructor of the foolish, a teacher of infants, having the form of knowledge and of truth in the law.

21 Thou, therefore, that teachest another, teachest not thyself: thou that preachest that men should not steal, stealest:

22 Thou that sayest, men should not commit adultery, committest adultery: thou that abhorrest idols, committest sacrilege:

Eccles. xv. 35. Acts x. 34. Eph. vi. 9. Col. iii. 25. 1 Pet. i. 17.—e Matt. vii. 21. James i. 22.—f Apoc. xi. 9.—g Phil. i. 10.

as may be seen in the prophets, and in the books of Wisdom and Machabees. Calmat.

VER. 9-10. Of the Jew first, and also of the Greek. That is, God, as a just judge, will not have any respect to their persons, but punish or reward both Jews and Gentiles, according to their good or bad works. And salvation is now offered to both. Wi.

VER. 12. Whosoever have sinned without the law. That is, without the written law of Moses, against their reason and conscience, &c. And also those who being Jews, have sinned under this written law, shall be judged, even with greater severity, for having transgressed against the known law. Wi.

VER. 14-15. When the Gentiles . . . do by nature, or naturally, that is, without having received any written law, these men are a law to themselves, and have it written in their hearts, as to the existence of a God, and their reason tells them, that many sins are unlawful: they may also do some actions that are morally good, as by giving alms to relieve the poor, honouring their parents, &c. not that these actions, morally good, will suffice for their justification of themselves, or make them deserve a supernatural reward in the kingdom of heaven; but God, out of his infinite mercy, will give them some supernatural graces, by which they come to know, and believe, that he will reward their souls for eternity. Such, says S. Chrys. were the dispositions of Melchisedech, Job, Cornelius the Centurion, &c. Wi.

VER. 17. But if thou art called a Jew. In the common Greek copies, we read, behold, thou art a Jew, &c. S. Paul here turns his discourse particularly to the Jews, who valued themselves so much upon their law, their temple, and their ceremonies; and therefore are said to rest on the law, as if it were enough to be by profession a Jew. Wi.—But many manuscripts, Clement Alexand. Origen, Ambrose, Sedul. Theophyl. &c. read it as in the Vulgate, si es Iudeus. Calmat.

VER. 21. Thou, therefore, that teachest another, teachest not thyself, &c. S. Chrys. (hom. vi.) takes these sentences as so many interrogations; dost thou teach thyself? dost thou not steal? dost thou not commit adultery? &c. Wi.

VER. 22. Idols, &c. The Jews, at the time of our Saviour, were free from idolatry, to which their ancestors had been so prone for so long a time. But to this evil had succeeded another, scarcely less heinous, viz. sacrilege, and a profanation of holy things. The greater part of the high priests bought their office. The priests permitted in the temple itself a kind of traffic, which caused our Saviour to declare to them, that they had made the house of his Father a den of thieves. And to favour their own avarice, they taught that it was lawful to defraud their creditors, and refuse to their parents the necessary succour, in the 23 Thou that makest thy boast of the law, by the transgression of the law dishonourest God.

24 ^a (For the name of God, through you, is blasphemed among the Gentiles, as it is written.)

25 Circumcision profiteth indeed if thou keep the law: but if thou be a transgressor of the law, thy circumcision is made uncircumcision.

26 If then the uncircumcised keep the ordinances of the law, shall not his uncircumcision be reputed for circumcision?

27 ^b And shall not that which by nature is uncircumcision, if it fulfil the law, judge thee, who by the letter and circumcision art a transgressor of the law?

28 ^c For it is not he is a Jew, who is so outwardly: nor is that circumcision which is outwardly in the flesh:

29 But he is a Jew that is one inwardly: and the circumcision is that of the heart, in the spirit, not in the letter: whose praise is not of men, but of God.

CHAP. III.

The advantages of the Jews. All men are sinners, and none can be justified by the works of the law, but only by the grace of Christ.

WHAT advantage then hath the Jew, or what is the profit of circumcision?

2 Much every way. First indeed, ^d because the words of God were committed to them.

^a Isai. lii. 5. Ezeo. xxxvi. 20.—^b Matt. xii. 42.—^c Isai. xlviii.
^d Infra ix. 4.—^e 2 Tim. ii. 13.

case of vows to give to the temple. S. Paul does not here reproach them for the profanations of the temple which they committed in the last siege of Jerusalem, for it had not then taken place; but he knew full well the dispositions of their hearts, and the little regard they had for the most sacred things. Calmet.

VER. 24. The apostle here only repeats the reproaches which the prophets had repeated so often before, that the Jews, by the contrast between their lives and the sanctity of their religion, had been the cause of that religion and worship becoming the ridicule and laughing-stock of the Gentile world. Calmet.—A reproach this, which also bears very heavy upon many Christians of the present day; who by their profession believe the truth of the one, holy, Catholic, and apostolic faith, and by their conduct belie the same, leading lives unworthy of pagans. A.

VER. 25. Circumcision profiteth indeed, inasmuch as it was ordained by Almighty God, as were also the precepts of the law, which were to be observed before the publishing of the new law of Christ. See Gal. v. 6. But it was never profitable to the transgressors of the law. Nay, the uncircumcised Gentiles, who have complied with those natural precepts, which are also commanded by the law of Moses, shall judge and condemn those, who received the written law, and at the same time were transgressors of it. Wi.

VER. 26. Shall not his uncircumcision (Lit. his præputium) be reputed for circumcision? Nonne præputium illius in circumcisiōnem reputabitur? ἡ περιτομή σου ἀποφύερα γίνεσθαι. A translation may adhere to the letter too much; this seems literal enough. Wi.

VER. 28. Nur is that circumcision, which is outwardly in the flesh. S. Paul distinguisheth two sorts of circumcision; that which is made in the flesh, according to the letter of the law, which is an outward circumcision; and a more necessary circumcision of the heart, and of the spirit, by which a man's interior is reformed, and by which his vices and disorders are cut off. The first circumcision would never avail a man any thing without the second. Wi.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. What advantage then? &c. The apostle, not to offend the Jews, by insisting too long in reprehending them, turns his discourse to the advantages they have hitherto had above other nations. As first, that the words of God, those divine oracles, revelations, promises in the Scriptures, were credited or entrusted to them. And though some, or many of them have not believed God's promises, especially concerning their Messias; this hath not hindered God from being faithful to his word, in sending the Messias, and those blessings that were promised with him. For God is always true, or faithful in his promises, and therefore must needs be justified, or found just, when his proceedings are judged that is, considered and examined. Wi.

VER. 4. God only is essentially true. All men in their own capacity are liable to lies and errors: nevertheless God, who is the truth, will make good his promise of keeping his Church in all truth. See S. John. xvi. 13. Ch.—The Greek text has, "may God be true;" that is, may all men acknowledge him as such; let the whole world know, that he neither can be unfaithful to his word, nor his promises; and that, on the contrary, all men of themselves have but lies and vanity for their portion.—That thou mayest be justified, &c. The particle that, is not casual in this place, but only marks the event. Thy conduct shews that thou art faithful and true to thy promises, and that, notwithstanding the judgments of men, thou art always unchangeable and infallible. Thou art victorious, when judged by them: thou shewest them the falsity and injustice of their judgments.

3 For what if some of them have not believed? ^a shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid.

4 ^b But God is true: and every man a liar, as it is written: ^c that thou mayest be justified in thy words, and mayest overcome when thou art judged.

5 But if our injustice commend the justice of God, what shall we say? Is God unjust, who executeth wrath?

6 (I speak according to man). God forbid: otherwise how shall God judge this world?

7 For if the truth of God hath more abounded through my lie, unto his glory: why am I also yet judged as a sinner?

8 And not rather (as we are slandered, and as some affirm that we say) let us do evil, that there may come good: whose damnation is just.

9 What then? Do we excel them? By no means. ^d For we have charged both Jews, and Greeks, that they are all under sin:

10 As it is written: ^e 'There is not any man just:

11 There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.

12 All have turned out of the way, they are become unprofitable together: there is none that doth good, there is not so much as one.

^f John iii. 33. Ps. cxv. 11.—^g Ps. l. 6.—^h Gal. iii. 22. Supra i. 17.
Infra xi. 9.—ⁱ Ps. xlii. 3.

Calmet.—And that the infidelity of man, so far from affecting the fidelity of God, will only serve to set it off in a more striking and clearer light. V.

VER. 5-6. But if our injustice, &c. S. Paul here puts this objection, that if men's sins and iniquities, make the justice of God commendable, that is, make his justice more apparent and known; if the truth of God, as to his promises, be more discovered, praised, and glorified by our lies, that is, by our sins, how then can God blame, or punish men for sins, which contribute more to his honour? May we not say, (as some falsely pretended S. Paul said) let us do evil things, that good things may come of them? The apostle answers in short both this objection, and the calumny against him. As to the first; that though men's sins give an occasion to God to shew his justice, and make known his divine perfections, yet this will not excuse them from being justly condemned, and punished, when God shall judge the wicked world: for if that were a sufficient plea, God could not judge and condemn the wicked: so that as S. Chrys.* observes, the apostle resolves their question, by asking another, and shews their reasoning absurd, by taking notice of another absurdity that follows from it. 2dly. He tells them, they slander him, and his doctrine, by only telling them, they deserve to be condemned who say, let us do evil that good may come of it: the damnation, says he, of such men is just. Wi.

VER. 9. What then do we Jews excel the Gentiles? He again turns his discourse against the Jews, by shewing that they have been sinners, as well as the Gentiles, notwithstanding the particular favours God had done to them, and not to the Gentiles: this he proves out of the psalms; and (v. 19) he shews, that these things were spoken of them, who were under the law. Wi.

VER. 10. There is not any man just, viz. by virtue either of the law of nature, or of the law of Moses; but only by faith and grace. Ch.—The apostle here adduces a series of passages from the ancient Scripture, to convince both Jews and Gentiles, that not one amongst them was just, nor had any title to glory, on account of his good works. Not that a just man could not be found under the old law, or even before the law; an infinite number of passages of Scripture will shew the contrary: but he must be understood as speaking of man left to himself, as a son of Adam, conceived in sin, and brought forth a child of wrath. Calmet.—These crimes, enumerated by the apostle, are not mentioned as if found in each individual, but some of this black catalogue of crimes were found in one man; some in another; yet so that all had become infected with sin and iniquity, all had deserted the path of virtue. There was none just, none was found, who feared or sought after God. Estius.—These texts of Scripture, though formerly, even before the times of S. Jerom and S. Augustin, they were found together in some Latin editions, viz. Ps. xlii. cannot be found united either in the Hebrew text, or Sept. version, as S. Jerom affirms, in Præf. lib. xvi. commentar. in Isai. This, he says, all the Greek commentators allow. He says, that those who were ignorant of this apostle's art in uniting together the texts of different parts of Scripture, upon finding no part where they were all to gether, placed them, without any authority, in that psalm whence the first part of the citation is taken. The words, an open sepulchre, are taken from Ps. xlii. (Heb. text xiv.) the verse "Their throat is an open sepulchre, with their tongues they have dealt deceit fully," from Ps. v. "The venom of asps is under their lips," from Ps. cxxix. "Whose mouth is full of curses and bitterness," from Ps. ix. "Their feet are swift," &c. as far as, there is no fear, from Isai. ch. lix. "There is not the fear of God before their eyes," from Ps. xxxv. Estius.

13 ^aTheir throat is an open sepulchre, with their tongues they have dealt deceitfully: ^bThe venom of asps is under their lips:

14 ^cWhose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness:

15 ^dTheir feet are swift to shed blood:

16 Destruction and misery are in their ways:

17 And the way of peace they have not known:

18 ^eThere is no fear of God before their eyes.

19 ^fNow we know that what things soever the law speaketh, it speaketh to them that are in the law: that every mouth may be stopped, and all the world may be made subject to God:

20 Because by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified in his sight. For by the law is the knowledge of sin.

21 But now without the law the justice of God is made manifest: being witnessed by the law and the prophets.

22 Even the justice of God, by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all that believe in him: for there is no distinction:

23 For all have sinned, and do need the glory of God.

24 Being justified gratis by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus,

25 Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation

^a Ps. v. 11. James iii. 8.—^b Ps. cxxxix. 4.—^c Ps. ix. 7.—^d Isai. lix. 7. Prov. i. 16.

VER. 17. S. Augustin says, that by the law of actions, is understood, that which teaches us what we have to do: by the law of faith, is meant faith itself, which obtains for us grace of performing what the law requires. The law of actions, then, is the old law, which contains the precept; the law of faith is the new law, which gives assistance to fulfil the law. De Spir. & Lit. c. iv.

VER. 19. And all the world may be made subject to God. That is, God permitted these sins in all men, that sanctification and salvation might be from Christ only, the Redeemer of all men, so that neither Jew nor Gentile should be justified, but by the free and liberal gift of his grace. See S. Chrys.† Wi.—That the Jews might not say that these passages were to be understood of Gentiles, the apostle here assures them that they must be understood in the first place of the Jews themselves; for what the law speaketh, it speaketh to those who are under the law. If the Jews, then, were so guilty, the guilt of the Gentiles was far more enormous. Thus is every mouth stopped, and all the world must confess itself guilty before God. Let none then glory in their good works. Charnet.

VER. 20. &c. To the end of this chapter, the apostle shews that the Jews cannot be truly justified, and sanctified by the works of the written law of Moses only; that a knowledge of sin, or of what was sinful, came by the law, but if they did not comply with the precepts of the law, this knowledge made them more guilty. Now, at the coming of Christ, the justice of God, that is, the justice by which he made others just, and justified them, cannot be had without faith in Christ, and by the grace of our Redeemer Jesus Christ, whom God hath proposed to all, both Gentiles and Jews, as a sacrifice of† propitiation for the sins of all mankind, by faith in his blood; that is, by believing in him, who shed his blood and died for us on the cross. It is he alone, (v. 26) that is the just one, and the justifier of all. And as to this, there is no distinction. The Gentiles are justified and sanctified without the written law, and the Jews who have been under the law, cannot partake of the justice of God, that is, cannot be justified, sanctified, or saved, but by the faith and grace of Christ Jesus. S. Paul does not pretend that the virtue of faith alone will justify and save a man; nothing can be more opposite to the doctrine of the gospel, and of the apostles in many places, as hath been observed, and will be shewn hereafter. He tells us in this chap. (v. 20. and 28.) that man is justified without the works of the written law: and he teaches us, that no works of the law of Moses, nor any works that a man does by the law of nature, are sufficient to justify a man, and save him of themselves, that is, unless they be joined with faith, and the grace of God. And when he seems to say, that men are justified or saved by faith, or by believing, as he says of Abraham in the next chapter, (v. 3. and 5.) he never says (as some both ancient and later heretics have pretended) that faith alone is sufficient. And besides by faith, he understands the Christian faith and doctrine of Christ, as opposite to the law of Moses, to circumcision, and the ceremonies of that law, as it evidently appears by the design of the apostle, both in this epistle and in that to the Galatians. He teaches us in this epistle (e. ii. 6.) that God will judge every man according to his works: (v. 13.) that "not the hearers of the law," but the doers, shall be justified. See also c. vi. He tells the Galatians (c. v. v. 6.) that the faith, by which they must be saved, must be a faith working by charity. He also tells the Corinthians (1. vii. 19.) that circumcision is nothing, nor uncircumcision, but the keeping of the commandments of God. That though a man should have a faith, that so he could remove mountains, it would avail him nothing without through faith in his blood, to the shewing of his justice, for the remission of past sins, 26 Through the forbearance of God for the shewing of his justice in this time: that he himself may be just, and the justifier of him who is of the faith of Jesus Christ.

27 Where is then thy boasting? It is excluded. By what law? Of works? No: but by the law of faith.

28 For we account a man to be justified by faith without the works of the law.

29 Is he the God of the Jews only? Is he not also of the Gentiles? Yes, of the Gentiles also.

30 For it is one God who justifieth circumcision by faith, and uncircumcision through faith.

31 Do we then destroy the law through faith? God forbid: but we establish the law.

CHAP. IV.

Abraham was not justified by works done, as of himself: but by grace, and by faith; and that before he was circumcised. Gentiles by faith are his children.

WHAT shall we say, then, that Abraham hath found, who is our father according to the flesh?

2 For if Abraham were justified by works, he hath glory, but not with God.

3 For what saith the Scripture? ^aAbraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice.

^a Ps. xxxv. 2.—† Gal. ii. 16.—§ Gen. xv. 6. Gal. iii. 6. James ii. 23.

charity. How often does he tell us that they who commit such and such sins, shall not inherit or possess the kingdom of God! Does not S. James tell us, that faith without good works is dead? See chap. ii. Of this more hereafter. Wi.

VER. 29. The apostle here tells us that all men are the creatures of God Almighty, and destined to eternal happiness. Neither was it necessary to be incorporated with the Jews by circumcision, to be made partakers of the justice of God. Estius.

VER. 30. God who justifieth circumcision, and also the uncircumcised by faith: that is, by the faith and religion of the new law, or by a faith working by charity, and joined with good works proceeding from faith. See the Council of Trent, Sess. 6. cap. viii. "When the apostle says, that a man is justified by faith, and gratis, according to the perpetual consent of the Catholic Church, we are said to be justified by faith, because faith is the beginning and foundation of man's salvation, and the root of his justification, without which we cannot please God, nor be made his sons; and we are said to be justified gratis, because nothing of those things which go before justification, whether faith or works, are meritorious of the grace of justification." Wi.

VER. 31. Do we then destroy the law through faith? No: but we establish the law. See the words of Christ: (Matt. v. 17.) 1. Because the figures and types of the law of Moses, and the predictions of the prophets, are fulfilled. 2. Because Christians are now taught to fulfil the moral precepts, and the chief part of the law, with greater perfection, in the spirit of faith, charity, &c. Wi.

* V. 6. S. Chrys. on the words: how shall God judge the world? ἀποτίσει δίκην ᾧ κόσμῳ.

† V. 19. Ut subditus fiat omnis mundus Deo, ἐπὶ δόξης γένηται. ὁ ἐπὶ δόξης κυρίως λέγεται, ὁ μὴ δυνάμενος ἀρξάναι αὐτὸν πρὸς ἀπολογίαν, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἐξουσίας δέξασθαι βοήθειαν.

‡ V. 25. Quem proposuit Dens propitiationem, ἱλαστήριον. Some read propitiatorium, as I find it cited in the Council of Trent, Sess. 6. cap. ii.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. The apostle proves what he had advanced in the last chapter, that the Jews cannot be justified by the works of the written law, nor by any works, unless joined with faith in the Messias, their Redeemer. This he shews by the example of Abraham, who is said to have been justified by believing; 2. and this was before he was circumcised; 3. and long before the law of Moses. Justification was then given without the works of that law.—What advantage shall we say, then, that Abraham hath found, who is our father according to the flesh? This seems the true construction and sense: rather than what did he find according to the flesh, as some expound it. Wi.

VER. 2. If Abraham were justified by works, or by his own works, he might have glory, and be commended by men, who judge only according to outward appearances; but not with God: that is, he could not be truly justified, so as to deserve a reward in heaven, without faith and the grace of God. Wi.—Not with God. Whatever glory, or applause such works might procure from men, they would be of no value in the sight of God. Ch.

VER. 3. *For what saith the Scripture? Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice. The Scripture, therefore, teacheth us that he became just by his faith. And as he had this faith by the grace of God, grace was the cause of his justification, and not any works without grace. And when 4 Now to him that worketh, the reward is not reckoned according to grace, but according to debt.

5 But to him that worketh not, yet believeth in him that justifieth the impious, his faith is reputed to justice, according to the purpose of the grace of God.

6 As David also termeth the blessedness of a man, to whom God reputeth justice without works:

7 Blessed are they, whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered.

8 Blessed is the man, to whom the Lord hath not imputed sin.

9 This blessedness, then, doth it abide in the circumcision only, or in the uncircumcision also? For we say that faith was reputed to Abraham unto justice.

10 How then was it reputed? In circumcision, or in uncircumcision? Not in circumcision, but in uncircumcision.

11 ^b And he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the justice of the faith, which is in uncircumcision: that he might be the father of all the believers unit is said, it was reputed to him, we must not understand an imputation of being just without a true and interior justice: for to be reputed just in the sight of God, who sees the heart, and sanctifies the soul by his interior grace, is the only true justice that can make a man acceptable to God. As not to have our sins imputed in the sight of God, is to have them forgiven, and to be free from our sins. Wi.—Reputed, &c. By God, who reputeth nothing otherwise than it is. However, we may gather from this word, that when we are justified, our justification proceedeth from God's free grace and bounty; and not from any efficacy which any act of ours could have of its own nature, abstracting from God's grace. Ch.

* Ps. xxxi. 1.—Gen. xvii. 10. and 11.

VER. 4. Now to him that worketh, &c. a reward may be looked upon as due for his works, and not bestowed upon him as a free gift; but when it is said he believed and was justified, (this belief or faith was always a liberal gift of God) and when no mention is made of his works, it appears that such a justification and sanctification are not from the works of the written law, nor from any works he could do of himself, but that they are according to the purpose, or decree of grace. Wi.—Such a man, says the apostle, challenges his reward as a debt, due to his own performances; whereas he who worketh not, that is, who presumeth not upon any works done by his own strength; but seeketh justice through faith and grace, is freely justified by God's grace. Ch.

VER. 5. Abraham, before his vocation, was an idolater, according to Josephus; (Ant. of Jews, lib. i. ch. viii.) according to some of the Rabbins, and as the Scripture itself seems to insinuate, Josue ch. xxiv. Isa. xliii. Wisdom x. Judith v. He did not then merit his vocation to the faith by his works. But when God had called him, and made him depart from his country, when he promised to him an innumerable posterity, Abraham believed in his promises, and it was reputed to him unto justice, that his faith and his justice were the pure gift of God. His faith was not a dead and speculative faith only, but an active faith, a faith animated by charity, as appears from the sequel of his life. Calmet.

VER. 6. As David, &c. That is, David accounted a man happy in being justified by God's grace, and not by his own works, when he said: "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven by the mercies of God, and whose sins are covered; that is, covered so as to be no more, even in the sight of God. Wi.

VER. 7. Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. That is, blessed are those who, by doing penance, have obtained pardon and remission of their sins, and also are covered; that is, newly clothed with the habit of grace, and vested with the stole of charity. Ch.—When it is said that the sins of man are covered, we must not imagine that they still remain, but on account of the goodness of God will not be punished, as the Lutherans contend; for the justice of God could not suffer this: but by it we must understand that they are entirely blotted out, and neither exist, nor are considered any longer by God. Still, we must not conclude that man is blessed, as soon as sin is remitted; since the same psalmist, in another place, ascribes happiness to man when he walks in the law of the Lord, and when he keeps judgment and does justice. Ps. i. cv. and cviii. And our Saviour says, If you know these things, blessed shall you be if you do them. S John xiii. Estius.—Moreover, if sins were never blotted out, but only covered, why did the royal prophet pray to the Almighty, saying: blot out all mine iniquities; and in different parts of the 50th psalm and psalm cviii, speaking of the egregious sinner, he says: let the sin of his mother not be blotted out; which would mean nothing at all, if sins were never blotted out? A.

VER. 8. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord hath not imputed sin. That is, blessed is the man who hath retained his baptismal innocence, that no grievous sin can be imputed to him. And likewise, blessed is the man who, after falling into sin hath done penance, and leads a virtuous life by frequenting the sacraments necessary for obtaining the grace to prevent a relapse, that sin is no more imputed to him. Ch.

circumcised, that to them also it may be reputed to justice:

12 And might be the father of circumcision, not to them only that are of the circumcision, but to them also who follow the steps of the faith, that our father Abraham had, being as yet uncircumcised.

13 *For not through the law was the promise to Abraham or to his seed, that he should be the heir of the world, but through the justice of faith.

14 For if they who are of the law, be heirs: faith is made void, the promise is made of no effect.

15 For the law worketh wrath. For where there is no law, there is no transgression.

16 Therefore it is of faith, that according to grace the promise might be firm to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all,

17 (As it is written, ^c I have made thee a father of many nations) before God, whom he believed, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things that are not, as those that are.

* Gal. iii. 18. Heb. xi. 9.—d Gen. xvii. 4.

VER. 9. This blessedness, by which a man's sins are forgiven, and his soul truly justified, was promised, and is given to the uncircumcised Gentiles, as well as to the circumcised Jews, by the faith and grace of Christ; as Abraham was justified, when he was in the state of uncircumcision. Wi.

VER. 10. In effect, Abraham received circumcision a year only before the birth of Isaac; whereas he had received the promises and justification more than 25 years before, when the Almighty caused him to depart from Mesopotamia. Calmet.—Therefore he was justified by faith and grace, which is common both to the circumcised and uncircumcised. Menochius.

VER. 11. And he received, after he was justified, circumcision, as a seal of the justice of faith, which he had before when he believed. Circumcision, therefore, in Abraham, was as a seal and testimony of the justice which he had already by faith: though circumcision was chiefly given to Abraham and his posterity, as a sign or seal of that alliance which God made with Abraham, and his seed, to shew he had made choice of them for his elect people. Wi.

VER. 12. And might be the father of circumcision. The apostle here tells them that Abraham is the father of all true believers, uncircumcised as well as circumcised, and all that believe in Christ, his seed, in whom God promised to bless all nations, are the spiritual sons of Abraham, and partake of the blessings promised to him in his posterity: nor can the circumcised be his true and spiritual children, unless they follow the footsteps of his faith, by which he was justified, when he believed the promises which God made to him before that circumcision was instituted; to wit, that he and Sara should have a son, when they were naturally past the age of having children, and that in his posterity all the world should be blessed, that is, in Christ. Wi.

VER. 13. Of the world, &c. By the world, some understand the land of Chanaan, which is sometimes meant by the whole earth, particularly in the times of David and Solomon, when they ruled over the neighbouring nations. But others think that the apostle alludes to the passage of Genesis, where the Almighty promises that in his (Abraham's) seed, all the nations of the earth should be blessed; which promise extends much beyond the narrow limits of Chanaan. In fine, it may be understood in a spiritual sense, of his dignity of father of all the faithful; which makes him, in a manner, master of the whole world, since his spiritual children, spread through the whole world, have the universe for their inheritance. Calmet.—Postula a me, et dabo tibi Gentes hereditatem tuam et possessionem tuam terminos terræ. Ps. ii. 8. A.—It was by Christ that Abraham was to be heir of the world, in as much as the spiritual kingdom of Christ should be spread over all the world. And this of one who was of the seed of David, being heir of the world, was not by the law, or by virtue of the law, which was not given to Moses till 400 years after. Wi.

VER. 14. For if they, who are of the law, be heirs: faith is made void, the promise is made of no effect. That is, if the Jews, who are under the law, are the only heirs of the blessings promised, it will follow that the faith which Abraham had before the circumcision, and before the law, was of no value, which I have shewn to be false. And, secondly, it will follow that the promise made to him, that in him all nations should be blessed, is also null. Wi.

VER. 15. For the law worketh wrath, not of itself, nor by the intention of the lawgiver, but in as much as it is the occasion of greater punishments, when persons transgress it knowingly. Wi.—The law abstracting from faith and grace, worketh wrath occasionally, by being an occasion of many transgressions, which provoke God's wrath. Ch.

VER. 16. There are two kinds of children of Abraham, to whom alone these promises are made; the one is according to the flesh, the other according to the spirit. The former of these had no more part in the promises made to him and his seed than the Gentiles, unless they imitated the fidelity and obedience of their father. Calmet.—It is in this sense of spiritual father, that the priest at the altar, speaking in the name of the faithful, calls Abraham our patriarch. Estius.

18 Who, against hope, believed in hope, that he might be made the father of many nations, according to that which was said to him: *So shall thy seed be.

19 And he was not weak in faith: neither did he consider his own body now dead, whereas he was almost a hundred years old, nor the dead womb of Sara.

20 In the promise also of God he staggered not by distrust: but was strengthened in faith, giving glory to God:

21 Most fully knowing that whatsoever he has promised, he is able also to perform.

22 And therefore it was reputed to him unto justice.

23 Now it is not written only for him, that it was reputed to him unto justice:

24 But for us also, to whom it shall be reputed, if we believe in him, ^bthat raised up Jesus Christ, our Lord, from the dead, 25 ^cWho was delivered up for our sins, and rose again for our justification.

CHAP. V.

The grounds we have for hope in Christ. Sin and death came by Adam: grace and life by Christ.

THEREFORE, being justified by faith, let us have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ.

2 ^dBy whom also we have access through faith into this grace, wherein we stand, and glory in the hope of the glory of the sons of God.

3 And not only so, but we glory also in tribulations: ^eknowing that tribulation worketh patience:

4 And patience trial, and trial hope;

5 ^fAnd hope confoundeth not: because the charity

* Gen. xv. 5.—^b 1 Pet. ii. 21.—^c Isai. liii. 6. 1 Pet. i. 8.—^d Ephes. ii. 18.

VER. 18. Who, against hope, believed in hope, or with hope. That is, Abraham, against all probability of human hopes, still hoped in God, says S. Chrys. that he should have a son by Sara: and in this, he was not weak in faith. Therefore it, that is, his great faith, was imputed to him unto justice: and also our faith shall be imputed to us unto justice, or make us truly just, by believing in Christ, &c. Wi.

VER. 19. Effete, through old age, γενεράμενος.

VER. 25. The eternal Father delivered his Son to death, to expiate our offences; he raised him from the dead for our justification. His death is our redemption; his resurrection is the principal object of our faith. Our faith in the resurrection, is imputed unto justice, as was the faith of Abraham in the promises of God. The apostle here seems to refer our faith and justification only to the resurrection, not to the exclusion of other mysteries of religion, which are all, and every one of them, the objects of our faith. But the resurrection is, as it were, the zeal and consummation of the rest; it eminently includes in itself all the others. Calmet.

* V. 8. Et reputatum est illi ad justitiam, καὶ ἀποδοτὴν αὐτῷ εἰς δικαιοσύνην. The Greek word is sometimes translated in the Vulgate Latin, by imputare, or accepto ferre.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. The apostle proceeds in this chapter to shew how great a benefit it is to be truly justified by the coming of Christ.—Let us have peace with God.* That is, says S. Chrys. by laying aside all contentions. Or let us have peace with God by sinning no more. And this peace we may have under the greatest tribulations, which conduce to our greater good, to an increase in virtues, in patience, in hope, in the love of God, &c. Wi.

VER. 3. We glory in spirit in the afflictions, oppression, and persecution, which we suffer as Christians, esteeming them a great blessing. Thus the apostles went rejoicing from before the council, because they had been thought worthy to suffer disgrace for the name of Jesus. Acts v. And S. James (c. i.) says: Think it the greatest joy when you fall into various temptations: (i. e. tribulations) for these sufferings greatly serve to confirm the elect in the hopes which they have of enjoying the glory of the world to come. Estius.

VER. 5. God having prevented us with his gifts when we did not at all deserve them, having showered upon us the blessings of faith, charity, patience, and fidelity, we cannot but have the greatest confidence that after this pledge and assurance of his good will towards us, he will finish the work he has begun, and bring us to his heavenly kingdom. Calmet.—Not only the gift of the Holy Spirit, but the Spirit himself, is given to us, who resides in our soul as in his own temple, who sanctifies it, and makes it partaker of his divine love. Menochius.

VER. 6. &c. Why did Christ . . . die for the ungodly? He shews Christ's great mercy and love for mankind, that he would die for us, who were sinners, and of God is poured out into our hearts, by the Holy Ghost, who is given to us.

6 For why did Christ, when as yet we were weak, according to the time, ^gdie for the ungodly?

7 For scarce for a just man will one die: yet per haps for a good man some one would venture to die.

8 But God commendeth his charity towards us; because when as yet we were sinners, according to the time,

9 Christ died for us: much more, therefore, being now justified by his blood, shall we be saved from wrath through him.

10 For if, when we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son: much more being reconciled, shall we be saved by his life.

11 And not only so: but also we glory in God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received reconciliation.

12 Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into this world, and by sin death, and so death passed upon all men, in whom all have sinned.

13 For until the law, sin was in the world: but sin was not imputed, when the law was not.

14 But death reigned from Adam unto Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of the transgression of Adam, who is a figure of him that was to come.

15 But not as the offence, so also is the gift: for if by the offence of one, many have died: much more the grace of God, and the gift in the grace of one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many.

* James i. 8.—^f Psal. xxii. 6.—^g Heb. ix. 14. 1 Pet. iii. 18.

consequently his enemies. How few are there that will lay down their lives for a just man, or for a just cause?—Perhaps for a good man. That is, for another, who has been good to him, his friend or benefactor, we may find one that will expose or lay down his life. But Christ, in due time, appointed by the divine decree, died for sinners, for us all. And if we have been reconciled to God, and justified by his death; now being made the children of God, and his friends, we may with greater confidence hope to be saved. Wi.—The text of the Greek is as follows: For when we were weak, he gave us our Lord Jesus Christ to redeem us; shewing how much God loved us, to perform such stupendous acts of love in our behalf. But the reading of the Vulgate is conformable to S. Irenæus, (lib. iii. c. 18.) and to the commentaries on this epistle, which have been published under the name of S. Ambrose, and S. Jerom. Calmet.—S. Augustin says, those whom the apostle first calls weak, he afterwards calls impious, hos dixit infirmos quos impios. Ep. lix. ad Paulinum.—S. Jerom. and other fathers and commentators, explain the Greek text of this verse as follows: Scarcely would any one die for a just cause; for who would ever think of dying in defence of injustice? Others explain it thus: Scarcely a single man would die for one that was wicked and unjust; for we can hardly find a person ready to lay down his life for a good man; his friend and benefactor, who has been kind to him. Calmet.

VER. 12. As by one man . . . in whom all have sinned. That is, in which man all sinned, (not in which death all sinned) as it must be the construction by the Greek text: so that these words are a clear proof of original sin against the Pelagian heretics, as S. Aug. often brings them. Nor does S. Chrys. deny original sin, though in this place he expounds it that all by Adam's sin were made guilty of death and punishments. But how could they deserve these, had they not sinned in Adam? Wi.

VER. 13-14. Until the law, sin was in the world. That is, from Adam's fall, both original sin and actual sins truly infected all mankind. Wi.—Not imputed. That is, men knew not, or made no account of sin; neither was it imputed to them, in the manner it was afterwards, when they transgressed the known written law of God. Ch.—All were conceived and born in sin, in what we call original sin, and liable to death, even infants, who were not come to the use of reason, and consequently could not sin after the similitude of the transgression of Adam, or by imitating his sin, but were born in sin: and besides this, all manner of actual sins, which men committed by their own perverse will, reigned every where in the world. But before the law these sins were not imputed, that is, were not declared sins, that deserved such punishments as were ordained by the law.—Adam, who is a figure of him that was to come. That is, of Christ, whom the apostle calls the last Adam, 1 Cor. xv. 45. But he was a figure by contraries. By the first Adam, sin and death entered into the world; by Christ, justice and life. Wi.

VER. 15. &c. But not as the offence, so also is the gift, or the benefits which mankind receive by their Redeemer, Jesus Christ. For S. Paul here shews that 16 And not as it was by one sin, so also is the gift: for the judgment indeed was by one unto condemnation: but the grace is of many offences, unto justification.

17 For if by one man's offence, death reigned through one: much more they who receive abundance of grace, and of the gift, and of justice, shall reign in life, through one, Jesus Christ.

18 Therefore, as by the offence of one, unto all men to condemnation: so also by the justice of one, unto all men unto justification of life.

19 *For as by the disobedience of one man, many were made sinners: so also by the obedience of one, many shall be made just.

20 Now the law entered in, that sin might abound. But where sin abounded, grace hath abounded more.

21 That as sin hath reigned unto death, so also grace might reign by justice, unto everlasting life, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

CHAP. VI.

The Christian must die to sin, and live to God.

WHAT shall we say then? shall we continue in sin, that grace may abound?

2 God forbid. For how shall we that are dead to sin, ^blive any longer therein?

3 Know you not that all we, who are baptized in Christ Jesus, are baptized in his death?

4 *For we are buried together with him by baptism

• Philip. xi. 8. and 9.—^b 2 Pet. ii. 22.—^c Gal. iii. 27. Col. ii. 12.

the graces which Christ came to bestow upon men, and offers to all, are much greater than the evils which the sin of one man, Adam, caused. 1. Because, if by the offence of that one man, Adam, many, i. e. all died by original sin that descended from Adam, (the blessed Virgin mother by a special privilege being always excepted) much more the grace of one man, Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many;† the comparison does not imply that more in number receive the grace of Christ, than were infected with sin; but that they who receive the graces which are offered to all, receive greater benefits than were the damages caused by the sin of Adam. For the judgment indeed was by one unto condemnation, or so as to make all guilty of one sin, that is, of original sin; and for other actual sins, men committed them by their own proper will; whereas the grace of Christ justifies men from many sins; that is, also from all sins which they have committed by their own malice. 2. Because by it, that is, by the offence of one man, death reigned in the world, and made all men liable to damnation; yet now by the incarnation of Christ, (which would not have been, had not Adam sinned) all they who are justified by the grace of their Redeemer, have Christ God and man for their head: he is become the head of that same mystical body which is his Church: they are exalted to the dignity of being the brothers of Christ, the Son of God; they are made joint heirs with him of the kingdom of heaven, and so by the grace of Christ have a greater dignity in this world, and shall be exalted to a greater and more eminent degree of glory in the kingdom of his glory for all eternity; which hath given occasion to the Church, in her liturgy, to cry out, as it were with a transport of joy, O happy fault, which hath procured us such and so great a Redeemer! See S. Chrys. § hom. x. Wi.

VER. 20-21. Now the law entered in. Not that the law was designed for that end; but the word that, as in many other places, so here expresseth only the consequence that followed, when sinners occasionally became more guilty by the knowledge of the law, and the precepts given. S. Chrys. takes notice that it is not said the law was given, but only that it entered in, as it were by the by, and only for a certain time, till our happy redemption, reconciliation, and justification by Jesus Christ. Wi.—That sin might abound. Not as if the law were given purposely for sin to abound; but that it so happened, through man's perversity, taking occasion of sinning more, from the prohibition of sin. Ch.—Where sin abounded. Grace abounded in the elect; for the apostle does not say that grace abounded in every place where iniquity had abounded; but he says indefinitely where, that is, in many places where sin abounded, grace hath abounded also. Estius.—The Jews and Gentiles having become sensible of their weakness and misery, the Almighty, in his mercy, sent his only Son to enrich both the one and the other with his graces. The Gentiles were in the more deplorable case, and received the greatest abundance of grace; as may be seen from the great number of conversions wrought amongst them in so short a time in every part of the world. Calmet.—In the Greek it is παριστάντες, entered in by stealth, as it were, and for a time, till the preaching of the gospel. Menochius.

* V. 1. Pacem habeamus. In the common Greek copies we read ἔχομεν, habemus. But in other MSS. ἔχουμεν, as S. Chrys. must have read by his commentary, μηκέτι ἀπορρῶμεν, &c.

unto death: that as Christ is risen from the dead by the glory of the Father, ^aso we also may walk in newness of life.

5 For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, in like manner we shall be also of his resurrection.

6 Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin may be destroyed, and that we may serve sin no longer.

7 For he that is dead, is justified from sin.

8 Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall live also together with Christ:

9 Knowing that Christ rising again from the dead, dieth now no more, death shall no more have dominion over him.

10 For in that he died to sin, he died once: but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God.

11 So do you also reckon yourselves to be dead indeed to sin, but alive to God in Christ Jesus, our Lord.

12 Let not sin, therefore, reign in your mortal body, so as to obey the lusts thereof.

13 *Neither yield ye your members as instruments of iniquity unto sin: but present yourselves to God as those that are alive from the dead: and your members as instruments of justice unto God.

14 For sin shall not have dominion over you: for you are not under the law, but under grace.

^a Ephes. iv. 18. Heb. xii. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 1. and iv. 2.—^c Col. iii. 5.

† V. 12. In quo omnes peccaverunt, ἐφ' ὃ πάντες ἥμαρτον. If it agreed with sin, in the Greek it must have been ἐφ' ἡς.

† V. 15. Abundavit in plures; Greek ἐς τοὺς πολλοὺς, in multos; so that it is not to be taken comparatively for more, but absolutely for many, or for all; because all here are many, as in other places.

† V. 19. See S. Chrys. hom. x. p. 73. Ed. Savil. ἐς τὴν νίκην αὐτοῦ ἡχθήμεν . . . καὶ ὑπερβέβα ἀδικίας τοῦ μονογενούς, &c.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? He puts and rejects the same objection as before. C. iii. v. 7. And having set forth in the last chapter the grace and advantages by Christ's coming, he now exhorts them to avoid sinning, and live in the grace of God. Wi.

VER. 2. Dead to sin, &c. We are then dead to sin when we neither live in sin by serving it, nor sin lives in us by reigning: in this case, how can we still live in it by yielding to its desires? S. Aug. (c. vi. de spiritu et littera) thus explains this passage: when grace has caused us to die to sin; if we live again in it, we must be exceedingly ungrateful to grace. Estius.

VER. 3. &c. We . . . are baptized in his death. Greek, unto his death. The apostle here alludes to the manner of administering the sacrament of baptism which was then done by immersion or by plunging the person baptized under the water, in which he finds a resemblance of Christ's death and burial under ground, and of his resurrection to an immortal life. So must we after baptism rise to lead a quite different life: having been also, when we were baptized and made Christians, planted as branches ingrafted in Christ, let us endeavour to bring forth the fruits of a virtuous life. Wi.—Old man . . . body of sin. Our corrupt state, subject to sin and concupiscences, coming to us from Adam, is called our old man, as our state, reformed in and by Christ, is called the new man. And the vices and sins which then ruled in us, are named the body of sin. Ch.—The old and sinful man we must look upon as crucified with him, and the body of sin, or our sinful body, destroyed. We must look upon ourselves as dead to sin, and that we must sin no more, as Christ being once risen, dies no more. Wi.

VER. 7. He that is dead is justified from sin. Some translate, is freed from sin: this is true; but perhaps it is better to retain the word justified, which is observed to be a law-word used in courts of justice, where to be justified is to be acquitted, so that a man cannot be questioned again on that account; and so are sinners, when their sins are forgiven. Wi.

VER. 10. For in that he died to sin. But the sense must be for sins, or to destroy other men's sins, he himself being incapable of sinning. Wi.

VER. 12. Let not sin, therefore, reign, &c. He compares sin and justice to two kings, or generals, under one of which every man fights in this world. Sin is the tyrant, under which fight the wicked, and make their minds and their members the instruments, or arms of iniquity to sin, when they follow and yield to their disorderly lusts. But he exhorts them to live so as to make the powers of their souls, and their members, instruments or arms of justice to God, to fight under God, their lawful king, and under the banner of his justice. Wi.

VER. 14. You are not under the law of Moses, as some of you were before: but now you are all under grace, or of the law of grace, where you may find pardon

15 What then? Shall we sin, because we are not under the law, but under grace? God forbid.

16 *Know you not, that to whom you yield yourselves servants to obey his servants you are whom you obey, whether it be of sin, unto death, or of obedience, unto justice.

17 But thanks be to God, that you were the servants of sin, but have obeyed from the heart, unto that form of doctrine, into which you have been delivered.

18 Being then made free from sin, you are become the servants of justice.

19 I speak a human thing, because of the infirmity of your flesh: for as you have yielded your members to serve uncleanness, and iniquity unto iniquity: so now yield your members to serve justice unto sanctification.

20 For when you were the servants of sin, you were free from justice.

21 What fruit, therefore, had you then in those things, of which you are now ashamed? For the end of them is death.

22 But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, you have your fruit unto sanctification, and the end everlasting life.

23 For the wages of sin is death. But the grace of God, everlasting life, in Christ Jesus, our Lord.

CHAP. VII.

We are released by Christ from the law, and from the guilt of sin: though the inclination to it still tempt us.

* John viii. 34. 2 Pet. ii. 19.

for your sins. But take care not to abuse this grace of pardon offered you, nor multiply your sins, and defer your conversion, as some may do, by presuming, that after all, by the merits of Christ, you can find pardon. This, says Tertullian, is the greatest ingratitude, to continue wicked, because God is good. Reflect that you make yourselves servants of him whom you obey. By yielding to your passions, you become slaves to sin. If you keep your obedience to the law of Christ, and to his doctrine, the form of which you have delivered to you by the gospel, you are the happy servants of justice, and the servants of God, who is justice itself. Wi.

VER. 17. Thanks be to God, &c. He thanks God, not because they had been in sin, but because after having been so long under the slavery of sin, they had now been converted from their heart, and with their whole strength gave themselves to that form of doctrine to which they had been conducted by the gospel. He returns God thanks for their obedience to the faith, because this obedience of the human will is the work and gift of God, that so no one may glory in his sight. Ephes. ii. Estius.

VER. 19. I speak a human thing,† or I am proposing to you what is according to human strength and ability assisted by the grace of God, with a due regard to the weakness and infirmity of your flesh. The sense, according to S. Chrys. is this, that the apostle having told them they must be dead to sin, lead a new life, &c. he now encourages them to it, by telling them, that what is required of them is not above their human strength, as it is assisted by those graces which God offers them, and which they have received. Where we may observe that these words, I speak a human thing, are not the same, nor to be taken in the same sense, as cap. iii. 6. when he said, I speak after a human way, or I speak like men. Wi.—What I ask of you, Christian Romans, is, that you so earnestly labour for your sanctification as to improve daily in virtue, as formerly you plunged every day deeper and deeper into vice. Menochius.

VER. 20–22. You were free from justice; that is, says S. Chrys. you lived as no ways subject to justice, nor obedient to the law and precepts of God: an unhappy freedom, a miserable liberty, worse than the greatest slavery, the end of which is death, eternal death: of which sins with great reason you are now ashamed, when you are become the servants of God, and obedient to him, for which you will receive the fruit and reward of everlasting life in heaven. Wi.

VER. 23. For the wages, which the tyrant sin gives to his soldiers and slaves, is eternal death; but the wages, the pay, the reward, which God gives to those that fight under him, is everlasting life; which, though a reward of our past labours, as it is often called in the Scriptures, is still a grace,† or free gift; because if our works are good, or deserve a reward in heaven, it is God's grace that makes them deserve it. For, as S. Aug. says, when God crowns our works, he crowns his own gifts. Wi.

* V. 7. Is justified from sin, justificatus est a peccato; δικαιωμένος ἀπὸ τῆς ἁμαρτίας. Δικαίω est vocabulum forense. See Corn. a Lapide, Estius, &c.

† V. 19. Humanum dico, ἀνθρώπινον λέγω. c. iii. 6. Secundum hominem, κατ' ἀνθρώπον. See S. Chrys. hom. xii.

(1486)

KNOW you not, brethren, (for I speak to them that know the law) that the law hath dominion over a man as long as it liveth?

2 *For the woman that hath a husband, whilst her husband liveth, is bound to the law: but if her husband be dead, she is loosed from the law of her husband.

3 Wherefore, whilst her husband liveth, she shall be called an adulteress, if she be with another man: but if her husband be dead, she is free from the law of her husband: so that she is not an adulteress, if she be with another man.

4 Therefore, my brethren, you also are become dead to the law, by the body of Christ: that you may belong to another, who is risen again from the dead, that we may bring forth fruit to God.

5 For when we were in the flesh, the passions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members, to bring forth fruit unto death.

6 But now we are loosed from the law of death, wherein we were detained, so that we should serve in newness of spirit, and not in the oldness of the letter.

7 What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. But I did not know sin, but by the law: for I had not known concupiscence, if the law had not said: *Thou shalt not covet.

8 But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. For without the law, sin was dead.

b 1 Cor. vii. 39.—c Exod. xx. 17. Deut. v. 21.

† V. 23. Gratia Dei, vita æterna; that is, in construction, vita æterna, est gratia Dei.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. As long as it liveth; or, as long as he liveth. Ch.—This seems the literal construction, rather than as long as he, the man, liveth. For S. Paul here compares the law (which in the Greek is in the masculine gender) to a husband, whom a wife cannot quit, nor be married to another, as long as the husband liveth, without being an adulteress: but if the husband be dead, (as the law of Moses is now dead, and no longer obligatory after the publishing of the new law of Christ) the people that were Jews, and under the Jewish law, are now free from that former husband, to wit, the written law of Moses. Nay, this people also are become dead to the law, (v. 4.) because the law itself is dead by the body of Christ, or, as in the Greek, by reason of the body of Christ offered and sacrificed for you, and for all on the cross: so that now you must look upon yourselves as spiritually married to him: which agrees with what follows, that you may belong to another, (in the Greek, to another husband) to Christ, who is risen from the dead, and is now the spouse of your souls. Wi.

VER. 5. For when we were in the flesh; i. e. lived according to the flesh, the passions of sins, which were by the law: he does not say, as S. Chrys. observes, that they were caused by the law, but only were by it, meaning that they were occasioned by the knowledge of the law, but properly caused by ourselves, and our corrupt inclinations, that were wrought in our members, rather than did work. Wi.

VER. 6. But now we are loosed from the law of death, by which many understand from the law of Moses; so called, because it could not of itself give the life of grace, and occasioned death. Others expound these words, free from the law of death, that is, from sins, which before they had been guilty of, and which made them deserve eternal death. Wi.

VER. 7. Is the law (of Moses) sin? God forbid. The apostle declares, that the law of itself was far from being sinful; on the contrary, that it was good, spiritual, holy: but, saith he, I should not know concupiscence to be sinful, unless the law said: thou shalt not covet: by which it is made known to every one, that sins of thought consented to, and evil desires, are sins. Wi.

VER. 8. Sin, taking occasion. Sin, or concupiscence, which is called sin, because it is from sin, and leads to sin, which was asleep before, was awakened by the prohibition; the law not being the cause thereof, nor properly giving occasion to it: but occasion being taken by our corrupt nature to resist the commandment laid upon us. Ch.—Sin. The apostle here calls concupiscence by the name of sin; because it is the consequence and punishment of it, and drags us along to sin. This takes occasion from the precept of the law to induce us to transgress it; for we are naturally inclined to do what is forbidden. —Nititur in vetitum—which is the offspring of a disorderly love of liberty and independence. Without the law sin was dead, because concupiscence had nothing to rouse and trouble it. It was like a torrent which rolled noisily without resistance in its channel, but as soon as the law came and put a stop 9 And I lived some time without the law. But when the commandment came, sin revived.

10 And I died: and the commandment, that was ordained to life, the same was found to be unto death to me.

11 For sin, taking occasion by the commandment, seduced me, and by it killed me.

12 ^a Wherefore the law indeed is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good.

13 Was that then which is good, made death to me? God forbid. But sin, that it may appear sin, by that which is good, wrought death in me: that sin, by the commandment, might become sinful above measure.

14 For we know that the law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin.

15 For that which I work, I understand not. For I do not that good which I will, but the evil which I hate, that I do.

^a 1 Tim. i. 8.

stage, it began to spread itself far and wide, and commit the strangest ravages. Or it may be explained thus: without the law sin was dead; not being known to the world, and not imputed to us as a transgression. He speaks here of the transgressions of the written law, not of the law of nature, of which each one has a sufficient knowledge to render him inexcusable, whenever he transgresses it. Calmet.—Without the law sin was dead; that is, many sins were so little known, that before the written law they seemed no sins; not but that, at all times, reason and conscience showed many things to be sinful and ill done, so that whosoever acted against these lights could not be excused. See what S. Paul says of the heathen philosophers, c. i. Wi.

VER. 9. &c. I lived some time without the law; i. e. without the knowledge of the law. This some understand of S. Paul in the time of his childhood, before he came to the knowledge of what was forbidden by any law. But the exposition, which agrees with the rest of this chapter, is this; that S. Paul, though he seems to speak of himself, yet represents the condition of any person that lived before the written law was given: but when the commandment came, after that the written law was given, and its precepts came to my knowledge, then sin revived, by giving me a perfect knowledge; and by transgressing those precepts, I became more guilty and without excuse.—I died: i. e. became guilty by transgression of the known law, and guilty of eternal death; and the commandments or precepts, which were unto life, which were good in themselves, and designed to direct me what I was to do, and what I was to avoid in order to obtain eternal life, were found to be unto death to me, but by my own fault; and occasionally only, from the commandments of the law and the knowledge of them, when with full knowledge I transgressed them. Thus I was seduced by sin, which with it brought death, though the law and the commandment (v. 12) were in themselves holy, and just, and good. They could not but be good, as S. Chrys. says, their author being the true God, and not any evil principle or cause, that was the author of evils, as the impious Manicheans pretended. We might as well, says S. Chrys. find fault with the tree of life and the forbidden fruit in Paradise, which was not the cause, but only the occasion of our misery, when Adam eat of it. It cannot then be said, that that which was good, (to wit, the law) was made death to me, or the cause of my death; but sin, and my unresisted sinful inclinations, that it might appear sin, or that it might evidently appear how great an evil sin is, by that which is good, (i. e. by the transgression of the law which is good) wrought and brought death to me, that by the occasion of the precepts given and known, sin might become sinful above measure. He speaks of sin as it were of a certain person; and the sense is, that sin, which was in my corrupt nature, might become sinful above measure, when it led me into all manner of disorders and excess, which I yielded to. Wi.

VER. 13. That it may appear sin, or that sin may appear; viz. to be the monster it is, which is even capable to take occasion from that which is good to work death. Ch.

VER. 14. I am carnal, sold under sin, a slave subject to sinful inclinations, which are only properly sins when they are consented to by our free-will. There has been a great dispute both among the ancient and later interpreters, whether S. Paul from this verse to the end of the chapter speaks of a person remaining in sin, either under the law of nature or of the written law, (which was once the opinion of S. Aug.) or whether he speaks of a person regenerated by baptism, and in the state of grace in the new law, and even of himself when he was a faithful servant of God. This is the opinion of S. Aug. in many of his later writings against the Pelagians, for which he also cites S. Hilary, S. Greg. Naz. and S. Amb. It is also the opinion of S. Jerom, (Ep. ad Eustochium de custod. Virg.) of S. Greg. the great, of Bede, and the more approved opinion, according to which the apostle here by sin does not understand that which is properly speaking a sin, or sinful, but only speaks of sin improperly such, that is of a corrupt inclination, of a rebellion of nature corrupted by original sin, of a strife betwixt the spirit and the flesh, which remains for a trial in the most virtuous persons: of which see again S. Paul, Gal. v. 17. We may take notice that the apostle before spoke of what he was and what he had been, but now speaks in the present time of what he is, and what he doth. Wi.—The law

16 If, then, I do that which I will not, I consent to the law, that it is good.

17 Now, then, it is no more I that do it: but sin that dwelleth in me.

18 For I know that there dwelleth not in me, that is to say, in my flesh, that which is good. For to will, is present with me; but to accomplish that which is good, I find not.

19 For the good which I will, I do not: but the evil which I will not, that I do.

20 Now if I do that which I will not, it is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me.

21 I find then a law, that when I have a will to do good, evil is present with me.

22 For I am delighted with the law of God, ^b according to the inward man:

23 But I see another law in my members, fighting against the law of my mind, and captivating me in the law of sin, that is in my members.

^b 1 Pet. iii. 4.

is styled spiritual: 1st, because it prescribes what appertains to the spirit, and to the spiritual man: i. e. to follow virtue and shun vice: 2nd, because it directs man to the worship of God, which is spirit and truth: 3rd, because it cannot be fulfilled by spiritual men, unless by spirit and grace: 4th, because it directs the spirit of man and disposes him properly towards God, towards his neighbour, and towards himself: and lastly, because the law spiritually received and understood, leads and prepares men for the evangelical law, which is the law of grace and spirit. Menochius.

VER. 15. For that which I work, I understand not. To know, or understand is often, in the style of the Scriptures, the same as to approve or love: so the sense here is: I approve not what I do, that is, what happens to me in my sensitive part, in my imagination, or in the members of my body, which indeed the just man rather suffers than does; and this is the sense, by what immediately follows, the evil which I hate, that I do, i. e. that I suffer, being against my will; and I do that which I would not. Wi.—I do not that good which I will, &c. The apostle here describes the disorderly motions of passion and concupiscence; which oftentimes in us get the start of reason, and by means of which even good men suffer in the inferior appetite what their will abhors: and are much hindered in the accomplishment of the desires of their spirit and mind. But these evil motions, (though they are called the law of sin, because they come from original sin, and violently tempt and incline to sin) as long as the will does not consent to them, are not sins, because they are not voluntary. Ch.

VER. 17–18. Now then it is no more I that do it: To will good is present with me. These expressions all shew that he speaks of temptations that affect the senses only, the imagination, or the members of the body, but to which the mind and the will give no consent, but retain an aversion to them; and so long they never can be truly and properly sins, which must be with full deliberation and consent. Wi.—The apostle here means to say, that he knew by experience that evil and not good dwelt within him, according to the flesh. He does not contradict this passage when he says elsewhere, that our members are the temples of the Holy Ghost: (1 Cor. iii. 6. &c.) for good cannot be found in our flesh, inasmuch as it is corrupted by sin; whence our Saviour says, "What is born of the flesh, is flesh." John iii. But good is in our body, when our members under the influence of the soul, renewed by the Holy Ghost residing in it, are employed in good works. The meaning of this passage is, that although now healed and renewed by grace, he could have a perfect desire of doing good; yet still on account of the evil of concupiscence dwelling in his flesh, he found not himself able to perform all the good he wished, because concupiscence was always urging him on to evil against his will. Estius.

VER. 22. I am delighted with the law of God according to the inward man. As long as the inward man, or man's interior, is right, all is right.—I perceive another law in my members, fighting, and different from the law of my mind: this is true in any man just striving against and resisting temptations, but not of the sinner, whose mind also will consent to them. A man can never lose God's favour and grace, unless his mind and interior consent.—These hold me as it were captive in the law of sin, or sinful inclinations, but which are in the members only. I cry out, who shall deliver me from the body of this death, from this mortal body with its sinful lusts, which if consented to would bring death to the soul! Nothing but the grace of Jesus Christ can secure me from such temptations, and by freeing me from this body, can make me perfectly happy; which cannot be hoped for in this life. But I have still this greatest of consolations, that I myself, with my mind and will, still serve God, and remain firm in obedience to his laws; but with the flesh, or in the flesh, I am subject to the law of sin, i. e. of sinful inclinations.—We must avoid here two heretical errors; that of those late pretended reformers, who denying man's free will, hold the commandments of God impossible, even to a just man. See also the first heretical proposition of Jansenius. Next we must detest the late abominable error of those called Quietists, who blushed not to say that a man might yield and abandon himself to the most shameful disorders of the flesh, pretending that it was not they themselves, but sin and the devil that caused these abominations in their flesh. S. Aug. foresaw this frivolous excuse: (l. i. de nup. and Concup. c. xxviii)

24 Unhappy man that I am: who shall deliver me from the body of this death?

25 The grace of God, by Jesus Christ, our Lord. Therefore, I myself, with the mind, serve the law of God: but, with the flesh, the law of sin.

CHAP. VIII.

There is no condemnation to them, who being justified by Christ, walk not according to the flesh, but according to the spirit. Their strong hope, and love of God.

THERE is, therefore, now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus, who walk not according to the flesh.

2 For the law of the spirit of life, in Christ Jesus, hath freed me from the law of sin, and of death.

3 *For what the law could not do, in that it was weak, through the flesh: God sending his own Son, in the likeness of sinful flesh, even of sin, condemned sin in the flesh,

4 That the justification of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not according to the flesh, but according to the spirit.

5 For they who are according to the flesh, relish the things that are of the flesh: but they who are according to the spirit, mind the things which are of the spirit.

6 For the wisdom of the flesh is death: but the wisdom of the spirit is life and peace.

7 Because the wisdom of the flesh is an enemy to God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither can it be.

8 And they who are in the flesh, cannot please God.

* Acts xv. 10. Heb. ix. 15.—b Acts iii. 15. and iv. 18. and v. 30. and xiii. 38.

*That man (saith he) is in a grievous mistake, who, consenting to the concupiscence of the flesh, and to do what the flesh prompts him to, thinks he can still say: It is not I that do that," &c. Wi.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Notwithstanding this law of sin opposing the law of the spirit, and endeavouring to captivate us to sin, we can, by the succour of the grace of Jesus Christ, preserve ourselves from sin and damnation, by resisting sin, and attaching ourselves strongly to Jesus Christ by faith and charity. Concupiscence is not sin. And they who have received a spiritual birth in Jesus Christ by baptism, and have remained faithful to the grace of their justification, who walk not according to the flesh, but according to the spirit, shall receive a recompense proportionate to their combats and labours. Calmet.

VER. 2. The law of the spirit of life, in Christ Jesus. That is, the new law, by which the Holy Ghost, or the spirit of life is given, hath delivered me from the law of sin and of death: that is, from the slavery of sin, that causeth death: though some think that the law of Moses may be here called the law of death, and of sin, because it occasionally brought death upon such as transgressed the known law. Wi.

VER. 3. For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, not in sinful flesh, (because the Son of God could not sin) hath now done; even of sin hath condemned sin in the flesh. That is, in or by his flesh, which was offered on the cross, hath condemned the tyrant sin, as guilty of so many sins, and hath destroyed his tyranny, where the apostle speaks of sin, as it were of a certain person or tyrant. Wi.

VER. 4. That the justification of the law. That is, that was aimed at, but never attained to, by the written law, might now be fulfilled in us; that is, that we, by the grace of Christ, may be enabled to fulfil and comply with the law, and its moral precepts, by walking according to the spirit of Christ. Wi.

VER. 5. &c. For they who are according to the flesh. That is, who live according to the false, vain, and deceitful maxims and customs of carnal men, which he also calls the prudence of the flesh: and this prudence he calls death, as leading men to eternal death. Such carnal men relish nothing else but such pleasures. But they who are and live according to the spirit, mind the things which are of the spirit, fix their hearts on the things that belong to God, and his service; and this wisdom of the spirit, in which they experience much greater pleasure, leads them to eternal life, and to eternal peace in the enjoyment of God. The false wisdom of the flesh is an enemy to God, cannot be subject to the law of God, because the maxims of the flesh, and of the world, are so opposite to those of the gospel, and to the doctrine of Christ. Wi.—They who are subject to the flesh, by having their affections fixed on the things of the flesh, that is, carnal men, whilst they are such, cannot please God: for this prudence of the flesh makes them the enemies of God. Estius.—If Christ, or the spirit of Christ, which he also (ver. 9.) calls the spirit of God, as being one and the same, dwell in you, and direct you, the body indeed is dead because of sin; that is, is mortal, and liable to death, the consequence of Adam's sin; but the spirit and the soul liveth by the life of grace, by reason of justification. that is, because she hath been justified and sanc-

9 But you are not in the flesh, but in the spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his.

10 And if Christ be in you, the body, indeed, is dead, because of sin, but the spirit liveth, because of justification.

11 *And if the Spirit of him, who raised up Jesus from the dead, dwell in you: he that raised up Jesus Christ from the dead, shall quicken also your mortal bodies, because of his spirit dwelling in you.

12 Therefore, brethren, we are debtors, not to the flesh, to live according to the flesh.

13 For if you live according to the flesh, you shall die: but if by the spirit you mortify the deeds of the flesh, you shall live.

14 For whosoever are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.

15 *For you have not received the spirit of bondage again in fear: but you have received the spirit of adoption of sons, whereby we cry: Abba, (Father.)

16 For the Spirit himself giveth testimony to our spirit, that we are the sons of God.

17 And if sons, heirs also: heirs indeed of God, and joint-heirs with Christ: yet so if we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified with him.

18 For I reckon, that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory to come, that shall be revealed in us.

19 For the expectation of the creature waiteth for the revelation of the sons of God.

Supra iv. 24. 1 Cor. vi. 14.—2 Tim. i. 7.—Gal. iv. 5.

tified by the merits of Christ. And the spirit of God, who raised Jesus to life, will also raise all who remain sanctified by the grace of Christ to a happy resurrection. Wi.

VER. 14. &c. They are of the sons of God, by this new grace of adoption, by which also they call God, Abba; that is to say, Father, whereas under the former law of Moses, God rather governed his people by fear; they were his servants, we are his sons; and if sons, also the heirs of God, with the promise of an eternal inheritance in his kingdom, provided we suffer for Christ's sake, as he suffered for us. And surely the short sufferings in this world have no proportion, nor can be put in balance with the future endless glory, which is promised and prepared for us in heaven. Wi.—Abba is a Syriac word, which signifies my father. This is properly the word of free and noble children; for amongst the Hebrews, the children of slaves were not allowed to call their fathers Abba, nor their mothers Imma. This kind of expression was very rarely used under the old law. The Hebrews called the Almighty their Lord, their God, their Salvation, their King, their Protector, their Glory, &c. but seldom their father, scarcely ever, except in the case of Solomon, who was a particular figure of the Messiah, the true Son of God. On this account God said to him: "He shall call me Father and God; and I will be to him a Father, and will treat him as my first-born." But it is the property of the Christian to call the Almighty his Father with confidence indeed, yet tempered with a filial awe; remembering at the same time that he is his judge. Calmet.—Mat. Polus says that not any one of the just dared to call God, my Father, before the coming of Christ, as this favour was reserved for the time of the gospel. In hunc locum. A.—S. Chrys.* takes notice, that God was also called the Father of the Israelites, and they his children, in the Old Testament, when God rather governed his people by fear of punishments, and promises of temporal blessings, but not in that particular manner as in the new law. Wi.—The Spirit himself, &c. By the inward motions of divine love, and the peace of conscience, which the children of God experience, they have a kind of testimony of God's favour; by which they are much strengthened in the hope of their justification and salvation; but yet not so as to pretend to an absolute assurance which is not usually granted in this mortal life: during which we are taught to work out our salvation with fear and trembling. Phil. ii. 12. And that he who thinketh himself to stand, must take heed lest he fall. 1 Cor. x. 12. See also Rom. xi. 20 21, 22. Ch.—He hath given to us, says S. John, (c. i. 12), the power, or dignity, of being the sons of God. Christ taught us to pray, and to begin our prayers with our Father, &c. Matt. vi. 9. Wi.

VER. 19. The expectation of the creature. He speaks of the corporal creation, made for the use and service of man; and, by occasion of his sin made subject to vanity, that is, to a perpetual instability, tending to corruption and other defects; so that by a figure of speech, it is here said to groan and be in labour, and to long for its deliverance, which is then to come, when sin shall reign no more; and God shall raise the bodies, and unite them to their souls, never more to separate, and to be in everlasting happiness in heaven. Ch.—Waiteth for the revelation of the sons of God. That is, for the time after this life, when it shall 20 For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him, that made it subject in hope :

21 Because the creature also itself shall be delivered from the servitude of corruption, into the liberty of the glory of the children of God.

22 For we know that every creature groaneth, and is in labour even till now.

23 And not only it, but ourselves also, who have the first-fruits of the spirit, even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption of the sons of God, the redemption of our body.

24 For we are saved by hope. But hope that is seen, is not hope : For what a man seeth, why doth he hope for ?

25 But if we hope for that which we see not : we wait for it with patience.

26 Likewise the spirit also helpeth our infirmity : for we know not what we should pray for as we ought : but the Spirit himself asketh for us with unspeakable groanings.

27 And he that searcheth the hearts, knoweth what the Spirit desireth : because he asketh for the saints according to God.

28 And we know that to them that love God, all things work together unto good, to such as according to his purpose are called to be saints.

* Gen. xxii. 12.

be made manifest that they are the sons of God, and heirs of the kingdom of his glory. Several interpreters understand all creatures whatsoever, even irrational and inanimate creatures of this world, which are represented as if they had a knowledge and sense of a more happy condition, of a new unchangeable state of perfection, which they are to receive at the end of the world. See 2 Pet. i. 13. Apoc. xxi. 1. Now every insensible creature is figuratively brought in groaning like a woman in labour, waiting, and wishing for that new and happy state ; but in the mean time unwillingly made subject to vanity, i. e. to these changeable imperfections of generations and corruptions, which then they shall be delivered from. Wi.—The creature, &c. The creatures expect with impatience, and hope with confidence, to see a happy change in their condition ; they flatter themselves that they will be delivered from the captivity of sin, to which man has reduced them, and enter into the liberty of the glory of the sons of God. Not that the inanimate creation will really participate the happiness and glory of the elect ; although in some sense they may be said to have part in it, since they will enter into a pure, incorruptible and perfect state to the end of ages. They will no longer be subject to those changes and vicissitudes which sin has brought upon them ; nor will sinful man any longer abuse their beauty and goodness in offending the Creator of all. S. Ambrose and S. Jeron teach that the sun, moon, and stars will be then much more brilliant and beautiful than at present, no longer subject to those changes they at present suffer. Philo and Tertullian teach that the beasts of prey will then lay aside their ferocity, and venomous serpents their poisonous qualities. Calmet.—Others, by the creature or creatures, understand men only, and Christians, who groan under miseries and temptations in this mortal life, amidst the vanities of this world, under the slavery of corruption ; who having already (v. 23.) received the first-fruits of the Spirit,† the grace of God in baptism, have been made the children of God, and now, with expectation and great earnestness, wait and long for a more perfect adoption of the sons of God : for the redemption of their bodies, when the bodies, as well as the souls of the elect, shall rise to an immortal life, and complete happiness in heaven. Wi.

VER. 24, &c. For we are saved by hope, as it is the will of God we should be, waiting and hoping with patience for the things which we have not seen, which neither the eye hath seen, nor the ear hath heard, &c. 1 Cor. ii. 9.—And the spirit also helpeth our infirmity . . . asketh for us with unspeakable groanings.§ If we understand this according to the common exposition, of the divine spirit of the Holy Ghost, the sense is, says S. Aug. that the Holy Ghost maketh us ask : but we may understand the spirit of God and his grace, diffused in our souls, and in particular that gift of the Holy Ghost, called the spirit of prayer, given to the new Christians, which taught them what to ask, and how to pray. See S. Chrys. Wi.

VER. 28. To them that love God, all things work together unto good. All trials, temptations, afflictions, must be taken as coming from the hand of God, who ordains or permits them for the greater good of his elect.—For the good of those, who, according to his purpose, are called the saints. Lit. according to purpose : but it seems certain that to translate his purpose, is only to give the literal sense, if we compare this place with other texts, both in the Greek and Latin, where the same words signify according to God's good will, or his eternal decree, and not according to the purpose, or will of men, as some expound it. Wi.

VER. 29. For whom he foreknew, he also predestinated to be made conformable to the image of his Son, in suffering with Christ, in following his doctrine, in imitating his life. This foreknowledge of God, according to S. Augustin,¶ is not 29 For whom he foreknew, he also predestinated to be made conformable to the image of his Son : that he might be the first-born amongst many brethren.

30 And whom he predestinated, them he also called : and whom he called, them he also justified : and whom he justified, them he also glorified.

31 What shall we then say to these things ? If God be for us, who is against us ?

32 *He that spared not even his own Son, but delivered him up for us all : how hath he not also, with him, given us all things ?

33 Who shall lay any thing to the charge of the elect of God ? God who justifieth, 34 Who is he that shall condemn ? Christ Jesus who died, yea, who rose also again, who is at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us.

35 Who then shall separate us from the love of Christ ? shall tribulation ? or distress ? or famine ? or nakedness ? or danger ? or persecution ? or the sword ?

36 (As it is written : ^b For thy sake we are put to death, all the day long : we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter.)

37 But in all these things we overcome, because of him that hath loved us.

38 For I am sure that neither death, nor life, nor Angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor might, merely a foreseeing of what men will do by the assistance and graces of God's ordinary providence, much less a foreseeing of what they will do by their own natural strength, as the Pelagian heretics pretended : but is a foreknowledge including an act of the divine will, and of his love towards his elect servants ; (as to know in the Scriptures, when applied to God, is many times the same as to approve and love) God therefore hath foreseen or predestinated, or decreed that these elect, by the help of his special graces, and by the co-operation of their free-will, should be conformable to the image of his Son, that so his Son, even as man, might be the first-born, the chief, and the head of all that shall be saved. Wi.—God hath preordained that all his elect shall be conformable to the image of his Son. We must not here offer to dive into the secrets of God's eternal election : only firmly believe that all our good, in time and eternity, flows originally from God's free goodness ; and all our evil from man's free will. Ch.

^b Ps. xliii. 23.

VER. 30. And whom he predestinated, them he also called to the true faith and to his service, without any deserts in them, nay, when all mankind were guilty of eternal death, by original sin.—And whom he called, them he also justified, by faith, by hope, by a love of him, and a true penance.—And whom he justified, them he also glorified. That is, hath decreed to glorify. Yet not all who have been justified, but only his elect, who are under his special protection, and to whom he grants a perseverance in his grace to the end : so that the call to faith, their sanctification, their final perseverance, and glorification in heaven, are the effects of their free election and predestination. Wi.

VER. 31. What shall we then say to these things ? That is, though we live amidst temptations and afflictions in this life, we need not fear as long as we are faithful in the service of God, under his protection.—If God be for us, who is against us, or who shall hinder us from being saved. Wi.

VER. 32. He that spared not, &c. This is another argument for us to hope in the goodness of God, who hath so loved the world, that he hath delivered, and given his true and only Son for us all, to redeem all and every one, and has by his death obtained helps and graces by which we may all be saved.—How hath he not also, with him, given us all things ? That is, since he has given for us his only Son, how can we doubt, but that, with him, he will give us all gifts and graces ? He hath given us, says S. Chrys. his Son himself, and how can we doubt of other blessings ? Wi.

VER. 33–34. Who shall lay any thing to the charge of the elect of God ? God who justifieth. Others read without an interrogation, it is God who justified us : the sense will scarce be different ; for it is the same as to say, we need not fear that God will accuse us, since by his mercy he hath been pleased to die, and to rise again from death for us. Wi.

VER. 35. &c. Who then, or what shall separate us from the love of Christ ? Neither devils, nor men, nor any thing in nature, unless it be by our own fault, and unless we wilfully and sinfully leave God.—I am sure. In the Greek, I am  fully persuaded*, that nothing can separate us, &c. In fine, another argument to prove we ought to have a firm hope in God, is that Christ Jesus, who sits at the right hand of God, also intercedeth for us Christ, as man, intercedeth, prayeth for us, is our advocate and chief mediator. See Heb. vii. Christ is truly said to pray for us in heaven, though it is not the custom of the Church to call upon him in this manner, "Christ pray for us," because being God, as well as man, he has all things under his command. Wi.

VER. 39. So powerful and efficacious, so certain and unchangeable is the love 39 Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus, our Lord.

CHAP. IX.

The apostle's concern for the Jews. God's election is free, and not confined to their nation.

I SPEAK the truth in Christ, I lie not, my conscience bearing me witness in the Holy Ghost:

2 That I have great sadness, and continual sorrow in my heart.

3 ^aFor I wished myself to be an anathema from Christ, for my brethren, who are my kinsmen according to the flesh,

4 Who are Israelites, to whom belongeth the adoption of sons, and the glory, and the covenant, and the giving of the law, and the worship, and the promises:

^a Acts ix. 2. 1 Cor. xv. 9.—^b Gen. xxi. 12.

of God, which conducts us to the kingdom of bliss, that no creature can separate us from it, either by making us cease to love him, or by frustrating our love of his effect, viz. life everlasting. Estius.

^a V. 15. Abba (Pater) S. Chrys. hom. xiv. p. 115. οὐδὲ εὐχόμενος ὄντως, &c.

† V. 19. Expectatio creaturæ, ἡ γὰρ ἀποκατάστασις. S. Chrys. hom. xiv. p. 119. ἀποκατάστασις γὰρ ἡ σφόδρα προσδοκία ἑστί, intenta et sollicita expectatio. See Mr. Legh, Crit. Sac.

‡ V. 23. Redemptionem corporis, i. e. complete happiness, says S. Chrys. p. 119. τὸν σώματος τὴν ἀνταρρασίαν ἔδωκεν.

§ V. 26. Postulat pro nobis, i. e. says S. Aug. interpellare nos facit... nobisque interpellandi et gemendi inspirat affectum.

|| V. 28. Secundum propositum vocati sunt sancti, τοὶ κατὰ ἐπίθετον. See Rom. ix. 11. Ephes. iii. 11. where in the Latin is secundum præfinitionem, and 2 Tim. 1. 9. non secundum opera nostra, sed secundum propositum suum et gratiam, where he speaks of God σὺς αὐτοὺς ἡμᾶς... κατὰ ἰδίαν πρόθεσιν.

¶ V. 29. S. Aug. de dono persever. c. xviii. prædestinatione Deus ea præselevis, quæ fuerat ipse facturus. And again, c. xiv. Prædestinationis est præscientia et præparatio beneficiorum, quibus certissime liberantur quicunque liberantur. See Bellar. and Petau, as to S. Aug.'s opinion. But I never in these short notes touch upon any thing that regards the opinions in Catholic schools; my design being no more than a literal exposition of the text.

 V. 38. Certus sum, πέποιθα, persuasus sum. No one has an absolute certainty that he shall be saved.

CHAP. IX. VER 3. I wished myself to be an anathema from Christ. The word anathema, according to its derivation, signifies a thing separated or laid part for some particular use. Hence it was put to signify things given and consecrated to God, which therefore used to be presented and hung up in temples. The word also was applied to signify things whose destruction was resolved upon, that is, men or things separated for destruction, as sometimes, men devoted to be sacrificed to the gods to appease their anger. This signification was according to the Hebrew word cherem, and the Syriac word horma, as Numb. xxi. 3. He called the name of that place Horma, that is, anathema; because it was to be entirely destroyed. See 1 Mac. v. Hence anathema was also used for a curse, and to anathematize, to curse. See Acts xxiii. 14. The sense of this place is differently expounded. Tolet, by the word I wished, or I did wish, thinks that S. Paul might speak of the time before his conversion, when out of a false zeal, he wished to be separated from Christ, and from all Christians; and that he brings this to shew his brethren how zealous he had been for their religion. But this wish of S. Paul is generally expounded as proceeding from the great love and charity he had, when he was an apostle, for the conversion and salvation of his brethren, the Jews, who mostly remained obstinate and incredulous; and some will have it to be no more than a hyperbolical expression of his great love and affection for them. Others, with S. Jerom, ep. ad Algasian, tom iv. p. 203. Ed. Ben. think that by this way of speaking, S. Paul signifies himself willing to be sacrificed, by undergoing any death for their conversion: but S. Chrys. (hom. xvi.) thinks this far short of the sublime charity of S. Paul; for by such a death, says he, he would not be separated from Christ, but would be a great gainer by it; since by that means he would soon be free from all the troubles and sufferings of a miserable life, and blessed with the company and enjoyment of Christ in the kingdom of his glory. He, and many others, think that S. Paul was so troubled and grieved to the heart at the obstinacy of the unbelieving Jews, at their blasphemies against Christ, and their eternal perdition, that an extraordinary charity and zeal for God's honour, and their salvation, made him wish even to endure a separation from Christ, and from the glory prepared for him in heaven, though not from the love, or from the grace of Christ. If this, says S. Chrys. seems incredible to us, it is because we are far from such heroic dispositions of the love of God, and of our neighbours. Wi.—The apostle's concern and love for his countrymen, the Jews, was so great, that he was willing even to suffer an anathema, or curse, for their sake; or any evil that could come upon him, without his offending God. Ch.

VER. 4-5. To whom belongeth the adoption of children. Lit. whose is the adoption. He mentions the favours which God had done to his people, the Jews. As, 1. That God had adopted them for his elect people. 2. That he had glorified them with so many miracles. 3. That he had made a particular covenant and 5 Whose are the fathers, and of whom is Christ according to the flesh, who is over all things, God blessed for ever. Amen.

6 Not as though the word of God hath failed. For all are not Israelites that are of Israel:

7 Neither are all they, who are the seed of Abraham, children: ^abut in Isaac shall thy seed be called.

8 That is to say, not they who are the children of the flesh, are the children of God: but they ^athat are the children of the promise, are counted for the seed.

9 For this is the word of the promise: ^aAccording to this time will I come: and Sara shall have a son.

10 And not only she: ^abut when Rebecca also had conceived at once, by Isaac, our father.

11 For when the children were not yet born, nor had alliance with them. 4. Given them a written law. 5. Prescribed the manner they should worship him. 6. Promises of divers blessings. 7. Who are from the Fathers. Lit. whose are the Fathers; i. e. who descended from the patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, &c. 8. Of whose race, i. e. of the family of David, Jesus Christ, as man, was born.—Who is over all things God, & blessed for ever. Amen. Though the apostles did not often, in express words, call Jesus Christ the God, lest the heathens, when they were not sufficiently instructed, should imagine that there were many gods, (as divers of the fathers take notice) yet here, and in several places, they clearly delivered the divinity of our Saviour, Christ. The Socinians might here observe, that the apostle calls him the God blessed for ever, and with the Greek article. Wi.

^a Gal. iv. 28.—^a Gen. xviii. 10.—^a Gen. xxv. 24.

VER. 6-7. Not as though the word of God hath failed in his promises made to Abraham, and the patriarchs. The Jews pretended that the promises were made to them only, and to those that were of their race, and that the Gentiles were not to partake of them. S. Paul shews them their mistake, by telling them who are to be esteemed the true children of Abraham, and of the patriarchs, according to the promises which God made, and who are not. Wi.—All are not Israelites, &c. Not all, who are the carnal seed of Israel, are true Israelites in God's account: who, as by his free grace he heretofore preferred Isaac before Ismael, and Jacob before Esau, so he could, and did by the like free grace, election, and mercy, raise up spiritual children by faith to Abraham and Israel, from among the Gentiles, and prefer them before the carnal Jews. Ch.—Neither are all they, who are of the seed of Abraham, his true spiritual children, to whom these promises were made: nor are all they who are descended from Isaac the children of these promises nor are all they true Israelites, to whom these blessings were promised, although they are descended from Israel; but only they who are the children of the patriarchs by faith in Jesus, the Messiah, in whom God promised that he would bless all nations. Wi.

VER. 9. To prove that the children of Abraham are the children of the promise, he adduces the passage of Scripture: "I will come in a year's time, and Sara shall have a son." Gen. xviii. This promised child was Isaac, the true son of the promise of God, and of the faith of Abraham; and not the son of the flesh, for Ismael was this as well as Isaac; but he was granted to the prayers of Abraham, a child of the grace and mercy of God. All the faithful, therefore, of whatever race or nation they may be, are in this sense the children of Abraham, by being gratuitously chosen by God, and by the fidelity in which they are imitators of Abraham. Calmet.

VER. 10, &c. And not only she (Sara) brought forth Isaac, who was the only child of Abraham, to whom the promises descended, though he was the father of Ismael, by Agar, and of all the Ismaelites. And lest the Jews should say that the Ismaelites, though descended from Abraham, according to the flesh, were not to be reputed as his children for another reason, because they came of Agar, who was only the handmaid of Sara; he brings them another example to which they could make no such reply; to wit, that Rebecca also at once had two sons of Isaac, Esau and Jacob; where, though Esau was the first-born, these promises were not reputed as made to him, and his descendants, the Idumeans, who were equally the descendants of Isaac, yet not the favourite people, nor the children of God, as the Jews saw very well. Wi.—Not yet born. By this example of these twins, and the preference of the younger to the elder, the drift of the apostle is, to shew that God, in his election, mercy, and grace, is not tied to any particular nation, as the Jews imagined, nor to any prerogative of birth, or any foregoing merits. For as, antecedently, to his grace, he sees no merit in any, but finds all involved in sin, in the common mass of condemnation; and all children of wrath; there is no one whom he might not justly leave in that mass; so that whosoever he delivers from it, he delivers in his mercy: and whosoever he leaves in it, he leaves in his justice. As when, of two equally criminal, the king is pleased out of pure mercy to pardon one, whilst he suffers justice to take place in the execution of the other. Ch.—Nor had done any good or evil. God was pleased to prefer, and promise his blessings to the younger of them, Jacob, declaring that the elder shall serve the younger; that is, that the seed of the elder should be subject to that of the younger, as it happened afterwards to the Idumeans. And the prophet, Malachi, said of them, I have loved Jacob, but hated Esau, and turned his mountains into a desert, &c.—That the purpose of God, his will, and his decree, (see the foregoing ch. v. 28.) might stand according to election, might be, not according to any works they had done, or that he foresaw they would do, but merely according to his mercy. And though the preference which God gave to Jacob was dore any good or evil, (that the purpose of God according to election might stand)

12 Not of works, but of him that calleth, it was said to her:

13 *That the elder shall serve the younger, as it is written: Jacob I have loved, but Esau I have hated.

14 What shall we say then? Is there injustice with God? God forbid.

15 For he saith to Moses: ^bI will have mercy on whom I will have mercy: and I will shew mercy to whom I will shew mercy.

16 So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy.

17 For the Scripture saith to Pharao: ^cTo this purpose have I raised thee up, that I may shew my power in thee: and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth.

18 Therefore he hath mercy on whom he will, and whom he will he hardeneth.

19 Thou wilt say, therefore, to me: Why doth he then find fault? For who resisteth his will?

* Gen. xxv. 28. Mal. i. 2.—^b Exod. xxxiii. 19.—^c Exod. ix. 16.—^d Wisd. xv. 7.

literally true, as to temporal benefits; yet S. Aug. observes in divers places, that Jacob was a figure of the elect or predestinate, and Esau of the reprobate; and that as Jacob and his posterity was more favoured, purely by the mercy of God, without any merits on their side; so are God's elect, whom he has called, and to whom, according to his eternal purpose, he decreed to give eternal glory, and special graces to bring them thither. Wi.

VER. 14. What shall we say, then? Is there injustice with God, when he bestows special favours and benefits on some, and not on others? He answers, by no means. And he justifies almighty God's conduct, v. 22. In the mean time, it is certain that there is no injustice in not giving what another has no right to: and besides all men having sinned, deserved punishment. If then, he shews mercy to some, it is an effect of his goodness and liberality only which they do not deserve. If he leaves others in their sins, they are only punished according to their deserts. His mercy shines upon his elect; and his divine justice is displayed against the wicked and the reprobate, but only according to what they have deserved. Wi.

VER. 15-16. I will have mercy, &c. Then it is not of him that willeth, &c. By these words he again teaches that God's call and predestination of those whom he has decreed to save, is not upon account of any works or merits in men, but only to be attributed to the mercy and goodness of God. See S. Thom. of Aquin on this chap. lect. iii. See S. Aug. Encher. c. xcviii. Epis. 194. in the new Ed. Ep. 106. ad Sixtum de lib. Arbit. c. xxv. &c. Wi.

VER. 17. For the Scripture saith to Pharao, &c. S. Paul had shewn that there was no injustice in God by his giving special graces to the elect; now he shews that God cannot be accounted unjust for leaving the reprobate in their sins, or for punishing them as they deserve; for this purpose he brings the example of Pharao, who remained hardened against all the admonitions and chastisements of him and his kingdom.—Have I raised thee up, placed thee king over Egypt; have done so many miracles before thee, I have spared thee when thou deservedst to be punished with death, and at last shall punish thee with thy army in the Red Sea, that my name may be known over all the earth. Wi.

VER. 18. And whom he will, he hardeneth. That is, permits to be hardened by their own malice, as it is divers times said in Exod. that Pharao hardened his heart. God, says S. Aug. is said to harden men's hearts, not by causing their malice, but by not giving them the free gift of his grace, by which they become hardened by their own perverse will. Wi.—Not by being the cause, or author of his sin, but by withholding his grace, and so leaving him in his sin, in punishment of his past demerits. Ch.

VER. 19. &c. Thou wilt say, therefore, to me, &c. The apostle makes objection, that if God call some, and harden, or even permit others to be hardened, and so one resisteth, or can hinder his absolute will, why should God complain that men are not converted? S. Paul first puts such rash and profane men in mind, that it is unreasonable and impertinent for creatures to murmur and dispute against God their Creator, when they do not comprehend the ways of his providence.—O man, who art thou that repliest against God? This might stop the mouths, and quiet the minds of every man, when he cannot comprehend the mysteries of predestination, of God's foreknowledge, his decrees and graces, or the manner of reconciling them with human liberty. He may cry out with S. Paul again, (c. xi. 33.) O the riches of the wisdom, and of the knowledge of God! how incomprehensible are his judgments, and how unsearchable his ways!—Shall the thing formed, &c. Hath not the potter power, &c. To teach men that they ought not to complain against God and his providence, when they cannot comprehend his works, he puts them in mind of their origin. Every one may say to God, with the prophet Isaias, (vi. 48.) Lord, thou art our Father, and we are but clay; thou art our Maker who framed us, and we are all of us the work of thy hands. Hath not the potter power as he pleaseth, out of the same lump of clay to make some vessels for honourable uses, and some for less honourable. S. Chrys. observes very well that this comparison must not be extended further than the apostle designed; which was to teach us, how submissive we ought to be to God, in what 20 O man, who art thou that repliest against God? ^aShall the thing formed say to him that formed it: Why hast thou made me thus?

21 Or hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump, to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour?

22 And if God, willing to shew his wrath, and to make his power known, endured with much patience vessels of wrath, fitted for destruction, 23 That he might shew the riches of his glory upon the vessels of mercy, which he hath prepared unto glory.

24 Even us, whom also he hath called, not of the Jews only, but also of the Gentiles, 25 As he saith in Osee: ^bI will call them my people, that were not my people: and her beloved, that was not beloved: and her, that had not obtained mercy, one that hath obtained mercy.

26 ^cAnd it shall be, in the place where it was said to them: you are not my people: there they shall be called the children of the living God.

Isai. xlv. 9. Jer. xviii. 6.—^b Osee ii. 24. 1 Pet. ii. 10.—^c Osee i. 10.

we do not understand; but we must not pretend from hence, nor from any expression in this chapter, as divers heretics have done, that as vessels of clay are destitute of free will and liberty, so are men. This is against the doctrine of the Catholic Church, and against the Scriptures, in many places. Wi.—The potter. This similitude is used, only to shew that we are not to dispute with our Maker: nor to reason with him why he does not give as much grace to one as to another: for since the whole lump of our clay is vitiated by sin, it is owing to his goodness and mercy that he makes out of it so many vessels of honour; and it is no more than just that others, in punishment of their unrepented sins, should be given up to be vessels of dishonour. Ch.

VER. 22-23. And if God, &c. He now gives the reason why God might, without any injustice, have mercy on some, and not on others; grant particular graces and favours to his elect, and not equally to all; because all mankind was become liable to damnation by original sin: the clay that all are made of, is a sinful clay; and as S. Aug. says, was become a lump and mass of damnation. Every one had sinned in Adam. Now, if out of this sinful lump and multitude God, to shew the richness of his glory, and superabundant mercy, hath chosen some as vessels of election, whom he hath decreed to save, and by special graces and favours to make partakers of his heavenly kingdom; and to shew his justice and hatred of sin, hath left others as vessels of his wrath and justice, to be lost in their sins, which for a time he bears patiently with, when they deserved present punishment, who can say that he hath done unjustly? Wi.

VER. 24, &c. Whom also he hath called, &c. That is, he hath called some of the Jews, and many of the Gentiles, to be vessels of election, as he foretold by his prophet Osee, (ii. 24.) I will call them my people, that were not my people, . . . and I will make them the children of the living God. And as it was also foretold by the prophet Isaias, of all the numerous nation of the Jews, only a remnant shall be saved, by their obstinacy in not receiving, and refusing to believe in, their Messias. For finishing his word, and reducing it by his justice to a little, because the Lord will bring to pass his word reducing it to a small compass upon the earth. The sense and construction of this verse is equally obscure in the Greek and in the Latin text: the true sense seems to be, that finishing his word, or fulfilling his promises to Israel, those that are to be saved, will be reduced by his justice for their sins, to a few; because, though he bring to pass his word, and his promises the saved among the Israelites will be reduced to a small compass, in comparison of the great number of the Gentiles. This exposition agrees with the rest of the text, and with what follows, and was foretold by Isaias, (c. i. 9.) that unless the God of Sabaoth (of hosts) had, through his mercy, left them a seed, a small number, they would all in a manner have deserved to be utterly destroyed, like Sodom and Gomorrah. Wi.—What I say, shall come to pass, that in those places, viz. Greece, Italy, &c. where those who are strangers to the worship of the true God dwell, and have been called, on account of their profane worship, not my people. In those very places, they shall receive the true worship of God, and by this means shall become and be called the children of the living God. He is so particular as to place, lest the Jews should imagine that the Gentiles would be converted like their former proselytes, and either dwell in Judea, or repair to it at certain stated times. Thus the apostle repeats what Jesus Christ had before said to the Samaritan woman. The hour will come when neither in this mountain, nor in Jerusalem, shall you adore the Father. Estius. John iv.—A remnant. That is, a small number only of the children of Israel shall be converted and saved. How perversely is this text quoted for the salvation of men of all religions, when it speaks only of the converts of the children of Israel. Ch.—S. Paul is here speaking of the reprobation of the Jews, and of the vocation of the Gentiles, and foretells that a remnant, or small number of the children of Israel shall be converted, and saved. In the series of S. Paul, we sincerely hope, and confidently trust, that a remnant of all will be saved through a timely conversion. But we nowhere read, in the Old, or New Scriptures, that a remnant of all will be saved, as if it were a matter of indifference to what society or connexion a Christian was joined. A.

27 And Isaias crieth out concerning Israel: *If the number of the children of Israel be as the sand of the sea, a remnant shall be saved.

28 For he shall finish his word, and cut it short in justice: because a short word shall the Lord make upon the earth.

29 And as Isaias foretold: ^b unless the Lord of sabaoth had left us a seed, we had been made as Sodom, and we had been like unto Gomorrha.

30 What then shall we say? That the Gentiles, who followed not after justice, have attained to justice: even the justice that is of faith.

31 But Israel, in following after the law of justice, is not come to the law of justice.

32 Why so? because they sought it not by faith, but as it were of works: for they stumbled at the stumbling-stone;

33 As it is written: *Behold I lay in Sion a stumbling-stone, and a rock of scandal: and whosoever believeth in him, shall not be confounded.

CHAP. X.

The end of the law is faith in Christ: which the Jews refusing to submit to, cannot be justified.

BRETHREN, the will of my heart, indeed, and my prayer to God, is for them unto salvation.

2 For I bear them witness, that they have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge.

3 For they, not knowing the justice of God, and seeking to establish their own, have not submitted themselves to the justice of God.

* Isai. x. 22.—^b Isai. i. 9.—^c Isai. viii. 14. and xxviii. 16. 1 Pet. ii. 7.
^d Lev. xviii. 5. Ezeo. xx. 11.

VER. 30-32. What then shall we say? Or what shall we conclude from these testimonies of the Scripture, but this paradox, as S. Chrys. calls it, that they who sought for justice, or sanctification, found it not, and they who did not seek it, found it; that is, the Jews, who sought for this justice by the works of their law, which they magnified so much, have not attained to that law that could make them just; whereas the Gentiles, who had no such written law to confide in, have only sought to be justified by the faith and law of Christ, by which they have met with justice, and sanctification! Wi.—Behold what was wanting to the justice of the Jews! Scrupulous observers of the ceremonial law: esteeming too much their power, and pretended justice, they regarded the gospel and faith in Christ as of no advantage. Running in the path of the commandments with zeal, but without circumspection, they struck against Jesus Christ, who became to them a stumbling-block. They rejected him: they refused to believe. Thus did their works become dead works, without any fruit for eternity. Calmet.

VER. 33. Why then have not the Jews been justified? because they stumbled at the stumbling-stone: that is, the doctrine of Christ crucified has been a scandal to the Jews, at which being offended, they would not own him for their Messiah. Yet whosoever believeth in him, and follows his law and doctrine, shall not be confounded, but obtain justification and salvation. Wi.

* V. 3. Anathema esse a Christo, ἀνάθεμα εἶναι ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ. From ἀνάθεμα. See ἀνάθεμα, and ἀνάθημα in Legh's critic. sac. See S. Chrys. hom. xiv. p. 136. Ed. Sav. where he says, that to expound S. Paul, as if he wished to die for Christ's sake, is a childish exposition, not worthy of the great charity of S. Paul, that it deserves no confutation: οὐκ ἔστι ταῦτα, οὐκ ἔστι . . . οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀντιλέγειν πρὸς ταῦτα ἄξιον. He thinks that S. Paul was willing to be separated, not from the love of Christ, (God forbid) but from the glory of the kingdom of heaven; Pag. 135. ἀλλοτριωθῆναι οὐχὶ τῆς ἀγάπης αὐτοῦ, μὴ γίνετο, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀπολαύσεως ἐκείνης καὶ τῆς δόξης.

† V. 5. Qui est super omnes Deos benedictus in sæcula. Amen. ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων θεῶς εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, Ἀμήν.

‡ V. 18. Et quem vult indurat. &c. S. Aug. l. de Gra. & Lib. Arb. c. 23. Deus induravit cor Pharaonis, & ipse Pharao per Liberum Arbitrium. Quærimus meritum obdurationis & invenimus: merito namque peccati, universa massa damnata est: nec obdurat Deus impertiendo malitiam, sed non impertiendo misericordiam: . . . quærimus autem meritum misericordie, nec invenimus: quia nullum est, ne gratia evaenctur, si non gratis donetur, sed meritis redditur. Obduratio Dei est, nolle miserere, &c. Pharao, says S. Chrys. was a vessel of anger, but this was from himself; καὶ τὰρ ἐαυτοῦ.

§ V. 20. O homo, tu quis es? &c. The apostle, says S. Chrys. (p. 141.) does not say, that this cannot be answered, but that such questions are impertinent, because we cannot understand what God does, &c. οὐ λέγει ἐπὶ ἀδύνατον νοεῖν αὐτὰ λέειν, &c.

|| V. 21. Annon potestatem habet figulus, &c.? S. Chrys. (p. 142.) expressly takes notice, that we must not by this comparison pretend that Israel has not free-will, &c. ἐνταῦθα οὐ τὸ ἀνθρώπου ἀριστον, &c.

4 For the end of the law is Christ, unto justice to every one that believeth.

5 For Moses wrote, that the justice which is of the law, ^athe man that shall do it, shall live by it.

6 But the justice which is of faith, speaketh thus: ^aSay not in thy heart: Who shall ascend into heaven? that is, to bring Christ down:

7 Or who shall descend into the deep? that is, to bring up Christ again from the dead.

8 But what saith the Scripture? 'The word is near thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: this is the word of faith, which we preach:

9 That if thou confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and believe in thy heart that God hath raised him up from the dead, thou shalt be saved.

10 For, with the heart, we believe unto justice: but, with the mouth, confession is made unto salvation.

11 For the Scripture saith: ^aWhosoever believeth in him, shall not be confounded.

12 For there is no distinction of the Jew and the Greek; for the same is Lord over all, rich to all that call upon him.

13 ^bFor whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

14 How then shall they call on him, in whom they have not believed? Or how shall they believe him, of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear, without a preacher?

15 And how can they preach, unless they be sent? as it is written: 'How beautiful are the feet of them

^a Deut. xxx. 12.—^f Deut. xxx. 14.—^g Isai. xxviii. 16.—^h Joel. ii. 32. Acts ii. 21.—ⁱ Isai. lli. 7. Nahum i. 15.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. Is for them. That is, for Israel, or the Israelites, named before. Wi.—After having said that the greatest part of Israel was cast off by the Almighty, the apostle, to shew that he meant not to insult or provoke them here testifies that he sympathizes in their misery, and with groans prays in their behalf to the Lord, that he would vouchsafe to grant them understanding, and open their eyes to the truth. Thus, though tenderly affected towards his countrymen, still he could not dissemble the truth, or flatter them in their incredulity and hardness of heart. Calmet.

VER. 2. According to knowledge, &c. The Jews ran with ardour in the paths of the law, but saw not whither they were going; they followed the law, but did not know whether it conducted them. Calmet.

VER. 3. The justice of God. That is, the justice which God giveth us through Christ; as, on the other hand, the Jews' own justice is that which they pretended to by their own strength, or by the observance of the law, without faith in Christ. Ch.—Seeking to establish their own. That is, for justice, or to be justified by their works, or the works of their written law. Wi.

VER. 5-7. Moses (Lev. xviii. 12.) wrote that the justice which is of the law . . . shall live by it. That is, shall have the recompense of a long temporal life, or even an everlasting life, by joining a faith in Christ their Redeemer, that was to come. But the justice which is of faith, speaketh thus, that is, Moses speaketh thus of it, (Deut. xxx.) say not in thy heart, who shall ascend into heaven? &c. the apostle gives us the spiritual sense of the words, by adding, to bring Christ down, &c. The sense is, that it is now fulfilled in the new law, when Christ is come from heaven by his incarnation, and is also again risen from the abyss by his resurrection: and therefore,

VER. 8. The word is near thee, is near to every one, who to be justified and saved, need but believe, and comply with the doctrine of the gospel which we preach, and make a confession or profession of it with his mouth; and then whether he hath been Jew or Gentile, he shall not be confounded. Wi.

VER. 9. Thou shalt be saved. To confess the Lord Jesus, and to call upon the name of the Lord, (v. 13.) is not barely the professing of a belief in the person of Christ: but moreover implies a belief of his whole doctrine, and an obedience to his law; without which the calling of him Lord will save no man. S. Matt. vii. 21. Ch.—This passage must be understood like many others of this apostle, of a faith accompanied by a good-will ready to perform what faith says must be practised; as it is required in this very place, that what we believe in the heart, we should confess with our mouth. Estius.

VER. 14. &c. Or how shall they believe, &c. He shews the necessity of preachers, and that all true preachers must be sent, and have their mission from God.—Who hath believed our report? ^aLit. our hearing? Some expound it thus who hath believed the things we have heard from God, and which we have preached? The common interpretation is, who hath believed what he hath heard from us? Wi.

VER. 15. Unless they be sent. Here is an evident proof against all new that preach the gospel of peace, of them that bring glad tidings of good things?

16 But all do not obey the gospel. For Isaiah saith: *Lord, who hath believed our report?

17 Faith then cometh by hearing: and hearing by the word of Christ.

18 But I say: Have they not heard? Yes, verily, their sound went forth over all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the whole world.

19 But I say: Hath not Israel known? First Moses saith: *I will provoke you to jealousy by that which is not a nation: by a foolish nation I will anger you.

20 But Isaiah is bold, and saith: *I was found by them that did not seek me: I appeared openly to them that asked not after me.

21 But to Israel he saith: *All the day long have I spread forth my hands to a people, that believeth not, and contradicteth me.

CHAP. XI.

God hath not cast off all Israel. The Gentiles must not be proud; but stand in faith, and fear.

I SAY then: Hath God cast away his people? God forbid. For I also am an Israelite, of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Benjamin.

2 God hath not cast away his people, which he fore-

* Isai. liii. 1. John xii. 39.—^b Ps. xviii. 5.—^c Deut. xxxii. 21.—^d Isai. lxxv. 1.
* Isai. lxxv. 2.—^f 3 Kings xix. 10.

teachers, who have all usurped to themselves the ministry, without any lawful mission, derived by succession from the apostles, to whom Christ said, (Jo. xx. 21.) As my Father hath sent me, I also send you. Ch.—The Almighty sends people to preach two different ways. The one is extraordinary by internal inspiration, as was that of the Baptist, and all the other prophets; in which case, however, extraordinary proofs must be given that they are sent by God; and the other is ordinary, which is derived from Christ, and from the apostles and their successors, whom he has appointed to be his vicegerents on earth. Estius.

VER. 18. But I say, have they not heard? He puts an objection, and by his answer shews the Jews are inexcusable in not believing, since the gospel has been preached all the world over, and in places where the Jews were, as it was foretold: and also because the Gentiles every where have believed; which even excites you Jews to jealousy against them, as Moses foretold: (Deut. xxxii. 21.) that is, when you now see, that the Gentiles, whom you despised so much, by believing in Christ, have received the gifts of the Holy Ghost, of working miracles, of speaking tongues, of prophecy, &c. Wi.

VER. 19. A people whom you have always despised, not being worthy to be numbered amongst mankind, I will make my beloved people. I will enrich with my graces those whom you have contemned; I will give them the grace of adoption, thus to stir you up to jealousy and rage. And in effect, what greater rage ever was there, than that of the Jews against the converted Gentiles? In persecution, the Jews were always most busy. Thus were the Jews plainly informed of the truth of the gospel, by the Gentiles converted before their face. Calmet.

VER. 21. After the preaching of Christ, and his apostles, after so many wonders wrought by our Saviour, he at last offers himself to the Jewish people, with stretched-out hands, and yet they cannot be induced to believe in him. They resist him as much as they can, thus verifying the prophecy of holy Simeon, that he should be set up as a sign to be contradicted. Lu. ii. Estius.

* V. 16. Quis credidit auditui nostro? τῇ ἀκοῇ ἡμῶν?

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. &c. S. Paul in this chapter endeavours to comfort the Jews, though the greatest part of them were rejected for their blindness; and to admonish the converted Gentiles, not to boast for being called and converted, but to persevere with humility, and the fear of God.—God hath not cast away his people. That is, not all of them, nor hath he cast off those whom he foreknew, and decreed to save.—The Scripture saith of Elias. He brings the example of Elias living among the ten tribes of Israel, when all the people were forbidden to go and adore in the temple of Jerusalem, when the altars of the true God were destroyed, and almost all in these tribes were fallen into idolatry, and worshipped Baal; he complains as if he were left alone in the worship of the true God. But the divine answer shewed him his mistake. I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, &c. Some take notice that seven is divers times put for a great number, as three and a half for a small number: however, besides these seven thousand, all in the kingdom of Judah remained firm in the worship of the true God. In like manner, a remnant is now saved by the election of grace, by God's free and liberal gift of divine grace. Some pretended reformers of the faith of the Church bring this as an argument, that the Church of God may fail, and fall into errors. It is sufficient to answer, that there is a wide difference betwixt the Jewish synagogue, which brought nothing to perfection, and the knew. Know you not what the Scripture saith of Elias; how he calleth on God against Israel?

3 *Lord, they have slain thy prophets, they have dug down thy altars: and I am left alone, and they seek my life.

4 But what saith the divine answer to him? *I have reserved to myself seven thousand men, who have not bowed their knees to Baal.

5 Even so then at this present time also, there is a remnant saved, according to the election of grace.

6 And if by grace, it is not now by works: otherwise grace is no more grace.

7 What then? that which Israel sought, he hath not obtained: but the election hath obtained it, and the rest have been blinded:

8 As it is written: *God hath given them the spirit of insensibility: eyes, that they should not see, and ears, that they should not hear, until this present day.

9 And David saith: *Let their table be made a snare, and a trap, and a stumbling-block, and a recompense to them.

10 Let their eyes be darkened, that they may not see: and bow down their back always.

11 I say then, have they so stumbled, that they should fall? God forbid. But by their offence, sal-

* 8 Kings xix. 18.—^b Isai. vi. 9. and x. 29. Matt. xiii. 14. John xii. 40. Acts xxviii. 26.—^c Ps. lxxviii. 23.

Church of Christ, which he built upon a rock, with which he has promised to be to the end of the world, and guide them by the Spirit of Truth. Wi.—This is very ill alleged by some against the perpetual visibility of the Church of Christ: the more because however the number of the faithful might be abridged by the persecution of Jezebel in the kingdom of the ten tribes; the Church was at the same time in a most flourishing condition (under Asa and Josaphat) in the kingdom of Judah. Ch.—Our separated brethren add to this text, as in Acts xix. 35 the word image. They also cite it in proof of an invisible Church; but with no just grounds: for in Jerusalem the faith and worship were public to the whole world. Besides, the Christian Church rests on better promises than the synagogue. B.—The Jews obtain not the justice they sought after, because they did not seek it as they ought; they expected to obtain it by their works, whereas it can only be had from grace. Estius.

VER. 6. It is not now by works: otherwise grace is no more grace. The election of God, and the first grace at least, are always without any merits on our part; but if we speak of works done in a state of grace, and by the assistance of God's grace, we co-operate with the graces given, and by thus co-operating, we deserve and merit a reward in heaven. Wi.—If salvation were to come by works done by nature, without faith and grace, salvation would not be a grace or favour but a debt; but such dead works are indeed of no value in the sight of God towards salvation. It is not the same with regard to works done with and by God's grace; for to such works as these he has promised eternal salvation. Ch.

VER. 8. God hath given them, &c. Not by his working or acting in them; but by his permission, and by withdrawing his grace in punishment of their obstinacy. Ch.—Permitted them (says S. Chrys.) to fall into the spirit of insensibility. Lit. the spirit of * compunction. Compunction is not here taken, as in some spiritual writers, for a great sorrow for sins. In the Latin Vulg. (Is. vi. 9) it is called the spirit of slumber, as in the Prot. translation. We cannot have a better judge of the sense of the word than S. Chrys. who tells us, that it signifies a habit of the soul, firmly fixed in evil, and an insensible disposition: as, saith he, persons under a pious compunction are not to be removed from their good resolutions; so the wicked, under a hardened compunction, are nailed, as it were, to vice. And that here this is the true sense, appears by the following words out of Isaiah: he hath given them eyes that they should not see, &c. And also out of David, (Ps. lxxviii. 23.) let their table be made a snare, &c. We may understand the spiritual food of the word of God, and of the Scriptures; which by the blindness of this people, have served to their greater condemnation.—And a recompense, that is, for a just punishment of their obstinacy.—And bow down their back always, a metaphor to represent the condition of such, as are under heavy oppressions. Wi.—Although by bending their back is literally understood the yoke of servitude and captivity, with which the Jews were oppressed at the destruction of Jerusalem; yet it seems more conformable to the apostle's meaning, when considered in a spiritual sense, and then it will signify the insensibility of the Jews, as to heavenly things, and their anxious solicitude for the things of the earth. Thus their avaricious and carnal disposition was so manifest, that the poet said of them—

O curvæ in terram animæ et coelestium inanes.—Estius.

VER. 11–15. Have they so stumbled, that they should fall? God forbid. That is, their fall is not irreparable, or so as never to rise again; but by their offending, salvation (through the liberal mercy of God) is come to the Gentiles, that they, the Jews, may be emulous of the Gentiles, and of their happivation is come to the Gentiles, that they may be emulous of them.

12 Now if the offence of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them, the riches of the Gentiles: how much more the fulness of them?

13 For I say to you, Gentiles: *As long, indeed, as I am the apostle of the Gentiles, I will honour my ministry, 14 If by any means I may provoke to emulation those who are my flesh, and may save some of them.

15 For if the loss of them be the reconciliation of the world: what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead?

16 For if the first-fruit be holy, so is the mass also: and if the root be holy, so are the branches.

17 And if some of the branches be broken, and thou being a wild olive-tree, art ingrafted in them, and art made partaker of the root and of the fatness of the olive-tree, 18 Boast not against the branches. But if thou boast: thou bearest not the root, but the root thee.

19 Thou wilt say then: the branches were broken off that I might be grafted in.

20 Well: because of unbelief they were broken off. But thou standest by faith: be not high-minded, but fear.

21 For if God hath not spared the natural branches: he may not perhaps spare thee also.

22 See, therefore, the goodness, and the severity

* Acts ix. 2. and 15. Gal. ii. 7.

ness, and so may be converted. Wi.—The nation of the Jews is not absolutely and without remedy cast off for ever; but in part only (many thousands of them having been at first converted) and for a time: which fall of theirs God has been pleased to turn to the good of the Gentiles. Ch.—How much more the fulness of them? As if he should say, if the obstinacy of so many Jews seem to be an occasion upon which God, whose mercy calls whom he pleaseth, hath bestowed the riches of his grace on other nations; and while the glory of the Jews, the elect people of God, has been diminished, the Gentiles have been made happy: how much more glorious will be the fulness of them? that is, according to the common interpretation, will be the re-establishment and conversion of the Jews hereafter, before the end of the world! See S. Chrys. Op. ad Rom. p. 164. S. Hilary, in Ps. lvi. S. Jer. in c. iii. Osee. Habac. iii. S. Aug. Lxx. de Civ. Dei. c. xxix.—Then (v. 15.) the receiving of them into the Church, and their conversion to Christ, shall be like life from the dead, when the Jewish nation in general, shall rise from the death of sin, and their hardened infidelity, to the life of faith and grace. These things I speak to you, Gentiles, to honour and comply with my ministry of being your apostle: yet endeavouring at the same time, if by a pious emulation, or by any other way, I may be able to bring any of my flesh, or of my brethren, the Jews, to be saved by the faith of Christ. Wi.

VER. 16. do. If the first-fruit (see the Greek word) be holy, so also is the mass; so also the rest, the product that follows. He alludes to the offering made by the law of the first fruit, which was to acknowledge that all good things were from God, and to bring a blessing upon the rest.—If the root be holy, so are the branches. By the root, says S. Chrys. he understands Abraham, and the patriarchs, from whom all the Jewish nation proceeded, as branches from that root: and these branches are to be esteemed holy, not only because of the root they proceeded from, but also because they worshipped the true God. And if some, or a great part of these branches, have been broken, they may, as it is said, (v. 23) be ingrafted again. And you, Gentiles, ought to remember that, you were of yourselves a wild olive-tree: and it is only by the merciful call of God, that you have the happiness to be ingrafted upon the same root of the patriarchs; and so, by imitating the faith of Abraham, are become his spiritual children, and heirs of the promises, and by that means have been made partakers of the root, and of the sap, and fatness of the sweet olive-tree. Remember that you bear not the root, nor were you the root that was holy; but the root beareth you; and that being branches of a wild olive, you ought naturally still to bear bad fruit, though ingrafted on the root of a sweet olive. It is only by the mercies of God, if you bring forth good fruit. Do not then be high-minded, nor boast, but fear, and endeavour to continue in goodness; lest God also spare not you, but cut you off, as unprofitable branches. And let me tell you, as to the Jews, if they abide not still in unbelief, God is able to ingraft them again into their own olive-tree; and it seems more easy, that they, who are naturally branches of the sweet olive-tree, should bring forth good fruit, when they shall be ingrafted in their own olive-tree, being of the race of Abraham, to whom the of God: towards them, indeed, that are fallen, the severity: but towards thee, the goodness of God, if thou continue in goodness, otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.

23 And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be ingrafted: for God is able to ingraft them again.

24 For if thou wert cut out of the wild olive-tree, which is natural to thee, and, contrary to nature, wert ingrafted into the good olive-tree: how much more shall they, that are the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive-tree?

25 For I would not have you ignorant, brethren, of this mystery, ^b(lest you should be wise in your own conceits) that blindness in part has happened in Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles should come in,

26 And so all Israel should be saved, as it is written: *There shall come out of Sion he that shall deliver, and shall turn away impiety from Jacob.

27 And this is to them my covenant: when I shall take away their sins.

28 According to the gospel, indeed, they are enemies for your sake: but according to election, they are most dear for the sake of the fathers.

29 For the gifts and the calling of God are without repentance.

30 For as you also in times past did not believe God, but now have obtained mercy, through their unbelief:

^b Prov. iii. 7. Isai. v. 21.—* Isai. lix. 20.

promises were made. Wi.—We see here, that he who standeth by faith, may fall from it; and therefore must live in fear, and not in the vain presumption and security of modern sectaries. Ch.—The apostle here exhorts the converted Gentiles, to fear lest they fall, and bring upon themselves a punishment similar to that of the Jews. The Jews were his chosen people, the children of the alliance; they have now been stripped of all; the same may also happen to you. You may fall into presumption and incredulity; if you remain firm, it is not by your own merits or works, but by faith, the pure gift of God. Neither faith, nor vocation, nor grace, are inadmissible. You may lose all; and therefore ought always to fear and live in humility. If God has not spared the natural branches, fear, lest he should not spare you. v. 21. Calmet.—The Gentiles are here admonished not to be proud, nor to glory over the Jews; but to take occasion rather from their fall to fear and to be humble, lest they be cut off. Not that the whole Church of Christ can ever fall from him; having been secured by so many divine promises in holy writ; but that each one in particular may fall; and therefore all in general are to be admonished to beware of that, which may happen to any one in particular. Ch.

VER. 25–26. I would not have you ignorant, brethren, of this mystery, this, hidden truth of God's justice and mercy, that blindness in part hath happened in Israel, or to part of them, until the fulness of the Gentiles should come in, by the conversion of all nations: and then all Israel should be saved, when they shall submit to the faith of Christ: as it is written by the prophet Isaias, (lix. 20.) there shall come out of Sion he that shall deliver; that is, their Redeemer, Christ Jesus, who is indeed come already, but who shall then come to them by his powerful grace. This is my covenant with them. Wi.

VER. 28. According to the gospel, indeed, they are enemies for your sakes. That is, enemies both to you, because they see the gospel preached and received by you, and enemies to God, because he has rejected them at present for their wilful blindness: yet according to election, God having once made them his elect, and because of their forefathers, the patriarchs, they are most dear for the sake of the fathers: for the gifts and the calling of God are without repentance, in as much as God is unchangeable, and his promises, made absolutely, cannot fail. Wi.

VER. 30. do. As you also in times past did not believe God, but now have obtained mercy through their unbelief, which was an occasion of God's sending his preachers to you: but the cause of your salvation is God's mercy.—That they also may obtain mercy. That is, God has permitted their incredulity, that being a greater object of pity, he may shew greater mercy in converting them by the free gift of his grace.—For God hath concluded all, that is, has permitted at different times, both Gentiles and Jews, to fall into a state of unbelief, that the salvation of all may be known to come, not from themselves, but as an effect of his mercy and grace. Wi.—He hath found all nations, both Jews and Gentiles, in unbelief and sin; not by his causing, but by the abuse of their own free-will; so that their calling and election are purely owing to his mercy. Ch.

31 So these also now have not believed for your mercy, that they also may obtain mercy.

32 For God hath concluded all in unbelief, that he may have mercy on all.

33 O the depth of the riches, of the wisdom, and of the knowledge of God! How incomprehensible are his judgments, and how unsearchable his ways!

34 *For who hath known the mind of the Lord? Or who hath been his counsellor?

35 Or who hath first given to him, and recompense shall be made him?

36 For of him, and by him, and in him, are all things: to him be glory for ever. Amen.

CHAP. XII.

Lessons of Christian virtues.

I BESEECH you, therefore, brethren, by the mercy of God, ^bthat you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, pleasing to God, your reasonable service.

2 And be not conformed to this world: but be reformed in the newness of your mind: ^cthat you may prove what is the good, and the acceptable, and the perfect will of God.

3 For I say, through the grace that is given me, to all that are among you, not to be more wise than it behoveth to be wise, but to be wise unto sobriety: ^dand according as God hath divided to every one the measure of faith.

4 For as in one body we have many members, but all the members have not the same office:

5 So we, being many, are one body in Christ, and every one, members one of another.

6 And having gifts different, according to the grace that is given us, whether prophecy, according to the proportion of faith,

7 Or ministry, in ministering: or he that teacheth, in doctrine,

8 He that exhorteth in exhorting, he that giveth with simplicity, he that ruleth with solicitude, he that sheweth mercy with cheerfulness.

9 Love without dissimulation. *Hating that which is evil, adhering to that which is good:

10 'Loving one another with brotherly love; in honour preventing one another:

11 In solicitude not slothful: in spirit fervent: serving the Lord:

12 Rejoicing in hope: patient in tribulation: instant in prayer:

13 Communicating to the necessities of the saints: ^epursuing hospitality.

14 Bless them that persecute you: bless, and curse not.

15 Rejoice with them that rejoice, weep with them that weep:

16 Being of one mind one towards another: not high-minded: but condescending to the humble. Be not wise in your own conceits:

17 Rendering to no man evil for evil: ^fproviding things good, not only in the sight of God, but also in the sight of all men.

18 ^gIf it be possible, as much as is in you, have peace with all men.

19 ^hRevenge not yourselves, my dearly beloved: but give place to wrath, for it is written: 'Revenge is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord.

20 ⁱBut if thy enemy be hungry, give him to eat. if he thirst, give him drink: for, doing this, thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head.

21 ^jBe not overcome by evil, but overcome evil by good.

* Wisd. ix. 18. Isai. xl. 18. — 1 Cor. ii. 16. — Phil. iv. 18. — Ephes. v. 17. 1 Thes. iv. 8. ^a 1 Cor. xii. 11. Ephes. iv. 7. — Ainos v. 15. — Ephes. iv. 8. 1 Pet. ii. 17.

^g Heb. xiii. 2. 1 Pet. iv. 9. — ^h 2 Cor. viii. 21. — ⁱ Heb. xii. 14. — ^k Eccl. xxviii. 1. and ii. 8. ^j Matt. 5. 39. — Deut. xxxii. 35. Heb. 10. 30. — Prov. xxv. 21.

VER. 33-36. O the depth, &c. After he hath spoken of the mysteries of God's grace and predestination, of his mercy and justice, which we must not pretend to dive into, he concludes this part of his epistle, by an exclamation, to teach us submission of our judgment, as to the secrets of his providence, which we cannot comprehend.—How incomprehensible are his judgments, &c.—Who hath first given to him, and recompense shall be made him? That is, no one, by any merit on his part, can first deserve God's favours and mercy, by which he prevents us.—For of him, from God, or from Jesus Christ, as God, and by him, who made, preserves, and governs all things, and in him, is our continual dependence: for in him we live, we move, and exist. In the Greek, it is unto him, ^tto signify he is also our last end. See the notes, John c. i. Wi.—All things are from God, as their first cause and creator; all things are by God, as the ruler and governor of the universe; and all things are in God, or (as the Greek has it) for God, because they are all directed to his honour and glory. For he hath made all things for himself. Ps. xvi. S. Basil, lib. de Spiritu sto. c. 5.

* V. 8. Spiritum compunctionis; πνεῦμα κατανύξεως. In the Latin Vulgate, Is xxix. 10, the same Greek words are translated, spiritum soporis; the spirit of slumber. See Mr. Legh, Crit. Sacr. on the word κατανύσσω. S. Chrys. h. p. 16. p. 163. κατανύξιν, ἡντινέν τὸ ἡσέον ἐξεν τῆς ψυχῆς, &c. See Corn. a Lap. S. Chrys. in the same place; κατανύξιν γὰρ οὐκ ἐστὶν τὸ ἐκπαύειν, καὶ προσῴωσαι.

† V. 32. Conclusit omnia. Greek, πάντας.

‡ V. 36. Et in ipso, καὶ εἰς αὐτόν.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. With this chapter S. Paul begins his second part, in which he gives us most excellent lessons of morality, after which every Christian should aim to form his life, and thus resemble Jesus Christ and his saints. A.—That you present your bodies a living sacrifice. And how must this be done? says S. Chrys. hom. xx. Let the eye abstain from sinful looks and glances, and it is a sacrifice; the tongue from speaking ill, and it is a sacrifice, &c.—Your reasonable service, or worship, from you;* nothing being more reasonable, than for men to serve God with their souls and bodies, &c. Wi.

VER. 2. Take care, lest you imitate the practices of worldlings. Let your heart, your ambition, carry you to heaven: ever despise those things which the world admires, that every one may see by your actions that you are not of the society of worldlings and have neither regard nor friendship for them.

Calmet. Transform yourselves into new men, by the renewal of your mind, that you may discern on all occasions, what is most perfect, most pleasing and acceptable to God. V.

VER. 3. To be wise unto sobriety. Not pretending to be more wise, or more knowing than you are.—As God hath divided to every one the measure of faith. The sense by what follows is, that every one make the best use, for the glory of God, and the good of his neighbour, of the gifts and graces which he hath received together with the faith of Christ; i. e. of prophecy, or the gift of interpreting past prophecies, or of foretelling things to come, of exhorting, of ministering as to those functions which belong to the ministers of the gospel, &c. Wi.

VER. 9. The apostle does not here prohibit that defence, by which a person, either by word or action, preserves himself from injury. This he could not condemn, since he had so often recourse to it himself, as we read in the Acts of the Apostles: and in the second to Timothy, he writes: "In my first defence no one was with me." But he only forbids that revenge which a person takes of his neighbour, by private means, without having recourse to legal authority. Estius.

VER. 18. Communicating† to the necessities of the saints. Making them partakers of what you have, by relieving them. Wi.

VER. 16. Condescending to the humble, in the spirit of charity and sweetness. See Luke ii. 48. Wi.

VER. 18. If it be possible, . . . have peace with all. That is, if it can be without prejudice to truth or justice, &c. And even when others wrong you, seek not to revenge yourselves, but leave your cause to God. Do good offices even to those that do evil to you. Wi.

VER. 19. Give place to wrath. This we do, says S. Chrys. when we leave all to God, and endeavour to return good for evil. Wi.

VER. 20. Thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. This figurative way of speaking is differently expounded. Some say, inasmuch as by this means thou shalt make him liable to greater punishments from God. Others, as S. Jer. and S. Aug. by coals of fire, understand kindnesses and benefits, which shall touch the heart, and inflame the affections even of thy enemies, which shall make them sorry for what they have done, and become thy friends. Wi.

VER. 21. This is the apostle's conclusion of the foregoing instructions. Be not overcome by the malice of thy enemy, so as to wish to revenge thyself, without leaving all to the just judgment of God; but overcome his malice by thy kindness. This is complied with, when upon occasion of injuries received we

CHAP. XIII.

Lessons of obedience to superiors, and mutual charity.

LET every soul be subject to higher powers: for there is no power but from God: and those that are, are ordained of God.

2 Therefore he that resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God, and they that resist, purchase to themselves damnation.

3 For rulers are not a terror to the good work, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? Do that which is good: and thou shalt have praise from the same.

4 For he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, fear: for he beareth not the sword in vain. For he is the minister of God: and avenger to execute wrath upon him that doth evil.

5 Wherefore be subject of necessity, not only for wrath, but also for conscience-sake.

6 For therefore also you pay tribute: for they are the ministers of God, serving unto this purpose.

7 ^bRender, therefore, to all their dues: tribute, to whom tribute is due: custom, to whom custom: fear, to whom fear: honour, to whom honour.

8 Owe no man any thing, but to love one another: for he that loveth his neighbour, hath fulfilled the law.

9 ^aFor thou shalt not commit adultery: Thou shalt always make a return of kindness, and in proportion as the malice of our enemies increases, our spirit of benevolence should also increase. Estius.

^a Wisd. vi. 4. 1 Pet. ii. 18.—^b Matt. xxi. 21.—^c Exod. xx. 14. Deut. v. 18.—^d Lev. xix. 18.

^a V. 1. Rationabile obsequium, λογικὴν λατρείαν.

† V. 18. Communicantes; κοινωνοῦντες. Κοινωνεῖν is often used by S. Paul for making others sharers by giving to them.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. *Let every soul, or every one, be subject, &c. The Jews were apt to think themselves not subject to temporal princes, as to taxes, &c. and lest Christians should misconstrue their Christian liberty, he here teacheth them that every one (even priests and bishops, says S. Chrys.) must be subject and obedient to princes, even to heathens, as they were at that time, as to laws that regard the policy of the civil government, honouring them, obeying them, and their laws, as it is the will of God, because the power they act by is from God. So that to resist them, is to resist God. And every Christian must obey them even for conscience-sake. S. Chrys. takes notice that S. Paul does not say that there is no prince but from God, but only that there is no power out from God, meaning no lawful power, and speaking of true and just laws. See hom. xxiii. Wi.

VER. 8-9. But that you love one another. This is a debt, says S. Chrys. which we are always to be paying, and yet always remains, and is to be paid again.—He that loveth his neighbour, hath fulfilled the law. Nay, he that loves his neighbour, as he ought, loves him for God's sake, and so complies with the other great precept of loving God: and upon these two precepts (as Christ himself taught us, Matt. xxii. 40.) depend the whole law and the prophets. Wi.

VER. 10. Love of the neighbour worketh no evil.† This, by the Latin, is the true construction; and not, love worketh no evil to the neighbour, as it might be translated from the Greek. Wi.

VER. 11. Now our salvation is nearer than when we believed. Some will have the sense to be, that our salvation is now nearer, when the gospel is preached, and Christ offers us his graces, than when we believed the Messias was to come. Others expound it, that the more of our life is spent, we come nearer to the judgment of God, and to the salvation promised in heaven. Wi.

VER. 12. The night is passed. That is, the night of sin and infidelity, in which you lived, before you began to serve Christ. Wi.—S. Paul is here addressing himself to Gentile converts. Before your conversion, you were in the darkness of infidelity: this time is past; now is the day, when the gospel has dissipated the darkness of idolatry, ignorance, and sin. Let us lay aside the works of darkness, by flying from sin, which hates the light, and seeks always to conceal itself; and let us put on the armour of light, the shield of faith, the breast-plate of justice, the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the spirit. Calme.

VER. 13. Let us walk honestly as in the day. As men are accustomed to do in the light, without being afraid that their works come to light.—Not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering,† not in beds and impurities, not in immodest disorders. Wi.—The night of the present life full of darkness, of ignorance, and of sin, is already far advanced; and the day of eternity approaches: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness. V.

VER. 14. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ. To put on, is a metaphor used not kill: Thou shalt not steal: Thou shalt not bear false witness: Thou shalt not covet: and if there be any other commandment, it is comprised in this word: ^aThou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

10 The love of the neighbour worketh no evil. Love, therefore, is the fulfilling of the law.

11 And that knowing the time: that it is now the hour for us to rise from sleep: for now our salvation is nearer than when we believed.

12 The night is passed, and the day is at hand. Let us, therefore, cast off the works of darkness, and put on the armour of light.

13 Let us walk honestly as in the day: ^anot in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and impurities, not in contention and envy:

14 ^aBut put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh in its concupiscences.

CHAP. XIV.

The strong must bear with the weak. Cautions against judging; and giving scandal.

NOW him, that is weak in faith, take unto you; not in disputes about thoughts.

2 For one believeth that he may eat all things: but he that is weak, let him eat herbs.

3 Let not him that eateth, despise him that eateth not; and he that eateth not, let him not judge him that eateth: For God hath taken him to him.

Matt. xxii. 39. Mark xli. 81. Gal. v. 14. James ii. 8.—^a Luko xxi. 84. Gal. v. 16. 1 Pet. ii. 11.

in the Scripture; as when it is said, put on the new man, &c. And make not provision for the flesh in its concupiscences. That is, do not take care, nor pamper and indulge your appetite in eating and drinking, so as to increase your disorderly inclinations, but keep them in due subjection. Wi.—The apostle does not forbid all care of the body, since he himself says in the epistle to the Ephesians, v. "No one ever hated his own flesh, but nourishes and cherishes it." But he forbids that care of the flesh, by which the desires and concupiscences of the flesh are strengthened and encouraged. Ths those are guilty of, who are always indulging in delights and voluptuousness. Estius.—Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, that is, enter into his sentiments, imitate his virtues, and indulge not the flesh in its inordinate desires.

^a V. 1. Non est potestas, εξουσία, nisi a Deo. S. Chrys. δμ. κγ. p. 189. οὐκ ἔστιν, οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ἀρχὴν εἰ μὴ ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, ἀλλὰ περὶ τοῦ πράγματος διαλέγεται λέγων, οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν εξουσία.

† V. 10. Dilectio proximi malum non operatur, i. e. dilectio non operatur malum proximi, vel proximo, ἡ ἀγάπη τῷ πλησίον κακὸν οὐκ ἐργάζεται.

† V. 13. Non in cubilibus, μὴ κοιταῖς, which may signify beds, chambers, or immodest actions.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. *Not in disputes about thoughts. That is, without blaming or condemning the thoughts, and reasoning (as it appears by the Greek) of those new converts, who had been Jews, and who were still of this opinion, that they ought to abstain from meats forbidden by the Jewish law, and observe the Jewish festival days. You must charitably bear with the weakness of such converts. Wi.—Be tender with him who is weak in faith; enter not into disputes with him, which only serve to extinguish charity, and create inveterate prejudices.

VER. 2. Eat all things. Viz. without observing the distinction between clean and unclean meats, prescribed by the law of Moses: which was now no longer obligatory. Some weak Christians, converted from among the Jews, as we here gather from the apostle, made a scruple of eating such meats as were deemed unclean by the law: such as swine's flesh, &c. which the stronger sort of Christians did eat without scruple. Now the apostle, to reconcile them together, exhorts the former not to judge or condemn the latter, using their Christian liberty; and the latter to take care not to despise, or scandalize their weaker brethren, either by bringing them to eat what in their conscience they think they should not: or by giving them such offence, as to endanger the driving them thereby from the Christian religion. Oh.—For one that is not so weak, but well instructed, believeth, is persuaded, that he may eat all things, the distinction of clean and unclean meats being no longer obligatory under the new law of Christ. He that is weak, and not convinced of this Christian liberty, let him eat herbs, or such things as he esteems not forbidden. It is likely some of them abstained many times from all manner of flesh, lest they should meet with what had been offered to idols, or lest something forbidden by the law might be mixed. Wi.

VER. 3-4. God hath taken him to him, that eats of any meats; he accounts him his servant, and will reward him as such.—God is able to make him stand, and will justify him before his tribunal. Wi.

4 *Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? To his own master he standeth, or falleth: and he shall stand: for God is able to make him stand.

5 For one judgeth between day and day: and another judgeth every day: let every man abound in his own sense.

6 He that regardeth the day, regardeth it unto the Lord: and he that eateth, eateth to the Lord: for he giveth thanks to God. And he that eateth not, to the Lord he eateth not, and giveth thanks to God.

7 For none of us liveth to himself: and no man dieth to himself.

8 For whether we live, we live to the Lord: or whether we die, we die to the Lord. Therefore, whether we live, or whether we die, we are the Lord's.

9 For to this end Christ died, and rose again: that he might be Lord both of the dead and of the living.

10 But why dost thou judge thy brother? or why dost thou despise thy brother? ^bFor we shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ.

11 For it is written: ^aAs I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me: and every tongue shall confess to God.

12 Therefore every one of us shall render an account for himself to God.

13 Let us not, therefore, judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that you put not a stumbling-block or a scandal in your brother's way.

14 I know, and am confident, in the Lord Jesus, that nothing is unclean of itself, but to him that thinketh any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean.

15 For if, because of thy meat, thy brother be

^a Jam. iv. 18.—^b 2 Cor. v. 10.—^c Isai. xlv. 24. Philip. ii. 10.

VER. 5. Between day, &c. Still observing the sabbaths and festivals of the law. Ch.—And another judgeth every day. That is, thinks every day to be taken away, that was to be kept, merely because ordered under the Jewish law. And now since both they who keep days, or do not keep them; and they who eat, or who abstain, do these things with a regard to God, and according to their conscience, let no one judge, or condemn the one party, nor the other; in these things, let every man abound in his own sense. It is without grounds that some would pretend from hence, that Christians cannot be bound to fast, or abstain from flesh on certain days. The apostle speaks only of the distinction of meats, called clean and unclean, and of fasts or feasts peculiar to the law of Moses. It does not follow from hence, that the Catholic Church hath not power to command days of fasting, and abstaining, for self-denial or humiliation. Wi.—The apostle here treats only of the subject in hand, viz. the Mosaic distinctions of clean and unclean meats: and in this he allows, for that present time, each one to follow his own private judgment. S. Chrysostom observes that S. Paul did not wish the weak to be left to their own judgment in this, as in a point of no consequence; but that they should wait for a time. The converts were not immediately prohibited their accustomed practices, but they were tolerated in them for a while, till fully instructed. This we see in many of the converts at Jerusalem, who were still observers of the Mosaic ordinances; this was tolerated, that the synagogue might be buried with honour. Estius.

VER. 11. The apostle here gives a remarkable proof of the divinity of our Saviour. He could not possibly be more express. He had said in the preceding verse, that all men should appear before the tribunal of Christ; to prove this assertion, he adduces this testimony of the prophet Isaias: "As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bend before me, and every tongue shall confess to God." Is. c. xlv. Thus shall all acknowledge the power, the divinity, and sovereign dominion of Christ, by bending the knee; and by confessing to him, shall acknowledge him for the master and judge of all mankind. Calmet.

VER. 14. Nothing is unclean of itself. Because the law that made them unclean, is not now binding of itself, yet a man must not act against his conscience, neither must he, when he can avoid it, scandalize or offend the weak: nor cause divisions or dissensions. Wi.

VER. 15. S. Paul repeats this, in almost the same words, in 1 Cor. c. viii. and plainly gives us to understand, that Christ died for the salvation of all men, by supposing a Christian brother, for whom Christ had died, in danger of perishing by the scandal given by another. This supposition could never have been made, if the death of Christ was only offered up for the elect: but we here learn from S. Paul, that they for whom Christ shed his blood and suffered the death of the cross may perish eternally; and therefore all, even the greatest reprobates, may be saved, if they effectually desire it, by virtue of the death of our divine Redeemer.

grieved: thou walkest not now according to charity. ^aDestroy not him with thy meat, for whom Christ died.

16 Let not then our good be evil spoken of.

17 For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink: but justice, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.

18 For he, that in this serveth Christ, pleaseth God, and is approved of men.

19 Therefore let us follow after the things that are of peace: and keep the things that are of edification one towards another.

20 Destroy not the work of God for meat. ^aAll things indeed are clean: but it is evil for that man who eateth through offence.

21 'It is good not to eat flesh, and not to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother is offended, or scandalized, or made weak.

22 Hast thou faith? Have it to thyself before God. Happy is he that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth.

23 But he, that discerneth, if he eat, is condemned: because not of faith. For all that is not of faith, is sin.

CHAP. XV.

He exhorts them to be all of one mind: and promises to come and see them.

NOW we that are stronger, ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.

2 Let every one of you please his neighbour unto good, to edification.

3 For Christ did not please himself, but as it is written: ^aThe reproaches of them that reproached thee, fell upon me.

4 For what things soever were written, were written

^a 1 Cor. viii. 11.—Titus i. 16.—1 Cor. viii. 13.—Ps. lxxviii. 10.

VER. 16. Let not then our good, or which we have a Christian liberty to do with a good conscience, be evil spoken of, because of the disputes and quarrels you have about it. Wi.

VER. 17. The kingdom of God is not meat, &c. It does not consist in eating, nor in abstaining, both which may be done without sin, but in justice, peace, &c. Wi.

VER. 20. Destroy not the work of God for meat. That is, do not hinder your brother's salvation, for whom, whoever he be, Christ died, who may be so offended at the liberty which you take, as to quit the Christian religion; or you may make him sin against God, by eating by your example against his weak conscience. Wi.

VER. 22. Hast thou faith? He doth not here mean, saith S. Chrys. a faith to believe divine truths. But art thou by faith persuaded in mind and conscience, that to eat meats formerly forbidden, is now lawful, have it within thyself, remain in this faith and conscience, but make it not appear, when it is prejudicial to thy weak brother.—Happy is he that condemneth not himself, that maketh not himself liable to condemnation, by giving scandal, by using that liberty, which he is convinced is allowed. Or happy is he that acteth not against his conscience, by doing what he sees is allowed of by others, but which his conscience tells him he ought not to do. Wi.

VER. 23. He that discerneth, or who judgeth that he ought to abstain from such meats, if he eat, is self-condemned, because he acts not according to his faith. For whatever a man doth, and is not according to what he believeth he may do, or whatever is against a man's conscience, is sinful in him. It is a mistake of the sense of this place, to pretend that every moral action done by an infidel must needs be a sin as when he gives an alms to relieve the necessities of the poor. Wi.—Discerneth. That is, distinguisheth between meats, and eateth against his conscience, what he deems unclean.—Of faith. By faith is here understood judgment and conscience: to act against which is always a sin. Ch.

* V. 1. Non in disceptationibus cogitationum, μη εις διακρίσεις διαλογισμῶν. Non in condemnationem rationum vel cogitationum.

† V. 22. Tu fidem habes? upon which S. Chrys. ἐμ κς. p. 209. ὁ τὴν περὶ δογμάτων (πίστιν) ἀλλὰ τὴν περὶ τῆς πρακτικῆς ὑποθέσεως

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. &c. We that are stronger, &c. The apostle goes on with his exhortation not to scandalize, or offend such as are weak, and not well instructed in faith. He brings the example of Christ, who pleased not himself, who submitted himself to the law of circumcision, when he was above the law, who bore with the weakness and sins of others, their reproaches, their blasphemies, which he could not but hate, but this to gain their souls. Wi.

for our instruction: that, through patience, and the comfort of the Scriptures, we might have hope.

5 Now the God of patience, and of comfort, *grant you to be of one mind one towards another, according to Jesus Christ.

6 That with one mind, and with one mouth, you may glorify God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ.

7 Wherefore receive one another, as Christ also hath received you to the honour of God.

8 For I say that Christ Jesus was minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made to the fathers.

9 But that the Gentiles are to glorify God for his mercy, as it is written: ^bTherefore will I confess to thee, O Lord, among the Gentiles, and will sing to thy name.

10 And again he saith: Rejoice, ye Gentiles, with his people.

11 And again: *Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles: and magnify him, all ye people.

12 And again Isaias saith: ^dThere shall be a root of Jesse: and he that shall rise up to rule the Gentiles, in him the Gentiles shall hope.

13 Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing: that you may abound in hope, and in the power of the Holy Ghost.

14 And I myself also, my brethren, am assured of you, that you also are full of love, replenished with all knowledge, so that you are able to admonish one another.

15 But I have written to you, brethren, more boldly in some sort, as putting you in mind: because of the grace which is given me from God, 16 That I should be the minister of Christ Jesus among the Gentiles; sanctifying the gospel of God, that the oblation of the Gentiles may be made acceptable, and sanctified in the Holy Ghost.

* 1 Cor. i. 10.—^b 2 Kings xxii. 50. Ps. xvii. 5.—^c Ps. cxvi. 1.

VER. 7. Receive one another, in the spirit of charity, peace, patience, as Christ also hath received you, and bore with your infirmities. Wi.—Mutually support each other for the glory of God: learn to practise a grand lesson of Christian morality, to bear and to forbear. A.

VER. 8. Christ Jesus was minister of the circumcision, who came both for the salvation of the Jews, and of the Gentiles, who preached and would have his gospel first preached to the Jews, for the truth of God to confirm the promises made to the fathers, that he, the Messiah, should be sent for their salvation, but at the same time also for the salvation and conversion of the Gentiles, which he confirms by divers evident testimonies of the holy Scriptures. Wi.—He calls our Saviour the minister of circumcision, that is, of the Jews, because he appeared amongst them, dwelt amongst them, and himself preached amongst them. This was a privilege which the Gentiles did not enjoy, having never seen, nor heard Jesus Christ, since he confined his preaching to the strayed sheep of the house of Israel; and this, to accomplish the promises made to their fathers. Calmet.

VER. 16. &c. I have written to you, brethren, more boldly, &c. S. Chrys. admires with what mildness he addresses himself to them, yet puts them in mind, that he is the minister, and the apostle of the Gentiles, in which he may have reason to glory, or boast.—Sanctifying the gospel of God, preaching it in a holy manner, that the Gentiles may be sanctified by it. Wi.—To be the minister of Jesus Christ among the nations, exercising in their regard the rite of sacrifice, as we read in the Greek, ἀποθυποῦν.—For I dare not, I shall forbear to speak of any thing but my labours; I need not mention the power of miracles and wonders, which the Holy Ghost hath done by me in many places, from Jerusalem to Illyricum, in places where Christ had not been preached by others. And now having no more place, nor occasion to preach in these countries, when I begin my journey to Spain, &c. by which, it appears, he designed at least to go into Spain. Wi.

VER. 20. S. Paul does not mean to say, that he never preached where the gospel had before been announced; this would not have been true, for he preached at Damascus, where there were already Christians, whom he formerly wished to take in chains to Jerusalem; and again in this epistle he announces the truths of the gospel to the Romans, already converted by the preaching of S. Peter.

(1498)

17 I have, therefore, glory in Christ Jesus towards God.

18 For I dare not speak of any of those things which Christ worketh not by me, for the obedience of the Gentiles, by word and by deeds, 19 By the virtue of signs and wonders, in the power of the Holy Ghost; so that from Jerusalem, round about as far as unto Illyricum, I have spread the gospel of Christ.

20 And I have so preached this gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation; but as it is written:

21 *They to whom he was not spoken of, shall see, and they that have not heard, shall understand.

22 For which cause also I was hindered very much from coming to you, and have been kept away till now.

23 But now having no more place in these countries, and having a great desire these many years past to come to you,

24 When I shall begin to take my journey into Spain, I hope that as I pass, I shall see you, and be brought on my way thither by you, if first, in part, I shall have enjoyed you.

25 But now I shall go to Jerusalem, to minister to the saints.

26 For it hath pleased them of Macedonia, and Achaia, to make some contribution for the poor saints who are in Jerusalem.

27 For it hath pleased them: and they are their debtors. *For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, they ought also in carnal things to minister to them.

28 When, therefore, I shall have accomplished this, and consigned to them this fruit, I will come by you into Spain.

29 And I know, that when I come to you, I shall come in the abundance of the blessing of the gospel of Christ.

^d Isai. xi. 10.—^e Isai. lii. 15.—^f 1 Cor. ix. 11.

But he means to say, that on these occasions he acts not as an apostle, whose office it is to preach to infidels; but as one that waters, confirms, comforts, as he says in the beginning of this epistle: and this he did as occasion offered, as the subsequent verses shew, where he tells us his design in calling on the Romans, in his journey to Spain. Estius.

VER. 24. It is a matter of dispute, whether S. Paul ever executed this his design of visiting Spain. The proofs of the Spaniards, who consider it as certain, are by no means unanswerable. There remain no certain monuments of this journey of his. The proof taken from the words of S. Clement, who lived at Rome in the time of S. Paul, is not certain, since he only says, that S. Paul came to the very extremities of the west. It is a subject on which commentators appear pretty equally divided. Calmet.—There is an old tradition that S. Paul, in his journey to Spain, left three of his disciples in Gaul; Trophimus at Arles, Crœcentius at Vienne, and Paul at Narbonne; but this very tradition is disputed. V.

VER. 25-28. But I shall go to Jerusalem, &c. By this S. Paul is thought to have written this epistle from Corinth, when he was about to set forward for Jerusalem, with the charities collected in Achaia and Macedonia, for the poor Christians in Judea. This he calls to minister to the poor saints, or to be serviceable to them. And to exhort others to the like charitable contributions, he says, (v. 27.) they are their debtors; that the converted Gentiles are debtors to the converts, who had been Jews, as having been made partakers of the promises, particularly made to the people of the Jews, and sharers of those spiritual blessings, which Christ promised to the Jews, but were also conferred upon the Gentiles. He looks upon it, therefore, reasonable, that they relieve the Jews in their temporal wants. The apostle says, he goes to consign to them this fruit, to deliver to them their contributions. Wi.

VER. 29. I know, by the Spirit of God revealing it to me, that God will give a blessing to my labours, when I come to you. That I may be delivered from the unbelievers in Judea, from the unbelieving Jews, foreseeing the persecutions he should there meet with. That I may be refreshed with you, have comfort by finding peace and union among you. Wi.

30 I beseech you, therefore, brethren, through our Lord Jesus Christ, and by the charity of the Holy Ghost, that you assist me in your prayers for me to God.

31 That I may be delivered from the unbelievers that are in Judea, and that the oblation of my service may be acceptable in Jerusalem to the saints;

32 That I may come to you with joy, by the will of God, and may be refreshed with you.

33 Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen.

CHAP. XVI.

He concludes with salutations, bidding them beware of all that should oppose the doctrine they had learnt.

AND I commend to you Phœbe, our sister, who is in the ministry of the church that is in Cenchrea:

2 That you receive her in the Lord, as becometh saints: and that you assist her in whatsoever business she shall have need of you. For she also hath assisted many, and myself also.

3 Salute, *Prisca, and Aquila, my helpers in Christ Jesus,

4 (Who have for my life laid down their own necks: to whom not I only give thanks, but also all the churches of the Gentiles)

5 And the church which is in their house. Salute Epænetus, my beloved, who is the first-fruits of Asia, in Christ.

6 Salute Mary, who hath laboured much among you.

7 Salute Andronicus, and Junias, my kinsmen and fellow-captives: who are of note among the apostles, who also were in Christ before me.

8 Salute Ampliatus, most beloved to me in the Lord.

9 Salute Urbanus, our helper in Christ Jesus, and Stachys, my beloved.

10 Salute Apelles, approved in Christ.

11 Salute them that are of Aristobulus' household. Salute Herodion, my kinsman. Salute them that are of Narcissus' household, who are in the Lord.

12 Salute Tryphæna, and Tryphosa, who labour in the Lord. Salute Persis, the dearly beloved, who hath much laboured in the Lord.

* Acts xviii. 2. and 26.

VER. 32. The word in the original signifies to combat with another, to teach us, that to beg the prayers of our friends will be of little assistance to us, if we do not join our prayer also, and labour, on our part, to the best of our power. Calmet.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. I commend, &c. He concludes with a number of salutations, to show his affection for them.—Phœbe, who is in the ministry, or employed in the ministry, as women, called diaconissæ, used to be, privately instructing catechumens, assisting particularly at the baptizing of women, distributing charities, &c. Wi.

VER. 4. It is not exactly known to what the apostle here refers. Orig. thinks that they delivered the apostle from the snares of the Jews. Others, that they exposed themselves for him in the sedition raised at Corinth, or in that at Ephesus, when he was in such danger, on account of the outcry of the silversmiths. The obligations of the Churches of the Gentiles towards them must be understood of the hospitality, which these faithful servants of Christ exercised to all. Calvet.—Τὸν ταυτῶν τράχηλον ἐκίθησαν, a proverbial expression, as in Latin, præbere cervices, caput obicere periculis, to support any thing, or person, that is in a sinking way, or in great danger.

VER. 5. This means the assembly of Christians, who probably resorted to the house of Prisca and Aquila, as to a place of retreat, and there held their religious assemblies. Or it may mean their family only, which was as regular and 13 Salute Rufus, elect in the Lord, and his mother and mine.

14 Salute Asyncritus, Phlegon, Hermas, Patrobas, Hermes, and the brethren who are with them.

15 Salute Philologus, and Julia, Nereus, and his sister, and Olympias: and all the saints who are with them.

16 Salute one another with a holy kiss. All the churches of Christ salute you.

17 Now I beseech you, brethren, to mark them who cause dissensions and offences, contrary to the doctrine which you have learned, and avoid them.

18 For they that are such, serve not Christ, our Lord, but their own belly: and by pleasing speeches, and good words, seduce the hearts of the innocent.

19 For your obedience is published in every place. I rejoice, therefore, in you. But I would have you to be wise in good, and simple in evil.

20 And may the God of peace crush Satan speedily under your feet. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you.

21 *Timothy, my fellow-labourer, saluteth you, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sosipater, my kinsmen.

22 I, Tertius, who wrote this epistle, salute you in the Lord.

23 Caius, my host, and the whole church, saluteth you. Erastus, the treasurer of the city, saluteth you, and Quartus, a brother.

24 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

25 Now to him that is able to establish you, according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery kept secret from eternity,

26 (Which now is made manifest by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the eternal God, for the obedience of faith) known among all nations,

27 To God, the only wise, through Jesus Christ, to whom be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen holy as an assembly of saints. The apostle, in another place, salutes the Church in the house of Nympha, and writing to Philemon, salutes the Church in his house. 1 Cor. xvi. 19.

† Acts xvi. 1.

VER. 16. Thus the primitive Christians expressed their concord and benevolence, as also their perfect equality. For it was customary with the Persians, and all oriental nations, to salute only their equals thus; though, to their inferiors, they presented their hand to be kissed. S. Clem. Pædog. and Polus.

VER. 17. The apostle does not here say that these men caused scandals, contrary to the Scripture; but contrary to the doctrine delivered to them: this place, therefore, is an argument in favour of tradition. Estius.

VER. 22. This Tertius was the amanuensis, or secretary of S. Paul, and wrote this epistle as S. Paul dictated. It is not on that account less divinely inspired than the rest. Estius.

VER. 25–27. Now to him that is able, &c. These three last verses, in diverse Greek copies, were found at the end of the 14th chapter, where we find them expounded by S. Chrysostom.—According to the . . . mystery kept secret from eternity, now made manifest; he means the mystery of Christ's incarnation, and man's redemption, formerly revealed indeed to the prophets, but now made known to all nations, in order to bring all men to the obedience of the gospel, by embracing the faith and doctrine of Christ. Wi.

THE FIRST

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,
TO THE CORINTHIANS.

CORINTH was the capital of Achaia, a very rich and populous city, where S. Paul had preached a year and a half, and converted a great many. See Acts xviii. 10. Now having received a letter from them, (c. vii. 1.) and being informed of divers disputes and divisions among them, (c. i. v. 11.) he wrote this letter to them, and sent it by the same persons, Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, who had brought him their letter, c. xvi. 17. It was written about the year 56, not from Philippi, as it is commonly marked at the end of the Greek copies, but rather from Ephesus. The subject and main design of this Epistle was to take away the divisions among them about the talents and merits of those who had baptized and preached to them, and to settle divers matters of ecclesiastical discipline. The apostle justifieth his mission, and his manner of preaching, c. i. ii. iii. iv. He teacheth them what was to be done with the man guilty of a scandalous sin of incest, c. v. He speaks of sins against chastity; of matrimony; and of the state of continency, c. vi. and vii. Of meats offered to idols, c. viii. Of his manner of conversing with them, and what their conversation ought to be, c. ix. and x. Of the holy sacrament of the Eucharist, c. xi. Of the different gifts of the Holy Ghost, and how to employ them, c. xii. xiii. and xiv. Of the faith of the resurrection, c. xv. Of charitable contributions, and of his design of coming again to them, c. xvi. Wi.—S. Paul having planted the faith in Corinth, where he had preached a year and a half, and converted a great many, went to Ephesus. After being there three years, he wrote this first Epistle to the Corinthians, and sent it by the same persons, Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, who had brought their letter to him. It was written about twenty-four years after our Lord's ascension, and contains several matters appertaining to faith and morals, and also to ecclesiastical discipline. Ch.

CHAP. I.

He reproveth their dissensions about their teachers: the world was to be saved by preaching of the cross, and not by human wisdom or eloquence.

PAUL, called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and Sosthenes, a brother,

2 To the church of God that is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be saints, with all that invoke the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, in every place of theirs and ours;

3 Grace to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I give thanks to my God always for you, for the grace of God, that is given you in Christ Jesus:

5 That in all things you are made rich in him, in all speaking, and in all knowledge:

6 As the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you:

7 So that nothing is wanting to you in any grace, waiting for the manifestation of our Lord Jesus Christ,

8 Who also will confirm you unto the end without crime, in the day of the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

* 1 Thess. v. 24.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Paul called to be an apostle. S. Paul had preached to the Corinthians, and had remained a long time with them, to instruct and confirm them in the faith. During his absence, the faithful of Corinth were divided into several parties, on occasion of some new teachers, who had come amongst them. Calmet.—It was to heal the wounds caused by these divisions, that the present epistle was written. S. Thom. A.—And Sosthenes. There are various conjectures made concerning the person S. Paul here mentions. Some are of opinion that this Sosthenes is the same mentioned, Acts xviii. 17. who was beaten before the tribunal of Gallio, proconsul of Achaia, when S. Paul was carried before that magistrate. Eusebius says, that Sosthenes was one of the 72 disciples, and a different person from the one mentioned in Acts. Estius takes him to be S. Paul's secretary. The common opinion is, that he was a great sufferer for the faith at Corinth, and S. Paul here mentions him as a man worthy their imitation. Calmet.

VER. 2. In every place of theirs and ours. Inasmuch as among Christians in all places there ought to be such an union in faith, and conformity of discipline, as if they were all in one place. Wi.

VER. 4. *That is given you in, or by Christ Jesus. Where we may take notice with S. Chrys. for the understanding of other places, that in, is many times put for by or through.

VER. 5. Rich in him in all knowledge. The apostles never addressed any epistle, except to persons who had been previously converted to the faith. Nor is it reasonable to expect, that infidel and pagan nations, merely by reading the inspired writings, will be able, by the light that is in them, to elicit from the said book the truths of religion. Would they not be tempted to worship the wily serpent, that succeeded in deceiving Eve? and how will they know that this serpent is the devil? A.

VER. 6. As the testimony of Christ, what Christ testified and taught was confirmed in you, that is, your faith in Christ hath been confirmed by those graces (1500)

9 *God is faithful: by whom you are called unto the fellowship of his Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord.

10 Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you all speak the same thing, and that there be no schisms among you: but that you be perfect in the same mind, and in the same judgment.

11 For it hath been signified unto me, my brethren, of you, by those who are of Chloe, that there are contentions among you.

12 Now this I say, that every one of you saith: I indeed am of Paul: and I am^b of Apollo: and I of Cephas: and I of Christ.

13 Is Christ divided? Was Paul crucified for you? or were you baptized in the name of Paul?

14 I give God thanks, that I baptized none of you, *but Crispus and Caius:

15 Lest any should say that you were baptized in my name.

16 And I baptized also the household of Stephanas: besides, I know not whether I baptized any other.

^b Acts xviii. 24.—^c Acts xviii. 8.

and gifts which you received from the Holy Ghost at your baptism, and when by imposition of hands you were confirmed by me, or some other bishop. Wi.

VER. 10. &c. That there be no schisms . . . contentions, &c. To hinder these, was the chief design of this letter; one saying, I am of Paul, &c. each party bragging of their master by whom they had been baptized, and made Christians. I am of Apollo, the eloquent preacher, and I of Cephas, the head of the apostles, and of the whole Church; whilst others, the only party not to be blamed, contented themselves with saying, and I am of Christ.—Is Christ divided? Is not your salvation, is not your justification in baptism, and all gifts from him? Wi.

VER. 11. Of Chloe. It is worthy our observation, that S. Paul does not here mention any one person in particular, lest he might expose any one to the resentment of the rest, but mentions only in general terms the house of Chloe. S. Chrys. Theophyl.

VER. 12. Chloe was a Christian woman of Corinth. Apollo is the person mentioned, Acts xviii. 24. &c. Cephas is S. Peter, so called in the Syriac tongue. V.

VER. 13. Was Paul crucified for you? Though says S. Aug. brothers may die for brothers, yet the blood of no martyr is shed for the remission of a brother's sin. See also S. Leo the Great, serm. xii. de pass. Dom.

VER. 14. I give God thanks that I baptized none of you, but, &c. It is strange that Quakers should from hence pretend, that S. Paul condemned baptism, when he only tells them, he is glad they were baptized by some other, rather than by him, lest they should say, they were baptized in his name, or think that baptism had a greater virtue, when given by a minister of greater sanctity; whereas it is Christ only, who is the chief minister, who gives grace in baptism, and in the other sacraments. This makes him say, was Paul crucified for you, &c. He tells them the occasion why he baptized few, because he was sent chiefly to preach, 17 For Christ sent me not to baptize, but to preach the gospel: *not in wisdom of speech, lest the cross of Christ should be made void.

18 For the word of the cross, to them indeed that perish, is foolishness; but to them who are saved, that is, to us, ^bit is the power of God.

19 For it is written: ^cI will destroy the wisdom of the wise: and the prudence of the prudent I will reject.

20 ^dWhere is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world?

21 For seeing that in the wisdom of God the world by wisdom knew not God: it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe.

22 For both the Jews require signs, and the Greeks seek after wisdom:

23 But we preach Christ crucified, to the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Gentiles, foolishness:

24 But to them that are called, both Jews, and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.

25 For the foolishness of God, is wiser than men: and the weakness of God, is stronger than men.

26 For see your vocation, brethren, that not many wise according to the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble:

* 2 Pet. i. 16. Infra ii. 1. and iv. 13.—^b Rom. i. 16.—^c Isai. xxix. 14.
^d Isai. xxxiii. 18.

and to be their apostle, whereas other inferior ministers were employed in baptizing. Wi.

VER. 17. &c. Not to baptize. That is, the first and principal intent, in my vocation to the apostleship, was to preach the gospel before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel. Acts c. ix. 15. To baptize is common to all, but to preach is peculiarly the function of an apostle. Est. Menoc. Grot.—I was sent to preach the gospel, not with wisdom of speech, and as he says in the next chapter, (v. 13.) not in the persuasive words of human wisdom, &c. The Spirit of God, which guided the thoughts and pen of S. Paul, and the other sacred writers, inspired them to deliver the gospel-truths with great simplicity, without the ornaments of an artificial human eloquence, lest the cross of Christ should be made void, lest the conversion of the world might be attributed to any human means, and not to the power of God, and of Christ crucified. Wi.

VER. 18. For the word of the cross. That is, the preaching that the Son of God, both God and man, died nailed to an infamous cross, is folly, is looked upon as ridiculous and incredible, by all obstinate unbelievers that perish: but it is received as the work of God, and an effect of his divine power, by such as are saved. Wi.

VER. 19-20. I will destroy the wisdom of the wise. I will confound the false and mistaken wisdom of the great and wise philosophers, of the learned doctors or scribes, of the curious searchers of the secrets of nature.—Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world, by the means he hath made use of to convert, and save the world, particularly by sending his only Son to die upon a cross? the preaching of which seems a folly, &c. only they who are called, believe Christ, though crucified, to be the power and the wisdom of God. Wi.

VER. 21. For seeing that in the wisdom of God, &c. That is, by the works of the divine wisdom, by the visible creatures of this world, and the effects of his providence, the world had not wisdom, or was not wise enough, to know and worship God, as they might, and ought to have done: it pleased God to shew his power by the foolishness of preaching, by sending illiterate men to preach a God crucified, which to human wisdom seems a folly, and to save men by this belief. Wi.—The gospel, which I announce to you, though it appears folly to the vain philosopher, is the wisdom of God; and whilst it exhibits the picture of a crucified God, and teaches us the mortification of our senses, promises a happiness in the next life, not to be found in this. Vat. Grot. Tir. Just.

VER. 22-25. The Jews, in the mean time, ask for miracles, such as God formerly wrought in their favour, and the Greeks, or the Gentiles, to be converted, expect from us, what they would look upon as the highest points of human wisdom and knowledge; for that which appeareth the foolishness of God, is wiser than men, and able to confound the highest human wisdom; and that which appeareth weakness of God, is stronger than men, who cannot hinder God from converting the world, by means and methods, that seem so disproportioned to this his design. Wi.—Foolishness. That is to say, what appears foolish to the world in the ways of God, is indeed most wise: and what appears weakness, is indeed above all the strength and comprehension of man. Ch.

VER. 26-28. Vocation, is here used for the called, as Rom. iii. 30. circumcision for the circumcised, (ibid. xi. 7.) election for the elected. V.—Consider your manner of being called; not many, hitherto, of those who have believed, or of those who have preached the gospel, are wise according to the flesh, or as to worldly wisdom; and in the esteem of men, not many mighty, not many noble. God

27 But the foolish things of the world hath God chosen, that he may confound the wise: and the weak things of the world hath God chosen, that he may confound the strong:

28 And the mean things of the world, and the things that are contemptible, hath God chosen, and the things that are not, that he might destroy the things that are:

29 That no flesh should glory in his sight.

30 But of him you are in Christ Jesus, who is made to us wisdom from God, ^aand justice, and sanctification, and redemption:

31 That, as it is written, ^bHe that glorieth, may glory in the Lord.

CHAP. II.

His preaching was not in loftiness of words: but in spirit and power. And the wisdom he taught was not to be understood by the worldly wise, or sensual man, but only by the spiritual man.

AND I, brethren, when I came to you, ^ccame not in loftiness of speech or of wisdom, declaring to you the testimony of Christ.

2 For I judged not myself to know any thing among you, but Jesus Christ, and him crucified.

3 ^dAnd I was with you in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling:

4 ^eAnd my speech, and my preaching was not in

^a Jer. xxv. 5.—^b Jer. ix. 23. and 24. 2 Cor. x. 17.—^c Supra i. 17.
^d Acts xviii. 8.—^e 2 Pet. i. 16.

hath chosen such as are looked upon as illiterate, without power, without riches, without human wisdom, to confound the great and wise men: He hath chosen the things that are not, that is, says S. Chrys. men reputed as nothing, of no consideration, to confound, to destroy, to make subject to him, and to the gospel men who had the greatest worldly advantages, that no flesh, no men how great wise, rich, or powerful soever, might glory in his sight, or attribute their call, and their salvation to their own merits.—From him you are in Christ Jesus brought to believe in him, who is made to us wisdom, acknowledged to be the wisdom of his eternal Father, by whom we have been justified, sanctified, redeemed. We have nothing of ourselves to boast of, and can only glory in the Lord. Wi.—And the mean things. In the beginning of Christianity, it was frequently objected to the Christians, that they had none but men of the basest extraction. The emperor Julian likewise made the Catholics the same reproach. Grot.—But this objection was not founded; for we find many persons of consideration mentioned in the Scriptures, who had embraced Christianity. Witness, v. 1. of this chap. Sosthenes, the head of the synagogue at Coriuth, and some in the very palace of Cæsar.

VER. 29. Glory in his sight. God wished it to be known, that the establishment of his Church was not the work of human wisdom or power, but of the omnipotent power of his divinity. Calmet.

We may here admire (v. 1.) the happiness of those who, like S. Paul, are called to the sacred ministry, not through human respects, nor by any influence of parents, but by the vocation of heaven.—V. 2. We have here the model and origin of all future pastoral letters.—V. 3. &c. he gives thanks to God for past favours, and prays for a continuation of graces and blessings.—V. 10. He begs that there be no schisms found among them, but that unanimity of sentiment and disposition may reign among them, certain and unequivocal marks of truth. V. 12. &c. He shews that both pastors and flocks should look up to God, as the only source of truth and grace; that it is a crying injustice to withdraw any share of our heart and confidence from God, to fix it on any thing that is not God; as it is to attach ourselves to the ministers of truth, and not to the Truth itself. Therefore, concludes S. Paul, though the Jews call for miracles, and the Gentiles lean upon worldly wisdom, Christians must seek their strength and success in the weakness of the cross, and their glory in the ignominy of Christ crucified, to whom alone be all the honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

* V. 4. In Christo Jesu, ἐν χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ. S. Chrys. δμ. β. ὅρα πῶς πολλὰ καὶ τὰ ἐν, ἀπὸ τοῦ δι' οὗ, ἐστιν.

CHAP. II. VER. 3. In weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling. We must not think, says S. Chrys. that this made the virtue of S. Paul less commendable. It is natural to every man to fear persecutions and torments. We admire the apostle, who amidst these fears, was always ready to expose himself was always fighting, and always victorious. Wi.—During the stay I made with you at Corinth, I saw myself daily exposed to injuries, affronts, and persecutions. I had then the opportunity of practising the lessons which our expiring Redeemer delivered to us from the wood on which he died, and the daily contradictions I met with obliged me to think of other things than fine discourses, and elegant harangues. Theophyl.

VER. 4. In the shewing of the spirit and power, &c. The gifts of the Holy Ghost (1501) the persuasive words of human wisdom, but in the shewing of the spirit and power :

5 That your faith might not stand on the wisdom of men, but on the power of God.

6 Howbeit, we speak wisdom among the perfect : yet not the wisdom of this world, neither of the princes of this world, who are destroyed :

7 But we speak the wisdom of God in a mystery, which is hidden, which God predestinated before the world, unto our glory,

8 Which none of the princes of this world knew : for if they had known it, they would never have crucified the Lord of glory.

9 But as it is written, *That eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, what things God hath prepared for them that love him :

10 But to us God hath revealed by his Spirit. For the Spirit searcheth all things, even the profound things of God.

11 For what man knoweth the things of a man, but the spirit of a man that is in him ? So the things also that are of God no man knoweth, but the Spirit of God.

12 Now we have received not the spirit of this world, but the Spirit that is of God, that we may know the things that are given us from God :

* Isai. lxi. 4.—b Supra i. 17. and ii. 1. and 4. 2 Pet. i. 16.

bestowed on those that believed, and the miracles which God wrought by his apostles, were the means God made use of to convert the world, which were of much greater force than human eloquence. Wi.

VER. 5. That your faith, &c. Had we employed the subtleties, the reasonings, and eloquence of man, some might perhaps be induced to believe that you had been seduced by artifice. But none can reasonably say so ; your faith is founded on the force and evidence of truth, and upon the virtue and power of the Holy Ghost, who has bestowed upon you both the light of knowledge, and the fire of love. Theod.

VER. 6. &c. Wisdom among the perfect. That is, when we first came amongst you, you were incapable of understanding the great mysteries of our religion : we therefore preached to you Christ crucified ; (Calmet) but to the true perfect disciples of Christ we reveal the most sacred mysteries. S. Chrys.—By wisdom, here seems to be understood a more sublime doctrine concerning the most abstruse mysteries of faith, which the ignorant could not understand. To the same purpose he tells them in the next chapter and in the 5th chapter to the Hebrews, that milk is the proper food of little children, not solid meat, which is proper for those that are perfect.—Yet we speak not the wisdom of this world, nor of the great men, and princes of this world, because the doctrine of the Christian faith, which we preached, is not esteemed wisdom, but folly by them, who pretended to worldly wisdom.—We speak then in a mystery, or after a mysterious manner, according to the capacity of those that hear us, the great wisdom of God, which hidden, and not understood by the wise men of this world, God hath manifested by the incarnation of his Son, and by our redemption ; which mystery, and which wisdom, none of the princes of this world knew, that is, the devils, according to the common interpretation ; or Pilate, Herod, Caiaphas, &c. according to S. Chrys. or they would never have crucified, nor have permitted others to crucify, the Lord of glory, Jesus Christ, who by his divine person is truly the Lord of glory. See S. Aug. l. i. de Trin. c. 12. &c. He may also be called the Lord of glory, because of that glory, which from eternity he predestinated, and decreed to give his elect ; and of which it is written, that the eye hath not seen, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. It appears from the gospel, that they suspected Jesus might be the Son of God ; but the major part of interpreters judge from this text, that they had not a certain knowledge. V.

VER. 10. But to us God hath revealed them by his Spirit ; these mysteries, and secrets of the divine wisdom.—For the Spirit searcheth all things : the divine Spirit, the Holy Ghost, searcheth all things, and none but this Spirit of God, that is, this Spirit, which is God, knoweth the things that are of God, as none but the spirit that is in man, knoweth the things of man, knoweth his thoughts and interior affections. But by the Spirit of God, we may understand the spirit of grace, of knowledge, of prophecy, which God hath given to his faithful, and particularly to his apostles, to raise them to a higher knowledge of the divine mysteries. Wi.

VER. 11. For what man ? As the secrets of man's heart are known only to himself, so the mysteries of the divinity are known only to the Spirit, who is God, and who proceedeth from the Father and the Son. Theophyl.

VER. 12. Which mysteries and divine truths, we apostles (even when we speak to the more perfect sort of men) deliver not in the learned words of human wisdom, not in fine language, studied periods and sentences arranged by the art of rhetoric, but in the doctrine of the Spirit, that is, as the Spirit of God within 13 ^b Which things also we speak, not in the learned words of human wisdom, but in the doctrine of the Spirit, comparing spiritual things with spiritual.

14 But the sensual man perceiveth not the things that are of the Spirit of God : for it is foolishness to him, and he cannot understand : because it is spiritually examined.

15 But the spiritual man judgeth all things : and he himself is judged by no one.

16 ^c For who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him ? But we have the mind of Christ.

CHAP. III.

They must not contend about their teachers, who are but God's ministers, and accountable to him. Their works shall be tried by fire.

AND I, brethren, could not speak to you as to spiritual, but as to carnal. As to little ones in Christ,

2 I gave you milk to drink, not meat : for you were not able as yet : but neither indeed are you now able : for you are yet carnal.

3 For, whereas, there is among you envying and contention ; are you not carnal, and walk according to man ?

4 For while one saith, I indeed am of Paul : and another, I am of Apollo : are you not men ? What then is Apollo, and what is Paul ?

^c Wisd. ix. 13. Isai. xl. 13. Rom. xi. 34.

us teacheth us for the good of those that hear us.—Comparing spiritual things with spiritual, that is, treating of spiritual things with persons that are more spiritual and more perfect, adapting our discourses to the capacity of those we speak to. Others will have the sense to be : we compare spiritual things with spiritual things, that is, we treat of such matters after a spiritual manner, with proofs and examples out of the revealed Scriptures, &c. Wi.—S. Paul seems in this place to answer an objection that might be brought against him. If, as you say, you are gifted with a knowledge of mysteries, why do you not reveal those mysteries to us ? To this he seems to answer, because to spiritual persons, we impart spiritual knowledge. Calmet.

VER. 14–15. But the sensual man, &c. They who are led away by sensual pleasures, do not even perceive or understand spiritual things ; they seem foolish to them, and a folly to seek after them ; because such things must be spiritually examined, that is, examined by the Spirit of God, which they have not.—But the spiritual man judgeth all things, passeth a right judgment, not only of the things of this life, as carnal men can do, but even of spiritual things, which concern his eternal salvation.—And he himself is judged by no one, that is, by no one, who is not spiritual, or who is not taught by the Spirit of God, to pass a right judgment : the sense also may be, that he cannot be justly blamed or condemned by any worldly man, who knows not how to judge of such spiritual things. Wi.—The sensual man is either he who is taken up with sensual pleasures, with carnal and worldly affections ; or he who measureth divine mysteries by natural reason, sense, and human wisdom only. Now such a man has little or no notion of the things of God. Whereas the spiritual man, in the mysteries of religion, takes not human sense for his guide ; but submits his judgment to the decisions of the Church, which he is commanded to hear and obey. For Christ hath promised to remain to the end of the world with his Church, and to direct her in all things by the Spirit of truth. Ch.

VER. 16. For who among the sensual men of the world, hath known the mind of the Lord, so as to be able to instruct him, or them, whom he guides by his spirit.—But we, whom he has chosen to be his apostles, have the mind of Christ ; having been taught and instructed by the Spirit of Christ. Some enthusiasts and fanatics pretend from this passage of S. Paul, that they being led and inspired by the spirit, can be judged by no one in matters of faith and religion. They pervert and wrest the words of S. Paul, as they do also other Scriptures, to their own perdition. 2 Pet. iii. 16. First, because no one knows by his pretended private spirit, that he is truly such a spiritual man, who has the Spirit of God in him ; and many have too much reason to know by their sensual carnal lives, that they have it not. Secondly, S. Paul here speaks only of spiritual men in opposition to sensual men, and only says that they who are spiritual, have the spirit of discretion to judge what things are spiritual, and what are not ; and that none can judge rightly of these matters, but they who are spiritual, guided by the Spirit. Thirdly, as to controversies about religion, the proper spiritual judges appointed by our Saviour, Christ, are the bishops, whom he has appointed to govern his Church, with an entire submission of every man's private judgment, and private spirit, to the judgment of the Catholic Church, which he has commanded us to hear and obey, with which he has promised to remain to the end of the world, and to direct her in all things by the spirit of truth. Wi.

CHAP. III. VER. 3. And walk according to man ? As carnal and sensual men, as long as there are jealousies and divisions among you. Wi.

5 The ministers of him whom you have believed: and to every one as the Lord hath given.

6 I have planted, Apollo watered: but God gave the increase.

7 Therefore neither he that planteth is any thing, nor he that watereth: but God who giveth the increase.

8 Now he who planteth, and he who watereth, are one. ^aAnd every man shall receive his own reward according to his own labour.

9 For we are God's coadjutors: you are God's husbandry, you are God's building.

10 According to the grace of God, that is given to me, as a wise architect, I have laid the foundation: and another buildeth thereon. But let every man take heed how he buildeth thereupon.

11 For no one can lay another foundation but that which is laid: which is Christ Jesus.

12 Now if any man build upon this foundation, gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble:

^a Psal. l. i. 18. Matt. xvi. 27. Rom. ii. 6. Gal. vi. 5.

VER. 7-8. *That planteth you by your first conversion. Apollo watered you by preaching the same truths.—He that planteth and watereth, are one, aim at one and the same end. Wi.—According to his own labour. God does not recompense his servants according to the success of their labours, because their success depends upon him alone; but he recompenses them according to their sufferings and diligence in his service; for, whilst he crowns the labour of his apostles with success, he crowns his own work. S. Chrys.—This text most evidently proves that good works proceeding from grace are meritorious, and that the rewards in heaven are different, according as God sees just to appropriate them. The Greek word here employed is misthos, (merces) or wages. See 1 Tim. v. 18. Apoc. xxii. 12. Matt. xvi. 27. It is by our union with Jesus Christ that our actions, of themselves without value or merit, become gold, silver, and precious stones. A.*

VER. 9. We are God's coadjutors, labouring in his service, as he hath employed us.—You are God's husbandry, the soil, where virtues are to be planted. You are God's building, the edifice, the house, or even the temple of God; we are employed as builders under God. Wi.

VER. 10. I have laid the foundation well, as a wise architect, not of myself, but according to the grace of God, and the gifts he bestowed upon me: and another, or several others, build upon it, continue the building.—But let every man take heed how he buildeth, and that it be always upon the same foundation, which is Christ Jesus, his faith, and his doctrine. Wi.

VER. 12-15. Now if any man build, &c. This is a hard place, says S. Aug. l. 3e fid. & Oper. c. xvi. tom. 6. p. 180. The interpreters are divided, as to the explanation and application of this metaphorical comparison, contained in these four verses. S. Paul speaks of a building, where it is evident, says S. Aug. that the foundation is Christ, or the faith of Christ, and his faith working by charity. The difficulties are 1. Who are the builders. 2. What is meant by gold, silver, precious stones, and what by wood, hay, stubble. 3. What is meant by the day of the Lord. 4. What by fire, how every one's work shall be tried, and how some shall be saved by fire. As to the first, by the builders, as S. Paul had before called himself the first architect, who had laid the foundation of the faith of Christ among the Corinthians, interpreters commonly understand those doctors and preachers who there succeeded S. Paul: but as it is also said, that every man's works shall be made manifest, S. Aug. and others understand not the preachers only, but all the faithful. As to the second difficulty, if by the builders we understand the preachers of the gospel, then by gold, silver, &c., is to be understood, good, sound, and profitable doctrine; and by wood, hay, stubble, a mixture of vain knowledge, empty flourishes, unprofitable discourses; but if all the faithful are builders, they whose actions are pure, lay gold upon the foundation; but if their actions are mixed with imperfections, venial failings, and lesser sins, these are represented by wood, hay, stubble, &c. 3. By the day of the Lord, is commonly understood either the day of general judgment, or the particular judgment, when every one is judged at his death, which sentence shall be confirmed again at the last day. 4. As to fire, which is mentioned thrice, if we consider what S. Paul says here of fire, he seems to use it in different significations, as he many times does other words. First, he tells us, (v. 13.) that the day of the Lord . . . shall be revealed; or, as it is in the Greek, is revealed in, or by fire; where, by fire, is commonly understood the just and severe judgments of God, represented by the metaphor of fire. Secondly, he tells us in the same verse, that fire shall try every one's work, of what sort it is. This may be again taken for the examining and trying fire of God's judgments; and may be applied to the builders, whether preachers only or all the faithful. Thirdly, he tells us, (v. 14. and 15.) that some men's works abide the fire of God's judgments, they deserve no punishment, they are like pure gold, which receives no prejudice from the fire: but some men's works burn, the superstructure, which they built upon the faith of Christ, besides gold, silver, precious stones, had also a mixture of wood, hay, stubble, which could not stand the trial of fire, which met with combustible matter, that deserved to be burnt. Every such man shall suffer a loss, when his works are burnt, but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire. Here the apostle speaks of fire in a more ample signification: of a fire which shall not only try, and examine, but also burn, and punish the builders, who notwithstanding shall also, after a time, escape from the fire, and be saved by fire, and in the day of the Lord, that is, after 13 Every man's work shall be manifest: for the day of the Lord shall declare it, because it shall be revealed in fire: and the fire shall try every man's work, of what sort it is.

14 If any man's work abide, which he hath built thereupon: he shall receive a reward.

15 If any man's work burn, he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire.

16 Know you not that you are the temple of God, and that the spirit of God dwelleth in you?

17 But if any man violate the temple of God: him shall God destroy. ^bFor the temple of God is holy, which you are.

18 Let no man deceive himself: if any man among you seem to be wise in this world, let him become a fool that he may be wise.

19 For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God. For it is written: ^cI will catch the wise in their own craftiness.

^b Infra vi. 19. 2 Cor. vi. 16.—^c Job v. 13.

life (for the time of this life is the day of men). Divers of the ancient fathers, as well as later interpreters, from these words, prove the Catholic doctrine of a purgatory, that is, that many Christians, who die guilty, not of heinous or mortal sins, but of lesser, and what are called venial sins, or to whom a temporal punishment for the sins they have committed, still remains due, before they can be admitted to a reward in heaven, (into which nothing defiled or unclean can enter) must suffer some punishments for a time, in some place, which is called Purgatory, and in such a manner, as is agreeable to the divine justice, before their reward in heaven. These words of the apostle, the Latin Fathers in the Council of Florence* brought against the Greeks to prove purgatory, to which the Greeks (who did not deny a purgatory, or a third place, where souls guilty of lesser sins were to suffer for a time) made answer, that these words of S. Paul were expounded by S. Chrys. and some of their Greek Fathers (which is true) of the wicked in hell, who are said to be saved by fire, inasmuch as they always subsist and continue in those flames, and are not destroyed by them: but this interpretation, as the Latin bishops replied, is not agreeable to the style of the holy Scriptures, in which, to be saved, both in the Greek and Latin, is expressed the salvation and happiness of souls in heaven. It may not be amiss to take notice that the Greeks, before they met with the Latins at Ferrara, or Florence, did not deny the Catholic doctrine of purgatory. They admitted a third place, where souls guilty of lesser sins, suffered for a time, till cleansed from such sins: they allowed that the souls there detained from the vision of God, might be assisted by the prayers of the faithful: they called this purgatory a place of darkness, of sorrow, of punishments, and pains, but they did not allow there a true and material fire, which the Council did not judge necessary to decide and define against them, as appears in the definition of the Council. Conc. Labb tom. xiii. p. 515. Wi.—The fire of which S. Paul here speaks, is the fire of purgatory, according to the Fathers, and all Catholic divines. Calmet.—S. Augustin, expounding Pa. xxxvii. v. 1. gives the proper distinction between this fire of purgatory and that of hell: both are punishments, one temporary, the other eternal; the latter to punish us in God's justice, the former to amend us in his mercy.

VER. 16-17. Know you not. After the apostle had described the builders who are employed in the spiritual edifice, he then proceeds to speak of the duties of those who are the living temples of Christ. As for you, my brethren, who are the temples of God, preserve yourselves in purity of faith, and innocence of morals. Fly from those false apostles who seek your ruin, and remain steadfast in that faith which you have received from us; (Calmet) that is, the one, holy, Catholic and apostolic faith. What a happiness for a faithful minister to assist in erecting and ornamenting the living temples of God; but what punishment must await the unfaithful minister, who by his own neglect and bad example, helps to ruin and destroy the temples God himself had entrusted to his care! A.—The Spirit of God dwelleth in you, having received the grace of God at your conversion: you are the holy temple of God: But if any one violate, or profane the temple of God, either by false doctrine, or by any grievous offence, he destroys the spiritual edifice, that was built in his soul upon the faith and grace of God. He cannot be said to be built any longer upon the same foundation: and therefore God will destroy such persons; they shall not be saved even by fire, or temporal punishments, but shall be excluded for ever from heaven, and condemned to eternal punishments. Wi.

VER. 18-21. Let no man deceive himself. He next precautions them against themselves, and admonishes them to be upon their guard against curiosity, presumption, and self-love, and tells them to undervalue all other sciences, when put in competition with the science of salvation, the knowledge of the gospel. It hence appears, that some of the Corinthians were renowned for that human eloquence which the world so much esteems, and accordingly the apostle discovers to them the danger to which they are exposing themselves, by pursuing their present line of conduct. Calmet.—If any man among you seem to be wise in this world. He hints at some new teachers among them, (not at Apollo) who to gain the esteem of men, had introduced errors from profane philosophy, or the false principles of human wisdom, which, as he had told them before, was folly in the sight of God. He therefore tells such persons, that to become truly wise, they 20 And again: *The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain.

21 Let no man, therefore, glory in men.

22 For all things are yours, whether it be Paul, or Apollo, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present, or things to come: for all are yours:

23 And you are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

CHAP. IV.

God's ministers are not to be judged. He reprehends their boasting of their preachers: and describes the treatment the apostles every where met with.

LET ^aa man so look upon us as the ministers of Christ, and the dispensers of the mysteries of God.

2 Here now it is required among the dispensers, that a man be found faithful.

3 But as to me, it is a thing of the least account to be judged by you, or by man's judgment: for neither do I judge myself.

4 For I am not conscious to myself of any thing: yet hereby I am not justified: but he that judgeth me is the Lord.

5 Therefore judge not before the time: until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels must become fools, by returning to the simplicity of the gospel-doctrine. Wi.—Let no man. That is, let no man say, I am for Paul, I am for Apollo. This language will introduce into the Church of God those various sects that existed amongst the philosophers, who were distinguished by the title of Platonics, Stoics, Peripatetics, and so on. Grotius.

* Ps. xciii. 11.—b 2 Cor. vi. 4.

VER. 22-23. All things are yours. Are ordained for your good. For this end, I, Apollo, and Cephas have been sent to promote your salvation. The world and all things in it are allowed you, are yours, that by making good use of them, you may save your souls: that death may be to you a passage to a happy eternity, that the things to come may be your eternal reward.—You are Christ's, you belong to him who hath redeemed you, and sanctified you by his grace: and Christ is God's, Christ as man, who being the Son of God, was made also man, and sent to make known the glory of God, his divine perfections of mercy, justice, &c.

* V. 15. In the Council of Florence, which began at Ferrara an. 1438. The Greeks at the very first declared they admitted a third place, where souls were punished for a time, which they called a place of darkness and sorrow. See Labb. tom. xiii. Con. p. 20. Græci fatentur pœnam temporaneam, quod peccatis obnoxiorum animæ in locum abeunt tenebriosum, in locum mœroris, in quo, ad tempus, versantur in mœrore & pœnis, eis tœpon εκδρεινον, και tœpon λυπη, και λυποῦνται περιως.—Again, Hæc est inter eos differentia: Græci pœnam, mœrorem, & pœnis locum asserunt, Itali pœnam, purgationemque per ignem. See again p. 491. Sess. 25. where the Greeks say of such souls, that they are in a middle state, medias autem esse in loco tormentorum, sed sive ignis sit, sive caligo, sive turbo, sive quid aliud, non contendimus. See also the definition of the Council, p. 515. where it is only defined, eorum animas pœnis purgatoriis post mortem purgari, & ut a pœnis hujusmodi releventur, prodesset vivorum suffragia, which was the doctrine both of the Greek and Latin Church. See on this place of S. Paul, Bellarm. lib. i. de Purgatorio, c. 5. Salmeron disp. 6. in 1. ad Corint. Estius, a Lapide, &c.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Mysteries of God. That is, the dogmas of faith, revealed by the Almighty. Estius.

VER. 3. Or by human judgment. Lit. by human day. The sense, says S. Jerom, is, by any human judgment, or by men, whose judgment is in the day, or time of this life: but God judges in his day, after this life, and chiefly at the last day of judgment.—Neither do I judge myself, so as to look upon myself absolutely certain of the state of my soul, or that I am for certain justified, though I am not conscious to myself of any thing, because I am to be judged by an omniscient God, the great searcher of hearts, who perhaps may discover faults, which I, partial to myself, overlook. Now if S. Paul durst not say, he was justified, what presumption is it for others to pretend to an absolute certainty, that they are just in the sight of God! Wi.

VER. 4. For I am not conscious. This great apostle of the Gentiles, though conscious to himself of no breach of duty, still does not dare to call himself just. How different is the conduct of this apostle, from those wicked impostors, who teach, that a man is justified by believing himself so. Est.—If this privileged apostle was afraid to form any judgment of his own heart and thoughts, whether they were pure or not, but left the trial thereof to the day of judgment, the day of his death, how presumptuous are they, who dare to pronounce on their election and predestination!

VER. 5. Judge not, &c. He gives them an admonition against rash and false judgments, and hints at those among them, who said, this man is better, this man is greater than such a one, &c. See S. Chrys. Wi.

VER. 6. These things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself, and to Apollo. Lit. these things have I transfigured in me and Apollo, that is, I have represented the divisions and disputes among you, as if it were by your contending, whether I, or Apollo, or Cephas were the best preachers, without naming those, as I might do, who are the true causes of those divisions, by striving who should be thought men of the greatest and brightest parts.—That in us, and by our example, who have no such proud disputes, you might learn that one be not puffed up against the other, and above that which is written, against the admonitions given in the holy Scriptures of being humble: or against what I have now written to you, that we must strive for nothing, but to be the faithful ministers of God, and not seek the esteem of men. Wi.—It is the opinion of S. Tho. Aqu. and likewise of Estius, that S. Paul, Apollo, and Cephas were not the real causes of the divisions that existed amongst the new converts at Corinth, but that in making use of these names, he wished to teach them, that if it was unlawful to keep up these divisions even for the sake of the apostles, how far should they be from doing any thing of this kind for those whose authority was much less in the Church. But Calmet is of opinion, that the divisions amongst the Corinthians were certainly on account of Paul, Apollo, Cephas, and perhaps some others, whose names are not mentioned.

6 But these things, brethren, I have in a figure transferred to myself and to Apollo, for your sakes: that in us you may learn, that one be not puffed up against the other for another, above that which is written.

7 For who distinguisheth thee? And what hast thou that thou hast not received? And if thou hast received, why dost thou glory as if thou hadst not received?

8 Now you are satiated, now you are become rich: you reign without us: and I would to God you did reign, that we also might reign with you.

9 For I think that God hath set forth us apostles the last, as men condemned to death: because we are made a spectacle to the world, and to Angels, and to men.

10 We are fools for Christ's sake, but you are wise in Christ: we are weak, but you are strong; you are honourable, but we without honour.

11 Even unto this hour we both hunger, and thirst, and are naked, and are buffeted, and have no fixed abode.

ing, whether I, or Apollo, or Cephas were the best preachers, without naming those, as I might do, who are the true causes of those divisions, by striving who should be thought men of the greatest and brightest parts.—That in us, and by our example, who have no such proud disputes, you might learn that one be not puffed up against the other, and above that which is written, against the admonitions given in the holy Scriptures of being humble: or against what I have now written to you, that we must strive for nothing, but to be the faithful ministers of God, and not seek the esteem of men. Wi.—It is the opinion of S. Tho. Aqu. and likewise of Estius, that S. Paul, Apollo, and Cephas were not the real causes of the divisions that existed amongst the new converts at Corinth, but that in making use of these names, he wished to teach them, that if it was unlawful to keep up these divisions even for the sake of the apostles, how far should they be from doing any thing of this kind for those whose authority was much less in the Church. But Calmet is of opinion, that the divisions amongst the Corinthians were certainly on account of Paul, Apollo, Cephas, and perhaps some others, whose names are not mentioned.

VER. 7. For who distinguisheth, or hath distinguished thee from another? He speaks particularly to those proud, vain preachers: if thou hast greater talents than another man, who hath given them to thee, or to any one, but God, who is the giver, and the author of every gift and perfection! This is not only true of the gift of preaching, but of all gifts and graces; so that S. Aug. makes use of it in several places against the Pelagians, to shew that it is by grace only, that one man is preferred before another, and not by, or for his own merits. Wi.

VER. 8. Now you are satiated, &c. You great, vain preachers, you are rich in every kind, blessed with all gifts, &c. You reign over the minds of the people, without us, you stand not in need of our assistance. And I would to God you did reign, that we also might reign with you. I wish your reigning and governing the people were well grounded on virtue and truth, that we might be sharers of the like happiness. S. Chrys. takes notice, that S. Paul speaks thus, meaning the contrary, by the figure, called irony: and so also S. Chrys. understands the two following verses, as if S. Paul only represented what those vain preachers said with contempt of him, as if he were only an apostle of an inferior rank, not one of the chief, nor of the twelve. And when he says, we are fools for Christ's sake, but you are wise: it is certain the apostles were not fools, nor these preachers whom he blames, wise, especially in Christ. But though the apostle partly use this figure of irony, intermixing it in his discourse, yet he also represents the condition of all true apostles, and preachers of Christ crucified, whose persons and doctrine were slighted, ridiculed, and laughed at by men that were wise only with worldly wisdom, especially by profane libertines, and atheistical men, that make a jest of all revealed religion. To go about preaching in hunger, in thirst, in nakedness, in want, under afflictions and persecutions, is what they think is to be miserable: they despise such men as the out-cast, the dregs,* and the dregs of mankind. (See the Greek text.) Wi.—He speaks to the Corinthians, who forgetting their first fervour, and the Christian modesty which S. Paul had taught them, both by word and example, were endeavouring to distinguish themselves by the reputation and honour of the apostle, who had converted them, by their antiquity of faith, and by other things more frivolous. Calm.

VER. 9. Made a spectacle. It is evident from the writings of S. Paul, and from innumerable other records, that the apostles were made a spectacle to the world and to men; but how, some one may perhaps ask, were they made a spectacle to angels? S. Chrys. Theod. and many others think, that the apostle is here speaking of the good angels, who behold with pleasure the labours and afflictions of the saints, knowing that it will prove a source of glory; but Estius, Vat. and some others, are of opinion, that the wicked angels are here spoken of who rejoice at the persecutions of God's servants, and wish to revenge themselves for the destruction of their empire.

12 *And we labour, working with our own hands: we are reviled, and we bless: we are persecuted, and we suffer it.

13 We are slandered, and we intreat: we are made as the refuse of this world, the off-scouring of all even till now.

14 I write not these things to confound you: but I admonish you as my dearest children:

15 For if you have ten thousand instructors in Christ, yet not many fathers. For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you by the gospel:

16 Wherefore, I beseech you, be ye followers of me, as I also am of Christ.

17 For this cause have I sent to you Timothy, who is my dearest son, and faithful in the Lord: who will put you in mind of my ways, which are in Christ Jesus, as I teach every where in every church.

18 Some are so puffed up, as though I would not come to you.

19 But I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will: and I will know, not the speech of them who are puffed up, but the power.

20 For the kingdom of God is not in speech, but in power.

21 What will you? shall I come to you with a rod; or in charity, and in the spirit of meekness?

CHAP. V.

He excommunicates the incestuous adulterer, and admonishes them to purge out the old leaven.

IT is heard for certain that there is fornication among you, *and such fornication, as the like is not among the heathens: that some one hath his father's wife.

2 And you are puffed up: and have not rather

* Acts xx. 84. 1 Thess. ii. 9. 2 Thess. iii. 8.

VER. 14-17. I write not. S. Paul here insinuates to the Corinthians, that they ought to blush with shame for neglecting the apostles, who had suffered so many hardships for them, to follow after teachers void of honour, and to glory in being called the disciples of such men. Estius.—I admonish you as my dearest children, of what is for your good, and I may take this liberty, as being your spiritual father in Christ, by whom you were first made Christians. Be ye followers of me, as I also am of Christ: follow the doctrine of Christ, which I follow, and taught you. Timothy, my beloved son in the Lord, whom I send to you, will put you in mind of what I teach, and of what I practise. Wi.

VER. 18. &c. Some of those new doctors and preachers are so puffed up, that they pretend I dare not come to you any more, nor defend myself: he may also mean the man that lived in incest, his companions and his flatterers.—But I will come to you shortly, and then I shall use my authority in taking notice of their vain talk, they shall find and experience that power, which God hath given me by the gifts of the Holy Ghost, and of working miracles. Wi.—But I will come. The good effect which this letter produced amongst the Corinthians retarded his intended journey, so that he did not go to Corinth till one or two years after this letter was written. He wrote his second epistle to the same before he paid them a visit, to apply a soothing remedy to their minds and hearts, sorely afflicted with his charitably severe corrections contained in this his first epistle. A.—What will you; or what disposition shall I find in you? let it not be necessary for me to use the chastising rod by excommunications, and other spiritual arms, but be so reformed before I come, that I may come to you in the spirit of mildness, as I wish to do. Wi.

* V. 8. Tanquam purgamenta, omnium peripsema, ut vesperabamur, Sordes, quisquilias, πάντων περίψημα, Scobes, ramentum. See Mr. Legh, Crit. Sacra.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. As the like is not among the heathens. This seems to have been the crime of incest, that he took the wife of his father yet living. See 2 Cor. vii. v. 12. Wi.—S. Chrysa. Theod. &c. think, that this incestuous person was one of the chiefs of the schism which then reigned at Corinth. This man, say they, was a great orator, with whose eloquence the Corinthians were enchanted, and therefore dissembled a knowledge of his crime, public as it was. The apostle having proved to them the vanity of all human learning, in the preceding chapter, now attacks the incestuous man, and exposes to their view the enormity of his crime. Calm.

VER. 2. You are puffed up, seem to be unconcerned, to take pride in it, instead of having the man separated from you. Wi.

mourned, that he might be taken away from among you, who hath done this deed.

3 *I indeed absent in body, but present in spirit, have already judged, as though I were present, him that hath so done,

4 In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, you being gathered together and my spirit, with the power of our Lord Jesus,

5 To deliver such a one to Satan for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

6 Your glorying is not good. *Know you not that a little leaven corrupteth the whole mass?

7 Purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new paste, as you are unleavened. For Christ, our Pasch, is sacrificed.

8 Therefore let us feast, not with the old leaven, nor with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth.

9 I wrote to you in an epistle, not to keep company with fornicators.

10 I mean not with the fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or the extortioners, or the servers of idols: otherwise you must needs go out of this world.

11 But now I have written to you, not to keep company: if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or a server of idols, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one not so much as to eat.

12 For what have I to do to judge them that are without? Do not you judge them that are within?

13 For them that are without, God will judge. Put away the evil one from among yourselves.

b Lev. xviii. 7. 8. and xx. 11.—c Coloss. ii. 5.—d Gal. v. 9.

VER. 3. &c. Have already judged, decreed, and do decree, being present in spirit with you, and with your congregation.—In the name . . . with the power of our Lord Jesus, to deliver such a one to Satan by a sentence of excommunication, depriving him of the sacraments, the prayers, and communion, and even of the conversation of the rest of the faithful. It is likely in those times, such excommunicated persons were delivered over to Satan, so as to be corporally tormented by the devil, to strike a terror into others. See S. Chrysa hom. xv. and this is said to be done for the destruction, or punishing of the flesh, that the spirit, or soul, may be saved. Wi.—It is the opinion of most of the Greek fathers, that this man was either really possessed by the devil, or at least struck with such a complaint as a mortification, and humiliation to his body, whilst it served to purify his soul. We have seen from many instances in holy Scripture, that it was not unusual, in the origin of Christianity, for persons who had fallen into crimes of this nature, to be punished with death, some grievous sickness, or by being possessed by the devil. But most divines are of opinion that this man was delivered over to the devil, so as to be separated from the communion of the Church. Amb. Est. Just. Menoc.

VER. 6-8. Your glorying is not good, when you suffer such a scandal among you: you have little reason to boast of your masters, or even of the gifts and graces you received. A little leaven corrupteth the whole mass; a public scandal, when not punished, is of dangerous consequence.—Purge out the old leaven. He alludes to the precept given to the Jews of having no leaven in their houses during the seven days of the Paschal feast. For our Pasch, i. e. Paschal lamb, Christ is sacrificed: and Christians, says S. Chrysa. must keep this feast continually, by always abstaining from the leaven of sin. Wi.

VER. 9. &c. I wrote to you in an epistle. If he does not mean what he has said already in this epistle, it must have been in some other, which he had written to them before, (as some conjecture) and which is not now extant.—Not to keep company with fornicators, nor with such like public scandalous sinners, not so much as to eat with them. But you must take notice, that I mean, when they are brethren, or Christians, not when they are infidels, for this cannot be avoided, especially by those who are to labour to convert them. This admonition of the apostle, shews us how much such persons are to blame, who by their carriage encourage, applaud, and are delighted with wicked company. Them who are without the pale and fold of the Church, the apostle leaves to the great judge of the living and the dead. Wi.

VER. 12. To judge them that are without. Those who are said by the apostle to be without, are those who have never been converted to the faith, and therefore are not within the jurisdiction of the Church.

CHAP. VI.

He blames them for going to law before unbelievers. Of sins that exclude from the kingdom of heaven. The evil of fornication.

DARE any of you, having a matter against another, go to law before the unjust, and not before the saints?

2 Know you not that the saints shall judge this world? And if the world shall be judged by you, are you unworthy to judge the smallest matters?

3 Know you not that we shall judge angels? how much more things of this world?

4 If therefore you have judgments about the things of this world: set them to judge, who are the most despised in the church.

5 I speak to your shame. Is it so that there is not among you any wise man that is able to judge between his brethren?

6 But brother goeth to law with brother: and that before unbelievers?

7 ^aAlready indeed there is plainly a fault among you, that you have law-suits one with another. Why do you not rather take the injury? why do you not rather suffer fraud?

8 But you do wrong and defraud: and that to your brethren.

9 Know you not that the unjust shall not possess the kingdom of God? Be not deceived: neither fornicators, nor idolaters, nor adulterers, 10 Nor the effeminate, nor sodomites, nor thieves, nor the covetous, nor drunkards, nor railers, nor extortioners, shall possess the kingdom of God.

^a Matt. v. 29. Luke vi. 29. Rom. xii. 17. 1 Thess. iv. 6.—^b Gen. ii. 24. Matt. xix. 5.

VER. 13. Take away. This passage is differently understood by commentators. By some it is understood thus: expel the evil one from among you, that is, the incontinent man. Estius.—By others, it is understood to be spoken in a general sense, meaning, take away the evil of sin from among you. Calmet.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. Go to law before the unjust. S. Paul here dissuades the new Christians from carrying their differences and causes about their temporal concerns before judges who were infidels, especially seeing the saints and the elect shall one day judge, that is, condemn all the wicked, and even the apostate angels, by approving the sentence which Christ shall pronounce against them at the day of judgment. Wi.—It was not unusual in the primitive ages, and even under Christian emperors, for the Catholics to refer their disputes to the bishop, and to abide by his decision, as Possidius informs us, in the life of S. Augustin. Est.

VER. 3. Judge angels? That is, the wicked angels, the devils. S. Tho. Aqu.

VER. 4-7. Set them to judge, who are the most despised in the Church. Rather make choice of Christians of lesser parts and talents, than have recourse to infidels, who will be scandalized at the injuries and injustice done by Christians to each other. Besides you cannot but have some wise men among you to decide such matters. Wi.—S. Paul does not here mean to tell the Corinthians that they must choose the most despised and the most ignorant, but he wishes to inform them that if there were none but men of this description in the Church, it would still be much more preferable to appoint these judges than to go to law before idolatrous judges. Estius.—It is plainly a fault, ^a weakness in you to run to such heathen judges: you should rather bear, and put up with the injuries done to you.—A fault. Law-suits can hardly ever be without a fault, on one side or the other; and oftentimes on both sides. Ch.

VER. 8-11. Defraud . . . your brethren. That is, you still make yourselves much more guilty by the injustices done to one another: for the unjust, and all they who are guilty of such crimes as I have mentioned, shall not possess the kingdom of God. And some of you were guilty of part of them, which have been washed off by your conversion, and your baptism, when you were justified. Wi.—And such some of you were. It is probable that this was added by the apostle, to soften his preceding words, lest he might seem to accuse all the Corinthians of each of these sins, and he likewise adds, such indeed you were, but now you are washed, &c. &c. Estius, S. Tho. Aqu.

VER. 12. All things are lawful to me. We cannot take the words in the obvious sense, S. Paul having just before declared, that unjust dealers, fornicators, drunkards, shall not possess the kingdom of God. Some expound the words, as if he said, I have free-will and liberty to do what I will. Others think that the apostle speaks not of all things in general, but with this or the like limitation, all things that are indifferent of their own nature, or all things that are not forbidden by the law of God, and this seems agreeable enough to what he had said of going to judges that were infidels, which, though not a thing unlawful in itself, was not expedient. It may also be connected with what follows of meats, to signify that in the new law any meats may be eaten;

(1506)

11 And such some of you were: but you are washed, but you are sanctified, but you are justified in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, and in the spirit of our God.

12 All things are lawful to me, but all things are not expedient. All things are lawful to me, but I will not be brought under the power of any.

13 The meat for the belly, and the belly for the meats: but God shall destroy both it and them: but the body is not for fornication, but for the Lord, and the Lord for the body.

14 Now God hath both raised up the Lord, and will raise us up also by his power.

15 Know you not, that your bodies are the members of Christ? shall I, then, taking the members of Christ, make them the members of a harlot? God forbid.

16 Or know you not, that he who adheres to a harlot, is made one body? ^bFor they shall be (saith he) two in one flesh.

17 But he who adheres to the Lord is one spirit.

18 Fly fornication. Every sin that a man doth, is without the body: but he that committeth fornication, sinneth against his own body.

19 Or know you not, ^cthat your members are the temple of the Holy Ghost, who is in you, whom you have from God, and you are not your own?

20 ^dFor you are bought with a great price. Glorify and bear God in your body.

CHAP. VII.

Lessons relating to marriage and celibacy. Virginity is preferable to a married state.

Mark x. 8. Eph. v. 31.—^c Supra iii. 17. 2 Cor. vi. 16.—^d Infra vii. 23. 1 Pet. i. 18.

(see c. viii.) but it may be expedient to abstain, when it would be a scandal to the weak.—But I will not be brought under the power of any. It does not appear by the Latin or Greek text, whether the construction be under the power of any person, or of any thing. There are divers interpretations; the most probable seems to be, that these words are again to be taken as connected with what went before, and with what follows, to wit, that though it be not unlawful in itself to go before judges that are infidels, or to eat any kind of meats, yet I will not permit my love of money, nor my sensual appetite, to make me a slave to such passions, so as to do things that are not convenient, much less to do things unlawful. Wi.—All things are lawful, &c. That is, all indifferent things are indeed lawful, inasmuch as they are not prohibited; but oftentimes they are not expedient; as in the case of law-suits, &c. And much less would it be expedient to be enslaved by an irregular affection to any thing, how indifferent soever. Ch.

VER. 13. &c. Meat for the belly. That is, meat is necessary for the support of nature, though this or that kind of meat be indifferent: and we ought to reflect, that God in a short time will destroy both the meats, and the appetite of eating, and the body shall shortly die, but it shall rise again.—Know you not that your bodies are the members of Christ . . . and the temple of the Holy Ghost. Man consists of soul and body; by baptism he is made a member of that same mystical body, the Church, of which Christ is the head: In baptism both the soul and body are consecrated to God: they are made the temple of the Holy Ghost, inasmuch as the spirit and grace of God inhabits in men, who are sanctified. Christ redeemed both our souls and bodies, both which he designs to sanctify, and to glorify hereafter in heaven; so that we must look upon both body and soul as belonging to Christ, and not as our own.—Shall I, then, taking the members of Christ, make them the members of an harlot, by a shameful and unlawful commerce?—Fly fornication. Such sins are chiefly to be avoided by flight, and by avoiding the occasions and temptations. Other sins are not committed by such an injury done to the body, but by an abuse of something else, that is different from the body, but by fornication and sins of uncleanness, the body itself is defiled and dishonoured, whereas the body ought to be considered as if it were not our own, being redeemed by our Saviour Christ, consecrated to him, with an expectation of a happy resurrection, and of being glorified in heaven. Endeavour, therefore, to glorify God in your body, by employing it in his service, and bear him in your body by being obedient to his will. Wi.—We know and we believe that we carry about Jesus Christ in our bodies, but it is the shame and condemnation of a Christian to live as if he neither knew nor believed it. If fornication is a great crime in a pagan, in a Christian it is a species of sacrilege, accompanied with injustice and ingratitude. Whoever yields to impurity, converts his body into the temple of Satan, glorifies and carries him about, tearing away the members of Jesus Christ, to make them the members of a harlot.

^a V. 7. Omnino delictum est, ἥρπαια, a diminutive, from ἥρως minus, a fall ing, a weakness, a fault.

NOW concerning the things, whereof you wrote to me: It is good for a man not to touch a woman:

2 But because of fornication, let every man have his own wife, and let every woman have her own husband.

3 *Let the husband render the debt to his wife: and the wife also in like manner to the husband.

4 The wife hath not power over her own body; but the husband. And in like manner the husband also hath not power over his own body; but the wife.

5 Defraud not one another, unless, perhaps, by consent, for a time, that you may give yourselves to prayer: and return together again, lest Satan tempt you for your incontinency.

6 But I speak this by indulgence, not by commandment.

7 For I would that all men were even as myself: but every one hath his proper gift from God; one after this manner, and another after that.

8 But I say to the unmarried, and to the widows: it is good for them if they so continue, even as I.

9 But if they do not contain themselves, let them marry: for it is better to marry than to burn.

* 1 Pet. iii. 7.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Now concerning. The heads of the Church of Corinth had written to S. Paul, desiring to know whether he thought it more expedient to marry or not. This was a question which the sages of antiquity had frequently taken into consideration. To this question S. Paul here delivers his opinion. Calmet.—Others, with greater probability, suppose the chief question proposed to S. Paul was, whether they were not bound, upon their conversion, to abstain from their infidel wives. S. Jer. cont. Jovin. c. iv. S. Chrys. in hunc. locum. hom. xix.—To this he answers in v. 12. and 13.—It is good. That is, according to the style of the Scriptures, it is better, if we consider the advantage of every particular, &c. Wi.

VER. 2. &c. *But because of fornication, let every man have, and live with his own wife, and not leave her, nor dismiss her. Take notice, that S. Paul speaks these words to those that are already married, and speaks not of the unmarried till the 8th verse. He does not then here exhort every one to marry, but admonishes married persons to live together, and not to refuse the marriage duty, which neither the husband nor the wife can do without mutual consent, because of the marriage engagement. Yet he advises them to abstain sometimes from what they may lawfully do, that they may give themselves to prayer,† and as it is added in the common Greek copies, to fasting. S. Chrys. observes, that the words of S. Paul, are not only, that they may pray, (which no day must be omitted) but that they may give themselves to prayer, that is, may be better disposed and prepared for prayer, contemplation, and for receiving the holy Sacrament, as we find the priests even of the ancient law, were to abstain from their wives, when they were employed in the functions of their ministry. But such kind of advice is not relaxed by all that pretend to be reformers. And return together again... yet I speak this by way of indulgence, of what is allowed to married persons, and not commanded them, unless when one of the married couple is not willing to abstain. Wi.

VER. 6. By indulgence. That is, by a condescension to your weakness. Ch. VER. 7-8. I would, or I could wish you all were even as myself, and as it is said in the next verse, to continue unmarried as I do. From hence it is evident, that S. Paul was not then married, who according to the opinion of the ancient fathers, was never married. But when the apostle says, I would this as to you all, he only signifies what could be wished for, the particular good of every one considered as a particular person, but what cannot be hoped for, considering the state of mankind in general, and the temptations, and frailty of men.—But every one hath his proper gift from God, so that some prudently embrace a single life, and also make a religious vow of always living so, as it has been practised by a great number both of men and women in all ages, ever since Christ's time. Others have not this more perfect gift: they find themselves not disposed to lead, or vow a single life, they marry lawfully: it is better to marry than to burn, or be burnt by violent temptations of concupiscence, by which they do not contain themselves from disorders of that kind. It is against both the Latin and Greek text to translate, they cannot contain themselves, as in the Prot. and Mr. N... 's translation. Dr. Wells, in his paraphrase, gives the sense of this place in these words: The inconveniences of marriage are to be undergone, rather than such sinful imaginations, or practices, as arise from the flames of an ungovernable lust. They therefore that are unmarried or widows, (to whom S. Paul speaks in these two verses) may have recourse to marriage as a remedy. But let it be observed, that when S. Paul allows of marriage, he speaks not of those who have already made a vow of living always a single life. Vows made to God must be kept. Pa. lxxv. 12. Eccl. v. 3. And S. Paul expressly says of such persons, who have made a vow of perpetual continency, and afterwards marry, that they incur damnation, because they violate their first faith, or vow made to God. See 1 Tim. v. 12. This saying, therefore, it is better to marry than to burn, cannot justify the sacrilegious marriages of priests, or of any others who were under such vows. There are other remedies which they are bound to make use of, and by

10 But to them that are married, not I but the Lord commandeth, ^bthat the wife depart not from her husband:

11 And if she depart, that she remain unmarried, or be reconciled to her husband. And let not the husband put away his wife.

12 For to the rest I speak, not the Lord. If any brother have a wife that believeth not, and she consent to dwell with him; let him not put her away.

13 And if any woman have a husband that believeth not; and he consent to dwell with her; let her not put away her husband.

14 For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the believing wife; and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the believing husband: otherwise your children should be unclean; but now they are holy.

15 But if the unbeliever depart, let him depart. For a brother or sister is not under bondage in such cases: but God hath called us in peace.

16 For how knowest thou, O wife, whether thou shalt save thy husband? Or how knowest thou, O man, whether thou shalt save thy wife?

^b Matt. v. 32. and xix. 9. Mark x. 9. Luke xvi. 18.

which they may obtain the gift of continency and chastity. They must ask this gift by fervent prayers to God, who gives a good spirit to them that ask it. Luke xi. 15. They must join fasting, alms, and the practice of self-denials, so often recommended in the gospel. See the annotations on Mat. xix. The like remedies, and no others, must they use, who being already in wedlock, are under such violent temptations, that they are continually in danger of violating, or do violate the chastity of the marriage-bed. For example, when married persons are divorced from bed and board, when long absent from one another, when sick and disabled, when one has an inveterate aversion to the other: they cannot marry another, but they can, and must use other remedies. Wi.

VER. 9. If they do not contain. This is spoken of such as are free; and not of such as by vow have given their first faith to God; to whom, if they will use proper means to obtain it, God will never refuse the gift of continency. Some translators have corrupted this text, by rendering it, if they cannot contain. Ch.

VER. 10. But to them that are married, &c. He tells these persons, that they ought not to part, or if a separation for weighty reasons can be allowed, neither party can marry another. Wi.—That the wife. Jesus Christ has expressly declared, that in one case only a divorce may be allowable, and that is in the case of adultery. Est.

VER. 12-17. For to the rest, &c. This was a case entirely new, which the wisdom of the apostle regulates according to the laws of charity. Tertul. thinks that some of the faithful, who had been converted from paganism, did not esteem it lawful to live any longer with their wives, who were yet buried in the superstitions of idolatry, which scruples S. Paul answers, guided as he was, by the particular lights of the Holy Ghost. Calmet.—Not the Lord. That is, it is the command of the Lord, for such even as are separated, not to marry to another, but when I advised the unmarried not to marry, this is a counsel, or advice, not a divine precept, which doctrine he repeats again before the end of this chap. v. 25. 28. 39.—If any brother have a wife that believeth not, &c. S. Paul speaks of two that were joined by a contract of marriage, when both of them were infidels, and that one of them is converted to the Christian faith: we do not read of any precept that Christ gave, as to those marriages, but the apostle seems to order by his apostolical authority, that they continue man and wife, unless the party that remains still an infidel, will needs depart; then, says the apostle, let such an one depart. There is also another case, to wit, when the man or woman remaining an infidel, will not live without continual injuries and blasphemies against God and the Catholic religion, so that there can be no peace on that account betwixt them. In these two cases, according to the canons of the Church, it is looked upon as no marriage, so that the party converted may marry another. And this seems grounded on the reason, which the apostle here gave, that God hath called us in peace. Wi.

VER. 14-16. Is sanctified. The meaning is not that the faith of the husband, or the wife is of itself sufficient to put the unbelieving party, or their children, in the state of grace and salvation: but that it is very often an occasion of their sanctification, by bringing them to the true faith. Ch.—Sanctification which has different significations, cannot here signify that an infidel is truly and properly sanctified, or justified, by being married to a faithful believer; therefore we can only understand an improper sanctification, so that such an infidel, though not yet converted, need not be looked upon as unclean, but in the dispositions of being converted, especially living peaceably together, and consenting that their children be baptized, by which they are truly sanctified.—How knowest thou, O wife? &c. These words seem to give the reason, why they may part, when they cannot live peaceably, and when there is little prospect that the party that is an infidel will be converted. Wi.

VER. 17. &c. But as the Lord hath distributed, &c. and called every one, &c. S. Paul proceeds to other points of discipline, that persons converted may remain and continue in the same employments, and lawful state of life as before 17 But as the Lord hath distributed to every one, as God hath called every one, so let him walk: and so I teach in all churches.

18 Is any man called, being circumcised? let him not procure uncircumcision. Is any man called in uncircumcision? let him not be circumcised.

19 Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing: but the observance of the commandments of God.

20 *Let every man abide in the same calling in which he was called.

21 Art thou called, being a bond-man? care not for it: but if thou mayest be made free, use it rather.

22 For he that is called in the Lord, being a bond-man, is the freeman of the Lord. Likewise he that is called, being free, is the bond-man of Christ.

23 ^b You are bought with a price, be not made the bond-slaves of men.

24 Brethren, let every man wherein he was called, therein abide with God.

25 Now concerning virgins, I have no commandment of the Lord: but I give counsel, as having obtained mercy of the Lord, to be faithful.

26 I think, therefore, that this is good for the present necessity, that it is good for a man so to be.

27 Art thou bound to a wife? seek not to be loosed. Art thou loosed from a wife? seek not a wife.

28 But if thou take a wife, thou hast not sinned. And if a virgin marry, she hath not sinned: nevertheless, such shall have tribulation of the flesh. But I spare you.

29 This, therefore, I say, brethren: the time is short: it remaineth, that they also who have wives, be as if they had none:

30 And they who weep, as though they wept not: and they who rejoice, as if they rejoiced not: and they who buy, as if they possessed not:

31 And they who use this world, as if they used it not: for the figure of this world passeth away.

* Ephes. iv. 1.—^b Supra vi. 20. 1 Pet. i. 18.

that it is nothing to the purpose, whether before his conversion he was a circumcised Jew, or an uncircumcised Gentile, circumcision being no longer of obligation in the new law. If any one that is converted was a bond-man, or a slave, let him not be concerned at this, but use it rather, § which many interpret, let him rather endeavour to be made free, though S. Chrys. and others understand, let him rather remain content with his servile condition. Perhaps it was an admonition to those new converts, who might imagine that their Christian liberty exempted them from being servants to men. However, he gives them this great comfort, that such an one is the Lord's free-man, that is, whoever is a Christian, and in the grace of God; but he adds, let him not be a slave to men, that is, not follow their sinful ways, nor consent to any thing that is criminal. Wi.—All consists in doing the will of God, by loving him with our whole heart; without this, all is illusion. To attach ourselves to exterior practices contrary to the order of God, is the superstition of circumcision; to despise what comes from God, is the pride of uncircumcision.

VER. 23. With a price. Viz. with the price of the precious blood of Christ. Est.—Him only should we serve, for whatever draws us from this allegiance, is perfect servitude, such as the love of any person or thing out of God.

VER. 25–28. Now concerning virgins, &c. He turns his discourse again to the unmarried, who (if they have made no vow) may lawfully marry, though he is far from commanding every one to marry, as when he says, seek not a wife. And such shall have tribulation of the flesh, cares, troubles, vexations in the state of marriage, but I spare you, I leave you to your liberty of marrying, or not marrying, and will not discourage you by setting forth the crosses of a married life. Wi.

VER. 29. The time is short, &c. Incomparable instructions to the end of this chapter, which are not obscure. Wi.

VER. 30. And they who weep. In this passage the apostle teaches us, in the midst of our greatest afflictions not to suffer ourselves to be overwhelmed with grief, but to recollect that the time of this life is short, and that temporary pains will be recompensed with the never-fading joys of eternity. Est.

32 But I would have you to be without solicitude. He that is without a wife, is solicitous for the things that belong to the Lord, how he may please God.

33 But he that is with a wife, is solicitous for the things of the world, how he may please his wife: and he is divided.

34 And the unmarried woman and the virgin thinketh on the things of the Lord, that she may be holy both in body and spirit. But she that is married thinketh on the things of the world, how she may please her husband.

35 And this I speak for your profit: not to cast a snare upon you, but for that which is decent, and which may give you power, to attend upon the Lord, without impediment.

36 But if any man think that he seemeth dishonoured with regard to his virgin, for that she is above the age, and it must be so: let him do what he will: he sinneth not, if she marry.

37 For he that hath determined being steadfast in his heart, having no necessity, but having power of his own will; and hath judged this in his heart, to keep his virgin, doth well.

38 Therefore both he that giveth his virgin in marriage, doth well: and he that giveth her not, doth better.

39 *A woman is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth: but if her husband die, she is at liberty: let her marry whom she will: only in the Lord:

40 But more blessed shall she be, if she so remain according to my counsel: and I think that I also have the spirit of God.

CHAP. VIII.

Though an idol be nothing, yet things offered up to idols are not to be eaten, for fear of scandal.

NOW concerning those things that are sacrificed to idols, we know that we all have knowledge. Knowledge puffeth up; but charity edifieth.

* Rom. vii. 2.

VER. 33. It is far easier to give our whole heart and application without any the least reserve to God, than to divide them without injustice.

VER. 36. Let him do what he will, he sinneth not, &c. The meaning is not as libertines would have it, that persons may do what they will, and not sin; provided they afterwards marry: but that the father with regard to the giving his virgin in marriage, may do as he pleaseth: and that it will be no sin to him if she marry. Ch.

VER. 38. &c. He that giveth her not, doth better. And more blessed shall she be, if she so remain, according to my counsel. It is very strange if any one, who reads this chapter without prejudices, does not clearly see, that S. Paul advises, and prefers the state of virginity to that of a married life.—I think that I also have the spirit of God. He puts them in mind, by this modest way of speaking, of what they cannot doubt of, as to so great an apostle. Wi.—It is worthy our notice, that S. Paul on every occasion avoids the least appearance of vanity, and frequently when delivering his own opinion, gives us only a hint, hoping that we shall supply the rest. Of this apostle's modesty in this particular, we have many instances in his writings, as in v. 26. "I think, therefore, that this is good;" and likewise chap. iv. v. 9. "For I think that God." Estius.

* V. 2. Suam uxorem, suam virum, ἑαυτοῦ γυναῖκα, τὸν ἑἰον ἄνδρα.

† V. 5. Ut vacetis orationi, ἵνα σχολάζητε τῇ προσευχῇ. S. Chrys. οὕτως ἀπλῶς προειπέτω.

‡ V. 17. Nisi, &c. εἰ μὴ, it bears the sense here of but.

§ V. 21. Magis utere, μάλλον χρῆσαι. S. Chrys. says, ταυτέτι μάλλον δοῦλας.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Now concerning those things. It appears from this whole passage that the Corinthians had, in a former letter, consulted this apostle, upon the subject of eating meats offered to idols. It was not unusual to reserve some part of the sacrifice of which they made a supper, either in their own family, with their friends, or sometimes even in the temple. Some of the Christians of Corinth attended without scruple at these sorts of feasts.

2 And if any man think that he knoweth any thing, he hath not yet known, as he ought to know.

3 But if any man love God, the same is known by him.

4 But as for the meats that are offered in sacrifice to idols, we know that an idol is nothing in the world, and that there is no God but one.

5 For though there be that are called gods, either in heaven or on earth (for there are many gods, and many lords);

6 Yet to us there is but one God, the Father; of whom are all things, and we unto him: and one Lord Jesus Christ: by whom are all things, and we by him.

7 But the knowledge is not in all. For some until this present with a conscience of the idol, eat as a thing sacrificed to an idol: and their conscience, being weak, is defiled.

8 But meat doth not commend us to God. For neither, if we eat, shall we have the more: nor, if we eat not, shall we have the less.

and eat of the meats offered to the idols; whilst others, on the contrary, took scandal at this conduct, and thought it a tacit approbation of idolatry. S. Paul being consulted upon this difficulty, gives them his advice in this chapter. Calmet.—We know that we all have knowledge about it. That is, all we, who are sufficiently instructed, have knowledge enough to be convinced, that idols are nothing in themselves, nor the meats offered to them better nor worse upon that account. Wi.—Knowledge puffeth up, &c. Knowledge, without charity and humility, serveth only to puff persons up. Ch.

VER. 4. An idol is nothing. The apostle seems to allude in this place to the Greek signification of this word, idōlon, signifying a false representation; as for instance in ghosts, which are said to appear sometimes at night. Umbra tenues, simulacra luce carentium. Calmet.

VER. 5. Many gods, &c. Reputed for such among the heathens. Ch.

VER. 6. To us there is but one God, the Father; of whom are all things, and we unto him. Of or from the Father are all things, even the eternal Son and the Holy Ghost, though they are one and the same God with the Father.—And one Lord Jesus Christ: by whom are all things, and we by him. All things were created by the Son of God, the eternal and uncreated wisdom of the Father, from whom he proceeds from eternity, and also by the Holy Ghost, all creatures being equally the work of the three divine persons. The Arians and Socinians pretend from this place, that only the Father is truly and properly God. The Catholics answer, that he is called the God, of whom all, because from him always proceeded, do proceed, and shall always proceed the Son and the Holy Ghost, though one and the same God in nature, substance, &c. And that when he is called the one God, by these words are excluded the false gods of the heathens, not the Son, and the Holy Ghost, who are but one God with the Father. S. Chrys. also here observes, (hom. xx.) that if the two other persons are excluded, because the Father is called one God, by the same way of reasoning it would follow, that because Jesus Christ is called the one Lord, neither the Holy Ghost, nor even the Father, are the one Lord, whereas the Scriptures many times express the divine majesty, as well by the word Lord as by the word God. Wi.

VER. 7. But knowledge is not in every one, &c. The new converts, who had been Jews, thought that things which had been offered to idols were defiled, unclean, and could not be lawfully eaten: they who had been Gentiles looked upon them as victims offered to idols, in which there was some virtue of enchantment, &c. Their weak consciences judged they could not be lawfully eaten: and when they were induced to eat them by the example of others, it was still against their consciences. The infidels also might sometimes think that the Christians, in eating such things, honoured their idols; in such cases, they who were better instructed, were to abstain, not to give offence to weak consciences, and lest they should make them sin. And a weak brother shall perish, for whom Christ died; where we may learn, that Christ died also for those that shall perish, and not only for the predestinate. Wi.

VER. 8-9. Meat doth not commend us to God. It is an admonition to those, who because they knew that meats offered to idols were not worse, would not abstain, even when this scandalized the weak brethren: he tells them that eating or not eating of them, does not make them more acceptable to God, nor puts them to any inconvenience, since they may get other meats: therefore they ought not to make use of their liberty, when it proves a stumbling-block to the weak, and makes them sin. Wi.

VER. 10. *In the idol's temple. It does not seem likely that any Christians would go to eat with idolaters in their very temples, of things offered to their idols: so that we may rather understand any place where infidels and Christians eat together, and where it happened that some meats were brought which had been first offered to idols, which the well-instructed Christians regarded not, nor asked any questions about, but the weak scrupled to eat them. Wi.—Shall not his conscience. The meaning of S. Paul's words is this: Will not your weak brother, who is not endowed with so great a knowledge as you, be induced, from your example, to eat these meats offered to idols, believing that he will derive therefrom some benefit. Estius.

VER. 13. If meat scandalize. That is, if my eating cause my brother to 9 But take heed, lest perhaps this your liberty become a stumbling-block to the weak

10 For if a man see him that hath knowledge, sit at meat in the idol's temple; shall not his conscience, being weak, be emboldened to eat those things which are sacrificed to idols?

11 *And through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?

12 Now when you sin thus against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, you sin against Christ.

13 ^bWherefore, if meat scandalize my brother, I will never eat flesh, lest I should scandalize my brother.

CHAP. IX.

The apostle did not make use of his power, of being maintained at the charges of those to whom he preached, that he might give no hindrance to the gospel. Of running in the race, and striving for the mastery,

Am not I free? Am not I an apostle? Have not I seen Christ Jesus, our Lord? Are not you my work in the Lord?

^a Rom. xiv. 15.—^b Rom. xiv. 21.

sin. Ch.—Can we put any meat, or life itself, in competition with a soul, and the blood of Christ, which has been shed for that soul, when we know the value of each!

* V. 10. In idolo, ἐν εἰδωλείῳ. Though the Greek word may sometimes be used to signify the temple itself of idols, yet it may in general signify a place, or thing some ways belong to idols. See Estius, P. Alemin, &c.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. &c. Am not I free? The apostle in this place wishes to teach the Corinthians, how careful and solicitous they should be not to give cause for scandal to their neighbour, and how anxious for his spiritual welfare, informing them, that as he refused to take even what he had a just right to, as a minister of the altar, that is, to live by the altar, so they must do in like manner, abstaining even from things lawful, for the good of religion. Estius.—Am not I an apostle? &c. S. Paul here, to the 20th verse, answers those reflections, which the new preachers at Corinth made against him and Barnaby, as if they were only an inferior kind of apostles. To this he answers, that he had seen Jesus Christ, who appeared to him. He tells the Corinthians, that they at least, ought to respect him as their apostle, who had converted them. He tells them, that when any persons ask about his apostleship, he has this to say for himself, that he not only laboured as an apostle in converting them, but also laboured without taking of them what might supply him and his companions with necessities, as to meat and drink. He insists upon this particular circumstance, to shew he did not preach Christ for gain-sake; and at the same time brings seven or eight proofs to shew that he, and all who preach the gospel, have a power and a right to be maintained with necessities by them, to whom they preach. 1. He had a title to be supplied with necessities, as being an apostle. 2. And by them, as being their apostle. 3. By the example of a soldier, who has a right to be paid: of a husbandman, who has a right to partake of the fruit of his labours: of a shepherd, nourished by the milk of the flock. v. 7. 4. He brings the example of those who threshed, or trode out the corn by oxen, as it was formerly the custom, that the threshers, nay even the oxen, when treading out the corn, were not to be ἐκτρωσέν according to the Scripture, (Deut. xxv.) but were to eat, and to be fed with the corn or straw; much more men that labour, are to be fed with the fruit of their labours. v. 8. & 10. 5. Nothing is more reasonable than to supply those with corporal and temporal things, who labour to procure spiritual and eternal blessings for others. v. 11. 6. They who preached to the Corinthians after S. Paul, were maintained by them; had not he and Barnaby as much right as they? v. 12. 7. He sheweth by the examples of the ministers and priests in the law of Moses, who had a share of the sacrifices and victims offered, and who, serving the altar, lived by the altar. v. 13. 8. He brings the authority of our Saviour, Christ, who said to his apostles, (Matt. x. 10.) that a labourer is worthy of his meat, or of his reward, as it is said, Lu. x. 7. But S. Paul puts them in mind, (v. 15.) that he did not make use of his right, as to any of these things: that he does not write in this manner, to get or have any thing of them hereafter: nay, he makes warm protestations, says S. Chrys.* that he will take nothing of them; that he will preach without putting others to any cost; (v. 18.) that he will accept of nothing, lest thereby he put any obstacle to the gospel, or gave any person occasion to say he preached for gain. He tells them, it is better for him to die, than, by taking any thing of them, to make void this, which he has to glory in, and to justify himself against his backbiting adversaries: the sense is, that he is willing to spend his life as well as his labours among them, sooner than in these circumstances receive any temporal reward from them. Yet when the circumstances were different, he received of the Philippians (Philip. iv. 15.) enough to supply him in his necessities. He also tells them here, that he does not pretend to glory or boast for having preached: this being a necessary duty.—For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward. The sense seems to be, if I do this office cheerfully, and with a right intention to please God only, I shall have a copious reward prepared for such a labourer: if unwillingly, and imperfectly, and not with a pure intention, I cannot expect such a reward; though still a dispensing of it is intrusted to me; that is, it is always my duty to preach. Others, by willingly, understand the

2 And if I be not an apostle to others, but yet to you I am. For you are the seal of my apostleship in the Lord.

3 My defence with them that examine me is this.

4 Have we not power to eat and to drink?

5 Have we not power to bring about a woman, a sister, as well as the rest of the apostles, and the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas?

6 Or I only and Barnabas, have we not power to do this?

7 Who serveth as a soldier at any time, at his own charges? Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? Who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock?

8 Speak I these things according to man? Or doth not the law also say these things?

9 For it is written in the law of Moses, *Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen?

10 Or doth he say this indeed for our sakes? For these things are written for our sakes: that he that ploweth should plow in hope: and he that thresheth, in hope to receive fruit.

11 ^bIf we have sown unto you spiritual things, is it a great matter if we reap your carnal things?

12 If others be partakers of this power over you: why not we rather? Nevertheless, we have not used this power: but we bear all things, lest we should give any hindrance to the gospel of Christ.

13 *Know you not, that they who work in the holy place, eat the things that are of the holy place: and they who serve the altar, partake with the altar?

14 So also the Lord ordained, that they who preach the gospel, should live by the gospel.

15 But I have used none of these things. Neither have I written these things, that they should be so done to me: for it is good for me to die, rather than that any one should make void my glory.

16 For if I preach the gospel, it is no glory to me: for a necessity lieth upon me: for wo is unto me, if I preach not the gospel.

17 For if I do this thing willingly, I have a reward: but if against my will, a dispensation is committed to me.

18 What is my reward then? That preaching the gospel, I may deliver the gospel without charge, that I abuse not my power in the gospel.

19 For whereas I was free as to all, I made myself the servant of all: that I might gain more.

20 And I became to the Jews as a Jew, that I might gain the Jews.

21 To them that are under the law, as if I were under the law, (whereas I myself was not under the law) that I might gain them that were under the law. To them that were without the law, as if I were without the law, (whereas I was not without the law of God, but was in the law of Christ) that I might gain them that were without the law.

22 To the weak I became weak, that I might gain the weak. I became all things to all men, that I might save all.

23 And I do all things for the gospel's sake: that I may be made partaker thereof.

24 Know you not that they who run in the race, all run indeed, but one receiveth the prize? So run that you may obtain.

25 And every one that striveth for the mastery refraineth himself from all things: and they indeed that they may receive a corruptible crown: but we an incorruptible one.

26 I, therefore, so run, not as at an uncertainty: I so fight, not as one beating the air:

* Deut. xxv. 4. 1 Tim. v. 18.

^b Rom. xv. 27.—Deut. xviii. 1.

doing of it in so perfect a manner, as not to receive any thing, and unwillingly, when they would scarce do it, at least so zealously, unless they received what would maintain them. Wi.

VER. 5. It appears certain, from the testimony of the fathers, that S. Paul was not in the state of wedlock. S. Jerom informs us that the apostle is here speaking of such holy women who, according to the Jewish custom, supplied their teachers with the necessaries of life, as we see was done to Christ himself. It is evident from ancient records that this was a very prevalent custom in Judea, and therefore a cause of no scandal; but to the Gentiles this custom was unknown, and therefore lest it might prove a cause of scandal to any, S. Paul did not allow any woman to follow him as a companion. Tertul. denies, with S. Aug. and S. Jerom, that S. Paul is here speaking of his wife. Estius, Calmet.—A woman, a sister. † Some erroneous translators have corrupted this text, by rendering it, a sister, a wife; whereas it is certain, S. Paul had no wife, (c. vii. v. 7. 8.) and that he only speaks of such devout women, as according to the custom of the Jewish nation, waited upon the preachers of the gospel, and supplied them with necessaries. Ch.—And to what end could he talk of burdening the Corinthians with providing for his wife, when he himself clearly affirmeth that he was single? C. vii. v. 7. and 8. This all the Greek fathers affirm, with S. Aust. de op. Monach. c. iv. S. Jer. adv. Jovin. c. xiv. &c. &c.

VER. 11. Is it a great matter? The apostle is here speaking of what he had given to the Corinthians, and what he had received from them; and this he does under the comparison of the sower and the reaper. Can any of you think it hard that we receive some part of your temporal goods, when we have bestowed upon you spiritual: nevertheless, we have not used this power, but we bear all things, &c. v. 12. Estius.

VER. 16. It is no glory. That is, I have nothing to glory of. Ch.—If I preach the gospel through compulsion, fear, or mere necessity, having no other means of maintenance, I must not look for a reward in heaven; but now doing it through charity and freely, I shall have my reward from God; and the more abundant the charity, the greater the reward. S. Aug. de Op. Mor. l. 5.

VER. 17. But if against my will. That is, if I do not do it with alacrity and zeal, but instigated by the sole motive of punishment, wo unto me, as he says in the preceding verse, if I am instigated by this motive alone; still (1510) the dispensation of the gospel is entrusted to me, and I must comply with that obligation, either with the zeal and alacrity of a son, or for fear of punishment, as a slave. Estius.

VER. 19. Free as to all. That is, whereas I was under no obligation to any man, yet I made myself the servant of all, &c. Calmet.

VER. 20. I became to the Jews as a Jew. That is, upon occasions, not to hinder their conversion, I practised the ceremonies of their law; though I am not under their law, which is no longer obligatory, but only under the new law of Christ. Wi.

VER. 21. To them that were without the law. That is, to the Gentiles, who never were under the law of Moses. Wi.

VER. 23. How convincing is this and many similar texts against those who deny the merit of good works, and who would not have men to act with a view to any recompense, though rewards and recompenses are very frequently mentioned in holy writ. A.

VER. 24. Know you not? Nothing is more famous in the annals of history than the public games in Greece; it is to these the apostle is here alluding. Calmet.—All run indeed, &c. He brings the examples of runners and wrestlers for a prize in the Grecian games, where only one could gain the prize. It is true in our case many obtain the crown for which we strive, but every one is in danger of losing it, and so must use all his endeavours to obtain it. Wi.

VER. 25. He refraineth himself, &c. Curbs his inclinations, abstains from debauchery, or any thing that may weaken him, or hinder him from gaining this corruptible crown, how much more ought we to practise self-denials for an eternal crown! In the fifth verse, where we translate, a woman, a sister, or a sister, a woman: the Prot. translation has a sister, a wife. We have reason to reject this translation, since it seems evident by this epistle, that S. Paul at least then had not a wife, c. vii. v. 7. 8. And the ancient interpreters expressly examined and rejected this translation. See S. Jerom against Jovin. l. i. tom. 4. part 2. p. 167. edit. Ben. S. Aug. l. de opere Monach. tom. vi c. 4. p. 478. Nov. edit. The Greek word, as every one knows, signifies either a woman or a wife. Nor doth any thing here determine it to signify a wife. He speaks of a woman, or of women that were sisters, that is, Christians; so that a sister expounds what kind of woman it was. Dr. Hammond puts in the margin a sister-woman, as it were to correct the Prot. translation. Wi.

27 But I chastise my body, and bring it into subjection: lest, perhaps, when I have preached to others, I myself should become reprobate.

CHAP. X.

By the example of the Israelites he shews that we are not to build too much upon favours received; but avoid their sins; and fly from the service of idols, and from things offered to devils.

FOR I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that our fathers were all ^aunder the cloud, and all passed through the ^bsea:

2 And all in Moses were baptized, in the cloud, and in the sea:

3 ^cAnd they all eat the same spiritual food:

4 ^dAnd all drank the same spiritual drink: (and they drank of the spiritual rock that followed them, and the rock was Christ.)

5 But with the most of them God was not well pleased: ^efor they were overthrown in the desert.

6 Now these things were done in a figure of us, that we should not covet evil things, ^fas they also coveted.

7 Neither become ye idolaters, as some of them: as it is written: ^gThe people sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play.

8 Neither let us commit fornication, ^has some of them committed fornication, and there fell in one day three and twenty thousand.

^a Exod. xiii. 21. Num. ix. 21.—^b Exod. xiv. 22.—^c Exod. xvi. 15.
^d Exod. xvii. 6. Num. xx. 11.

VER. 27. I chastise, &c. Here S. Paul shews the necessity of self-denial and mortification to subdue the flesh, and its inordinate desires. Ch.—Not even the labours of an apostle are exemptions from voluntary mortification and penance.

* V. 1. S. Chrys. ἐν κβ, p. 382. μετὰ σφοδρότατος ἀνείρας.

† V. 5. Mulierem sororem, ἀδελφὴν γυναῖκα. Sororem mulierem, where Estius brings examples to shew that it is the same sense and construction, whether we read mulierem sororem, or sororem mulierem. Tertullian, the most ancient of the Latin fathers, read: mulieres circumducendi, not uxores. De pudicitia, c. xiv. p. 566. Ed. Rig. and l. de monogam. c. viii. p. 519. he first says, Petrum solum invenio maritum. And on this place, non uxores demonstrat ab Apostolis circumductas... sed simpliciter mulieres, quæ, illos eodem instituto, quo et Dominum comitantes, ministrabant. S. Hierom. Ubi de mulieribus sororibus inferitur, perspicuum est, non uxores debere intelligi, sed eas, ut diximus, quæ de eâ substantiâ ministrabant. S. Aug. Hoc quidam non intelligentes, non sororem mulierem, sed uxorem interpretati sunt, fecerit illos verbi græci ambiguitas... quanquam hoc ita posterit, ut falli non debuerint, quia neque mulierem tantummodo ait, sed sororem mulierem, neque ducendi, sed circumducendi: verum alios Interpretes non fecerit hæc ambiguitas, et mulierem, non uxorem interpretati sunt.

CHAP. X. VER. 1-2. Our Fathers, the Jews, were all under the cloud. He means, when God conducted the camp of the Israelites, in the day-time by a cloud, and in the night by a pillar of fire. Ex. xiii. 21. Wi.—In Moses. Under the conduct of Moses they received baptism in figure, by passing under the cloud and through the sea: and they partook of the body and blood of Christ in figure, by eating of the manna, (called here a spiritual food, because it was a figure of the true bread which comes down from heaven) and drinking the water miraculously brought out of the rock, called here a spiritual rock; because it was also a figure of Christ. Ch.—Were baptized in the cloud, and in the sea, figuratively, these being figures of baptism in the new law. As Moses, who delivered them from the slavery of Egypt, was a figure of Christ, who came to deliver mankind from the slavery of sin. Wi.

VER. 3-4. All eat the same spiritual food, to wit, the manna, which seemed to come from heaven, and was a figure of the eucharist, the spiritual food of our souls.—All drank the same spiritual drink, and... rock that followed them, by which is understood the stream of water, that came miraculously out of the rock struck by Moses, and which is said to have followed them, because it ran plentifully through their camp.—And the rock was Christ, a figure of Christ; for all these things (v. 11.) happened to them in figure. Wi.

VER. 5. God was not well pleased, &c. Of 600,000, only Josue and Caleb entered the land of promise; the rest were destroyed, and perished in the wilderness. Their punishment ought to be an admonition to all to avoid such sins of idolatry fornication, murmuring, &c.

VER. 6. In a figure of us. That is, this was done and written to teach us, what we may expect, if we imitate the murmurs, infidelities, ingratitude, and disobedience of the Hebrew people. Unless we renounce our irregular desires, unless we mortify our passions, baptism and communion will prove our greater condemnation. The greatest graces are but subjects of alarm, unless our life correspond with them.

9 Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them tempted, and perished by serpents.

10 ⁱNeither do you murmur, as some of them murmured, and were destroyed by the destroyer.

11 Now all these things happened to them in figure: and they are written for our correction, upon whom the ends of the world are come.

12 Wherefore let him that thinketh himself to stand, take heed lest he fall.

13 Let no temptation take hold on you, but such as is human: and God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that which you are able: but will make also with temptation issue, that you may be able to bear it.

14 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, flee from the service of idols.

15 I speak as to wise men: judge ye yourselves what I say.

16 The chalice of benediction which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? And the bread which we break, is it not the partaking of the body of the Lord?

17 For we being many, are one bread, one body, all who partake of one bread.

18 Behold Israel, according to the flesh; are not they, who eat of the sacrifices, partakers of the altar?

* Num. xxvi. 64. and 65.—† Ps. cv. 14.—‡ Exod. xxxii. 6.—^b Num. xxi. 5. and 6.
^c Num. xi. 1 and xiv. 1.

VER. 9. As some of them tempted Christ. This cannot but be understood of Christ, as God. Wi.

VER. 11. Upon whom the ends of the world are come. The last age of the world, which S. John calls the last hour. Wi.

VER. 12. Take heed lest he fall. This regards the doctors and teachers in the new Church of Corinth; who, relying upon their own learning, did not think themselves weak, and presuming too much upon their own strength, exposed themselves to the danger of falling. See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. de dono. Per sev.—Self-diffidence is the foundation of our strength. We prevent many dangerous falls when we keep close to the earth by humility.

VER. 13. Let no temptation take hold on you.* Or, no temptation hath taken hold of you, or come upon you as yet, but what is human, or incident to man. Ch.—The sense of these words is obscure: we may expound them by way of prayer, let no temptation, but such as are of human frailty, and not hard to be overcome, happen to you. See the Greek text.—Will make also with temptation issue, that you may be able to bear it. The literal signification of the Latin, compared with the Greek, is, that God will bring you off, and make you escape out of those dangers, when you are tempted. Wi.—The most violent temptations are occasions of merit and triumph to such as are in the hands of God; whilst the lightest are snares and a deep abyss to such as are in their own hands.

VER. 14. There are various kinds of idolatry. It is the perfection of Angels never to err: it is a human imperfection to fall into error, but a diabolical crime, so to love our error, as to divide the Church by schism, or to leave it by heresy: this love of self is the most dangerous idolatry.

VER. 16. The chalice of benediction, &c. Which the priests bless or consecrate, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? And the bread which we break, (so called because of the outward appearance of bread) is it not the partaking or communion of the body of the Lord? See S. Chrys. here, hom. xxiv. p. 386. and p. 400. See also the Annotations, Mutt. xxvi. 26. Wi.—Here the apostle puts them in mind of the partaking of the body and blood of Christ in the sacred mysteries, and becoming thereby one mystical body with Christ. From whence he infers, (v. 21.) that they who are made partakers with Christ, by the eucharistic sacrifice, and sacrament, must not be made partakers with devils, by eating of the meats sacrificed to them. Ch.

VER. 17. We being many, are one bread. Or, as it may be rendered, agreeably both to the Latin and Greek, because the bread is one, all we, being many, are one body, who partake of that one bread. For it is by our communicating with Christ and with one another, in this blessed Sacrament, that we are formed into one mystical body; and made, as it were, one bread, compounded of many grains of corn, closely united together. Ch.—From the sacrament of the real body of Christ in the eucharist, he passeth to the effect of this sacrament, which is to unite all those who partake of it, as members of the same mystical body of Christ, which is his Church; and from hence he presently draws this consequence, that such as are members of that body, of which Christ is the head, cannot have any communication with idolaters, or with those that offer sacrifices to idols and devils. Wi.

VER. 18. Behold Israel, according to the flesh. That is, the people that were the offspring of Israel or Jacob. Are not these they who offered sacrifices to the true God, and eat of the sacrifices, which were offered on his altars, 19 What then? Do I say, that what is offered in sacrifice to idols, is any thing? Or that the idol is any thing?

20 But the things which the heathens sacrifice, they sacrifice to devils, and not to God. And I would not that you should be made partakers with devils: you cannot drink the chalice of the Lord, and the chalice of devils:

21 You cannot be partakers of the table of the Lord, and of the table of devils.

22 Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? Are we stronger than he? *All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient.

23 All things are lawful for me, but all things do not edify.

24 Let no man seek his own, but that which is another's.

25 Whatsoever is sold in the shambles, eat: asking no question, for conscience sake.

26 ^bThe earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof.

27 If any of the unbelievers invite you, and you be willing to go; eat of any thing that is set before you, asking no question, for conscience sake.

28 But if any man say: This hath been sacrificed to and by offering to him such sacrifices, acknowledged him to be their God, and the only true God: and so you, if you partake, and eat of the sacrifices of idolaters, and of what they tell you was offered to their idols, you seem at least, to join with them in acknowledging, and paying a reverence to their idols, which are devils: and you cannot be partakers of the table of the Lord, and of the table of devils.—Do we provoke the Lord to jealousy? that is, how dare we provoke our Lord, who is a jealous God, and will admit of no rival, by partaking of sacrifices offered to false gods? how dare we thus condemn his power, as if we were stronger than he, or that he could not punish us? Wi.

* Supra vi. 12.—^b Ps. xliii. 1. Eccl. xvii. 31.

VER. 19. What then? do I say, &c. He puts this objection, as if it were contradictory to what he had taught before, (c. viii. v. 4.) that an idol is nothing, &c. but he answers this objection by saying that all things, that is, all meats are lawful in themselves, but not always expedient, nor edifying, when they give scandal to weak brethren, or when the infidels themselves think that such as eat things offered to idols, join with them in honouring their idols. Wi.—The meaning of this passage is: whilst I advise you to abstain from eating of any thing consecrated to idols, I do not advise you as supposing that these offerings have any power in themselves to defile your souls, in the same manner as by eating of the body and blood of Christ we receive strength to overcome our spiritual enemies. S. Paul here anticipates an objection that might be made by some to whom he was writing. Est.

VER. 21. In all this discourse, a comparison is instituted between the Christian host and oblation, its effects, conditions and properties, with the altars, host's, sacrifices and immolations of the Jews and Gentiles; which the apostle could not have done, had there not been a proper sacrifice in the Christian worship. The holy Fathers teach the same with the ancient Councils. Thus in the council of Nice: The lamb of God laid upon the altar. Conc. Ephes. The unbloody service of the sacrifice. In S. Cyril Alex. in Conc. Ephes. Anath. 11. The quickening holy sacrifice; the unbloody host and victim. Tertul. de coron. milit. The propitiatory sacrifice both for the living and the dead. This Melchisedech did most singularly prefigure in his mystical oblation of bread and wine; this also, according to the prophecy of Malachi, shall continue from the rising to the setting sun, a perpetual substitute for all the Jewish sacrifices; and this, in plain terms, is called the Mass, by S. Augustin, Serm. celi. 91. Conc. Cartha. ii. c. 3. 4. c. 84. Milevit. 12. S. Leo, ep. 81. 88. c. 2. S. Gregory, l. ii. ep. 9. 92. &c. &c. See next chap. v. 24.

VER. 23. All things are lawful. This is the same sentiment he has expressed in chap. vi. v. 12. and in chap. viii. v. 8. 9. wherein he teaches us, that on some occasions it is necessary to abstain even from things in themselves lawful, as in the case of meats consecrated to idols. Calmet.—Two excellent rules that can serve as guides on these occasions, are the edification of the Church, and the spiritual good of our neighbour. Without the aid of these guides, we go astray in lives and decoy others, in doing what the letter of the law permits, but what the spirit of the law, charity, forbids.

VER. 27. Eat of any thing, &c. Here at length S. Paul prescribes them a rule by which they were to govern themselves, as to meats that they met with. Buy and eat of any thing sold in the market, or of any thing that you meet with at the table of infidels, when they invite you, for all are the Lord's creatures, and may be taken with thanksgiving, as we ought to take whatsoever we eat.—But if any man say, this hath been sacrificed to idols, do not eat of it for his sake, &c. And why must they not then eat of it, because either he is an infidel that says it: and then by saying so, he may mean that they who eat it, ought to eat it in honour of their gods. Or if a weak brother says so, he thereby signifies, that his conscience judges it not lawful to be eaten; so that in one case, you seem to con-idols: do not eat of it for his sake that told it, and for conscience sake.

29 Conscience, I say, not thy own, but the other's. For why is my liberty judged by another man's conscience?

30 If I partake with thanksgiving: why am I evil spoken of for that for which I give thanks?

31 *Therefore, whether you eat or drink, or whatsoever else you do; do all things for the glory of God.

32 Give no offence to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the church of God:

33 As I also please all men in all things, not seeking that which is profitable to myself, but to many that they may be saved.

CHAP. XI.

Women must have a covering over their heads. He blameth the abuses of their charity feasts; and upon that occasion, treats of the blessed sacrament.

BE ye followers of me, as I also am of Christ.

2 Now I praise you, brethren, that in all things you are mindful of me: and keep my ordinances as I delivered them to you.

3 But I would have you know ^athat the head of every man is Christ: and the head of the woman is the man: and the head of Christ, is God.

^a Coloss. iii. 17.—^d Ephes. v. 23.

sent that things are to be taken in honour of idols: in the other, you give offence to your weak brother: and I would have you to be without offence, both to Jews and Gentiles; and not to think it enough that you can eat such things with thanksgiving. It may be asked here why the apostle should not absolutely forbid them ever to eat any thing offered to idols, as this seems a thing absolutely forbidden in the council of Jerusalem? Acts xv. 23. To this some answer, that the apostle here expounds the true sense of that decree, which was only to be understood, when eating such meats gave scandal. Others say, the prohibition was only for a short time, and now was out of date. Others take notice, that the prohibition was not general, nor for all places, but only for the new converted Gentiles that were at Antioch, or in Syria and Cilicia, as specified in the decree. Wi.

VER. 29. For why is my liberty? The meaning of this passage is, that though we ought, on some occasions, to abstain from things in themselves lawful, yet, that on other occasions we are by no means obliged to it, particularly when our brother is not thoroughly instructed on that head. Theo.

* V. 13. Tentatio vos non apprehendat. In almost all Greek copies, non apprehendit in præterito, οὐκ ἀνέσθην. Which reading is also in divers ancient Latin interpreters, as if he puts them in mind that hitherto they had not suffered any great temptations or persecutions. Faciet cum tentatione proventum, is not the same as progressum, or utilitatem, by the Greek, but that they should escape out of it. οὐ τὴν περιστάσιν καὶ τὴν ἐκβασιν.

† V. 16. Calix benedictionis cui, (or as it is in the Greek) quem benedicimus. See S. Chrys. hom. xxiv. No Catholic now-a-days can declare his faith of the real presence in clearer terms than S. Chrys. hath in this, and other places: ὁ τοῦτο ἐν τῷ νομίῳ δὲ, ἐκείνῳ ἰστέ, τὸ ἀπὸ τῆς χάριτος βέβαιον, &c. He calls the eucharist, ἁγίασμα, a sacrifice.

CHAP. XI. In this chapter are three instructions: 1. That women must have a veil on their heads at public prayers, to ver. 17.—2dly, he corrects the abuses in their banquets of charity, called Agape, to ver. 23.—3dly, he teaches that in the sacrament of the holy Eucharist, is the body and blood of Christ. Wi.

VER. 2. I praise you. That is, a great many of you. Wi.

VER. 3. The head of the woman is the man, &c. To have the head covered at public meetings, is, according to S. Paul, a mark of subjection: The man was created to be head over the woman, who was made subject to the man, being made of him, of his rib, and the woman made for him, not he for the woman. The man in a special manner, is the image of God, not only by his immortal soul, in which sense also the woman was made to God's image, and likeness, but inasmuch as God gave him a power over all creatures, and so he is called, the glory of God. For these reasons, as well as from a received custom, S. Paul tells every woman, that in praying or prophesying in public meetings, she must have her head veiled, and covered in testimony of her subjection to man, her head, otherwise she dishonours herself, and her head. This is what he tells her, (v. 10.) that she ought to have a power over her head,* that is, to have a veil or covering, as a mark of man's power over her: and because of the angels, that is, out of a respect to the angels there present. Some understand the priests and ministers of God, called angels, particularly in the Apocalypse. S. Paul adds, that nature† having given to women long hair, designed it to be as a natural veil. In fine, he appeals to them, to be judges, whether it be not unbecoming in women to pray without a veil. But he will have men to be uncovered, and not to bear such a mark of subjection, as a veil is, by which a man would dishonour his head, that is, himself, and Christ, who is his head, and who appointed him, when he created him, to be head over the woman. He looks upon it as a dishonour and a dis-

4 Every man praying or prophesying with his head covered, disgraceth his head.

5 But every woman praying or prophesying with her head not covered, disgraceth her head: for it is all one as if she were shaven.

6 For if a woman be not covered, let her be shorn. But if it be a shame to a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her cover her head.

7 The man, indeed, ought not to cover his head: because he is the ^aimage and glory of God; but the woman is the glory of the man.

8 For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man.

9 ^bFor the man was not created for the woman, but the woman for the man.

10 Therefore ought the woman to have a power over her head, because of the Angels.

11 But yet neither is the man without the woman, nor the woman without the man, in the Lord.

12 For as the woman is of the man, so also is the man by the woman: but all things of God.

13 Judge you yourselves; doth it become a woman, to pray to God uncovered?

14 Doth not even nature itself teach you, that a man, indeed, if he nourish his hair, it is a shame to him:

15 But if a woman nourish her hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given to her for a covering.

16 But if any man seem to be contentious, we have no such custom, nor the church of God.

17 Now this I ordain: not praising you, that you come together not for the better, but for the worse.

18 For first of all I hear, that when you come together in the church, there are divisions among you, and in part I believe it.

19 For there must be also heresies: that they also, who are reprov'd, may be made manifest among you.

20 When you come together therefore into one place, it is not now to eat the Lord's supper.

21 For every one taketh before his own supper to eat. And one indeed is hungry, and another is drunk.

22 What, have you not houses to eat and to drink in? Or despise ye the church of God, and put them to shame that have not? What shall I say to you? Do I praise you? In this I praise you not.

23 For I have received of the Lord that which also I delivered to you, that the Lord Jesus, the night in which he was betrayed, took bread,

24 And giving thanks, broke, and said: "Take ye, and eat: this is my body, which shall be delivered for you: do this for the commemoration of me."

^a Gen. i. 26.—^b Gen. ii. 23.

^c Mat. xxvi. 26. Mark xiv. 22. Luke xxii. 19.

grace for men to nourish their hair, as women should do. He also calls God the head of Christ, that is, of Christ, as man. Lest he should seem to lessen the condition of women more than necessary, he adds, that the propagation of mankind now depends on the woman, as well as on the man, seeing every man is by the woman. Wi.

VER. 4. Praying or prophesying. By prophesying, in this place is meant, reading publicly in the Church, or singing, or explaining some part of the Scripture. To have the head covered, or uncovered, is in itself a thing very indifferent. Amongst the Greeks it was the custom always to sacrifice to their idols with heads uncovered; amongst the Romans, the opposite was the fashion, and among the Jews, as well formerly as at present, they always appear in their synagogues with heads covered. Cabmet.

VER. 10. A power: That is, a veil or covering, as a sign that she is under the power of her husband: and this, the apostle adds, because of the angels, who are present in the assemblies of the faithful. Ch.

VER. 16. If any man seem to be contentious about this matter, or any other, we have no such custom, nor hath the Church; that is, says S. Chrys. to have such quarrels and divisions. Or, as others understand it, we have no such custom for women to be in the Church uncovered. Wi.

VER. 17. Now this I ordain, &c. S. Paul found that several abuses had crept in among the Corinthians at their Church meetings, where before the holy mysteries (though S. Chrys. thinks after them) they used to have those charitable suppers, called the Agape. For as our Saviour eat first a common supper with his apostles, before he instituted the holy sacrament, so the Christians in many places brought meats with them, and eat a supper together, in token of that friendship and union, which they had with all their brethren, before they began to celebrate the holy mysteries. It is this supper, which according to the common interpretation S. Paul here (v. 20.) calls the Lord's supper,† (though S. Aug. and some others by the Lord's supper, understand the holy sacrament itself of Christ's body and blood.) The apostle tells them, he hears there are divisions among them at their meetings, which he says will happen, as there must be also heresies, which God permits, that they who are approved, may be made manifest, that is, that on such occasions, the just may shew their fidelity and constancy in their duty to God. The apostle tells them, that it is not now to eat the Lord's supper, that is, there were such abuses among them, that it was not now to imitate the supper, which Christ made with his apostles, or, according to the exposition of S. Aug. this was not becoming persons, who, before the end of their meetings, were to partake of the divine mysteries. Wi.

VER. 19. There must be also heresies: By reason of the pride and perversity of man's heart; not by God's will or appointment; who nevertheless draws good out of this evil, manifesting, by that occasion, who are the good and firm Christians, and making their faith more remarkable. Ch.—Not that God hath directly so appointed, as necessary: this originates in man's malice, and his sole pride, and great abuse of free-will. The providence of God draweth good out of evil, but not to the man, says the Scripture, by whom scandal cometh, such as sects and heresies. Hence S. Augustin, c. viii. de vera relig. says: "Let us use heretics not so as to approve their errors, but to make us more wary and vigilant, and more strenuous in defending Catholic doctrine against their deceits."

VER. 20. The Lord's supper. So the apostle here calls the charity feasts observed by the primitive Christians; and reprehends the abuses of the Corinthians on these occasions: which were the more criminal, because these feasts were accompanied with the celebrating the eucharistic sacrifice and sacrament. Ch.

VER. 21. Every one taketh before his own supper to eat. The sense seems to be, that he took and brought with him, what he designed to eat with others, and give at that supper: but as soon as some were met (without staying for others, as he orders them, v. 33. when he again speaks of these suppers) the rich placing themselves together, began this supper, and did not take with them their poor brethren, who had brought nothing, or had nothing to bring; by this means, one indeed is hungry, and another is drunk, that is, had at least drunk plentifully while the poor had nothing but shame, and confusion. By this means of eating and drinking without temperance and moderation, they were by no means disposed to receive afterwards the holy Eucharist. He tells such persons that committed these disorders, that if they be so hungry that they cannot fast, they should eat (v. 34.) before they come from home. We find these Agape forbidden to be made in the Churches, in the 28th canon of the council of Laodicea, a little before the general council of Nice. In S. Chrys. 's time, and from the first ages every one received the sacrament of the holy eucharist fasting, as it is probable this was one of the things which S. Paul gave orders about, (v. 34.) when he came to Corinth. We must not imagine, that because Christ instituted the holy sacrament, and gave it to his apostles after he had supped with them, that the apostles, or the pastors of the Church, their successors, could not order it to be received fasting, and kneeling, for greater reverence and devotion. See S. Aug. on this same subject, in his letter to Januarius, liv. tom. 2. part 2. p. 126. Nov. edit. He says, that though it is evident the apostles did not receive the body and blood of Christ fasting, yet we must not on that account calumniate, or blame the universal Church, in which it is received only by those who are fasting. He says, it is most insolent madness to dispute against what is a custom in the universal Church. Wi.

VER. 23. I have received of the Lord. That is, by revelation from Christ, as well as from others, who were present with him, that which also I delivered to you by word of mouth, &c. Here he speaks of the holy sacrament itself, of the words of consecration, as the evangelists had done, and of the real presence of Christ's body and blood.—Which shall be delivered for you. In the common Greek copies, which is broken for you, to wit, on the cross.—You shall shew the death of the Lord. As often as you receive, it shall be with a devout and grateful remembrance of his sufferings and death for your sake. He puts every one in mind, that whosoever shall eat this bread, (v. 27.) so called from the outward appearances, or drink the chalice of the Lord unworthily, shall, by such a sacrilege, be guilty of the body and of the blood of the Lord. And (v. 29.) that he eateth, and drinketh judgment, or condemnation to himself, not discerning the difference betwixt celestial food and other meats, and not considering it to be truly the body of the Lord. See S. Chrys. hom. xxvii. If the words of our Saviour, this is my body, &c. were to be understood in a metaphorical and figurative sense only, is it probable that S. Paul, writing twenty-four years afterwards, to the new converted Gentiles at Corinth, would have used words, which full as clearly express a true and real presence of Christ's body in the eucharist, without one word to signify that this was to be understood in a figurative sense only? Wi.

VER. 24. Juvenius, a native of Spain, and a priest, who flourished under Constantine the Great, about the year 329, has left us the life of Christ in hexameter verse, where speaking of the institution of the eucharist, he says: "Christ taught his disciples, that he delivered to them his own body;" and when he gave them the chalice, "he taught them that he had distributed to them his blood: and said, this blood remits the sins of the people: drink this, it is mine." Bibl. Max. P. P. T. iv. p. 74.

25 In like manner also the chalice, after he had supped, saying: This chalice is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as often as you shall drink it for the commemoration of me.

26 For as often as you shall eat this bread, and drink the chalice, you shall shew the death of the Lord until he come.

27 *Wherefore, whosoever shall eat this bread, or drink the chalice of the Lord unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and of the blood of the Lord.

28 ^b But let a man prove himself: and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of the chalice.

29 For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh judgment to himself, not discerning the body of the Lord.

30 Therefore are there many infirm and weak among you, and many sleep.

31 But if we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged.

32 But whilst we are judged, we are chastised by the Lord; that we may not be condemned with this world.

33 Wherefore, my brethren, when you come together to eat, wait for one another.

34 If any man be hungry, let him eat at home: that you come not together unto judgment. And the rest I will set in order, when I come.

CHAP. XII.

Of the diversity of spiritual gifts. The members of the mystical body, like those of the natural body, must mutually cherish one another.

* John vi. 59.—^b 2 Cor. xiii. 5.—^c Mark ix. 38.

Discipulos docuit proprium se tradere corpus, edocuitque suum se divisisse cruorem. Atque ait: Hic sanguis populi delicta remittit: Hunc potate meum.

VER. 27. Or drink. Here erroneous translators corrupted the text, by putting and drink (contrary to the original, ἢ μὴν) instead of or drink.—Guilty of the body, &c. not discerning the body, &c. This demonstrates the real presence of the body and blood of Christ, even to the unworthy communicant; who otherwise could not be guilty of the body and blood of Christ, or justly condemned for not discerning the Lord's body. Oh.—The real presence in the sacrament is also proved by the enormity of the crime, in its profanation. See S. Chrys. hom. de non contem. ec. and hom. lx. and lxi. ad pop. Antioch. where he shews that the unworthy receiver imitates the Jews in crucifying Jesus, and trampling under foot his sacred blood. Hence the dreadful punishments we read of in verses 27 and 30.

VER. 28. Drink of the chalice. This is not said by way of command, but by way of allowance, viz. where and when it is agreeable to the practice and discipline of the Church. Ch.

VER. 30–32. Therefore in punishment of the sin of receiving unworthily, many are infirm, visited with infirmities, even that bring death, which is meant by those words, many sleep. But it is a mercy of God, when he only punishes by sickness, or a corporal death, and does not permit us to perish for ever, or be condemned with this wicked world. To avoid this, let a man prove himself, examine the state of his conscience, especially before he receives the holy sacrament, confess his sins, and be absolved by those to whom Christ left the power of forgiving sins in his name, and by his authority. If we judge ourselves in this manner, we shall not be judged, that is, not condemned. Wi.

* V. 3. Debet mulier potestatem habere super caput suum, ἡγουται, but some Greek copies have ὑπερβύλαιον, cinctorium, velum.

† V. 8. Nec ipsa natura docet vos. I do not find an interrogation in the Latin copies, as it is marked in the Greek, οὐδὲ διδάσκει ὑμᾶς. The rest of the text seems to be better connected, if we read it with an interrogation.

‡ V. 17. Jam non est dominicam cenam manducare, κυριακὸν δεῖπνον. This expression is used no where else in the New Testament, and it is much more probable, that by it S. Paul signifies those charitable suppers, which the Christians had together, in imitation of Christ's supper with his disciples before he instituted the holy mysteries, which was after supper, as S. Paul here says, v. 25. and S. Luke xxi. The sacrament of the Lord's body and blood has been called the Eucharist, even from the first ages of the Christian religion, as appears by the epistles of S. Ignatius, by S. Irenæus, Tertullian, &c. The late pretended reformers found it called by this name in the Catholic Church. Why then should they, who pretend to nothing but Scripture, affect to give it no name but the Lord's supper, when these words in the Scripture signify a different supper?

(1514)

NOW concerning spiritual things, brethren, I would not have you to be ignorant.

2 You know that, when you were heathens, you went to dumb idols, according as you were led.

3 Wherefore I give you to understand, *that no man, speaking by the Spirit of God, saith anathema to Jesus. And no man can say, the Lord Jesus, but by the Holy Ghost.

4 Now there are diversities of graces, but the same Spirit

5 And there are diversities of ministries, but the same Lord.

6 And there are diversities of operations, but the same God, who worketh all in all.

7 But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man unto profit.

8 To one indeed, by the Spirit, is given the word of wisdom: and to another, the word of knowledge, according to the same Spirit.

9 To another, faith in the same Spirit: to another the grace of healing in one Spirit:

10 To another, the working of miracles: to another, prophecy: to another, the discerning of spirits: to another, divers kinds of tongues: to another, interpretation of speeches.

11 ^a But all these things one and the same Spirit worketh, dividing to every one according as he will.

12 For as the body is one, and hath many members: and all the members of the body, whereas they are many, yet are one body: so also is Christ.

^a Rom. xii. 3. and 6. Ephes. iv. 7.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Concerning spiritual things. In the apostle's time, the Christians in the sacraments of baptism and confirmation, many times received those graces and gifts of the Holy Ghost, by which some of them prophesied, others wrought miracles, and cured diseases, others spoke tongues, and different languages: now some among the Corinthians made not a right use of these gifts, especially they who had the gift of tongues, and made use of it through vanity, rather than for the profit of others. Wi.

VER. 2. You went to dumb idols. He speaks to the Gentiles before their conversion, to put them in mind, how much happier they are by receiving the faith of Christ, and such graces and favours from God. Wi.

VER. 3. No man, speaking by the Spirit of God, &c. He tells them, if they see a person moved in an extraordinary manner, and say anathema, curse, or speak ill of Jesus, such an one cannot be moved by a good spirit. And no man can say, the Lord Jesus, that is, praise Christ as he ought, but by a good spirit. Wi.

VER. 4–7. There are diversities of graces. Lit. divisions of graces; but all from the same spirit, from the same Lord, from the same God: and all these gifts are designed, and to be made use of for the profit of the faithful. Wi.—S. Justin Mar. S. Irenæus, and Origen bear testimony, that these special gifts of the Holy Ghost were not unusual in their time. S. Paul, in order to curb the vanity of such as seemed to be a little puffed up with the gifts they had received, and likewise to comfort those who had received no such spiritual and extraordinary favours, wishes to teach both parties, that the same Holy Spirit distributes these graces according as they are more conducive to the welfare of his Church, and the glory of God. Calmet.

VER. 8. &c. Word of wisdom, which differs from that of knowledge, inasmuch as wisdom is a more eminent and sublime knowledge. These are numbered among the gifts of the Holy Ghost. Isaia, c. xi.—To another faith, by which, says S. Chrys.,* is not here meant a belief of revealed truths, but an humble confidence of working miracles, grounded on faith, and on the power and goodness of God.—The same Spirit worketh, dividing to every one according as he will; by which words, they that valued themselves on the gifts of prophesying, and speaking tongues, are put in mind, that all these were purely the gifts of God, to whom alone the honour is due. Wi.

VER. 12. &c. As the body is one, &c. From this comparison of the mystical body of Christ, that is, of his Church, to a man's natural body, he brings excellent instructions. 1. That as all members and parts, make up the same body, so also is Christ; that is, so it is in the Church of Christ, which is his mystical body. 2. As all the parts of man's body are enlivened by the same soul, so all in the Church have their life from the same Spirit of God in baptism, and in the sacraments instituted by our Saviour, Christ; in which we are made to drink of the same spirit. 3. As all the members, that have such different offices and functions, do but constitute one complete body, so it is in the Church of Christ. 4. As those that seem the less considerable parts of the human body, are no less 13 For in one Spirit were we all baptized into one body, whether Jews or Gentiles, whether bond or free: and in one Spirit we have all been made to drink.

14 For the body also is not one member, but many.

15 If the foot should say, because I am not the hand, I am not of the body: is it, therefore, not of the body?

16 And if the ear should say, because I am not the eye, I am not of the body: is it, therefore, not of the body?

17 If the whole body were the eye: where would be the bearing? If the whole were hearing: where would be the smelling?

18 But now God hath set the members, every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him.

19 And if they all were one member, where would be the body?

20 But now there are many members, indeed, yet one body.

21 And the eye cannot say to the hand: I need not thy help: nor again the head to the feet: I have no need of you.

22 Yea, much more those that seem to be the more feeble members of the body, are more necessary:

23 And such as we think to be the less honourable members of the body, upon these we bestow more abundant honour: and those that are our uncomely parts, have more abundant comeliness.

24 But our comely parts have no need: but God hath tempered the body together, giving the more abundant honour to that which wanted it,

25 That there might be no schism in the body, but the members might be mutually careful one for another.

26 And if one member suffer any thing, all the members suffer with it: or if one member glory, all the members rejoice with it.

necessary for the subsistence and harmony of the whole, and stand in need of one another, (for example, the head stands in need of the feet) so in the Church, &c. 5. He takes notice, that in a natural body, the less honourable, the baser, and as they are called, the uncomely parts, are clothed with greater care and decency, Lit. have a more abundant honour bestowed upon them, so in the mystical body, no less, but even a greater care is to be taken of the weaker, and more infirm members, of the poor, the weak, the ignorant; and in the spirit of charity and love, that there may be no divisions or schisms, but a brotherly union: that if one suffer, another compassionate and assist him, &c. Wi.

VER. 15. If the foot, &c. By this comparison S. Paul teaches the Corinthians, that as all cannot exercise the same functions in the Church, so no one should be envious of his brother; but that by their mutual charity, co-operation, union of hearts, and faith, they should compose one body, of which Christ is the head. Calmet.

VER. 24. Cicero, in his 1st liber de Off. speaking of the human body, says, Natura quæ formam nostram atque figuram, in qua esset species honesta, eam posuit in promptu; quæ partes autem corporis ad naturæ necessitatem datæ, aspectum essent deformem habituræ atque turpem, eas contextit atque abdidit. Calmet.

VER. 27. Members of member.† The sense seems to be, you are members of the particular Church of Corinth, which is only a part or member of the whole body of the Christian Catholic Church. This is agreeable to the common reading in the Greek, where it is said, you are members of a part. See S. Chrys. hom. xxxii. Wi.

VER. 28. First apostles, &c. Here he sets down these gifts or graces in their order of dignity. 1. The apostles, blessed above others with all kinds of graces. 2. Prophets, who had the gift of interpreting of prophecies, and of knowing things to come. 3. Doctors, or teachers of the gospel, preferred before those who had the gift of miracles, or of healing the infirm, and before the gifts of tongues, which they valued and esteemed so much, which he reckons in a manner in the last place, except that of interpreting, which is wanting in the present Greek copies. But as interpreting is found in all the Greek MSS. (v. 30.) we have reason to prefer the reading of the Latin Vulgate. Wi.

VER. 31. Be zealous for the better gifts: which are to be more or less esteemed, as they are accompanied with charity, as he is going to shew in the next chapter. Wi.

27 Now you are the body of Christ, and members of member.

28 *And God indeed hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondly prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then the graces of healings, helps, governments, kinds of tongues, interpretations of speeches.

29 Are all apostles? Are all prophets? Are all teachers?

30 Are all workers of miracles? Have all the grace of healing? Do all speak with tongues? Do all interpret?

31 But be zealous for the better gifts. And I shew to you a yet more excellent way.

CHAP. XIII.

Charity is to be preferred before all other gifts.

IF I speak with the tongues of men, and of Angels, and have not charity, I am become a sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal.

2 And if I should have prophecy, and should know all mysteries, and all knowledge: and if I should have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing.

3 And if I should distribute all my goods to feed the poor, and if I should deliver my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing.

4 Charity is patient, is kind: charity envieth not, dealeth not perversely, is not puffed up,

5 Is not ambitious, seeketh not her own, is not provoked to anger, thinketh no evil,

6 Rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth with the truth:

7 Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things.

8 Charity never faileth; whether prophecies shall be made void, or tongues shall cease, or knowledge shall be destroyed.

* Ephes. iv. 11.

* V. 9. Fides, πίστις, upon which word S. Chrys. ὁρ. κθ. p. 433. πίστιν οὐ ταύτην λέγουσιν, τὴν τῶν δογμάτων, ἀλλὰ τὴν σημειῶν.

† V. 27. Et membra de membro. Some Greek copies, καὶ μέλη ἐκ μέλους, but in most Greek MSS. καὶ μέλη ἐκ μέρους. S. Chrys. ὁμ. κβ. p. 448. ἡ ἐκκλησία ἡ παρ' ἡμῶν, μέρος ἐστὶ τῆς παντὶ τοῦ κυρίου ἐκκλησίας.

CHAP. XIII. The apostle here shews the necessity of the great virtue of charity, that is, of the love of God, and of our neighbour. Wi.

VER. 1. A tinkling cymbal. Which may give notice, and be beneficial to others, but not to itself. Wi.—Without charity, both towards every individual, and especially towards the common body of the Church, none of the aforesaid gifts will be available. B.

VER. 2–3. These prove that faith without good works, and especially charity for God and our neighbour, cannot avail to eternal life; faith and charity are both essentially necessary. Hence S. Augustin declares, that where there is not true faith, there cannot be justice; because the just man liveth by faith: and where charity is not, there can be no justice, which if they had, they would never tear in pieces the body of Christ, which is the Church. De fid. ad Pet. c. xxxix.

VER. 4. *Charity . . . dealeth not perversely. The Greek word here seems taken from the Latin. S. Chrys. expounds it is not rash, but acteth prudently and considerately. Others, it is not light or inconstant. Others, it braggeth, or vaunteth not, as in the Prot. translation. Wi.

VER. 5. Is not ambitious;† which is also the sense of some Greek copies, but in others, and in S. Chrys. it signifies, it is not ashamed of any one. Wi.

VER. 8. Prophecies and tongues last no longer than this life.—Knowledge shall be destroyed, that is, that imperfect knowledge we have in this world. For now we know only in part, we only see, as it were, through a glass, and imperfectly.—Faith, which is of things that appear not, and hope, which is of things that we enjoy not, will cease in heaven, but charity, the greater, or greatest even of these three, will remain, and be increased in heaven. Wi.

VER. 10. S. Aug. proves from this text, that the saints in heaven have a more perfect knowledge of what passes here below, than when they sojourned on earth. De Civit. Dei l. xxii. c. 29.

VER. 11. When I was a child. I, like you, formerly judged of the goodness and excellency of these spiritual gifts by the advantages they procured; but 9 For we know in part, and we prophesy in part.

10 But when that which is perfect shall come, that which is in part shall be done away.

11 When I was a child, I spoke as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as a child. But when I became a man, I put away the things of a child.

12 We see now through a glass in an obscure manner: but then face to face. Now I know in part: but then I shall know even as I am known.

13 And now there remain, faith, hope, charity, these three: but the greatest of these is charity.

CHAP. XIV.

The gift of prophesying is to be preferred before that of speaking strange tongues.

FOLLOW after charity, be zealous for spiritual gifts: but rather that you may prophesy.

2 For he that speaketh in a tongue, speaketh not to men, but to God: for no man heareth. But by the Spirit he speaketh mysteries.

3 But he that prophesieth, speaketh to men unto edification, and exhortation and comfort.

4 He that speaketh in a tongue, edifieth himself; but he that prophesieth, edifieth the church.

5 And I would have you all to speak with tongues, but rather to prophesy. For greater is he that prophesieth than he that speaketh with tongues: unless, perhaps, he interpret, that the church may receive edification.

6 But now, brethren, if I come to you, speaking with tongues, what shall I profit you, unless I speak to you either in revelation, or in knowledge, or in prophecy, or in doctrine?

after the Almighty had bestowed upon me his particular light, my opinion was far otherwise. Prophecy, and the gift of languages are certainly very estimable gifts, yet charity is much more excellent. Calmet.—It is by charity we approach near to God, that we become his true image. Can we, then, wonder at the magnificent praises, glorious prerogatives, and surprising effects S. Paul gives to this all necessary virtue?

* V. 4. Non agit perperam, ὃς περιεργεύεται. S. Chrys. says, τοῦτέστι ὃς προεργεύεται, non est præceptor, aut temeraria.

† V. 5. Non est ambitiosa. Some Greek copies, φιλοτιμεί. In the ordinary Greek, and in S. Chrys. ὁκ ἀχρημονεί. It is not ashamed to undergo any disgrace for God, or our neighbour's sake.

CHAP. XIV. S. Paul gives them further instructions how to make a right use of these three gifts, of prophesying, of interpreting, and especially of speaking tongues. He is far from condemning the gift of speaking tongues, in proper circumstances, but only the indiscreet use, or the abuse of it. This is evident by the 5th verse, I would have you all to speak with tongues, but rather to prophesy. He blames those assemblies and meetings, (v. 23.) when all present speak tongues together, by which means the infidels that came thither, and ought to be instructed, understood nothing. He permits at their meetings two or three (v. 27.) to speak tongues, provided some other interpret them. He also orders, that only two or three prophets speak at a meeting, and by turns, to avoid confusion, that those present may be edified, exhorted, and instructed. Wi.

VER. 1. But rather that you may prophesy. That is, declare or expound the mysteries of faith. Ch.—To prophesy, in its proper signification, is to foretell things to come: it sometimes is to expound the obscure places in other prophets; and sometimes it is to preach the word of God. Here it is chiefly taken in this last sense. Wi.

VER. 2. He that speaketh in a tongue, which others at least understand not: nay, which sometimes, perhaps, by the 14th and 15th ver. he himself that spoke tongues, did not understand, can only be said to speak to God. In spirit he speaketh mysteries, edifies himself, because in his spirit he is piously and devoutly affected; but he must endeavour that the Church, or people present, may be also edified. Let him then pray for the other gift of interpreting, what he speaks, or let another interpret. Wi.—Not to men. Viz. so as to be heard, that is, so as to be understood by them. Oh.

VER. 6. If I come to you, speaking with tongues in this manner, what shall I profit you, unless in revelation, &c. that is, unless I reveal, and expound to you the meaning, by some other gift, as in knowledge, in prophecy, in doctrine. To speak tongues only without interpreting, is no ways instructive. He that speaks to me, what I understand not, is no better than a barbarian to me, (so the Greeks called those that spoke not their language.) He amplifies this inconvenience of not being understood, by the example of instruments, pipes, harps, trumpets,

7 Even things without life that give sound, whether pipe or harp, except they give a distinction of sounds, how shall it be known what is piped or harped?

8 For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for battle?

9 So likewise you, unless you utter by the tongue plain speech, how shall it be known what is spoken? For you shall be speaking into the air.

10 There are, for example, so many kinds of tongues in this world: and none is without a voice.

11 If then I know not the power of the voice, I shall be to him, to whom I speak, a barbarian, and he, that speaketh, a barbarian to me.

12 So you also, forasmuch as you are zealous of spirits, seek to abound unto the edifying of the church.

13 And therefore let him that speaketh in a tongue, pray that he may interpret.

14 For if I pray in a tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is without fruit.

15 What is it then? I will pray with the spirit, I will pray also with the understanding: I will sing with the spirit, I will sing also with the understanding:

16 Else if thou shalt bless with the spirit, how shall he that holdeth the place of the unlearned say Amen to thy blessing? because he knoweth not what thou sayest.

17 For thou indeed givest thanks well, but the other is not edified.

18 I thank my God, that I speak with all your tongues.

19 But in the church I had rather speak five words with my understanding, that I may instruct others also, than ten thousand words in a tongue.

which would not move persons to different affections, nor excite them to different actions, unless the sound, and manner they were played upon, were different; seek, then, and endeavour to make use of the gifts of the Spirit, to the edification of the Church, or of the hearers. Wi.

VER. 12. Of spirits. Of spiritual gifts. Oh.

VER. 13. Pray that he may interpret. In order that he may be rendered more useful to the Church, as the martyrs, who prayed for those particular gifts they saw would be most useful for themselves, or their neighbours. Calmet.

VER. 14. If I pray in a tongue, my spirit prayeth, but my understanding is without fruit: it may signify without fruit, or profit to others, though some understand, as if by this gift of tongues, they sometimes spoke what they themselves did not understand. Wi.

VER. 16. How shall he that holdeth the place of the unlearned (lit. an idiot) say Amen to thy blessing? When persons speak, or pray, and the ignorant have had no instruction concerning such prayers, they cannot know when to say Amen: and when infidels come into such meetings, where they hear many persons at once speaking many tongues, which are understood by no body, will they not be apt to say, you are mad? The like in a manner happened on the day of Pentecost, when the disciples having received this gift, and speaking with tongues, the people hearing them, cried out, they were drunk. Acts ii. 13. Yet S. Chrys. takes notice, that the fault and madness was in the hearers, not in those who spoke tongues. hom. xxxvi. Wi.—Amen. The unlearned not knowing that you are then blessing, will not be qualified to join with you by saying Amen to your blessing. The use or abuse of strange tongues, of which the apostle here speaks, does not regard the public liturgy of the Church, (in which strange tongues were never used) but certain conferences of the faithful, (v. 26. &c.) in which, meeting together, they discovered to one another their various miraculous gifts of the Spirit, common in those primitive times; amongst which the apostle prefers that of prophesying before that of speaking strange tongues, because it was more to the public edification. Where also note, that the Latin, used in our liturgy, is so far from being a strange or unknown tongue, that it is perhaps the best known tongue in the world. Ch.

VER. 19. But in the Church. The apostle here condemns the vanity of the Corinthians, who made a parade of their gift of tongues. Calmet.

VER. 20–22. Tongues are for a sign, not to believers, but to unbelievers, according to what the law (under which he comprehends the prophet Isaias, xxviii. 11.) said: In other tongues, and other lips, I will speak to this people: and neither so will they hear me. S. Paul here gives the sense, rather than the words of the prophet, and expounds them of what happened particularly on the day of Pentecost, when the miraculous gift of tongues was designed to strike the unbelieving people with admiration, and to bring them afterwards to the true faith: but when he adds, that tongues are not for the believers, and that prophecies are not for the unbelievers, he cannot mean that tongues, used with discretion, may not also be profitable to believers, or that prophecies and instructions may not also 20 Brethren, do not become children in sense, but in malice be children, and in sense be perfect.

21 In the law it is written: *That in other tongues, and other lips, I will speak to this people: and neither so will they hear me, saith the Lord.

22 Wherefore tongues are for a sign, not to believers, but to unbelievers: but prophecies, not to unbelievers, but to believers.

23 If, therefore, the whole church come together into one place, and all speak with tongues, and there come in unlearned persons, or unbelievers, will not they say that you are mad?

24 But if all prophesy, and there come in one that believeth not, or one unlearned, he is convinced of all, he is judged of all.

25 The secrets of his heart are made manifest, and so, falling down on his face, he will adore God, affirming that God is among you indeed.

26 How is it then, brethren? When you come together, every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a revelation, hath a tongue, hath an interpretation: let all things be done unto edification.

27 If any speak in a tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and in course, and let one interpret.

* Isai. xxviii. 11.

be profitable to unbelievers, as well as to the believers; for this would be to contradict what he teaches in this chapter, and particularly (v. 24.) where he says, that by prophecy the infidel is convinced, &c. S. Paul, whose design in all this chapter is to regulate the meetings, that they may be conducted with greater edification, and for the instruction, both of the Christians and unbelievers, thanks God, that he has the gift of tongues more than they, but says, that in the Church, or at such Church-meetings, he had rather, for the common edification of others, speaking five words, &c. than ten thousand words, &c. and so he concludes, (ver. 39.) be zealous to prophesy, and forbid not to speak with tongues. Wi.

VER. 26. When you come together, &c. S. Paul here settles the rules, which they are to observe in their meetings: one hath a psalm, the Spirit inspiring him with some psalm, or spiritual canticle, whereby to praise God: another hath the gift of doctrine, to instruct all there present: another the gift of tongues, which he will not have him to make use of, unless when there is one to interpret, that all things may be done in the most profitable manner unto edification. Two or three at a meeting may speak with tongues, if another interpret. Wi.

VER. 29-32. Two or three, who have the gift of prophecy, may speak by turns in one of these assemblies, and the rest of the prophets shall judge, whether he be truly inspired, and speak good doctrine.—If any thing be revealed to another sitting by, let the former, who was standing and speaking, hold his peace, which they can do; for the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets, that is, they are not like men possessed with evil spirits, who have not power to desist, or to be silent; but these who are moved by an impulse of the holy Spirit, have it in their power either to speak or to be silent, as they judge convenient; for the true God is not the God of dissension and confusion, but the God of peace and order. Wi.

VER. 34. Let women be silent, and not speak at all in public Church-meetings: and if they would ask any thing, let them ask it at home. Wi.

VER. 36-38. Did the word of God first come out from you? This he says, to check these new preachers, by putting them in mind, that they are not the first, nor the only Christians, and so must conform themselves to the discipline practised in other Churches, especially since, as their apostle, he hath delivered them the commandments of the Lord. And if any man know not, will not acknowledge, and follow these rules, he shall not be known; God will not know, nor approve his ways. The pretended reformers, from the expressions with which the apostle blames the abuse some new converts made of the gift of tongues, think they have found a plausible argument to reprehend Catholics, for using the same Latin tongue in the Mass, and in the public liturgy. They consider not, whether they have the same reasons to find fault with the present discipline of the Church, as S. Paul then had to blame the Corinthians: whether the circumstances be the same or different: they think it enough that Latin, which is used in the Mass, is a language not understood by a great many ignorant people, and therefore they can say with S. Paul, that an idiot, or an unlearned man, knows not when to say Amen to what he hears. Two things offer themselves here to the consideration of every man, who is disposed to judge impartially. 1. Whether the same reasons and motives now subsist for blaming the Catholics. 2dly, whether the conveniences and inconveniences, duly examined, it be found more commendable to perform the public liturgy, in those, which are the most general languages, as in Latin or Greek, or to have all liturgies turned into as many tongues, as the ignorant people understand and speak in different places. As to the first, S. Paul does not absolutely forbid the use of this gift of tongues, that were not understood, even by any one (as hath been already observed). All that he blames is, that many, who valued themselves on this gift, spoke at the same time altogether strange tongues, which none understood, but those who had another gift of the 28 But if there be no interpreter, let him hold his peace in the church, and speak to himself and to God.

29 And let the prophets speak, two or three: and let the rest judge.

30 But if any thing be revealed to another sitting, let the first hold his peace.

31 For you may all prophesy one by one: that all may learn, and all may be exhorted:

32 And the spirits of the prophets are subject to the prophets.

33 For he is not the God of dissension, but of peace. as also I teach in all the churches of the saints.

34 Let women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted to them to speak, but to be subject, ^bas also the law saith.

35 But if they would learn any thing, let them ask their husbands at home. For it is a shame for a woman to speak in the church.

36 Or did the word of God come out from you? Or came it only unto you?

37 If any man seem to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him know the things that I write to you, that they are the commandments of the Lord.

38 But if any man know not, he shall not be known.

* Gen. iii. 16.

Spirit, called the interpretation of speeches, on which account in these meetings there was nothing but confusion, without any profit, edification, or instruction, at a time, and in such circumstances, when instructions were absolutely necessary, both for the new converted Christians, and also for the infidels, who flocked thither as much as the Christians. The case is now quite different, when none but Catholics meet, (especially at the Mass) who have been instructed from their infancy, what they are to believe, as to the mysteries of faith, and what they ought to practise, as to the commandments, the sacraments, prayer, and other points, which they have in their catechisms, or which have been delivered to them by catechetical discourses and instructions. And if they have been happily converted, or are upon their conversion, they are always carefully instructed in the tongue which they understand, as to what they ought to believe, and in the duties of a Christian life. Besides this, all present are frequently instructed by sermons and exhortations, not only on Sundays and holidays, but daily in Advent and Lent, as it is the custom in Catholic countries. I know some of our adversaries have been persuaded, that we preach in Latin to the people; to be convinced of the contrary, let them come and hear us; it is the worst I wish them. As to the sacrifice of the Mass, which none but they who are priests, can offer for the people, of which also a great part, according to the institution of the Church, as the Council of Trent observes, (sess. 22. cap. 5.) is said with a low voice: it is not performed in Latin in the Western Church, or in Greek in the East, that the meaning of the words may be concealed, since the same Council has laid an express injunction upon all pastors, and upon all that have care of souls, that they frequently, and especially on Sundays, and holidays, expound to the people, what is contained in the Mass, to wit, the parts, and the ceremonies. See 22d sess. cap. 8. And this command is again repeated, (sess. 24. cap. 7.) that they instruct the people in their mother tongue concerning the divine mysteries and sacraments. All that can read, may find the Mass translated into their own language, and the most ignorant are taught and instructed, that by the different parts are represented the death and sufferings of our Saviour, Christ: they are taught how to offer up at the same time their intention, their heart, and their prayers: to confess themselves sinners before God, as the priest does, how they ought to endeavour to praise, and adore Christ with the blessed spirits in heaven; how they ought to beg graces of God, by saying the Lord's prayer; how they ought, at the same time, at least in spirit and desire, to receive the holy sacrament of the eucharist, with a sincere repentance, with humility and devotion. Cannot all things, then, be done to edification, as S. Paul requires, though the words of the Mass, and public liturgy, be in a language which the ignorant do not understand, but which, of all others, is the most general! Now the second thing to be examined is, whether all things duly considered, it be better to retain the public Church-offices in Latin, and in those ancient dead languages, as they are called, or to turn the liturgy into as many tongues, as are spoken in different places and countries! Our adversaries, by this new alteration which they have made, have gone against the judgment of all Christian Churches, both in the West and East, and in all parts of the world. For as Mons. Simon takes notice, in his Critica, all other Churches (the Protestant only excepted) have judged it more expedient, to stick to the words and languages of their ancient liturgies, the Grecians to the ancient Greek, which now the ignorant among them do not understand: the like is to be said of the ancient Syriac, Arabic, Coptic, &c. And it is also observed, that the Israelites continued the reading of the law and the prophets, in the ancient Hebrew, which the common people of the Jews did not understand after their return from the Babylonian captivity. It is well known that Latin in this part of the world, is more generally spread and known, than any other language whatsoever. It is taught 39 Wherefore, brethren, be zealous to prophesy : and forbid not to speak with tongues.

40 But let all things be done decently, and according to order.

CHAP. XV.

Christ's resurrection and ours ; the manner of our resurrection.

NOW I make known unto you, brethren, the gospel which I preached to you, which also you have received, and wherein you stand,

2 By which also you are saved : if you hold fast after what manner I preached to you, unless you have believed in vain.

3 For I delivered to you first of all, which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins, ^b according to the Scriptures :

4 ^a And that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures :

5 And that he was seen by Cephas, ^c and after that by the eleven.

6 Then was he seen by more than five hundred brethren at once : of whom many remain until this present, and some are fallen asleep.

7 After that, he was seen by James, then by all the apostles :

8 And last of all, he was seen also by me, as by one born out of due time.

9 ^a For I am the least of the apostles, who am not worthy to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

10 But by the grace of God I am what I am : and his grace in me hath not been void, but I have laboured more abundantly than all they : yet not I, but the grace of God with me :

11 For whether I, or they : so we preach, and so you have believed.

^a Gal. i. 11.—^b Isai. liii. 5.—^c Jonas ii. 1.—^d John xx. 19.—^e Acts ix. 3. Ephes. iii. 8.

every where in all public schools. It is learnt, not only by the ministers of the Church, but by almost all gentlemen, and by persons of all conditions, the poorer sort only excepted. There is this great convenience, that the same priest can perform all the public Church-offices, in all places and kingdoms where he travels. All the faithful, whithersoever they have occasion to go, meet with the same Mass, and liturgy in the same words abroad, which they were accustomed to hear at home. The same uniformity is every where preserved without change or confusion. But according to the method introduced by the Protestants, the liturgy must be changed into as many different tongues, as there are countries and places, and in almost every century, as we see by experience, languages are liable and subject to considerable changes and alterations. From hence arises a danger of changes, as to the doctrine and belief of the faithful : errors and heresies are the consequences, that follow such frequent changes, especially, when by another false principle of the said reformers, every private man and woman has a right to expound the hard and obscure places of the holy Scriptures, which make up the chief and greatest part of all public liturgies in all Christian Churches. I might ask of the Protestants, whether the ignorant people at least, and idiots, as S. Paul calls them, understand the meaning of the Psalms, when they are sung in Hopkins's rhymes ; though they may perhaps know when to say Amen, with the rest. Nor yet does every ignorant man know what the word itself, Amen, signifies, and therefore knows not what he answers. I cannot but here take notice of an unfair way of proceeding, even in the best Protestant translation, by sometimes adding in this chapter the word unknown, and sometimes omitting it. All Catholics are willing to allow, that by the gift of speaking tongues, S. Paul means tongues unknown, though the word unknown is not found so much as once, neither in the Latin, nor even so much as in any one Greek MS. The Protestant translators, for tongues, have put unknown tongues, in all the verses, where S. Paul blames the abuse of this gift ; to wit, v. 2. 4. 13. 14. 19. 27. but they make no such addition, where S. Paul either commends, or permits the speaking in tongues not understood, as v. 5. where he says, I would have you to speak tongues ; and v. 29. where he says, forbid not to speak tongues. It is evident, that there is the very same reason for the addition, or the omission equally in all these verses. Is this to translate faithfully ! I would by no means judge rashly, even of an adversary ; but it looks as if both the addition and omission was with a design of making this popular objection seem to be of greater force against this point of discipline, and practice of the Catholics, and indeed of all Christian Churches. Wi.

2 Now if Christ be preached that he arose again from the dead, how do some among you say, that there is no resurrection of the dead ?

13 But if there be no resurrection of the dead, then Christ is not risen again.

14 And if Christ be not risen again, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain.

15 Yea, and we are found false witnesses of God : because we have given testimony against God, that he hath raised up Christ, whom he hath not raised up, if the dead rise not again.

16 For if the dead rise not again, neither is Christ risen again.

17 And if Christ be not risen again, your faith is vain, for you are yet in your sins.

18 Then they also, who have slept in Christ, have perished.

19 If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men the most miserable.

20 But now Christ is risen from the dead, the first-fruits of them that sleep.

21 ^a For by a man came death, and by a man the resurrection of the dead.

22 And as in Adam all die, so also in Christ all shall be made alive.

23 ^a But every one in his own order : the first-fruits, Christ ; then they that are of Christ, who have believed in his coming :

24 Afterwards the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God and the Father, when he shall have abolished all principality, and authority, and power.

25 For he must reign, ^b until he hath put all enemies under his feet.

26 And the enemy, death, shall be destroyed last :

^c Coloss. i. 18. Apoc. i. 5.—^d 1 Thess. iv. 15.—^e Ps. cix. 6. Heb. i. 13. and x. 13.

CHAP. XV. This chapter is addressed to some among the Corinthians who denied the resurrection : S. Paul, therefore, in order to cure this philosophical opinion, gives them his counsel and advice in this chapter ; and lest he might be thought to preach up a new doctrine, in the beginning of his admonitions he informs them that he is preaching no other gospel than what he has always taught, and wherein they believe. Estius.

VER. 7. He was seen by James. The time is not mentioned in the gospels. Wi.
VER. 8. As by one born out of due time ; not born at the ordinary term, meaning after Christ's ascension. He calls himself so out of humility, abating being commonly imperfect and less than others. Wi.

VER. 10. I have laboured more abundantly. He does not say better, or that he excelled them ; and even as to his labours, he gives the honour to God : Not I, but the grace of God with me. Wi.

VER. 13-23. He brings many reasons to convince them of the resurrection. 1. If there be no resurrection for others, Christ is not risen again ; but his resurrection (as he tells them v. 4) was foretold in the Scriptures. 2. And if Christ be not risen again, . . . your faith is also in vain, this being one of the chief articles of your belief. 3. We shall be found guilty of lies and impostures ; and yet we have confirmed this doctrine by many miracles. 4. It would follow that you are not freed from your sins ; i. e. unless Christ, by his resurrection, has triumphed over sin and death. 5. Without a resurrection we Christians, who live under self-denials and persecutions, would be the most miserable of all men, neither happy in this world nor in the next, for the happiness of the soul requires also a happy resurrection of the body. 6. Christ is the first-fruits, and the first begotten of the dead, of those who have slept ; and by his being the first-fruits, it must be supposed that others also will rise after him. 7. As death came by the first man, (Adam) so the second man (Christ) came to repair the death of men, both as to body and soul ; and without Christ's resurrection, both the souls of men have remained dead in their original sins, and their bodies shall not rise again. Wi.

VER. 24, &c. Afterwards the end ; i. e. after the general resurrection of all, will be the end of the world. Then Christ shall deliver up his kingdom, as to this world, over all men, over the devil and his apostate angels, signified by principality and powers ; not but that Christ, both as God and man, shall reign for all eternity, not only over his elect but over all creatures, having triumphed by his resurrection over the enemy of mankind, the devil, over sin, and over death, which is as it were the last enemy of his elect. At the general resurrec-

For he hath put all things under his feet. And whereas he saith, 27 All things are put under him; undoubtedly, he is excepted, who put all things under him.

28 And when all things shall be subdued unto him: then the Son also himself shall be subject to him who subjected all things to himself, that God may be all in all.

29 Otherwise what shall they do, who are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not again at all? why are they then baptized for them?

30 Why also are we in danger every hour?

31 I die daily by your glory, brethren, which I have in Christ Jesus, our Lord:

32 If (according to man) I fought with beasts at Ephesus, what doth it profit me if the dead rise not again? ^bLet us eat and drink, for to-morrow we shall die.

33 Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners.

^a Ps. viii. 8. Heb. ii. 8.

tion, Christ will present these elect to his heavenly Father, as the fruits of his victory over sin and death; and though as man he came to suffer and die, and was also made subject to his eternal Father, yet being God as well as man, he is Lord of all, and will make his faithful servants partakers of his glory in his heavenly kingdom. Wi.

VER. 28. The Son also himself shall be subject to him. That is, the Son will be subject to the Father, according to his human nature, even after the general resurrection; and also the whole mystical body of Christ will be entirely subject to God, obeying him in every thing. Ch.

VER. 29. *Who are baptized for the dead. He still brings other proofs of the resurrection. This is a hard place, and the words are differently expounded. 1. Several late interpreters understand a metaphorical baptism, and that to be baptized for the dead, is to undertake self-denials, mortifications, and works of penance, in hopes of a happy resurrection; and this exposition agrees with what follows, of being exposed to dangers every hour, of dying daily, &c. But if this had been the apostle's meaning, he would rather have said, Who baptize themselves. Besides, this exposition is not so much as mentioned in any of the ancient interpreters. 2. Some think that S. Paul tells the Corinthians that they ought not to question the resurrection of the dead, who had a custom among them, if any one died without baptism, to baptize another that was living for him; and this they did, fancying that such a baptism would be profitable to the dead person, in order to a happy resurrection. Tertullian mentions this custom in one or two places, and also S. Chrys. on this place. But it does not seem probable that S. Paul would bring any argument of the resurrection from a custom which he himself could not approve, nor was ever approved in the Church. 3. S. Chrys. and the Greek interpreters, who generally follow him, expound these words, who are baptized for the dead, as if it were the same as to say, who receive baptism with hopes that they themselves, and all the dead, will rise again; and therefore make a profession, when they are baptized, that they believe the resurrection. So that S. Paul here brings this proof among others, that they who have been made Christians, and continue Christians, cannot call in question the resurrection, which they professed to believe in their creed at their baptism, the creed being always repeated before they were baptized. 4. Others, by being baptized for the dead, understand those who begged and called for baptism when they were in danger of death, and would by no means go out of this world without being baptized, hoping thereby to have a happy resurrection of their bodies; so that to be baptized for the dead is the same as on the account of the state of the dead, which they were entering into. See S. Epiphani. hæc. viii. p. 114. Edit. Petavii. Wi.—Some think the apostle here alludes to a ceremony then in use; but others, more probably, to the prayers and penitential labours performed by the primitive Christians for the souls of the faithful departed: or to the baptism of afflictions and sufferings undergone for sinners spiritually dead. Ch.

VER. 31. By your glory.† He seems, especially by the Greek text, to call God to witness, and to protest by the reasons he has to glory or boast in their conversion, that his life is as it were a continual death. Others expound it, I die daily for your glory; or, that I may have reason to glory for the progress of the gospel. Wi.

VER. 32. With beasts at Ephesus. He seems to mean, with men as cruel and brutal as beasts: for there is not sufficient reason to think that at Ephesus he was exposed to beasts in the amphitheatre. Wi.—Interpreters are divided upon this passage. Calmet is of opinion that S. Paul was exposed in the amphitheatre at Ephesus, but was secured from all injury by the all-powerful hand of God: he produces the testimony of S. Chrys. Theo. S. Amb. S. Cyp. and S. Hil. all of whom understand this passage in the literal sense. Nicephorus cites a book, entitled The Travels of S. Paul, in confirmation of this fact, wherein (he informs us) there is a long account of this transaction. S. Jerom says, that S. Paul was condemned by the governor of Ephesus to be devoured by beasts. Estius seems to maintain the same opinion as Chail. To inspirit us to combat, 34 Awake, ye just, and sin not. For some have not the knowledge of God: I speak it to your shame.

35 But some one will say: How do the dead rise again? or with what manner of body shall they come?

36 Senseless man, that which thou sowest, is not quickened, except it die first.

37 And that which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be: but bare grain, as of wheat, or of some of the rest.

38 But God giveth it a body as he will: and to every seed its proper body.

39 All flesh is not the same flesh: but one is that of men, another of beasts, another of birds, another of fishes.

40 And there are bodies celestial, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and that of the terrestrial another.

41 One is the glory of the sun, another the glory of the moon, and another the glory of the stars. For star differeth from star in glory:

^b Wisd. ii. 6. Isai. xxii. 18. and lvi. 12.

it is advisable to turn our eyes frequently to a future life. The brevity of the present is a principle common to the morality of Jesus Christ, and to that of Epicurus. But how contrary are the conclusions! Why should we not rather say: "Let us watch, and fast, and pray, and do penance, for to-morrow we die; and after that, judgment."—Let us eat and drink, &c. That is, if we did not believe that we were to rise again from the dead, we might live like the impious and wicked, who have no belief in the resurrection. Ch.

VER. 33. Evil communications (or discourses) corrupt good manners. He hints that this error against the resurrection, and the other faults into which they had fallen, were occasioned by the heathen philosophers and other vain teachers among them. Wi.

VER. 35-50. How do the dead rise again? He now answers the objections these new teachers made against the resurrection. S. Chrys. reduces them to these two questions: how is it possible for them to rise? and in what manner, or with what qualities, will they rise? To shew the possibility, he brings the example of a grain of wheat, or of any seeds, which must be corrupted, and die as it were in the ground, and then is quite changed, comes up with a blade, a stalk, and an ear quite different from what it was when sown, and yet comes to be wheat again, or to be a tree that produces the same kind of fruit: so God can raise our bodies as he pleaseth. He also tells them that there are very different bodies, terrestrial, and celestial, some more, some less glorious, differing in beauty and other qualities, as God pleaseth. As the sun is brighter than the moon, and as one star is brighter than another, so shall it be at the general resurrection. But all the bodies of the elect shall be happily changed to a state of incorruption. v. 42. Here the bodies even of the just are subject to corruption, to decay, liable to death, but they shall then rise to a state of incorruptibility and immortality: And so he answers the second question, that here every one's body is a weak, sensual, animal body, clogged with many imperfections, like that of Adam after he had sinned; but at the resurrection, the bodies of the saints shall be spiritual bodies, blessed with all the perfections and qualities of a glorified body, like to that of Christ after he was risen.—S. Paul also, comparing the first man (Adam) with Christ, whom he calls the second or the last Adam, (v. 45) says that the first Adam was made a living soul, (i. e. a living animal, or a living creature, with a life and a body that required to be supported with corporal food) but that Christ was made a quickening Spirit: he means, that though he had a true mortal body by his nativity of his Virgin Mother, yet that by his resurrection he had a glorified body, immortal, that needed no corporal food, and that he would also give such spiritual and immortal bodies to those whom he should make partakers of his glory.—But not first that which is spiritual, &c. (v. 46) that is, both in Adam and in us, and even in Christ, the body was first mortal, which should afterwards be made spiritual and immortal by a happy resurrection.—The first Adam (v. 47) was of the earth, earthly, made of clay, and with such a body as could die, but the second man (Christ) was from heaven, heavenly: not that he took a body from heaven, as some ancient heretics pretended, but he was heavenly not only because he was the Son of God, but in this place he seems to be called heavenly even as to his body, after his resurrection, his body being then become spiritual and immortal.—Such as is the earthly man, &c. (v. 48) that is, as the first man, Adam, was earthly by his earthly and mortal body, so were we and all his posterity earthly; but such as the heavenly man, Christ, was heavenly, and rose with a heavenly and immortal body; so shall all those be heavenly, to whom he shall give a spiritual, a heavenly, and an immortal body at their happy resurrection.—Therefore, (v. 49) as we have borne the image of the earthly man, (that is, have been made mortal, and also by sin subject to the corrupt inclinations of this mortal body) so let us bear also the image of the heavenly one, by a new life imitating Christ, by which means we shall be glorified with him, both as to soul and body.—Now this I say, and admonish you, brethren, (v. 50) that flesh and blood cannot possess the kingdom of God; i. e. those that lead a sensual and carnal life, nor the corruption of sin, deserve the state of incorruption in glory. Wi.

42 So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption, it shall rise in incorruption.

43 It is sown in dishonour, it shall rise in glory: It is sown in weakness, it shall rise in power:

44 It is sown a natural body, it shall rise a spiritual body. If there be a natural body, there is also a spiritual body, as it is written:

45 *The first man, Adam, was made a living soul: the last Adam a quickening spirit.

46 But not first that which is spiritual, but that which is natural: afterwards that which is spiritual.

47 The first man was of the earth, earthly: the second man from heaven, heavenly.

48 Such as is the earthly, such also are the earthly: and such as is the heavenly, such also are they that are heavenly.

49 Therefore as we have borne the image of the earthly, let us bear also the image of the heavenly.

50 Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot possess the kingdom of God: neither shall corruption possess incorruption.

51 Behold I tell you a mystery: We shall all indeed rise again: but we shall not all be changed.

52 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall rise again incorruptible: and we shall be changed.

53 For this corruptible must put on incorruption: and this mortal must put on immortality.

54 And when this mortal hath put on immortality, then shall come to pass the saying that is written: ^bDeath is swallowed up in victory.

55 O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?

56 Now the sting of death is sin: and the strength of sin is the law.

57 *But thanks be to God, who hath given us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.

58 Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast and unmoveable: always abounding in the work of

* Gen. ii. 7.—^b Osee xiii. 14.

VER. 51. We shall all indeed rise again, but we shall not all be changed.† This is the reading of the Latin Vulgate, and of some Greek MSS. and the sense is, that all both good and bad shall rise, but only the elect to the happy change of a glorious body. The reading in most Greek copies at present is, we shall not all sleep, (i. e. die) but we shall be all changed: so also read S. Chrysostom: and S. Jerom found it in many MSS. from which divers, especially of the Greek interpreters, thought that such as should be found living at the day of judgment should not die, but the bodies of the elect (of whom S. Paul here speaks) should be changed to a happy state of immortality. This opinion, if it deserve not to be censured, is at least against the common persuasion of the faithful, who look upon it certain that all shall die before they come to judgment. Some expound the Greek only to signify, that all shall not sleep, i. e. shall not remain for any time in the grave, as others who die are accustomed to do. Wi.

VER. 52. In a moment, &c. By the power of the Almighty all shall rise again in their bodies, either to a happy or a miserable resurrection. Wi.

VER. 54. Death is swallowed up in victory, in regard of the saints and the elect, so that it may be said, O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting? over which the saints shall triumph, and also over sin and hell. Wi.

* V. 29. Qui baptizantur pro mortuis, ut baptizabuntur cum vivis. See S. Chrys. Op. p. 154. ἐν τῇ πίστει τῶν νεκρῶν, &c. see Tertul. l. de resurrec. carn. c. 48. and l. v. cont. Marcion. c. 10. and the notes of Rigaltius on these places. See S. Epiphani. hær. viii. p. 114. ἐν τῷ τῶν τῶν ἐκείνων, &c.

† V. 51. Mrior per vestrum glorium, vñ tñm hup'etran καθήκον.

‡ V. 51. Omnes quidem resurgemus, sed non omnes immutabimur; and so some Greek MSS. have, πάντες ἀναστήσομεν, but in most Greek copies we find, πάντες μὲν ἂν κοιμηθῶμεθα, πάντες δὲ ἀλλογησώμεθα. See S. Jer. (Ep. ad Minervium Alexandrium, tom. iv. p. 207. et seq. Ed. Ben.) where he gives at large the different opinions and readings. See also his Epist. to Marcella, (tom. iv. p. 11520) the Lord, knowing that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

CHAP. XVI.

Of collections of alms, admonitions, and salutations.

NOW concerning the collections that are made for the saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, so do you also.

2 On the first day of the week let every one of you put apart with himself, laying up what it shall well please him: that when I come, the collections be not then to be made.

3 And when I shall be with you: whomsoever you shall approve by letters, those will I send to carry your gift to Jerusalem.

4 And if it be meet that I go also, they shall go with me.

5 Now I will come to you, when I shall have passed through Macedonia. For I shall pass through Macedonia.

6 And with you, perhaps, I shall abide, or even spend the winter: that you may bring me on my journey whithersoever I shall go.

7 For I will not see you now by the way; for I hope that I shall remain with you some time, if the Lord permit.

8 But I will stay at Ephesus until Pentecost.

9 For a door is opened to me, great and evident: and many adversaries.

10 Now if Timothy come, see that he be with you without fear, for he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do.

11 Let no man, therefore, despise him, but conduct ye him on his way in peace: that he may come to me. For I look for him with the brethren.

12 As to our brother, Apollo, I make known to you that I earnestly entreated him to come to you with the brethren: and indeed it was not his will at all to come at this time. But he will come when he shall have leisure.

13 Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, do manfully, and be strengthened.

Heb. ii. 14.—1 John v. 5.

166) where he says: Deprehensi in corpore in iisdem corporibus occurrent ei (Christo).

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. S. Paul had been charged by the apostles, at the council of Jerusalem, to collect alms from the faithful of other Churches, for their poor brethren in Palestine. The apostle acquitted himself of his commission with the greatest possible zeal, and he wishes in this chapter to excite the Corinthians to a like generous conduct with the Galatians: (Gal.) a pastoral ordinance this for alms-deeds, which should be prompt, free, and proportionate to our means. It is just to prefer the wants of the children of the Church to others, particularly in those places whence the light of faith has been received, Jerusalem and Rome.

VER. 2. *On the * first day of the week*, which is Sunday, and our sabbath, not the Jewish sabbath, as S. Chrys. observes, so that before this time, the apostles had appointed the first day of the week for the worship of God. Wi.

VER. 5. Now I will come. S. Paul came to Corinth a year after he had written this epistle. Titus, his favourite disciple, arrived at Corinth before S. Paul, and was received with the greatest marks of esteem: by him he sent his second epistle to the Corinthians. Calmet.

VER. 9. A gate is opened to me, large and evident; that is, a fair and good occasion of labouring to convert many, where there are many adversaries. Wi.—The work of God is carried on by the power of the cross, and in the midst of contradictions and persecutions. If we suffer this to damp our courage, we forget that we are ministers of a crucified master, and ought to wear his livery.

VER. 12. As to our brother. S. Paul here makes an apology for sending Timothy to them, who was a young man, and not so renowned for eloquence and sanctity as Apollo, informing them that Apollo did not wish to come, perhaps on account of the commotions that were at Corinth on his account. Est.

14 Let all your actions be done in charity.
15 And I beseech you, brethren, you know the house of Stephanas, and of Fortunatus, and of Achaicus, that they are the first-fruits of Achaia, and have dedicated themselves to the ministry of the saints:
16 That you also be subject to such, and to every one that worketh with us, and laboureth.
17 And I rejoice in the presence of Stephanas, and Fortunatus, and Achaicus, for that which was wanting on your part, they have supplied.
18 For they have refreshed both my spirit and yours. Know them, therefore, that are such.

VER. 13. A Christian is a soldier, environed and attacked on all sides by enemies. It is his duty to guard against surprise. He should never abandon the post of faith, nor the fortress of the Church, unless he wish to fall an easy prey to his adversaries. He should fight with courage, and after each attack, carefully repair the breaches made by the enemy, that he may be in a condition to sustain fresh attacks by charity, which is the principle, the soul, the life, and heart of our every action.
VER. 15. The first-fruits of Achaia; the first there converted. Wi.
VER. 17. Which was wanting on your part, they have supplied, by informing me, and giving me a full account of all. Wi.
VER. 22. Let him be anathema, accursed. Maran Atha,† which, according to S. Jerom and S. Chrys. signify, the Lord is come already, and so is to be taken as an admonition to those who doubted of the resurrection, and is to put them in mind, that Christ, the Judge of the living and the dead, is come already. The Rabbinical writers tells us, there were three curses among the Jews called by different names; that the first was niddui, which implied an expulsion

19 The churches of Asia salute you, Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the church that is in their house: with whom I also lodge.
20 All the brethren salute you: Salute one another with a holy kiss.
21 The salutation of me, Paul, with my own hand.
22 If any man love not our Lord, Jesus Christ, let him be anathema, Maran Atha.
23 The grace of our Lord, Jesus Christ, be with you.
24 My charity be with you all in Christ Jesus. Amen.

from the synagogues for a time; the second was greater, such being quite cut off from the common society, called Cherem; the third, Maran Atha, the Lord cometh, is coming, or is come, which was followed by exemplary judgments and punishments. Thus Mons. Hure, in his Bible Dictionary, Mr. Legh, in his Critica Sacra, and also Mr. Nary. But whether this be better grounded than many other Rabbinical stories, let others judge. Wi.
VER. 24. Happy, thrice happy the pastor, whose life, labours, zeal, and the testimony of his own conscience, embolden him to say with S. Paul, that he loves the flock of Jesus Christ, that he only loves them for Jesus Christ, and in Jesus Christ, by virtue of the Holy Spirit.

* V. 2. Per unam, that is primam Sabbati, eis plur. καθήκον. S. Chrys. ἐν μ. ροιτῶν κτλ. p. 530.
† V. 22. Maran Atha, μαρὰν ἀθά. S. Chrys. τὶ δὲ ἔστι μαρὰν ἀθά; ὁ κύριος ἡμῶν ἦλθε, &c. See S. Hierom, Epist. ad Marcellam, tom. ii. p. 706, and de nominibus Hebraicis, tom. iv. p. 78.

THE SECOND

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,

TO THE CORINTHIANS.

THE subject and design of this second Epistle to the Corinthians, is much the same as of the former. He comforts and congratulates with those who were now reformed by his admonitions. He blames the faulty with apostolical liberty; and being forced to justify himself and his proceedings against the upstart false teachers, he gives an ample account of his sufferings, and also of the favours and graces, which God had bestowed upon him. This Epistle was written not long after the first, (an. 57.) some months before that to the Romans, from some place in Macedonia, perhaps from Philippi, as marked at the end of divers Greek copies, though it is observed, that those subscriptions are not much to be relied upon. Wi.—In this Epistle S. Paul comforts those who are now reformed by his admonitions to them in the former, and absolves the incestuous man on doing penance, whom he had before excommunicated for his crime. Hence he treats of true penance, and of the dignity of the ministers of the New Testament. He cautions the faithful against false teachers, and the society of infidels. He gives an account of his sufferings, and also of the favours and graces which God hath bestowed on him. Ch.—S. Paul, not being able to come to the Corinthians as soon as he had promised, writes this Epistle to inform them, that it was not through inconstancy, but on account of several weighty reasons, which had hitherto hindered him. Several other reasons, likewise, compelled him to write. For during his absence, several false teachers of the Jews had come amongst them, teaching them that it was necessary to observe the law of Moses, in order to be saved. S. Paul, therefore, first excuses himself, by saying, that the afflictions and troubles he had met with, had hindered him from coming to them. He next orders the fornicator to be restored to favour; after which, he extols his apostleship, forming a comparison between the law of Christ, and of Moses, wherein he blames the false teachers. He then subjoins an exhortation to a pious and holy life, with liberality in their alms, after the example of the Macedonians. As the false teachers had been very industrious in establishing their own reputation, by detracting from that of S. Paul, he enumerates his own sufferings, and the favours he had received from God, shewing that he had much more reason to glory than they; and concludes by exhorting them to correct those faults with which they still remained infected. Estius.—This letter may be justly appreciated as a perfect masterpiece of that animated and solid eloquence, which all interpreters so much admire in S. Paul. V.

CHAP. I.
He speaks of his troubles in Asia. His not coming to them was not out of levity. The constancy and sincerity of his doctrine.
PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and Timothy, our brother, to the church of God that is at Corinth, with all the saints who are in all Achaia:

CHAP. I. VER. 1. S. Timothy, it appears, had been sent to Corinth to confirm the faithful in the doctrine which they had received from S. Paul. After he had fulfilled this commission, he returned to S. Paul, and gave him an account how they had behaved, and what good effects his first letter had produced. He styles him brother, to conciliate to him the esteem and respect of the Corinthians. This epistle is not merely addressed to the Corinthians, but to all Achaia, 191

2 Grace to you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.
3 *Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all consolation,
4 Who comforteth us in all our tribulation: that
* Ephes. i. 3. 1 Pet. i. 3.
of which Corinth was the capital. Estius.—Others think that Timothy had left Corinth before S. Paul's first epistle had arrived thither; and that this determined S. Paul to send Titus with another disciple thither. See 2 Cor. xii. 18. From him S. Paul had the consolation to learn the happy effects produced by his first letter. See ibid. vi. 7. 11.
VER. 4. Wherewith we also are exhorted by God. The Latin interpreter some (1521) we also may be able to comfort them who are in all distress, by the exhortation wherewith we also are exhorted by God.

5 For as the sufferings of Christ abound in us: so also by Christ doth our comfort abound.

6 Now whether we be in tribulation, for your exhortation and salvation: or whether we be comforted, for your consolation: or whether we be exhorted, for your exhortation and salvation, which worketh the enduring of the same sufferings which we also suffer.

7 That our hope for you may be steadfast: knowing that as you are partakers of the sufferings, so shall you be also of the consolation.

8 For we would not have you ignorant, brethren, of our tribulation, which came to us in Asia, that we were pressed out of measure above our strength, so that we were weary even of life.

9 But we had in ourselves the answer of death, that we should not trust in ourselves, but in God, who raiseth the dead:

10 Who hath delivered, and doth deliver us out of so great dangers: in whom we hope that he will yet also deliver us,

11 You also helping in prayer for us: that for this gift obtained for us, by many persons, thanks may be given by many in our behalf.

12 For our glory is this, the testimony of our con-times translates the same Greek word by exhorted, sometimes by comforted: so the sense may be, with which we are comforted by God. Wi.—S. Paul knew that his former letter had afflicted them exceedingly; here he comforts them by telling them that God had filled him with consolation in order to comfort them. The Greek rather signifies, by the consolation with which we are comforted. Either explanation is sufficiently clear, though the latter is stronger. We may here remark the great tenderness S. Paul had for the Corinthians, since he here insinuates that he had received comfort from God merely to communicate it to them. Calmet.

VER. 5. S. Paul here styles his own sufferings, the suffering of Christ, to shew that Christ takes part, and suffers in all his members. S. Chrys.—Though it is generally understood to signify the sufferings undergone for Christ. Estius.—If we consider the very intimate union that exists between Jesus Christ, who is the head, and every one of the living members of his body, that is, the Church, that whatever any one suffers, for the cause of truth, Christ is said to suffer, as the Lord said to Saul, why persecutest thou me? and that whatever is given to any indigent brother in the name of a disciple, Christ receives as given to himself, can we want any further proof of the excellence and power of good works, which begin and terminate in charity? A.

VER. 6. Or whether we be exhorted, for your exhortation and salvation.* These words are not in the present Greek copies; the omission is not of moment, being in a manner a repetition of what is in the same verse: the sense is, that this happens to us for your instruction, and that you may be exhorted, or comforted by our example. This is also signified by the following words, which makes you bear (lit. which worketh the enduring) the like tribulations, as we suffer. Wi.—Whatever happens to us, it will always be to your advantage. And certainly it is the greatest comfort when the faithful are in affliction, to see their pastors preaching and planting the faith of Christ, in the midst of afflictions and persecutions. This gives them the greatest courage to bear patiently all adversity, being convinced after the example of their divine master, that by many tribulations we are to enter into the kingdom of heaven. Cajetan.

VER. 8. That we were weary even of life.† The Greek seems to imply the condition of one, who knows not what way to turn himself, seeing no prospect to avoid the dangers. Wi.—The sufferings which we underwent in Asia were so great, that we despaired of escaping even with our life. We were in daily expectation of death; like the criminal, who has been condemned to death, we had no hopes of escaping, but we trusted in God, who has delivered us from all danger, by your intercession, v. 11. He alludes to the tumult raised at Ephesus, and other afflictions which befell him on that account, which, though not mentioned in the Acts, (c. xix. 24, &c.) were of such a nature as to make him weary of life. S. Chrys.

VER. 9. The sentence. Lit. the answer of death, by which death seemed unavoidable; and this God permitted to teach us not to trust, or confide, in ourselves, but in him only, &c. Wi.

VER. 11. That for this gift,‡ or favour, obtained for us by many persons, &c. The words and construction are obscure, both in the Latin and Greek. It would seem a tautology if translated, that by many persons thanks may be rendered by many. Therefore the sense must be, that God must now be thanked by many persons for the benefit in preserving my life, and hearing the prayers of many persons, who before had prayed for my life. Wi.—S. Paul in soliciting the prayers of the Corinthians, did not suppose that this was derogatory to Christ's mediation, nor to the hope he had in God. And can it be more dishonourable to God science, that in simplicity of heart and sincerity of God, and not in carnal wisdom, but in the grace of God, we have conversed in this world: and more abundantly towards you.

13 For we write no other things to you, than what you have read and known. And I hope that you shall know unto the end:

14 As also you have known us in part, that we are your glory, as you also are ours on the day of our Lord Jesus Christ.

15 And in this confidence I had a mind to come to you before, that you might have a second favour:

16 And to pass by you into Macedonia, and again from Macedonia to come to you, and by you to be brought on my way towards Judea.

17 When, therefore, I had a mind to do this, did I use levity? Or the things that I purpose, do I purpose according to the flesh, that there should be with me, It is, and It is NOT.

18 But God is faithful, for our preaching which was to you, was not, It is, and It is NOT.

19 For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, by me, and Silvanus, and Timothy, was not, It is, and It is NOT, but, It is, was in him.

20 For all the promises of God are in him, It is: therefore also by him, Amen to God, unto our glory.

to solicit the aid of saints in heaven than of sinners on earth! Or is it to be supposed, asks S. Jerom, that the intercession of our fellow-men beneath, is more available with God, than the prayers of those, who enjoy the beatific vision above. Cont. Vigil.

VER. 12. And sincerity of God,§ which, according to the style of the Scriptures, seems the same as in great sincerity.—In the grace of God, and more abundantly towards you: the sense seems to be, that God had wrought more wonders and miracles by him for their conversion, than in other places. Wi.—The apostle here indirectly attacks the false teachers, by saying that his doctrine was always the same, in one continued path of sincerity, and that he made no use of the wisdom of this world, like those false doctors, whose whole design was to insinuate themselves into the affections of the Corinthians by speaking what they knew would be agreeable to them. Estius.—He declares that the subject of his glory was, the testimony his own conscience afforded him of having uniformly acted in their regard with sincerity and truth.

VER. 13. What you have read, in my former letter, or letters, and known by my preaching: this he says, to clear himself from the accusation of his adversaries, that his words, preaching, and promises were not to be regarded, saying different things at different times, and promising to come to them, which he had not done. Wi.

VER. 17. When, therefore, I had a mind, and purposed to come to you, did I use levity? was it an effect of levity, of a fickle mind, and of a want of sincerity? or do I purpose and promise things according to the flesh, to human motives and interest, which make me say, and unsay again, so that in me is yes and no? Wi.

VER. 18. But God is faithful: The sense seems to be, as God is faithful, or I appeal to God, who is faithful, that in what I have preached to you, there is not yes and no; my doctrine concerning the faith in Jesus Christ, is and was always the same. Whether I, or Silvanus, or Timothy preached the Son of God, that is what we taught concerning the Son of God, was not yes and no, was not first one thing, and then another; but in him was yes only, that is, in him, and his doctrine, which we have taught, all is yes, firm, and unchangeable.—And all the promises of God, of sanctification and salvation, made to us in him, by his merits and grace, are equally yes, certain, and infallible; and therefore by him, and his promises are Amen to God, must needs be true, unto our glory, will turn to the salvation and glory of his elect in heaven. Wi.

VER. 19. It is, was in him. There was no inconstancy in the doctrine of the apostles, sometimes, like modern sectaries, saying, It is, and at other times saying, It is not. But their doctrine was ever the same, one uniform yes, in Jesus Christ, one Amen, that is, one truth in him. Ch.

VER. 20. The doctrine which the apostle delivered to them was not ambiguous, doubtful, or contradictory, first one thing, then another; on the contrary, it was such, that the apostle could say, (v. 14.) we are your glory.—Amen. All the promises made by God, with regard to Christ, are fulfilled in him; therefore we may say Amen, and give glory to God, through Jesus Christ, who hath fulfilled all his promises. Calmet.—One of the distinctive marks, as the holy fathers affirm, between separatists and Catholics is; the former are fond of innovation, changes, and reform, the latter are scrupulously tenacious of what has been delivered from the beginning. See S. Irenæus, l. i. c. 18. Tertul. de præscript. S. Basil, ep. 12. Vinc. Lyr. See also Les Variations, par Bossuet.

VER. 21–22. This must needs be true, because he is God, who hath confirmed us with you, both as and you in Christ, in the faith, and grace of Christ crucified,

21 Now he that confirmeth us with you in Christ, and he that hath anointed us, is God :

22 Who also hath sealed us, and given the pledge of the Spirit in our hearts.

23 But I call God to witness upon my soul, that to spare you, I came not any more to Corinth : not because we lord it over your faith : but we are helpers of your joy : for in faith you stand.

CHAP. II.

He grants a pardon to the incestuous man, upon his doing penance.

BUT I determined this with myself, that I would not come to you again in sorrow :

2 For if I make you sorrowful, who is he then that should make me glad, but he who is made sorrowful by me ?

3 And I wrote this same to you ; that I may not, when I come, have sorrow upon sorrow, from them of whom I ought to rejoice : having confidence in you all that my joy is that of you all.

4 For out of much affliction, and anguish of heart, I wrote to you with many tears : not that you should be made sorrowful, but that you might know the charity I have more abundantly towards you.

5 And if any one have caused grief, he hath not grieved me, but in part, that I may not burden you all.

who hath anointed us with divine graces, who hath sealed us, as it were, by an indelible character, in the sacraments of baptism, and confirmation, and ordination, when we were made the ministers of Christ, who in this manner hath given the pledge of his holy Spirit in our hearts, a sufficient pledge and earnest of his graces in this life, and of the glory he has prepared for us in the next. Wi.—By these texts, and Eph. iv. the Catholic Church teaches, that we are anointed and consecrated to the service of God, and sealed with a spiritual and distinctive mark, called by divines, a character, (see S. Jer. in Eph. iv. S. Cyril. cateches. 17.) which, as it is indelible, can never be iterated. The same is true of confirmation, and holy orders. See S. Aug. cont. Parm. c. xiii. & Cone. Tarrac. c. vi.

VER. 23. Now as to my not coming to you, I call God to witness, that I only deferred my coming out of kindness to you, and that I came not hitherto to Corinth, to spare you, when by reason of the disorders among you, I must have been forced to use severities against those who were not yet reformed.—Not that we lord it over your faith, nor desire to treat God's faithful with severity, or by shewing the power that God hath given us : but we rather desire to be helpers and promoters of your joy, that we may rejoice together with you in God. And now I have this greatest comfort to hear that you stand steadfast and firm in the faith of Christ. Wi.

* V. 6. In the Greek we only read, εἰς δὲ θλιβόμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως, καὶ σωτηρίας, τῆς ἐνεργουμένης ἐν ἡμῶν τῶν ἀδελφῶν καθήκοντων, ὧν καὶ ἡμεῖς πάσχουμεν εἰς παρακαλούμεθα, ὑπὲρ τῆς ὑμῶν παρακλήσεως καὶ σωτηρίας.

† V. 8. Ita ut tæderet nos etiam vivere, ὥστε ἐξυπορρήσιας. See S. Chrys. b. p. p. 550.

‡ V. 11. Ut ex multorum personis, ejus, quæ in nobis est donatio, per multos gratias agantur pro nobis. The Greek is clearer, ἐνὰ ἐκ πολλῶν προσώπων, τὸν εἰς ἡμᾶς χάρισμα, διὰ πολλῶν εὐχαριστηθῆ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν.

§ V. 12. Sinceritate Dei, εὐκρινεία Θεοῦ, so montes Dei, i. e. magni.

|| V. 22. Pignus spiritus, τὸν ἀρραβῶνα. That by receiving the earnest, says S. Chrys. p. 562. you may be assured to receive the whole.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. S. Paul continues to justify his not coming to them as he promised. He told them that he did not wish to domineer over their faith, but that his whole design was to contribute to their joy, and that he did not wish to visit them as long as any thing remained worthy of correction, lest his presence should only increase their sorrow. And if in his former epistle he made use of strong expressions, it was not through any design to make them sad, but merely to correct them, by which he manifested his great charity for them. Calmet.

VER. 2. Who is he that should make me glad ? &c. The sense is to be gathered from the circumstances. He speaks of the Corinthian guilty of incest, whom he brought to sorrow and repentance, by excommunicating him in his former epistle, and now S. Paul rejoiceth at his conversion. Wi.—The meaning of the apostle is, that if I had come to you in order to make you sorrowful, what pleasure could I have derived from your grief, since you are the only persons who can afford me any, the least comfort ! What motives could have influenced me to undertake so disagreeable a mission ? This is more fully explained in the following verse, which shows this to be the reason why he had written to them. Calmet.

VER. 5. And if any one (he means the same incestuous man) hath caused grief, or caused me to grieve, he hath not grieved me, that is, not me only, but all the virtuous Christians at Corinth : but in part, that I may not charge you all with this fault. The sense seems to be, but in part, that is, it was only one man, and come that joined with him by showing themselves unconcerned for his scandalous crime, so that I do not blame the rest : or as it was but in part, that is, it

6 To him who is such a one, this rebuke is sufficient, which is made by many :

7 So that on the contrary you should rather forgive him, and comfort him, lest perhaps such a one be swallowed up with overmuch sorrow.

8 Wherefore I beseech you, that you would confirm your charity towards him.

9 For to this end also did I write, that I might know the experiment of you, whether you be obedient in all things.

10 And to whom you have forgiven any thing, I also : for, what I forgave, if I have forgiven any thing, it was for your sakes in the person of Christ, 11 That we may not be circumvented by Satan : for we are not ignorant of his devices.

12 And when I was come to Troas, for the gospel of Christ, and a door was opened to me in the Lord, 13 I had no rest in my spirit, because I found not Titus, my brother, but bidding them farewell, I went into Macedonia.

14 Now thanks be to God, who always causeth us to triumph in Christ Jesus, and maketh manifest the odour of his knowledge by us in every place.

15 For we are unto God the good odour of Christ in them who are saved, and in them who perish.

was only a passing trouble for a little time, since by admonitions and severities, he soon repented. Wi.—When last I wrote to you, I was in great anguish on account of the crime of the incestuous man ; but my grief was moderated by the consideration of the behaviour of the rest of the Church of Corinth, which had remained steadfast in faith and virtue. S. Greg. and S. Aug.—It is not the whole Church of Corinth that has caused me this grief, but only one of you : I say this, that you may not believe that I wished to charge you all with this crime. Grotius.

VER. 6. This rebuke already given him, may suffice, and I would have you pardon and comfort him, lest he be overwhelmed, and as it were swallowed up* and devoured by an excess of grief, so that by the artifices of Satan, which we are acquainted with, it turn to his greater prejudice. I wrote, and proceeded in that manner, to know by experience, how far you are obedient to me, and to the ministers of Christ. Wi.

VER. 9. This was another reason why I wrote my former letter to you, viz. to try your obedience, and your attachment to the faith, and that I might know whether the difference of opinion which prevailed among you had prevented you from being obedient. C.—Others explain it thus : I have written this second letter to you to try your obedience, and to know if you will pay the same deference to my orders, when I tell you to receive the incestuous man into your communion, as you did when I told you to separate him from your communion. Estius and Theodorst.

VER. 10. I also. The apostle here granted an indulgence, or pardon, in the person, and by the authority of Christ, to the incestuous Corinthian, whom before he had put under penance : which pardon consisted in a releasing of part of the temporal punishment due to his sin. Ch.—Now as you have pardoned him by my instructions, and have received him again into your communion, I also pardon him, and confirm what you have done, for your sake, as well as for his, and dispense with any further severities of a longer penance, which he deserved. S. Chrys. And I do this in the person of Christ, by that power and authority derived from Christ, which he left to his apostles, when he said, (Matt. xviii. 18) whatsoever you shall loose upon earth, shall be loosed in heaven, &c. not only in the sight of men, says S. Chrys. but in the sight of God, who hath given us this power. Wi.

VER. 11. In the name and in the person of Christ, I ordered him to be excommunicated ; in the same, I order him now to be re-admitted into your communion, and this for your sake. We ought to take care that the remedies we employ, do not give occasion to the triumphs of Satan, by throwing the patient into despair, on account of our too great severity. S. Amb.—The Gr. may be translated : that we may not fall into the power of Satan, on account of our too great severity. Calmet.

VER. 12, &c. When I was come to Troas . . . and a door was opened to me, towards promoting the gospel, which I never neglect, yet I had no rest in my spirit ; I remained still in a great concern for you, not meeting with Titus, from whom I expected with impatience to hear how all things went with you at Corinth : I went on, therefore, bidding them farewell at that time, and deferred the good I might do by a longer stay with them till another time. Wi.—Troas is the same town as the ancient Troy or Ilium, famous for its ten years' siege, when it was destroyed by the Greeks in the year 1184, B.C. Christ. Estius.—Here, though there was a great promise of abundant fruit, S. Paul's solicitude to meet Titus, that he might learn from him the effect of his letter, made him depart for Macedonia, where he had much to suffer. V.

VER. 14. Thanks be to God, who always causeth us to triumph by his grace, so that we every where make manifest the odour of his knowledge, making God known and worshipped, and instructing the people in the faith of Christ, to the advan-

16 To some, indeed, the odour of death unto death : but to the others, the odour of life unto life. And for these things who is so sufficient ?

17 For we are not as many adulterating the word of God, but with sincerity, but as from God, in the sight of God, we speak in Christ.

CHAP. III.

He needs no commendatory letters. The glory of the ministry of the New Testament.

DO we begin again to commend ourselves ? Or do we need (as some do) epistles of commendation to you, or from you ?

2 You are our epistle, written in our hearts, which is known and read by all men :

3 You being made manifest, that you are the epistle of Christ, ministered by us, and written not with ink, but with the Spirit of the living God : not in tables of stone, but in fleshy tables of the heart.

4 And such confidence we have, through Christ, towards God :

5 Not that we are sufficient to think any thing of ourselves, as of ourselves : but our sufficiency is from God :

tage and eternal good of those who hearken to us, and are saved ; but to the greater condemnation of those, who after they have heard of the truth, by their own fault remain obdurate : so that the preaching of the gospel is to some the odour of death unto death, when they remain dead in their sins, they incur an eternal death ; and to them who are converted, the odour of life unto life ; they receive the spiritual life of grace in their souls in this world, and an eternal life in the next. Wi.

VER. 16. The odour of death, &c. The preaching of the apostle, which by its fragrant odour brought many to life, was to others, through their own fault, the occasion of death ; by their wilfully opposing and resisting that divine call. Ch. — And for these things who is so sufficient ? as we whom Christ hath chosen to be the ministers of his gospel ? In the Greek copies and in S. Chrys. we only read, who is fit ? as if he said, who is fit to discharge this great duty, without the continual assistance of God's grace ? The rendering of the Latin Vulgate seems to agree better with the following verse of the next chapter, when he answers their objection, Do we then begin again to commend ourselves ? Wi.—Who are so fit as we who are chosen by God to fulfil his ministry ? If God had not chosen us, how should we have been able to acquit ourselves of so arduous an undertaking ? for we did not intrude or thrust ourselves into this ministry. C.—Though it is not so difficult for those to preach the gospel who corrupt its doctrines, who weaken its truths, who disguise its obligations, and who mix the word of God with human inventions in order to be more esteemed, or for the sake of filthy lucre, like those who mix and adulterate their wines, in order to be the greater gainers. S. Chrys.—But we preach the word in all sincerity, as on the part of God, in the presence of God, and in the Spirit and person of Jesus Christ. V.—In this grand work all may justly tremble, for who is fit ? as we read in the Greek.

VER. 17. We are not as many false doctors and preachers, who adulterate the word of God, by mixing human doctrine, to be more esteemed, or for gain-sake. The expression is metaphorical, from the custom of those who mix and adulterate wines, says S. Chrys. for their greater gain and advantage. Wi.

* V. 7. Ne forte . . absorbatur, καταποθῇ, absorbatur, deglutitur.

† V. 10. In persona Christi, ἐν προσώπῳ Χριστοῦ, [not only before Christ] and S. Chrys. says, ὡς τοῦ Χριστοῦ κλειόμενος, Christo jubente, though he had not done sufficient penance, nor deserved it : οὐ γὰρ ἐκείνῳ ἄξιός ἐστι, οὐδὲ ἐκείνῳ ἀρχοῦσαν μετέδοιεν ἐπιδείξασθαι

‡ V. 16. Et ad hæc quis tam idoneus ? but in the Gr. without tam ; καὶ πρὸς ταῦτα τίς ἱκανός.

§ V. 17. Adulterantes, καταλείποντες, cauponantes ; upon which S. Chrys. p. 576, δταν τίς νοθεύῃ τὸν οἶνον.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. The apostle had been obliged, in different parts of his first epistle to say some things to his own advantage, in order to maintain the dignity of his ministry against false teachers, who had endeavoured to lessen his authority. He is again obliged to shew the excellency of his ministry, and the superiority of the gospel over the law of Moses. Theodoret.—We have not need, he says, of commendatory letters, like those false teachers : we have only to say that we founded the Church of Corinth, and we shall be sufficiently known. Your religion, your piety, and your virtues are renowned in the whole world. v. 2. This is our letter : we have no need to speak : the effects speak for themselves. But still this is not our doing ; for we are not sufficient to think any thing of ourselves. v. 5. This letter is not of our writing ; we could only do the same as Moses in the old law, prepare the tables, (ministered by us) it was God himself that wrote the ten commandments, and it is God himself that has written this our letter, by implanting his faith in your hearts. Calmet.

VER. 2. You are our epistle, better, and of greater force, than any commendatory epistle, written and engraven in my heart, by the love and affection I bear you. You may also be looked upon as the epistle of Christ, because of your zeal (1524)

6 Who also hath made us fit ministers of the new testament : not in the letter, but in the Spirit : for the letter killeth : but the Spirit giveth life.

7 Now if the ministration of death, engraven with letters upon stones, was glorious ; so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses, for the glory of his countenance, which is done away :

8 How shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather in glory ?

9 For if the ministration of condemnation be glory : much more the ministration of justice aboundeth in glory ?

10 For even that which was glorious in this part was not glorified, by reason of the glory that excelleth.

11 For if that which is done away, was glorious, much more that which remaineth is in glory.

12 Having, therefore, such hope, we use much confidence :

13 * And not as Moses put a veil over his face, that the children of Israel might not steadfastly look on the face of that which is made void,

* Exod. xxxiv. 85.

for the Christian religion, written upon the soft and fleshy tables of your tender affections, with which you have received, and kept his precepts ; and not like the precepts of the law, which were engraven on tables of stone, which the hard-hearted Jews did not keep. Wi.

VER. 8. Though the Scriptures be of the Holy Ghost, the proper book of Christ's doctrine is in the hearts of the faithful, the true mansions of the holy Spirit. Hence S. Irenæus says : " If the apostles had left no writings, ought we not to follow the order of tradition they delivered to the persons to whom they committed the Churches ? How many barbarous nations have received and practised the faith without any thing written in ink and paper ? l. iii. c. 2.

VER. 5-6. To think any thing of ourselves, that may deserve a reward in heaven.—But Christ hath made us fit ministers of his New Testament by the Spirit : for the letter of the Old Testament killeth, but the Spirit of the New Testament giveth life. Wi.—The letter. Not rightly understood, and taken without the spirit. Ch.—This verse, (6th) refers to that in the last chapter, where he says : And for these things who is so fit ? Who is so capable of such a ministry ? It is God alone who gives us strength, light and grace. I am far from giving a part only to God, and a part to myself. It all exclusively belongs to him. S. Chrys.

VER. 7. Now if the ministration of death : he meaneth the former* law, which by giving them a greater knowledge, and not giving graces of itself to fulfil those precepts, occasioned death, was notwithstanding glorious, accompanied with miracles on Mount Sinai, and so that the Israelites, when Moses came down from the mountain, could not bear the glory of his countenance, which he was forced to cover with a veil, when he spoke to them. Shall not the ministration of the Spirit in the new law, which worketh our sanctification and salvation, abound with much greater glory ? especially since the old law was to be made void, and pass away.—Neither was that glorified, or to be esteemed glorious, in comparison of the new law, the blessings of the new so far surpassing those of the old law. Wi.—If the law of Moses, written on tables of stone, which was only able to cause death, inasmuch as it gave us light sufficient to know what was right, though it did not give us strength or graces to comply with the obligations imposed by it ; if this law, nevertheless, was accompanied with so much glory, that Moses was obliged to put a veil over his face, what must we think of the ministry of the Spirit, and of the glorious duties of the apostleship ? How ought our glory to be manifest, and who is fit for such an undertaking. If I thus extol the excellency of my ministry, do not imagine that I attribute any thing to myself. I am unworthy of this office, which so far surpasseth that of Moses, that his glory (v. 10) could not be truly called glory, when compared with this of ours, which so far excelleth his. Calmet.—The letter of the New Testament also, not truly taken or expounded by the Spirit of God, which is in his Church, must in the same manner be said to kill. See S. Austin, serm. 70. & 100. de tempore. & l. de spir. & lit. c. 5. 6. & de in.

VER. 12. Having therefore such hope, we use much confidence and assurance, and need not conceal God's promises, nor put a veil over our face, as Moses did, the children of Israel not being able to look on the face of that which is made void, meaning on that passing glory of Moses, to whom the law was given, and of that law, and all that belonged to it, which was only to last till the coming of Christ, and which is now made void. The reading of the ordinary Greek is now different, viz. that they looked not on the end of that which is now made void, meaning by the end, on Christ, who was the end of the law, which now by his coming is abolished and made void, as it was always designed to be. Wi.

VER. 18. The apostle here informs the Corinthians that the apostles speak with confidence, without any veil, discovering to men mysteries hidden from the foundation of the world ; not like Moses, who put a veil on his face that the Israelites might not look steadfastly, or might not discover the weakness and short duration of the law, which was represented by the light that surrounded his face, and which quickly passed away. S. Paul here gives the allegorical explanation of the light and veil on the face of Moses. Estius.

14 But their senses were made dull. For, until this day, the self-same veil, in the reading of the old testament, remaineth not taken away, (because in Christ it is done away.)

15 But even until this day when Moses is read, the veil is upon their heart.

16 But when they shall be converted to the Lord, the veil shall be taken away.

17 *Now the Lord is a Spirit: and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty.

18 But we all, beholding the glory of the Lord with face uncovered, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory, as by the Spirit of the Lord.

CHAP. IV.

The sincerity of his preaching: his comfort in his afflictions.

THEREFORE, seeing we have the ministration, according as we have obtained mercy, we faint not.

2 But we renounce the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor adulterating the word of God, but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience, in the sight of God.

3 And if our gospel be also hidden, it is hidden to those who perish:

4 In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of unbelievers, that the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God, should not shine unto them.

5 For we preach not ourselves, but Jesus Christ, our Lord: and ourselves, your servants, through Jesus.

6 For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the

* John iv. 24.

VER. 14-15. But the senses and minds of the Jews have been dulled, hardened, and blinded, so that to this day we may say the veil remains over their eyes and minds, and hearts; that is, the greatest part of them understand not Moses' books, prophecies, and those things that were figures of Christ. But they shall understand them, and the veil shall be taken off, when they shall be converted before the end of the world. Wi.

VER. 17. Now the Lord is a Spirit. Many expound it, the Spirit is the Lord. And where this Lord and this Spirit is, there is liberty; i. e. by this Spirit, they who are sanctified are freed from the slavery of sin and the devil. Wi.—We must recollect what he had said before, that the letter killeth and that the Spirit giveth life; that by the Spirit was meant the gospel, and by the letter was meant the law of Moses. Here he says that God is the Spirit, in opposition to the law of Moses; that he is the Author of the liberty of the children of God, in the new law; that in the new law are found the true adorers in spirit and truth, in opposition to the spirit of servitude which animated the Jews. Calmet.

VER. 18. We all, beholding, &c. i. e. we who have been called to the faith of Christ, have received a greater knowledge; and we hope and believe to be hereafter transformed into the same image, and to be in some measure like unto God, whom we shall see and enjoy, when we pass from the less glory of grace and sanctification in this life, which is the seed of glory, to the state of a more perfect glory and happiness in heaven, says S. Augustin. Wi.

* V. 7. Ministratio mortis, διακονία θανάτου. Thus, says S. Chrysa. he calls the law νόμος θάνατον λέγειν. p. 584.

† V. 12. In faciem ejus quod evacuatur; but the common Greek copies, and also S. Chrysa. eis τὸ ἴδιον, in finem.

‡ V. 18. S. Aug. de gloria fidei in gloriam speciei, de gloria, quâ Filii Dei sumus, in gloriam, quâ similes ei erimus, quoniam videbimus eum sicuti est.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. The apostle, having in the last chapter shewn the excellence of his ministry above that of the law, proceeds to inform them of his own labours, &c. in order to destroy the credit which the false teachers had acquired amongst the Corinthians, and to caution them against any attempts that these teachers might make to destroy what had caused S. Paul so much trouble to effect. But he still refers all to God. As for these false teachers, what Churches had they founded! what persecutions have they endured! Calmet.

VER. 8. The apostle here brings another proof of the sincerity of his preaching, viz. the success with which it is attended: And he says, if there be any who have not yet received it, that is their own fault. For had they been as eager to receive it, as we have been to announce it to them, the whole world had long since been converted. Theodoret.

light of the knowledge of the glory of God, in the face of Christ Jesus.

7 But we have this treasure in earthen vessels: that the excellency may be of the power of God, and not of us.

8 In all things we suffer tribulation, but are not distressed: we are straitened, but are not destitute:

9 We suffer persecution, but are not forsaken: we are cast down, but we perish not:

10 Always bearing about in our body the dying of Jesus, that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our bodies.

11 For we who live, are always delivered unto death for Jesus' sake: that the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our mortal flesh.

12 So then death worketh in us, but life in you.

13 But having the same spirit of faith, as it is written: *I have believed, therefore I have spoken: we also believe, and therefore we speak:

14 Knowing that he who raised up Jesus, will raise us up also with Jesus, and place us with you.

15 For all things are for your sakes: that the grace abounding through many, may abound in thanksgiving to the glory of God.

16 For which cause we faint not, but though our outward man is corrupted: yet the inward man is renewed day by day.

17 For our present tribulation, which is momentary and light, worketh for us above measure exceedingly an eternal weight of glory.

18 While we look not at the things which are seen, but at the things which are not seen. For the things b Ps. cxv. 10.

VER. 4. In whom the God of this world hath blinded the minds of unbelievers.* Thus the words are placed, both in the Latin and Greek text, so that the true God seems to be called the God of this world, as he is elsewhere called the God of heaven, the God of Abraham. God, says S. Chrys. blinded, that is, permitted them to be blinded. Others translate, in whom God hath blinded the minds of the infidels of this world; so that this world may be joined with unbelievers, and not with God: and by the God of this world, some understand the devil, called sometimes the prince of this world, that is, of the wicked. Wi.

VER. 6. The light to shine out of darkness. He alludes to what is related at the first creation, when God divided the light from darkness. Gen. i. 4.—In the face of Christ Jesus, which may signify in the person of Christ, who was the true light enlightening every man, that comes into this world. John i. 9. Wi.

VER. 8. We are straitened.† This, by the Greek, seems the sense of the Latin word, which is taken to signify, one perplexed, and in a doubt. See Jo. xiii. 22. Acts xxv. 20. Gal. iv. 20. Wi.

VER. 10. That the life also of Jesus may be made manifest in our bodies, when we suffer, and undertake voluntary sufferings for his sake. Wi.

VER. 12. Death worketh in us, when we are under persecutions, and dangers of death, and life in you, who live in ease and plenty. Wi.—The preaching of the gospel, which we undertake in such a disinterested manner, and which exposes us to so many dangers, is the cause of death to us, but of life to you. It draws down upon us a thousand dangers and disgraces; but procures you all kinds of advantages. You tranquilly enjoy the fruit of our labour, though we do not envy you this happiness, because we hope one day to enjoy the reward of our labours. Calmet.

VER. 13. We also believe, &c. That is, we have the like faith as David, when he spoke in that manner; we hope and believe, God will deliver us, or at least raise us up from the dead with Jesus. Wi.

VER. 15. &c. For all things, that we suffer, are for your sakes, that many may be brought to give thanks, and to praise God for eternity. This encourages us not to fail, nor faint in the cause of God, under these momentary and light tribulations, which work in us above measure, an exceeding and eternal weight of glory. See the Greek text. Wi.

VER. 17. Worketh. In the Greek, κατεργάζεται, which the English Bible of the year 1577 falsely renders by prepareth, unwilling to allow, with the apostle, that tribulation worketh eternal glory. The ardour with which the apostle speaks is sufficient to inspire the most timid with courage. A life full of crosses, labours, persecutions, injuries, &c. he calls momentary and light, if compared with the eternal, immense, and incomprehensible glory prepared for us. S. Aug.—All earthly substance, compared with the happiness of heaven, is rather a loss than a gain. This life, when put in comparison with that to come, is rather a death than life. S. Greg. in Evangel.

which are seen, are temporal: but the things which are not seen, are eternal.

CHAP. V.

He is willing to leave his earthly mansion, to be with the Lord. His charity for the Corinthians.

FOR we know that if our earthly house of this habitation be dissolved, that we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in heaven.

2 For in this also we groan, desiring to be clothed over with our habitation, which is from heaven:

3 *If so that we may be found clothed, not naked.

4 For we also, who are in this tabernacle, do groan, being burthened: because we would not be unclothed, but clothed over, that what is mortal may be swallowed up by life.

5 Now he that maketh us for this very thing, is God, who hath given us the pledge, of the Spirit.

6 Therefore, having always confidence, knowing that, while we are in the body, we are absent from the Lord:

7 (For we walk by faith, and not by sight)

8 We are confident, and have a good will to be absent rather from the body, and to be present with the Lord.

9 And therefore we labour, whether absent or present, to please him.

10 ^bFor we must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the proper things of the body, according as he hath done, whether it be good or evil.

* Apoc. xvi. 15.—^b Rom. xiv. 10.

* V. 4. In quibus Deus hujus sæculi excæcavit mentes infidelium, in eis ὁ θεὸς τοῦ αἰῶνος τοῦτον ἐτύφλωσεν τὰ νοήματα τῶν ἀπίστων. S. Chrys. ὁμ. η. π. p. 594. lin. 11. says, it should be read thus: ἀναγνώριον, ὅτι τὸν ἀπίστων τοῦ αἰῶνος τοῦτον, ἐτύφλωσεν ὁ θεὸς τὰ νοήματα.

† V. 8. Aporiamur, ἀπορούμενοι, from a and póros, transitus. See Mr. Legh.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. *Of this habitation. In the Gr. of this tabernacle; i. e. of the body. S. Chrys. takes notice that a tabernacle, or tent, is not to dwell in for a long time, but only to lodge in for a while, as this life is short; but the building God has prepared for his elect in heaven, is for eternity. Wi.—But, although the hopes of possessing this eternal mansion consoles us interiorly, and supports us under the pressure of evil, the obligation we have of purchasing it, even at the expense of our lives, does not fail to afflict us. V.

VER. 2. To be clothed over, signifying the natural desire men have not to die, but to be changed without dying to a happy state in heaven. Wi.

VER. 3. That we may be found clothed, not naked,† not divested of the body, as before; i. e. we desire immortal happiness without dying: though some expound it, not naked; i. e. not deprived of the glory we hope for. Wi.

VER. 5. He that maketh us for this very thing, (lit. to this same thing) is God, who created us to be eternally happy, who hath given us the earnest of the Spirit. See G. i. v. 22. Wi.

VER. 6. We are absent from the Lord, and as it were pilgrims. He compares the condition of men in this mortal life with that of pilgrims far from their own beloved country, yet with hopes to arrive there, which makes them willing to undergo dangers, and makes Christians even resigned to death, to a separation of the body from the soul, that they may be present with the Lord, and enjoy him. But let every one reflect that he must be judged, and receive a reward or punishment according to his works v. 10. Wi.

VER. 7. It is only by faith we now walk in this foreign land towards God; we do not as yet feast on Him by any clear view. V.

VER. 11. Knowing, therefore, the fear of the Lord, and how dreadful a thing it is to appear at his tribunal, we endeavour to exhort men to fear and to worship him: and this intention is made known to God, who sees our heart: and I hope our sincere manner of asking and preaching is also known to your consciences. Wi.

VER. 12. We commend not, nor desire to commend ourselves, but they who may do harm to others, and to the progress of the gospel, make it necessary to speak what may give you an occasion to answer their objections, and even to glory in my behalf against those who glory in face, in outward appearances of learning and talents, but not in heart, being sensible themselves that they have no solid grounds of boasting in this manner. Wi.

VER. 12. For whether we be transported in mind, and out of zeal for the good of others seem to exceed in speaking of ourselves, it is to God, for God's honour and that of his ministers: or whether we be more moderate,† (lit. sober) that is, if I speak not, even what with truth I might, of my own actions, it is to you, to give you an example of modesty and humility 11 Knowing, therefore, the fear of the Lord, we persuade men: but to God we are manifest. And I trust also that in your consciences we are manifest.

12 We commend not ourselves again to you, but give you occasion to glory in our behalf: that you may have somewhat to answer them who glory in face, and not in heart.

13 For whether we be transported in mind, it is to God: or whether we be sober, it is for you.

14 For the charity of Christ presseth us: judging this, that if one died for all, then all were dead.

15 And Christ died for all: that they also, who live, may not now live to themselves, but to him, who died for them, and rose again.

16 Wherefore, henceforth we know no man according to the flesh. And if we have known Christ according to the flesh: but now we know him so no longer.

17 If then any be in Christ a new creature: the old things are passed away: *behold all things are made new.

18 But all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself, by Christ: and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation.

19 For God indeed was in Christ, reconciling the world to himself, not imputing to them their sins, and he hath placed in us the word of reconciliation.

20 We are, therefore, ambassadors for Christ, God as it were exhorting by us. For Christ, we beseech you, be ye reconciled to God.

* Isai. xliii. 19. Apoc. xxi. 5.

VER. 14. For the charity of Christ, the love of God, the love that Christ has shewn to me and all mankind, and a return of love due to him, presseth me on, is the motive of all that I do; because I consider that if one, our Redeemer Christ Jesus, died for all, then all were dead, and had been lost in their sins, had not Christ come to redeem us. Thus S. Aug. in many places, proving original sin against the Pelagians. Divers interpreters add this exposition, therefore all are dead; that is, ought to die, and by a new life look upon themselves as dead to sin, which is connected with what follows in the next verse. Wi.

VER. 15. And Christ died for all, (not only for the predestinate or the elect) that they also, who live, may not now live to themselves; that they may not follow their own inclinations of their nature, corrupted by sin, but may seek in all things the will of Christ, their Redeemer, their Lord, to whom they belong, who died and rose again for them. Wi.

VER. 16. Wherefore, henceforth we know no man according to the flesh i. e. having our thoughts and hearts fixed upon Christ, as he is risen, and has prepared for us an immortal life, we know not, i. e. we do not esteem any thing in this mortal life, nor any man according to any human considerations of this life; we regard not whether they are Jews, and the sons of Abraham, or Gentiles; nay, if we have known and esteemed Christ, as descending from Abraham and David, now we know him so no longer, nor consider him as born a mortal man, but as he is risen immortal, and will bless us with an immortal and eternal glory. Wi.

VER. 17. If then any be in Christ, &c. The sense seems to be, if by believing in Christ we are become as it were new creatures, rescued by his grace and his Spirit, the old things are passed away, we must renounce all former carnal affections, all sin and all errors in which either Jews or Gentiles lived.—Behold all things are made new: the New Testament succeeds to the Old, the law and doctrine of Christ to the law of Moses, the Christian Church to the Jewish Synagogue, truth and grace to types and figures, &c. Wi.—With the renovated Christian all his thoughts, sentiments, inclinations, and actions, are new.

VER. 18. But all things (all these blessings of grace and glory) are of God, who hath sent his only divine Son, by whom he hath reconciled us to himself, by his incarnation and death for our redemption. Wi.

VER. 19. Not imputing, i. e. truly taking away our sins, blotting out the handwriting of the decree which was against us, . . . fastening it to the cross, as it is said, Colos. ii. 14. And to us, who are his apostles and the ministers of his gospel, he hath imparted and committed this word of reconciliation, by the preaching of his doctrine, and the administration of his sacraments, &c. In these functions we act and we speak to you as the ambassadors of Christ; we speak to you in his name, we represent his person, when we exhort you to be reconciled to God. "He that heareth you, heareth me." Luke x. 16. Wi.

VER. 20. Be not deaf to this voice, harden not your hearts, suffer yourselves to be moved to the charity of God: it is immense, it is infinite. V.

VER. 21. Him (Christ) who knew no sin, (who had never sinned, nor was capable of sinning) he (God) hath made sin for us. I had translated, with some 21 Him, who knew no sin, he hath made sin for us, that we might be made the justice of God in him.

CHAP. VI.

He exhorts them to a correspondence with God's grace, and not to associate with unbelievers.

AND we helping, do exhort you, that you receive not the grace of God in vain.

2 For he saith: *In an accepted time have I heard thee: and in the day of salvation have I helped thee. Behold, now is the acceptable time: behold, now is the day of salvation.

3 Giving no offence to any one, that our ministry be not blamed.

4 But in all things let us exhibit ourselves *as the ministers of God, in much patience, in tribulation, in necessities, in distresses,

5 In stripes, in prisons, in seditions, in labours, in watchings, in fastings,

6 In chastity, in knowledge, in long suffering, in sweetness, in the Holy Ghost, in charity unfeigned,

7 In the word of truth, in the power of God: by the armour of justice, on the right hand, and on the left:

8 Through honour, and dishonour, through bad name and good name: as seducers, and yet true: as unknown, and yet known:

9 As dying, and behold we live: as chastised, and not killed:

10 As sorrowful, yet always rejoicing: as needy, yet enriching many: as having nothing, and possessing all things.

* Isai. xlix. 8.—† 1 Cor. x. 32.—‡ 1 Cor. iv. 1.—§ 1 Cor. iii. 16. 17. and vi. 19.

French translators, he hath made a sacrifice for sin, as it is expounded by S. Augustin and many others, and grounded upon the authority of the Scriptures, in which the sacrifices for sins are divers times called sins, as Osee iv. 8. and in several places in Leviticus, by the Hebrew word Chattat, which signifies a sin, and is translated a victim for sin. But as this is not the only interpretation, and that my design is always a literal translation of the text, not a paraphrase, upon second thoughts I judged it better to follow the very words of the Greek, as well as of the Latin text. For besides the exposition already mentioned, others expound these words, him he hath made sin for us, to signify that he made Christ like unto sinners, a mortal man, with the similitude of sin. Others that he made him reputed a sinner; with the wicked was he reputed; (Mar. xv. 28.) God having laid upon him all our iniquities. Isai. liii. 6.—That we might be made the justice of God in him; that is, that we might be justified and sanctified by God's sanctifying grace, and the justice we receive from him. Wi.—Sin for us. That is, to be a sin-offering, a victim for sin. Ch.

* V. 1. Habitatio, τοῦ σκήνους.

† V. 3. Si tamen vestiti, non nudi inveniamur, εἰς καὶ ἰδοῦσθαι: some read, ἰδοῦσθαι. See S. Chrys.

‡ V. 13. Sive enim mente excedimus, Deo, sive sobrii sumus, vobis, εἰς γὰρ ἱερότητα, ὅτι εἰς εὐφροσύνην, ἔσιν. See Annot. Mar. iii. 21. p. 147.

§ V. 21. Pro nobis peccatum fecit, ἵνα ὑμῶν ἀμαρτίας ἐκρίνομεν. See S. Aug. l. de pec. Orig. c. 32. serm. 48. de verbis Dei. nunc 134. tom. v. p. 655. and Serm. vi. de verb. Apost. c. 8. Serm. clv. t. 5. p. 745. Epist. ad Honoratum 120, nunc 140. c. 30. tom. ii. p. 450, &c.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. We helping, or in the Greek, working together, that is, with God, as employed by him, or as his ministers, and ambassadors, we exhort you not to receive the grace of God in vain, by resisting his interior graces, by an idle, or a wicked life. Wi.

VER. 2. Now is the day of salvation, by the coming of your Redeemer. Wi.

VER. 3. In this, and the following verses, S. Paul shews his anxious solicitude not to give any, the least occasion of scandal, lest some reproach might fall upon the ministry of the gospel: for nothing is more likely to cast a blemish on the sanctity of religion, than the want of conduct in any of its ministers. If what they say be true, why do their own lives correspond so little with what they say? This will be the cry of all libertines. Calmet.

VER. 8. The apostles maintained the character, and fulfilled the duties of the ministers of Christ, equally in prosperity and adversity; they continued to speak the truth, though regarded by the Jews as seducers; exposed to all kinds of dangers, they relied on God, who preserved them, though in the midst of dangers, and of death itself. Though they possessed nothing in this world, yet God never permitted them to remain in want: his providence procured for them all things necessary. Though they had nothing in their possession, yet they pro-

11 Our mouth is open to you, O ye Corinthians, our heart is enlarged.

12 You are not straitened in us: but in your own bowels you are straitened:

13 But having the same recompense, (I speak as to my children) be ye also enlarged.

14 Bear not the yoke together with unbelievers. For what participation hath justice with injustice? Or what fellowship hath light with darkness?

15 And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath the faithful with the unbeliever?

16 And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? *For you are the temple of the living God: as God saith: *I will dwell in them, and walk among them, and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

17 Wherefore, go out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing:

18 And I will receive you: *and I will be a Father to you: and you shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty.

CHAP. VII.

The apostle's affection for the Corinthians: his comfort and joy on their account.

HAVING, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all defilement of the flesh and of the spirit, perfecting sanctification in the fear of God.

2 Receive us. We have injured no one, we have corrupted no one, we have overreached no one.

* Lev. xxvi. 12.—† Isai. lii. 11.—‡ Jer. xxxi. 9.

cured relief for others, by the alms, of which they were made the disposers, though this latter part is generally understood of the spiritual riches, which they bestowed upon their auditors. Estius.

VER. 11. &c. Our mouth is open to speak with freedom and confidence.—Our heart is enlarged, dilated, as it were, with the warmth of love and charity.—But you are straitened in your own bowels; you have not the like charity and love for me, nor for all your brethren, and for all mankind, &c. Wi.—The apostle here complains, that the Corinthians have not the same affection for him, which he has for them: as if he should say, however enlarged your heart may be, through the love you have for me, it can never equal the ardour of my love for you. He alludes to those who followed some false teachers, of whom he says a little after: Though I love you more, I am less loved.—But having the same recompense, by a just return have the same affection for me, as I have for you. S. Chrys.—Let your heart be dilated for me, and receive the advice I give you as coming from a father, who most tenderly loves his children. A.

VER. 14. Bear not the yoke together with unbelievers. He does not mean, that they must wholly avoid their company, which could not be done, but not to have too intimate a friendship with them, not to marry with them, to avoid their vices. Be ye separate . . . touch not the unclean thing. He does not speak of meats, clean and unclean, according to the law of Moses, nor of legal uncleanness, but what is sinful under the new law of Christ, and would defile the soul, as idolatry, fornication, &c. Wi.

VER. 15. Such as have cast off the yoke of God are called children of Belial. John vii. 44. Belial, in its radical signification, means without yoke. V.

VER. 16. The apostle here blames the too great affection the Corinthians had for the Gentiles, who sometimes invited them to their religious feasts, at which were eaten meats which had been offered to idols, and which gave scandal both to the Christians and Gentiles. To draw them from these feasts he tells them, that they are the temples of the Holy Ghost, and that consequently they ought not to make themselves the temples of devils, by eating of the sacrifices of devils. Calmet.—S. Paul, in this and the foregoing verses, clearly shews that the faithful ought not to frequent, on any account, the tabernacles of those who have left the Church. In the old law, Moses was ordered to command the ancients of Israel, on the part of God, to depart from the tents of those wicked men, lest they be involved in their sins. Numb. xvi. 27.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. Having, therefore, these promises, mentioned just before, that God would be a father to us, &c. let us cleanse ourselves from all filth or defilement of the flesh, and of the spirit, that is, from all kind of sins. It is not without good grounds, that S. Thomas, and the divines in the schools, tell us, that some sins, as those of impurity, gluttony, and drunkenness, may be called carnal sins, bring disorders that in a particular manner affect and defile the body: and that (though all sins whatsoever defile the soul, and when they are such as are called mortal, bring a spiritual death to the soul, by depriving her of the grace of God) other kinds of sins may be called spiritual sins, their 3 I speak not to your condemnation. For we have said before, that you are in our hearts, to die together, and to live together.

4 Great is my confidence with you, great is my glorying for you. I am filled with comfort, I exceedingly abound with joy in all our tribulation.

5 For also, when we were come into Macedonia, our flesh had no rest, but we suffered all tribulation: combats without, fears within.

6 But God, who comforteth the humble, comforted us by the coming of Titus.

7 And not by his coming only, but also by the consolation, wherewith he was comforted in you, relating to us your desire, your mourning, your zeal for me, so that I rejoice the more.

8 For although I made you sorrowful by my epistle, I do not repent: and if I did repent, seeing that the same epistle (although but for a time) did make you sorrowful,

9 Now I am glad: not because you were made sorrowful: but because you were made sorrowful unto penance. For you were made sorrowful according to God, that in nothing you should suffer damage by us.

10 *For the sorrow which is according to God, worketh lasting penance unto salvation: but the sorrow of the world worketh death.

11 For behold this self-same thing, that you were made sorrowful according to God, how great carefulness doth it work in you: yea, defence; yea, indignation; yea, fear; yea, desire; yea, zeal; yea, revenge:

* 1 Pet. ii. 19.

malice and disorder affecting, and residing, as it were, in the mind or spirit of man; such are all the sins of pride, envy, idolatry, &c. Wi.

VER. 2. *Receive us. This, according to S. Chrys. and others, is the same as what he said before, be enlarged or dilated in heart, that is, have a love, and true charity, and a zeal for us, and for the ministers of the gospel.—We have injured no one, &c. He perhaps hints at the ways and proceedings of the false teachers among them. Wi.

VER. 3. I speak not this to your condemnation; he means not to condemn them in general, though some had been blameable.—Great is my glorying. I have great joy in the greatest part of you. Wi.

VER. 5. Our flesh, that is, I myself, had no rest, because of the concern I was in about you, after I had written my last letter. Wi.—Combats without, fears within. Openly persecuted by the pagans, by the Jews, and by false brethren, I was tormented in my interior, by the apprehensions and fears I have just related to you. I was under continual apprehension, that my letter had been written in too severe a tone. I was in doubt whether the incestuous man would submit to the sentence of excommunication, and censure pronounced against him. And I said with myself, will not false teachers undo, and render fruitless all my endeavours to benefit the Church? Will not my letter alienate their minds from me? Calmet.—Our body had no ease, assailed with a deluge of evils from without, by the enemies of the gospel from within, by fears of new persecutions. Menochius.

VER. 6-7, &c. God... comforted us by the coming of Titus, and with the joyful news he brought me, of the submission and repentance of the incestuous man, and of the good state you are in, of your earnest desire to see me. Now I have no reason to repent, that I wrote to you pretty sharply; though my letter troubled you, through the concern you were in on the account of the incestuous man, yet both his sorrow, and yours for his sake, will turn to his, and your greater advantage, with a lasting repentance, such as a true sorrow produces, when it is from God. I see the good effects, by the apology or defence you make for yourselves, by your zealous indignation,† and, as it were, revenge against sin, &c. Wi.

VER. 9. Now I rejoice, &c. I should have been inconsolable, had my letter made you sad, without producing the salutary effect intended by it; but I now rejoice that it caused a sorrow and sadness productive of the great advantages you have reaped from it. Thus in every sentence S. Paul shews the solicitude of a father, seeking nothing but the advancement of his spiritual children. Calmet.

VER. 10. For the sorrow, &c. Sorrow for the loss of temporal goods, such as friends, riches, honours, &c. is productive of no good effects; but on the contrary, it ruins the constitution, exciting in the soul emotions of anger, murmuring, revenge, and brooding melancholy. It moreover betrays an inordinate attachment to creatures. But sorrow for our own sins, and for those of others, sufferings which we endure for the glory of God, work penance unto salvation, which is lasting; or, as the Greek has it, worketh penance unto salvation, of which we shall never repent. For tears shed in prayer unto God are sweeter, in all things you have shewed yourselves to be unde-filed in the matter.

12 Therefore, though I wrote to you, not on account of him who did the wrong, nor of him who suffered it: but to manifest our solicitude, which we have for you,

13 Before God: therefore we were comforted. But in our consolation we did the more abundantly rejoice for the joy of Titus, because his spirit was refreshed by you all.

14 And if I have boasted any thing to him of you, I have not been put to shame, but as we have spoken all things to you in truth, so also our boasting which was made to Titus, is found a truth:

15 And his bowels are more abundantly towards you: remembering the obedience of you all, how with fear and trembling you received him.

16 I rejoice that in all things I have confidence in you.

CHAP. VIII.

He exhorts them to contribute bountifully to relieve the poor of Jerusalem.

NOW we make known to you, brethren, the grace of God, that hath been given in the churches of Macedonia:

2 That in much experience of tribulation they have had abundance of joy, and their very deep poverty hath abounded unto the riches of their simplicity:

3 For according to their power I bear them witness, and beyond their power they were willing,

4 With much intreaty, begging of us the grace and communication of the ministry that is done towards the saints.

says S. Augustine, (Pa. cxvii.) than any pleasure that can be procured from the stage, &c. The tears of the saints are like sweet wine, which inebriate those who love God. S. Aug. Pa. lxxviii.—Contrition, or a hearty sorrow for sin, and not faith alone, as some pretend, is essential to salvation.

VER. 12. I wrote to you not on the account, &c. That is, not only on his account, or the account of his father, who suffered the injury, (by which his father seems to have been then alive) but also to demonstrate the care and solicitude I have for you. I was also overjoyed to find that Titus was so well received by you, with fear and trembling, that is, with so great respect, and submission to him. Wi.

VER. 16. After these proofs of your charity, and the uprightness of your heart, I can reprehend and correct you, exhort and praise you, without fear of my reprehensions separating you from me, without apprehension that my recommendations will prove false, or my confidence vain; I now reckon you as persons entirely devoted to me, and whose affection towards me will never cease. Calmet. See Grotius, Estius, &c. &c.—I therefore rejoice, as we read in the Greek, after this trial, that you will refuse me nothing I ask of you: and this my confidence I shall shew, by asking you to contribute to the wants of distressed brethren in Jerusalem, who have suffered so much for their religion.

* V. 2. Capite nos, χωρησατε ημᾶς. S. Chrys. says, hom. xiv. τοις τοις φιλησατε ημᾶς. Others think the sense is, receive and understand the instruction I give you.

† V. 7. Desiderium, ἐπιποθησιν. S. Chrys. says, οὐδὲ ἐπιθυμῖαν ἀλλ' ἐπιποθησιν.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Grace of God, that hath been given in the Churches of Macedonia*. It was certainly the grace of God, that moved the Macedonians to make those charitable contributions for the relief of their poor Christian brethren in Judea, which S. Paul now speaks of: and therefore with those who seem the most exact translators, (even with the most approved Prot. translation) I have, according to the letter, put the grace of God, rather than the godly charity, as others would have it, whom I had once followed, and which I think probable, taking the grace of God, for a great grace, a great charity, or a great benevolence. Wi.

VER. 2. Poverty hath abounded, &c. The sense seems to be, that in their greatest poverty, they shewed the riches of their simplicity, that is, of a sincere, willing, and charitable heart. Wi.

VER. 4. Begging of us the grace, &c. We may translate, benevolence, or charity, meaning their charitable alms or contributions. It also may be called a grace, a favour, or a charity, which they did for the poor. He exhorts them to these charitable contributions by the example of Christ, who being the God of glory, made himself the lowest and poorest of men to enrich us with grace and glory. Wi.—Towards the saints. The saints whom S. Paul is here speaking of, are the faithful of Jerusalem, who had been deprived of all their property at the beginning of their conversion, by their countrymen, for their steady adherence to the Christian faith, and were now reduced to the greatest want. It is for the sup-

5 And not as we hoped, but they gave their own-selves first to the Lord, then to us by the will of God;

6 Insomuch, that we desired Titus, that as he had begun, so also he would finish in you this same grace.

7 That as in all things you abound in faith, and word, and knowledge, and all carefulness, moreover also in your charity towards us; so in this grace also you may abound.

8 I speak not as commanding: but by the carefulness of others, approving also the good disposition of your charity.

9 For you know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that being rich, he became poor for your sakes: that through his poverty you might be rich.

10 And in this I give counsel: for this is profitable for you, who have begun not only to do, but also to be willing a year ago:

11 Now, therefore, perform it ye also in deed: that, as your mind is forward to be willing, so it may be also to perform, out of that which you have.

12 For if the will be forward, it is accepted according to that which it hath, not according to that which it hath not.

13 For I mean not that others should have ease, and you distress: but by an equality.

14 In this present time let your abundance supply their want: that their abundance also may supply your want, that there may be an equality, as it is written:

15 *He that had much, had nothing over: and he that had little, had no want.

* Exod. xvi. 18.

port of their brethren in Palestine that the charitable contributions here mentioned by S. Paul, were raised in the Churches of Macedon. Calmet.—In the Greek we read, entreating us to receive the alms which they offered as a contribution to the charitable fund destined for the saints, or faithful, at Jerusalem. See Rom. xv. 25. 26. and 1 Cor. xvi. 1. 3.

VER. 5. They gave their own-selves. That is, they resigned themselves and families to the care of Providence for the necessities of life, begging that the apostle would receive their alms, which exceeded even their means. C.—And, by the will of God they also gave themselves to us, that we might dispose of them, and of all that belonged to them, as we should judge proper. V.

VER. 6. We desired Titus. Having experienced the benevolence and generosity of the faithful of Macedon, S. Paul dismisses his faithful disciple, Titus, to exhort the Corinthians to imitate the example of their brethren in Macedon, laying before their eyes, in the following verses, the charity of Christ, who reduced himself to the greatest poverty and indigence, to shew us an example of humility and charity.

VER. 10. Begun not only to do, but also to be willing. The sense seems to be, that they not only began the last year to do it, to contribute, but that they were the first that had this will, and began it of their own accord, by a motion of their own will. And therefore in the next chap. (v. 2.) he boasted of their ready mind to the Macedonians, and that their zeal or emulation had incited a great many. Wi.

VER. 12-13. He tells them that it is the will that chiefly makes their charity acceptable to God, who sees the heart. And that the design is not to make others live at their ease, in a richer condition than those who give, but to make a kind of equality, their brethren in Judea being now in great poverty and want. Wi.—God regards two things in our alms: first, the zeal and good-will with which we give our alms; secondly, the greatness of our charities, that is, if they be proportionate to our means. If you have little, give a little, but with good-will; if you have much, give also much, but with equal benevolence and zeal. God measures the extent of our charity by the greatness of our zeal, not requiring of us what we have not, but what we have to spare, relieving others, without overcharging ourselves. V.—Yielding our superfluities, that the poor may not want necessities. M.

VER. 14. This present time, let your abundance, &c. The sense, according to some interpreters is, that the time may perhaps come, when they in Judea may supply the wants of those in Achaia in the same kind. Others rather understand it of a communication of spiritual for temporal goods, that your alms, by the assistance of those who will pray for you, and your charities, may obtain for you the spiritual riches of grace, which every one stands chiefly in need of. Wi.

VER. 15. He that had much, &c. The words were spoken of those who gathered the manna. Exod. xvi. 18. Every one was there ordered to gather such 16 And thanks be to God, who hath given the same carefulness for you in the heart of Titus.

17 For indeed he accepted the exhortation: but being more careful, of his own will he went unto you.

18 We have sent also with him the brother, whose praise is in the gospel through all the churches:

19 And not that only, but he was also ordained by the churches companion of our travels, for this grace, which is administered by us to the glory of the Lord, and our determined will:

20 Avoiding this, lest any man should blame us in this abundance which is administered by us.

21 ^bFor we provide good things, not only before God, but also before men.

22 And we have sent with them our brother also, whom we have often proved diligent in many things: but now much more diligent, with much confidence in you,

23 Either for Titus, who is my companion and fellow-labourer towards you, or our brethren, the apostles of the churches, the glory of Christ.

24 Wherefore shew ye to them, in the sight of the churches, the evidence of your charity, and of our boasting on your behalf.

CHAP. IX.

A further exhortation to almsgiving: the fruits of it.

FOR concerning the ministry, that is done towards the saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you.

2 For I know your ready mind: for which I boast of you to the Macedonians. That Achaia also was ready a year ago, and your emulation hath provoked a great many.

^b Rom. xii. 17.

a particular measure, called a gomer, and they who for fear of wanting, gathered more, found they had no more than the measure they were ordered to take, and they, who as it happened, took less, still found they had their measure of a gomer. By this example, S. Paul exhorts them to contribute to the relief of their brethren, with confidence in God's providence, and without fear of wanting themselves. Wi.

VER. 16. &c. The apostle then tells them, that he has sent Titus, and two other brethren of known probity and honesty, lest any one should suspect, that he, or they should turn these charitable contributions to their own profit and advantage by enriching themselves, that no one, saith he, might find fault with us in this abundance, which is managed by us. Wi.

VER. 18. Brother, whose praise is in the gospel, through all the Churches.† It may either signify in writing or in preaching the gospel, so that though S. Jerom expound this of S. Luke, who wrote his gospel, (but probably not till after this time) yet S. Chrys. rather understands it of Barnaby, by the words that follow, who was ordained by the Churches companion of our travels. Others also guess it might be Silas or Silvanus. Who the third brother was, is also uncertain. Wi.—Commentators vary in their opinions upon the person here mentioned. S. Chrys. and Theo. are of opinion, that this person is S. Luke or Barnabas; S. Jerom also thinks that it must be S. Luke the evangelist.

VER. 22-23. With much confidence in you, either for Titus, &c. Some expound it of the confidence which this the third brother had in the Corinthians, but it seems rather to be understood of the confidence which S. Paul himself had in them, that they would shew great respect both to Titus, and to the other brethren whom he sent. He concludes, (v. 24.) by exhorting them to these charitable contributions, which he calls the manifestation of their charity, in the sight of the Churches. Lit. in the face of the Churches, in your public meetings. Wi.—Most commentators understand here Apollo, but without any certainty. V.

* V. 1. Gratiam Dei, &c. The same word gratia and χάρις is used, v. 4. 6. 7. where it is generally understood of their charitable contributions.

† V. 18. Cujus laus est in evangelio, &c. See S. Chrys. Op. v. p. 645. ὅθεν μοι δοκεῖ τὸν βαπτιστὰν ἀντιτεταδοῖν.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. The ministry, that is, the contributions for the brethren, so it is also called again, (v. 12.) the ministry of this office, or, as the Greek signifies, of this sacrifice, inasmuch as alms, and such charitable works, are spiritual sacrifices to God. Wi.

VER. 2. That Achaia also was ready. Corinth was the capital of Achaia. S. Paul had formerly exhorted the Macedonians to contribute to the utmost of their power, informing them, that Corinth and all Achaia were prepared a year ago to collect alms, and now the apostle, speaking to the Corinthians, encourages

3 Now I have sent the brethren, that what we boast of concerning you, be not made void in this behalf, that, (as I have said) you may be ready:

4 Lest, when the Macedonians shall come with me, and find you unprepared, we (not to say ye) should be ashamed in this matter.

5 Therefore, I thought it necessary to desire the brethren that they would go to you before, and prepare this blessing before promised, to be ready, so as a blessing, not as covetousness.

6 Now this I say: He who soweth sparingly, shall also reap sparingly; and he who soweth in blessings, shall also reap of blessings.

7 Every one as he hath determined in his heart, not with sadness, or of necessity: "For God loveth a cheerful giver.

8 And God is able to make all grace abound in you: that ye always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work,

9 As it is written: "He hath dispersed abroad, he hath given to the poor: his justice remaineth for ever.

10 Now he that ministereth seed to the sower, will both give you bread to eat, and will multiply your seed, and increase the growth of the fruits of your justice:

11 That being enriched in all things, you may abound unto all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God.

12 For the administration of this service doth not only supply the want of the saints, but aboundeth also by many thanksgivings in the Lord.

* Eccli. xxxv. 11.—b Ps. cxi. 9.

them by the example of the faithful of Macedon, and informs them of the greatness of their charitable contributions, and the greatness of their zeal. Theo.

VER. 3. Titus, and two others.

VER. 5. Not forced from covetousness. Lit. not as avarice, as it were extorted from covetous people, who give unwillingly. Wi.

VER. 8. God is generous to the liberally disposed Christian; filling such as relieve the poor with every species of good, and returning their charities a hundred-fold. M.

VER. 11-12. *All bountifulness, by which is signified, a sincere and free liberality, by giving with a sincere heart, and good intention. S. Paul encourages them to contribute willingly for God's sake, and out of a true charity for their indigent brethren, who will praise, and thank God, and pray for them, &c. Wi.

VER. 15. For his unspeakable gift. Such is the conclusion, which the apostle puts to the subject upon alms-deeds. In the following chapter he proceeds to a new subject; but first thanks the Almighty, that he has enriched the Corinthians with so charitable a disposition. S. Chrys. Theo. and some other commentators think, that by the expression, his unspeakable gift, is meant the incarnation of Christ. The fruit of alms-deeds is the increase of grace in all justice and good works to life everlasting; God granting these blessings for a reward and recompense of charitable works, which therefore are called the seed, (v. 11. supra) or meritorious cause of these spiritual fruits. B.

* V. 11. In omnem simplicitatem, ἀπλότητα, upon which S. Chrys. says, ὁμ. κ'. ἀπλότητα τὴν βασιλείαν καλεῖ, a plentiful abundance.

CHAP. X. In these three following chapters, S. Paul, for the common good of those whom he had converted, and to obviate the prejudice raised by his adversaries against his person and preaching, is forced to set in a true light his apostolical authority, the favours he had received from God, his actions, his labours, and his sufferings, with an apology for mentioning them, giving all the glory to God. Wi.

VER. 1-11. *Who in presence indeed am lowly. Lit. humble, (see Luke i. v. 48.) that is, of a mean aspect, as to exterior appearances, and my speech contemptible, without the ornaments of human eloquence, but am said to be bold when absent, reprehending and threatening by my letters, which are owned to be weighty and strong, let such persons think, and be convinced, that such as I am by my letters, they shall find me by deeds, when I come, and shall be present with them. I desire and beseech you, that I may not be bold when I come, to make use of my authority, nor of those spiritual arms and weapons, of censures and excommunications, nor perhaps of exemplary punishments, which God sometimes in a miraculous manner shewed by his apostles. See the examples of Ananias and Sapphira struck dead at S. Peter's words, (Acts v.) of Elymas struck with blindness (1530)

13 By the proof of this ministry, glorifying God in the obedience of your confession to the gospel of Christ, and for the liberality of your communicating to them, and to all,

14 And in their prayer for you, longing for you, because of the eminent grace of God in you.

15 Thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift.

CHAP. X.

To stop the calumny and boasting of false apostles, he sets forth the power of his apostleship.

NOW I Paul myself beseech you, by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, who in presence indeed am lowly among you, but being absent, am bold towards you,

2 But I beseech you, that I may not be bold when I am present, with that confidence wherewith I am thought to be bold against some, who think of us as if we walked according to the flesh.

3 For walking in the flesh, we do not war according to the flesh.

4 For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but powerful through God to the destruction of fortifications, we subverting counsels,

5 And every height that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every understanding to the obedience of Christ,

6 And having in readiness to revenge all disobedience, when your obedience shall be fulfilled.

7 See the things that are according to outward appearance. If any man trust to himself, that he is Christ's, let him think this again with himself, that as he is Christ's, so are we also.

8 For if I also should boast somewhat more of our for opposing S. Paul's preaching. Acts xiii. He puts them in mind, that the power, which God has given to his apostles, is so great and prevalent, that no force upon earth has been able to resist or hinder the designs of God, as to the spreading of the gospel, and the faith of Christ, and as he expresseth it, to the destruction of fortifications, we subverting counsels, and every thing that opposed the knowledge of God, who reduceth whom he pleaseth to the obedience of Christ. He admonishes them all to return to the obedience due to him, and the true ministers of the gospel, lest he be obliged to revenge, that is, punish such as remain disobedient. He acknowledges that his apostolical power was given him for the good and edification of the faithful, not for their destruction, which he will take care not to abuse. In fine, he tells them here in short, and more at large in the following chapter, that they may, if they please, consider outward appearances, his apostolical functions, the miracles God has wrought in his favour, what he has done, and suffered, by which will appear the advantages he has above his adversaries, who spoke with contempt of him. Wi.

VER. 2. I beg of you now to hear my apology, that I may not be obliged to make use of my authority, when present among you, which they say I have abused, and usurped over you. There is in this discourse a little irony against the facility with which the Corinthians heard the enemies of S. Paul. He alludes to those false teachers who derided his doctrine, by preching upon the observance of the ceremonial parts of the law, for they were Jews, and had introduced many new practices into the Church. We may here take notice, that these observations are applicable to the epistles of S. Paul to the Galatians, and Philippians, for they are the same false teachers whom he there attacks, and who accused S. Paul of being a hypocrite, a seducer, in a word, one who walked according to the flesh. Estius and S. Chrys.

VER. 4. For the weapons, &c. The powers with which we are endowed will easily overturn all obstacles, or fortifications which devils may raise against us. They will easily refute the pride, the learning, and the eloquent sophisms of philosophers, and reduce every height, or high-minded philosopher, to the obedience of Christ. Calmet.—Hence doth our Saviour pray, "I praise thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them to little ones. Yea, Father, for so hath it seemed good in thy sight." Matt. xi. 25.

VER. 6. Having in readiness. God gave power, not only to persuade, and to convince the incredulous, but also to punish them, as we see in the examples of Simon Magus and Elymas. What then should hinder him from using the same against these false apostles? But he says, your obedience must first be fulfilled. God forbid that I should first use the sword, before I have tried the ways of sweetness and conciliation. But if any remain obstinate, then I will employ the arms that God has given me. Grotius.—This sweet and forcible example of the apostle is worthy the imitation of all superiors, temporal and ecclesiastical, how ever high their dignity or command. A.

power, which the Lord hath given us for edification, and not for your destruction, I should not be ashamed,

9 But that I may not be thought as it were to terrify you by epistles :

10 (For his epistles, indeed, say they, are weighty and strong, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible :)

11 Let such a one think this, that such as we are in word by epistles, when absent, such are we also indeed, when present.

12 For we dare not rank or compare ourselves with some, that commend themselves : but we measure ourselves by ourselves, and compare ourselves with ourselves.

13 *But we will not glory beyond our measure : but according to the measure of the rule, which God hath measured to us, a measure to reach even to you.

14 For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as if we reached not to you : for we are come as far as to you in the gospel of Christ.

15 Not glorying beyond measure in other men's labours : but having hope of your increase in faith, to be magnified in you according to our rule abundantly.

16 Yea, to those places that are beyond you, to preach the gospel, not to glory in another man's rule in those things that are made ready to our hand.

17 ^bBut he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord.

* Ephes. iv. 7.—^b Jer. ix. 23. 1 Cor. i. 31.

VER. 12, &c. The following verses to the end of this chapter, are equally obscure, both in the Greek and Latin text.—We dare not rank or compare ourselves, &c. He seems to write this ironically, by way of mocking at those, who commended and preferred themselves before others. But I will not compare myself with others, but will only compare myself with myself, to shew that my actions agree with my words and my letters.—We will not glory beyond our measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath measured to us, a measure to reach even to you. Here he speaks of a measure, and a rule. By the measure, with which God measured to him, he means the places and countries, in which he, and the other apostles were appointed to preach, and plant the gospel : and by the rule also prescribed him, he means that it was given him as a rule not to preach, where other ministers of Christ had preached. When he says, therefore, we will not glory beyond our measure, &c. (as it is implied in the Greek) of things out of the measure, the sense is, I will not, like false preachers, pretend to have preached in places out of my province, or which were not measured out to me, nor have we extended ourselves farther than we ought to have done, when we came to you, for you were within our measure. Nor have I transgressed the rule, because others had not preached to you before me, so that I have not boasted in other men's labours. But as your faith is growing, and increasing, when I have sufficiently settled the gospel among you, I hope my measure may be enlarged, and that without breaking the settled rule, I may preach also to people and places beyond you. This is what seems to be understood by these words, to be enlarged or magnified, even to an abundance, and yet not to glory in other men's labours, but to glory in the Lord only, and in what we do, as we have been directed, and assisted by him. Wi.

VER. 13. The apostle here reprehends the vain boasting of false teachers. I will not, like them, say, that I have carried the light of the gospel to the utmost limits of the globe, that I have converted millions of men, avoided an infinity of dangers, performed many miracles, &c. No: I confine myself to the part assigned me by God. I will only glory in having come even to you. This I can do with justice, and without arrogance. Each one has his share, his measure, or his part to cultivate in the vineyard of Christ. Calmet, and V.

VER. 16. The words, measure, rule, &c. signify through the whole of this chapter a share, or an allotment of any place to cultivate. S. Paul never gloried like the persons whom he is here blaming, that he entered into other men's labours. But still neither those persons who have come to you, nor we who first preached the gospel to you, have any right to glory, except in God alone. Calmet.—We still hope, that your faith every day increasing, we shall be able to extend our measure much further, and carry the gospel to nations far beyond you, without interfering with any other, by glorying of having built on what they had already prepared. V.

* V. 1. Humilis sum, ταπεινός.

† V. 12. Ipsi in nobis nos metipsum metientes; the Greek is somewhat different, ἑαυτοὺς ἐν ἑαυτοῖς μετρώμεντες, ipsi in seipsis, seipsum mensurantes.

‡ V. 16. Non in immensum, οὐκ εἰς τὴν ἀπειραν, non in non mensurata.

18 For not he, that commendeth himself, is approved : but he whom God commendeth.

CHAP. XI.

He is forced to commend himself and his labours, lest the Corinthians should be imposed upon by the false apostles.

WOULD to God you could bear with some little of my folly : but do, bear with me :

2 For I am jealous of you with the jealousy of God. For I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ.

3 But I fear lest, *as the serpent seduced Eve by his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted, and fall from the simplicity which is in Christ.

4 For if he that cometh, preacheth another Christ, whom we have not preached ; or if you receive another Spirit, whom you have not received ; or another gospel, which you have not received : you might well bear with him.

5 For I suppose that I have done nothing less than the great apostles.

6 For though I be rude in speech, yet not in knowledge ; but in all things, we have been made manifest to you.

7 Or did I commit a fault, abasing myself, that you might be exalted ? Because I have preached to you the gospel of God gratis ?

8 I have taken from other churches, receiving wages of them to serve you.

* Gen. iii. 4.

commonly speaking, is looked upon as a piece of folly and vanity ; though the apostle was constrained to do it, for the good of the souls committed to his charge. Ch.

VER. 2. With the jealousy of God, or that came from God : it may also signify a great, or godly jealousy.—To present you, that is, the Church of Corinth, a chaste virgin to Christ, as the whole Catholic Church is called the chaste spouse of Christ. See Matt. ix. 13. Apoc. xxi. 2. Wi.—I cannot suffer these false prophets thus to destroy what has been prepared with so much labour, but I am not jealous for my own sake ; it is for the honour of God ; for I do not wish to prepare this spouse for myself, but for God. Tirinus.—It is a duty incumbent on me to preserve you in the purity of the faith you have received, to present you to him as a virgin, holy, and free from every spot or blemish, and hence arise my fear and solicitude, lest by insinuating and designing men, you suffer yourselves to be drawn away from the simplicity of your faith in Christ Jesus, the Lord.

VER. 3. So your minds should be corrupted by those false teachers, from the simplicity in Christ, from the sincerity and purity of the gospel doctrine. Wi.

VER. 4. You might well bear with him. These new teachers pretended at least to preach only the doctrine of Christ. S. Paul tells them, they might in some measure be excused, if they preached a new doctrine, or another gospel that brought them greater blessings, or another Spirit accompanied with greater spiritual gifts, than they had already received by his preaching. But I think, and may say, I have done nothing less than the greatest apostles, and you have received the same blessings from me, as others from them. Wi.

VER. 5. For I suppose. Many understand this as spoken ironically, and alluding to the false apostles, who called themselves great. But it ought rather to be understood in a literal sense, that God had performed as many and great miracles by his hands, as by any of the apostles. S. Paul here wishes to refute those who called themselves the disciples of Peter, and other apostles. C.

VER. 6. Though I be rude in speech, (as S. Jerom also thought) in my expressions in the Greek tongue, yet not in knowledge, the chief or only thing to be regarded. Nay, S. Paul's adversaries acknowledged that his letters were weighty and strong. c. x. v. 11. S. Chrys. in many places, and S. Aug. l. iv. de Doct. Christiana, c. vi. and vii. tom. 3. p. 68. and seq. shews at large the solid rhetoric and eloquence of S. Paul, even in this and the next chapter. Wi.

VER. 7. Did I commit a fault ? &c. It is a kind of reproach to them, and by the figure, called irony, with a reflection on the false preachers, who some way or other, got themselves handsomely maintained, while S. Paul neither took, nor would take any thing of them, that his adversaries might not have an occasion to say, he did as they did, or that they only did as he did. And lest they should suspect that he would receive nothing from them, because he did not love them (as men sometimes refuse presents from those whom they do not love) he appeals to God, how much he loves them. But he will have this to boast of against his adversaries, those false apostles and crafty labourers, who cunningly endeavoured to transform themselves, that they might be thought the apostles of Christ, insinuating themselves into their favour, and receiving at least presents from them, which S. Paul would not do, though it was but reasonable that he should live by the gospel. See 1 Cor. c. ix. Wi.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. My folly. So he calls his reciting his own praises, which 9 And when I was present with you, and wanted, I was burthensome to no man: for that which was wanting to me, the brethren supplied who came from Macedonia; and in all things I have kept myself without being a burthen to you, and so I will keep myself.

10 The truth of Christ is in me, that this glory shall not be stopt in me in the regions of Achaia.

11 Wherefore? Because I love you not? God knoweth it.

12 But what I do, that I will do, that I may cut off the occasion from them that desire occasion, that in what they glory, they may be found even as we.

13 For such false apostles are deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ.

14 And no wonder: for Satan himself transformeth himself into an angel of light.

15 Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers be transformed as the ministers of justice: whose end shall be according to their works.

16 I say again, (let no man think me to be foolish, otherwise take me as one foolish, that I also may glory a little.)

17 That which I speak, I speak not according to God, but as it were in foolishness, in this matter of glorying.

18 Seeing that many glory according to the flesh, I will glory also.

19 For you gladly suffer the foolish: whereas you yourselves are wise.

20 For you suffer if a man bring you into bondage, if a man devour you, if a man take from you, if a man be extolled, if a man strike you on the face.

21 I speak according to dishonour, as if we had been weak in this part. Wherein if any man is bold, (I speak foolishly) I am bold also.

22 They are Hebrews: so am I. They are Israelites: so am I. They are the seed of Abraham: so am I.

23 They are the ministers of Christ: (I speak as one less wise) I am more: in many more labours, in prisons more frequently, in stripes above measure, in deaths often.

24 Of the Jews *five times did I receive forty stripes, save one.

25 ^bThrice was I beaten with rods, ^conce I was stoned, ^dthrice I suffered shipwreck: a night and a day I was in the depth of the sea.

26 In journeys often, in perils of rivers, in perils of robbers, in perils from my own nation, in perils from the Gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils from false brethren.

27 In labour and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness.

28 Besides those things that are without: my daily instance, the solicitude for all the churches.

29 Who is weak, and I am not weak? who is scandalized, and I do not burn?

30 If I must needs glory: I will glory of the things that concern my infirmity.

31 The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is blessed for ever, knoweth that I lie not.

32 ^eAt Damascus, the governor of the nation, under Aretas, the king, guarded the city of the Damascenes, to apprehend me:

33 And through a window in a basket I was let down by the wall, and so escaped his hands.

CHAP. XII.

His raptures and revelations. His being buffeted by Satan. His fear for the Corinthians.

IF I must glory, (it is not expedient indeed :) but I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.

2 ^fI know a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, whether in the body I know not, or out of the body I know not, God knoweth, such a one caught up to the third heaven.

^a Deut. xxv. 3.—^b Acts xvi. 22.—^c Acts xiv. 18.

^d Acts xxvii. 41.—^e Acts ix. 24.—^f Acts ix. 3.

VER. 10. The truth of Christ is in me. This is a kind of asseveration; I assure you by the truth of Christ, which is in me, that what I say is true, and that no one can deny it in Achaia. Theodoret.

VER. 12. S. Paul declares that he will continue to receive nothing for his preaching and his labours, that the false apostles may not glory in their disinterestedness; or rather, that he will not, by receiving any thing, authorize by his example, these new teachers, who only seek their own ease, to live on the Church, and to receive their support from it. S. Aug. and Estius.

VER. 16. Otherwise take me as one foolish. S. Paul divers times excuses himself for mentioning things in his own commendation: he owns that this in itself, and unless it were necessary, might be blamed as folly, that it would not be according to God, but he declares himself forced by them to it, and that he will speak nothing but the truth. See a. xii. v. 8. 11. He tells them that they bear with others that are foolish, even with those false preachers that endeavour to bring them into slavery by their domineering carriage, by making them perhaps subject to the yoke of the Mosaiac law. Who devour them, that is, their goods and substance, who take from them, who in a manner strike them on the face, (v. 20.) he means a metaphorical striking them, that is, by imperious ways, and insolent language. Wi.

VER. 19. I trust that you will permit me to speak in my own praise, since, as wise as you are, you have permitted others, who have not greater wisdom than myself. And if it be folly to praise one's self, as you have pardoned them, I trust you will also pardon me. Calmet.

VER. 20. S. Paul still continues to speak ironically, that they will permit him to praise himself in his own justification, since they have permitted these false teachers to reduce them to bondage under the law, to devour their substance, and to behave haughtily to them, striking them on the face, &c. Calmet.

VER. 21. I speak according to dishonour, as if we had been weak in this part. The interpreters are divided on this verse; the sense seems to be, I speak what others look upon as dishonourable in us, that we had not the like authority over you as these false teachers, and therefore could not keep you in such subjection as they have done. But yet I must tell you, that wherein if any man is bold, I am (1532) bold also; that is, I have no less motives to domineer and boast, than they have. And then he proceeds to particulars. Wi.

VER. 23. They are the ministers of Christ: I am more. To wit, an apostle chosen and sent by Jesus Christ, appointed in a special manner to be the apostle of the Gentiles, your apostle. Wi.

VER. 24. The Jews had power under the Romans to inflict punishments, not indeed capital, but corporal, such as flogging, &c. See Mark xiii. 9. The law, in Deut. xxv. 3. permitted, but did not command, forty stripes to be inflicted; it strictly forbad that number to be exceeded.

VER. 25. Thrice I suffered shipwreck. This was before the shipwreck in his voyage to Rome, by which we may take notice, that S. Luke, in the Acts, omits a great many things relating to S. Paul; as also when he adds, a night and a day I was in the depth of the sea. We do not read expressed in the Greek, of the sea; but the Greek word is observed to imply the same: and so it is understood by S. Chrys. who gives these two expositions; first, that he was truly and literally in the middle of the sea. Secondly, that he was floating or swimming in the sea after shipwreck, which seems the more common interpretation. Wi.—S. Paul could have avoided that disgrace, as a Roman. See Acts xxiii.; but in Acts xvi. he refused to claim his privilege, that he might have an opportunity of converting the guard of the prison. P.

VER. 28. My daily instance. The labours that come in, and press upon me every day. Ch.

* V. 25. Nocte et die in profundo maris sui, ἐν τῷ βάθῳ πενήτορα.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. If I must glory. S. Paul in the whole of this discourse shews the repugnance he had of speaking in his own praise, and that if he did it, it was only through constraint, and for the advantage of the Corinthians; as also to defend himself from his calumniators. Calmet.

VER. 2. I know a man, &c. He speaks of himself, as it were of a third person.—Whether in the body, I know not. If S. Paul himself knew not, how can we pretend to decide, whether his soul was for some moments separated from

3 And I know such a man, whether in the body, or out of the body, I know not, God knoweth :

4 That he was caught up into paradise : and heard secret words, which it is not allowed to man to utter.

5 Of such a one I will glory : but for myself I will glory nothing, but in my infirmities.

6 For even if I would glory, I shall not be foolish : for I shall say the truth : but I forbear, lest any man should think of me above that which he seeth in me, or any thing he heareth from me.

7 And lest the greatness of the revelations should puff me up, there was given me a sting of my flesh, an angel of Satan, to buffet me.

8 For which thing I thrice besought the Lord, that it might depart from me :

9 And he said to me : My grace is sufficient for thee : for power is made perfect in infirmity. Gladly, therefore, will I glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may dwell in me.

10 Therefore I take pleasure in my infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses for Christ's sake. For when I am weak, then I am powerful.

11 I am become foolish : you have compelled me. For I ought to have been commended by you : for in nothing am I less than those, who are above measure apostles : although I am nothing.

12 Yet the signs of my apostleship have been wrought on you, in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds.

his body, or in what manner he saw God. Wi.—It appears that this took place about the period when the Holy Ghost commanded that he should be separated for the work whereunto he was called. Acts xiii. 2.

VER. 4. Caught up into paradise. S. Augustin and S. Thomas are of opinion that this third heaven and paradise are the same place, and designate the abode of the blessed. In order to understand the language of the apostle, we must observe that the Hebrews distinguished three different heavens. The first comprised the air, the clouds, &c. as far as the fixed stars. The second included all the fixed stars ; and the third was the abode of Angels, in which God himself discovered his infinite glory, &c. The first is called in Scripture simply the heavens, the second the firmament, and the third the heaven of heavens. Calmet.

VER. 7-10. A sting of my flesh, an angel, or a messenger of Satan, to buffet me. The Latin word signifies any thing that pricks or stings, the Greek word a sharp stick or pale : he speaks by a metaphor, as also when he says to buffet me ; that is, by causing great trouble or pain. Some understand by it a violent headache or pain, or distemper in the body. S. Aug. mentions this opinion, and does not reject it, in Pa. xviii. tom. 4. p. 1069. in Pa. cxxx. p. 1465. S. Jer. also speaks of it in c. iv. ad Galatas, tom. 4. p. 274. Ed. Ben. But S. Chrys. by the sting, and the angel of Satan, understands that opposition which S. Paul met with from his enemies, and those of the gospel ; as Satan signifies an adversary. Others understand troublesome temptations of the flesh, immodest thoughts, and representations, suggested by the devil, and permitted by Almighty God for his greater good.—Thrice I besought the Lord. That is, many times, to be freed from it, but received only this answer from God, that his grace was sufficient to preserve me from consenting to sin. And that power and strength in virtue should increase, and be perfected in weakness, and by temptations, when they are resisted. S. Aug. seems to favour this exposition, in Pa. lviii. Conc. 2. p. 573. S. Jerom. in his letters to Eustochium, to Demetrias, and to Rusticus the monk. And it is the opinion of S. Greg. l. 23. moral. tom. 1. p. 747. and of many others. Wi.—If there were any danger of pride from his revelations, the base and filthy suggestions of the enemy of souls must cause humiliations, and make him blush. But these are to be borne with submission to the will of God, for his power is more evident in supporting man under the greatest trials, than in freeing him from the attacks.—Power is made perfect. The strength and power of God more perfectly shines forth in our weakness and infirmity ; as the more weak we are of ourselves, the more illustrious is his grace in supporting us, and giving us the victory under all trials and conflicts. Ch.—When I am weak. The more I suffer for Christ, the more I perceive the effects of his all-powerful grace, which sustains, enlightens, and strengthens me : the more also the glory and power of God appeareth in me. The pagans themselves were not ignorant that calamity was the soil in which virtue usually grows to perfection. Calamitas virtutis occasio est. Seneca.—Optimos nos esse dum infirmi sumus. Plin. vii. ep. 26.

VER. 11-13. Although I am nothing. These words are a demonstration of the humility of S. Paul, when forced to speak his own praises.—The signs and marks of my apostleship. . . on you, by your conversion, especially being accompanied by wonders and miracles.—Pardon me this injury. A reproach by 13 For what is there that you have had less than the other churches ; but that I myself was not burthened to you ? Pardon me this injury.

14 Behold, now the third time I am ready to come to you : and I will not be burthensome to you. For I seek not the things that are yours, but you. For neither ought the children to lay up for the parents, but the parents for the children.

15 But I most gladly will spend and be spent myself for your souls : although, loving you more, I be loved less.

16 But be it so : I did not burthen you : but being crafty, I caught you by guile.

17 Did I circumvent you, by any of those whom I sent to you ?

18 I desired Titus, and I sent with him a brother. Did Titus circumvent you ? did we not walk with the same spirit ? did we not in the same steps ?

19 Of old, think you that we excuse ourselves to you ? We speak before God in Christ : but all things, my dearly beloved, for your edification.

20 For I fear, lest perhaps when I come, I shall not find you such as I would : and that I shall be found by you such as you would not : lest perhaps contentions, envyings, animosities, dissensions, detractions, whisperings, swellings, seditions, be among you :

21 Lest again, when I come, God humble me among you : and I bewail many of them that sinned before, and have not done penance for the uncleanness, and fornication, and lasciviousness, that they have committed.

irony, against such as seemed to value him less, because he lived in poverty, and took nothing of them. Wi.

VER. 14. Now the third time I am ready to come. So he says again in the next chap. That is, he was once with them, he had purposed to come a second time, and now a third time.—I seek not the things that are yours, but you. That is, says S. Chrys. your souls, not your goods ; your salvation, not your gold.—For the children. A modest pretty turn in their favour, by saying that fathers and parents are commonly supposed to leave their goods and riches to their children, not children for their parents. Wi.—S. Paul came to Corinth for the first time in the year 52, remaining with them 18 months. Acts c. xviii. He came the second time in 55, but did not remain long with them ; on which account it is omitted by S. Luke in the Acts. The date of this letter is in 57, when S. Paul again came to them towards the end of the year. Calmet.—Other interpreters, with no less authority question this sentiment, see v. 1. of the following chapter, and say he only went twice ; the first time as mentioned in Acts xviii. 1. ; the second time, as we may draw from Acts xx. 2. 3. after this epistle, as is evident from comparing 2 Cor. i. 15.

VER. 15. I most gladly will spend it all, and even my life, for your sake, and so as to be spent, and even sacrificed, for your souls ; though the more I love you, the less you or some of you love me, a kind and modest reproach. Wi.

VER. 16-18. I caught you by guile. He answers an objection or suspicion of his adversaries, as if he took no presents himself, but employed others to do it for him : he appeals to them, if Titus did not serve them in all things as he had done, in the same spirit, treading the same steps. Think you, as some pretended of old, formerly, or of a long time, that we make vain and false excuses to you, and at the bottom aim to be gainers by you ? He appeals with an oath to God, that he does all things for their good, for their advantage, and edification. Wi.

VER. 19. After having answered one of their objections with regard to his disinterestedness, he thus proceeds : I perceive that of old, or for a long time, you have regarded this lengthened discourse merely as an apology to justify myself from the suspicion of avarice. But we speak before God in Christ ; or, God is my witness that I have acted thus only for your edification. Theoderet.—Seeking not the things that are yours, but yourselves, most willingly to spend our strength and life, and to be spent or completely exhausted for the sake of your souls.

VER. 20-21. He puts them in mind to be all of them reformed, to lay aside animosities, dissensions, swellings, proceeding from pride, uncleanness, fornication, &c. which indeed will be a humiliation and trouble to him, to be forced to use his power by severities ; for if he find them such as he would not, they will also find him such as they would not. Wi.—Εὐν μὴ μετανοήσαντες. This, according to S. Austin, is spoken here of doing great penance for heinous sins, and not merely of repentance, as some moderns would vainly interpret it. ep. 198.

* V. 7. Stimulus carnis meæ, angelus Satanæ, qui me colaphizet, ἐκδήλη ὡς σαρξ (in carne mea) ἀγγελὸς Σατάν, ἡ καὶ με κολαφίζει. See S. Chrys. 84. ec. where he says, μὴ γίνεσθαι. See Tillen. c. x. on S. Paul, a Lapide, &c.

CHAP. XIII.

He threatens the impenitent, to provoke them to penance.

BEHOLD, this is the third time I am coming to you: *In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

2 I have told you before, and foretell, as present, and now absent, to them that sinned before, and to all the rest, that if I come again, I will not spare.

3 Do you seek a proof of Christ, who speaketh in me, who towards you is not weak, but is mighty in you?

4 For though he was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the power of God. For we also are weak in him: but we shall live with him by the power of God towards you.

5 Try your own selves if you be in the faith: prove ye yourselves. Know you not your own selves, that Christ Jesus is in you? unless perhaps you be reprobates.

6 But I trust that you shall know that we are not reprobates.

† V. 15. Libentissimè impendam, & superimpendar, ἡδίστα δαπανήσω, καὶ ἐκδανώσωμαι, consumam, & consumar.

† V. 20. Inflationes, φουσκώσεις, tumores; a metaphor for being puffed up with pride, vain glory, &c.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. The third time he had made preparations to visit the Corinthians, (see c. xii. 14.) when every delinquent shall be tried as the law directs. Deut. xix. 15. Mat. xviii. 16. Heb. x. 28.

VER. 2. I will not spare. Estius, Menochius, and others explain this of the censures, excommunications, &c. of the Church; whilst some are of opinion that he means temporal punishments. But we must observe, that not unfrequently God punished, even in a sensible manner, those who by their crimes had compelled their pastors to make use of the spiritual sword. C.

VER. 3. Do you seek a proof? By the Greek it signifies for you, or in your regard. The sense is, that he has left me power enough to chastise those among you who shall deserve it, when I come. Wi.—I do not know why you delay your conversion. Can you doubt whether it is God who speaks to you by my mouth, who has great power among you, and who is very capable of punishing you. V.

VER. 4. He was crucified through weakness. That is, he took upon him our weak and infirm nature, in which he was made capable of suffering, and of laying down willingly his life for us on the cross. But he liveth again by the power of God, of his divine power.—We also are weak in him, like him liable to sufferings, undergoing sufferings by his example; but we shall live with him by the power of God, of which you have also a share. Wi.

VER. 5. *Try your own selves if you be in the faith. He does not mean if they have a right Christian faith or belief, but either whether they had a saving Christian faith working in them by charity, or as S. Chrys. says, a faith that shewed itself by the gift of miracles, at that time commonly given to the first Christians.—Unless perhaps you are disapproved,† rejected, and justly deprived of this gift, which was a proof that they were Christians, and had received the Spirit of Christ. I judged it better to translate here disapproved, than reprobates, which in other places is often taken as opposed to the predestinate and the elect, whereas there it signifies those who were rejected, and deprived of the gifts of the spirit, particularly of that of miracles, and of those spiritual gifts granted to the first Christians, and which were a proof that they had received the grace: and the 7th verse, not that we may appear approved, but that . . . we may be as reprobates. That is, we wish that we may have no occasion to shew the power and the gifts of the spirit, and that of miracles, but as if we were rejected, disapproved, reprobated, and deprived of such proofs. Wi.

VER. 6-7. I trust that we have not fallen from the state in which we were, but that we continue to exercise our ministry and to use the power which he has given us. Though I do not wish to find you guilty of any sins which may 7 Now we pray God, that you may do no evil, not that we may appear approved, but that you may do that which is good, and that we may be as reprobates.

(1534)

8 For we can do nothing against the truth, but for the truth.

9 For we rejoice, that we are weak, and you are strong. This also we pray for, your perfection.

10 Therefore I write these things being absent, that, being present, I may not deal more severely, according to the power which the Lord hath given me to edification, and not to destruction.

11 For the rest, brethren, rejoice, be perfect, take exhortation, be of one mind, have peace: and the God of peace and of love will be with you.

12 Salute one another with a holy kiss. All the saints salute you.

13 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the charity of God, and the communication of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen.

* Deut. xix. 15. Mat. xviii. 16. John viii. 17. Heb. x. 28.

oblige me to use this power over you. I rather wish in this respect to have no authority whatever over you, to be as it were an outcast or reprobate, that you may never feel the power that God hath given me for the punishment of the wicked. S. Chrys.—Reprobates. That is, without proof, by having no occasion of shewing our power in punishing you. Ch.

VER. 9. We rejoice that we have not made our power appear in punishing the wicked, and afflicting our enemies; we are glad that we appear to them to be weak; but we are particularly glad, when you live in such a manner as to give us no occasion of reprimanding you, or of exercising our power over you. S. Chrys.

VER. 10. We write this for the edification of Christ's mystical body, and to cause all men to enter; not for its destruction, and to compel many to abandon it.

VER. 11. Rejoice. Χαίrete, bene valete. In this sense the Greeks used this term at the conclusion of their writings; and Αἰνῶν, to denote that the writer or speaker was hastening to a conclusion. P.—Be perfect.† Lit. in the Latin be exhorted. Wi.

VER. 12. This was customary with both Jews and Persians, as we learn from Xenophon and Herodotus, and with other oriental nations. And in process of time, from the custom of common life, it was introduced into ecclesiastical assemblies. The ancients were in the habit before they began their meal to embrace each other, to manifest by that sign their mutual cordiality and friendship; then they contributed their alms, that they might give a substantial proof of what was represented by their kiss of charity. P.

VER. 13. For my part, I wish you, with all my heart, that the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the charity of God, and the communication of his holy Spirit, may dwell with you all. Amen is wanted in the Greek, but was added by the Church of Corinth, which was accustomed to make this reply as often as this epistle was read. When we recall to our mind the excess of corruption that had reigned in the city of Corinth under paganism, excess attested by profane authors, and which S. Paul brings to their recollection, (1 Cor. vi. 9.) we are all astonished that in the short space of four years the gospel had operated amongst the faithful of this church, such a prodigious change in their manners, and that they were become capable of receiving lessons of morality so very pure as is this of the apostle. Bergier.

* V. 5. Si estis in fide, et levè ἐν τῇ πίστει. S. Chrys. δμ. κθ. p. 701, ἐμοὶ δοκεῖ ἐναυθα λέγειν τὴν τῶν σημείων. Ibid. Nisi forte reprobi estis, ἀδόκιμοι, improbatii, or non probati. The Prot. as well as Rhem. hath reprobates; but Dr. Wells, in his amendments, has put destitute of proofs, which here is the true sense.

† V. 7. Non ut nos probati appareamus . . . nos autem ut reprobi simus, &c. (not ὅνα) ἀδόκιμοι ὄμεν, i. e. sicut or tanquam non probati simus.

† V. 11. Exhortamini, παρακαλεῖσθε, consolemini, consolationem capite.

THE EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE GALATIANS.

THE Galatians, soon after S. Paul had preached the gospel to them, were seduced by some false teachers, who had been Jews, and who were for obliging all Christians, even those who had been Gentiles, to observe circumcision, and the other ceremonies of the Mosaic law. In this epistle he refutes the pernicious doctrine of those teachers, and also their calumny against his mission and apostleship. The subject matter of this epistle is much the same as of that to the Romans. It was written at Ephesus, about twenty-three years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—The Galatians were originally Gauls, who, under their leader, Baennus, spread themselves over Greece, and at length passed over into Asia Minor, where they settled between Cappadocia and Phrygia, in the province afterwards called from them Galatia. It seems that S. Peter preached first in those parts; but it was only to the Jews, as may be gathered from the inscription of his first epistle, which he addresses to the Jews of Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia. But S. Paul was the first that preached to the Gentile inhabitants of this province. When he first preached to them, he was received as an angel from heaven, or rather, as Christ himself: he visited them oftener than once, and the Church he there formed was very considerable. It was the Jewish converts of Galatia (who, as we have before mentioned, were the spiritual children of S. Peter) that caused those troubles which gave rise to this epistle. They strongly advocated the legal observances; and making a handle of the high pre-eminence of S. Peter, they decried S. Paul, even calling in question his apostleship. They taught the necessity of circumcision, and other Mosaic rites, which the apostles then in part retained. Thus divisions were raised in this infant Church. On these accounts the apostle warmly asserts his apostleship, as being called by Christ himself. He shews that his doctrine was that of the other apostles, who, in the council of Jerusalem, four years before, testified their exemption from the legal observances. He teaches, that it is not by the law, but by faith, that the blessings of salvation are imparted to them. After establishing these more important parts of the epistle, he gives them instruction on various heads. The Greek subscription to this epistle informs us, that it was written from Rome. S. Jerom says, he wrote it when in chains. Theodoret says, it was the first epistle that S. Paul wrote from Rome. This opinion has probably been adopted from a mistaken interpretation of the text: I bear the marks of the wounds of Christ in my body. By these marks they understand chains, whilst the text equally applies to the mortifications and self-denials of a Christian. The contrary opinion is, that this epistle was written from Ephesus in the year of Christ 55. This is the more probable opinion, and is maintained by S. Greg. the Great, Ludovicius, Capellanus, Estius, Usher, Pearson, and many others. The authority of the Greek copies, in assigning the places whence the letters were written, has been long rejected by the learned. We find not such information in the more ancient Greek manuscripts of S. Germanus and Clermont, &c. Calmet.

CHAP. I.

He blames the Galatians for suffering themselves to be imposed upon by new teachers. The apostle's calling.

PAUL, an apostle, not from men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead,

2 And all the brethren who are with me, to the churches of Galatia.

3 Grace be to you, and peace from God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ,

4 Who gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present wicked world, according to the will of God, and our Father.

5 To whom is glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

6 I wonder that you are so soon removed, from

CHAP. I. VER. 1. &c. The apostle begins by asserting his apostleship which the false teachers had called in question. He was called to it by Christ himself, in his miraculous conversion, being changed "into a vessel of election to carry his name before kings and nations, and the children of Israel." Thus chosen, we see him immediately after his conversion, preaching in Damascus and Arabia. Calmet.—Let us beware of self-appointed teachers, who are neither called by God nor rightly ordained by men, and yet are observed to intrude themselves into the ministry.—*Not from man, neither by man. The apostle here expressly says, all the brethren who are with me; to shew that he advanced nothing which was not conformable to the belief of all the faithful. S. Jerom.—And again he says, (v. 12.) neither did I receive it from man, nor did I learn it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. That is, not from him, who was a man only, but from Jesus Christ, who was both God and man. S. Jerom, who has left us a commentary on this epistle, (tom. iv. p. 222. Ed. Ben. as also S. Chrys. tom. iii. p. 709. Ed. Sav.) takes notice, that Christ's teachiness is proved from these expressions, that S. Paul was not an apostle, nor had his mission from man only, but from Jesus Christ, who therefore was not a man only.—By Jesus Christ and God the Father. A second argument to shew the equality of the Son with the Father. And thirdly, it destroys another objection of the Arians, who used to pretend that the Father being always first named, he only, and not the Son, was properly God. Fourthly, another of their arguments to prove only the Father truly God, was that he was called the God, with the Greek article; and here the Father is called God, without the said Greek article. Fifthly, they also pretended that the Son was not God, because the Father was said to deliver him to death: and here (v. 3.) the Son is said to give and deliver himself. Wi.

VER. 6-7. This was about three or four years after their conversion. The apostle knowing very well how to suit his discourse to his auditors, in this epistle makes use of a more severe and harsh address than is observable in his other epistles. The reason is, the Galatians were a less civilized people, and had already shewn a little attachment they had to their spiritual father. Calmet.—

him who called you to the grace of Christ, to another gospel:

7 Which is not another, only there are some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8 But though we, or an Angel from heaven, preach a gospel to you beside that which we have preached to you, let him be anathema.

9 As we said before, so I say now again: If any one preach to you a gospel, besides that which you have received, let him be anathema.

10 For do I now persuade men, or God? Or do I seek to please men? If I did yet please men, I should not be the servant of Christ.

11 *For I give you to understand, brethren, that the

* 1 Cor. xv. 1.

To another gospel: which is not another. That is, it is not properly another, because they pretended to be Christians, and teach the faith: and yet it was in some measure another, because changed by such teachers with a mixture of errors, particularly that all converted Gentiles were to observe the Jewish law: and in this sense, they are said to subvert, or destroy the gospel of Christ: so that the apostle hesitates not to pronounce and repeat an anathema, a curse upon all that preach any thing besides, that is, in point of religion, not agreeing with what he had taught. I cannot omit here a reflection, which S. Chrys. makes on the 7th verse. Where are they, saith he, who condemn us (Catholics) for the differences we have with heretics? and who pretend there is no such essential difference betwixt us and them, so as to judge them excluded from the communion of the Catholic Church, out of which there is no salvation, unless perhaps through ignorance.—Let them hear what S. Paul says, that they destroyed the gospel who made any such innovations: to wit, by introducing again as necessary some of the Jewish ceremonies, even at a time when the Christians, who had been Jews, might lawfully use them, and even they who had been Gentiles. S. Paul says, this is to change and destroy the gospel; he repeats anathema against them. Let them hear, and take notice of this, who pretend that the unity of the one Catholic faith is sufficiently maintained by all Christian societies, that agreeing, as they say, in fundamentals, their faith is a saving faith: that the council of Trent, without reason, pronounced such anathemas against them: that all Catholics are uncharitable for denying them to be in the way to salvation, when they make Scripture alone, as interpreted by their private judgment, the only rule of their faith. They may as well accuse not only S. Chrys. but also S. Paul, of uncharitableness, &c. Wi.

VER. 9. The terrible sentence awarded by S. Paul, bears equally strong against modern as against ancient innovators in religion.

VER. 10. If I did yet please men, I should not be the servant of Christ. I should not have embraced the Christian faith, I who was so zealous against it, and who by changing have exposed myself to persecutions, &c. Wi.

gospel which was preached by me is not according to man.

12 *For neither did I receive it from man, nor did I learn it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

13 For you have heard of my conversation in time past in the Jews' religion: how that, beyond measure, I persecuted the church of God, and laid it waste,

14 And I made progress in the Jews' religion, above many of my equals in my own nation, being more abundantly zealous for the traditions of my fathers.

15 But when it pleased him, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace, 16 To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the Gentiles: immediately I condescended not to flesh and blood.

17 Neither went I to Jerusalem to the apostles, who were before me; but I went into Arabia, and again I returned to Damascus:

18 Then after three years,^b I came to Jerusalem to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days:

19 But other of the apostles I saw none, except James, the brother of the Lord.

20 Now the things which I write to you, behold, before God, I lie not.

21 Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria, and Cilicia.

22 And I was unknown by face to the churches of Judea, which were in Christ:

23 But they had heard only: He, that persecuted us in times past, doth now preach the faith which once he impugned:

24 And they glorified God in me.

* Ephes. iii. 8.—^b A. D. 87.—^c A. D. 51.—^d Deut. x. 17. Job xxxiv. 19. Wisd. vi. 8.

VER. 14. He here alludes to his being a Pharisee, as he himself mentions more openly in Acts xxiji. 6. A Pharisee, and son of Pharisees. This sect always distinguished itself by its zeal for ancient traditions, which shews evidently that he was very far from being instructed in a religion of which he was the sworn enemy; nor since his conversion did he apply for instruction. What he delivered, he learned not of man, but of God. See below.

VER. 16. I condescended not to flesh and blood. Lit. I did not acquiesce to flesh and blood. I had no regard to temporal friends or advantages. Some expound it, I did not think it necessary to consult the other apostles, men who were my countrymen: and so it follows, I came not to Jerusalem to the apostles, to be instructed by them, having been instructed by Christ himself. Wi.

VER. 17. So far from receiving his apostleship from the other apostles, he saw none of them, till he had spent three years in announcing the word of God. Calmet.—In this epistle to the Galatians, S. Paul treats the same matter as in his epistle to the Romans; to the former he writes less exactly and more briefly, as very rude and uncivilized; to the latter, with more precision, and with greater copiousness, as replenished with all knowledge: repleti omni scientia. Rom. xv. 14.

VER. 18. Then three years after, I came to Jerusalem to see (and as S. Chrys. says, out of respect to make a visit to) Peter, but staid only at Jerusalem fifteen days, and saw none of the apostles except him, and James, the brother, or cousin of our Lord; so that I was yet unknown by face to the Christian churches in Judea. Wi.

* V. 1. and 12. Non ab homine, on which words S. Jerom, ergo non homo tantum est Christus. See S. Chrys. in his commentary, or ἐπερίαια, on this epistle, p. 713, where he takes notice against the Arians, that here God the Father is called Θεός, not δ Θεός; so that their argument from the Greek article is of no force; χωρίς ἁποθου . . . οὐκ ἀπὸ τοῦ, ἀλλὰ ἀπὸ θεοῦ πατρὸς, &c.

† V. 7. In aliud Evangelium, quod non est aliud; εἰς ἕτερον εὐαγγέλιον, ὃ οὐκ ἔστιν ἄλλο. Volunt convertere, μεταστρέψαι, invertere, evertere, pervertere. S. Chrys. Lat. edit. p. 812. E. ubi sunt igitur, qui nos ut contentiosos damnant, eo quod cum hæreticis habemus dissidium, dicitantque nullum esse discrimen inter nos & illos. . . . Audiant Paulum (p. 813. A.) illos subvertisse Evangelium, qui paululum quiddam rerum novarum invexerant. And in the Greek edition of Savil, p. 717, linea 3, πὸ ὅτι εἰσιν, &c. . . . ἀκούσαντες τί φησιν ὁ Παῦλος, &c.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Then fourteen years after. That is, after my former going to Jerusalem, which was seventeen years after my conversion, an. 51. See Tillemont. Wi.—The cause of S. Paul's second journey to Jerusalem was as follows. Some brethren coming from Judea to Antioch, there maintained the necessity of circumcision and the other Mosaic rites, asserting that without them salvation could not be obtained. S. Paul, upon his return to Antioch, strongly (1536)

CHAP. II.

The apostle's preaching was approved of by the other apostles. The Gentiles were not to be constrained to the observation of the law.

THEN *after fourteen years, I went up again to Jerusalem, with Barnabas, taking Titus also with me.

2 And I went up according to revelation; and communicated to them the gospel, which I preach among the Gentiles, but apart to them who seemed to be something; lest, perhaps, I should run, or had run in vain.

3 But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Gentile, was compelled to be circumcised:

4 But because of false brethren unawares brought in, who came in privately to spy our liberty, which we have in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage:

5 To whom we yielded not by subjection, no not for an hour, that the truth of the gospel might continue with you:

6 But of them who seemed to be something, (what they were some time, it is nothing to me, ^dGod accepteth not the person of man) for to me, they that seemed to be something, added nothing.

7 But on the contrary, when they had seen that to me was committed the gospel of the uncircumcision, as to Peter was that of the circumcision:

8 (For he who wrought in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, wrought in me also among the Gentiles:)

9 And when they had known the grace that was given to me, James, and Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go to the Gentiles, and they to the circumcision:

Ecclesi. xxxv. 15. Acts x. 34. Rom. ii. 11. Eph. vi. 9. Coloss. iii. 25. 1 Pet. i. 17.

defended, in conjunction with Barnabas, the liberty of the gospel. As the contest grew warm, it was resolved to depute Paul and Barnabas to consult the other apostles and ancients at Jerusalem. By the approbation of the living and speaking tribunal, which all are commanded to hear, the Scriptures are not made true, altered or amended; they merely are declared to be the infallible word of God, a point only to be learned by authority; hence that memorable saying of S. Austin: "I would not believe the gospel unless the authority of the Church moved me." Cont. ep. fund. c. v.

VER. 2. According to revelation, or an inspiration from the Spirit of God, and conferred with them, as an equal, says S. Jerom.—But apart to them, who seemed to be something considerable. That is, with the other apostles, lest I should run in vain, not for fear of false doctrine, says S. Chrys. but that others might be convinced that I preached not any thing disapproved by the apostles, which would prejudice the progress of the gospel. Wi.—The particle but, which begins this verse, is quite useless; the Latin Vulgate and the Greek copies have it indeed, but in many copies it is not found; it is omitted also by S. Jerom and Theodoret; and this verse is united in sense with the preceding. Titus was not compelled to be circumcised on account of the false brethren, &c.

VER. 3. Neither Titus . . . circumcised, who had been a Gentile. A convincing proof, says S. Chrys. that even according to the other apostles, the Gentiles converted, were not subject to the Jewish laws. Wi.

VER. 5. To whom we yielded not. S. Jerom takes notice that in some Latin copies was read, to whom we yielded; but that was not the true reading by the Greek and Syriac. Wi.

VER. 7. As to Peter was that of the circumcision. Calvin pretends to prove by this, that S. Peter and his successors are not head of the whole Church, because S. Peter was only the apostle of the Jews. But S. Paul speaks not here of the power and jurisdiction, but of the manner that S. Peter and he were to be employed. It was judged proper that S. Peter should preach chiefly to the Jews, who had been the elect people of God, and that S. Paul should be sent to the Gentiles; yet both of them preached both to Jews and Gentiles: and S. Peter, by receiving Cornelius, first opened the gate of salvation to the Gentiles, as he says of himself, (Acts xv. 7.) that God made choice of him, that the Gentiles by his mouth should hear the gospel, and believe. That S. Peter was head of the Church, see the notes on Matt. xvi. and John xxi. Wi.

VER. 9. James, and Cephas, and John. No proof of any greater authority can be drawn from the placing or numbering James first, which perhaps S. Paul might do, because of the great respect he knew the Jewish converts had for S. James, bishop of Jerusalem, where the ceremonies of the law of Moses were still observed. Several Greek copies have Peter, James, and John. So we also read in S. Jerom's Commentary, p. 240, and S. Chrys. in his Exposition, p. 729, has Cephas, John, and James. Wi.

10 Only that we should be mindful of the poor; which same thing also I was careful to do.

11 But when Cephas was come to Antioch, I withstood him to the face, because he was blameable.

12 For before that some came from James, he did eat with the Gentiles; but when they were come, he withdrew and separated himself, fearing those who were of the circumcision.

13 And to his dissimulation the rest of the Jews consented, so that Barnabas also was led by them into that dissimulation.

14 But when I saw that they walked not uprightly unto the truth of the gospel, I said to Cephas before them all: If thou, being a Jew, livest after the manner of the Gentiles, and not of the Jews, how dost thou compel the Gentiles to live as Jews?

15 We, by nature, are Jews, and not of the Gentiles, sinners.

16 But knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, we also believe in Christ Jesus, that we may be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: *because by the works of the law no flesh shall be justified.

VER. 11. *But when Cephas, &c. In most Greek copies, we read Petrus, both here and v. 13. Nor are there any sufficient, nor even probable grounds to judge, that Cephas here mentioned was different from Peter, the prince of the apostles, as one or two later authors would make us believe. Among those who fancied Cephas different from Peter, not one can be named in the first ages, except Clement of Alexandria, whose works were rejected as apocryphal by Pope Gelasius. The next author is Dorotheus of Tyre, in his Catalogue of the seventy-two disciples, in the fourth or fifth age, and after him the like, or same catalogue, in the seventh age, in the Chronicle, called of Alexandria, neither of which are of any authority with the learned, so many evident faults and falsehoods being found in both. S. Jerom indeed on this place says, there were some (though he does not think fit to name them) who were of that opinion; but at the same time S. Jerom ridicules and rejects it as groundless. Now as to authors that make Cephas the same with S. Peter, the prince of the apostles, we have what may be called the unexceptionable and unanimous consent of the ancient fathers and doctors of the Catholic Church, as of Tertullian, who calls this management of S. Peter, a fault of conversation, not of preaching or doctrine. Of S. Cyprian, of Origen, of the great doctors, S. Jerom, S. Aug. S. Chrys. S. Greg. the Great, of S. Cyril of Alex. of Theodoret, Pope Gelasius, Pelagius the second, S. Anselm, S. Thomas. In latter ages, of Bellarmin, Baronius, Binius, Spondan, of Salmeron, Etius, Gagneus, Tirinus, Menochius, Alex. Natalis, and a great many more: so that Cornelius a Lapide on this place says, that the Church neither knows, nor celebrates any other Cephas but S. Peter. Tertullian and most interpreters take notice, that S. Peter's fault was only a lesser or venial sin in his conduct and conversation. Did not S. Paul on several occasions do the like, as wha is here laid to S. Peter's charge? that is, practise the Jewish ceremonies: did not he circumcise Timothy after this, an. 52? did he not shave his head in Cenchrea, an. 54? did he not by the advice of S. James, (an. 58.) purify himself with the Jews in the temple, not to offend them? S. Jerom, and also S. Chrys. give another exposition of this passage. They looked upon all this to have been done by a contrivance and a collusion betwixt these two apostles, who had agreed beforehand that S. Peter should let himself be reprehended by S. Paul, (for this they take to be signified by the Greek text) and not that S. Peter was reprehensible; † so that the Jews seeing S. Peter publicly blamed, and not justifying himself, might for the future eat with the Gentiles. But S. Aug. vigorously opposed this exposition of S. Jerom, as less consistent with a Christian and apostolical sincerity, and with the text in this chapter, where it is called a dissimulation, and that Cephas or Peter walked not uprightly to the truth of the gospel. After a long dispute betwixt these two doctors, S. Jerom seems to have retracted his opinion, and the opinion of S. Aug. is commonly followed, that S. Peter was guilty of a venial fault of imprudence. In the mean time, no Catholic denies but that the head of the Church may be guilty even of great sins. What we have to admire, is the humility of S. Peter on this occasion, as S. Cyprian observes, § who took the reprehension so mildly, without alleging the primacy, which our Lord had given him. Baronius held that S. Peter did not sin at all, which may be true, if we look upon his intention only which was to give no offence to the Jewish converts; but if we examine the fact, he can scarce be excused from a venial indiscretion. ¶ WI.—I withstood, &c. The fault that is here noted in the conduct of S. Peter, was only a certain imprudence, in withdrawing himself from the table of the Gentiles, for fear of giving offence to the Jewish converts: but this in such circumstances, when his so doing might be of ill consequence to the Gentiles, who might be induced thereby to think themselves obliged to conform to the Jewish way of living, to the prejudice of their Christian liberty. Neither was S. Paul's reprehending him any argument against his supremacy; for in such cases an inferior may, and sometimes ought, with respect, to admonish his superior. Ch.

VER. 16. &c. Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law. S.

17 But if while we seek to be justified in Christ, we ourselves also are found sinners, is Christ then the minister of sin? God forbid.

18 For if I build up again the things which I have destroyed, I make myself a transgressor.

19 For I, through the law, am dead to the law, that I may live to God: with Christ I am nailed to the cross.

20 And I live, now not I; but Christ liveth in me. And that I live now in the flesh, I live in the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and delivered himself for me.

21 I cast not away the grace of God. For if justice be by the law, then Christ died in vain.

CHAP. III.

The spirit, and the blessing promised to Abraham, cometh not by the law, but by faith.

O SENSELESS Galatians, who hath bewitched you, that you should not obey the truth, before whose eyes Jesus Christ hath been set forth, crucified among you.

2 This only would I learn of you: Did you receive the Spirit by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith?

* Rom. iii. 20.

Paul, to the end of the chapter, seems to continue his discourse to the Jews, but chiefly to the Jewish Galatians, to shew that both the Gentiles, whom the Jews called and looked upon as sinners, and also the Jews, when converted, could only hope to be justified and saved by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law.—But if while we seek to be justified in Christ, by faith in him, and by his grace, we ourselves also are found sinners, as the false doctors teach you, and not to be justified but by the ceremonies and works of the law of Moses, this blasphemous consequence must follow, that Christ is the minister and author of sin, by making us believe that by faith in him, and complying with his doctrine, we may be justified and saved. For thus we must be considered transgressors, unless we renew and build again what Christ and we have destroyed.—For by the law I am dead to the law. That is, says S. Jerom, by the evangelical law of Christ I am dead to the ancient law and its ceremonies. Others expound it, that by the law and its types and figures, and by the predictions contained in the law, I know the Mosaic law hath now ceased, in which sense he might say, by the law I am dead to the law.—If justice. That is, justification and salvation be to be had, or could have been had by the works of the law; therefore Christ died in vain, and it was not necessary that he should become our Redeemer. Wi.

VER. 19. He here expresses the change which had been wrought in him. The law to which he had been attached, had passed away from him. Now he was so united to Christ and his cross, that he says: Not I, but Christ liveth in me. The strong expressions made use of by S. Paul with regard to the Jewish law in this chapter, may appear strange, and very capable of a wrong interpretation. But we must ever bear in mind that S. Paul speaks exclusively of the ceremonial part of the law, and not of the moral, contained in the decalogue: of this latter he says in ep. to the Romans, (ii. 13.) the doers of the law shall be justified. But to effect this, was and is necessary the grace which Jesus Christ has merited and obtained for all, grace which God has shed on all, more or less, from the commencement of the world.

* V. 11. That Peter and Cephas were the same, see Tertull. l. de præscrip. c. 23, p. 210. Ed. Rig. Origen in Joan. Ed. Græc et Latine, p. 381. S. Cyprian, Epist. 71. ad Quintum, p. 120. S. Jerom on this Ep. to the Galatians, as also S. Chrys. S. Aug. See his epistles on this passage to S. Jerom. S. Greg. l. 2. in Ezech. tom. 1, p. 1368. Gelasius apud Labb. T. 4. Cone. p. 1217. Pelagius, the 2d apud Labb. t. 5, p. 622. S. Cyr. of Alex. hom. ix. cont. Julianum, t. 6, p. 325. Theodoret in 2 ad Gal. iv. 3. p. 268. S. Anselm in 2 ad Gal. p. 236. S. Thom. l. 2. q. 103. a. 4. ad 2dum.—S. Jerom's words: Sunt qui Cephiam non putent Apostolum Petrum, sed alium de 70 Discipulis. . . quibus primum respondendum, alterius nescio ejus Cephæ nescire non nomen, nisi ejus, qui et in Evangelio, et in aliis Pauli Epistolis, et in hac quoque ipsa, modo Cephæ, modo Petrus scribitur. . . deinde totum argumentum Epistolæ. . . huic intelligentiæ repugnare, &c.

† Ibid. S. Chrys. by a contrivance, συννομία, p. 730, &c.

‡ Ibid. κατασκευασμένος may signify reprehensus, as well as reprehensibilis; and he says it is to be referred to others, and not to S. Paul: ἀλλ' ὑπὸ τῶν ἄλλων.

§ Ibid. S. Cyp. Ep. ad Quintum, p. 120. Petrus. . . non arroganter assumpsit, ut diceret se primatum tenere, &c.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Before whose eyes Jesus Christ . . . crucified among you.* The common exposition is, that S. Paul had before described and set before them Christ crucified. Others, that it had been clearly foretold by the prophets that Christ was crucified for them. Wi.

VER. 2. Did you receive the Spirit by the works of the law? As if he said, you esteem it a great favour to have received those spiritual gifts of working mira-

3 Are you so foolish, that, whereas you began in the spirit, you would now be made perfect by the flesh?

4 Have you suffered so great things in vain? If yet in vain.

5 He, therefore, who giveth to you the spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth he do it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of the faith?

6 As it is written: *Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice.

7 Know ye, therefore, that they who are of faith, are the children of Abraham.

8 And the scripture, foreseeing that God justifieth the Gentiles by faith, told Abraham before: ^bIn thee shall all nations be blessed.

9 Therefore, they who are of faith, shall be blessed with the faithful Abraham.

10 For as many as are of the works of the law, are under a curse. For it is written: ^cCursed is every one that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law, to do them.

11 But that by the law no man is justified with God, it is manifest: ^dbecause the just man liveth by faith.

12 But the law is not of faith: but ^ehe that doth these things, shall live in them.

13 Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; for it is written: ^fCursed is every one that hangeth on a tree:

* Gen. xv. 16. Rom. iv. 3. James ii. 23.—^b Gen. xlii. 8. Eccl. xlv. 20.
^c Deut. xxvii. 26.

etc., &c. When you were made Christians, had you these favours by the works of the law, or was it not by the hearing of faith, and by the faith of Christ, that you had such extraordinary graces? and when you have begun thus happily by the spirit of Christ and his spiritual gifts, are you for finishing and thinking to make yourselves more perfect by the exterior works of the law, the circumcision of the flesh, and such like ceremonies? Wi.

VER. 4-5. If yet in vain: i. e. I have still good hopes, that what you have already suffered by persecutions and self-denials, since your conversion, will not be in vain; as they would be, if you sought to be justified by the works and ceremonies of the law of Moses, and not by the faith and law of Christ, by which only you can be truly sanctified. Wi.—S. Jerom, S. Aug. and others, suppose that the power of working miracles still remained in the Galatians, notwithstanding what had passed; but S. Chrysostom and several others, explain it of a power they had formerly possessed. Calmet.

VER. 6. As it is written: Abraham believed God, and it was reputed to him unto justice. See Rom. iv. 3. They only who imitate the faith of Abraham shall be blessed with him, and are his spiritual children, whether Jews or Gentiles, whom God promised to bless by the seed of Abraham; i. e. by Christ, who descended from Abraham. Wi.—The apostle thus argues with the Galatians; Abraham, who was never under the law, still received the grace of justification in reward of his faith, even before he had received circumcision. Now, if a person can be justified without the law, the law can be no ways necessary to salvation. Calmet.

VER. 10-14. Are under a curse cursed is every one, &c. The sense of these is to be found Deut. xxvii. 26. in the Sept. Some expound them thus: curses are pronounced against every one who keeps not all the precepts of the law, but there is not any one; i. e. scarce any one, who keepeth them all; therefore all under the law are under some curse. But as it cannot be said that no one kept all the precepts, especially the moral precepts of the law, mentioned in that place of Deuteronomy; (for Zacharias and Elizabeth were both just in the sight of God, Luke i. and doubtless many others lived so as not to incur those curses, but were just and were saved, though not by virtue of the works of the law only, nor without faith in God, and in their Redeemer, who was to come) therefore others understand that all such persons fall under these curses, who think to comply with all these precepts by their own strength, or who confide in the works of the law only, without faith in Christ, the Messiah, and without which they cannot be saved. This agrees with what follows, that the just man liveth by faith. Habac. ii. 4. See Rom. i. 17.—Now the law is not of faith, i. e. the works done merely in compliance with the law, are not works of faith that can save a man: but he that doth those things of the law, shall live in them; i. e. says S. Jerom, shall have a long temporal life promised in the law; or, as others say, shall have life everlasting, if they are done with faith.—Christ hath redeemed us from these curses; but to do this, hath made himself a curse for our sake, by taking upon himself the similitude of a sinner, and by dying upon the cross, as if he had been guilty of the greatest sins, having only charged himself with our sins, inasmuch as it is written: (Deut. xxi. 23.) cursed is every one who hangeth on a tree—which is to be understood, in case he deserve it for his own sins.—

14 That the blessing of Abraham might come on the Gentiles through Christ Jesus: that we may receive the promise of the spirit by faith.

15 Brethren (I speak after the manner of man) ^ayet a man's testament, if it be confirmed, no man despiseth, nor addeth to it.

16 To Abraham were the promises made, and to his seed. He saith not, And to his seeds, as of many: but as of one, And to thy seed, who is Christ.

17 Now this I say, that the testament which was confirmed by God, the law which was made after four hundred and thirty years, doth not disannul to make the promise of no effect.

18 For if the inheritance be of the law, it is no more of promise. But God gave it to Abraham by promise.

19 Why then was the law? It was set because of transgressions, till the seed should come, to whom he made the promise, being ordained by Angels in the hand of a mediator.

20 Now a mediator is not of one: but God is one.

21 Was the law then against the promises of God? God forbid. For if there had been a law given which could give life, verily, justice should have been by the law.

22 ^bBut the scripture hath concluded all under sin, that the promise by the faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe.

^a Habac. ii. 4. Rom. i. 17.—^b Lev. xviii. 5.—^c Deut. xxi. 23.
^d Heb. ix. 17.—^e Rom. iii. 9.

That the blessing of Abraham (or promised to Abraham) might be fulfilled; i. e. Christ redeemed us, that these blessings might be fulfilled on all nations, and that all might receive the promise of the Spirit, or the promised spirit of grace believing in Christ, who is now come. Wi.

VER. 15, &c. I speak after the manner of man; or, by a comparison, says S. Chrys. common among men. If a man make or execute his last will, or any deed or contract, it stands good; no one contemns it, or pretends to annul it, or add any thing to it: how much more shall the testament, the covenant, or solemn promise which God made to Abraham, to bless all nations, stand firm and have its effect? And he said to his seed, to one, i. e. in Christ only, not to his seeds as it were by many. It is observed, that the word seed being of a collective signification, may grammatically be taken for the plural as well as for the singular number; so that we are to have more regard to S. Paul's authority, who expounds to us what is here signified by the word seed, than to the word itself.—The law which was made after four hundred and thirty years (consult the chronologists) does not make void the testament; nor the promise which God himself made to Abraham, that mankind should be blessed only by Christ. These blessings could not be by the law of Moses ordained, or delivered by angels in the hand of a mediator, to wit, of Moses, according to the common interpretation, who, in receiving and publishing the law, was as it were a mediator betwixt God and his people.—And a mediator is not of one, (but is called so, as mediating betwixt two parties) but God is one. This is to signify, that when he made the covenant or promise to Abraham, he made this promise himself, and did not make use of a mediator inferior to himself, as when he gave the law; and the law, in this respect, was inferior to the promise; but the chief difference was, that true justice and sanctification was not given by the law, for so it would have contradicted and have made void the promise made before to Moses, that the blessings of true sanctification should only be by his seed and by faith in Christ, the Son of Abraham and of David. According to the Scriptures all things (i. e. all men) were shut up together under sin, under the slavery of sin, from which they were not to be redeemed but by the accomplishment of the promise, and by the coming of Christ, by his grace, and faith in him. Wi.—Because of transgressions. To restrain them from sin, by fear and threats.—Ordained by Angels. The law was delivered by Angels, speaking in the name and person of God to Moses, who was the mediator on this occasion between God and the people. Ch.—The law was established not to occasion sin, but to manifest sin, and to punish sin. Ezechiel (xx. 11.) shews the meaning of the apostle, when he says: that God, after bringing the Israelites out of Egypt, imposed laws upon them that gave life to such as observed them. This was the decalogue, published immediately after the passage of the Red Sea; but violating these commandments, they became guilty of idolatry. To punish them, God imposed upon them precepts which are not good, and which give not life. v. 24, 25. This is the ceremonial law which was established and published by degrees during the forty years the Israelites sojourned in the desert. It is then evident that this law was given to punish transgressions in the Israelites, and to prevent relapses. This is the sense of S. Paul.

VER. 22. Hath concluded all under sin; i. e. hath declared all to be under 23 But before that faith came, we were kept under the law, shut up unto that faith which was to be revealed.

24 Wherefore the law was our pedagogue in Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

25 But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a pedagogue.

26 For you are all the children of God by faith, in Christ Jesus.

27 *For as many of you as have been baptized in Christ, have put on Christ.

28 There is neither Jew nor Greek; there is neither bond nor free; there is neither male nor female. For you are all one in Christ Jesus.

29 And if you be Christ's; then you are the seed of Abraham, heirs according to the promise.

CHAP. IV.

Christ hath freed us from the servitude of the law: we are the free-born sons of Abraham.

NOW I say, As long as the heir is a child, he differeth nothing from a servant, though he be lord of all:

2 But is under tutors and governors, until the time appointed by the father.

3 So we also, when we were children, were in bondage, under the elements of the world.

4 But when the fulness of the time was come, God sent his Son, made of a woman, made under the law:

5 That he might redeem those who were under the law: that we might receive the adoption of sons.

* Rom. vi. 3.

sin, from which they could not be delivered but by faith in Jesus Christ, the promised seed. Ch.—The law was not given to all; but all its precepts and prohibitions were binding under sin, and all violators of the law were guilty of sin.

VER. 24. As for the law, it was put or given because of transgressions, to put a stop, by the punishments prescribed, to idolatry and other crimes, which the Jews had learnt from other nations, particularly in Egypt. The law was a pedagogue, or schoolmaster, to direct and correct and bring men to Christ, our chief Master, our great Mediator, who being now come, we are no longer under our former pedagogue. Christ hath by his grace made all, who believe in him and follow his doctrine, his sons and his adoptive children, whether they were before Jews or Gentiles; now they are all one, united in the same faith, and in the same spirit of charity. All the faithful are to be accounted of the seed of Abraham, and his spiritual children by the accomplishment of the promise. Wi.—Pedagogue; i. e. a schoolmaster, conductor, or instructor. Ch.

VER. 27. The baptism of infants shews that the sacrament gives grace of itself, by divine appointment; or, as divines say, ex opere operato.

VER. 28. Neither Jew, &c. That is, no distinction of Jew, &c. Ch.

* V. 1. Præscriptus, ἀπορριπτός; not proscriptus, as in some readings of the Latin text: and in vobis is better understood to be joined with præscriptus than with crucifixus.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. By the child, in this place, the apostle understands all the Jewish people, who, as long as they were under the childhood of the law, were subjected to numerous restrictions, although they were the favorite children of God. But when the fulness of time came, they received the adoption of children, and were put in possession of the liberty of the law of grace. They were no longer obliged to observe the legal rites. Whence the apostle wishes the conclusion to be drawn, that if persons once subject to the law were now exempt from it, how much more will those be excused from its yoke, who were never under its control. Calmet.

VER. 3. Under the elements of the world. S. Chrysa. understands the exterior ceremonies and precepts of the law of Moses, with an allusion to the first elements or rudiments which children are taught. Wi.

VER. 4. The fulness of the time. That is, the time decreed by Divine Providence.—God sent his Son made of a woman, who took a true human body of his virgin Mother.—Under the law, as he was man, because he was pleased to make himself so. Wi.

VER. 6. Oying, Abba. That is, Father; Christ taught us in prayer to call God our Father, he having made us his adoptive sons by his grace, and heirs of heaven. Wi.

VER. 8-9. You served them, who by nature are no gods. These words are to be understood of the converts, who had been Gentiles.—Known of God. That is, approved and loved by him. Wi.—The language of the apostle in this verse is not perhaps strictly precise. The Galatians, whom he addresses, had been

6 And because you are sons, God hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying: Abba, Father.

7 Therefore, now he is no more a servant, but a son. And if a son, an heir also through God.

8 But then, indeed, not knowing God, you served them, who, by nature, are no gods.

9 But now, after that you have known God, or rather are known of God; how turn you again to the weak and needy elements, which you desire to serve again?

10 You observe days and months, and times, and years.

11 I am in fear for you, lest, perhaps, I have laboured in vain among you.

12 Be ye as I, for I also am as you: brethren, I beseech you; you have not injured me at all.

13 And you know how, through infirmity of the flesh, I preached the gospel to you heretofore: and your temptation in my flesh

14 You despised not, nor rejected; but received me as an Angel of God, as Christ Jesus.

15 Where is then your blessedness? For I bear you witness, that, if it could be done, you would have plucked out your own eyes, and would have given them to me.

16 Am I then become your enemy in telling you the truth?

17 They are zealous in your regard not well: but they would exclude you, that you might be zealous for them.

18 But be zealous for that which is good in a good converted from paganism, and of course were never subject to the law of Moses. But the apostle, by these words, entreats them not to begin now to serve these weak and useless elements, (as he calls the Jewish rites) or by this expression he may mean (as S. Chrysa. and Theophyl. explain it) the tyranny of error and wickedness. Calmet.

VER. 10-11. You observe* days, &c. These false teachers were for obliging all Christians to observe all the Jewish feasts, fasts, ceremonies, &c. Some of the late reformers find here an occasion to blame the fasts and holydays kept by Catholics. S. Jerom. in his commentary on these words, tells us that some had made the like objection in his time: his answer might reasonably stop their rashness; to wit, that Christians keep indeed the sabbath on the Sunday, (not the Jewish sabbath on Saturdays) that they keep also divers holydays, and days on which great saints suffered martyrdom, (let our adversaries take notice of this) but that both the days are different, and the motives of keeping them. See S. Jer. tom. iv. p. 271. Wi.—This text cannot mean to condemn the feasts appointed to be kept holy in the Catholic Church. For on the festivals dedicated to our Lord, S. Austin writeth thus: "We dedicate and consecrate the memory of God's benefits with solemnities on solemn appointed days, lest in process of time they might creep into ungrateful and unkind oblivion." And of the martyrs thus: "Christian people celebrate the memories of martyrs with religious solemnity, both to move themselves to an imitation of their virtues, and that they may be partakers of their merits, and helped by their prayers." Cont. Faust. l. xx. c. 21. And of other saints thus: "keep ye and celebrate with sobriety the nativity of saints, that we may imitate them that are gone before us, and that they may rejoice in us, who pray for us." In Ps. lxxviii. Conc. 2. in fine.

VER. 12. Be ye as I, for I also am as you. I add no word in the translation, because it is uncertain what is to be understood: some give this construction, be ye as I am, because I also was, as you now are; and they expound them thus: lay aside your zeal for the Jewish ceremonies as I have done, who was once as zealous for them as you seem now to be. Others would have the construction and sense to be: be ye as I am, because I am as you; that is, be affected to me, and love me, as I have still a true affection and love for you, which is agreeable to what follows, you have not offended me at all. Wi.

VER. 13-16. Through infirmity of the flesh . . . and your temptation in my flesh. S. Jerom. thinks the apostle had some bodily infirmity upon him. S. Chrysa. understands his poverty, and want, and persecutions, and that some were inclined to condemn him and his preaching on these accounts. Yet others among them did not esteem him less: they received him, respected him as an Angel of God, as Christ Jesus; they would have given him their eyes, as one may say, and all that was dear to them. He puts them in mind how happy then they thought themselves, and asketh why they are now so much changed? Wi.

VER. 17-20. He tells them this change comes from the false preachers among them, who with a false zeal would exclude them from a friendship and a submission to S. Paul, and deprive them again of that Christian liberty by which Christ, and the faith of Christ, had freed them from the yoke of the Mosaic law. On this account I must labor and travail, as it were to bring you forth a second thing always; and not only when I am present with you.

19 My little children, of whom I am in labor again, until Christ be formed in you.

20 And I would willingly be present with you now, and change my voice: because I am ashamed for you.

21 Tell me, you that desire to be under the law, have you not read the law?

22 For it is written, "that Abraham had two sons; the one by a bond-woman, and the other by a free-woman.

23 But he that was by the bond-woman, was born according to the flesh; but he by the free-woman, according to the promise.

24 Which things are said by an allegory. For these are the two testaments. The one indeed on Mount Sina, bringing forth unto bondage, which is Agar.

25 For Sina is a mountain in Arabia, which hath an affinity with that Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children.

26 But that Jerusalem, which is above, is free; which is our mother.

27 For it is written: "Rejoice, thou barren, that bearest not; break forth and cry out, thou that travailest not; for many are the children of the desolate, more than of her that hath a husband.

28 "Now we, brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of the promise.

29 But as then he, who was born according to the time. How do I now wish to be with you, to change my voice, to exhort you, to reprehend you, to use all ways and means to regain you to Christ?—I am in confusion about you,† I am perplexed, as the Greek signifies, as not knowing what to say or do. Wi.

* Gen. xvi. 15.—^b Gen. xxi. 2.—^c Isai. liv. 1.

VER. 22. It is written in the law, that is, in Genesis, (c. xvi. and c. xxi.) that Abraham had two sons, &c. that his two sons, Ismael, born of his servant, Agar, and Isaac of his wife, Sara, in an allegorical sense, represent the two testaments or covenants, which God made with his people: that by Ismael was represented that covenant of the former law delivered to Moses on Mount Sina, by which the Jews were made his elect people; yet as it were his servants, to be kept to their duty by fear of punishments; but by Isaac is represented the new covenant or testament of Christ, given at Jerusalem, where he suffered, where the new law was first published; by which law, they who believe in Christ were made the spiritual children of Abraham, the sons of God, and heirs of the blessings promised to Abraham: that Sina, the mountain in Arabia, hath an affinity with Jerusalem, and with her children, who remain under the servitude of the law of Moses: we cannot understand a conjunction, or an affinity, as to place and situation, Sina and Jerusalem being near twenty days' journey distant from each other; therefore it can only be an affinity in a mystical signification, inasmuch as Jerusalem was the capital of the Jews, where the children of those who received the law on Mount Sina lived still under the servitude of the same law: but Christians, who believe in Christ, must look upon themselves as belonging to Jerusalem, and not to the city of Jerusalem upon earth, but to the celestial Jerusalem in heaven, which is our mother, now no longer servants and slaves to the former law, but free, being made the sons of God by the grace of Christ, and heirs of heaven. And these blessings were promised to all nations, not only to the Jews, of which the much greater part remained obstinate, and refused to believe in Christ, but also particularly to the Gentiles, according to the prophecy of Isaiah, (c. liv.) rejoice thou that hast been barren, like Sara, for a long time; i. e. rejoice, you Gentiles, hitherto left in idolatry, without the knowledge or worship of the true God, now you shall have more children among you than among the Jews, who were his chosen people. Wi.

VER. 29. S. Paul makes another observation upon this example of Ismael and Isaac: that as Ismael was troublesome to Isaac, for which he and his mother were turned out of the family, so also now the Jews insulted and persecuted the Christians, who had been Gentiles; but God will protect them as heirs of the blessings promised: they shall be accounted the spiritual children of Abraham, while the Jews, with their carnal ceremonies, shall be cast off. Wi.—This, says S. Austin, is a figure of heretics, (who are the children of the bond-woman) unjustly persecuting the Catholic Church. Ep. 48.

* V. 10. S. Jerom on this verse, p. 271, dicat aliqua, nos simile crimen inurimus... observantes diem dominicam... Pascha festivitate, & Pentecostes lætitiis, & pro varietate regionum, diversa in honore martyrum tempora constituta, &c.

† V. 20. Confundor in vobis, ἀποσβῆναι. See 2 Cor. iv. 8. &c. (1540) flesh, persecuted him who was according to the spirit: so also now.

30 But what saith the scripture? Cast out the bond-woman and her son; for the son of the bond-woman shall not be heir with the son of the free-woman.

31 Therefore, brethren, we are not the children of the bond-woman, but of the free; by the freedom where-with Christ hath made us free.

CHAP. V.

He exhorts them to stand to their Christian liberty. Of the fruits of the flesh, and of the spirit.

STAND firm, and be not held again under the yoke of bondage.

2 "Behold I, Paul, tell you, that if you be circumcised, Christ will profit you nothing.

3 And I testify again to every man that circumciseth himself, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.

4 Christ is become of no effect to you; whosoever of you are justified by the law, you are fallen from grace.

5 For we in spirit, by faith, wait for the hope of justice.

6 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision; but faith, which worketh by charity.

7 You did run well: who hath hindered you, that you should not obey the truth?

8 This persuasion is not from him who calleth you.

9 "A little leaven corrupteth the whole mass.

† Rom. ix. 8.—^a Acts xv. 1.—^b 1 Cor. v. 6.

† V. 25. Qui conjunctus est ei, quæ nunc est Jerusalem, συνσυνεχὴ τῇ πόλει Ἰερουσαλὴμ. See Budæus, Estius, Mr. Legh, &c.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Be not held again under the yoke of bondage, of the old law. Wi.—This verse must be understood in the same manner as the 9th verse of the preceding chapter. See the annotations upon it.

VER. 2. If you converted from heathenism be circumcised, it must be by believing and professing it necessary, which is false doctrine, and then Christ will profit you nothing: not that the practice of those ceremonies was at that time sinful, especially for those that had been Jews, but it was an error to judge them necessary for converted Gentiles. Besides, he that judges circumcision necessary, must also judge himself bound to keep all the other ceremonies and precepts of the law. Wi.

VER. 3. The false teachers had insisted on the observance of circumcision and a few other rites only, as necessary for salvation; but S. Paul assures them, that the receiving of circumcision is an open profession of Judaism, and that he that makes this profession, binds himself to the observance of every part of the law, since a curse is pronounced against those that do not keep it in all its parts. If then circumcision be necessary for salvation, the whole law is necessary also. Calmet.

VER. 4. If you think that justice cannot be obtained but under the law, you make a renunciation of the justice of Christ: his meditation becomes of no avail to you. Calmet.

VER. 5-6. We in spirit hope for true justice by faith in Christ; yet not by faith only, but by faith working by charity. Wi.—Here note with S. Austin, that faith is not to be idle, but working or doing good works in charity: wherefore not faith alone. De opere et fide. c. xiv.

VER. 8, &c. This persuasion of yours is not from him who calleth you; is not from God: and I hope you will be shortly again of no other mind than what I taught you. Wi.—This was a Jewish proverb, and alluded to the time of the Pasch, when it was not permitted to eat of any but unleavened bread; during which time the least leaven made the whole mass unclean to a Jew... Some Greek copies read, μικρὰ ζύμη θλον τὸ φάρμα ζυμοῖ, when the sense will be, "a little leaven causes the whole mass to rise." Calmet.—Hence the introduction of any, however small, share of the ceremonial and Jewish rites, will greatly disfigure the purity and simplicity of the Christian institute.—As for me, my adversaries misrepresent me, when they say I preach circumcision; which if I did, I should not be persecuted as I am by the Jews. I never preach it necessary for Gentiles converted, though I have not condemned the use of it in the Jewish converts, provided they do not oblige other converts to it.—The scandal of the cross is therefore made void. The sense is, according to S. Jerom, that the Jews' greatest objection against S. Paul used to be, because he preached that circumcision and the law of Moses need not be observed: another objection against him was, that he preached Jesus, who was crucified on an infamous cross, to be their great Messiah. He reasons then in this manner, that if the Jews think he again preacheth the necessity of circumcision and the precepts of the old law, they will 10 I have confidence in you in the Lord; that you will not be of another mind: but he that troubleth you, shall bear the judgment, whosoever he be.

11 And I, brethren, if I yet preach circumcision, why do I yet suffer persecution? The scandal of the cross is therefore made void.

12 I would they were even cut off, who trouble you.

13 For you, brethren, have been called unto liberty: only give not the liberty an occasion to the flesh, but by charity of the spirit serve one another.

14 For all the law is fulfilled in one word: *Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

15 But if you bite and devour one another; take heed that you be not consumed one by another.

16 I say then: ^bWalk in the spirit, and you shall not fulfil the lusts of the flesh.

17 For the flesh lusteth against the spirit; and the spirit against the flesh; for these are contrary one to another: so that you do not the things that you would.

18 But if you are led by the Spirit, you are not under the law.

19 Now the works of the flesh are manifest: which are, fornication, uncleanness, immodesty, luxury,

20 Idolatry, witchcraft, enmities, contentions, emulations, wrath, quarrels, dissensions, sects,

21 Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like; of the which I foretell you, as I have foretold to you, that they who do such things, shall not obtain the kingdom of God.

22 But the fruit of the spirit is, charity, joy, peace, patience, benignity, goodness, longanimity, 23 Mildness, faith, modesty, continency, chastity. Against such there is no law.

24 And they who are Christ's, have crucified their flesh with the vices and concupiscences.

* Lev. xix. 18. Matt. xxii. 39. Rom. xiii. 9.—^b 1 Pet. ii. 12.

no longer be offended that he preacheth Christ crucified, because they were not so much offended with the latter as with the first. Thus also S. Chrys. on this verse. Others expound it thus: If I preach circumcision and the ceremonies of the law, therefore according to my doctrine, the cross of Christ, and justification by the merits of Christ crucified, is abolished, because justification is still to be sought for by the works of the law.—I would they were even cut off: separated from your communion by excommunication. This seems the true sense; so that I need not mention any other exposition. See Corn. a Lapide. Wi.

VER. 13. An occasion to the flesh; i. e. that you abuse not, by a vicious life, that Christian liberty which Christ hath purchased for you, but be united in the spirit of charity. Wi.

VER. 14. All the law, as far as it regards our duty to our neighbour, is contained in this text of the apostle; he says the same in his epistle to the Romans, C. xiii. He that loves his neighbour has fulfilled the law.

VER. 17. So that you do not the things that you would. He does not say, so that you cannot do, as others falsely translate; as if men were under an absolute necessity of sinning, or doing ill; which is also contradictory to the foregoing words, walk by the spirit, and you will not accomplish the works of the flesh. Wi.—Here some suppose, says S. Austin, that the apostle denieth that we have free liberty of will: not understanding that this is said to them, if they will not hold fast the grace of faith conceived by which only they can walk in the spirit, and not accomplish the lusts of the flesh. S. Austin, in c. v. Gal.

VER. 19–21. Uncleanness, immodesty, luxury. In the Greek there are but two vices named; luxury is not mentioned; and, perhaps, the Latin interpreter put two words to explain one Greek word. Wi.—S. Austin here sheweth that there are other damnable sins besides infidelity.

VER. 22. The fruit of the Spirit is charity, &c. There are numbered twelve of these fruits in the Latin, though but nine in the Greek text, in S. Chrys. S. Jerom, S. Aug. tract. lxxxvii. in Joan p. 756. The difference may again happen by the Latin interpreter using two words to express one Greek word. It is observed, that longanimity and patience are in a manner the same; so are benignity and goodness; and so may be here continency and chastity. Wi.

* V. 17. Ita ut non quaecunque vultis, illa faciatis; ἵνα μὴ, ὡς ἐν ὁμιλίᾳ λέγετε σοίτε. Dr. Wells, in his correction to the Prot. translation, leaves out cannot.

25 If we live in the spirit, let us also walk in the spirit.

26 Let us not become desirous of vain-glory, provoking one another, envying one another.

CHAP. VI.

He exhorts to charity, humility, &c. He glories in nothing but in the cross of Christ.

BRETHREN, and if a man be overtaken in any fault, you who are spiritual, instruct such a one in the spirit of mildness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.

2 Bear ye one another's burdens: and so ye shall fulfil the law of Christ.

3 For if any man think himself to be something, whereas he is nothing, he deceiveth himself.

4 But let every one prove his own work, and so he shall have glory in himself only, and not in another.

5 ^aFor every one shall bear his own burden.

6 And let him who is instructed in the word, communicate to him, who instructeth him, in all good things.

7 Be not deceived, God is not mocked.

8 For what things a man shall sow, those also shall he reap. For he that soweth in his flesh, of the flesh also shall reap corruption: but he that soweth in the spirit, of the spirit shall reap life everlasting.

9 ^dAnd in doing good, let us not fail: for in due time we shall reap, not failing.

10 Therefore, whilst we have time, let us do good to all men, but especially to those who are of the household of the faith.

11 See what a letter I have written to you with my own hand.

12 For whosoever desire to please in the flesh, they constrain you to be circumcised, only that they may not suffer the persecution of the cross of Christ.

13 For neither they themselves, who are circumcised,

* 1 Cor. iiii. 8.—^d 2 Thess. iiii. 13.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. One another's burdens. This is not contrary to what is added v. 5, that every one shall bear his own burden, because in the first place the sense is, that we must bear patiently with one another's faults and imperfections; in the second, that every one must answer for himself at God's tribunal. Wi.—Every one has his failings and weaknesses, and stands in need of indulgence from his brethren; he must, therefore, grant to them what he so much desires to receive from them. Calmet.

VER. 6. Communicate . . . in all good things: by this communication, is understood an assisting of others in their wants. Wi.—Such as are blessed with the goods of this world, should gladly communicate a share of their effects to the preachers and teachers of the true faith; and this not merely as a return for what they have received, but also that they may be made thereby partakers of their merit. S. Aug. l. 2. evang. quest. q. 8.

VER. 7. This is addressed to the avaricious, who, under various pretexts, excuse themselves from contributing to the support of their teachers. But they are here informed, that their excuses will not screen them from the anger of God. Calmet.

VER. 8. He that soweth in his flesh, &c. The apostle represents the flesh and the spirit like two fields, on which men sow good or bad seed, according to which they shall reap. Wi.

VER. 9. Works of mercy are the seed of life everlasting, and the proper cause thereof, and not faith only.

VER. 10. The household of the faith: those who profess the same true faith. Wi.—We are more bound to assist Christians than Jews; Catholics than heretics. S. Jerom, q. 1. ad Hedibim.

VER. 11. What a letter I have written . . . with my own hand. S. Jerom understands this of what he is now beginning to write, the rest being written by the hand of another. Others understand the whole letter. Wi.—S. Chrys. Theophylact, and Theodoret, suppose that the apostle wrote the whole epistle with his own hand, and here excuses himself for writing so ill the Grecian letters, which were so very different from those of his native language. But S. Jerom understands, that he wrote only this latter part of the epistle, as a testimony that the whole came from him. Calmet.

VER. 12–13. He tells them the false teachers would have them circumcised: first, to avoid persecution from the Jewish party; and secondly to glory in having made them their proselytes. Wi.

keep the law: but they will have you to be circumcised, that they may glory in your flesh.

14 But God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ: by whom the world is crucified to me, and I to the world.

15 For in Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth any thing, nor uncircumcision, but a new creature.

VER. 14. As for my part, I will glory in nothing but in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, but in Christ crucified. Wi.

VER. 15. But a new creature; but to be born anew, to receive the spiritual life of grace. Wi.

VER. 17. I bear the marks of the Lord Jesus in my body, by the stripes and wounds I have received for preaching the gospel. Wi.—Formerly it was not 16 And whosoever shall follow this rule, peace be upon them, and mercy, and upon the Israel of God.

17 From henceforth let no man be troublesome to me: for I bear the marks of the Lord Jesus in my body.

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit, brethren. Amen.

unusual to stamp certain characters on the bodies of soldiers, fugitives, and of domestics, purposely to distinguish them.—There are three principal parts in this epistle. The first is the history of the vocation of S. Paul, c. i. and ii. the second is on justification and the abrogation of the law; the third is an exhortation to persevere in Christian liberty, to avoid its abuse, and to perform the various duties of a Christian.

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE EPHESIANS.

EPHESUS was a famous city, the metropolis of Asia Minor, upon the Ægean Sea, now called the Archipelago. In it was the temple of Diana, one of the seven wonders of the world. S. Paul had staid there two years, and preached another year thereabouts. See Acts xx. The chief design of this Epistle was to hinder the Ephesians, and others in the neighbouring cities, from being seduced by false teachers, who were come among them. In the first three chapters he extols the grace of God, in mercifully calling the Gentiles. It was written when S. Paul was a prisoner; (see C. iv. 1. and vi. 20.) but whether during his first imprisonment, at Rome, an. 62, or in the latter imprisonment, as others judge about an. 65, is uncertain. Wi.—Ephesus was the capital of Lesser Asia, and celebrated for the temple of Diana, to which the most part of the people of the East went frequently to worship. But S. Paul having preached the gospel there for two years the first time, and afterwards for about a year, converted many. He wrote this Epistle to them when he was a prisoner at Rome, and sent it by Tychicus. He admonishes them to hold firmly the faith which they had received; and warns them and also those of the neighbouring cities, against the sophistry of philosophers and the doctrine of false teachers, who were come among them. The matters of faith contained in this Epistle are exceedingly sublime, and consequently very difficult to be understood. It was written about twenty-nine years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—Ephesus was the chief city in Asia Minor, much given to superstitions, and not less to debauchery and libertinism. In it was the famous temple of Diana. S. Paul had preached in this place three years; (Acts xx.) so that all, both Jews and Gentiles, heard the word of the Lord, till he was driven away by Demetrius, the silversmith. At his departure, he left Timothy (1 Tim. i.) to maintain the purity of the gospel, and preserve them from the fables, which S. Paul had warned the Ephesians, would be introduced among them by rapacious wolves, and men talking perversely, to lead disciples after them. The Gentile converts held fast to the doctrines they had received from S. Paul: the Jews were the chief innovators. To the former the apostle writes this Epistle, praising their steadfastness, and instructing them more fully in the hidden mysteries of faith, viz. redemption, justification, call of the Gentiles, predestination, and the glorification of Christ, and his body, the Church. In the fourth, and succeeding chapters, he exhorts them to the practice of morality, and to fulfil their respective duties of parents, children, masters, servants, &c. and finally reminds all the soldiers of Christ, to be armed with spiritual weapons against all the assaults of the devil. S. Jerom observes that this Epistle, especially the first three chapters, are intricate and difficult; probably owing to the sublimity of the subject. The last three contain the most interesting morality. Estius, passim. See also Acts xviii. 19. et seq. and xix. 1. et sequ.—When Cardinal Pole was consulted by what method the obscure passages of S. Paul's Epistles could be best unfolded, he replied: Let the reader begin with the latter part, where the apostle treats of morality, and practise that which is delivered there; and then let him go back to the beginning, where points of doctrine are discussed with great acuteness and subtilty.

CHAP. I.

The great blessings we have received through Christ. He is the head of all the church.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, to all the saints who are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus.

2 Grace be to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places, in Christ:

• 2 Cor. i. 3. 1 Pet. i. 3.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. S. Chrysostom takes notice, in his preface to this epistle, that the doctrinal part in the first three chapters is treated in a very sublime manner, with long periods and sentences, which makes the style more perplexed and the sense more obscure than in his other epistles. On this account I shall first give the reader a paraphrase as literal as I can, and then make some short notes on the difficulties in the text. Wi.

VER. 2. Blessed be the God, who, through his Son Jesus Christ, made man, hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings and gifts; and by his grace, infused into our souls, has given us a title to a happy eternity in heaven. Wi.—In heavenly things; (in celestibus) i. e. all spiritual blessings for heaven, or for eternity.

4 As he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and unspotted in his sight, in charity.

5 Who hath predestinated us unto the adoption of children, through Jesus Christ, unto himself: according to the purpose of his will,

6 To the praise of the glory of his grace, by which he made us acceptable, in his beloved Son.

7 In whom we have redemption through his blood, the remission of sins, according to the riches of his grace,

8 Which hath superabounded in us in all wisdom and prudence:

This is the object of all the blessings we receive from God; and we ought, according to the first intention of them, to refer them all to eternal or heavenly beatitude. S. Paul distinguishes the blessings which we receive in Jesus Christ from those bestowed upon the Jews, which were temporal and limited to this earth. Calmet. Ch.

VER. 4-8. As by his eternal decree, according to the purpose of his good will and pleasure, he hath made choice of us to be his adoptive sons, and predestinated us to be saved and glorified by the merits and grace of his beloved Son, our Redeemer, without any merits of ours to the glorious praise and riches of his grace, by which he hath made us abound in all wisdom and true prudence. Wi.

9 That he might make known to us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure, which he hath purposed in him.

10 In the dispensation of the fulness of times, to establish all things in Christ, which are in heaven and on earth, in him :

11 In whom we also are called by lot, being predestinated according to the purpose of him, who worketh all things according to the counsel of his will :

12 That we may be to the praise of his glory, who have before hoped in Christ :

13 In whom you also, when you had heard the word of truth (the gospel of your salvation :) in whom also believing, you were sealed with the holy Spirit of promise, 14 Who is the pledge of our inheritance, for the redemption of acquisition, unto the praise of his glory.

15 Wherefore I also hearing of your faith, which is in the Lord Jesus, and of your love towards all the saints,

16 Cease not to give thanks for you, making commemoration of you in my prayers :

17 That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give to you the spirit of wisdom and of revelation, in the knowledge of him :

18 The eyes of your heart enlightened, that you may know what is the hope of his calling, and what are the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints,

19 And what is the exceeding greatness of his power towards us, who believe *according to the operation of the might of his power,

20 Which he wrought in Christ, raising him up from the dead, and setting him at his right hand, in the heavenly places :

21 Above all principality, and power, and virtue, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come.

22 ^bAnd he hath put all things under his feet : and hath made him head over all the church,

23 Which is his body, and the fulness of him, who is filled all in all.

CHAP. II.

All our good comes through Christ. He is our peace.

AND ^ayou, when you were dead in your offences and sins,

^a Infra iii. 7.—^b Ps. viii. 8.—^c Colos. ii. 18.

VER. 9. That he might make known to us, and to all men, the mystery of his will and pleasure in establishing his new law, of calling all Gentiles, as well as Jews, to believe in his Son, made man for us, in the dispensation of the fulness of times, (that is, at the time decreed from eternity) to establish, to accomplish, and, as it is in the Greek, to recapitulate all things in heaven and on earth, in Christ, and through him, and his merits; on earth, by fulfilling all the types, figures, and prophecies concerning the Messiah; and in heaven, by filling up the number of his elect. Wi.—The mystery of his will. The word mystery signifies a secret, an unknown design. It was the will of God, to reveal to us the great design he had in the incarnation of his Son, viz. the formation of one great body of true adorers; composed, without distinction, of Jew and Gentile: till (v. 10) when the time appointed shall come, he will reunite and perfect in or under Christ this one body, composed of the Church triumphant, Angels and saints in heaven, and the Church militant upon earth. S. Chrysostom, Estius, &c.

VER. 11. In Christ we also are called by lot; i. e. to this happy lot, this share and state of eternal happiness, (he seems to speak with an allusion to the manner by which the lands of a temporal inheritance was distributed to the Israelites, in Palestine) that we (v. 12) who are saved, may be to the praise of his glory; might praise God for ever in the kingdom of his glory; particularly we Jews, who before hoped in the Messiah to come, and also you Gentiles, who now having heard the gospel, have believed in Christ, and who, together with all Christians, have been now sealed as it were with the holy Spirit of promise; i. e. by the Spirit promised, and all those spiritual graces which are an earnest and pledge, which give us an assurance of our future glory and happiness. For our redemption from our sins, and in order to the acquired possession, to the possession of that glorious happiness which Christ, by his incarnation and death, hath acquired for us. Wi.

VER. 13. In whom you . . . were sealed, &c. Having been regenerated in baptism, you have received the Holy Spirit and the supernatural gifts which he communicates, by which he has, as it were, impressed upon you the seal of your sanctification and the pledge of your salvation. It is not an external impression, such as that by which soldiers are marked by their sovereigns, nor circumcision, as of old, but it is a mark within you—the grace with which you are filled—which shews itself outwardly by miraculous effects, &c. Calmet.—Some refer these words, in whom you were sealed, to the sacrament of baptism; others to confirmation: both, with the sacrament of holy orders, confer a character, or mark, of which S. Paul seems to speak whenever he speaks of God sealing us.

VER. 15, &c. Wherefore . . . hearing of your constancy in the faith of Christ, and of your charitable love to all the saints, or faithful, I give always thanks to God; I pray that God may be more revealed to you, that the eyes of your heart may be enlightened, (v. 18) that you may know what ground you have to hope in the transcendent greatness of God's almighty power, who raised Christ from the dead, (v. 20) and set him on his right hand in heaven, above all the choirs and orders of angelic spirits, putting all things under his feet, making him, as man, head over all his Church militant on earth, and triumphant in heaven: which Church is his mystical body, who is filled all in all, (v. 23) or as others have translated, who filleth all in all; the sense is, that the glory of Christ, as head of all, is filled and increased by the salvation and happiness of all his chosen members, and of all his elect, to the end of the world. Wi.

VER. 19. His power. The greatest exertion of the power of God, or that action by which he shewed his power most, is the resurrection from the dead, which he exercised in Christ, when he raised him from the tomb, and placed him over all the Angels in heaven; and which shall likewise be exercised over us all, when we too shall be raised from the dead, and constituted members of the triumphant Church, and rewarded with a share of glory proportioned to our merits. These are the hopes to which we are called.

VER. 21. All principality. The Fathers agree that there are nine orders of blessed spirits, of which some are specified here; in the Epistle to the Colossians we have the order of thrones, to which if we add the cherubim, seraphim, Angels, and Archangels, we shall have nine. Calvin and other heretics strive to bring into doubt, and to corrupt many points of Catholic doctrine, sufficiently clear in holy writ, and sanctioned by the general belief of the Universal or Catholic Church.

VER. 22. As Christ is king, and yet men are kings also; so Christ is head of the Church, and yet man may be head thereof also. Jesus Christ is bishop and pastor of our souls; (Heb. iii.) but is that a reason why there should be no other bishop and pastor of our souls?

NOTES AS TO THE STYLE OR EXPRESSIONS OF S. PAUL, IN THIS CHAPTER.

VER. 3. With all spiritual blessings in heavenly places: lit. in heavenlies,* or celestials, which some expound and translate, in heavenly things; but this being expressed just before by spiritual blessings, it rather seems to be understood of the glory prepared for us in heaven, or in the heavenly mansions; in which sense it seems to me, according to the interpretation both of S. Jerom and of S. Chrys. in their commentaries on these words. Estius takes notice that the same expression, in the celestials, is used five times in this epistle, and in all of them signifies places above us. Wi.

VER. 6. To the praise of the glory of his grace; i. e. unto the glorious praise or commendation of his grace. Wi.

VER. 8. In all wisdom and prudence; which may be either referred to the wisdom and prudence of God, the giver of grace, or to the gifts of wisdom and prudence bestowed upon the elect. Wi.

VER. 9. Which he hath purposed in him;† i. e. in Christ: but in the Greek the sense is, in himself; i. e. in God the Father, who sent his Son. Wi.

VER. 10. In the dispensation of the fulness of times. It may perhaps be translated, at the appointed fulness of time, which is generally expounded to signify at the time decreed from eternity.—To establish (or restore) all things in Christ;‡ The Greek is to recapitulate, or, as in the Prot. translation, to gather together all things in Christ; which S. Jerom expounds, by a fulfilling at once in Christ all the ancient figures and prophecies of the former law. Wi.

VER. 14. The redemption of acquisition;§ i. e. in order to the acquired possession, or to the obtaining of that glory which Christ, by redeeming us, hath acquired for us. Wi.

VER. 23. Who is filled all in all. In the Latin the words have a passive signification, is filled; in the Greek may be signified, who filleth all in all. Wi.

* V. 3. In celestibus, ἐν τοῖς ἐπουρανίοις, in supercelestibus. S. Jerom, (p. 324, tom. 4, nov. edit.) Spiritualia in celestibus expectanda . . . thesaurizamus nobis in celis. See S. Chrys. ley. d. p. 765.

† V. 9. In eo; but in the Greek, ἐν αὐτῷ, in seipso.

‡ V. 10. Instaurare, ἀνακαταλίσσασθαι, recapitulare. See S. Jerom, p. 330.

§ V. 14. Acquisitionis, περιποίησις. See S. Jer. and S. Chrys.

¶ V. 23. Qui omnia in omnibus adimpletur, πάντα ἐν πανὶ πληροῦνται; which may either be in the passive or middle voice. S. Jerom, in his exposition, (p. 337) expressly says: Non ait, qui omnia in omnibus a dñeplet, sed qui omnia in omnibus adimpletur . . . sicut ergo adimpletur Imperator, si quotidie ejus impleatur exercitus, sic dominus Jesus, &c. See S. Chrys. in Lat. edit. (p. 869) and in the Greek, (p. 776, lin. 31) διὰ πάντων ὅν πληροῦται τὸ σῶμα, where the whole text requires a passive sense.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. He enlivened you, when you were dead. These words, he enlivened or restored to life, are necessary to express the literal sense and construction, as appears from the following fifth verse. By what is here translated offences, are commonly understood trespasses less grievous than by the word peccata. Wi.—God hath quickened you, or restored you to life; these words, expressed in v. 5, are understood in this; in some editions they are expressed. V.

2 Wherein in time past you walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of this air, of the spirit that now worketh on the children of unbelief,

3 Among whom also we all conversed in time past, in the desires of our flesh, fulfilling the will of the flesh and of our thoughts, and were by nature children of wrath, even as the rest:

4 But God, who is rich in mercy, through his exceeding charity, with which he hath loved us,

5 Even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together in Christ, (by whose grace you are saved)

6 And hath raised us up together, and hath made us sit together in the heavenly places, in Christ Jesus:

7 That he might shew in the ages to come the abundant riches of his grace, in goodness towards us in Christ Jesus.

8 For by grace you are saved through faith, and that not of yourselves: for it is the gift of God;

9 Not of works, that no man may glory.

10 For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus, in good works; which God hath prepared, that we should walk in them.

11 For which cause, be mindful that you being heretofore Gentiles in the flesh, who are called uncircumcision by that which is called the circumcision in the flesh, made by hands:

12 That you were at that time without Christ, alienated from the society of Israel, and strangers to the covenants, having no hope of the promise, and without God in this world.

13 But now in Christ Jesus, you, who some time were afar off, are made near by the blood of Christ.

VER. 2. According to the course of this world, (i. e. the customs of this wicked corrupt world) according to the prince of the power of this air, of the spirit, &c. meaning the devils, who are permitted to exercise their power upon the earth, or in the air. See Jo. xii. 10. xiv. 30. xvi. 11. Wi.—Secundum sæculum mundi hujus: according to the custom of this world. You were dead to the eyes of God, but you live in the eyes of the world: and how do you live? according to the maxims of the world, in idolatry, in crime, in corruption of manners. Corrupti et corrumpere sæculum est. Tacitus. Calmet.

VER. 3. Among whom, &c. S. Jerom (p. 3) refers it to trespasses or sins.—Were by nature; not by nature according to the state of man's first creation in paradise, but by nature infected with original sin by the fall of our first parents.—Even as the rest; that is, all mankind. Wi.

VER. 4, &c. But God... hath raised us up together, both Gentiles and Jews, to life in Christ, remitting our sins by faith in him, and by the grace of our merciful Redeemer, by his pure mercy, not by any works of ours, nor merely by the works of the former law.—Hath made us in a condition to sit together in heavenly places, to be hereafter crowned in heaven. Wi.

VER. 5. Quickened us together in Christ. Faith, baptism, and grace, are pledges of our future resurrection and glorification in heaven. Our present conversion is also a kind of resurrection. The time is come, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and those who hear shall live. S. Aug. upon S. John, No. 7.

VER. 8. Faith is the beginning, foundation, and root of justification, and the first of all other virtues, without which it is impossible to please God. B.

VER. 9. Not of works, as of our own growth, or from ourselves: but as from the grace of God. Ch.

VER. 10. For we are his workmanship, not only as to our body and soul, but by a new creation in Christ Jesus, with a new heart by his grace. Wi.—S. Paul now compares our conversion to creation, to shew that we had been called and justified without preceding merit. In the same manner as the things which God has drawn out of nothing, cannot glory as if they had contributed any thing to their existence. S. Jerom. hic.

VER. 11–12. Be mindful that as for you, who were Gentiles, who were called an uncircumcised people by the circumcised Jews, that you were without Christ, without the hopes or expectation of the Messiah, alienated from the conversation of those who were God's elect people, and from the promises particularly made to them, that the Messiah should be of their race: without God in this world, i. e. without the knowledge and the worship of God. But now by Christ, by believing in him, you who seemed to be afar off, are made near by his blood, (v. 13) by him who died for all; for he hath brought peace to all men, breaking down by his incarnation and death that wall of partition, that enmity betwixt the Jews and Gentiles, making them but one; abolishing that former law, of so many ordinances, precepts, and ceremonies, by decrees, (which may signify by his divine (1544)*

14 For he is our peace, who hath made both one, and breaking down the middle wall of partition, the enmities in his flesh:

15 Abolishing the law of commandments in decrees: that he might make the two in himself into one new man, making peace,

16 And might reconcile both to God in one body by the cross, killing the enmities in himself.

17 And coming, he preached peace to you, who were afar off, and peace to them who were near.

18 *For through him we have both access in one Spirit to the Father.

19 Now, therefore, you are no more strangers and foreigners: but you are fellow-citizens with the saints, and the domestics of God:

20 Built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone:

21 In whom all the building framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord;

22 In whom you also are built together into a habitation of God in the Spirit.

CHAP. III.

The mystery hidden from former ages was discovered to the apostle, to be imparted to the Gentiles. He prays that they may be strengthened in God.

FOR this cause I, Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ, for you Gentiles,

2 If yet you have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God, which is given me towards you:

3 How that, according to revelation, the mystery hath been made known to me, as I have written above in brief:

* ROM. v. 2.

decrees; or rather, as S. Jerom expounds it by the Greek, abolishing the old law and its precepts by the precepts and doctrine of the new law) that he might reconcile to God both the Jews and Gentiles, that now they might be one mystical body, to wit, the Church of Christ, of which he is the head. Remember then that you are no longer strangers and foreigners, as you were when the Jews were the only elect people of God: now, by faith and hope, you are fellow-citizens with the saints and with all the elect people of God: you are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, (v. 20) who, by their prophecies concerning the Messiah, and by their teaching and preaching of the gospel, are as it were subordinate foundation-stones under Christ, the chief founder and the chief corner-stone of his Church; in whom you also (Christians, at Ephesus, and all the faithful) are built up together, (v. 22) as parts of a spiritual edifice or temple, where God inhabits. Wi.

VER. 14. Christ destroyed the enmity which, like a wall of separation, stood between Jew and Gentile, and united them into one people. He did this in his flesh, by his own blood, or the sacrifice he made of his flesh on the cross. Calmet.

VER. 19. You are no longer strangers with regard to God and his holy alliance. You are no longer travellers and vagabonds, without a God, as you were before your conversion; not knowing to whom you belonged, nor finding in paganism either solid foundation or truth, neither hopes for this nor consolation for future life. But now you are become citizens of the same city as the saints, and domestics of the house of God. Calmet.

VER. 20. The Church is in this place said to be built upon the apostles and prophets; why not then upon S. Peter?

* V. 11–12. Legem mandatorum decretis evacuans, τὸν νόμον τῶν ἐντολῶν ἐδύνατο (dogmatibus) ἀσπαρῆσας; i. e. says S. Jerom, (p. 344) præcepta legalia Evangelicis dogmatibus commutavit. See S. Chrysa. p. 879. Lat. edit. in Savil. p. 787.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. For this cause I, Paul, the prisoner, &c. The sense seems to be, I, Paul, am a prisoner; otherwise the sense will be suspended, and interrupted by a long parenthesis till the 14th verse, where it is again repeated, "for this cause I bow my knees." Wi.

VER. 2. If yet you have heard. If yet doth not imply a doubt, but is the same as, for you have heard the dispensation.† This word, dispensation, is divers times taken by S. Paul to signify the manner by which a thing is done, or put in execution; the sense therefore here is, for you have heard how by the grace of God I have been made your apostle. Wi.*

VER. 3. The mystery, &c. By this mystery, he means what he has already mentioned in the last chapter and what he continues to speak of, to wit, that by the coming of Christ, and the preaching of his gospel, all both Jews and Gentiles, all nations should be united into one Church, by one and the same faith. Wi.—Mystery, &c. Revelation, the same as he mentions Gal. i. 12; where speaking

4 As you reading, may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ:

5 Which in other generations was not made known to the sons of men, as it is now revealed to his holy apostles, and prophets, in the Spirit.

6 That the Gentiles should be coheirs, and of the same body, and joint partakers of his promise in Christ Jesus, by the gospel:

7 Of which I am made a minister, according to the gift of the grace of God, which is given to me *according to the operation of his power.

8 †To me, the least of all the saints, is given this grace, to preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ,

9 And to enlighten all men, what is the dispensation of the mystery which hath been hidden from eternity in God, who created all things.

10 That the manifold wisdom of God may be made known to the principalities, and powers, in the heavenly places, through the church,

11 According to the eternal purpose, which he made in Christ Jesus, our Lord:

12 In whom we have courage and access with confidence, by the faith of him.

13 Wherefore, I beseech that you faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory.

of his gospel, he says, For neither did I receive it of man, nor did I learn it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ. This revelation seems to have regarded principally three things: 1. The redemption and justification of man by Jesus; 2. the vocation of the Gentiles; and thirdly, a positive command to announce the gospel to them. He speaks particularly of the second and third. Estius.—Made known to me by revelation, and to the other apostles and prophets. Wi.

VER. 6. As it is now revealed† S. Paul, as both S. Jerom and S. Chrys. take notice, does not absolutely say that this mystery was not known, but only not known as it was afterwards to the apostles. For whether by this mystery we understand the incarnation of Christ, or the uniting of the Jews and Gentiles into one Church, we cannot doubt but both were revealed to Abraham, to David, to many prophets and just men in the time of the law; but now it was revealed and made known to all. Wi.

VER. 6. That the Gentiles should be coheirs, &c. This is the mystery which was heretofore unknown, and now revealed. This is what the greatest part of the Jews could never be brought to believe, that the Gentiles should be equally sharers with them of God's promises and blessings. They were strangely scandalized that S. Peter should receive Cornelius, an uncircumcised man, into the same communion. On the like account they persecuted S. Paul. Wi.

VER. 7. I am made a minister, &c. i. e. an apostle, to preach this same doctrine of the gospel of Christ. Wi.

VER. 8. To me, the least of all the saints, (i. e. of the faithful) is given this mission by the grace of God, and power from the Almighty of working miracles, and other miraculous gifts from him, who created all things in order to enlighten or bring light to all men, that they may know and be convinced of the dispensation and manner in which God will have this mystery now made known and preached to all the world. Wi.

VER. 9. The Lord has commanded me to teach and declare his wisdom, displayed at this time in the mystery of our redemption; a mystery, which for so many ages, day even from all eternity, has been locked up in the breast of the Almighty, but which he has at length vouchsafed to reveal. Menochius.

VER. 10. That the manifold wisdom of God, and his other divine perfections of mercy, of justice, &c. may be more known, and seen executed by the coming of his Son, according to his eternal decrees of sending a Redeemer, in whom they are to believe, and have a hope and confidence of their eternal salvation. Wi.

VER. 13. Wherefore, I beseech you, be not discouraged nor disheartened at my tribulations and persecutions on the account of the gospel, nor at your own, which ought to be a subject both for you and me to glory in. Wi.

VER. 14-15. For this cause I pray and bow my knees to the eternal Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom all paternity (or fatherhood) in heaven and earth is named. The Greek word oftentimes signifies a family, and therefore may signify, of whom the whole family in heaven and earth is named; and thus the sense will be, that God is not only the Father of his eternal Son, but (as not only the Latin text, but even the Greek may signify) of all angelical spirits in heaven, and of all men, especially Christians, made his adoptive sons in baptism. But here may be signified not only a family, but those in particular who are honoured with the name and dignity of fathers; so that the name which they have of fathers, or patriarchs, is derived from God the Father of all, and communicated to them in an inferior degree. This exposition is found in S. Jerom, in Theodoret, Theophylact. S. John Damascen, &c. Wi.—All paternity, or the whole family; patris. God is the Father both of angels and men: whosoever besides is named father, is so named with subordination to him. Ob.

VER. 17. Christ dwelleth in us by his gifts, and we are just as those his gifts

14 For this cause I bow my knees to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ,

15 Of whom all paternity in heaven and earth is named,

16 That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with power by his Spirit unto the inward man.

17 That Christ may dwell by faith in your hearts: that being rooted and founded in charity,

18 You may be able to comprehend, with all the saints, what is the breadth, and length, and height, and depth:

19 To know also the charity of Christ, which surpasseth knowledge, that you may be filled unto all the fulness of God.

20 Now to him, who is able to do all things more abundantly than we ask or understand, according to the power which worketh in us:

21 To him be glory in the church, and in Christ Jesus, for all generations, world without end. Amen.

CHAP. IV.

He exhorts them to unity; to put on the new man; and to fly sin.

I THEREFORE, a prisoner in the Lord, beseech you, † that you walk worthy of the vocation in which you are called.

* Supra i. 19.—† 1 Cor. xv. 9.—‡ 1 Cor. vii. 27. Philip. i. 27.

remaining in us, and not by Christ's proper justice only, as some modern innovators will have it. B.—And this not by faith only, but by faith rooted and founded in charity, which accomplishes all virtues. Ibidem.

VER. 18. What is the breadth, &c. It is not expressed to what must be referred these metaphorical words of breadth, length, &c. Some expound them of the charity which in our hearts we ought to have for one another; others, of the love which Christ shewed towards mankind, in coming to redeem all. Wi.—What, &c. This thought seems borrowed from Job xi: "Peradventure thou wilt comprehend the steps of God, and wilt find out the Almighty perfectly." The inspired writer then shews us how the Almighty is incomprehensible; for, says he, "God is higher than the heavens; and what wilt thou do? he is deeper than hell; and how wilt thou know? The measure of him is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea." The apostle, alluding to these words, prays that the Ephesians may have faith and charity sufficient to enable them to comprehend all that is comprehensible of God; as S. Dionysius explains it. But we are not hence to conclude, that there exists such a thing as dimension or size with regard to God, for he is a pure Spirit: but these expressions are merely metaphorical. For by breadth we are to understand his virtue and wisdom, which extend over all his creatures: (Ecc. i.) "he poured out wisdom upon all his works." By length is meant his eternal duration: (Ps. ci.) "but thou, O Lord, remainest for ever." By height we are taught the infinite superiority of his nature over ours: (Ps. cxii.) "The Lord is high above all nations." And by depth we are shewn the incomprehensibility of his wisdom: (Ecclesiastes) "Wisdom is a great depth; who shall find it out?" Hence it appears that the end of faith and charity is, that we may arrive at a perfect faith; which may know, as far as it is intelligible, the greatness of his wisdom, his eternal duration, &c. S. Tho. Aquin. in Eph.

VER. 19. That you may be filled unto all the fulness of God; i. e. that as God is full of love and charity for all, so may you in an inferior degree, according as you are capable, be filled with charity. Wi.

* V. 2. Si tamen audistis, &c. Si tamen et scys do not here express a doubt, but an affirmation, the same as in Latin, si quidem. See S. Chrys. on the next chapter, v. 21. scys ουκ αρπισθαλυντες εστι, αλλα και σφοδρα διαβεβαιουσιν.

† Ibid. Dispensationem, οικονομιαν, rei gestae administrationem.

‡ V. 5. Sicuti nunc, &c. νυν.

§ V. 8. Illuminare omnes, φωτισαι παντας; see as God doth by interior illuminations, but by preaching.

|| V. 14-15. Omnis paternitas, patris. See S. Jerom on this verse: Deus . . . paternitatis nomen ex seipso largitus est omnibus . . . prestat ceteris ut patres esse dicantur. Theodoret, tom. 3. p. 306. Ed. Par. an. 1642. Alii patres, sive corporales, sive spirituales, desuper traxerunt appellationem: οι δε αλλοι πατρες . . . ανωθεν την προσηγοριαν αλκουσιν. See S. J. Damascen, l. 1. Ortho. fid. c. ix. Ed. Bas. p. 32. τουτου δε τοντιν, &c. See Theophylact, &c.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Here begins the second part of this epistle, in which he exhorts them to the practice of Christian virtues. Wi.

VER. 4. In one hope of your vocation. The three great reasons that we have to love one another are contained in this verse, because we have but one body, of which Christ is the head. We are all animated by the same spirit, viz. the Holy Ghost, who is given to us all, and we all live in the same hope of eternal happiness. Calmet

2 With all humility, and mildness, with patience, supporting one another in charity,

3 ^aCareful to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

4 One body, and one spirit: as you are called in one hope of your vocation.

5 One Lord, one faith, one baptism.

6 ^bOne God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in us all.

7 ^cBut to every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ.

8 Wherefore he saith: ^dAscending on high, he led captivity captive: he gave gifts to men.

9 Now that he ascended, what is it, but because he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth?

10 He who descended is the same also who ascended above all the heavens, that he might fill all things.

11 And he gave some indeed ^eapostles, and some prophets, and others evangelists, and others pastors and teachers,

12 For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edification of the body of Christ:

13 Till we all meet in the unity of faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the age of the fulness of Christ:

14 That we may no more be children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, in the wickedness of men, in craftiness, to the machination of error.

15 But performing the truth in charity, we may in all things grow up in him, who is the head, Christ:

16 From whom the whole body, compacted and fitly joined together, by what every joint supplieth, according to the working in the measure of every part, maketh the increase of the body, to the edifying of itself in charity.

17 ^fThis then I say and testify in the Lord: that henceforward you walk not as also the Gentiles walk, in the vanity of their mind,

18 Having the understanding obscured with darkness, alienated from the life of God, through the ignorance which is in them, because of the blindness of their heart,

19 Who despairing, have given themselves up to lasciviousness, to the working of all uncleanness, unto covetousness.

20 But you have not so learned Christ:

21 If yet you have heard him, and have been taught in him, as the truth is in Jesus.

22 ^gTo put off, according to the former conversation, the old man, who is corrupted, according to the desires of error.

23 ^hAnd be ye renewed in the spirit of your mind,

^a Rom. xii. 10.—^b Mal. ii. 10.—^c Rom. xii. 8. 1 Cor. xii. 11. 2 Cor. x. 13.

^d Psal. lxxvii. 19.—^e 1 Cor. xii. 28.—^f Rom. i. 21.—^g Coloss. iii. 8.—^h Rom. vi. 4.

VER. 5. This contains some more reasons why Christians should love one another. We are all the servants of the same God, believe the same mysteries, and receive the same sacraments, whoever may be the dispenser of them.—One faith. As rebellion is the bane of commonwealths and kingdoms, and peace and concord the preservation of the same; so is schism, and diversity of faith or fellowship in the service of God, the calamity of the Church; and peace, unity, and uniformity, the special blessing of God therein. S. Cyprian, in his book on the unity of the Church, writeth thus: "One Church, for one is my dove. This unity of the Church, he that holdeth not, doth he think he holdeth the faith? He that withstandeth or resisteth the Church, he that resisteth Peter's chair, upon which the Church was built, doth he trust that he is in the Church?" And again, Ep. xl. "There is one God, and one Christ, and one Church, and one chair, by our Lord's voice founded upon Peter. To set up another altar, or to constitute another priesthood, besides the one altar and the one priesthood, is impossible. Whosoever gathereth elsewhere scattereth. It is adulterous, it is impious, it is sacrilegious, whatsoever is instituted by man to the breach of God's disposition. Get ye far from such men: they are blind, and leaders of the blind." S. Hilary also applies this text against the Arians thus: "Perilous and miserable it is that there are now among them as many faiths as wills, and as many doctrines as manners; whilst modes of faith are written as men will, or as they will, so are understood. Whereas the one truth teaches there is but one God, one Lord, one baptism, and also one faith: hence whilst more faiths are made, they begin by falling from that which is the only faith, and end in having no faith at all." S. Hilary, l. ad Constantium Augustum.

VER. 7. To every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ. That is, as it hath pleased Christ to bestow his free gifts upon us; to shew, says S. Chrys. that it was not according to any merit of ours. The words also shew that Christ is the giver and author of graces, and consequently the true God. Wi.—We must endeavour by all means in our power to preserve this unity, especially by avoiding jealousy, or being envious of the graces which have been given to our neighbour; considering that they all proceed from the same God, who divides to each one as he pleaseth. Tirinus.

VER. 8. He led captivity captive. S. Jerom and others expound these words of Christ's delivering the pious souls that had died before his ascension, and which were detained in a place of rest which is called Limbus Patrum.—He gave gifts to men. Having delivered men from the captivity of sin, he bestowed upon them his gifts and graces. Wi.—Wherefore he, David, in Ps. lxxvii. makes use of these words, in order to shew that these gifts were gratuitous, and that no person had a right to complain that another had received more: after this the apostle proceeds to shew that Christ even descended to the lower parts of the earth, in order to teach us humility; whence he concludes that we ought to be humble and live in union with our brethren, which is the chief subject of the present chapter. Tirinus.

VER. 9. Into the lower parts of the earth. This cannot signify into the grave only, especially since in that which we look upon as the apostles' creed, we first profess to believe that he was buried, and afterwards that he descended into hell. Wi.

VER. 11. Some indeed he gave to be apostles, &c. It is said (1 Cor. xii. 28.) that God (even with the Greek article) gave some to be apostles, &c. and here it is said of Christ: another proof that Christ is the true God. Wi.

VER. 13-14. Unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the age of the fulness of Christ; that is, according to the measure of the full and perfect age of Christ. Of the ancient interpreters, some expound this of what shall happen in the next world, after the resurrection, when all the elect shall have bodies every way perfect; and as some conjecture, (when all who rise by a happy resurrection) shall seem to be about thirty, of the stature and age of Christ when he suffered. But others, especially the Greek interpreters, understand this verse of a spiritual perfection in this life, by which the members of Christ's mystical body meet in the unity of faith, and increase in grace and virtue by imitating Christ, and following his doctrine and example. And this seems more agreeable. What follows: that we may not now be children, tossed to and fro by the wickedness, &c. of men. The Greek word, as S. Jerom observes, may signify by the deceit or fallacy of men; by illusion, says S. Aug. And S. Chrys. tells us it is spoken by a metaphor, taken from those who cheat at dice, to gain all to themselves, to draw men into errors and heresies. Such, about that time, were the disciples of Simon the magician. Wi.—Every one must labour to become perfect in the state in which he is placed by increasing in the knowledge and love of God, which knowledge and love of God constitute the full measure of a Christian. S. Chrysostom.—S. Austin also admits of another interpretation of this place, but prefers the former. According to him, it may mean: that all people, at the resurrection, will be raised in such a state as they would have had if they lived to the age of Christ, viz. thirty-three years. S. Thomas.—This text of the apostle, assuring to the one true Church a perpetual and visible succession of pastors, in the ministry, successors of the apostles, warranted the holy Fathers in the early ages of the Church, as it does Catholics of the present day, to try all seceders by the most famous succession of the popes or bishops of Rome. See this in S. Irenaeus, l. iii. c. 3. Tertul. in præscript. Optatus. l. ii. cont. Parmen. S. Austin, cont. ep. Manic. c. iv. Ep. 165 & alibi. S. Epiphani. hæres. 27.

VER. 16. By what every joint supplieth, &c. S. Paul compares the Church and mystical body of Christ (as he does elsewhere) to a natural body, whose perfection depends on the harmony, union, and concurrence of all the different parts; and so in the Church, of which Christ is the head, some are apostles, some prophets, &c. and Christ hath been pleased to give them different offices, talents, and gifts, for the edifying and increase of the whole body, which is his Church, that they may no longer be like Gentiles, . . . alienated from the life of God; from such a life as God requires they should lead. Wi.—The obscurity of this verse may be thus explained: the apostle compares the mystical body of the Church, of which Christ is the head, to the natural body of man; and as the head directs different members to different operations, according to their various properties, so in the Church Christ distributes to each his proper office, that being all intent upon their relative duties, all may grow up in charity and become perfect. Estius.

VER. 19. Who despairing, (without faith and charity) according to the Latin text and some Greek manuscripts; though according to the ordinary Greek, without grief or sorrow, (to wit, for their sins) have given themselves over to all manner of vices, unto covetousness. Some take notice that the Greek word may not only signify avarice, or covetousness of money, but any unsatiable desires or lusts. See C. v. 3. and 5. Wi.

VER. 26. Be angry, and sin not, as it is said Ps. iv. 5. Anger as a passion 24 * And put on the new man, who according to God, is created in justice, and holiness of truth.

25 ^b Wherefore, putting away lying, ^c speak ye the truth every man with his neighbour: for we are members one of another.

26 ^d Be angry, and sin not: let not the sun go down upon your anger.

27 * Give not place to the devil.

28 Let him that stole, steal now no more: but rather let him labour, working with his hands that which is good, that he may have to give to him who is in need.

29 Let no evil speech proceed from your mouth: but that which is good to the edification of faith, that it may give grace to the hearers.

30 And grieve not the holy Spirit of God: whereby you are sealed unto the day of redemption.

31 Let all bitterness, and anger, and indignation, and clamour, and blasphemy, be taken away from you, with all malice.

32 ^e And be ye kind one to another, merciful, forgiving one another, even as God hath forgiven you in Christ.

CHAP. V.

Exhortations to a virtuous life. The mutual duties of man and wife, by the example of Christ, and of the Church

BE ye, therefore, followers of God, as most dear children:

2 * And walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us, and hath delivered himself for us, an oblation and a sacrifice to God, for an odour of sweetness.

3 ^b But fornication and all uncleanness, or covetousness, let it not so much as be named among you, as it becometh saints:

4 Nor obscenity, nor foolish talking, nor scurrility, which is to no purpose: but rather giving of thanks.

^a Coloss. iii. 12.—^b 1 Pet. ii. 1.—^c Zec. viii. 16.—^d Ps. iv. 5.—^e James iv. 7.

^f Coloss. iii. 13.—^g John xiii. 34. and xv. 12. 1 John iv. 21.

of the mind, may proceed from a good motive and be guided by reason; as our Saviour, Christ (Mark iii. 6.) is said to have looked about at the Jews with anger, i. e. with a zeal against their blindness and malice.—Let not the sun go down upon your anger. If moved to anger, return without delay to a calmness of mind and temper. Wi.—Be angry when reason or necessity compels you; but even then, so restrain yr anger that you neither offend God nor scandalize your neighbour. Moreover, lay it aside as soon as you are able, so that the sun go not down upon your anger. Jansenius.

VER. 29. That it may afford grace to the hearers; i. e. that your speech may contribute to their good and edification. Wi.

VER. 30. Grieve not the Holy Spirit: not that the Holy Ghost can be contripated. It is a metaphor; and the sense is, sin not against the Holy Ghost. Wi.—To contristate the Holy Spirit is a metaphorical expression, which signifies to offend God, or the Holy Ghost, who has sealed us by the sacraments of baptism and confirmation with particular marks, by which we shall be distinguished from others in the day of our retribution. SS. Chrysostom, Jerom, Ambrose, &c.

* V. 8. Captivum auxil captivitatem. On which words S. Jerom: (p. 364.) Descendit ad inferna, et sanctas animas, quæ ibi detinebantur, secum ad cælos victor deduxit. See 1 Pet. c. iii.

† V. 13. In mensuram ætatis plenitudinis Christi; εἰς μέτρον ἡλικίας (ætatis vel staturæ) τοῦ πληρώματος τοῦ Χριστοῦ. See S. Aug. l. xxii. de Civ. Dei. c. xv. et seq. tom. vii. p. 678. S. Hierom in Epitaphio Paulæ. tom. iv. part 2. p. 635. S. Chrys. hom. xi.

‡ V. 14. In nequitia hominum, ἐν τῇ καβέλα, in fallaciâ: καβέλα, est lusus aleæ. See S. Chrys. p. 621. Ed. Sav.

§ V. 19. Deperantes. The Latin interpreter seems to have read ἀπηλκνότες, as in some MSS. but in most copies ἀπελκνότες, indolentes. See S. Jer. in his Commentary, p. 368.

§ Ibid. In avaritiâ: ἐν πλεονεξίᾳ, in cupiditate. See v. 3. of the next chapter.

CHAP. V. VER. 3. *Covetousness. The Latin word is generally taken for a coveting or immoderate desire of money and riches. S. Jerom and others observe, that the Greek word in this and divers other places in the New Testament may signify any unsatiable desire, or the lusts of sensual pleasures; and on this account, S. Jerom thinks that it is here joined with fornication and uncleanness.

5 For know ye this, and understand, that no fornicator, nor unclean, nor covetous person, which is a serving of idols, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ, and of God.

6 ^f Let no man deceive you with vain words: for because of these things cometh the anger of God upon the children of unbelief.

7 Be ye not, therefore, partakers with them.

8 For you were heretofore darkness, but now light in the Lord. Walk ye as children of the light:

9 For the fruit of the light is in all goodness, and justice, and truth:

10 Proving what is acceptable to God:

11 And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

12 For the things that are done by them in secret, it is shameful even to mention.

13 But all things that are reprov'd, are made manifest by the light: for all that is made manifest is light.

14 Wherefore he saith: Rise, thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ will enlighten thee.

15 See, therefore, brethren, how you walk circumspectly: ^g not as unwise, 16 But as wise: redeeming the time, for the days are evil.

17 ^h Wherefore become not unwise, but understanding what is the will of God.

18 And be not drunk with wine, wherein is luxury, but be ye filled with the holy Spirit,

19 Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns, and spiritual canticles, singing, and making melody in your hearts to the Lord,

20 Giving thanks always for all things, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, to God and the Father.

21 Being subject one to another in the fear of Christ.

^a Coloss. iii. 5.—^b Matt. xxiv. 4. Mark xiii. 5. Luke xxi. 9. 2 Thess. ii. 6.

^c Coloss. iv. 5.—^d Rom. vii. 2. 1 Thess. iv. 3.

ness. But S. Chrys. in the last chapter, (v. 19. hom. xiii. and on this chap. v. 3.) shews that by the Greek word is understood avarice, or an immoderate desire of riches, when he tells (hom. xviii.) that this sin is condemned by those words of Christ, Luke xvi. 13. You cannot serve God and mammon. Wi.

VER. 4. Nor obscenity † What is here meant by this word, S. Chrys. tells us at large in the moral exhortation after his 17th homily; to wit, jests with immodest suggestions or a double meaning, and raillery or buffoonery against the rules of good conversation, scarce made use of by any but by men of low condition and of a mean genius, which is not to the purpose of a Christian, who must give an account to God of all his words. Wi.

VER. 5. Nor covetous person, which is a serving of idols. It is clear enough by the Greek that the covetous man is called an idolater, whose idol is mammon, though it may be also said of the sinners, that the vices they are addicted to are their idols. Wi.

VER. 6. The apostle here puts them in mind of the general judgment, when the angel of God will, on account of their crimes of avarice, fornication, &c. fall on the children of unbelief; by which are meant the wicked. He had before assured them that the perpetrators of such crimes would be excluded from the kingdom of heaven; and now he moreover informs them, that the severest punishments will be inflicted on such wicked people. Estius.

VER. 7. Be ye not, therefore, partakers with them: do not imitate their wickedness, or the wrath of the Almighty will likewise fall on you. Estius.

VER. 8. By darkness is here meant the state of infidelity into which they had been plunged so far as to adore stones as God, and committed without remorse the above-mentioned grievous sins. But delivered by Christ from this darkness, they have become light in the Lord, shining in faith and justice. Estius.

VER. 9. For the fruit of the light. So the Latin and divers Greek copies; not the fruit of the spirit, as we read in many Greek manuscripts; and in this Dr Wells thought fit to change the Prot. translation. Wi.

VER. 10. With solicitude seek out what things are pleasing to God, and carefully perform them. Estius.

VER. 11. You are light, they are darkness; do you, therefore, shew by the light of your good works how base and detestable their works of darkness are. Estius.

VER. 14. Rise, thou that sleepest. The sense may be taken from Isai. lx. 1 S. Jerom thinks they may be cited from some work not canonical. Wi.

22 *Let women be subject to their husbands, as to the Lord:

23 *For the husband is the head of the wife; as Christ is the head of the church. He is the saviour of his body.

24 Therefore as the church is subject to Christ, so also let the wives be to their husbands in all things.

25 *Husbands, love your wives, as Christ also loved the Church, and delivered himself up for it,

26 That he might sanctify it, cleansing it by the laver of water in the word of life,

27 That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, nor any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish.

28 So also ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife, loveth himself.

29 For no man ever hated his own flesh: but nourisheth and cherisheth it, as also Christ doth the church:

30 For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

31 *For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother: and shall adhere to his wife, *and they shall be two in one flesh.

32 This is a great sacrament: but I speak in Christ, and in the church.

33 Nevertheless, let every one of you in particular love his wife as himself: and let the wife fear her husband.

CHAP. VI.

Duties of children and servants. The Christian's armour.

CHILDREN, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is just.

* Gen. iii. 16. Coloss. iii. 18. 1 Pet. iii. 1.—^b 1 Cor. xi. 3.—^c Coloss. iii. 19.—^d Gen. ii. 24. Mat. xix. 5. Mark x. 7.—^e 1 Cor. vi. 16.—^f Exod. xx. 12. Deut. v. 6. Eccl. iii. 9. Mat. xv. 4.

VER. 23. For the husband is the head of the wife. Though S. Paul here speaks of a man, who is a husband, we may rather translate man than husband, being the same sentence and same words as 1 Cor. xi. 3. where even the Prot. translation has, that the man is head of the woman.—He (Christ) is the saviour of his mystical body, the Church: though some expound it, that the husband is to save and take care of his wife, who is as it were his body. Wi.

VER. 24. As the church is subject to Christ. The Church then, according to S. Paul, is ever obedient to Christ; and can never fall from him, but remain faithful to him, unspotted and unchanged to the end of the world. Ch.

VER. 26. Cleansing it by the laver of water, in the word of life. By this washing is generally understood the sacrament of baptism; and by the word of life, not the word of the gospel preached, but the words or form used in the administration of baptism, according to Christ's institution: but this is not so certain. Wi.

VER. 27. Not having spot or wrinkle. S. Aug. and others expound it of the glorious Church of Christ, in heaven: others even of the Church of Christ in this world, as to its doctrine, sacraments, and discipline, or practices approved by the Catholic Church. Wi.

VER. 28–31. He that loveth his wife, loveth himself. S. Paul would have this a love like that which a man hath for himself, or for his own flesh, when they are now joined in wedlock, and are become as it were one flesh and one person, as to a civil life and society. See Matt. xix. 5. The wife is to be considered as a part of the husband, as a member of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones. The words are to be taken with an allusion to what Adam said, (Gen. ii. 23.) This is now bone of my bones, &c. And so, according to the apostle, speaking figuratively, the Church, which is the spouse of Christ, is framed as it were of his bones and of his flesh sacrificed on the cross. Wi.

VER. 32. This . . . sacrament, (or mystery) . . . in Christ, and in the Church. This sacrament, in construction, must be referred to what immediately went before, i. e. to the conjunction of marriage betwixt man and wife; and this is called a great sacrament, or mystery, as representing the union or spiritual nuptials of Christ with his spouse, the Church. Wi.

* V. 3 and 5. Covetousness, avaritia, πλεονεξία. See S. Jerom on these verses, who expounds it of an insatiable lust, as to the sins of uncleanness and impurity. p. 380. But see also S. Chrys. who, by πλεονεξία, (C. iv. 19.) expounds, an immoderate desire of riches: χρημάτων βρ. γ. p. 829. And here, hom. xvii. p. 847, ὁ γὰρ ἀνὴρ χρημάτων ἱρώμεν, καὶ σωμάτων. And hom. xviii. on the fifth verse, he expounds the word, πλεονεξίας. ὅς ἐστιν εἰδωλολάτρης, qui est idolatra, of him who is, properly speaking, an avaricious man; who adores mammon, or riches, who

2 *Honour thy father, and thy mother, which is the first commandment, with a promise;

3 That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest be long lived upon earth.

4 And you, fathers, provoke not your children to anger: but bring them up in the discipline and correction of the Lord.

5 *Servants, obey your carnal masters, with fear and trembling, in the simplicity of your heart, as Christ:

6 Not serving to the eye, as it were pleasing men, but, as the servants of Christ, doing the will of God from the heart,

7 With a good will doing service, as to the Lord, and not to men:

8 Knowing that whatsoever good every one shall do, the same shall he receive from the Lord, whether he be bond, or free.

9 And you, masters, do the same things to them, forbearing threatenings; knowing that the Lord both of them and you is in heaven: *and there is no respect of persons with him.

10 As to the rest, brethren, be strengthened in the Lord, and in the power of his might.

11 Put you on the armour of God, that you may be able to stand against the snares of the devil.

12 For our wrestling is not against flesh and blood: but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the world of this darkness: against the spirits of wickedness in the high places.

13 Wherefore take unto you the armour of God, that you may be able to resist in the evil day, and to stand in all things perfect.

Mark vii. 10. Col. ii. 20.—^a Col. iii. 22. Titus ii. 9. 1 Pet. ii. 18.—^b Deut. x. 17. 2 Par. xix. 7. Job xxxiv. 19. Wisd. vi. 8. Eccl. xxxv. 15. Acts x. 34. Rom. ii. 11. Col. iii. 25. 1 Pet. i. 17.

takes pains to leave an inheritance to others, and deprives himself of it, &c. p. 853. χρυσὸν δουλεύοντες, 851.

† V. 4. Scurrilias, quas ad rem non pertinet, ἐντραπέλια τὰ οὐκ ἀνήκοντα. S. Chrys. λογ. ty. p. 848 and 849, describes the vice of ἐντραπέλια in these words: ἐνθαυ ἰχρότης, ἐκεῖ ἡ ἐντραπέλια . . . ἡ ἐντραπέλια μαλακὴν ποιεῖ ψυχὴν, &c. . . . πῶρῳ τοῦτο χριστιανὸν, τὸ κωμῳδεῖν . . . εἰ καλὸν τὸ πρᾶγμα, εἰ τοῖς μέμοις ἀφίεται; . . . παρασίτων τὸ πρᾶγμα, μέμων, ἀρχήτων, γυναικῶν, πορνῶν, πῶρῳ ψυχῆς ἐλευθέρας, πῶρῳ εὐγενεῶς. . . εἰ τις αἰχρὸς, αὗτος καὶ ἐντραπέλιος. Where there is filthiness, there is eutrapelia. It is this that makes the mind effeminate . . . Far be it from a Christian to play the comedian. If this were commendable, why is it left to buffoons? It is the business of flattering hangers-on, or treacher friends, of fools in a play, of debauched women, but far be it from persons of a higher rank, well born, and of good breeding. If any man be void of honour, void of shame, such a one is given to eutrapelia. A man will scarce find it worth his while to consult the Latin translation in Fronto-Ducaeus, which in this and many other places is far from being exact. I know that Aristotle, (l. iv. de moribus. c. 14, p. 42. Ed. Aurel. Allobrog.) and S. Thomas, the doctor of the schools, (l. ii. Q. 60. a. 5. and 22. Q. 168. a. 2.) take eutrapelia in a different sense, when it is a facetious innocent way of jesting, containing rather instructive admonitions; and so, S. Thomas tells us, it may be reckoned among the moral virtues, but then, even as Aristotle tells us, it must be without all words of immodesty and buffoonery, which is against good manners: otherwise it degenerates into scurrility.

† V. 26. Lavacro aquæ in verbo vitæ, τῷ λότρῳ τοῦ ὕδατος ἐν ῥήματι ζωῆς, be taken for a bath of water, or the water itself. See Tit. iii. 5. Vita is now wanting in the Greek. See Estius. S. Chrys. by the word, understands the form of baptism in the name of the Father, &c. Rom. xx.

CHAP. VI. VER. 2. With a promise. This commandment being delivered with a special promise of a long life, which promise is to be understood conditionally, especially in regard of Christians, i. e. unless it be a greater favour to be taken out of the world young. Wi.

VER. 5. Your carnal; temporal masters, whether Christians or heathens. Wi.

VER. 6. Not serving to the eye; to please men only, but to do the will of God. Wi.

VER. 9. Forbearing threatenings; forbearing, and remitting the punishments which you might perhaps threaten them with, and they deserve. Wi.

VER. 12. Flesh and blood, which may either signify temptations of the flesh, or raised by mortal men.—Principalities and powers; i. e. devils, or apocryphal angels, who before their fall were in such ranks of spirits, and who are permitted to rule over the wicked in this world of darkness. Wi.—By which we are to 14 Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of justice,

15 And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace :

16 In all things taking the shield of faith, wherewith you may be able to extinguish all the fiery darts of the most wicked one :

17 * And take unto you the helmet of salvation ; and the sword of the spirit, (which is the word of God).

18 By all prayer and supplication praying at all times in the spirit ; * and in the same watching with all instance and supplication for all the saints :

19 * And for me, that speech may be given me, that I may open my mouth with confidence, to make known the mystery of the gospel :

understand the fallen angels. For as by nature, and from their creation, they were the governors of this corporeal world, and were deprived of this their power on account of their pride, they received it (though limited by certain restrictions) in order to tempt man. Estius.—Rulers of the world of this darkness. By these are meant the devils who exercise their power and authority in our inferior and dark atmosphere, by raising winds, storms, tempests, &c. By darkness may be understood the wicked, in whom Satan reigns as in a citadel. Menochius.—Our inferior world is called dark and misty in comparison of the world above, which is always bright, serene, and clear. Our atmosphere is called the cloudy and dark heavenly. Cicero, in his Tuscul Quæst. Prudentius likewise, in Hamartigenia, writes thus :

Non mentem sua membra premunt, nec terrea virtus
Oppugnat sensus liquidos, bellove lacessit ;
Sed cum spiritibus tenebrosis nocte dieque
Congredimur quorum dominatibus humidus iste
Et pigris densus nebula obtemperat aer.
Scilicet hoc medium cælum inter et infima terræ
Quod patet ac vacuo nubes suspendit hiatus,
Frena potestatum variarum sustinet, ac suo

20 For which I am an ambassador in a chain, so that therein I may be bold to speak according as I ought.

21 But that you also may know the things that concern me, and what I am doing : Tychicus, my dearest brother, and faithful minister in the Lord, will make known to you all things :

22 Whom I have sent to you for this same purpose, that you may know the things concerning us, and that he may comfort your hearts.

23 Peace be to the brethren, and charity, with faith from God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

24 Grace be with all, who love our Lord Jesus Christ in incorruption. Amen.

* Isai. lix. 17. 1 Thea. v. 8.—^b Col. iv. 2.—^c Col. iv. 8.

Principe Belial rectoribus horret iniquis.
His collectamur prædioribus, at sacra nobis
Oris Apostoli testis sententia prodit.——Estius.

—Against the spirits of wickedness : or wicked spirits in the air, says S. Jerom. Lit. in celestials. Wi.—High places. That is to say, in the air, the lowest of the celestial regions in which God permits these wicked spirits or fallen angels to wander. Ch.

VER. 14. Your loins . . . with truth, both as to doctrine and a good life, keeping your baptismal promises.—Having on the breastplate of justice, not only of the particular virtue of justice, but of all virtues in general. Wi.

VER. 15. Your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel ; i. e. prepared to walk in the ways of the gospel, as a soldier must be prepared and in readiness to march or to fight. Wi.

VER. 16. The shield of faith. A lively faith working by charity, which will enable you to conquer your greatest enemies, and to escape their fiery darts, their greatest temptations, and attacks. Wi.

VER. 24. Who love our Lord Jesus Christ. Lit. "in incorruption ;" with purity of heart and mind. Wi.

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE PHILIPPIANS.

PHILIPPI, a considerable city in Macedonia, so called from Philip, father of Alexander the Great. S. Paul had preached there. Acts xvi. Those people had a great veneration for him, and supplied his wants when he was at Corinth, and again when he was a prisoner at Rome, sending to him by Epaphroditus, who is thought to have been the bishop of Philippi. S. Paul sent this letter by him to the Philippians, (written during his imprisonment ; from Rome ; but whether during his first or second imprisonment, is uncertain. Wi.—It is generally believed that S. Paul wrote it about the year 62 in his first confinement. In it he testifies to the faithful his most tender gratitude and acknowledgment for the assistance they had sent him, and a zeal, the most ardent for their salvation. He felicitates them on their courage under sufferings for the cause of Jesus Christ, on their good works also, and forcibly excites them to confidence and joy.—The Philippians were the first among the Macedonians converted to the faith. S. Paul, in this epistle, recommends charity, unity, and humility ; and warns them against false teachers, whom he calls dogs, and enemies of the cross of Christ. He also returns thanks for their benefactions. It was written about twenty-nine years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.

CHAP. I.

The apostle's affection for the Philippians.

PAUL and Timothy, the servants of Jesus Christ :
to all the saints in Christ Jesus, who are at Philippi, with the bishops and deacons.

2 Grace be unto you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. *With the bishops and deacons. By bishops many understand those who were only priests ; for the name of priests, at that time, was common to those who were by their ordination priests or bishops, though the order as well as the functions were different. S. Chrys. also takes notice, that the name of deacon then signified any ministers of Christ. S. Paul also might mean the bishops, or priests and deacons, not only of Philippi, but also of the adjacent places. Wi.

VER. 5. For your fellowship. This word is divers times used by S. Paul for a contribution of charitable alms, which it may also signify in this place ;

3 I give thanks to my God, in every remembrance of you,

4 Always in all my prayers making supplication for you all with joy,

5 For your fellowship in the gospel of Christ, from the first day until now.

6 Being confident of this very thing, that he who though others expound it of their being made partakers of the graces of Christ, by the gospel. Wi.

VER. 7. In the defence, &c., being then a prisoner, waiting for his trial ; and the defence he could make for himself, and the sentence of the judge. Wi.

VER. 9. That your charity, &c. It is worthy of remark, that S. Paul does not beg that the Philippians may enjoy temporal blessings, but that they may be rewarded with an increase of spiritual favours ; (Cal.) and as he remarks in the succeeding verses, that they may be filled with the fruits of justice.

VER. 12. Now I desire, &c. From hence it appears, that what was intended (1549) hath begun a good work in you, will perfect it unto the day of Christ Jesus.

7 As it is meet for me to think this for you all: because I have you in my heart: and that in my bonds, and in the defence and confirmation of the gospel, you all are partakers of my joy.

8 For God is my witness, how I long after you all in the bowels of Jesus Christ.

9 And this I pray, that your charity may more and more abound in knowledge, and in all understanding.

10 That you may approve the better things, that you may be sincere and without offence unto the day of Christ, 11 Being filled with the fruit of justice, through Jesus Christ, unto the glory and praise of God.

12 Now, I desire, brethren, you should know, that the things which have happened to me, have fallen out rather to the furtherance of the gospel:

13 So that my bonds are made manifest, in Christ, in all the court, and in all other places:

14 And many of the brethren in the Lord taking courage by my chains, are much more bold to speak the word of God without fear.

15 Some, indeed, even out of envy and contention: but some also for good-will preach Christ:

16 Some out of charity, knowing that I am set for the defence of the gospel.

17 And some out of contention preach Christ not sincerely, imagining that they raise affliction to my bonds.

18 But what then? So that every way, whether by occasion, or by truth, Christ be preached: in this also I rejoice, yea, and will rejoice.

19 For I know that this shall turn to my salvation, through your prayer, and the supply of the Spirit of Jesus Christ.

20 According to my expectation and hope, that in nothing I shall be confounded: but with all confidence, as the greatest hindrance to the propagation of the Christian religion, eventually proved the most direct method of extending it. S. Paul was not less zealous in prison, and in chains, than when he laboured under no obstacles to his designs: how much the reverse is the conduct of our late reformers!

^a Ephes. iv. 1. Coloss. i. 10. 1 Thess. ii. 12.

VER. 13. In all the court, or in the whole palace of the emperor, and to all others, or in all other places at and near Rome. Wi.

VER. 14. And many of, &c. encouraged by the intrepidity and perseverance of the apostle. Calmet.—Knowing that sufferings undergone for the cause of Jesus Christ were most honourable, and the portion truly enviable of all the saints, as by sufferings they were known to be his disciples, and by sufferings they were to purchase that eternal weight of glory prepared for all that suffer patiently and joyfully for God's sake.

VER. 15. Some . . . out of envy and contention publish and preach Christ, thinking perhaps that this would displease me, or exasperate my persecutors against me; but whatever their motive be, if they preach the true doctrine of Christ, I rejoice. Wi.

VER. 19. I know that this shall turn to my salvation, &c. It may either signify to his spiritual good and the salvation of his soul, or to his safety and deliverance out of prison: if this was his first imprisonment. Wi.

VER. 20. Whether it be by life, or by death. To live longer, if God pleaseth, or to suffer death at this time, he shews himself resigned to either. Wi.

VER. 21. To live is Christ. If it be his will that I live, my life shall be spent in his service.—To die, and suffer martyrdom, will be my gain, by coming to the enjoyment of Christ sooner. Wi.

VER. 22. This is to me, &c. His meaning is, that although his dying immediately for Christ, would be his gain, by putting him presently in possession of heaven; yet he is doubtful what he should choose, because by staying longer in the flesh, he should be more beneficial to the souls of his neighbours. Ch.—What I shall choose I know not; though my earnest desire is to be dissolved from this mortal body, and to be with Christ, as my greater happiness, yet if it be the will of God that I labour longer, as necessary for your good, and that I again come to you, let God dispose of me according to his holy will. Wi.

VER. 25-26. And having this confidence. In effect S. Paul escaped this first danger, for after having remained two years at Rome, he was taken from his con-as always, so now also shall Christ be magnified in my body, whether by life, or by death.

21 For to me, to live is Christ, and to die is gain.

22 And if to live in the flesh, this is to me the fruit of labour, and what I shall choose I know not.

23 But I am straitened between two; having a desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ, being by much the better:

24 But to remain in the flesh is necessary for your sake.

25 And having this confidence, I know that I shall remain and continue with you all, for your furtherance and joy of faith:

26 That your rejoicing may abound in Christ Jesus, for me, by my coming to you again.

27 *Only let your conversation be worthy of the gospel of Christ: that whether when I come and see you, or being absent, hear of you, that you stand fast in one spirit, with one mind labouring together for the faith of the gospel:

28 And in nothing be ye terrified by adversaries; which to them is a cause of perdition, but to you of salvation, and this from God.

29 For to you it is given for Christ, not only to believe in him, but also to suffer for him:

30 Having the same conflict as that which you have seen in me, and now have heard of me.

CHAP. II.

He recommends to them unity and humility; and to work out their salvation with fear and trembling.

IF there be, therefore, any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of charity, if any fellowship of the spirit, if any bowels of commiseration:

2 Fulfil ye my joy, that you be of one mind, having the same charity, being of one accord, agreeing in sentiment.

3 Let nothing be done through strife, nor by vain-glory: but in humility, let each esteem others better than themselves.

finement. Calmet.—I know (or am persuaded, as in the Greek) that I shall remain . . . by my coming to you again. This is one argument that this epistle was written during his first imprisonment at Rome: yet this is not agreed upon by the interpreters, and especially whether he ever returned again to Philippi. Wi.

VER. 27, &c. Whether when I come, and see you, &c. This implies a doubt of his seeing them again. At least endeavour you to lead a life worthy of the gospel, according to the principles of your faith; and be not terrified by your adversaries and persecutors: God permits this for your salvation, though an occasion of perdition to your persecutors: you having the like to combat as you have seen in me, when whipped at Philippi. See Acts xvi. Wi.

VER. 28. The adversaries. Either by the persecutions of the Jews and Gentiles, or by the doctrine of false brethren.

* V. 1. Cum episcopis et diaconis, ὁν ἐπισκόποις καὶ διακόνις. S. Jerom, S. Chrys. &c. take notice, that though the office of bishop and priest was different, yet both these different orders were sometimes expressed by the word bishop ἐπίσκοπος; sometimes by the word priest, πρεσβύτερος. S. Hier. tom. 4. in Titum. p. 413. Quia eosdem episcopos illo tempore, quos et presbyteros appellabant, propterea indifferenter de episcopia quasi de presbyteris est locutus. See again tom. 4. part 2. Epist. ad Oceanum, p. 648. and Ep. ad Evangelium, p. 802. S. Chrys. on this place: Tunc nomina erant communia; atque etiam ipse episcopus vocabatur diaconus. tom. 4. λογ. δ. p. 5. Ed. Savil. Τὸς πρεσβυτέρους οὕτως ἐκάλεσε. Τότε γὰρ ἐκοινωνοῦν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, καὶ διδόνους ὁ ἐπίσκοπος ἐλέγετο.

† V. 13. In omni Prætorio, ἐν ὅλῳ τῷ πραιτωρίῳ.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. If there be, therefore, any consolation. If you have any desire to comfort me in Christ, or for Christ's sake. Wi.

VER. 3. Esteem others better than themselves. S. Thomas (22. q. 162. a. 3.) puts the question, how an innocent man can with truth think himself worse than the most wicked of men! He answers, that a man who has received very extraordinary gifts from God, cannot think these gifts less than what any other has received; but he may reflect that he has nothing, and is nothing of himself. And a man truly humble considers only his own sins and failings, and is persuaded 4 Each one not considering the things that are his own, but those that are other men's.

5 For let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus:

6 Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery, to be himself equal to God:

7 But debased himself, taking the form of a servant, being made to the likeness of men, and in shape found as a man.

8 *He humbled himself, becoming obedient unto death, even the death of the cross.

9 Wherefore God also hath exalted him, and hath given him a name which is above every name:

10 ^bThat in the name of Jesus, every knee should bow of those that are in heaven, on earth, and under the earth;

11 And that every tongue should confess that the Lord Jesus Christ is in the glory of God the Father.

12 Wherefore, my dearly beloved, (as you have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but much more now in my absence) work out your salvation with fear and trembling.

13 For it is God who worketh in you both to will and to accomplish, according to the good-will.

14 ^cAnd do ye all things without murmurings and hesitations:

15 That you may be blameless, and sincere children of God, without reproof, in the midst of a depraved and perverse generation: among whom you shine as lights in the world.

16 Holding forth the word of life to my glory in the day of Christ, because I have not run in vain, nor laboured in vain.

17 Yea, and if I be made a victim upon the sacrifice

* Heb. ii. 9.—^b Isai. xlv. 24. Rom. xiv. 11.

that any other person would have made better use of the same graces; which agrees with what follows, (v. 4) not considering the things that are his own. Wi.

VER. 4. The things that are his. Self-love and self-interest are the two great sources of divisions. The Christian religion teaches a contrary doctrine. Calmet.

VER. 6. Who being in the form of God*, (that is truly, properly, and essentially God from eternity, as the ancient Fathers here observed against the Arians) taking the form of a servant, (i. e. taking upon him our human nature) became truly a man, and as man the servant of God, but remaining always God as before, thought it not robbery, no injury to his eternal Father, to be equal, to be esteemed, and to declare himself equal to God, to be one thing with him: as on divers occasions he taught the people, as we have observed in the notes on S. John's gospel, &c. Wi.

VER. 7. But debased himself: divested himself of all the marks of greatness, for the love of mankind. The Greek text signifies, he made himself void; † on which account Dr. Wells, instead of made himself of no reputation, as in the Prot. translation, has changed it into emptied himself, not but that the true Son of God must always remain truly God, as well as by his incarnation truly man, but that in him as man appeared no marks of his divine power and greatness.—Made to the likeness of men*, not only as to an exterior likeness and appearance, but at the same time truly man by uniting his divine person to the nature of man.—In shape§ (or habit) found as a man: not clothed exteriorly only, as a man is clothed with a garment or coat, but found both as to shape and nature a man; and, as S. Chrys. says, with the appearance of a sinful man, if we consider him persecuted by the Jews, and nailed to an infamous cross. Wi.

VER. 9. God . . . hath given him a name, &c. The name or word Jesus represents the dignity of him who is signified by the name, and who is exalted even as man, above all creatures in heaven, earth, and hell; all which creatures either piously reverence him, or are made subject to him against their will, that every tongue may confess our Lord Jesus to be now, and to have been always, in the glory of his Father, equal to him in substance and in all perfections. Wi.

VER. 10. If we show respect when the name of our sovereign is mentioned, may we not express our respect also at the name of Jesus; and if to his name, why not to his cross as well as to the throne of the king?

VER. 12. With fear and trembling. That is, be equally upon your guard against presumption and despair. S. Paul is anxious to inspire a just confidence in Jesus Christ, but he is not less solicitous to root out all self-confidence arising from our supposed merits or excellence.

VER. 13. It is God who worketh in you both to will and to accomplish. We can neither have a will, nor begin, nor fulfil any thing of ourselves, in order to a reward and service of your faith, I rejoice and congratulate with you all.

18 And for the self-same thing do you also rejoice, and congratulate with me.

19 And I hope in the Lord Jesus, ^ato send Timothy to you shortly, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know the things concerning you.

20 For I have no man so of the same mind, who with sincere affection is solicitous for you.

21 *For all seek the things that are their own, not the things that are Jesus Christ's.

22 Now know ye the proof of him, that as a son with the father, so hath he served with me in the gospel.

23 Him, therefore, I hope to send to you immediately, as soon as I shall see the things which concern me.

24 And I trust in the Lord, that I also myself shall come to you shortly.

25 But I thought it necessary to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and fellow-labourer, and fellow-soldier, but your apostle, and the minister to my wants.

26 For indeed he longed after you all: and was sad, for that you had heard that he was sick.

27 For indeed he was sick nigh unto death: but God had mercy on him: and not only on him, but on me also, lest I should have sorrow upon sorrow.

28 Therefore I sent him the more speedily: that seeing him again you may rejoice, and I may be without sorrow.

29 Receive him, therefore, with all joy in the Lord: and treat with honour such as he is.

30 Because, for the work of Christ, he came nigh unto death, delivering up his life, that he might fulfil that which was wanting on your part towards my service.

^a 1 Pet. iv. 6.—^d Acts x. 1.—1 Cor. xiii. 5.

ward in heaven. Wi.—Our free-will is not taken away, or we should not be commanded to work; but it is added, with fear and trembling, says S. Austin, that we might not be proud of our good works. De grat. et de lib. ab. c. ix.

VER. 18. To my glory, &c. That is, I beseech you to continue in faith, and comply with the word and doctrine of the gospel, that I may have glory, and rejoice together with you in the day of Christ, when he shall come to judgment. Wi.

VER. 17. And if I be made a victim upon the sacrifice || and service of your faith, I rejoice, &c. The sense of these obscure words seems to be: that I shall rejoice, and you also may rejoice and congratulate with me, if after having first offered up your faith and obedience to the gospel, as an acceptable sacrifice to God, I myself (or my blood, by martyrdom) be also added, and poured out as a second sacrifice upon the other. It is to be understood with an allusion to those sacrifices of the old law called libations, consisting of liquid things, as wine, oil, blood, which were poured out, or at least sprinkled, upon other victims and things sacrificed: so that he compares the shedding of his blood to these libations and their submission to the faith of Christ to the sacrifice before offered to God. Wi.

VER. 19. To send Timothy. It appears that S. Paul could not send Timothy to Philippi till some time after his deliverance from prison, about the year 63 of Jesus Christ. Tillemont.—In the succeeding verse, we see the high esteem in which Timothy was held by this apostle.

VER. 21. All seek the things that are their own; i. e. many do so. Wi.

VER. 24. That I also. This did not take place till full two years were expired, in the year 61: (Tillemont.) and others are of opinion, that he was in Macedonia when he wrote his first epistle to Timothy. Theo. Atia Tille.

VER. 25. Epaphroditus . . . your apostle, and the minister to my wants. Epaphroditus had also laboured after S. Paul, and is thought to have been the bishop of the Philippians; thus he might be called their apostle; though, as others conjecture, the word apostle may be here applied to him as one sent by the Philippians to S. Paul with contributions to supply his wants. Wi.

VER. 26. And was sad. Nothing is a stronger proof of the union that existed between the ancient Christians, than this description of S. Paul: Paul is in prison, and Epaphroditus is dismissed from the extremity of Macedonia to come and attend him; Epaphroditus falls sick, and the whole Church at Philippi is in mourning. Calmet.

VER. 28. And I may be without sorrow; without the great concern and trouble that I am now in for you. Wi.

VER. 30. Delivering up his life to persecutions, and to this danger that he was in by a sickness which was mortal, had not God restored him his health.

CHAP. III.

He warneth them against false teachers: he counts all other things loss, that he may gain Christ.

AS to the rest, my brethren, rejoice in the Lord. To write the same things to you, to me indeed is not wearisome, but to you necessary.

2 Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers, beware of the concision.

3 For we are the circumcision, who serve God in spirit, and glory in Christ Jesus, not having confidence in the flesh:

4 Though I might also have confidence in the flesh. If any other thinketh he may have confidence in the flesh, I more,

5 Being circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Hebrew of the Hebrews, *as to the law a Pharisee,

6 As to zeal, persecuting the church of God, as to the justice that is in the law, conversing without blame.

7 But what things were gain to me, those I have counted loss for Christ.

8 But indeed I count all things to be but loss, for the excellent knowledge of Jesus Christ, my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and count them but as dung, that I may gain Christ,

9 And may be found in him not having my justice, which is of the law, but that which is of the faith of Christ Jesus: the justice which is of God in faith,

10 That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable to his death:

* Acts xxiii. 6.

He came with your charities, to supply that which was wanting on your part, or which I stood in need of; and I am persuaded you desired to do it sooner, if you had met with an opportunity. Wi.

* V. 6. In forma Dei, ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ. See S. Chrys. (tom. iv. p. 31. 32. λογ. 5.) where he shews how many heresies are confuted by these words; and says, ἡ μορφὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἡ φύσις Θεοῦ . . . καὶ ἡ μορφὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ, Θεοῦ φύσις. See S. Greg. of Nyssa. . . 3. cont. Eunom. 2. Aug. l. 1. de Trin. c. 1. &c.

† V. 7. Exinanivit Semetipsum, ἐκένωσας, ἐτακένην, ἀπέκρινεν, vacuum. See S. Chrys. hom. vii.

‡ Ibid. In similitudinem hominum factus, ἐν ὁμοιώματι. S. Chrys. p. 40. λογ. 5. See Rom. viii. in similitudine carnis peccati.

§ Ibid. Et habitu inventus ut homo, σχηματίσας ἑαυτὸν ὡς ἄνθρωπος. See S. Chrys. ibid. i. e. habitu factus est.

¶ V. 17. Sed etsi immolator super sacrificiis, et obsequium fidei vestrae, ἀλλὰ εἰ καὶ σπένδομαι ἐπὶ τοῖς θυσίαις, καὶ λειτουργίᾳ τῆς πίστεως ὑμῶν: σπένδομαι, est libari, eo modo quo sanguis effunditur super sacrificia.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. To write. From hence it would appear, says Grotius, that S. Paul had intended to have finished his letter at the end of the preceding chapter; but something new occurring to him, he added the two following chapters.

VER. 2. *Beware of dogs. The Jews called so the Gentiles; and S. Paul now applies it to those among the Jews who spread false doctrine, who privately snarled and publicly barked against the true apostles. None deserve sharp reprehension more than heretical preachers.—Beware of the concision, or as some French translations, of false circumcision. S. Paul by derision makes use of this word, which signifies a cutting to pieces, or destruction. Wi.

VER. 3. For we are the circumcision. We Christians now use the only profitable and commendable spiritual circumcision; which, to the Coloss. (ii. 11.) he calls the circumcision of Christ, and to the Rom. (ii. 29.) circumcision of the heart in the spirit.—Not having confidence in the flesh; i. e. in such carnal ceremonies. Wi.

VER. 4-7. If any other thinketh he may have confidence in the flesh, in being of the Jewish race and of their religion, I more; i. e. I have greater reasons to glory than they have, being circumcised of the stock of Israel, &c.—But what things, &c. as soon as I was miraculously called to the knowledge and faith of Christ. Wi.

VER. 9. I may be found in him not having my justice, which is of the law; i. e. not pretending to be justified either by my own works or by the works of the Jewish law, but by that which proceedeth from faith in Christ, and by his merits. Wi.—S. Austin expounds the sense thus: not that justice which is in God, or by which God is just, but that which is in man from God, and by his gifts. l. 3. cont. 2. ep. Pelag.

11 If by any means I may attain to the resurrection, which is from the dead:

12 Not as though I had already attained, or were already perfect: but I follow after, if I may by any means apprehend that in which I am also apprehended by Christ Jesus.

13 Brethren, I do not count myself to have apprehended. But one thing I do: forgetting the things that are behind, and stretching forth myself to those that are before, 14 I pursue towards the mark, for the prize of the supernal vocation, of God in Christ Jesus.

15 Let us, therefore, as many as are perfect, be thus minded: and if in any thing you be otherwise minded, this also God will reveal to you.

16 Nevertheless whereunto we are already come, that we be of the same mind: let us also continue in the same rule.

17 Be followers of me, brethren, and observe them who walk so, as you have our model.

18 *For many walk, of whom I have told you often (and now tell you weeping) that they are enemies of the cross of Christ:

19 Whose end is destruction: whose God is their belly: and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things.

20 But our conversation is in heaven: whence also we expect the Saviour, our Lord Jesus Christ, 21 Who will reform the body of our lowliness, made like to the body of his glory, according to the operation whereby also he is able to subdue all things unto himself.

† Rom. xvi. 17.

VER. 10. That I may know him. This knowledge of Christ the apostle prepares to all honours and advantages accruing from his adherence to the synagogue.

VER. 11. If by any means I may attain to the resurrection, which is from the dead; i. e. may attain to a happy resurrection, when the dead shall rise again. Wi.—This manner of expression does not betray any distrust or fear, but merely insinuates the difficulty of the enterprise, the uncertainty of success, and the ardent desire of the apostle, who sought by every means to arrive at this happiness, either by sufferings and labours, or even by martyrdom. S. Chrys. Estius.

VER. 12. Not as though I had already attained the happiness I hope for, or am now become perfect as to that perfection in virtue, which I must always endeavour to increase in; but, like a person still running a race for a prize, I pursue and run as well as I can, I stretch myself with perseverance towards the mark, forgetting that part of the course which I had made. Let all of us, though perfect as to the knowledge of the mysteries we are to believe, be of this mind, that we are still to advance in the way of Christian perfection; and if any of you be of another mind, and think otherwise, God will reveal to you and teach you this truth, that we may all continue in the same rule of doctrine and discipline. We may here take notice with S. Chrys. that it is not enough to believe, or have the true faith, but that we must strive and labour to the end in the way of perfection; secondly, that S. Paul did not look upon himself absolutely certain of his salvation: and how much greater presumption would this be in us? Wi.

VER. 13. I do not count myself. That is, I do not suppose that vain security is sufficient to put my salvation out of doubt, and that Christ having died, nothing remains for me to do. No; I consider myself as a wrestler at the games, uncertain of success. Calmet.

VER. 17. Be followers of me, always in distrust of your own merits, and always eager to advance in perfection, as I am. It is a happy thing when a pastor can thus in all sincerity and simplicity address his flock.—He exhorts them to follow him in what he had taught them, and in the model of a good life, which he had set before them. He repeats to them, with tears, what he had formerly told them, that many walk and conduct themselves as enemies to the cross of Christ, to Christ crucified, by abandoning themselves to the pleasures of a sensual life, who glory in things they ought to be ashamed of. He hints at the disciples of Simon Magus, or of the Jewish doctors. Wi.

* V. 2. Videte canes . . . Videte Concisionem, βλέπετε τοὺς κύνες . . . τὴν κατατομήν. The Jewish circumcision at this time, says S. Chrys. (log. 1.) was merely a cutting off of the flesh: οὐκ ἐν ἀλλοῦ ἢ σάρκος τοῦ ἔστι, καὶ κατατομή.

† V. 14. Ad destinatum, κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκει. See S. Chrys. of the necessity of good works, (log. 4. p. 65) and of the uncertainty a man is always in of his salvation, p. 67.

CHAP. IV.

He exhorts them to perseverance in all good; and acknowledges their charitable contributions to him.

THEREFORE, my brethren, dearly beloved, and most desired, my joy and my crown: so stand fast in the Lord, most beloved:

2 I beg of Evodia, and I beseech Syntyche to be of one mind in the Lord.

3 And I entreat thee also, my sincere companion, help those women, who have laboured with me in the gospel with Clement, and the rest of my fellow-labourers, whose names are in the book of life.

4 Rejoice in the Lord always: again, I say, rejoice.

5 Let your modesty be known to all men: the Lord is nigh.

6 Be solicitous about nothing: but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your petitions be made known to God.

7 And the peace of God, which surpasseth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus.

8 For the rest, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are modest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are holy, whatsoever things are amiable, whatsoever things are of good repute, if there be any virtue, if there be any praise of discipline, think on these things.

9 The things which you have both learned and received, and heard, and seen in me, these do ye: and the God of peace shall be with you.

10 And I rejoiced in the Lord exceedingly, that now at length your thought for me hath flourished again, as you did also think: but you were occupied.

CHAP. IV. VER. 2. I beg of. S. Chrys. Theod. and many others, think that these were two ladies particularly famous in the Church at Philippi, for their virtue and good works. Some critics are of opinion that Syntyche was a man. It is certain, at least, that this name agrees amongst the Greeks better with a man than a woman; and perhaps the latter of these two may be the husband of Evodia.

VER. 3. I entreat thee, my sincere companion.* S. Chrys. expounds it of his fellow labourer or fellow soldier, and says that some pretended that by it was meant S. Paul's wife; but this he absolutely rejects, as do all the ancient interpreters, who teach us that S. Paul was never married, if we except the particular opinion of Clement of Alexandria, (l. 3. Strom. p. 448. Edit. Heinsii) who at the same time tells us, that S. Paul and those ministers of the gospel who had wives, lived with them as if they had been their sisters. The pretended reformers, who bring this place to shew that bishops and priests may marry, will they be for living after this manner? See 1 Cor. vii. 7, 8. But even Calvin, Beza, and Dr. Hammond, expound this of some man that laboured with S. Paul. Wi.—It seems probable that S. Paul is here speaking to one of the persons mentioned in the preceding verse. Others think that he is speaking to the gaoler whom he had converted at Philippi. It seems most probable, however, that S. Paul is here speaking to the bishop of the Church, at Philippi. As to the opinion that he is speaking to his wife, we have elsewhere refuted that sentiment. Calumet.—S. Paul says of himself that he had no wife, (1 Cor. vii. 8.) and all the Greek Fathers are very positive on this point.—With Clement. S. Jerom, Estius, and some others, believe that this Clement was the fourth pope that governed the Church, after SS. Linus and Cletus: this at least is the common opinion.—Those women who have laboured with me in the gospel, not by preaching, but by assisting other ways to promote the gospel. Wi.

VER. 6. But in every† thing by prayer, &c. By the Greek, the sense and construction cannot be in every prayer; but in every thing, in all circumstances, have recourse to prayer. Wi.

VER. 8. For the rest, brethren, whatsoever things are true, &c. Here the apostle enumerates general precepts of morality, which they ought to practise.—Whatsoever things are true. In words, in promises, in lawful oaths, &c. he commands rectitude of mind and sincerity of heart.—Whatsoever things are modest. By these words he prescribes gravity in manners, modesty in dress, and decency in conversation.—Whatsoever things are just. That is, in dealing with others, in 11 I speak not as it were for want: for I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, to be content there with.

12 I know both how to be brought low, and I know how to abound: (every where and in all things I am instructed) both to be full, and to be hungry: both to abound, and to suffer need.

13 I can do all things in him who strengtheneth me.

14 Nevertheless you have done well, in communicating to my tribulation.

15 And you also know, O Philippians, that in the beginning of the gospel, when I departed from Macedonia, no church communicated with me, as concerning giving and receiving, but you only:

16 For unto Thessalonica also, you sent once and again for my use.

17 Not that I seek the gift, but I seek the fruit that may abound to your account.

18 But I have all, and abound: I am filled, having received from Epaphroditus the things you sent, an odour of sweetness, an acceptable sacrifice, pleasing to God.

19 *And may my God supply all your want, according to his riches, in glory in Christ Jesus.

20 Now to God and our Father be glory, world without end. Amen.

21 Salute ye every saint in Christ Jesus.

22 The brethren, who are with me, salute you. All the saints salute you: especially they who are of Cæsar's house.

23 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

* Rom. xii. 1.

buying or selling, in trade or business, to be fair and honest.—Whatsoever things are holy. By these words may be understood, that those who are in a religious state professed, or in holy orders, should lead a life of sanctity and chastity, according to the vows they make; but these words being also applied to those in the world, indicate the virtuous life they are bound by the divine commandments to follow.—Whatsoever things are amiable. That is to practise those good offices in society that procure us the esteem and good will of our neighbours.—Whatsoever things are of good repute. That is, that by our conduct and behaviour we should edify our neighbours, and give them good example by our actions.—If there be any virtue, if there be any praise of discipline: that those in error, by seeing the morality and good discipline of the true religion, may be converted. And finally, the apostle commands not only the Philippians, but all Christians, to think on these things: that is, to make it their study and concern, that the peace of God might be with them. Ch.

VER. 10. Hath flourished again. Lit. that you have flourished again, to think or care for me, which appears by your sending me a supply of money. Wi.—From hence it would appear, that the Philippians had in some respect been wanting in attention to this apostle: that their former liberality, which for a time had been slack and dead, had again revived.

VER. 11. I have learned . . . to be content therewith. Lit. to be sufficient. I know how to be in a low condition. Wi.

VER. 14. In communicating;† i. e. contributing to relieve my wants. Wi.

VER. 15. Giving and receiving; by my giving you spiritual instructions, and you returning me temporal assistance; and know that these, your charities, are an odour of sweetness, an acceptable sacrifice to God. v. 18. Wi.

VER. 19. May God supply all your want.‡ See the Greek, which determines the signification of the Latin. Wi.

* V. 3. Germane compar. σίζους γνήσις. S. Chrys. (λόγ. iv. p. 76.) expounds it by ἀνεργός and συστρατιώτης. He tells us some fancied it was S. Paul's wife; but, says he, ἀλλὰ οὐκ ἔστιν, &c.

† V. 6. Sed in omni oratione, &c. ἀλλ' ἐν παντί, τῇ προσευχῇ; no copies, πόρρ.

‡ V. 14. Communicantes, συγκοινωνήσαντες. See C. i. 5. &c.

§ V. 19. Omne desiderium vestrum; the common Greek copies, χρεός; though some ἐπιθυμίαν; some χαρὲν, gaudium; and some χάριν, gratiam.

THE EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE COLOSSIANS.

Colosse was a city of Phrygia, near Laodicea. It does not appear that S. Paul had preached there himself, (see C. ii. 1.) but that the Colossians were converted by Epaphras, a disciple of the apostles. However, as S. Paul was the great apostle of the Gentiles, he wrote this epistle to the Colossians when he was in prison, and about the same time that he wrote to the Ephesians and Philippians. The exhortations and doctrine it contains, are similar to those which are set forth in his epistle to the Ephesians. S. Chrys. takes notice, that the epistles he wrote in prison seem even more spiritual than the rest: the chief design of which was to hinder them from being seduced by false teachers. Ch. Wi.—The Colossians were first instructed in the faith by Epaphras, who is considered their first bishop. He was a prisoner, at Rome, with S. Paul, when this epistle was written. The intent of it was to disabuse the Colossians of worshipping the Angels; for Cerinthus and others, had taught them to look upon Angels as superior to Christ, whom they looked upon as a mere man; to observe the law of Moses, with all its legal rites and ceremonies. He begins his epistle by insisting chiefly on the exalted state of Christ, saying that he is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature, by whom all things visible and invisible were created, whether thrones, principalities, or powers, and that in him the divinity essentially exists. From this he proves the inutility of the ceremonies of the law, &c. (Fleury and Calmet) and takes great pains to prevent their relapsing either into paganism or Judaism. V.

CHAP. I.

He gives thanks for the grace bestowed upon the Colossians: and prays for them. Christ is the head of the church, and the peace-maker through his blood. Paul is his minister.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, and Timothy, a brother:

2 To them who are at Colosse, the saints and faithful brethren in Christ Jesus.

3 Grace be to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ. We give thanks to God, and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you.

4 Hearing your faith in Christ Jesus, and the love which you have towards all the saints,

5 For the hope that is laid up for you in heaven: which you have heard in the word of the truth of the gospel:

6 Which is come to you, as also it is in the whole world, and bringeth forth fruit, and groweth, even as it doth in you, since the day you heard, and knew the grace of God in truth,

7 As you learned of Epaphras, our most beloved fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ Jesus.

8 Who also hath manifested to us your love in the spirit:

9 Therefore we also, from the day that we heard it, cease not to pray for you, and to beg that you may be a John i. 3.—b 1 Cor. xv. 20. Apoc. i. 5.

CHAP. I. VER. 6. In the whole world; i. e. a great part of it. Wi.—This epistle was written in the year 62, at which time the gospel had spread itself through the whole world by the preaching not only of the apostles, but of their disciples, and by the noise which this new religion made. Calmet.—S. Austin sheweth with S. Paul, that the Church and Christ's gospel was to grow daily, and to spread all over the world; which cannot stand with what heretics allude of the failure of the Church, nor with their own obscure conventicles. ep. lxxx. ad finem.

VER. 7. Of Epaphras, who seems to have been their first apostle, and their bishop. Wi.

VER. 8. Your love. Your charity for all men, founded on the love of God. Others understand it of the affection which they had for S. Paul. S. Chrys.

VER. 9. In all wisdom. He begins by an admonition against false teachers, who it is likely, says S. Chrys. with their philosophical notions mixed errors and fables. Wi.

VER. 10. Worthy of God; ἀξίως τοῦ κυρίου. So S. Ambrose and the Greek doctors; or thus, worthy, pleasing God, and this not by faith only, but fruitful in every good work. Ibid.—God, in all things pleasing him.* This is the construction of the Latin by the Greek. Wi.

VER. 14. It is through the blood of Christ, and not by the law of Moses, that we are freed from the power of death. If the law could have saved us, the com-filled with the knowledge of his will, in all wisdom, and spiritual understanding:

10 That you may walk worthy of God, in all things pleasing: being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God:

11 Strengthened with all might, according to the power of his glory, in all patience and long-suffering with joy.

12 Giving thanks to God, the Father, who hath made us worthy to be partakers of the lot of the saints in light:

13 Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of the Son of his love,

14 In whom we have redemption through his blood, the remission of sins:

15 Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature:

16 *For in him were all things created in heaven, and on earth, visible, and invisible, whether thrones, or dominations, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and in him:

17 And he is before all, and by him all things consist.

18 And he is the head of the body, the church, ^b who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead: that in all things he may hold the primacy.

19 Because in him, it was pleasing that all fulness should dwell:

ing of Christ would have been useless. See then, he says, if it be proper to engage under a law which is so inefficacious. Calmet.—From this verse and from v. 12, et alibi passim, we are taught that we are not only by imputation made partakers of Christ's benefits, but are by his grace made worthy thereof, and deserve our salvation condignly, ex condigno. B.

VER. 15. The first born of every creature. S. Chrys. takes notice against the Arians, that the apostle calls Christ the first-begotten, or first-born, not the first created, because he was not created at all. And the sense is, that he was before all creatures, proceeding from all eternity from the Father; though some expound the words of Christ as man, and that he was greater in dignity. See Rom. viii. 29. Wi.

VER. 16. Thrones, &c. are commonly understood to refer to the celestial hierarchy of Angels, though as to their particular rank, &c. nothing certain is known. We may here observe, that the Holy Spirit proportions itself and speaks according to our ideas of a temporal kingdom, in which one authority is subject to another. In the same manner the Angels seem subordinate to one another. S. Dionysius in Calmet.—All things were created by him, and in him, and consist in him. If all things that are were made of him, he himself was not made. And his divine power is also signified, when it is said all things consist, or are preserved by him. Wi.

20 And through him to reconcile all things unto himself, making peace through the blood of his cross, both as to the things that are on earth, and the things that are in heaven.

21 And you, whereas you were some time alienated, and enemies in mind in evil works:

22 Yet now he hath reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and unspotted, and blameless before him:

23 If so ye continue in the faith, grounded and settled, and immoveable from the hope of the gospel which you have heard, which is preached in all the creation that is under heaven, whereof I Paul am made a minister.

24 Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up those things that are wanting of the sufferings of Christ, in my flesh, for his body, which is the church:

25 Whereof I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God, which is given me towards you, that I may fulfil the word of God:

26 The mystery which hath been hidden from ages and generations, but now is made manifest to his saints.

27 To whom God would make known the riches of the glory of this mystery among the Gentiles, which is Christ, in you the hope of glory.

28 Whom we preach, admonishing every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus.

29 Wherein also I labour, striving according to his working which he worketh in me in power.

CHAP. II.

He warns them against the impostures of the philosophers and the Jewish teachers, that would withdraw them from Christ.

VER. 18. He is the head of the body, the church. He now speaks of what applies to Christ as man.—The first-born from the dead; i. e. the first that rose to an immortal life. Wi.

VER. 19. In him it was pleasing, that all fulness should dwell.§ The greatest plenitude of graces was conferred on him as man, and from him, as he was our head, derived to all the members of his Church. The Prot. translation, followed by Mr. N. by way of explanation adds, it hath pleased the Father; but, as Dr. Wells observes in his paraphrase, there is no reason to restrain it to the Father, seeing the work of the incarnation, and the blessings by it conferred on all mankind, are equally the work of the blessed Trinity, though the Second Person only was joined to our nature. Wi.

VER. 20. To reconcile all things unto himself, . . . through the blood of his cross, (i. e. which Christ shed on the cross) both as to the things on earth, and . . . in heaven: not that Christ died for the Angels, but, says S. Chrys. the Angels were in a manner at war with men, with sinners, as they stood for the cause and glory of God; but Christ put an end to this enmity, by restoring men to his favour. Wi.—In heaven. Not by pardoning the wicked angels did Christ reconcile the things in heaven, but by reconciling the good Angels to man, who were enemies to him before the birth of Christ. S. Austin.

VER. 24. And fill up those things . . . in my flesh for his body, which is the church. Nothing was wanting in the sufferings or merits of Christ, for a sufficient and superabundant redemption of mankind, and therefore he adds, for his body, which is the church, that his sufferings were wanting, and are to be endured by the example of Christ by the faithful, who are members of a crucified head. See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. Wi.—Wanting. There is no want in the sufferings of Christ himself as head; but many sufferings are still wanting, or are still to come in his body, the Church, and his members, the faithful. Ch.—S. Chrysostom here observes that Jesus Christ loves us so much, that he is not content merely to suffer in his own person, but he wishes also to suffer in his members; and thus we fill up what is wanting of the sufferings of Christ. S. Chrys.—The wisdom, the will, the justice of Jesus Christ, requireth and ordaineth that his body and members should be companions of his sufferings, as they expect to be companions of his glory; that so suffering with him, and after his example, they may apply to their own wants and to the necessities of others the merits and satisfaction of Jesus Christ, which application is what is wanting, and what we are permitted to supply by the sacraments and sacrifice of the new law.

VER. 25. According to the dispensation of God; i. e. to the appointment of his divine providence. Wi.

VER. 26. The mystery of Christ's incarnation, which hath been hidden, &c. See Ephes. i. 12. and v. 4. &c. Wi.

* V. 10. Ut ambuletis dignè Deo per omnia placentes; ἀβύσος τοῦ Κυρίου εἰς πᾶσαν δόξαν αὐτοῦ.

FOR I would have you know, what solicitude I have for you, and for them who are at Laodicea, and as many as have not seen my face in the flesh:

2 That their hearts may be comforted being instructed in charity, and unto all the riches of the fulness of understanding, unto the knowledge of the mystery of God the Father, and of Christ Jesus:

3 In whom are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.

4 Now this I say, that no man may deceive you by loftiness of words.

5 *For though I be absent in body, yet in spirit I am with you; rejoicing and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith which is in Christ.

6 As therefore you have received Jesus Christ, the Lord, walk ye in him.

7 Rooted and built up in him, and confirmed in the faith, as also you have learned, abounding in him in thanksgiving.

8 Beware lest any man impose upon you by philosophy, and vain fallacy: according to the tradition of men, according to the rudiments of the world, and not according to Christ:

9 For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead corporally:

10 And you are filled in him, who is the head of all principality and power:

11 In whom also you are circumcised with a circumcision not made by hand in the despoiling of the body of the flesh, but in the circumcision of Christ:

12 Buried with him in baptism, in whom also you

* 2 Cor. v. 2.

† V. 15. Primogenitus omnis creaturæ; πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως. S. Chrys. λογ. γ. p. 103. ὁ πρωτόκτιστος, ἀλλὰ πρωτότοκος . . . οὐκ οὐν ἐκτίσται.

† V. 16. In ipso constant; ἐν αὐτῷ συνέστηκεν. See S. Chrys.

§ V. 19. In ipso complacuit. We may rather understand Deo than Patri. So S. Chrys. p. 105. τὴν θέλησιν τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦτο γὰρ ἵσταν ἐνι ἐν αὐτῷ ἡδέοντες.

¶ V. 24. Adimpleo quæ desunt; τὰ βραχέματα. See S. Chrys. and S. Aug. in Ps. lxxxvi. tom. 4. p. 922. B. restabant Christi passionibus in corpore, vos autem estis Christi Corpus, et membra. Vide S. Chrys. ὁμ. δ. p. 109.

CHAP. II. VER. 4. *That no man may deceive you. He means those false teachers and vain philosophers, who deceived them by a sophistical way of reasoning, advancing in this manner their fabulous inventions; it is likely some disciples of Simon the magician. Wi.—The false teachers whom S. Paul wished to refute, despising the doctrine of the gospel, which appeared too simple and common, affected mysterious discourses, and examined the doctrine of the apostles, according to the maxims and axioms of philosophers. They also denied that Christ was God. Tirinus.—May not this advice be at present applicable to many of our Christian brethren, who are but too often led away by trusting too much to the vain reasonings of man. A.

VER. 7. Rooted and built up in him, who is the head of all, your Redeemer, and author of your salvation, not upon Angels. Wi.

VER. 8. Lest any man impose upon you.† In the Greek, make a prey of you, as thieves that steal things.—There were two sorts of false teachers among them; they who mixed vain errors from heathen philosophy with the principles of the Christian religion, and they who had been Jews, and were for making them retain those rites and customs which the Jews had among them, and were only from their private human traditions. Wi. This alludes to the traditions and observances which the Pharisees had added to the law of Moses, and which Christ had blamed; but which these false apostles wished to introduce amongst the Colossians. The ceremonial laws were the elementary instructions given by God to the world, but we are to attach ourselves to the doctrines of Jesus Christ, from whom alone we expect light and justice, and sanctity. V.—According to the rudiments of the world: by which some expound vain fallacies, and false maxims of the first kind of teachers; others the Jewish ceremonies, which are called weak and poor elements, or rudiments. Gal. iv. 9. This is neither to condemn in general the use of philosophy, which S. Aug. commends, and made use of, nor all traditions delivered by the apostles. See 1 Cor. xi. and 2. Thessa. ii. 14. Wi.

VER. 9. For in him (in Christ) dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead (of the divinity) corporally.‡ That is, in the person of Christ, the Son of God, really and substantially united to our human nature. Not inhabiting, as in a temple as the Nestorian heretics pretended, nor as by his grace in men's souls, but so as to be personally or hypostatitally united to the soul and body of Christ. Wi.

are risen again by the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him up from the dead.

13 *And you, when you were dead in your sins, and the uncircumcision of your flesh, he hath quickened together with him, forgiving you all offences:

14 Blotting out the hand-writing of the decree which was against us, which was contrary to us, and the same he took out of the way, fastening it to the cross:

15 And despoiling the principalities and powers, he made a shew of them confidently, triumphing openly over them in himself.

16 Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of a festival day, or of the new moon, or of the sabbaths:

17 Which are a shadow of things to come: but the body is of Christ.

18 ^bLet no man seduce you, willing in humility and religion of Angels, walking in the things which he hath not seen, in vain puffed up by the sense of his flesh,

19 And not holding the head, from which all the

* Ephes. ii. 1.—^b Matt. xxiv. 4.

VER. 12. Buried with him in baptism, signified by the ceremony of immersion in baptism. See Rom. vi. 3. Wi.

VER. 14. Blotting out, &c. This is commonly expounded of the sentence of eternal death pronounced against sinful Adam, and all his posterity, for having sinned in him. Others would have it to signify only the yoke and obligations of the Mosaic law, which could not of itself remit sins, and occasionally made persons greater sinners. This sentence of death (whether we understand the one or the other) Christ took away, fastening it as it were, to the cross, taking it away by his death on the cross. Wi.

VER. 15. And despoiling the principalities and powers; the devil and his infernal spirits. Wi.

VER. 16. Let no man, therefore, judge you in meat or in drink. That is, for not abstaining from meats, called unclean, for drinking out of a cup without a cover, (see Num. xix.) or for not keeping the Jewish festivals. For these were but shadows, types and figures of future things to be fulfilled in the new law of Christ: but the body is of Christ, (v. 17.) i. e. was the body, the truth, the substance signified by these shadows and types. Wi.—He means with regard to the Jewish observations of the distinction of clean and unclean meats; and of their festivals, new moons, and sabbaths; as being no longer obligatory. Ch.—Modern dogmatizers wilfully or ignorantly misapply this text of the apostle, to disprove the fasts and festivals observed in the Catholic Church; but it is evident, as S. Austin observes, that the apostle is here condemning the legal distinction of clean and unclean meats, and the feasts of the new moon, to which false brethren wanted to subject the Colossians. S. Aug. ep. 59. ad Paulin. in solut. quæst. 7.

VER. 18. Let no man seduce you. In the Greek, hinder you from getting the prize.—*Willing (by their own will) in humility, and religion of Angels, practising a wrong and mistaken humility in regard of the Angels, when you pay them a worship not due to them, pretending them to be the mediators and saviours of mankind, as if they were equal, or greater than Christ, our only Redeemer; walking in things you understand not, these men being deceived by their vain philosophy, and pride of their own imaginations. By this means not holding, (v. 19.) but having shaken off their only true invisible head, Christ Jesus, who is the head of his Church. It is admitted that these false doctors, among the Colossians, had introduced an undue and superstitious worship of Angels, and gave to them even a greater honour than to Christ. They worshipped them as the creators of the world, as mediators with God, even above Jesus Christ, which S. Paul here expresseth by these words, not holding the head. These seem to have been some disciples of Simon, and their heresies continued in some churches of Asia even to the fourth age, as we may find by a canon of the council of Laodicea. But there is nothing here nor in that council against a due, i. e. an inferior honour and veneration, nothing like a divine honour, nor injurious to Christ, our chief mediator and only Redeemer, which the Church, from the first ages, paid to saints and Angels. We do not ask grace, we do not offer up sacrifice, we hope not for salvation, but from God only, from Christ, God and man. Wi.—Willing, &c. That is, by a self-willed, self-invented, superstitious worship, falsely pretending humility, but really proceeding from pride. Such was the worship that many of the philosophers (against whom S. Paul speaks, v. 8.) paid to Angels or demons, by sacrificing to them, as carriers of intelligence betwixt God and men; pretending humility; in so doing, as if God was too great to be addressed by men, and setting aside the mediatorship of Jesus Christ; who is the head both of Angels and men. Such also was the worship paid by the ancient heretics, disciples of Simon and Menander, to the Angels, whom they believed to be the makers and lords of this lower world. This is certain, that they whom the apostle here condemns, did not hold the head, (v. 19.) that is, Jesus Christ, and his mediatorship; and therefore what he writes here no ways touches the Catholic doctrine and practice, of desiring our good Angels to pray to God for us, through Jesus Christ. S. Jerom, (Epist. ad Algas) understands by the religion or service of Angels, the Jewish religion given by Angels; and shews body, by joints and bands being supplied with nourishment and compacted, groweth unto the increase of God.

20 If then you be dead with Christ from the elements of this world: why do you yet decree as though living in the world?

21 Touch not, taste not, handle not:

22 Which all are unto destruction by the very use, according to the precepts and doctrines of men:

23 Which things have indeed a shew of wisdom in superstition, and humility, and not sparing the body, not in any honour to the filling of the flesh.

CHAP. III.

He exhorts them to put off the old man, and to put on the new. The duties of wives and husbands, children and servants.

THEREFORE, if you be risen with Christ, seek the things that are above: where Christ is sitting at the right hand of God:

2 Mind the things that are above, not the things that are on the earth.

3 For you are dead, and your life is hidden with Christ in God.

all that is here said to be directed against the Jewish teachers, who sought to subject the new Christians to the observances of the Mosaic law. Ch.—Walking in the things which he hath not seen. These false teachers pretended to know the number and names of the Angels, and how to distribute them into different orders and classes, with as much precision as if they had walked through heaven. Instead of following the revelation of the holy Spirit in the gospel, they followed their own spirit, boasting of what it was impossible for them to know. C.—But let no one snatch from you the glory of heaven, which should be the reward of your career, and the recompense of your fidelity, deceiving you by an outward show of false piety and affected humility. V.

VER. 20. If then you be dead with Christ, or if you be not of this world, why do you act as if you were in it! practising the ceremonies of the law, as if you still expected Christ; all which are hurtful to you. S. Jerom.—In your baptism you died with Jesus Christ to all legal observances, and should not therefore suffer any carnal laws to be imposed upon you, as if you were still living in this first state of the world. V.—These things have an appearance of humility, if you abstain from them through mortification, and not through any necessity, as if they were unclean. But if we look upon them, and reject them as impure, and despise those who do not follow our example, then these things, so far from being useful, become prejudicial. Grotius.—Why do you yet decree†† in this manner! Wi.

VER. 21. Touch not, &c. That is, why do you permit yourselves to be taught in this manner by those Jewish doctors: why do you touch or eat this, lest you be unclean? such superstitious observations, now at least, when there is no necessity nor obligation for you to observe them, tend to destruction, &c. Wi.—The meaning is, that Christians should not subject themselves, either to the ordinances of the old law, forbidding touching or tasting things unclean: or to the superstitious invention of heretics, imposing such restraints, under pretence of wisdom, humility, or mortification. Ch.

VER. 23. Which things have indeed, (as such masters teach you) a shew of wisdom, in their nice superstitious ways, joined by some of them with extraordinary abstinences, and severities practised on the body in fasting, which they observe, without any honour or regard, even not to the satiating of the flesh; i. e. according to the common expression, with such an excess, as not to allow the body†† what is sufficient or necessary to support nature, that a man may be able to labour and comply with his duties; but here is nothing against discreet fasting, and self-denials, so much recommended in the holy Scriptures. Wi.

* V. 4. Decipiat, παραλογίζεσθαι, fallaci ratiocinatione.

† V. 8. Decipiat, συλαγωγῶν, prædam furtive abducens. See S. Chrys. λόγ. στ. p. 118.

†† V. 9. In ipso inhabitat omnis plenitudo divinitatis corporaliter, κατοικεῖ τὰς τὸ πλῆρωμα τῆς θεότητος σωματικῶς. See S. Chrys. Ibid.

§ V. 14. Chirographum decreti; χειρογράφον τοῦ δόγματος. In the common Greek copies, τοῖς δόγμασι, as Ephes ii. 15.

|| V. 18. Seducit, καταρπάζουσιν. See Mr. Legh's Crit. Sacra.

 Ibid. Volens, θέλων; religione, θρησκεία.—Walking, ambulans, ἰμβαλεῖσθαι, superbe se ingerens.

†† V. 20. Quid adhuc decernitis, δογματίζεσθε.

†† V. 23. Et non ad parcendum corpori, καὶ ἀφεῖδ' σώματος, et in non parcenia corporis, vel in crudelitate erga corpus.—Non in honore ad saturitatem, οὐκ ἐν τιμῇ πρὸς πληρωμὴν.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Here begins the second or the moral part of this epistle.—If you be risen, &c. The remaining part of this epistle has no great difficulties, but excellent instructions, as that to the Ephesians. Wi.

VER. 5. Your members, . . . fornication, uncleanness, &c. He considers man's body as made up of sins and sinful inclinations. Wi.—It is not to bring back Judaism we practise abstinences and fasts, nor with the same motive as the Jews,

4 When Christ shall appear, who is your life: then shall you also appear with him in glory.

5 Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth. *fornication, uncleanness, lust, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is the service of idols:

6 For which things the wrath of God cometh upon the children of unbelief:

7 In which you also walked some time, when you lived in them.

8 ^bBut now put you also all away: anger, indignation, malice, blasphemy, filthy speech out of your mouth.

9 Lie not one to another: stripping yourselves of the old man with his deeds.

10 And putting on the new, him who is renewed unto knowledge, *according to the image of him, who created him.

11 Where there is neither Gentile nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian nor Scythian, bond or free: but Christ is all, and in all.

12 Put ye on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy, and beloved, the bowels of mercy, benignity, humility, modesty, patience:

13 Bearing with one another, and forgiving one another, if any have a complaint against another: even as the Lord hath forgiven you, so do you also.

14 But above all these things have charity, which is the bond of perfection:

15 And let the peace of Christ rejoice in your hearts, wherein also you are called in one body: and be ye thankful.

16 Let the word of Christ dwell in you abundantly, in all wisdom, teaching, and admonishing one another ^ain psalms, hymns, and spiritual canticles, singing in grace in your hearts to God.

17 *All whatsoever you do in word or in work, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, giving thanks to God and the Father by him.

* Ephes. v. 8.—^b Rom. vi. 4. Ephes. iv. 22. Heb. xii. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 1. and iv. 2.
^c Gen. i. 26.—^d Ephes. v. 19.—^e 1 Cor. x. 31.—^f Ephes. v. 12. 1 Pet. iii. 1.

but to accomplish the precepts of mortifying the irregular desires of the flesh, among which gluttony must find a place. In a mortified body sensuality is more easily subdued. A.

VER. 6. The children of unbelief are either those who perished in Noe's flood, for S. Peter in his epistle gives them this title, or they are the inhabitants of Chanaan, whom Josue exterminated; for these also are called children of unbelief, in the epistle to the Hebrews, and their crimes were the same as those mentioned here. Calmet.

VER. 8. Blasphemy. * It may here signify either the sin of blasphemy against God, or speaking ill of our neighbour by detraction, calumnies, affronts, &c. See S. Chrys. Wi.—Now that you live in God, with Jesus Christ, quit not only the above shameful crimes, but also these sins, which, although they excite less horror, will separate you no less from the Author of all sanctity.

VER. 10. According to the image of him who created him. We are created to the image of God, inasmuch as our souls are spiritual and immortal, but here we are put in mind to imitate God by sanctity and justice, as God is holy and the fountain of justice. Wi.—The image or resemblance of our Creator was effaced by sin, but is retraced by Jesus Christ, who forms in us this new man. V.

VER. 11. Where, or in which state, when we put on the new man by sanctity and grace, God makes no distinction betwixt Jew and Gentile, &c. Wi.—In the Church of Christ God makes no exception of persons; all are called to the marriage feast, whether Jews (formerly the most favoured people of God) or Greeks, (who are reckoned the most polite, or learned) or Barbarians, or Scythians: (who are esteemed the most cruel and ferocious of men) still these are called; Christ died for all. Calmet.—In S. Paul's epistles, by the Greeks are usually designated the Gentiles. V.

VER. 14. Above all these things have charity, the love of God, and of your neighbour which is the bond of perfection, the end of all virtues, which unites the hearts of all to God. Wi.

VER. 15. The peace of Christ rejoice:† reign, conquer, bear away the prize. Wi.

18 ^aWives, be subject to your husbands, as it becometh in the Lord.

19 Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter towards them.

20 *Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is pleasing to the Lord.

21 ^aFathers, provoke not your children to anger, lest they be discouraged.

22 ^aServants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh, not serving to the eye, as pleasing men, but in simplicity of heart, fearing God.

23 Whatsoever you do, do it from the heart, as to the Lord, and not to men:

24 Knowing that you shall receive of the Lord the reward of inheritance. Serve ye the Lord Christ.

25 *For he that doth an injury, shall receive for that which he hath done unjustly, and there is no respect of persons with God.

CHAP. IV.

He recommends fervent prayer, and wisdom. Various salutations.

MASTERS, do to your servants that which is just and equal: knowing that you also have a Master in heaven.

2 ^aBe instant in prayer: watching in it with thanksgiving:

3 ^mPraying withal for us also, that God may open to us a door of speech to speak the mystery of Christ (for which also I am in bands.)

4 That I may make it manifest as I ought to speak.

5 ^aWalk with wisdom towards those who are without: redeeming the time.

6 Let your speech be always in grace seasoned with salt, that you may know how you ought to answer every man.

7 All the things that concern me, Tychicus, our dearest brother, and faithful minister, and fellow-servant in the Lord, will make known to you:

8 Whom I have sent to you for this same purpose,

* Ephes. vi. 1.—^b Eph. vi. 4.—^c Tit. ii. 9. 1 Pet. ii. 18.—^d Rom. ii. 6.—^e Luke xviii. 1.
^f 1 Thess. v. 17.—^g Ephes. vi. 19. 2 Thess. iii. 1. Coloss. iv. 2.—^h Ephes. v. 15.

VER. 16. Employ yourselves in studying and reading the Scriptures; meditate on what our Saviour has done and suffered for you. It is a calumny of our enemies, that we forbid the reading of the Testament. But the Church, fearing lest the faithful should read to their own destruction what was ordained for their salvation, wisely ordains that they should have recourse to their pastors, and receive from them those versions which she approves as most conformable to the Latin Vulgate, which has received the sanction of the holy Catholic Church, and at the same time forbids them those which might corrupt their faith. In this she acts the part of a good and provident mother, conducting her children to the rich and salutary pastures of peace and plenty, and carefully guarding them from others where tempting but noxious weeds luxuriantly grow up, watered with the baneful streams of polluted and poisoned sources.

If pure be the streams from the fountain,
 As purely the river will flow;
 If noxious the stream from the mountain,
 It poisons the valley below.

VER. 17. Do all in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Let all be done for his honour and glory. See 1 Cor. x. 31. Wi.

* V. 8. Blasphemiam. S. Chrys. p. 133. βλασφημίας, τὰς λοιδορίας.

† V. 15. Exultet, βαρβαρίω palmam referat.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Masters should remember that they also have a Master to whom they must reckon, and from whom they must expect the same justice they measure out to others.

VER. 3. A door of speech; i. e. of free speech to preach the gospel. Wi.

VER. 5. Redeeming the time. This expression occurs also in the epistle to the Ephesians, and seems to insinuate to the faithful to be on their guard not to irritate the Gentiles, nor to provoke them to persecution. Remember, says he, the times are bad; conduct yourselves with prudence; gain time, procure peace, and remain in silence. This was written towards the end of the reign of Nero, as cruel a prince as ever lived. C.

that he may know the things that concern you and comfort your hearts,

9 With Onesimus, a most beloved and faithful brother, who is one of you. All things that are done here, they shall make known to you.

10 Aristarchus, my fellow-prisoner, saluteth you, and Mark, the cousin-german of Barnabas, touching whom you have received commandments: if he come to you, receive him:

11 And Jesus, who is called Justus: who are of the circumcision: these only are my helpers in the kingdom of God, who have been a comfort to me.

12 Epaphras saluteth you, who is one of you, a servant of Christ Jesus, who is always solicitous for you in prayers, that you may stand perfect, and full in all the will of God.

VER. 10. The same as John and Mark mentioned in the Acts, xv. 37, 39.

VER. 12. Epaphras. He was apostle and bishop of the Colossians, as has been observed. It was he who engaged S. Paul to write to them, fearing lest they should give themselves up to the novelties of the false apostles, after having received the gospel from him in all its purity. C.

VER. 16. *Read you that which is of the Laodiceans. Some expound these words of an epistle which S. Paul wrote to the Laodiceans, which is lost, for that now extant is no more than a collection of sentences out of S. Paul. By the Greek text is rather signified a letter writ from Laodicea, and might be a letter sent from the Laodiceans to S. Paul, which he had a mind the Colossians should read. Wi.—This opinion does not, however, seem well founded. Hence it is more probable, that S. Paul wrote an epistle from Rome to the Laodiceans about the same time that he wrote to the Colossians, as he had them both equally at heart, and that he ordered that epistle to be read by the Colossians for their instruction; and, being neighbouring cities, they might communicate to each other what they had received from him: as one epistle might contain some matters

13 For I bear him testimony that he hath much labour for you, and for them who are at Laodicea, and them at Hierapolis.

14 * Luke, the most beloved physician, saluteth you, and Demas.

15 Salute the brethren who are at Laodicea: and Nymphas, and the church that is in his house.

16 And when this epistle shall be read among you, cause that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans: and read you that which is of the Laodiceans.

17 And say to Archippus: Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfil it.

18 The salutation of Paul with my own hand. Be mindful of my chains: Grace be with you. Amen.

* 2 Tim. iv. 11.

not related in the other, and would be equally useful for their concern; and more particularly as they were equally disturbed by intruders and false teachers, against whom the apostle was anxious to warn them, lest they should be infected by their pernicious doctrine. Ch.—It is the most common opinion, both amongst the ancients and moderns, that the epistle here alluded to was one written by the Laodiceans to S. Paul, which he sent to Colossus with this, and not one which he himself had written to the Laodiceans. It is however now lost. This exposition agrees best with the Greek. Calmet.

VER. 17. What S. Paul here addresses to Archippus, gives us reason to presume that he was then bishop of the Colossians, having succeeded Epaphras, who was then prisoner at Rome with S. Paul. V.

* V. 16. That of the Laodiceans. Eam quæ Laodicensium est, rñ in Laodicea. See S. Crys. (My. 48. p. 152.) and P. Mauduit dissert. on this place, who endeavours to prove that S. Paul wrote to the Laodiceans.

THE FIRST

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE THESSALONIANS.

S. PAUL having preached with success at Thessalonica, the chief city of Macedonia, wrote to them this letter, to confirm them in the Christian faith and in the practice of virtue. This, in order, is the first epistle of S. Paul. He wrote it about the year fifty-two, as it is thought, from Corinth. Wi.—S. Paul having preached the gospel in this place, converted some Jews and a great number of Gentiles; but the unbelieving Jews, envying his success, raised such a commotion against him, that he and his companion Silvanus were obliged to quit the city. Afterwards he went to Athens, where he had heard that the converts in Thessalonica were under a severe persecution ever since his departure; and lest they should lose their fortitude, he sent Timothy to strengthen and comfort them in their sufferings. In the mean time S. Paul came to Corinth, where he wrote this first epistle and also the second to the Thessalonians, both in the same year, being the nineteenth after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—S. Paul preached the faith in this city, assisted by Silas or Silvanus, whose name is joined with the apostle's in this letter. See Acts xvii. Being driven away from this city by the violence of the Jews, he left Timothy and Silas in Macedonia, to confirm the new converts in their faith. But having afterwards called them to him, and hearing of their constancy and perseverance, he writes this epistle to encourage them and praise them. It is the first in time of all S. Paul's epistles, and filled with the most affectionate expressions of love and tenderness for his spiritual children in Jesus Christ. In the latter part of the epistle, he gives some short instructions concerning the state of souls after death, and the coming of the last day; as his companions had informed him that strange reports concerning these two articles were in circulation at Thessalonica, to the disturbance of the faithful. Calmet. Estius et alii.—The first three chapters are to confirm and comfort the Thessalonians against the temptations of persecution; the other two are to exhort them to live up to the precepts he delivers them.

CHAP. I.

He gives thanks for the graces bestowed on the Thessalonians.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timothy to the church of the Thessalonians, in God the Father, and in the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 Grace be to you and peace. We give thanks to CHAP. I. VER. 1. Paul. It is observed that S. Paul never calls himself an apostle in either of the epistles to the Thessalonians. The reason why he deviates from his ordinary custom on this occasion, probably is, that joining his name with the other two, he did not like to assume a title, though his due, which the others did not possess. Estius.—Such condescension to your neighbours' feelings, even in trifles, is highly delicate and praiseworthy. A.

God always for you all: making a remembrance of you in our prayers without ceasing.

3 Being mindful of the work of your faith, and labour, and charity, and of the enduring of the hope of our Lord Jesus Christ, before God and our Father:

4 Knowing, brethren beloved of God, your election:

VER. 3. The apostle praises the Thessalonians for the progress they had made in the theological virtues, and enumerates the profit they had derived from each. Their faith had produced works; their charity rendered their labours light and easy, and their patience was the fruit of their future hopes, in confidence of which they bore what they had to suffer from their unconverted countrymen. Estius.

5 For our gospel hath not been to you in word only, but in power also, and in the Holy Ghost, and in muchfulness, as you know what manner of men we have been among you for your sakes.

6 And you became followers of us, and of the Lord: receiving the word in much tribulation, with the joy of the Holy Ghost:

7 So that you were made a pattern to all that believe in Macedonia, and in Achaia.

8 For from you was spread abroad the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and in Achaia, but also in every place, your faith which is towards God, is gone forth, so that we need not to speak any thing.

9 For they themselves relate of us, what manner of entrance we had unto you: and how you were converted to God from idols, to serve the living and true God.

10 And to wait for his Son from heaven, (whom he raised from the dead) Jesus, who hath delivered us from the wrath to come.

CHAP. II.

The sincerity of the apostle's preaching the gospel to them: and their receiving it.

FOR yourselves, brethren, know our entrance unto you, that it was not in vain:

2 But having suffered before, and being contumeliously treated (as you know) at Philippi, *we had confidence in our God, to speak to you the gospel of God in much solicitude.

3 For our exhortation was not of error, nor of uncleanness, nor in deceit.

4 But as we were approved of God, that the gospel should be committed to us: even so we speak, not as pleasing men, but God, who proveth our hearts.

5 For neither have we used at any time, the speech of flattery, as you know: nor taken an occasion of covetousness: God is witness:

6 Nor sought we glory of men, neither of you, nor of others.

* Acts xvi. 19.

VER. 5. In power. Te sense is, I have preached the gospel to you, not only in words of persuasion, but have proved it by the power of miracles, in muchfulness, or in great abundance. I have also taught you the gospel not by my words only, but by my actions; for you know what kind of a life I led among you. I had no interest but in gaining your souls. And I rejoice to hear you have received it in much power, by the Holy Ghost working within you. A.—*And in muchfulness. Some would have the Greek word to signify in a full assurance; but in the style of the New Testament, it may as well signify a fullness, or plenitude. Wi.

VER. 8. From you was spread abroad the word.† The Greek, was sounded about.—In every place. In very many places. Wi.

* V. 5. In plenitudine multa, ἐν πληροφρίᾳ πολλῇ. See Luke i.

† V. 8. Diffamatus est, ἐξήχεται. Insonuit, S. Chrysa. says, (Ady. B. p. 166.) ἐκλαῶν δὲ ὡς περ ἐκλαγγυγος, instar Tubæ.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Vain. Our entrance among you was not in vain fables, or lies; our preaching was not in trifles: (Ecumenius) or rather was not without fruit. Others have spoken of it every where; but why refer you to others, when yourselves know that it was every where followed by abundance of good works, faith, patience! &c. Estius.

VER. 3. *Our exhortation was not proceeding from error. That is, was not by promoting errors, or uncleanness. Wi.

VER. 4. As we were approved of and chosen by God to announce his gospel, we have tried to correspond with his designs; and we speak in a spirit of distrustfulness, not to please men, but God. Being chosen by God, it is to him we must render an account. Have we spoken to you in words of flattery? Have we disguised the gospel truth, or concealed its austerity? Have we made piety a cloak for avarice! &c. Calmet.

VER. 5. Nor taken an occasion of covetousness. Not so as to make the gospel, a cloak for gain-sake. Wi.

7 Whereas we might have been burdensome to you, as the apostles of Christ: but we became little ones in the midst of you, as if a nurse should cherish her children.

8 So desirous of you, we would gladly have imparted to you not only the gospel of God, but also our own souls: because you were become most dear to us.

9 For you remember, brethren, our labour and toil: *working night and day, lest we should be burdensome to any of you, we preached among you the gospel of God.

10 You are witnesses, and God, how holily, and justly, and without blame we have been among you, who have believed:

11 As you know, in what manner, entreating and comforting you, (as a father doth his children).

12 We testified to every one of you, that you would walk worthy of God, who hath called you to his kingdom and glory.

13 Therefore we also give thanks to God without ceasing: because that when you had received from us the word of the hearing of God, you received it not as the word of men, but (as it truly is) the word of God, who worketh in you, who have believed.

14 For you, brethren, are become followers of the churches of God, which are in Judea, in Christ Jesus: for you also have suffered the same things from your own countrymen, even as they have from the Jews:

15 Who both killed the Lord Jesus, and the prophets, and have persecuted us, and they please not God, and are adversaries to all men;

16 Forbidding us to speak to the Gentiles that they may be saved, to fill up their sins always: for the wrath of God is come upon them to the end.

17 But we, brethren, being taken away from you, for a short time, in sight, not in heart, have hastened the more abundantly to see your face with great desire:

18 For we would have come to you, even I, Paul once and again; but Satan hindered us.

† Acts xx. 24. 1 Cor. iv. 12. 2 Thess. iii. 8.

VER. 7. But we became little,† by our carriage, and by our humility and kindness. In the Greek, made ourselves gentle, good natured, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. Because you were become most dear to us. Lit. desiring you.† S. Chrysa. admires the tender expressions of love in S. Paul. Wi.

VER. 10. You are witnesses. We must necessarily conclude that the apostle speaks this not from vain glory, or personal vanity; but in the just right of defending his own character against the aspersions of enemies, and lest the faith of any might be staggered by the calumnies. In such cases self-praise is not only lawful, but frequently an imperative duty, if confined within the limits of truth. A.

VER. 13. The words of the hearing of God, which can only signify the word of God you heard from us. Wi.

VER. 16. To fill up the measure of their sins, after which God's justice would punish them. Wi.—The Jews filled up the measure of their iniquities by the opposition they every where manifested to the religion of Christ. The earliest Fathers of the Church testify that they dispersed people into every nation to blaspheme the name of Christ; and hence sprang the evil fame which Christians bore among the pagans. See the apologies of S. Justin, Tertullian, Origen, &c.—For the wrath of God is come upon them to the end. It seems a foretelling of their entire destruction, which happened not long after under Vespasian and Adrian. Wi.

VER. 17. Being taken away from you. Lit. become desolate, because of our separation from you. Wi.

VER. 18. Satan hindered us. That is, has raised such an aversion to me among the pagans and Jews of Thessalonica, that my friends do not think it safe I should come among you. I am now detained from you by violence; but when this life is past, you shall form my joy and my crown. I will present you at the tribunal of my Saviour, and say: Behold me and my children; behold the fruits of my labours, the proofs of my fidelity, and my claims for a recompense. Calmet.—If the apostle here calls his disciples his hope, joy, glory, why may we not call the blessed Virgin Mary, or other saints, their joy and hope for the special confidence they have in their prayers?

19 For what is our hope or joy, or crown of glory? Are not you, in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?

20 For you are our glory and joy.

CHAP. III.

The apostle's concern and love for the Thessalonians.

FOR which cause forbearing no longer, we thought it good to remain at Athens, alone:

2 * And we sent Timothy, our brother, and a minister of God in the gospel of Christ, to confirm you, and exhort you concerning your faith:

3 That no man should be moved in these tribulations: for yourselves know, that we are appointed thereunto.

4 For even when we were with you, we foretold you that we should suffer tribulations: as also it is come to pass, and you know.

5 For this cause also I forbearing no longer, sent to know your faith: lest perhaps he that tempteth, should have tempted you, and our labour should be made vain.

6 But now when Timothy came to us from you, and related to us your faith and charity, and that you have a good remembrance of us always, desiring to see us, as we also to see you:

7 Therefore we were comforted, brethren, in you, in all our distress and tribulation, by your faith;

8 For now we live, if you stand in the Lord.

9 For what thanks can we return to God for you, in all the joy wherewith we rejoice for you before our God.

10 Night and day, praying more abundantly, that we may see your face, and may accomplish those things that are wanting to your faith?

11 Now God himself and our Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ direct our way unto you:

12 And may the Lord multiply you, and make you abound in charity towards one another, and towards all men: as we do also towards you,

13 To confirm your hearts without blame, in holiness, before God and our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints. Amen.

* Acts vi. 1.—^b Rom. xii. 2. Ephes. v. 17.

* V. 3. De errore, &c. i. e. ex errore, ἐκ πλάνης, &c.

† V. 7. Parvuli: and so νήπιος, in divers Greek copies; but in the common copies, ἡσίοι, placidi.

‡ V. 8. Desiderantes vos, ἐπιτρέμενοι ὑμῶν. See Legh's Crit. Sacra.

§ V. 13. Verbum auditus Dei, λόγον ἀκοῆς.

|| V. 17. Desolati a vobis, ἀπορφανισθέντες.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Forbearing no longer. That is, not being able to be at rest, for not seeing you, nor hearing concerning you. Wi.—Not bearing to be any longer uncertain and uninformed of your constancy, amidst the tribulations you had to endure, I sent Timothy to strengthen you, that you might not be moved in the difficulties to which we are destined, and which it is appointed for us to undergo. Calmet.

VER. 3. That we are appointed thereunto. That is, meet with trials and troubles in this world, as our Saviour Christ foretold. Wi.

VER. 8. We live. That is, we live in joy and comfort, if you stand firm in the faith of Christ, as you ought. Wi.—The news that you stand steadfast in the Lord, reanimates me under all my sufferings, and as it were raises me to life again from the shadow of death, under which I am placed. O that I could see you, to complete the work of instructing you in the faith, which I have begun.

VER. 10. That we may see your face. Though epistles in absence give great comfort, and help to confirm the faith once delivered, it is by preaching that the faith of Jesus Christ and true religion are both begun and accomplished.—And may accomplish those things that are wanting to your faith? That is, give you fuller instructions. Wi.

VER. 12. And may the Lord multiply you. That is, increase the number of Christians among you. Wi.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. In this chapter the apostle begins to remind them of their obligation of always striving to increase in virtue. Though he praises them through the whole epistle, he still thinks it necessary to warn them not to be surprised in uncleanness. He repeats what he had taught them before; first,

CHAP. IV.

He exhorts them to purity and mutual charity: he treats of the resurrection of the dead.

FOR the rest therefore, brethren, we pray and beseech you in the Lord Jesus, that as you have received from us, how you ought to walk, and to please God, so also you would walk, that you may abound the more.

2 For you know what commandments I have given to you by the Lord Jesus.

3 * For this is the will of God, your sanctification: that you should abstain from fornication:

4 That every one of you should know how to possess his vessel in sanctification and honour:

5 Not in the passion of lust, like the Gentiles, who know not God:

6 And that no man overreach, nor deceive his brother in business: because the Lord is the avenger of all these things, as we have told you before, and have testified.

7 For God hath not called us to uncleanness, but to holiness.

8 He, therefore, that despiseth these things, despiseth not man, but God: who also hath given his holy spirit in us.

9 But concerning the love of the brotherhood, we have no need to write to you: * for yourselves have learned of God to love one another.

10 For indeed you do it towards all the brethren in all Macedonia. But we entreat you, brethren, that you abound more.

11 And that you use your endeavour to be quiet, and that you do your own business, and work with your own hands, as we commanded you: and that you walk honestly towards them that are without: and that you want nothing of any man's.

12 And we will not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that you be not sorrowful, even as others who have no hope.

* John iii. 34. and xv. 12. and 17. 1 John ii. 10. and iv. 12.

that there is vengeance awaiting the workers of evil; and secondly, that the favour of God is the reward of those who deal with the brethren in simplicity, and preserve themselves from the defilements of the Gentiles. S. Ambrose, Comment. hic.

VER. 4. His vessel. That is, his own body. See 1 K. xxi. 5. Wi.

VER. 6. *That no man overreach, nor deceive his brother in business. The Prot. and Mr. N. even in their translations, add, in any matter, because some expound it of frauds and circumventions in any kind of business. But this addition of any, should be left out, seeing the best interpreters expound it of a prohibition of adultery, and the injury thereby done to another, and of sins of that kind only, which is confirmed by what follows and what goes before. See S. Jerom in c. iv. ad Ephes. tom. 4. p. 369. S. Chrys. serm. 3 on this place. Here, says he, he speaks of adultery, as before of fornication, &c. See Theodoret, Theophylact, Estius, Menochius, A. Lapide, &c. Wi.

VER. 11. And that you want nothing of any man's.† This is the sense by the Greek, nor does the Latin here signify to desire, but to want them that are without; i. e. infidels out of the pale of the Church. Wi.—In regard of brotherly love, he advises them to remain quiet, at peace with every one, troubling nobody, nor interfering with the concerns of others, but each one minding his own work. It had been reported to the apostle that there were some at Thessalonica who made religion a pretext for idleness. It is to reprove such persons as these, that we are given to understand in this place that religion will never excuse the neglect of relative duties, either to our neighbours or to ourselves. It is the duty of all to labour, in order to prevent the evils of poverty; for involuntary poverty is a great snare, and a dangerous temptation against salvation. It exposes to ignorance, to meanness, and low actions; it conducts to fraud, to falsities, to impudence, and forgetfulness of God. Happy are the poor in spirit, but miserable they who are involuntarily so: miserable, not for the wants, the humiliations, or inconveniences of their state, but for the irregularities and disorders of conduct to which they are exposed. It is therefore wise of man to pray, Give me not riches nor poverty, but give me only what is sufficient, &c. Calmet.

VER. 15. With commandment.‡ God's command will in a moment raise and 13 For if we believe that Jesus died, and rose again, even so them who have slept through Jesus, God will bring with him.

14 For this we say unto you in the word of the Lord, *that we who are alive, who remain unto the coming of the Lord, shall not prevent them, who have slept.

15 For the Lord himself shall come down from heaven with commandment, and with the voice of an Archangel, and with the trumpet of God: and the dead, who are in Christ, shall rise first.

16 Then we who are alive, who are left, shall be taken up together with them in the clouds, to meet Christ in the air, and so shall we be always with the Lord.

17 Wherefore comfort ye one another with these words.

CHAP. V.

The day of the Lord shall come, when least expected. Exhortations to several duties.

BUT of the times and moments, brethren, you need not that we should write to you.

2 ^bFor yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord shall so come, as a thief in the night.

3 For when they shall say, peace and security, then shall sudden destruction come upon them, as the pains upon her that is with child, and they shall not escape.

4 But you, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief:

5 For all you are the children of light, and children of the day: we are not of the night, nor of darkness.

6 Therefore let us not sleep, as others do: but let us watch and be sober.

7 For they who sleep, sleep in the night: and they who are drunk, are drunk in the night.

8 But let us, who are of the day, be sober, *having on the breastplate of faith and charity, and for a helmet, the hope of salvation:

* 1 Cor. xv. 28.—^b 2 Pet. iii. 10. Apoc. iii. 8. and xvi. 15.—Isai. lix. 17. Ephes. vi. 14. and 17.

bring all to judgment.—And the dead, who are in Christ, in the grace of Christ, shall rise first, not as to time, but in dignity. Wi.—Shall rise first. Not in order of time, for all shall rise in the twinkling of an eye, but first in order of dignity. S. Chrysostom, however, thinks that the elect rise before the reprobate, to go before the Lord; whereas the latter shall come behind him, only to appear before the tribunal of justice. S. Chrys.

* V. 6. Ne quis supergrediatur, neque circumveniat in negotio fratrem, ἐν τῷ πρᾶγματι. See S. Jerom: diligenter observa, quia ad castitatem nos provocans, et volens uxoris tantum esse contentos, dixerit, ne quis supergrediatur, &c. S. Chrys. (λόγ. ε. p. 186.) ἐνταῦθα περὶ μοιχείας φησιν, ἀντὶ τούτου δὲ περὶ παρνεσίας πάσης.
† V. 11. Nullius aliquid desideretis, μηδένος χρῆται ἔχοντες, i. e. nullius opus habeatis.

‡ V. 15. In jussu, ἐν κελεύσματι, from κελεύω, in celestinate, in voce simul clamantium.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Of the times and moments. That is, of the day of judgment, of the end of the world, of the destruction of Jerusalem. It is enough to know the time is uncertain, and that death cometh as a thief in the night. Wi.—When the judgment shall take place the Angels themselves do not know. Perhaps S. Paul, when wrapt up to the third heaven, may have learnt something on this subject; for he was told many things which he could not announce to man; therefore, he says, I need not write to you: it is unnecessary for us to know it. Calmet.

VER. 4. Overtake you. It is a subject of astonishment, that some people are so childishly afraid of the last day, that they cannot think of it without consternation, lest it should happen in their time. Weak souls! Do they not recollect that death will certainly overtake them, and that will be to them individually the end of the world, and the last day. The whole world then does perish as far as regards them. A.

VER. 5. You are the children of light. That is, there is little danger of thieves in the day time, when it is light. Also watch, as I have arms to defend you, the 9 For God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to the purchasing of salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ,

10 Who died for us: that whether we watch or sleep, we may live together with him.

11 Wherefore comfort one another: and edify one another, as you also do.

12 And we beseech you, brethren, to know them who labour among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonish you, 13 That you esteem them more abundantly in charity for their work: have peace with them.

14 And we beseech you, brethren, rebuke the unquiet, comfort the feeble-minded, support the weak be patient towards all men.

15 *See that none render evil for evil to any one but always follow that which is good towards each other, and towards all men.

16 Always rejoice.

17 *Pray without ceasing.

18 In all things give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you all.

19 Extinguish not the Spirit.

20 Despise not prophecies.

21 But prove all things: hold that which is good.

22 From all appearance of evil refrain yourselves.

23 And may the God of peace himself sanctify you in all things: that your whole spirit, and soul, and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

24 *He is faithful who hath called you: who will also perform.

25 Brethren, pray for us.

26 Salute all the brethren with a holy kiss.

27 I charge you, by the Lord, that this epistle be read to all the holy brethren:

28 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. Amen.

* Prov. xvii. 13. and xx. 22. Rom. xii. 17. 1 Pet. iii. 9.—* Eccl. xviii. 22. Luke xviii. 1. Coloss. iv. 2.—† 1 Cor. i. 9.

coat of mail of faith; the helmet of hope: you are under the protection of Christ who died for you, and for your salvation. See S. Chrys. p. 293, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. The Christian's panoply is not faith alone, but faith, hope and charity, as we see here.

VER. 10. Whether we wake or sleep. That is, whether we be of the number of those whom Jesus Christ shall find still upon earth, when he shall come to judgment, or among those who have slept and returned to dust, it is his will that we should be his. Theodoret.

VER. 14. *Rebuke, or correct the unquiet. By the Greek, it signifies the disorderly, or those that keep no order. Wi.

VER. 16. Always rejoice. It is usual for S. Paul to recommend joy to the faithful. Cheerfulness is indeed the characteristic of true virtue, which by no means consists in, nor encourages, sourness or moroseness, as some mistaken people imagine. God loves a cheerful giver. Sorrow, which is of this world, killeth. A.

VER. 19. Do not oppose either the interior gifts of the holy Spirit, which are his graces, nor his exterior gifts of prophecy, &c. Take the regular precautions of prudence, that you be not deceived by those who pretend to be inspired; but when satisfied that the inspiration comes from heaven, do not despise it. Be like good bankers, take the good coin, and reject the counterfeit. S. Cyril Alex.

VER. 21. Prove all things. That is, examine prophecies whether they be true, and the doctrine which you hear from new preachers, and refrain yourselves not only from evil, but from every thing that hath the appearance of evil, and which may disedify and scandalize others. Wi.—Hold that which is good. This we can best learn from the doctrine of the apostles, and the spirit of the Catholic Church. Men can deceive and be deceived, but the Spirit of God, speaking to us by his Church, can neither deceive us nor be deceived.

VER. 23. Spirit, and soul. The former marks the understanding, the latter the will: hence these two terms give the two principal faculties of the soul. V

* V. 14. The unquiet: inquietos, ἀτάκτους, inordinatos, sine ordine et regula viventes.

THE SECOND

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE,
TO THE THESSALONIANS.

In this epistle S. Paul admonishes the Thessalonians to be constant in the faith of Christ, and not to be terrified by the insinuations of false teachers, telling them that the day of judgment was near at hand, as there must come many signs and wonders before it. He bids them to hold firm the traditions received from him, whether by word or by epistle; and shews them how they may be certain of his letters by the manner he writes. This epistle was written soon after the former, and also from Corinth, about A. 52. Ch. Wi.—From the context we learn that the present is a continuation of the former epistle. He not only rectifies wrong impressions caused by his former letter, but finding that those indolent characters whom he had reprimanded were no ways corrected, he determines to reprimand them still more severely in this letter, which he tells us he writes because he has it not in his power to visit, as he could wish, the Thessalonians.

CHAP. I.

He gives thanks to God for their faith and constancy: and prays for their advancement in all good.

PAUL, and Silvanus, and Timothy, to the church of the Thessalonians, in God our Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ.

2 Grace unto you, and peace from God our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

3 We ought to give thanks always to God for you, brethren, as it is meet, because your faith increaseth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you towards each other, aboundeth:

4 So that we ourselves also glory in you in the churches of God, for your patience and faith, and in all your persecutions and tribulations, which you endure,

5 For an example of the just judgment of God, that you may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which also you suffer.

6 Seeing it is a just thing with God to repay tribulation to them that trouble you:

CHAP. I. VER. 5. For an example of the just judgment of God. That is, that the persecutions and troubles you suffer in this world shew the justice of God in punishing men for their sins, even in this life, so that by these temporal pains you may be found worthy of a crown of eternal glory in the kingdom of God. Wi.—The afflictions, which are here frequently the portion of the just, are sensible proofs of the rigour with which the Almighty will, at the day of final retribution, pour out his indignation on the wicked. For, if he is unwilling to let the just be free from all temporal punishment, (though he discharges their debt of the eternal) and if he continually exposes them to the derision, calumnies, and persecutions of the wicked, what have not the wicked to apprehend when he shall stretch forth his hand in vengeance? Or, as others explain it, God permits the good to be persecuted here, that one day he may treat the wicked according to the rigour of his justice. He permits them here to fill up the measure of their iniquities, that on the last day he may reward the long suffering of the one, and punish the infidelity of the other. In both the one and the other, the finger of God's justice will clearly manifest itself. If the hopes of the good reached no farther than this life, they would be the most wretched of beings; for here, in general, they are more exposed than any to the injuries of the wicked. Nothing proves more clearly the necessity of a general judgment, than this his conduct to his most chosen servants. For it is impossible that, just as he is, he should permit patience and faith to go unrewarded, or wickedness and injustice unpunished. The Son of God has promised us heaven only on condition that we bear wrongs patiently. Calmet.—Here again the apostle teaches the advantages of sufferings which the Thessalonians joyfully underwent, to be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, κατασκευάσαι ὑμᾶς; and v. 11, ibid. ἐξέσωσεν. The apostle teaches here, that nothing defiled shall ever enter into the kingdom of heaven; and gives us to understand at the same time, that he will one day punish with extreme rigour the cruelty and impiety of persecutors. V.

VER. 6. Seeing it is a just thing.* Lit. If yet it be just. S. Chrys. takes notice, that we must not expound the text as if S. Paul made a doubt whether it was just or not for God to repay tribulation to such as troubled, afflicted, and persecuted his faithful servants, and to punish them when he shall be revealed (i. e. at the day of judgment) with flaming fire, or with the flames of hell: nothing certainly is more just; as on the contrary, it is just to reward the pious and those who are found worthy of the glorious kingdom of God. Wi.

VER. 9. Being confounded with the face of the Lord, whom they have re- (1562)

7 And to you who are troubled, rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with the Angels of his power,

8 In a flame of fire, inflicting vengeance to them, who know not God, and who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 Who shall suffer eternal pains in destruction, from the face of the Lord, and from the glory of his power:

10 When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be made wonderful in all them who have believed: because our testimony was believed upon you in that day.

11 Wherefore also we pray always for you: that our God would make you worthy of his calling, and fulfil all the good pleasure of his goodness, and the work of faith in power, 12 That the name of our Lord Jesus may be glorified in you, and you in him, according to the grace of our God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ.

jected, and with the glory of his power and greatness, which will appear in irresistible splendour and majesty.

VER. 10. This shall be at the last day, when Christ shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be made wonderful (to be admired and praised) in or by all them who have believed in that day: (i. e. the things foretold of that day) because our testimony was believed upon you concerning that day, i. e. as to the punishments and rewards that shall be given on that day. Wi.

VER. 11. Wherefore, also we pray, &c. By the Greek, the sense and construction cannot be in, or on which day; and therefore it must be referred to what was said before, that God should be glorified in his saints, and so may be translated, on which account we pray, &c. that Christ may be glorified in you, being made saints by his grace, &c. Wi.

VER. 12. That the name of our Lord, &c. The name of God is glorified by the virtuous lives of Christians, but more especially by that constancy and firmness evinced by the faithful under the hands of the executioner. It is an act of the most perfect charity, to lay down our lives in defence of his truths and the glory of his name, and the most disinterested testimony of our allegiance to him. Nothing appeared more admirable than the constancy of the first Christians, and nothing contributed more to the conversion of the Gentiles than the firmness with which they maintained, even in death, the truths that had been taught them. For, said they, this religion is certainly true, since there is nothing they are not willing to suffer in defence of it. Calmet.—And you in him, &c. If Christians are any way instrumental in procuring the glory of God, let them not attribute it to themselves, but to God alone, from whom comes every gift. If they procure his glory before men, he at the day of final retribution will clothe them with never-fading robes of immortality, in the presence of men and Angels. If it be glorious for God to be adored by such faithful servants, it is much more glorious for Christians to be rewarded by such a Master: for it is the glory of a servant to be faithful to his master, and the glory of the master to recompense his servant. Est. Grot. Theophylact. &c.

* V. 6. Si tamen justum est, εἴπερ δίκαιον. See S. Chrys. (ἀδύ. β. p. 226) εἴπερ ἐνταῦθα ἀντὶ τοῦ ἐνδὲ. &c.

† V. 10. Quirabilis fieri in omnibus. θαυμάσιον ἐν παντί.

‡ Ibid. Quia creditum est testimonium nostrum super vos in illa die, ὅτι ἐπιστάμεθα τὸ μαρτύριον ὑμῶν ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ.

§ V. 11. In quo, ἐν ᾧ, in quod, but it cannot agree with ἡμέτερον, day.

CHAP. II.

The day of the Lord is not to come, till the man of sin be revealed. The apostles' traditions are to be observed.

AND we beseech you, brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and of our gathering together unto him:

2 That you be not easily moved from your sense, nor be terrified, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by epistle, as sent from us, as if the day of the Lord were at hand.

3 ^aLet no man deceive you by any means: for unless there come a revolt first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition,

4 Who opposeth, and is lifted up above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, so that he sitteth

^a Ephes. v. 6.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. And we, &c. Some impostors had taken occasion from S. Paul's first epistle to the Thessalonians, to teach that the day of judgment was at hand. The apostle here maintains that it certainly will come, but that it will come like a thief in the night. He says nothing of the time when it is to arrive; he merely refutes those who spoke of its taking place immediately.—By the coming, &c. Grotius and some others explain this coming, of the vengeance he took on the Jews by the arms of the Romans. It is true he speaks in many places of the destruction of Jerusalem, and of his coming at the last day, in terms exactly the same. But the context of the whole epistle demonstrates that he is here speaking of the last day. Calmet.—And of our gathering together unto him.* Lit. of our congregation unto him. That is, that you be not moved by any pretended revelation, nor by any words or letter, as spoken or written by me. Wi.

VER. 2. S. Austin, writing to Hesychium, declareth that no one from the Scripture can be assured of the day, year, or age when the second coming shall be. ep. lxxx. Let us attend to what S. Austin declares he had learnt from the first Church authorities. At the last judgment, or about that time, will arrive Elias, the Thesbite, the conversion of the Jews, the persecution of antichrist, the coming of Jesus Christ, the resurrection of the dead, the separation of the good from the bad, the conflagration of the world, and the renovation of the same: that these things will arrive, we are to believe, but in what manner and in what order experience will teach better than reason. It is my opinion that they will come in the order I have related them. De. Civ. Dei. l. xx. cap. ult. That the man of sin will be born of the Jewish tribe of Dan, that he will cruelly persecute the faithful for three years and a half, that he will put to death Henoch and Elias, and that great, very great, will be the apostacy, is the general belief. Oh! God, preserve us with thy grace, and do not permit us to lose sight of the dreadful danger that threatens even the elect.

VER. 3-4. First, &c.† Wat is meant by this falling away, (in the Greek this apostacy) is uncertain, and differently expounded. S. Jerom and others understand it of a falling off of other kingdoms, which before were subject to the Roman empire; as if S. Paul said to them: you need not fear that the day of judgment is at hand, for it will not come till other kingdoms, by a general revolt, shall have fallen off, so that the Roman empire be destroyed. The same interpreters expound the sixth and seventh verses in like manner, as if when it is said, now you know† what withholdeth, &c. That is, you see the Roman empire subsisteth yet, which must be first destroyed. And when it is added, only that he who now holdeth, do hold, until he be taken out of the way; the sense, say these authors, is, let Nero and his successors hold that empire till it be destroyed, for not till then will the day of judgment come. A. Lapide makes this exposition so certain, that he calls it a tradition of the fathers, which to him seems apostolical. But we must not take the opinion of some fathers, in the exposition of obscure prophecies, where they advance conjectures (which others at the same time reject, or doubt of) to be apostolical traditions, and articles of faith, as the learned bishop of Meaux, Bossuet, takes notice on this very subject, in his preface and treatise on the Apocalypse, against Jurieux. S. Jerom indeed, and others, thought that the Roman empire was to subsist till antichrist's coming, which by the event most interpreters conclude to be a mistake, and that it cannot be said the Roman empire continues to this time. See Lyranus on this place, S. Tho. Aquin. Salmeron, Estius, and many others; though A. Lapide, with some few, pretend the Roman empire still subsists in the emperors of Germany. We also find that divers of the ancient fathers thought that the day of judgment was just at hand in their time. See Tertul. S. Cyp. S. Greg. the Great, &c. And as to this place, it cannot be said the fathers unanimously agree in their exposition. S. Chrys. § Theodoret, S. Aug. in one of his expositions, by this falling off, and apostacy, understand antichrist himself, apostatizing from the Catholic faith. And they who expound it of Nero, did not reflect that this letter of S. Paul was written under Claudius, before Nero's reign. According to a third and common exposition, by this revolt or apostacy, others understand a great falling off of great numbers from the Catholic Church and faith, in those nations where it was professed before; not but that, as S. Aug. expressly takes notice, the Church will remain always visible, and Catholic in its belief, till the end of the world. This interpretation we find in S. Cyr. || of Jerusalem. Catech. 15. See also S. Anselm on this place, S. Thomas, Salmeron, Estius, &c. In fine, that there is no apostolical tradition, as to any of the interpretations of these words, we may be fully convinced from the words of S. Aug. ¶ l. xx. de Civ. Dei. c. 19. t. 7. p. 597. Nov. edit. where he says: For my part, I own myself altogether ignorant what the apostle means by these words; but I shall mention the suspicions of others, which I have read, or heard. Then he sets down the exposition concerning the Roman empire.

in the temple of God, shewing himself as if he were God.

5 Remember you not, that when I was yet with you, I told you these things?

6 And now you know what withholdeth, that he may be revealed in his time.

7 For the mystery of iniquity already worketh: only that he who now holdeth, do hold, until he be taken out of the way.

8 And then that wicked one shall be revealed, ^bwhom the Lord Jesus shall kill with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: him,

9 Whose coming is according to the working of Satan, in all power, and signs, and lying wonders,

^b Isai. xi. 4.

He there calls that a suspicion and conjecture, which others say is an apostolical tradition. In like manner the ancient fathers are divided, as to the exposition of the words of the sixth and seventh verse, when it is said you know what hindereth; some understand that antichrist must come first. Others, that the beforementioned apostacy, or falling off from the Church, must happen before. And when S. Paul says, (v. 7.) that he who now holdeth, do hold; some expound it, let him take care at the time of such trials, to hold, and preserve the true faith to the end. When the expositions are so different, as in this place, whose ever pretends to give a literal translation ought never to add words to the text, which determine the sense to such a particular exposition, and especially in the same print, as Mr. N. hath done on the seventh verse, where he translates, only let him that now holdeth the faith, keep it until he be taken out of the way.—And the man of sin revealed, the son of perdition, so that he sitteth in the temple of God, shewing himself as if he were God. He is called again, (v. 8.) that wicked one. . . whom the Lord Jesus Christ shall kill with the spirit of his mouth. By all these words is described to us the great antichrist, about the end of the world, according to the unexceptionable authority and consent of the ancient fathers. It is as ridiculous as malicious to pretend, with divers late reformers, that the pope, and all the popes since the destruction of the Roman empire, are the great antichrist, the man of sin, &c. Grotius, Dr. Hammond, and divers learned Protestants, have confuted and ridiculed this groundless fable, of which more on the Apocalypse. It may suffice to observe here that antichrist, the man of sin, the son of perdition, the wicked one, according to all the ancients, is to be one particular man, not so many different men. That he is to come a little while before the day of judgment. That he will make himself be adored, and pretend to be God. What pope did so? That he will pretend to be Christ, &c. Wi.—S. Aug. (de Civ. Dei. b. xx. c. 19.) says, that an attack would be made at one and the same time against the Roman empire and the Church. The Roman empire subsists as yet, in Germany, though much weakened and reduced. The Roman Catholic Church, notwithstanding all its losses, and the apostacy of many of its children, has always remained the same. Calmet.—The two special signs of the last day will be a general revolt, and the manifestation of antichrist, both of which are so dependent on each other, that S. Austin makes but one of both. What presumptive folly in Calvin and other modern reformers, to oppose the universal sentiments of the fathers both of the Latin and Greek Church! What inconsistency, to give such forced interpretations, not only widely different from the expositions of sound antiquity, but also widely different from each other! The Church of God, with her head, strong in the promises of Jesus Christ, will persevere to the end, frustra circumlatrantibus hæreticis. Aug. de util. cred. c. xvii.—In the temple. Either that of Jerusalem, which some think he will rebuild; or in some Christian Church, which he will pervert to his own worship; as Mahomet has done with the churches of the east. Ch.

VER. 7. The mystery of iniquity already worketh,†† or is now wrought, by the precursors of antichrist; i. e. by infidels and heretics. For, as S. John says, there are many antichrists, precursors to the great antichrist, and enemies of Christ. 1 John c. ii. Wi.—That he who now holdeth, do hold. That is, let each one remain in the faith which he has received of us, and let him not permit himself to be deceived by any discourse, as coming from us. Or rather, let those who shall then be in the world keep their faith, remaining firm in their belief and attachment to the Church of Christ, until antichrist, that man of iniquity, shall be taken away. Calmet.—According to others, it is an admonition to the faithful not to be beguiled during this day of trial by such, as under the garb of religion, and with an ostentatious parade of zeal for the holy Scriptures, seek to deceive them. When the mystery of sin shall be revealed, then shall we plainly discover that apostacy from the Catholic Church is the obvious and certain road to a dereliction of all religious principle; yes, to antichristianism and to atheism. A.

VER. 8. Spirit of his mouth, &c. S. Paul makes use of this expression, to shew the ease with which God can put down the most powerful from his seat. He does it likewise to give the Thessalonians a right notion of the man of sin. For as he before told them, he would cause himself to be adored, they might have imagined him more upon an equality with the Almighty. These words, however, quite take away that meaning. He shall strike the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked. Isai. xi. 4. &c. Calmet.

VER. 10. God shall send them the operation of error.†† That is, says S. Chrys. and S. Cyril, he will permit them to be led away with illusions, by signs, and lying prodigies, which the devil shall work by antichrist, &c. Wi.—God shall suffer them to be deceived by lying wonders, and false miracles, in punishment (1563)

10 And in all seduction of iniquity to them that perish: because they receive not the love of the truth that they might be saved. Therefore God shall send them the operation of error, to believe a lie.

11 That all may be judged, who have not believed the truth, but have consented to iniquity.

12 But we ought to give thanks to God always for you, brethren beloved of God, for that God hath chosen you first-fruits unto salvation, in sanctification of the Spirit; and belief of the truth:

13 Whereunto also he hath called you by our gospel, unto the purchasing of the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ.

14 Therefore, brethren, stand firm; and hold the traditions which you have learned, whether by word, or by our epistle.

15 Now our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and God and our Father who hath loved us, and hath given us everlasting consolation, and good hope in grace, 16 Exhort your hearts, and confirm you in every good work and word.

CHAP. III.

He begs their prayers, and warns them against idleness.

FOR ^athe rest, brethren, pray for us, that the word of God may run and may be glorified, even as among you:

2 And that we may be delivered from troublesome and evil men: for all men have not faith.

3 But God is faithful, who will strengthen and keep you from evil.

4 And we have confidence concerning you in the

^a Ephes. vi. 19. Coloss. iv. 3.

of their not entertaining the love of truth. Ch.—The end God proposes is the judgment and condemnation of such as reject the proffered light. This is the march of sin, according to S. Tho. Aquin. on this place. In the first place a man, in consequence of his first sin, is deprived of grace, he then falls into further sins, and ends with being eternally punished. Hence it happens that his new sins are a punishment of his former transgressions; because God will permit the devil to do these things. Deus mittet, quia Deus Diabolum facere ista permittet. S. Aug. lib. xx. de Civ. Dei. c. 19.

VER. 12. That God hath chosen you first-fruits. Called you the first, or before many others, by his eternal decree, to the faith, whilst he hath left others in darkness and infidelity. Wi.

VER. 14. Traditions, . . . whether by word, or by our epistle. Therefore, says S. Chrys. the apostles did not deliver all things that were to be believed, by writing; (Wi.) but many things by word of mouth only, which have been perpetuated by tradition, and these traditions, no less than the writings of the apostles, are deserving of faith. Ουτως δὲ κακῶς, καὶ τὰ αὐτῶν διδάσκοντα. S. Chrysos. hic.

* V. 1. Et nostras congregationis in ipsum, καὶ ἡμῶν ἐκκλησίαν ἐν αὐτῷ.

† V. 3-4. Nisi venerit discessio primum, ἡ ἀποστασία. S. Hier. (Ep. ad Agasiam. q. 11. t. 4. p. 209) Ἀποστασία, inquit . . . ut omnes Gentes, quæ Rom. imperio subjacent, recedant ab eis.

‡ Ibid. S. Chrys. (ἀγ. δ. p. 235) says that by these words, you know what is desired, is probably understood the Roman empire, &c. and Tertull. (l. de Resur. Carnis. c. xxiv. p. 340) on these words, till taken out of the way, donec de medio fiat, Quis nisi Romanorum status?

§ Ibid. S. Chrys. (ἀγ. γ. p. 232) τί ἐστιν ἡ ἀποστασία αὐτοῖς καλεῖ τὸν Ἀντίχριστον. See Theodoret on this place.

|| Ibid. S. Cyr. of Jerusalem (C. xv) says, this apostasy is from the true faith and good works: ἀπὸ τῆς ἡ ἀποστασία. S. Anselm and others mention both expositions, i. e. from the Roman empire, or from the faith.

¶ Ibid. S. Aug. Ego prorsus quid dixerit, me fateor ignorare . . . suspiciones tamen hominum, quas vel audire, vel legere potui, non tacebo, &c. Quidam putant hoc de Imperio dictum esse Romano, &c.

 Ibid. Ὁ ἀνθρώπος τῆς ἀμαρτίας, ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, ὁ ἀντικείμενος, &c. ille homo peccati, ille filius perditionis: the Greek articles sufficiently denote a particular man.

†† V. 7. Mysterium jam operatur iniquitatis, τὸ μυστήριον ὅθι ἐνεργεῖται.

‡‡ V. 10. Mittet illis Deus operationem erroris, πλῆμει, &c. S. Cyr. Hier. Cat. 5. ἐνεργεῖται μὴναι. See also S. Chrys. ἀγ. δ. p. 236.

§§ V. 14. S. Chrys. 237. ἐντρέθεν δέλλον, &c.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. May run. That is, may spread itself, and have free course. Ch.

(1564)

Lord, that the things which we command, you both do, and will do.

5 And the Lord direct your hearts, in the charity of God, and in the patience of Christ.

6 And we charge you, brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you withdraw yourselves from every brother walking disorderly, and not according to the tradition which they have received of us.

7 For yourselves know how you ought to imitate us: for we were not disorderly among you:

8 ^bNeither did we eat any man's bread for nothing but in labour and in toil working night and day, lest we should be burthensome to any of you.

9 Not as if we had not the power; but that we might give ourselves a pattern to you to imitate us.

10 For also when we were with you, we declared this to you, that if any man will not work, neither let him eat.

11 For we have heard that there are some among you who walk disorderly, working not at all, but curiously meddling.

12 Now we charge them that are such, and beseech them by the Lord Jesus Christ, that working with silence, they would eat their own bread.

13 ^cBut you, brethren, be not weary in well-doing.

14 And if any man obey not our word by this epistle, note that man, and do not keep company with him, that he may be ashamed:

15 Yet do not regard him as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother.

16 Now the Lord of peace himself, give you everlasting peace in every place. The Lord be with you all.

^b Acts xx. 34. 1 Cor. iv. 12. 1 Thes. ii. 9. — ^c Gal. vi. 9.

VER. 2. From troublesome, or importunate men. In the Greek, is signified men who act unreasonably, absurdly, &c. Wi.—For all men have not faith. Faith is a gift of God, which he is not obliged to give but to whom he will. S. Paul here assures us that he finds nothing but obstacles in his great work, nothing but enemies of the truth, and nothing but men who resist the inspirations and calls of God, opposing the preaching of the gospel. He exhorts them not to be scandalized at what they see him suffer, but to return thanks to God, who has vouchsafed to call them, giving them an understanding and docile heart. Calmet.

VER. 3. From evil. It may either signify evil things, or the evil one, the devil. Wi.

VER. 5. Or, according to the Greek, may the Lord direct and carry your hearts to the love of God, and to the expectation of Jesus Christ.

VER. 6. Charge, or declare; or by the Greek, we command.—In the name of our Lord. This may signify a separation by excommunication. Wi.—That you withdraw, &c. S. Chrysostom upon this place, S. Austin, Theophylactus, and others understand S. Paul as speaking of a kind of excommunication. But S. Chrys. on v. 13. and 14. seems to restrain its meaning to a prohibition for the guilty to speak to any body, unless they spoke to him, if their conversation tended to exhort him to repentance. Theophylactus likewise remarks that this punishment was formerly much dreaded, though now not in use.

VER. 8. Burthensome. By the Greek, he understands those who being idle, and not keeping themselves employed, lead a disorderly life. Wi.

VER. 9. If I, to whom you are indebted for the preaching of the gospel, have yielded my claims, unwilling to receive any thing from you, and even labouring with my own hands for the necessities of life, how are those to be borne with who do nothing, and yet will be supported at another's expense? for S. Paul had witnessed amongst them some of this idle disposition. Estius.

VER. 10. Not work. But prying with curiosity into other men's notions. He that is idle, saith S. Chrys. will be given to curiosity. Wi.—The apostles, like our Lord, were fond of introducing popular sayings or axioms. Another, and not unlike the former, is found in one of the Jewish rabbies, Zeror:

Qui non laboraverit in Sabbato, ne edat in Sabbato.

VER. 12. Eat their own bread, which they work for, and deserve, not that of others. Wi.

VER. 14. Here the apostle teaches that our pastors must be obeyed, and not only secular princes; and with respect to such as will not be obedient to their spiritual governors, the apostle, (as S. Austin affirmeth) ordains that they be corrected by admonition, by degradation, or excommunication. Cont. Donat. post Collat. c. iv. 20. & l. de corp. & grat. c. iii.

VER. 15. Do not regard him as an enemy. A necessary instruction for those whom Providence has placed over others, to admonish and correct them, but with charity and peace; so that we neither be, nor give them occasion to think we are their enemies. Wi.—He is your brother; compassionate his weakness;

17 The salutation of Paul with my own hand: which is the sign in every epistle: so I write.

he is a sick member of the same body of which you are one of the members; the greater his infirmity, the greater should be your charity and anxiety for his cure; the greater excommunication separated the delinquent from the communion of the Church, making him in our regard as a heathen or a publican. But he is not here speaking of this kind, for he allows the faithful to speak to him for his spiritual advantage. Calmet.

VER. 17. The salutation of, &c. The apostle gives them this caution, for fear the faithful might be deceived by fictitious letters. For they had already received one of this kind, which had terrified them, by foretelling that the day of judgment was at hand. This deception he is here anxious to remove, signing the present communication with his own hand, and sealing it with his own seal. For although the rest of the epistle had been written by another, these words to the end were written by himself. Estius.—All the civilities of this great doctor of grace terminate in wishing it to his friends. This is his genuine character, because it is the love and continual effusion of his heart. V.—Amen. This the congregation added after the epistle had been read, and from this circumstance alone has it found a place here. Polus synopsis Criticorum, p. 1003 vol. 4.

18 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO TIMOTHY.

S. PAUL, passing through Lycaonia, about the year 51, some of the brethren at Derbe or Lystra recommended to him a disciple, by name Timothy, who from his infancy had studied the Holy Scriptures. S. Paul took him, making him his companion and fellow-labourer in the gospel: and not to offend the Jews, who could not be ignorant that Timothy's father was a Gentile, he caused him to be circumcised. Afterwards he ordained him bishop of Ephesus. Wi.—S. Paul writes this epistle to his beloved Timothy, to instruct him in the duties of a bishop, both in respect to himself and to his charge; and that he ought to be well informed of the good morals of those on whom he was to impose hands: Impose not hands lightly upon any man. He tells him also how he should behave towards his clergy. This epistle was written about thirty-three years after our Lord's ascension; but where it was written is uncertain: the more general opinion is, that it was in Macedonia. Ch.—After his epistles to the Churches, now follow those to particular persons; to Timothy and Titus, who were bishops, and to Philemon. Timothy was the beloved disciple of S. Paul, whom he frequently styles his son; but it is not certain that they were at all related. After having accompanied the apostle in many of his travels, the latter at last ordained him bishop, and fixed him permanently at Ephesus. Shortly after he wrote him this epistle, to instruct him in the episcopal duties, as he was but young for those great functions. He might be then about thirty-five. He mentions, likewise, in short the chief heresies which were then making mischief at Ephesus, and gives regulations and instructions for different states of persons in the Church. S. Timothy, who had been so long the disciple of S. Paul, and who never left him except when ordered by his master, could not be ignorant of his duties, but it was destined for the use of bishops of every age. Hence S. Austin says that such as are destined to serve the Church, should have continually before their eyes the two epistles to Timothy and that to Titus.

CHAP. I.

He puts Timothy in mind of his charge: and blesses God for the mercy he himself had received.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the commandment of God our Saviour, and Christ Jesus our hope.

2 *To Timothy, beloved son in faith. Grace, mercy, and peace from God the Father, and from Christ Jesus our Lord.

3 As I desired thee to remain at Ephesus when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some not to teach otherwise,

* Acts xvi. i.—b Infra iv. 7. 2 Tim. ii. 13.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Of God, our Saviour. God the Father is here called our Saviour, as also to Titus, (iii. 4.) being author of our salvation, as are all the three divine persons. Wi.—As this letter was to be read to the faithful, it was proper that S. Paul should speak with dignity and authority; and, as in the course of it he reproves false apostles who taught from themselves, he reminds them at the beginning of his letter, that he himself had entered the sacred ministry, and was an apostle by the command of God. Calmet.

VER. 2. To Timothy, beloved son in faith:* not that S. Paul first converted him, but that by his instructions he was settled in the principles of faith and of the Christian religion. Wi.

VER. 3. Not to teach otherwise;† i. e. than what I taught them. Wi.—The distinctive mark of a heretic, is the teaching differently from that which they found generally taught and believed in the unity of the Catholic Church before their time. The Greek word admirably expresses this; ἑτεροδιδασκαλῆν. Had Luther and the other original reformers attended to this, the peace of the Church would not have been so disturbed.

VER. 4. Nor to give heed to fables and endless genealogies,‡ or disputes about pedigrees from Abraham and David, which furnish questions rather than the edification of God, or godly edification.§ In some Greek MSS. is read, dispensation, or economy; and so the sense may be, which contribute nothing to the explaining the dispensation of grace in the mystery of Christ's incarnation. The construction of this and the former verse is imperfect, when it is said, as I desired thee, nothing being expressed corresponding to the word as. Some understand

4 ^b Nor to give heed to fables and endless genealogies: which furnish questions rather than the edification of God, which is in faith.

5 Now the end of the commandment is charity from a pure heart, and a good conscience, and an unfeigned faith.

6 From which things some going astray are turned aside to vain talk,

7 Desiring to be teachers of the law, understanding neither the things they say, nor whereof they affirm.

8 *But we know that the law is good, if a man use it lawfully:

Titus iii. 9.—c Rom. vii. 12.

it, as I desired before, so now in this epistle I desire it of thee again. The same difficulty occurs in the Greek as in the Latin text. Wi.—The Jews were accustomed to dispute and make endless questions concerning their origin from Abraham, Isaac, and other patriarchs, and concerning their different tribes, which their captivity had confounded together. Hence there was no end of their questions, how, when, why? which gave rise to many fables, to the great disturbance of the faithful. Whereas, they ought to have taken the shortest way to edification, which was to confine themselves to what was of faith. S. Ambrose.

VER. 5. The end of the commandment. By the precept many understand, as it were by way of a parenthesis, all that is here contained from the 3rd to the 18th verse, where precept is again repeated. We may understand by the commandment, the law of Moses in general, comprehending both the ceremonial part and the moral precepts, which are also the law of nature. The ceremonial part was designed to bring us to Christ by types and figures; and the moral precepts, which were also of the law of nature, or natural reason, were to bring men to observe them by punishments, and so were delivered against wicked criminals, ungodly, who worshipped not God; against the unjust, ¶ (in the Greek, lawless men) Sodomites, &c. Wi.

VER. 8. The law is good. Do not think I condemn the law of Moses, or those who observe it; it is good, if properly understood and rightly practised. I only blame those who make the law an occasion of disturbance; who, without understanding, pretend to be masters, and teach idle curiosities. Theodoret.

VER. 9. The law is not, &c. He means that the just man doth good, and 9 Knowing this, that the law is not made for the just man, but for the unjust and disobedient, for the ungodly, and for sinners, for the wicked, and defiled, for murderers of fathers, and murderers of mothers, for manslayers,

10 For fornicators, for them that defile themselves with mankind, for men-stealers, for liars, and for perjurers, and whatever else is contrary to sound doctrine,

11 Which is according to the gospel of the glory of the blessed God, which hath been committed to my trust.

12 I give thanks to him who hath strengthened me, Christ Jesus our Lord, that he deemed me faithful, putting me in the ministry:

13 Who before was a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and contumelious: but I obtained the mercy of God, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief.

14 Now the grace of our Lord hath abounded exceedingly with faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus.

15 A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation: *that Christ Jesus came into this world to save sinners, of whom I am the chief.

16 But for this cause have I obtained mercy: that in me first Christ Jesus might shew forth all patience, for the information of those who shall believe in him unto life everlasting.

* Mat. ix. 13. Mark ii. 17.

avoideth evil, not as compelled by the law, and merely for fear of the punishment appointed for transgressors, but voluntarily, and for the love of God and virtue; and would do so, though there were no law. Ch.—If all men were just, the law would be unnecessary, as laws are made against transgressors. Calmet.—It is not the just, but the unjust, that the law threatens, binds, and chastises. The just man obeys it without violence or constraint; he fulfils it with pleasure. S. Augus. lib. de Spiritu. &c.

VER. 13. Because I did it ignorantly in unbelief, or in incredulity. Not that we can think it an invincible and altogether an inculpable ignorance, such as would have made S. Paul blameless in the sight of God. It was through his pure mercy that he called S. Paul, when his great sins and false zeal made him a greater object of the divine mercy: and God in him was pleased to make known to all men his wonderful patience, that no sinners might despair. The grace of God was superabounding, or exceedingly abundant in him. Wi.

VER. 15. Christ Jesus, the true son of God, came into this world to save sinners, of whom (says S. Paul) I am the chief, the first, the greatest. Wi.

VER. 18. This precept I commend to thee. Some understand it a precept of what follows, that he should wage a good warfare against the enemies of God and of his salvation. Others refer it to the precept mentioned before, v. 5, to wit, that Timothy should charge all the new converts not to give ear to new teachers.—Prophecies. He seems to mean some particular predictions made by some who had the gift of prophecies, and who foretold that he should be a great minister of God. Wi.—The apostle reminds his disciple that he did receive him in the number of his disciples, and ordained him a ruler of the Church, in consequence of a prophecy; that is, a particular inspiration and revelation of the divine will. S. Chrysostom.

VER. 19. An evil lie is not unfrequently the leading principle of defection from the faith. The heart, not the mind, is generally the first corrupted.

VER. 20. I have delivered to Satan; whom I have excommunicated, that they may learn not to blaspheme, or speak against the truth of the faith. Theophylact.—The devil frequently, at that time, took possession of, or afflicted the excommunicated with diseases and other temporal evils. S. Chrysostom.

* V. 2. Dilecto, γυναικὶ φίλῳ. Some MSS. ἀγαπῶντι.

† V. 3. Ne aliter docerent, μη διαφορεῖσθαι, aliud docere.

‡ V. 4. Interminatis, ἀπεράτοις; infinitis, sine fine.

§ Ibid. Ædificationem Dei, οἰκοδομὰν Θεοῦ; which, I think, might as well be translated, godly edification. Some few MSS. οἰκονομίαν.

|| V. 5. Impiis, ἀσέβοις; indevotis, non colentibus Deum.

¶ Ibid. Injustis, ἀδικοῖς, sine lege.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Intercessions, as in the Prot. translation. If men's intercessions to God in favour of others, are no injury to Christ, as our mediator, how can it be any injury to Christ for the Angels and saints in heaven to pray or intercede to God for us? Wi.—S. Austin writes thus on this verse: By supplications are meant what are said before the consecration. By prayers, what are said in and after the consecration and communion, at mass, including the Pater Noster; which S. Jerom also says, our Lord taught his apostles to recite at the daily sacrifice of his body. l. iii. cont. Pelag. c. 5. By intercessions, what are said after the communion; and by thanksgivings, what both priest and people 17 Now to the king of ages, immortal, invisible, the only God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

18 This precept I commend to thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou war in them a good warfare,

19 Having faith and a good conscience, which some rejecting have made shipwreck concerning the faith:

20 Of whom is Hymenæus and Alexander: whom I have delivered to Satan, that they may learn not to blaspheme.

CHAP. II.

Prayers are to be said for all men: because God wills the salvation of all. Women are not to teach.

I DESIRE, therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions, and thanksgivings, be made for all men:

2 For kings, and for all who are in high station, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all piety and chastity.

3 For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God, our Saviour,

4 Who will have all men to be saved, and to come to the knowledge of the truth.

5 For there is one God, and one mediator of God and men, the man Christ Jesus:

6 Who gave himself a redemption for all, a testimony in due times:

give to God for so great a mystery then offered and received. ep. 60. ad Paulin. See S. Chrys. in hunc locum.

VER. 2. For kings, who were then heathens, this being in Nero's time. Wi.—Upon the happiness of the king generally depends that of his subjects. We pray for the emperors, says Tertullian, that God would grant them a long life, a secure throne, and a safe family, brave armies, a faithful council, and a just people. In fine, that he would grant them peace, and whatever else they could wish, either for themselves or their empire. Apologet. cap. 30.

VER. 4. All men to be saved. They contradict this, and other places of the Scripture, as well as the tradition and doctrine of the Catholic Church, who teach that God willeth only the salvation of the predestinated, of the elect, and as they say, of the first-born only; and that he died only for them, and not for all mankind. But if it is the will of God that all and every one be saved, and no one resists, or can frustrate the will of the Almighty, whence comes it that every one is not saved? To understand and reconcile divers places in the holy Scriptures, we must needs distinguish in God a will that is absolute and effectual, accompanied with special graces and assistances, and with the gift of final perseverance, by which, through his pure mercy, he decreed to save the elect, without any prejudice to their free will and liberty; and a will, which by the order of Providence, is conditional, and this not a metaphorical and improper will only, but a true and proper will, by which he hath prepared and offered graces and means to all men, whereby they may work their salvation; and if they are not saved, it is by their own fault, by their not corresponding with the graces offered, it is because they resist the Holy Ghost. Acts vii. 51. If in this we meet with difficulties, which we cannot comprehend, the words of S. Paul, (Rom. ix. 20.) O man, who art thou, who repliest against God? may be sufficient to make us work our salvation with fear and trembling. Wi.

VER. 5-6. One mediator of God and men, the man Christ Jesus: who gave himself a redemption for all. Take all these words together, and we may easily understand in what sense the apostle calls our Saviour Christ, the one and only mediator; that is, he is the only mediator, who at the same time is our Redeemer; the only mediator who could mediate betwixt God, the person offended by sin, and men the offenders; the only mediator who reconciled God to mankind by his incarnation and death, by the infinite price of his blood, by his own merits, independently of the merits of any other. All Catholics allow that the dignity and office of mediator in this sense belongs only to our Redeemer, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, made man to save us. The sense then of this place is, that as there is but one God, who created all, so there is but one mediator, who redeemed all. But yet the name of mediator is not so appropriated to Christ, but that in an inferior and different sense the Angels and saints in heaven, and even men on earth, who pray to God for the salvation of others, may be called mediators, intercessors, or advocates; and we may apply ourselves to them to pray, intercede, and mediate for us, without any injury to Christ, since we acknowledge that all their intercession and mediation is always grounded on the merits of Christ, our Redeemer. The same word for mediator, in the Greek as well as in the Latin, is given to Moses, God's servant. Gal. iii. 19. See also Deut. v. 5. The words of our Saviour himself, (Mat. xxiii.) taken according to the letter, contain an express prohibition of being called masters, or fathers; and this reason is given, because all men have one Father in heaven, and because Christians have one master, Christ. Yet no one can justly pretend 7 Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, (I say the truth, I lie not) a doctor of the Gentiles in faith and truth.

8 I will, therefore, that men pray in every place, lifting up pure hands without anger and strife.

9 *In like manner women also in decent apparel, adorning themselves with modesty and sobriety, and not with plaited hair, or gold, or pearls, or costly attire:

10 But as it becometh women professing piety, by good works.

11 Let the women learn in silence, with all subjection.

12 ^b But I permit not a woman to teach, nor to use authority over the man: but to be in silence.

13 ^c For Adam was first formed, then Eve:

14 ^d And Adam was not seduced, but the woman being seduced was in the transgression.

15 Yet she shall be saved by bearing children, if she continue in faith, and love, and sanctification with sobriety.

CHAP. III.

What sort of men are to be admitted into the clergy: the Church is the pillar of truth.

* 1 Pet. iii. 8.—^b 1 Cor. xiv. 34.—^c Gen. i. 27.

from thence, that in a different sense, a man may not be called father or master, without any injury to God, or to Christ. Wi.—Christ is the one and only mediator of redemption; who gave himself, as the apostle writes, a redemption for all. He is also the only mediator, who stands in need of no other to recommend his petitions to the Father. But this is not against our seeking the prayers and intercessions, as well of the faithful upon earth, as of the saints and Angels in heaven, for obtaining mercy, grace, and salvation, through Jesus Christ. As S. Paul himself often desired the help of the prayers of the faithful, without any injury to the mediators of Jesus Christ. Ch.—If there be other mediators among the Angels and saints, they are only so in subordination to the first, who by themselves have no right to mediation or favours, and who cannot demand them but through the merits of him who is our only essential mediator. Estius, Menoch, &c. Consult. Judg. iii. 9. 2 Esd. ix. 17. Acts vii. 35.—A redemption for all. Not only for the predestinated, not only for the just, not only for the faithful, but for all Gentiles and infidels: and therefore he says again, (c. iv. 10.) that Christ is the Saviour of all men, and especially of the faithful. See S. Aug.* and S. Chrysostom.† Wi.

VER. 8. How beautifully does S. Paul teach that modesty and chastity are the greatest ornaments of the female sex, not only in the sight of God and of Angels, but also of men, who although by their own neglect they have not always grace and courage sufficient to be virtuous themselves, cannot help admiring virtue wherever they see it in others. Even the pagan fully acknowledges the native attractions of virtue. Virtus per se placet: Virtute placentur with unborrowed charms.

VER. 11. In silence. See 1 Cor. xiv. 34. See S. Chrys.† Wi.

VER. 12. S. Paul only means in public. See note on v. 11. of the next chapter. It would appear from this regulation of the apostle, as well as from the writings of the earliest fathers, that the practice and condemnation of women interfering at all in spiritual affairs, is not new. Tertullian says: We do not permit a woman to teach, to baptize, or to arrogate to herself any part of the duty which belongs to man. De Veland. Virg. cap. 9.—The woman has tried once to teach, when she persuaded Adam to eat the forbidden fruit, and has wofully failed. Let her now be content to remain in silence, and subjection to man; (S. Chrys. hic.) as appears also from the order of the creation. See v. 13. Seduction began with Eve, a subject of profound humiliation for women; but this ought not to deprive them of confidence in God's mercy, nor take from them the hope of salvation. V.

VER. 13-14. Adam was first formed . . . and was not seduced. That is, was not at least seduced first, as the woman. Wi.

VER. 15. She shall be saved by bearing children, &c. and performing other duties of a wife, with a due subjection to her husband, taking care to serve God, and bring up her children in the faith of Christ, in piety, &c. Wi.—This would perhaps be more properly rendered, from the Greek, by the bringing up of her children in faith, charity, and holiness. This is the duty of the woman; upon the faithful discharge or neglect of which she must expect her salvation, or reprobation, to hang. Thus repairing the evil which the first of all women brought upon man, by seducing him to evil. V.

* V. 6. See S. Aug. (1 de Spi. et Lit. tom. x. c. 33. p. 118) Vult Deus omnes homines salvos fieri . . . non sic tamen, ut eis adimat Liberum Arbitrium, quo vel bene, vel male utentes, justissime judicentur. Quod cum sit, infideles quidem contra voluntatem Dei faciunt, cum ejus Evangelio non credunt.

† Ibid. S. Chrys. (δμ. ζ. p. 277) καὶ ὁ μὲν Χριστὸς καὶ ἀπὸ θανάτου ἐκείνου ἡλίου . . . ὁ δὲ ἄνθρωπος ἡλίου, ὅτι αὐτὸν ὁ μὲν ἡλίου ἐγένετο.

‡ V. 12. In silentio. S. Chrys. (λόγ. θ.) ἰδιόθεν ἀπαὶ ἡ γυνὴ, καὶ πάντα κατέστρεψε.

A FAITHFUL saying: If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work.

2 *It behoveth, therefore, a bishop to be blameless, the husband of one wife, sober, prudent, of good behaviour, chaste, given to hospitality, a teacher,

3 Not given to wine, no striker, but modest; not quarrelsome, not covetous, but

4 One that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all chastity.

5 But if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?

6 Not a neophyte: lest being puffed up with pride, he fall into the judgment of the devil.

7 Moreover he must have a good testimony from them who are without, lest he fall into reproach, and into the snare of the devil.

8 Deacons in like manner chaste, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre:

9 Holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience.

10 And let these also first be proved: and so let them minister, having no crime.

11 The women in like manner, chaste, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things.

† Gen. iii. 6.—Titus i. 7.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. He desireth a good work. No doubt but the work, or office, and charge of a bishop is good; but the motive of desiring to be a bishop not always good. However, in those days, the desire could scarce be grounded on temporal advantages. Wi.

VER. 2. A bishop (the same name then comprehended priest) to be blameless, as to life and conversation, adorned, (says S. Chrys.) with all virtues. See also S. Jerom in his letter to Oceanus.—The husband of one wife. It does not signify, that to be a bishop or priest he must be a married man; nor that he must be a man who has but one wife at a time; but that he must be a man who has never been married but once, or to one wife; because to be married more than once, was looked upon as a mark of too great an inclination to sensual pleasures. It is true, at that time a man might be chosen to be a bishop or priest whose wife was living, but from that time he was to live with her as with a sister. This S. Jerom testifies as to the discipline of the Latin Church. Wi.—The meaning is not that every bishop should have a wife, (for S. Paul himself had none) but that no one should be admitted to the holy orders of bishop, priest, or deacon, who had been married more than once. Ch.—Sober.† The Greek rather signifies watchful.—Chaste.‡ There is nothing for this in the Greek text at present, unless in some few MSS. Perhaps the ancient Latin interpreter added it, as being signified and comprehended in the other words.—Teacher: a doctor, as the Greek signifies. Wi.

VER. 3. Not given to wine, or a lover of wine. This, says S. Chrys. is less than to be a drunkard; for such are excluded from the kingdom of heaven, whoever they be. 1 Cor. vi. 10.—No striker. S. Chrys. understands not striving, fighting or quarrelling even with his tongue.—Not covetous of money, as appears by the Greek text. Wi.

VER. 4. Ruleth well his own house, &c. Before he is set over the Church, let him have given proofs of his talents for governing within his own house, by the regularity he has made all his dependants observe. In the infancy of the Church, it was frequently necessary to ordain the most regular fathers of families bishops, for want of others of a sufficient age who had observed perpetual continency.—With all chastity. The Greek implies grave, sober, temperate; but as this seems to answer what is said Tit. i. 6. it seems to be properly understood of chastity. Wi.

VER. 6. Not a neophyte. Not one newly as it were planted, or newly instructed in the faith. Wi.—That is, one lately baptized, a young convert. On —He fall into the judgment and condemnation of the devil, by returning to his evil habits he has so lately quitted. Wi.—Devil; i. e. into the same punishment to which the devil is condemned; (Theodore) or into the power of the devil, who will accuse him at the judgment. Calmet.—Or again, seeing him self so soon after his conversion raised to the first dignities of the Church, might imitate in his pride the devil, who could not bear the weight of glory in which God had created him. V.

VER. 8. Deacons, &c. By the Greek, grave, sober, &c. But why does he pass from bishops to deacons, not naming priests? S. Chrys. answers, that priests were comprehended under the name of bishops, their functions being much the same, except as to the ordination of the ministers of God. Wi.—After speaking of bishops he passes on to deacons, because priests are included in the former title; and every thing that he has said of the first, is applicable to them. Estius.

VER. 11. Women, &c. By the Greek again, sober, grave, &c. By these women are commonly understood such as had made a vow of not marrying, and who assisted at the baptism of women; (Wi.) i. e. deaconesses, who were women charged with the assistance, and sometimes with the instruction, of persons of 12 Let deacons be the husbands of one wife: who rule well their children, and their own houses.

13 For they that have ministered well, shall purchase to themselves a good degree, and much confidence in the faith, which is in Christ Jesus.

14 These things I write to thee, hoping that I shall come to thee shortly.

15 But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.

16 And evidently great is the mystery of piety, which was manifested in the flesh, was justified in the spirit, appeared to Angels, hath been preached to the Gentiles, is believed in the world, is taken up in glory.

CHAP. IV.

He warns him against heretics; and exhorts him to the exercise of piety.

NOW the Spirit manifestly saith, *that in the last times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to spirits of error, and doctrines of devils.

2 Speaking lies in hypocrisy, and having their conscience seared,

3 Forbidding to marry, to abstain from meats, which God hath created to be received with thanksgiving by the faithful, and by them that have known the truth.

* 2 Tim. iii. 8. 1 Pet. iv. 8. Jude 1, 18.

their own sex. V.—Not given to detraction, or calumnies, as in the Greek. A necessary admonition. Wi.

VER. 15. The pillar and ground of the truth. By the promises of Christ to direct his Church by the infallible spirit of truth; (see John xvi. 7. Mat. xxviii. 20. &c. Wi.) and, therefore, the Church of the living God can never uphold error, nor bring in corruptions, superstition, or idolatry. Ch.—That the Church, the pillar and ground of truth, is to be conducted by the constant superintendence and guidance of the Holy Spirit into all truth to the consummation of days, every one whose mind is not strangely prejudiced may easily discover in various places of the inspired writings.

VER. 16. Mystery of piety, meaning the mystery of the incarnation of the Son of God: and so in most Greek copies, and in S. Chrys. we read, God appeared in the flesh.—Taken up into glory, by Christ's glorious ascension into heaven. Wi.—After having spoken of the grandeur and infallibility of the Church, the apostle takes occasion from it to extol the great mystery of love, the incarnation and redemption of man. By this mystery the Second Person of the blessed Trinity became manifested in the flesh, justifying or proving his divinity by the virtue of the Holy Spirit appearing in his miracles, made known to the Angels, who were his messengers to bear the tidings to man, or assisting spirits to wait upon him, as at the nativity, in the desert, the agony, &c. preached to the world, and at length consummated to the world by his ascension into glory. Calmet et alii.

* V. 2. Unius uxoris virum, i. e. non bigamum. See S. Chrys. p. 285.

† Ibid. Sobrium, σώφρων. Vigilantem.

‡ Ibid. Pudicum: some Greek MSS. σεμνόν.

§ V. 3. Cupidum, ἀφιλάργυρον.

|| V. 11. Non detrahentes, μη διαβάλλονς.

¶ V. 16. Quod manifestatum est; Θεὸς ἐφανερώθη ἐν σαρκί. See S. Chrys.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. In the last times. Lit. last days; i. e. hereafter, or in days to come.—To spirits of error and doctrines of devils; or, to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, as in the Prot. translation. The sense must be, that men shall teach false doctrine by the suggestion of the devil. Wi.

VER. 2. Their conscience seared; hardened: a metaphor from the custom of burning malefactors with a hot iron. Wi.

VER. 3. Forbidding to marry, to abstain from meats, &c. Here says S. Chrys.* are foretold and denoted the heretics called Encratites, the Marcionites, Manicheans, &c. who condemned all marriages as evil, as may be seen in S. Irenæus, Epiphanius, S. Aug. Theodoret, &c. These heretics held a god who was the author of good things, and another god who was the author or cause of all evils; among the latter they reckoned marriages, fleshmeats, wine, &c. The doctrine of Catholics is quite different, when they condemn the marriages of priests and of such as have made a vow to God to lead always a single life; or when the Church forbids persons to eat flesh in Lent, or on fasting-days, unless their health require it. We hold that marriage in itself is not only honourable, but a sacrament of divine institution. We believe and profess that the same only true God is the author of all creatures which are good of themselves; that all eatables are to be eaten with thanksgiving, and none of them to be rejected, as coming from the author of evil. When we condemn priests for marrying, it is for breaking their vows and promises made to God of living unmarried, and of leading a 4 For every creature of God is good, and nothing to be rejected that is received with thanksgiving:.

5 For it is sanctified by the word of God and prayer.

6 Proposing these things to the brethren, thou shalt be a good minister of Christ Jesus, nourished up in the words of faith, and of the good doctrine to which thou hast attained.

7 ^b But avoid foolish and old wives' fables: and exercise thyself to piety.

8 For bodily exercise is profitable to little: but piety is profitable to all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come.

9 A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance.

10 For we labour for this, and are reviled, because we hope in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of the faithful.

11 These things command, and teach.

12 Let no man despise thy youth, but be thou an example of the faithful, in word, in conversation, in charity, in faith, in chastity.

13 Till I come, attend to reading, to exhortation, and to doctrine.

14 Neglect not the grace which is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the imposition of the hands of the priesthood.

^b Supra i. 4. 2 Tim. ii. 23. Titus iii. 9.

more perfect life; we condemn them with the Scripture, which teaches us that vows made are to be kept; with S. Paul, who in the next chap. (v. 12) teaches us, that they who break such vows incur their damnation. When the Church, which we are commanded to obey, enjoins abstinence from flesh, or puts a restraint as to the times of eating on days of humiliation and fasting, it is by way of self-denial and mortification: so that it is not the meats, but the transgression of the precept, that on such occasions defiles the consciences of the transgressors. "You will object, (says S. Chrys.) that we hinder persons from marrying; God forbid," &c. S. Aug. (l. 80. cont. Faustum. c. vi.) "You see (says he) the great difference in abstaining from meats for mortification sake, and as if God was not the author of them." We may observe that God, in the law of Moses, prohibited swine's flesh and many other eatables; and that even the apostles, in the Council of Jerusalem, forbade the Christians, (at least about Antioch) to eat at that time blood and things strangled; not that they were bad of themselves, as the Manicheans pretended. Wi.—S. Paul here speaks of the Gnostics and other ancient heretics, who absolutely condemned marriage and the use of all kind of meat, because they pretended that all flesh was from an evil principle: whereas the Church of God so far from condemning marriage, holds it to be a holy sacrament, and forbids it to none but such as by vow have chosen the better part and prohibits not the use of any meats whatsoever, in proper times and seasons, though she does not judge all kinds of diet proper for days of fasting and penance. Ch.—We may see in the earliest ages of Christianity, that some of the most infamous and impure heretics that ever went out of the Church, condemned all marriage as unlawful, at the same time allowing the most unheard of abominations: men without religion, without faith, without modesty, without honour. See S. Clem. lib. 3. Strom.

VER. 5. It is sanctified by the word of God, and prayer. That is, praying that they may not, by the abuse we make of them, be an occasion to us of sinning and offending God. Wi.—The use of all kinds of meat is in itself good; but if it were not, it would become sanctified by the prayer which we usually pronounce over it, and by the word of Christ, who has declared that not that which enters the mouth defiles a man. Calmet.

VER. 7. Old wives' fables.† Some understand the groundless traditions of the Jews; others the ridiculous fictions of Simon Magus and his followers. In the Greek they are called profane fables. Wi.

VER. 8. Some think S. Paul alludes in this verse to the corporal exercises of the wrestlers, which procured them but a little short renown, whereas the works of piety have a more lasting reward. Menochius. Tirin.—Corporal exercises of temperance, mortification, &c. are good, but not to be compared with the spiritual virtues of charity, piety, &c. D. Bernard.

VER. 10. Of all men, and especially of the faithful, who have received the grace of faith. Wi.

VER. 12. Let no man despise thy youth. That is, let thy behaviour be such that no one can have occasion to despise thee. He seems then about the age of forty. Wi.

VER. 13. Attend to reading, &c. He recommends to him the reading of the Holy Scriptures; which, says S. Amb. (l. 3. de fid. c. vii.) is the book of priests. Wi.

VER. 14. Neglect not the grace. The Greek seems to imply the gifts of the Holy Ghost, given by the sacraments,† by prophecy; which may signify, when the gift of preaching or of expounding prophets was bestowed upon thee.—With 15 Meditate on these things: be wholly in these things: that thy proficiency may be manifest to all.

16 Attend to thyself and to doctrine: be earnest in them. For in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee.

CHAP. V.

He gives him lessons concerning widows; and how he is to behave to his clergy.

AN ancient man rebuke not, but entreat him as a father; young men, as brethren:

2 Old women, as mothers; young women, as sisters, in all chastity.

3 Honour widows, who are widows indeed.

4 But if any widow have children, or grandchildren, let her learn first to govern her own house, and to make a return of duty to her parents: for this is acceptable before God.

5 But she that is a widow indeed, and desolate, let her hope in God, and continue in supplications and prayers night and day.

6 For she that liveth in pleasures, is dead while she is living.

7 And this give in charge, that they may be blameless.

8 But if any man have not care of his own, and especially of those of his house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

the imposition of the hands of the§ priesthood. Some expound it, when thou didst receive the order of priesthood, or wast made bishop: but the sense rather seems to be, when the hands of priests of the first order (i. e. of bishops) were laid upon thee, according to S. Chrysostom. Wi.—S. Austin sayeth that no man can doubt whether holy orders be a sacrament; and that no one may argue that he uses the term improperly, and without due precision, he joineth this sacrament in nature and name with baptism. Cont. Ep. Parmen. l. 2. c. xiii. S. Ambrose on this verse understands in the words imposition of hands, all the holy action and sacred words done and spoken over him when he was made a priest; where by, says the saint, he was designed to the work, and received authority that he durst offer sacrifice in our Lord's stead unto God.

* V. 8. S. Chrys. ὁ μὴ ὁ κολύμεν, μὴ γίνεσθαι. S. Hierom, (l. 1. cont. Jovinian. tom. 4. p. 156) Si nupserit Virgo, non peccavit . . . non illa Virgo, quæ se semel Dei cultui dedicavit; harum enim si qua nupserit, habebit damnationem. See S. Aug. (l. 80. cont. Faust. c. vi.) both as to marriage and meats.

† V. 7. Βεβήλους.

‡ V. 14. Gratiam, χάρισμα.

§ Ibid. Presbyterii, τοῦ πρεσβυτερίου. See Luke xxii. 26. and Acts xxii. 5. where πρεσβυτεριον is taken for a number of Jewish priests.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. *An ancient man. Here the word presbyter is not taken as in other places, for a bishop or priest, but for an elderly man, who is otherwise to be dealt with than young men. Wi.—We cannot sufficiently admire the tenderness and prudence of all this saint's counsels. Reproof, under any circumstances, is always sufficiently painful, without being accompanied by harsh and unfeeling words and manners. Age, though not exempt from fault, should always be treated with tenderness and respect.

VER. 2. A just medium must be observed in the guidance of the sex, avoiding equally an indiscreet severity and an affection too tender and bordering on sensuality. A just diffidence in self is the best security.—All chastity refers to the heart, eyes, ears, words, looks, with the precautions of times and places.

VER. 3. Honour widows. To honour, here means to relieve and maintain. Wi.

VER. 4. Let her† learn first, &c. He gives this as a mark to know if widows deserve to be maintained out of the common stock; if they have been careful of their own family, and to assist their parents, if yet alive. In most Greek copies, and in the Syriac, is read, let them learn; i. e. let the children and grandchildren learn to govern their family, and to assist their parents, when they are widows; that, as it is said v. 16, the Church may not be burthened with maintaining them. Wi.—Let her render to her children the same good services she has received from her parents, that she may also expect from them what is her due as mother. Theodoret.

VER. 5. She that is a widow indeed, and desolate, (destitute of help, as the Greek word implieth) may be maintained; and then let her be constant in prayers and devotions night and day. Wi.—Every Christian soul is a widow of Jesus Christ, who has been forcibly torn from her: and in her communications with heaven she ought to offer up an afflicted and humbled heart—the heart of a widow. It is thus she will avoid the dangers of the world, and secure true life in unchangeable felicity. A.

VER. 6. For she that liveth in pleasures, (i. e. that seeks to live in ease and plenty) is dead† while she is living, by the spiritual death of her soul in sin. See S. Chrys. with no less eloquence than piety, expounding this riddle, as he terms it, to wit, what it is to be at the same time alive and dead. Wi.

9 Let a widow be chosen, not under threescore years of age, who hath been the wife of one husband,

10 Having testimony for good works, if she have educated children, if she have exercised hospitality, if she have washed the saints' feet, if she have ministered to them that suffer tribulation, if she have diligently followed every good work.

11 But the younger widows avoid: For when they have grown wanton in Christ, they will marry:

12 Having damnation, because they have made void their first faith.

13 And withal being idle, they learn to go about from house to house: not only idle, but tattlers also, and inquisitive, speaking things which they ought not.

14 I will, therefore, that the younger should marry, bear children, be mistresses of families, give no occasion to the adversary to speak evil.

15 For some are already turned aside after Satan.

16 If any of the faithful have widows, let him relieve them, and let not the church be burthened: that there may be sufficient for them who are widows indeed.

17 Let the priests who rule well, be esteemed worthy of double honour: especially they who labour in the word and doctrine.

VER. 8. He hath denied the faith, (not in words, but in his actions) and is worse than an infidel; nay, even than brutes, that take care of their young ones. Wi.—Faith may be renounced either by words or by actions, when our conduct shews that in our hearts we really do not believe what would otherwise influence our lives. Calmet.—We have a horror of the name of apostacy, and fear not its works. Is not this to be a Christian in appearance, and an infidel in heart?

VER. 9. Not under threescore years of age. Some think he speaks only of such a widow as was placed over all the rest: but the common exposition is of all such widows as were maintained in that manner, who made a vow of chastity, who assisted the ministers of the Church in looking to the poor, and in the administering baptism to women.—Who hath been the wife one husband; i. e. hath never been married but once. Wi.

VER. 11. As for the younger widows,§ admit them not into that number; for when they have grown wanton in Christ, which may signify in the Church of Christ, or as others translate, against Christ; when they have been nourished in plenty, indulging their appetite in eating and drinking, in company and conversation, in private familiarities, and even sometimes in sacrilegious fornications against Christ and their vows, they are for marrying again. See S. Jerom. Wi.

VER. 12. Having, or incurring and making themselves liable to damnation, by a breach of their first faith, their vow or promise, (Wi.) by which they had engaged themselves to Christ. Ch.

VER. 13. Idle, &c. He shews by what steps they fall. Neglecting their prayers, they give themselves to idleness; they go about visiting from house to house; they are carried away with curiosity to hear what passes, and speak what they ought not of their neighbour's faults. Wi.—The young widow that bears a near resemblance with this portrait, is not less to be lamented on her own account than feared and shunned on account of others.

VER. 14. The younger† (widows) should marry. They who understand this of a command or extortion to all widows to marry, make S. Paul contradict himself, and the advice he gave to widows 1 Cor. vii. where he says, (v. 40.) She (the widow) will be more happy if she so remain according to my counsel; and when it is there said, I would have all to be as myself. [See the notes on those places.] He can therefore only mean such young widows, of whom he is speaking, that are like to do worse. Thus it is expounded by S. Jerom to Sabina:† “Let her rather take a husband than the devil.” And in another epistle, to Ageruchia: “It is better to take a second husband than many adulterers.” S. Chrys. on this verse: I will, or would have such to marry, because they themselves will do it. See also S. Aug.†† de Bono viduitatis. c. viii. Wi.

VER. 15. For some are already turned aside after Satan, by breaking the vows they had made. “Yet it does not follow, (says S. Aug. in the same place) that they who abstain not from such sins may marry after their vows. They might indeed marry before they vowed; but this being done, unless they keep them they justly incur damnation.” “Why is it, (says he again, on Ps. lxxv.) they made void their first faith? but that they made vows, and kept them not. But let not this (says he) make you abstain from such vows, for you are not to comply with them by your own strength; you will fall, if you presume on yourselves; but if you confide in him to whom you made these vows, you will securely comply with them.” How different was the doctrine and practice of the first and chief of the late pretended reformers, who were many of them apostates after such vows? Wi.

VER. 17–18. The priests, or the ancient ministers, (i. e. bishops, priests, &c.) (1569)

18 For the Scripture saith: "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn. And: ^bThe labourer is worthy of his hire.

19 Against a priest receive not an accusation, but under two or three witnesses.

20 Them that sin reprove before all: that the rest also may have fear.

21 I charge thee, before God, and Christ Jesus, and the elect Angels, that thou observe these things without prejudice, doing nothing by declining to either side.

22 Impose not hands lightly upon any man, neither be partaker of other men's sins. Keep thyself chaste.

23 Do not still drink water, but use a little wine for thy stomach's sake, and thy frequent infirmities.

24 Some men's sins are manifest, going before to judgment: and some men they follow after.

25 In like manner also good deeds are manifest; and they that are otherwise cannot be hid.

CHAP. VI.

Duties of servants. The danger of covetousness. Lessons for the rich.

WHOSOEVER are servants under the yoke, let them count their masters worthy of all honour, lest the name and doctrine of the Lord be blasphemed.

2 But they who have believing masters, let them not despise them, because they are brethren: but serve deserve a double honour; i. e. to be more liberally supplied and maintained by the flock, especially when they labour in preaching the word.—Thou shalt not muzzle, &c. See 1 Cor. ix. 9. Wi.—It is the obligation of the faithful to provide a decent maintenance for their pastors, and the duty of pastors to be content with little. Happy the church where there is no further difference found than between the liberality of the former and the disinterestedness of the latter!

^a Deut. xxv. 4. ¹ Cor. ix. 9.—^b Mat. x. 10. Luke x. 7.

VER. 19. Against a priest. The word presbyter†† is commonly here expounded of bishops and priests; though S. Chrys. understands it of men advanced in age.—Receive not an accusation; i. e. do not sit as judge, nor hearken to such informations. Wi.

VER. 20. Them that sin, so as to be public criminals, &c. Wi.

VER. 21. Without prejudice§§ for or against any one, not declining to either side, holding the scales of justice equally. Wi.

VER. 22. Impose not hands lightly upon any man, in promoting him to be a minister of God by the sacrament of orders, unless he be duly qualified.—Neither in this be partaker of other men's sins, as they make themselves who ordain others rashly. Wi.

VER. 24–25. Some men's sins are manifest, &c. These two verses seem connected with the admonition before given, as to ordaining ministers, some men's sins and evil life being so manifest, that they are certain to be rejected.—And some men they follow after: they appear not till after a trial and examination.—In like manner also good deeds, and good lives of some men, are so manifest, that they are easily admitted. And such as are otherwise, (that is, when they are desirous to conceal their virtues) they cannot be hidden: by an examination and trial they will appear. Wi.—This refers to what he had said before, that he ought not easily to ordain others, but pass his judgment with scrutiny and impartiality. But there are some whom the public voice already condemns; their crimes are manifest: and there are others, though bad, whose crimes cannot be proved without examination. Calmet.—S. Basil thinks it refers to the general judgment. Many both good and bad actions are at present manifest: others shall not be known till the day of judgment. Hypocrites are reserved to be judged by the Lord, as we cannot pronounce upon their actions. S. Basil, lib. de Virgin.

* V. 1. Seniori, presbytero.

† V. 4. Discat, in most Greek copies, discant, μανθάνωσαν. Yet S. Chrys. in his commentary, (λέγ. γ.) expounds it of the widow.

† V. 6. S. Chrys. (λέγ. γ. p. 301.) τοῦτο φησὶν αἰνῆμα, &c.

§ V. 11. Cum luxuriante fuerint in Christo, ὅταν γὰρ καταστρηνίδωσι τοῦ Χριστοῦ. See Apoc. xvii. 7, 9. It is a metaphor from horses not to be governed. See S. Hier. Ep. ad Ageruchiam. tom. iv. part 2. p. 741. τοῦ Χριστοῦ, i. e. contra Christum, say Erasmus and Arius Montanus. In injuriam viri sui Christi, says S. Jerom.

|| V. 14. Volo juniores nubere, βόλομαι νεωτέρας γαμεῖν.

¶ Ibid. S. Hier. (Ep. ad Sabinam, t. iv. p. 2. p. 669.) maritum potius accipiat quam diabolum. Ibid. (Ep. ad Ageruchiam. p. 741.) multo tolerabilius habere secundum virum, quam plures adulteros.

 Ibid. S. Chrys. (λέγ. ιε. p. 311.) βόλομαι, ἐπεὶ αὐτὰς βόλοντας.

†† Ibid. S. Aug. (de bono viduitatis. c. viii.) nubant antequam Deo voveant, quod nisi reddant, jure damnantur. And in Ps. lxxv. Quid est primam fidem irritam fecerunt? voverunt et non reddiderunt. And again S. Aug. Non stitis pigri ad vovendum. Non enim viribus vestris implebitis: deficientes, si de vobis presumitis, si autem de illo cui vovistis, vovete, securi reddetis.

them the rather, because they are faithful and beloved who are partakers of the benefit. These things teach, and exhort.

3 If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to the sound words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to that doctrine which is according to piety:

4 He is proud, knowing nothing, but sick about questions and strifes of words: from which arise envies, contentions, blasphemies, evil suspicions,

5 Conflicts of men corrupted in mind, and who are destitute of the truth, supposing gain to be piety.

6 But piety with sufficiency, is great gain.

7 *For we brought nothing into this world: and certainly we can carry nothing out.

8 ^aBut having food, and wherewith to be covered, with these we are content.

9 For they who wish to become rich, fall into temptation, and into the snare of the devil, and into many unprofitable and hurtful desires, which drown men in destruction and perdition.

10 For covetousness is the root of all evils; which some desiring, have erred from the faith, and have entangled themselves in many sorrows.

11 But thou, O man of God, fly these things: and pursue justice, piety, faith, charity, patience, meekness.

^c Job i. 21. ^d Eccl. 5. 14.—^e Prov. xxvii. 26.

†† V. 19. Adversus presbyterum, κατὰ πρεσβυτέρου. Et S. Chrys. (p. 813.) τὴν ἡλικίαν.

§§ V. 21. Sine præjudicio, χωρίς προκρίματος.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1–2. Let the name and doctrine of the Lord be blasphemed, or ill spoken of by infidels, when such as were converted refused to be servants.—Let them not despise them, &c. That is, they who were servants under Christian masters, ought to think themselves more happy on that account, being brethren, and partakers of the same benefit of faith and grace. Wi.—If servants be insolent and disobedient, their infidel masters will blaspheme the Christian religion, as if that were the cause of their disrespectful behaviour. And let them not be arrogant, or aspire to an equality with their Christian masters, under pretence that the profession of the same religion makes them brothers; but rather serve them with greater submission and affection, as partakers of the benefit of the same faith, the same baptism, the same hope, &c. Calmet.

*VER. 4. But sick about questions, unprofitable disputes, blasphemies, which may either signify against God, or railing one against another, conflicts, &c.† and dissensions of men corrupted in their minds: such is the character and description he gives of those ancient heretics, which applies to heretics in general. Wi.

VER. 5. Supposing gain to be piety.† The sense is the same, that they make a shew of piety only for gain-sake. Wi.

VER. 6. But piety with sufficiency, or when a man hath what is sufficient to support his necessities, is certainly great gain, is accompanied with the most valuable advantages, the treasure of a good conscience, peace of mind, the grace of God, and hereafter a recompense of eternal glory. Wi.—That man is certainly rich, however small his possession, if he desire nothing more below, and aspires eagerly after that blessing above, which alone can fill his heart. Mediocrity is an enviable state; it frees us from the dangers of riches, and from the temptations of extreme poverty: with this let us be content. Why should we fix our hearts on the fleeting possessions of the day: we had not them yesterday, and to-morrow they will not be ours; for as we were born so we must die.

VER. 9. For they who wish to become rich.‡ He does not say, as S. Chrys. observes, they who are rich; as persons may be rich, and make good use of their riches to God's honour, and the good of others. But such as would be rich, who seek riches, and have their heart and affections upon riches, fall into various temptations of injustice, of pride, and vanity, into hurtful lusts, which drown and plunge men into perdition, &c. Wi.

VER. 10. The root of all evils is covetousness.¶ or the love of money, as it is in the Greek; a covetous man being ready to sacrifice his soul for money. Wi.—This truth is verified and illustrated by the example of Judas, in the gospel; of Ananias and Saphira, in the Acts; of Demas, mentioned by S. Paul in his second epistle to Timothy; and many others, who have made shipwreck of their faith through eagerness to gain riches. Whoever seeks visible and terrestrial goods with great avidity, cannot be supposed to retain much faith in things that are celestial and invisible. He quits a future real and substantial good to seek for a delusive happiness that presents itself, but which will prove a source of present and future evils.

*VER. 11. But thou, O man of God. This, says S. Chrys. is one of the highest titles and commendations that can be given to any man. So are called Samuel, Elias, Eliseus. 1 K. ii. and ix. 3 K. xxxiii. Wi.

VER. 12. Fight the good fight. Lit. strive†† a good strife. S. Paul oftentimes 12 Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life whereunto thou art called, and hast confessed a good confession before many witnesses.

13 I charge thee before God, who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who gave testimony under Pontius Pilate, a good confession:

14 That thou keep the commandment without spot, blameless, unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:

15 Which in his times he shall shew, ^bwho is the Blessed and only Mighty, the King of kings, and Lord of lords:

16 Who only hath immortality, and inhabiteth light inaccessible, ^cwhom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and empire everlasting. Amen.

^a Mat. xxvii. 11. John xviii. 33, 37.—^b Apoc. xvii. 14. and xix. 16.

brings this comparison of men striving for a prize.—And hast confessed a good confession before many witnesses, not only when baptized, not only when thou wast ordained a bishop, but by thy constancy and sufferings and persecutions, says S. Chrys. though we know not the particulars. Wi.—Timothy had made profession of his faith at his baptism, at his ordination, and during the whole course of a life which, through many labours and persecutions, had been dedicated entirely to promote the faith. D. Thomas.—Like him let us also combat, if we aspire after the same triumph and prize.

VER. 13. Under Pontius Pilate, &c. Some expound it of the words and particular testimony Christ gave when he said he was king, but not of this world, who came to teach the truth. We may rather understand it with others, of all Christ taught and suffered under Pilate, or whilst he was governor of Judea. Wi.

VER. 14. That thou keep the commandment. Some understand that of fighting manfully; others of loving God; others rather comprehend all that S. Paul had commanded him, and all the instructions given.—Unto the coming of our Lord; ^{††}which coming, he in due time will shew. This is the construction by the Greek. Wi.—This coming will be desirable for Christians who have preserved or recovered their baptismal innocence, and for pastors who have faithfully fulfilled their ministry; but terrible, in the extreme, for all who have lived in the constant neglect and omission of their duties.

VER. 16. Who only hath immortality; i. e. is immortal of himself, and by his own nature.—Light inaccessible; to human eyes or understandings. Wi.

VER. 17. Charge the rich of this world not to confide in such uncertain goods; to strive to be rich in good works; to communicate ^{§§} in lending, assisting, giving to others, by which they will lay up an everlasting treasure. Wi.

VER. 20. O Timothy, keep that which is committed ^{||} to thy trust. He does not mean his charge of bishop, nor the graces of God, but the true and sound doctrine delivered to him either by writing or word of mouth, according to the common interpretation. See S. Chrys. Vincentius Lirinensis, Commonitorii, c. xvii. This is confirmed by the following words, avoiding the profane novelties ^{¶¶} of words: (in the Greek empty, vain, babbling). The apostle here condemns new words, which change the doctrine; but sometimes to express the ancient doctrine, new words may be found necessary, as those of trinity, incarnation, consubstantiality, transubstantiation, &c. as S. Athan. S. Aug. and others observed. See 2 Tim. i. 14.—Oppositions of knowledge falsely so ^{} called. S. Chrys. understands in particular the errors of the Gnostics, so called from the same Greek word, who were the successors of Simon Magus. But they perhaps not having the name

17 Charge the rich of this world not to be high-minded, ^anor to hope in uncertain riches, but in the living God (who giveth us abundantly all things to enjoy)

18 To do good, to be rich in good works, to distribute readily, to communicate.

19 To lay up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may obtain true life.

20 O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding the profane novelties of words, and oppositions of knowledge falsely so called,

21 Which some promising, have erred concerning the faith. Grace be with thee. Amen.

^c John i. 18. 1 John iv. 12.—^d Luke xii.

when S. Paul wrote, we may rather understand heretics in general, who all pretend to an uncommon knowledge in Scriptures, when they follow their own private judgment, and so fall from the faith. Wi.—Keep the deposit, viz. of faith, which has been committed to thee. Throughout this whole epistle the apostle beseeches Timothy, in the most earnest manner, as a guardian of the faith, to preserve it without change. He every where condemns sects, heresies, and changes in faith. It would be well for the modern religionists, to inform us and themselves, why S. Paul is so particular in insisting upon union of faith, under pain of damnation, if it was the intention of Christ that men should differ on questions of religion. Let them tell us what S. Paul means, or else say plainly that they differ from the apostle's religion, and have formed theirs upon a more liberal scale. A.

* V. 4. Languens, vocōv. Ægrotans; Erasmus, insaniens.

† Ibid. Conclitaciones, παρὰβίασις, exercitationes.

† V. 5. Existimantes quæstum esse pietatem, πορισμένον εἶναι τὴν εὐσέβειαν. In the ordinary Greek copies follows, ἀπίσταντο ἀπὸ τῶν τοιούτων, and so the Prot. translation, from which withdraw thyself. But Grotius and Dr. Wells leave them out, preferring those MSS. that agree with the Latin Vulgate and with the Syriac.

§ V. 9. Qui volunt divites fieri, οἱ βουλόμενοι. S. Chrys. (λόγ. εἰ. p. 321.) οὐκ ἀπλῶς εἶπεν, οἱ πλουτοῦντες, ἀλλ' οἱ βουλόμενοι.

|| Ibid. Mergunt, συλλέγουσι.

¶ V. 10. Cupiditas, φιλαργυρία, amor pecuniarum.

 V. 11. O homo Dei. See S. Chrys. (λόγ. εἰ. p. 321.) μέγα δέλωμα, &c. magna dignitas, &c.

†† V. 12. Certa bonum certamen, ἀγωνίζου τὸν καλὸν ἀγῶνα, which may be by running as well as by fighting.

‡ V. 14. Usque ad Adventum Domini, quem, &c. μέχρι τῆς ἐπιφανείας... ἦν, nct ἦν, and so must agree with adventum.

§§ V. 17. Communicare, κοινωνικὸς. See κοινωνεῖν, Rom. xii. &c.

|| V. 20. Depositum custodi, τὴν παρακαταθήκην φύλαξον. See S. Chrys. on these words.

¶¶ Ibid. Profanas vocum novitates; though all the Greek copies have now κακοφωνίας, vocum inanitates: the Latin interpreter must have read, κακοφωνίας.

 Ibid. Falsi nominis scientiæ, ψευδωνύμα γνώσεως. S. Chrys. (λόγ. εἰ.) τινὲς λαοὺς ἐκδιδόντες τότε Γνωστικῶς.

THE SECOND

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO TIMOTHY.

THE main subject and design of this epistle is much the same as the former; in it the apostle again instructs and admonishes Timothy in what belonged to his office, and also warns him to shun the conversation of those who had erred from the truth, describing at the same time their character. He tells him of his approaching death, and desires him to come speedily to him. It appears from this circumstance, that he wrote this second epistle in the time of his last imprisonment at Rome, and not long before his martyrdom. See Euseb. S. Jerom, and others cited by Tillemont, and by P. Mauduit, (Diss. xl.) where this historical fact is discussed at large. Ch. Wi.

CHAP. I.

He admonishes him to stir up the grace he received by his ordination, and not to be discouraged at his sufferings, but to hold firm the sound doctrine of the gospel.

PAUL, an apostle of Jesus Christ, by the will of God, according to the promise of life which is in Christ Jesus:

2 To Timothy, most beloved son, grace, mercy, peace from God the Father, and from Christ Jesus, our Lord.

3 I give thanks to God, whom I serve from my forefathers with a pure conscience, that without ceasing I have a remembrance of thee in my prayers, night and day.

4 Desiring to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy,

5 Calling to mind that faith which is in thee unfeigned, which also dwelt first in thy grandmother, Lois, and in thy mother, Eunice, and I am certain that in thee also.

6 For which cause I admonish thee, that thou stir up the grace of God, which is in thee, by the imposition of my hands.

7 ^aFor God hath not given us the spirit of fear: but of power, and of love, and of sobriety.

8 Be not thou, therefore, ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me, his prisoner: but labour with the gospel, according to the power of God:

9 Who hath delivered us and called us by his holy calling, ^bnot according to our works, but according to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the times of the world.

10 But now is made manifest, by the illumination of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who hath indeed destroyed

^a Rom. viii. 15.—^b Titus iii. 5.

CHAP. I. VER. 3. Whom I serve from my forefathers with a pure conscience. That is, have always served and worshipped the one true God, as my forefathers had done, which was true, even when he persecuted the Christians; though this he did not with a pure conscience, but with a false mistaken zeal; and his ignorance could not excuse him, after he might have known Christ. Wi.

VER. 5. Thy grandmother, Lois. The principal intention S. Paul seems to have had in writing this second epistle to Timothy, was, to comfort him under the many hardships under which he laboured for the faith of Christ. To this end he endeavours first to strengthen his faith, by calling to his mind the example given him in his grandmother, as also in his mother, Eunice. Some likewise think S. Paul is here exhorting Timothy to a desire of martyrdom, in the perfect discharge of his ministry, by his own example; as the same writers think it most probable that he was confined in prison at Rome, or at Laodicea, at the time he wrote this epistle. Dionysius Carthus.—Certain that in thee also.* Wi.

VER. 6. That thou stir up† the grace of God. In the Greek is a metaphor for fire that is blown up again.—Which is in thee by the imposition of my hands, when thou wast ordained bishop. Wi.—The grace, which S. Paul here exhorts Timothy to stir up in him, was the grace he had received by imposition of hands, either in his confirmation, or at receiving the sacrament of orders, being a bishop. This verse seems to shew that the imposition of hands is used in these two sacraments, as the essential matter of the sacraments, being the instrumental cause of the grace therein conferred. Dion. Carthus.

VER. 7. Of fear,‡ Of a cowardly fear, and want of courage.—Of sobriety,§ Though the Protestants here translate of a sound mind, yet they translate the same Greek word by sobriety in divers other places, as Acts xxvi. 25. 1 Tim. ii. 9 and 15. and c. iii. 2. Tit. i. 8. &c. Wi.

VER. 8. Labour with|| the gospel. That is, labour with me in preaching, &c. Or by the Greek, be partner with me in suffering. Wi.

VER. 10. By the illumination of our Saviour. That is, by the bright coming and appearing of our Saviour. Ch.

VER. 12. I am certain that he (God) is able to keep that which I have committed to him¶ against that day. That is, to the day of judgment. S. Paul here means that which he had committed, or as it were deposited in the hands of God; to wit, the treasure of an eternal reward, due in some measure to S. Paul for his apostolical labours. This treasure, promised to those that live well, the apostle hopes he has placed and deposited in the hands of God, who will reward him, and repay him at the last day. This is the common interpretation. Wi.

VER. 14. Keep the good (doctrine) deposited or committed in trust to thee. (1572) death, and hath brought to light life and incorruption by the gospel:

11 In which ^aI am appointed a preacher and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentiles.

12 For which cause I also suffer these things, but I am not ashamed. For I know whom I have believed, and I am certain that he is able to keep that which I have committed to him, against that day.

13 Hold the form of sound words, which thou hast heard from me in faith, and in the love which is in Christ Jesus.

14 Keep the good deposit by the Holy Ghost, who dwelleth in us.

15 Thou knowest this, that all they who are in Asia are turned away from me: of whom are Phigellus and Hermogenes.

16 The Lord give mercy to the ⁴house of Onesiphorus: because he hath often refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain:

17 But when he was come to Rome, he carefully sought me out, and found me.

18 The Lord grant to him to find mercy of the Lord in that day. And how many things, he ministered to me at Ephesus, thou very well knowest.

CHAP. II.

He exhorts him to diligence in his office: and patience in sufferings. The danger of the delusions of heretics.

THOU, therefore, my son, be strong in the grace which is in Christ Jesus:

2 And the things, which thou hast heard from me before many witnesses, the same commend to faithful men, who shall be fit to teach others also.

3 Labour as a good soldier of Christ Jesus.

4 No man being a soldier to God, entangleth him-

^c 1 Tim. ii. 7.—^d Infra iv. 19.

This is different, though the word be the same, from what he spoke of, v. 12. There he mentioned what he had committed and deposited in the hands of God, here he speaks of what God hath committed, and deposited in the hands of Timothy, after it was delivered to him by S. Paul and the other preachers of the gospel: that is, he speaks of the care Timothy must take to preserve the same sound doctrine, and to teach it to others. See 1 Tim. vi. 20. Wi.

VER. 15. All they who are in Asia, are turned away from me. That is, all who are of Asia, or all the Asiatics now at Rome, where I am prisoner, have withdrawn themselves from me, now when I am in danger; but he excepts Onesiphorus, who sought him out, assisted and relieved him in his wants. Wi.—Phigellus, &c. These two, whom S. Paul says were the chief of those in Asia Minor, who had departed from the faith, had become his followers by deceit, in order to become acquainted with the mysteries of religion, taught by him, intending to make use of them, as affording them matter for calumniating him. Dion. Carthus.

VER. 16. Onesiphorus. This person, also an inhabitant of Asia, seems to have supplied S. Paul with necessities, as well at Rome during his confinement, as at Ephesus. Timothy being with S. Paul at the latter place, knew better the charities of Onesiphorus there than at Rome, at which place he was not eye witness of them. Dion. Carthus.

* V. 5. Certus sum, πεισισμαι, persuasum habeo.

† V. 6. Ut resuscites, ἀναζωπυρεῖν, quasi sopitum ignem excitare.

‡ V. 7. Timoris, δέσφας, timiditatis, it is not φόβος.

§ Ibid. Et sobrietatis, καὶ σωφρονισμοῦ

|| V. 8. Collabora, συγκαταθήσθαι. Mala ferto mecum.

¶ V. 12. Depositum meum, παραθήκην μου. S. Chrys. (λόγ. β. p. 336) says it may be either what S. Paul committed to the trust of God, or what God committed to him: § ὁ Θεὸς αὐτῷ παρακρίβετο, ἢ ἡν αὐτὸς τῷ Θεῷ.

 V. 14. Bonum depositum custodi; τὴν καλὴν παρακαταθήκην φύλαξον.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. The grace which is in Christ Jesus; i. e. which is in thee by Christ Jesus. Wi.

VER. 2. Before many witnesses. Some expound it, in the presence of many witnesses; others, of the witnesses and testimonies which S. Paul had brought out of the Scriptures, when he instructed Timothy. Wi.

VER. 3. *Labour. The Greek word implies, take pains in suffering; as O. i. 8.—As a good soldier, &c. The apostle bringeth three comparisons: 1. of a soldier; 2. of one that strives and runs for a prize; 3. of a husbandman. Wi.

VER. 4. No man... entangleth himself with worldly concerns: with other af- self with worldly concerns: that he may please him to whom he hath engaged himself.

5 For he also that striveth for the mastery, is not crowned, except he strive lawfully.

6 The husbandman, who laboreth, must first partake of the fruits.

7 Understand what I say: for the Lord will give thee understanding in all things.

8 Be mindful that the Lord Jesus Christ is risen from the dead, of the seed of David according to my gospel,

9 In which I labour even unto chains, as an evil doer: but the word of God is not bound.

10 Therefore I endure all things for the sake of the elect, that they also may obtain the salvation, which is in Christ Jesus, with heavenly glory.

11 A faithful saying: For if we be dead with him, we shall live also with him:

12 If we suffer we shall also reign with him: *if we deny him, he also will deny us.

13 ^bIf we believe not, he continueth faithful, he cannot deny himself.

14 Of these things put them in mind, testifying before the Lord. Contend not in words: for it is to no profit, but to the subversion of the hearers.

15 Carefully study to present thyself approved unto fairs of the world: much less must the soldier of Christ, who striveth,† (better than fighteth) which belongs to the first comparison. Wi.

* Mat. x. 33. Mark viii. 18.—b Rom. iii. 3.

VER. 6. The husbandman who laboreth; must first partake. Both the Latin and Greek texts admit of two interpretations: the sense may either be, that it is fitting the husbandman partake first and before others of the fruits of his labours, or that he must first labour and then partake. Wi.

VER. 7. The Lord will give thee understanding.§ In some Greek copies, may he give thee. Wi.

VER. 8. According to my gospel. He seems to understand his preaching. Wi.

VER. 9. In which I labour, or suffer, by the Greek. Wi.

VER. 10. The elect. By the elect, we need not always understand those predestinated to eternal glory, but chosen or called to the true faith; and this must rather be the meaning of S. Paul in this place, who could not distinguish between those predestinated to glory and others. Wi.—Therefore I announce it with full liberty, suffering willingly all I have to endure for the sake of the elect.

VER. 11, &c. If we be dead with him, to sin, or as others expound it, by martyrdom, we shall live also, and reign with him in heaven. But if we deny him, by renouncing our faith, or by a wicked life, he also will deny us, and disown us hereafter. See Mat. x. 33. He continues always faithful and true to his promises. He is truth, and cannot deny himself. Wi.

VER. 13. If we believe not; i. e. if we refuse to believe in God, or if after having believed, we depart from our faith, the Almighty still continues faithful; he is still what he was. Our believing in him cannot increase his glory, nor can our disbelief in him cause any diminution thereof, since it is already infinite. Estius.—The sense may be: when we renounce God, and refuse to believe in him, will he be less powerful to punish us? or, will his menaces be less true or less efficacious? He will effect his work without us, for he will infallibly bring about the salvation of his elect. V.

VER. 14. Give this admonition to all, especially to the ministers of the gospel, that they may expose themselves willingly to suffer every thing for the establishment of the faith in Jesus Christ.—Testifying. Call God to witness the truths which you announce to the faithful; and for your part, do not amuse yourself with disputes about words. In the Greek it is thus translated by many: Warn them of these things, by conjuring them in the name of the Lord not to amuse themselves with disputes about words. Calmet.

VER. 15. Thyself approved,|| or acceptable to God.—Rightly handling.¶ In the Greek, cutting or dividing the word of truth, according to the capacities of the hearers, and for the good of all. Wi.—The Prot. version has, dividing the word of truth. All Christians challenge the Scriptures, but the whole is in the rightly handling them. Heretics change and adulterate them, as the same apostle affirms, 2 Cor. xi. and 4. These he admonishes us (as he did before, 1 Tim. vi. 20.) to avoid, for they have a popular way of expression, by which the unlearned are easily beguiled. “Nothing is so easy,” says S. Jerom, “as with a facility and volubility of speech to deceive the illiterate, who are apt to admire what they cannot comprehend.” Ep. ii. ad Nepot. c. 10.

VER. 16. Vain speeches, or vain babbling.* He seems to hint at the disciples of the magician, and their fables. Wi.

VER. 17. Like a cancer; †† others say a canker or gangrene, a distemper that eats the flesh and parts affected. Wi.

VER. 18. Saying: That the resurrection is past already. It is uncertain what God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly handling the word of truth.

16 But shun profane and vain speeches: for they grow much towards impiety:

17 And their speech spreadeth like a cancer: of whom are Hymenæus and Philetus, 18 Who have erred from the truth, saying that the resurrection is past already, and have subverted the faith of some.

19 But the sure foundation of God standeth firm, having this seal: The Lord knoweth who are his; and let every one that nameth the name of the Lord, depart from iniquity.

20 But in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; and some indeed unto honour, but some unto dishonour.

21 If any man, therefore, shall cleanse himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honour, sanctified and profitable to the Lord, prepared unto every good work.

22 But flee thou youthful desires, and follow justice, faith, charity, and peace with those who call on the Lord from a pure heart.

23 *And avoid foolish and unlearned questions: knowing that they beget strifes.

* 1 Tim. i. 4. and 7. Titus iii. 9.

these heretics meant. Some say they held no resurrection, but that by which some died and some were born. Others that they admitted no resurrection but that by baptism from sin. Others that they called what is related in the gospel, that many bodies of the saints rose, at Christ's death, the only resurrection. Wi.—The fall of Hymenæus and Philetus, who seduced by the false reasonings of Simon Magus had abandoned the faith of the Church, convinced S. Paul of the great importance of opposing the profane novelties of heretics. It is for this that he insists so much on this subject, as well in this as in his first epistle to Timothy. The ancients expressly tell us, that Simon the magician did not believe in the resurrection of the body, but only that of the soul; meaning its resurrection from sin to grace. Epiphanius.

VER. 19. But the sure foundation of God and of the Christian faith standeth firm, though some fall from it, and will stand to the end of the world, the Church being built on a rock, and upon the promises of Christ, which cannot fail. Having this seal: the Lord knoweth who are his. The words are applied from Num. xvi. 5. The sense is, that the faith and Church of Christ cannot fail, because God has decreed and promised to remain with his Church, and especially to protect his elect, to the end of the world. Th know his, here is not only to have a knowledge, but is accompanied with a love and singular protection over them, with such graces as shall make them persevere to the end.—And let every one that nameth (or invoceth) the name of the Lord, depart from iniquity. Several understand these words, which are similar to those Num. xvi. 26. depart from the tents of these wicked men, to be as if it were a second seal, or part of the seal of God's firm decree, inasmuch as the elect by his grace, or when they are prevented and assisted by his grace, will always depart from iniquity; will remain firm in faith, and in the practice of good works; so that this may rather be an effect of the former seal, i. e. of God's decree to protect his elect, than a different seal. Wi.—Whatever efforts hell may make by its agents, the eternal edifice, of which the elect are the living stones, is immovable, being founded on the immutable decree of divine election, and upon the efficacious and infallible means, which separate the children of the wicked Adam, to bring them and to unite them to Jesus Christ.

VER. 20. In a great house there are, &c. Though S. Chrys by a great house, understands this world, and seems to think that in the Church there are none but precious vessels of gold and of silver, yet this is only true of the perfect part of the Church, as it comprehends the elect only. The common exposition, by the great house, understands the Catholic Church of Christ here upon earth, in which are mixed both vessels of gold and of earth, both good and bad; both the faithful that will be saved, and others that will be lost by not persevering in the faith and grace of Christ. Every one's endeavour must be to cleanse himself from these, to depart from the ways of iniquity, by the assistances of those graces which God offers him, that so he may be a vessel unto honour, not troubling himself about the mysteries and secrets of predestination, but believing and knowing for certain, that if he be not wanting on his part, he can never be lost: and therefore let him follow the admonition of S. Peter, 2 Pet. i. 10. “Wherefore, brethren, labour the more, that by good works you may make sure your vocation and election: for doing these things, you shall not sin at any time.” Wi.

VER. 21. Man, we see here, hath free-will to make himself a vessel of salvation or reprobation; though salvation be attributed to God's mercy, the other to his justice, neither repugnant to our free-will, but working with and by the same, all such effects in us, as to his providence and our deserts are agreeable. B

24 But the servant of the Lord must not wrangle: but be meek towards all, fit to teach, patient,

25 With modesty admonishing those who resist the truth: if at any time God give them repentance to know the truth,

26 And they recover themselves from the snares of the devil, by whom they are held captives at his will.

CHAP. III.

The character of heretics of latter days: he exhorts Timothy to constancy. Of the great profit of the knowledge of the Scriptures.

KNOW also this, that, *in the last days, shall come dangerous times:

2 Men shall be lovers of themselves, covetous, haughty, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, ungrateful, wicked,

3 Without affection, without peace, slanderers, incontinent, unmerciful, without kindness,

4 Traitors, stubborn, puffed up, and lovers of pleasures more than of God:

5 Having an appearance indeed of piety, but denying the power thereof. Now these avoid:

6 For of this sort are they who creep into houses,

* 1 Tim. iv. 1. 2 Pet. iii. 8. Jude 1, 18.

VER. 22. Youthful desires of any kind, not only of luxury and intemperance. Wi.

VER. 24. Fit to teach† and instruct others. Wi.

VER. 25. If at any time§§ God may touch the hearts of those who believe not, or who lead a wicked life. Wi.—In the Greek it is μήποτε, lest; that is, correct those who resist the truth, in hopes that God will some time bring them by repentance to the knowledge of the truth. The Greek does not express a fear that they will repent, but a certain doubt, mixed with strong hope and earnest desire of their conversion. Conversion from sin and heresy is the gift of God, yet we see good exhortations and prayers are available thereto; which would not be the case if we had not free-will. But these exhortations, to be profitable, must be made as the apostle says, ἐν ἡπιότητι; i. e. with modesty and meekness. Si forte det Deus illis meliorem mentem; i. e. ut perveniant ad agnitionem ejus veritatis, quam nunc oppugnant.

VER. 26. By whom they are held captives|| at his will: for sinners wilfully put themselves under the slavery of the devil, and wilfully remain in it. The Greek signifies, that they are taken alive in the devil's nets. Wi.

* V. 3. Κακὸν ὁρῶν; and v. 9, for laboro, κακοπαθῶ.

† V. 4. Qui certat in Agone, ἀν ἀγῶνίς.

‡ V. 6. Laborantem Agricola, oportet primum de fructibus percipere. It has the same ambiguity in the Greek.

§ V. 7. Dabit δῶκε, which Dr. Wells prefers, though in more Greek copies be found δάν, det.

|| V. 15. Probabilem, δίκρινον.

¶ Ibid. Recte tractantem, ὀρθοτροποῦντα.

 V. 16. Vaniloquia, κενοφωνίας. See 1 Tim. vi. 20.

†† V. 17. Ut cancer, ὡς γόγγυσσα.

‡‡ V. 24. Docibilem, διδασκίμεν. See 1 Tim. iii. 2. which is there translated doctorem, and it signifies one fit to teach.

§§ V. 25. Ne quando, μήποτε, quasi, si quando

|| V. 26. Captivi tenentur, ῥυπαρμένον.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Know. Do not be troubled at the many evils, persecutions, and heresies, which rise up against the Church. There have ever existed such since the Church was first established, and such ever will exist. Did not Jannes and Mambres rise up against Moses? Calmet. See 1 Tim. iv. 1. 2 Pet. iii. 3. Jude 18.—That in the last days. It only signifies hereafter. And the advice S. Paul gives to Timothy, (v. 5.) now these avoid; shews that some of those false teachers should come in S. Timothy's days. We may observe that few agree exactly in translating or expounding the sense of so many Greek or Latin words, which express the vices of such heretics; but the difference is so small, that it need not be taken notice of. Wi.

VER. 2. S. Cyprian, expounding these words, says: "Let no faithful man, who keepeth in mind our Lord's and apostle's admonition, marvel, if he see in latter times proud and stubborn men, enemies of God's priests, go out of the Church to attack the same, since both our Lord and his apostle have predicted that such things would be."

VER. 5. Having an appearance indeed of piety, in some things, as we may see heretics affect to be thought more exact than the Catholics in some things, by which the devil more easily deceives souls, but denying by their lives the power, virtue, and force of piety. Wi.—These avoid. S. Paul having in the preceding verses described the vices and enormities which were to reign in the world in the latter days, here warns Timothy, that already people given to such extravagancies were in the world, and that consequently in regard to Timothy, those days were already come. Chrysost. Theophyl. &c.—How many crimes are covered with the cloak of knowledge, and the exterior of piety and what mischief and lead captive silly women loaded with sins, who are led away with divers desires:

7 Always learning, and never attaining to the knowledge of the truth.

8 Now as ^bJannes and Mambres resisted Moses: so these also resist the truth, men corrupted in mind, reprobate concerning the faith.

9 But they shall proceed no farther: for their folly shall be manifest to all, as theirs also was.

10 But thou hast fully known my doctrine, manner of life, purpose, faith, long-suffering, love, patience, 11 Persecutions, afflictions: *such as came upon me at Antioch, Iconium, and at Lystra: what persecutions I endured, and out of all the Lord delivered me.

12 And all who will live piously in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution.

13 But evil men, and seducers, shall grow worse and worse: erring, and driving into error.

14 But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, and which have been committed to thee: knowing of whom thou hast learned.

15 And because from thy infancy thou hast known arises to religion from such base and hypocritical conduct: it cannot be too severely attacked, as we see in Christ's comportment towards the Pharisees.

^b Exod. vii. 11.—^c Acts i. 4. et seq.

VER. 6. Of this sort, &c. Here S. Paul gives a true description of heretics, and evil men; such as they have existed in every age. For there never existed a time, either under the Old or New Testaments, in which such have not appeared. Even in the apostle's time, we behold heresies and disorders in the Church. We see them increase rapidly after their decease. Simon, the magician, seems to have been dead when S. Paul wrote this epistle, which was but a short time before his martyrdom. But he had left a great number of disciples behind him, known by the numerous sects, the Gnostics, the Simonians, the Eucharistians, &c. &c. into which, after the death of their master, they were split. Calmet.—Who creep into houses and lead captive silly women*, &c. That is the custom of almost all heretics. See S. Jerom. to Ctesiphon, tom. iv. part 2. p. 477. Nov. edit. where he brings a number of instances, from Simon Magus to his time. Wi.

VER. 7. Never attaining to the knowledge of the truth. These words, in construction, agree with the aforesaid women. Wi.

VER. 8. Jannes and Mambres. The names of magicians, who in Egypt resisted Moses, says S. Chrys. and though not mentioned in the Scriptures, their names might be known by tradition. Wi.—Since the Old Testament does not mention these magicians of Pharaoh, who opposed Moses, it seems probable that S. Paul either learnt their names by a particular revelation, as S. Chrys. Theophyl. and Tirinus think, or by some tradition of the Jews, agreeably to the opinions of Theodoret, Grotius, Estius, &c. Others think he might have found their names in some ancient histories, which have not reached our time; or perhaps from the apocryphal book of Jannes and Mambres, mentioned by Origen and Ambrosiaster. Certain it is, that in S. Paul's time the names of these two famous magicians were very well known; thus it is by no means necessary in this instance to have recourse to a particular inspiration. The Orientals say there were many magicians who opposed Moses. Among others, they mention Sabous and Gadous, who came from Thebias; Grnath and Mospha, from some other country. They wished, as they inform us, to imitate the miracle by which Moses turned his rod into a serpent, by throwing their canes on the ground, and ropes filled with quicksilver. These ropes began to move a little, one twisting with another, on account of the heat of the earth warmed by the sun. But the rod of Moses in a moment broke them to pieces. Calmet.—These magicians are called by different names. The Greek has Jannes and Jambres. Some ancient writers, Jannes and Mambres; as Cyprian, Optatus, (c. 7.) Born. &c. The Jews call that Joanne, or Johanna, whom the Greeks name Jannes; and that called by the Jews Jambres, the Greeks name Mambres. The Hebrews would have them to be the sons of Balaam, the soothsayer, and the masters of Moses in the sciences of the Egyptians. Calmet.

VER. 9. But they shall proceed no further. How doth this agree with v. 18. where it is said, that seducers shall grow worse and worse? or with what he said in the last chapter, (v. 17.) that their talk spreadeth like a cancer? We may answer, that the heretics became worse, and seduced very many in all ages, but the providence of God always put a stop to their progress, so that they could never prevail against the Church, as they hoped and proposed to do. Wi.—S. Paul shews what will be the fate of all heresies; and the annals of the Church prove good his words, that they will appear to flourish for a time, and then will die away and be forgotten.

VER. 14. But continue thou in the things which thou hast learned, &c. S. Paul here gives particular advice to his disciple, S. Timothy, who had been long since instructed in all the truths and mysteries of the Christian faith, who had received the gifts of the Holy Ghost, of prophecy, of interpreting the Scriptures, who was a priest, a bishop of Ephesus, the metropolis of Asia, whose office it was to instruct, direct, and convert others. He tells this great bishop, that the the holy Scriptures, which can instruct thee unto salvation, through the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

16 *All Scripture divinely inspired is profitable to teach, to reprove, to correct, to instruct in justice :

17 That the man of God may be perfect, furnished unto every good work.

CHAP. IV.

His charge to Timothy; he tells him of his approaching death, and desires him to come to him.

I CHARGE thee, before God and Jesus Christ, who shall judge the living and the dead, by his coming, and his kingdom :

2 Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season, reprove, entreat, rebuke with all patience and doctrine.

3 For there shall be a time when they will not endure sound doctrine, but according to their own desires they will heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears :

4 And will turn away indeed their hearing from the truth but will be turned to fables.

holy Scriptures are able, and may conduce or can instruct him unto salvation, (v. 15,) unto his own salvation and that of others. Wi.—The apostle here entreats his disciple, and in him all future Christians, to adhere to the true deposit of doctrine. He teaches with Catholics, that all Scripture is profitable; but not with Protestants, that Scripture alone is necessary and sufficient.

VER. 16. All scripture divinely inspired is profitable to teach, to reprove, to correct, or admonish, to instruct others in justice, and in the ways of virtue, that thus he who is a man of God, a minister of the gospel, may be perfect and instructed unto every good work. But when our adversaries of the pretended reformation, undertake from these four verses to shew, first, that every ignorant man or woman is hereby warranted to read and put what construction his or her private spirit, or private judgment, suggests upon all places of the holy Scriptures; and secondly, that the Scriptures alone contain all truths which a Christian is bound to believe; or at least, that the Scriptures teach him all things necessary to salvation, without regard to the interpretation and authority of the Catholic Church: I may at least say (without examining at present any other pretended grounds of these assertions) that these consequences are very remote from the text and sense of S. Paul in this place. As to the first, does this follow; the Scriptures must be read by Timothy, a priest, a bishop, a man of God, a minister of the gospel, whose office it is to instruct and convert others, therefore they are proper to be read and expounded by every ignorant man or woman? Does not S. Paul say elsewhere, (2 Cor. ii. 17.) that many adulterate and corrupt the word of God? does not S. Peter tell us also, (2 Pet. iii. 16.) that in S. Paul's epistles are some things . . . which the unlearned and unstable wrest, as also the other scriptures, to their own perdition? See the preface to S. John, where reasons are brought for which it was requisite that the Church should put some restraint to the abuse which the ignorant made of reading the Scriptures in vulgar tongues. As to the second consequence, does it follow: every Scripture divinely inspired is profitable for S. Timothy, for a priest, a bishop, a man of God, a minister and preacher of the gospel, to teach and instruct, and conduce to bring both him and others to salvation; therefore they contain all things that a Christian need to believe? &c. Is not every Christian bound to believe that the books in the canon of the New and Old Testament are of divine authority, as in particular these two epistles of S. Paul to Timothy? Where does the Scripture assure us of this? But of this elsewhere. Wi.—Every part of divine Scripture is certainly profitable for all these ends. But if we would have the whole rule of Christian faith and practice, we must not be content with those Scriptures which Timothy knew from his infancy, (that is, with the Old Testament alone) nor yet with the New Testament, without taking along with it the traditions of the apostles and the interpretation of the Church, to which the apostles delivered both the book and the true meaning of it. Ch.

* V. 6. Qui penetrant, ἰδόντες.

† Ibid. Mulierculas, γυναῖκες: nunquam pervenientes, μηδέποτε συνάμεναι, which agrees with γυναῖκες.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. I charge thee (lit. testify to thee) before God and Jesus Christ, who shall judge the living and the dead; i. e. all those that have been dead for so many ages since the beginning of the world; and the living, i. e. those who shall be found living at the end of the world, but who shall die, and be presently raised again. See 1 Cor. xv. 52.—*By his coming. The sense by the Greek seems to be, who shall judge them at or by his coming, rather than I charge thee by his coming, as others translate. Wi.

VER. 2. In season,† out of season; i. e. whether the hearers are willing to hearken to thee or not. Or, as others understand it, whether it be convenient or inconvenient for thee to signify that the ministers of God must not desist from preaching, whatever troubles they are under. Wi.

VER. 3. Having itching ears;‡ i. e. the hearers have such ears, running after novelties and such doctrine as favours their passions. Wi.

VER. 5. Be thou vigilant, &c. It may either be expounded, watch in all things; or, take pains in all things. The latter seems the true construction. Wi.—An evangelist; a diligent preacher of the gospel. Ch.—Fulfil thy ministry.§ So even Dr. Wells, in his amendments to the Prot. translation, which hath, make full

5 But be thou vigilant, labour in all things, do the work of an evangelist. fulfil thy ministry. Be sober.

6 For I am even now ready to be sacrificed: and the time of my dissolution is at hand.

7 I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.

8 For the rest, there is laid up for me a crown of justice, which the Lord, the just judge, will render to me on that day: and not to me only, but to them also who love his coming. Make haste to come to me quickly.

9 For Demas hath left me, loving this world, and is gone to Thessalonica:

10 Crescens into Galatia, Titus into Dalmatia.

11 *Only Luke is with me. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is useful to me for the ministry.

12 But Tychicus I have sent to Ephesus.

13 The cloak, which I left at Troas with Carpus when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, especially the parchments.

* 2 Pet. i. 20.—† Colos. iv. 14.

proof of thy ministry. See Luke i. 1. See also S. Chrys. on this place.—Be sober There is nothing for this in the Greek, nor in S. Chrysostom. The Latin interpreter seems to have added it, as being contained in the other Greek words in this verse. Wi.

VER. 6. I am even now ready to be sacrificed.† Lit. to be immolated. See Philip. ii. 17.—The time of my dissolution (lit. resolution) is at hand. This makes many judge that this letter was written during his last imprisonment; but the sense perhaps may be, that being old and worn out with labours, he could not live long. Wi.

VER. 7. I have fought a good fight, or strived a good strife.¶ The Latin and Greek may signify any kind of striving for a prize.—I have kept the faith, not only the Christian faith, but been faithful in my office. Wi.

VER. 8. A crown of justice, which the Lord, the just judge, will render to me These words confirm the Catholic doctrine, that good works performed with the assistance of God's grace, deserve and are meritorious of a reward in heaven: it is what is signified, 1. by a crown of justice, 2. from a just judge, 3. which he will render or give as a reward. Yet we own with S. Aug. that we have no merit, but what is also a gift of God from his grace and mercy, and grounded on his promises. Wi.—"A crown of justice," which the Protestants translate, of righteousness; but let us see how the learned S. Austin, 1400 years ago, expounds the apostle's meaning: "How should he repay as a just Judge, unless he had first given as a merciful Father?" De grat. et lib. arb. c. vi. See Heb. vi. 10. God is not unjust, that he should forget your works; this the Protestants change into, God is not unrighteous.

VER. 9. Demas hath, &c. The Demas here mentioned, is the same that was at Rome with S. Paul in his first voyage, in 61 or 62, and of whom he makes mention in his epistle to the Colossians, (iv. 14.) also in that to Philemon, v. 24. He was perverted in this last voyage, in 65, and abandoned his master in the time of danger. It is not ascertained whether he entirely renounced his faith, or whether God gave him grace to rise from his fall; or whether the love of the world, with which S. Paul here reproaches him, was only a passing fault, and an effect of pure human infirmity. S. Epiphanius (haeres. 51.) presumes that he renounced the faith, and was engaged in the heresies of Cerinthus, Ebion, and others, who held Jesus Christ to be no more than a mere man. Many moderns, Grotius, Men. Corn. &c. believed that he returned with S. Paul: and Estius himself seems to think that he was the same Demas of which S. Ignatius speaks, writing to the Magnesians, calling him a worthy bishop of God. But this is founded on the false supposition, that this letter was written during his first confinement at Rome, or at least before S. Paul wrote his epistles to the Colossians and to Philemon. Calmet.—Loving this world; i. e. his safety, and to avoid persecutions. Wi.

VER. 10. Crescens into Galatia, Titus, &c. These two did not abandon the faith, but only left S. Paul to preach the gospel, with his consent. Crescens went from Rome into Galatia, or into Gaul, as it is found written in the Greek. Theodoret, Eusebius, Epiphanius, &c. say that Galatia, in the Greek, is often put for Gaul, in profane authors. On this account it is said by some, that Crescens preached in Gaul. Adon makes him founder of the Church of Vienne, in Dauphine; an opinion still prevalent in that city. The feast of S. Crescens is kept by the Latin Church, on the 27th of June. Calmet.—As to Titus, it can not be doubted but he went into Dalmatia for the purpose of the ministry, and by the order of S. Paul. Thence it seems most probable that he went into Crete, where he governed the Church as bishop, and there died. Theod. S. Chrys. Theophyl. Est. &c.

VER. 11. Luke. S. Luke was always much attached to S. Paul. It is thought he accompanied him to the time of his martyrdom. When S. Paul says Luke alone was with him, we must understand that no other disciple was at that time with him; not that the faithful of Rome, whose faith was so lively and charity so ardent, had abandoned him in this time of danger. S. Chrys. hom. x. p. 610.—Mark. This is John Mark, cousin of Barnabas, of whom mention has been made, Acts xiii. 12. &c. also Coloss. iv. 10. He rather wavered in faith at the beginning, but was afterwards much attached to the apostle. Calmet.

VER. 12. Tychicus. Theodoret and some others have inferred from this verse, that Timothy was not at Ephesus at this time; otherwise S. Paul would 14 Alexander, the coppersmith, hath done me many evils: the Lord will render to him according to his works:

15 Whom do thou also avoid: for he hath greatly opposed our words.

16 At my first defence no man stood with me, but all forsook me: may it not be laid to their charge.

17 But the Lord stood by me and strengthened me, that by me the preaching may be accomplished, and that all the Gentiles may hear: and I was delivered from the mouth of the lion.

18 The Lord hath delivered me from every evil have here said, I have sent Tychicus to thee. Timothy, in quality of bishop of Ephesus, had the inspection of the whole province of Asia; hence S. Paul might have presumed, that Tychicus would not be able to find him in that city. But these reasons do not appear sufficiently convincing. Tychicus might have been the bearer of this epistle; then S. Paul might say, I have sent him to carry it. Or S. Paul might have sent him before, and here tells Timothy of it; because, on account of the distance of Rome from Ephesus, he might not have yet heard of his arrival. Mention has been made of Tychicus before, Acts xx. 4. Ephes. vi. 21. Coloss. iv. 70. Calmet.

VER. 13. The cloak which I left at Troas. It is expounded a cloak by S. Chrys. S. Jerom, &c. Others think he may mean some coffer, or trunk, in which were his books and some things that he valued. Wi.

VER. 14. The Lord will render†† to him. We read shall render, not only in the Latin and Syriac, but also in divers Greek MSS. which Dr. Wells again prefers before the ordinary Greek copies, in which we read, The Lord render or reward him, as in the Prot. translation. If that was the true reading, we must take the words by way of a prophecy, and not as an imprecation or curse. Wi.

VER. 16. At my first defence, or trial, when I appeared before Nero and my judges, no man stood with me; all, or almost all, abandoned me in that danger: may it not be laid to their charge. Wi.

VER. 17. The Lord stood, &c. All agree that Nero is here meant by the lion. S. Chrys. thinks that S. Paul was set at liberty after this first justification of his conduct, but that having afterwards converted the cupbearer of Nero, he was by him beheaded. S. Chrys. hom. x. p. 611.—But the Lord assisted and fortified me on this occasion by a vision, in which he assured me that he would prolong my life for the more perfect preaching of the gospel. V.—The times predicted by the apostle in this epistle, (v. 3. and 4.) are now arrived; and the warnings he gives to Timothy and to all preachers of the word, should be sedulously attended to: preach the word: be instant in season and out of season; reprove, entreat, rebuke with all patience and doctrine. There will arrive a time when men will not bear sound doctrine; eager in the extreme to hear what flatters, they will have recourse to a variety of teachers not lawfully sent or ordained, calculated to tickle their ears: Assentatores populi, multitudinis levitatem voluptate quasi titillantes. Cic. In the same sense Plutarch says: τὰ ἔρα work: and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom, to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.

19 Salute Prisca and Aquila, * and the household of Onesiphorus.

20 Erastus remained at Corinth. And Trophimus I left sick at Miletus.

21 Make haste to come before winter. Eubulus, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren, salute thee.

22 The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit. Grace be with you. Amen.

* Supra i. 16.

ἀποκαταύειν. It is yours, adds S. Paul, ὡς καλὸς στρατιώτης Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ, as a valiant soldier of Jesus Christ, to oppose yourself as a wall to all these evils, to attend to every branch of your ministerial duty, not to yield to either opponents or dangers, and to see that the gospel is both preached and practised in all its purity. Thus may the Church find in you, and in her other ministers, what she is soon to lose in me, knowing as I do that my course is nearly run.—That by me the preaching may be accomplished, (or fulfilled) and that all the Gentiles may hear it. This is an argument that he wrote this letter in his first imprisonment.—And I was delivered from the mouth of the lion; that is, according to the common exposition, from Nero. Wi.

VER. 22. The Lord Jesus Christ be with thy spirit. Grace be with you. These words are a fervent prayer, with which S. Paul divers times concludes his epistles; such is the prayer of the priest, when he turns about at mass, with Domine vobiscum, the people answering, et cum Spiritu tuo. Wi.

* V. 1. Per adventum, κατὰ τὴν ἐπιφάνειαν.

† V. 2. Εὐκαίρως ἀκαίρως, Tempestive, intempestive.

‡ V. 3. Prurientes auribus, κνηθέμενοι; if it agreed with teachers. it should be κνηθίζουσιν.

§ V. 5. Ministerium tuum imple, πληροφόρησον. S. Chrys. (λέγ. θ. p. 371.) τούτιστα, πλήρωσον; and so again, (v. 17) prædicatio impleatur, πληροφορηθῇ, τούτιστα, says C. Chrys. p. 376, πληρωθῇ. S. Chrys. doubtless understood Greek as well as Erasmus or Mr. Legh, who therefore need not have accused the Latin interpreter as if he knew not Greek, so as to distinguish betwixt πληροφορεῖν and πληροῦν.

|| V. 6. Jam delibor, ἤδη σπένδομαι. See S. Chrys. (βμ. θ. p. 372) that σπονδή, libamen, is more than θυσία, hostia.

¶ V. 7. Certamen certavi, τὸν ἀγῶνα ἠγώνισμαι. It is not expressed by μάχουμαι and μάχη.

 V. 13. Penulam, φελώνην, some MSS. φαλόνην, and φαλῶνεν. S. Chrys. (βμ. I. p. 375.) ἐνταῦθα τὸν Ἰουδαῖον λέγει; though he takes notice, that some understood γλωσσόκομον, ἑθὰ τὰ βιβλία.

†† V. 14. Reddet, ἀποδώσει, in some MSS. though in more, ἀπολόν. The commentary of S. Chrys. agrees with the Latin.

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO TITUS.

THE design of this epistle is much the same as in the two former to Timothy. He had made this his beloved son Titus, chief bishop of Crete; in which island were formerly a hundred cities, on which account it was called Hecatompolis. It is now called Candy. We have a commentary of S. Jerom on this epistle, tom. iv, p. 409. E. B. Wi.—Titus was an uncircumcised Gentile: we know not on what occasion he attached himself to S. Paul. It is however certain that he was of great utility to S. Paul in the government of the Church.—S. Paul having preached the faith in the island of Crete, left his beloved Titus there to finish the work which he had begun. Afterwards the apostle, on a journey to Nicopolis, a city of Macedonia, wrote this epistle to Titus; in which he directs him to ordain bishops and priests for the different cities, shewing him the principal qualities necessary for a bishop, also gives him particular advice for his own conduct to his flock, exhorting him to hold to strictness of discipline, but seasoned with lenity. It was written about thirty-three years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.

CHAP. I.

What kind of men he is to ordain priests. Some men are to be sharply rebuked.

PAUL, a servant of God, and an apostle of Jesus Christ, according to the faith of the elect of God,

CHAP. I. VER. 1. According to the faith of the elect of God; that is, of the Christians, now the elect people of God.—Truth, which is according to piety: be- (1576) and the acknowledging of the truth, which is according to piety:

2 Unto the hope of life everlasting, which God, who lieth not, hath promised before the times of the world:

3 But hath in due times manifested his word through cause there may be truth also in things that regard not piety. By truth, S. Chrys. here understands the truth of the Christian religion, as distinguished from preaching, which is committed to me according to the commandment of God, our Saviour.

Simon.

4 To Titus, my beloved son, according to the common faith, grace and peace from God, the Father, and from Christ Jesus, our Saviour.

5 For this cause I left thee in Crete, that thou shouldst set in order the things that are wanting, and shouldst ordain priests in every city, as I also appointed thee.

6 *If any be without crime, the husband of one wife, having faithful children, not accused of luxury, or unruly.

7 For a bishop must be without crime, as the steward of God: not proud, not subject to anger, not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre:

8 But given to hospitality, gentle, sober, just, holy, continent,

9 Embracing that faithful word which is according to doctrine: that he may be able to exhort in sound doctrine, and to convince the gainsayers.

10 For there are also many disobedient, vain talkers,

* 1 Tim. iii. 2.—† Rom. xiv. 20.

the Jewish worship, which consisted in a great measure in the figures and types of truth. Wi.

VER. 2. Who lieth not, or who cannot lie, being truth itself.—Hath promised; that is, decreed to give life everlasting to his faithful servants.—Before the times of the world. † Lit. before secular times. Wi.

VER. 3. Manifested his word. S. Jerom understands the word incarnate; others, the word of God preached, which S. Paul says, was committed to him, &c. See S. Chrys. p. 383. Wi.

VER. 4. To Titus, my beloved, (in the Greek, my true and † genuine son, . . . grace and peace. In the present ordinary Greek copies is added mercy, which the Prot. translators followed; but it is judiciously omitted by Dr. Welis, as not found in the best MSS. nor in S. Chrys. Greek edition, nor in the ancient Greek and Latin Fathers. Wi.

VER. 5. That thou shouldst, &c. The sense cannot be, that he was to change any thing S. Paul had ordered, but to settle things which S. Paul had not time to do; for example, to establish priests in the cities, that is to say, bishops, as the same are called bishops v. 7; and, as S. Chrys. and others observe, it is evident from this very place, that the word presbyter was then used to signify either priests or bishops. If S. Jerom here meant that bishops were only placed over priests by ecclesiastical and not by divine institution, as some have expounded his words, his singular opinion against so many others is not to be followed. Wi.—That the ordaining of priests belongs only to bishops, is evident from the Acts and from S. Paul's epistles to Timothy and Titus. It is true, S. Jerom seems to express himself as if in the primitive Church there was no great difference between priests and bishops, yet he constantly excepts giving holy orders, (ep. 85) as also confirming the baptized, by giving them the Holy Ghost by imposition of hands and holy chrism; (dial. cont. Lucif. c. iv.) which pre-eminence he attributes to bishops only. To assert that there is no distinction between a priest and bishop is an old heresy, condemned as such by the Church. See S. Epiphanius, hæc. 75. S. Austin, hæc. 53.

VER. 6. Without crime. See the like qualifications, 1 Tim. iii. Wi.—These words if taken in their strictest meaning, do not seem to have all the force S. Paul meant them to have. For it is not sufficient that a bishop be free from great crimes; he ought, moreover to lead such a life as to draw others by his example to the practice of virtue. Calmet.—If we consult all antiquity we shall find, that if in the early infancy of the Church some who had been once married were ordained to the ministry, we shall find that after their ordination they abstained from the use of marriage. See S. Epiph. l. iii. cont. hæc. et l. ii. hæc. 59.

VER. 7. Not proud. † The Greek word is of an extensive signification, which the Protestants have translated self-willed. The Latin interpreter (2 Pet. ii. 10.) for the same Greek word has put, pleasing themselves; as it were never pleased with others, the unhappy disposition of a proud man. Wi.

VER. 8. Continent. * though both the Latin and Greek word signify in general, one that hath abstained, or contained, and overcome himself: yet it is particularly used for such as contain themselves from carnal pleasures. Wi.

VER. 10. For there are also many. S. Paul here alludes principally to the Jews, who were of the circumcision, from whom S. Paul suffered much during the greater part of his life. They constantly enforced the necessity of the new converted Gentiles observing the law of Moses, and of their being circumcised, if they wished to be saved. There were many Jews of this description in Crete; to resist whom, S. Paul here tells Titus he ought to appoint bishops remarkable for their zeal and learning. Josephus. Socrates, l. ii. c. 38. Hist. Eccles.—Especially they who are of the circumcision; which shews who were chiefly the false teachers. Wi.

VER. 12. One of them, a prophet of their own. †† He does not mean a true prophet, but as the pretended prophets of Baal were called prophets S. Paul understands Epimenides, a poet of Crete, who by some pagan authors was thought to know things to come; but Aristotle says, he knew only things past, not to come. The ill character he gave of the Cretians was, that they were and seducers: especially they who are of the circumcision:

11 Who must be reprov'd, who subvert whole houses, teaching things which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake.

12 One of them, a prophet of their own, said: The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts, slothful bellies.

13 This testimony is true: wherefore rebuke them sharply, that they may be sound in the faith,

14 Not attending to Jewish fables, and commandments of men, that turn themselves away from the truth.

15 ^b All things are clean to the clean: but to the defiled, and unbelievers, nothing is clean, but both their mind and their conscience are defiled.

16 They confess that they know God, but in their deeds they deny him: being abominable, and incredulous, and to every good work reprobate.

CHAP. II.

How he is to instruct both old and young. The duty of servants. The Christian's rule of life.

BUT speak thou the things that become sound doctrine:

always liars, evil beasts, slothful bellies, addicted to idleness and sensual pleasures. Wi.

VER. 13. This testimony, or character, says the apostle, is true, by public fame of them, and therefore they must be rebuked sharply, †† their condition and dispositions requiring it; which, therefore, is not contrary to the admonition he gave to Timothy, to be gentle towards all. 2 Tim. ii. 24. Wi.

VER. 14. Jewish fables, and commandments of men. False traditions of the Jewish doctors, which were multiplied at that time. Calvin pretended from hence, that holydays and fasting days, and all ordinances of the Catholic Church, were to be rejected as null, because they are the precepts of men. By the same argument must be rejected all laws and commands of princes and civil magistrates, as being the precepts of men. Fine doctrine! He might have remembered what S. Paul taught, (Rom. xiii.) that all power is from God; and what Christ said, (Lu. x. 16,) "He that hears you, hears me," &c. He might have observed that the men the apostle here speaks of, had turned §§ away themselves from the Christian faith. Wi.

VER. 15. All things are clean to the clean. That is, no creature is evil of its own nature; and the distinction of animals, clean and unclean, is now out of date, as are the other ceremonies of the Jewish law. And that to these unfaithful, defiled men, nothing is clean, because their consciences are defiled when they make use of them against their conscience. Wi.—S. Paul here tells Titus, to be particularly on his guard against those who wished to introduce among Christians a distinction of meats, and to preach up the necessity of divers purifications prescribed by the Mosaic law. All kinds of meats, he says, are clean to those who preserve their hearts free from sin; it is not what enters into the body defiles a man; it is from the heart that proceed wicked desires and wicked counsels: those defile a man. But to eat with unwashed hands; to eat swine's flesh, or meat that has been offered to idols: these things in themselves are indifferent actions, though particular circumstances may make them criminal. 1 Cor. viii. 4, 5, 6, &c. Calmet.—But to the defiled, &c. On the contrary, the man whose soul is defiled with sin, or who lives in infidelity, never can possess purity of heart; whatever legal washings or purifications, whatever sacrifices or ceremonies of the law he may make use of, all these cannot wash away the stains of the soul. Estius. Men. Tir.

VER. 16. They confess that they know God. He speaks not therefore of those who were properly infidels, without the knowledge of the true God; so that it is foolish to pretend from hence, that every action of an infidel must be a sin. Wi.

* V. 2. Qui non mentitur, δ δ ψεύδης.

† Ibid. Ante tempora sæcularia, πρὸ χρόνων αἰώνιων.

‡ V. 4. Dilecto filio. Γνωστὸν τέκνον.

§ V. 5. Ut corrigas, ἐπιτιμᾷς, ut supercorrigas.

|| Ibid. Per civitates presbyteros, πρεσβυτέρους. S. Chrys. (p. 387) τοὺς ἐκκοινούσ.

¶ V. 7. Non superbum. S. Jerom says, non tumidum, μὴ αὐθαδῆ. See Corn. a Lapide and Legh's Critica. 2 Pet. ii. 10.

 V. 8. Continentem, ὑπερᾶν. The Prot. translate the verb, (1 Cor. vii. 9) If they cannot contain, let them marry.

†† V. 11. Universas domos, ὅλους οἴκους.

‡‡ V. 12. Propheta, προφήτης. Cretenses, semper mendaces, malæ bestię, ventres pigri; Κρήτες, ἀεὶ ψεύσται, κακὰ θηρία, γαστέρες ἀργαί. Aristotle, l. iii. Rhetor. c. xvii. Epimenides ille de futuris non vaticinabatur: περὶ τῶν ἐσόμενων οὐκ ἔμαρτύρετο, ἀλλὰ περὶ τῶν γεγενημένων.—Κρητίζειν was proverbially used for uttering falsehood, and it was a received adage, and very illiberal on the inhabitants of Crete, Cappadocia, and Cilicia.

Κρήτες, Καππαδόκες, Κίλικες, ὅπλα Κατὰ Κακία.

§§ V. 13. Durè, ἀποτόμως; a metaphor from surgeons cutting.

|| V. 14. Adversantium se a veritate, ἀποστρεφόμενων.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Sound doctrine. It is not sufficient to teach sound doc-

2 That the aged men be sober, chaste, prudent, sound in faith, in love, in patience.

3 The aged women, in like manner, in holy attire, not false accusers, not given to much wine, teaching well:

4 That they may teach the young women prudence, to love their husbands, to love their children,

5 To be discreet, chaste, sober, having a care of the house, gentle, obedient to their husbands, that the word of God be not blasphemed.

6 Young men in like manner exhort to be sober.

7 In all things shew thyself an example of good works, in doctrine, in integrity, in gravity,

8 A sound speech, unblameable: that he, who is on the contrary part, may be afraid, having no evil to say of us.

9 *Exhort servants to be obedient to their masters, in all things pleasing, not contradicting,

10 Not defrauding, but in all things shewing good fidelity: that they may adorn the doctrine of God, our Saviour, in all things.

11 ^b For the grace of God, our Saviour, hath appeared to all men,

12 Instructing us, that denying impiety, and worldly

* Ephes. vi. 5. Coloss. iii. 22. 1 Pet. ii. 18.

trine, says S. Jerom, if it be not at the same time taught in a manner worthy of itself; that is, if he who teaches it by his words belies it in his actions. S. Jerom.

VER. 2. Be sober. The Greek Fathers, Theodoret, and Theophylactus, translate the word, sober, attentive, or vigilant. But Latin interpreters understand it of sobriety, in the literal meaning of the word. Old men oftentimes under pretence of weakness, drink wine to excess. The ancients called wine the milk of old men; hence agiles senectus has passed into a proverb, to designate an old man who drinks much and eats little. Calmet.

VER. 3. *In holy attire. See 1 Tim. ii. 9. The Greek word is sometimes used to signify the whole constitution, or state of a man's health in all the parts of his body: here it is taken for a woman's whole exterior carriage, her gait, gesture, looks, discourse, dress, that nothing appear but what is edifying. Wi.

VER. 4. Love their husbands. This is the first lesson he wishes to be given to young women; that they should always manifest a love, an attachment, respect and obedience to their husbands. But it must be a chaste love. Vult eas amare viros suos castè; vult inter virum et mulierem esse pudicam dilectionem. S. Jerom.

VER. 5. Discreet, chaste, sober. In the Greek is nothing for sober. The Latin interpreter seems to have added it, as another signification of one of the Greek words. See 1 Tim. iii. 2. Wi.

VER. 7. In gravity: to which is added in the Prot. sincerity,† from some Greek copies; but it is left out by Dr. Wells, as being not in the best Greek MSS. nor is it in the Amsterdam edition, (1711.) Wi.

VER. 9. Servants to be obedient. Servants owe respect and submission to their masters in every thing not contrary to the law, or the will of God. Hence they are strictly forbidden to murmur at their commands, to show any repugnance to obey them, or to censure their conduct. To avoid these evils, they ought to consider their masters as Jesus Christ himself, and their commands as those of God himself: which S. Paul often inculcates in other places in his epistles. Ephes. vi. 5, 8. Colos. iii. 23. S. Jerom.

VER. 10. Not defrauding.† S. Jerom puts, not stealing. The Greek signifies private thefts. Dr. Wells, not by filching—That they may adorn (or give honour to) the doctrine of God, our Saviour, in all things; by whom we may understand God, i. e. Christ, God and Man, or God as common to the three divine persons. Wi.—Thus ought they to shew forth in their whole conduct that strict love of justice and sanctity which the Catholic faith inspires into those who profess it, and live up to the admirable rules it prescribes; thus alone can they be said to do honour to their religion, when they practically perform what they speculatively believe.

VER. 11. For the grace of God, our Saviour, hath appeared to all men. In the Greek: For the saving grace of God, &c. Wi.

VER. 12. We should live soberly, & justly, and piously. S. Jerom puts (as in other places for the same Greek word) chastely, justly, and piously. The words comprehend man's duty to himself, to his neighbour, and towards God. Wi.

VER. 13. Waiting for the blessed hope; i. e. for the happiness of the blessed in heaven, promised and hoped for.—And coming of the glory of the great God,|| and our Saviour Jesus Christ. The title of great God, says Dr. Wells, is here referred to our Saviour Jesus Christ, by Clem. of Alex. in protreptic, c. vi. He might have added, and by the general consent of the Greek and Latin Fathers. S. Chrys. here cries out: "where are now they who say that the Son is less than the Father!" S. Jerom in like manner: "where is the serpent Arius? where is the snake Eunomius?" And that this title of great God is here given to Jesus Christ, may be shewn from the text itself, especially in the Greek; for the glorious coming, and appearance, in other places of S. Paul, is always used to signify Christ's coming to judge the world. Secondly, inasmuch as one and the same (1578) desires, we should live soberly, and justly, and piously in this world,

13 Waiting for the blessed hope, and coming of the glory of the great God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ:

14 Who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify for himself a people acceptable, pursuing good works.

15 These things speak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Let no man despise thee.

CHAP. III.

Other instructions and directions for life and doctrine.

ADMONISH them to be subject to princes, and powers, to obey at a word, to be ready to every good work:

2 To speak evil of no man, not to be litigious, but modest, shewing all meekness towards all men.

3 For we ourselves also were some time unwise, incredulous, erring, slaves to divers desires and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another.

4 But when the goodness and kindness of our Saviour, God, appeared:

5 *Not by the works of justice, which we have done,

^b Infra iii. 4.—^c 2 Tim. i. 9.

Greek article falls upon the great God, and our Saviour Christ; so that even M. Simon, in a note on these words, says the construction is, and the coming of Jesus Christ, the great God, our Saviour, and blames Erasmus and Grotius for pretending that this place is not a confutation of the Arians. Wi.

VER. 14. A people, particularly acceptable.† S. Jerom translates an egregious or eminent people. He says in the Sept. it corresponds to segula, which signifies a man's proper possessions, which he has purchased or chosen for himself. Budeus says it signifies what is rare and uncommon; and it is well translated by the Protestants, a particular people. Wi.

* V. 3. In habitu sancto, in κατὰ φύσιν ἱεροπρεπεί. Scapula, out of Dioscorus, says κατὰ φύσιν is constitutio naturalis corporis. See S. Jer. p. 426.

† V. 7. In some Greek is added ἀφθαρσίαν, sincerity.

‡ V. 10. Non fraudantes, μὴ νομιζομένους, non suffrantes.

§ V. 12. Sobriè, justè, et piè. S. Jerom in his commentary, castè justè, et piè. So he generally translates σώφρων, σωφρόνως, &c.

|| V. 13. Adventum gloriæ magni Dei, et Salvatoris nostri Jesu Christi; ἐπιφάνειαν τῆς δόξης τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. S. Chrys. (p. 401. lin. 43.) ποῦ εἰσιν οἱ τοῦ Πατρὸς, ἐλάττωσαν τὸν ὄνδρ λέγοντες. S. Jer. "Ubi est serpens Arius? ubi est Eunomius coluber?" S. Paul uses ἐπιφάνειαν for the coming of Christ to judgment. The same Greek article is put thus, τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ, καὶ σωτῆρος, and not καὶ τοῦ σωτῆρος.

¶ V. 14. Acceptabilem, περιόριστον a περιεῖμι. S. Jerom says, Egregium, præcipuum. See Deut. vii. 6. Exod. xix. 5. Psal. cxlxi. 4. Israel in possessionem sibi. See also S. Chrys. λέγ. ι. p. 402. linea 4ta.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Princes and powers. At the time S. Paul wrote this epistle to Titus, there were many Jews, particularly the disciples of Judas of Gaulan, who maintained that the Hebrews were under no obligation of obeying any other than God, or at most the rulers of their own nation. S. Paul here admonishes them, that in conformity with the example and instruction of our divine Saviour, they ought likewise to obey every other temporal prince set over them by the Almighty, provided they commanded nothing contrary to the law of God. S. Jerom. Estius. Menochius.—Piety teaches, and pastors should enforce three duties towards princes: submission to their authority, obedience to their laws, and a disposition of heart to meet all their just desires.

VER. 3. We may see in this portrait of a child of Adam, drawn by the hand of a master, what we should have been without Jesus Christ, and what we perhaps have been, as often as he has abandoned us to ourselves. Whoever cannot read in this his own depravity, has never studied as he ought his own heart.

VER. 4. The goodness and kindness. Lit. humanity of our Saviour. By *humanity some expound Christ's appearing in his human nature, but by the Greek is meant the love of God towards mankind. Wi.

VER. 5. Not by the works, &c. S. Paul in this verse alludes to the sacrament of baptism. This text is brought by divines to prove that baptism, like every other sacrament, produces its effects by its own power, (or, as it is termed in the schools, ex opere operato) independently of any disposition on the part of the receiver. We are saved, says the apostle, not by the works of justice, or any good works we have performed, but our salvation must be attributed solely to the mercy of our Saviour, God, manifested to us by the washing itself of regeneration and renovation of the Holy Ghost.—By the laver of regeneration, &c.† That is, of baptism, by which we are born anew the adoptive children of God, by the grace of the Holy Ghost, whom he hath poured, &c. Wi.

VER. 6. All presumption of human merits, which have not the grace of Jesus but according to his mercy he saved us, by the laver of regeneration, and renovation of the Holy Ghost,

6 Whom he hath poured forth upon us abundantly, through Jesus Christ, our Saviour:

7 That being justified by his grace, we may be heirs according to the hope of life everlasting.

8 It is a faithful saying: and concerning these things I will have thee to affirm earnestly: that they who believe in God, may be careful to excel in good works. These things are good and profitable to men.

9 *But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law: for they are unprofitable and vain.

* 1 Tim. i. 4. and iv. 7. 2 Tim. ii. 23.

Christ for their principle, is here completely confounded; and the whole glory of our salvation is justly attributed to the mercy of God, through Jesus Christ. A new birth, new creature, new spirit. The effusion of the water upon the body in baptism, is a figure of the salutary effusion of the holy Spirit in the soul to renew it, and to make of it a child of God.

VER. 7. This admirable, and I may say divine adoption, is the sole foundation of a Christian's hope, as the eternal life of the blessed is the sole end of this adoption.

VER. 8. It is a faithful saying. He means what he has already said, of our being justified by the grace and mercies of God.—And of these things I will have thee to affirm earnestly. The sense is not, I would herein confirm thee, (as Mr. N. translates, without attention to the Greek, which in so many places shews us the literal sense of the Latin text) but that he would have his disciple, Titus, to confirm and settle others in the belief of these truths, that, as it follows, they may be careful to excel in good works. Wi.

VER. 10. A man that is, &c. Many ancient copies have this passage thus, Avoid a heretic after one reprehension. S. Irenæus, Tertullian, S. Cyprian, Ambrose, &c. and many ancient Greek copies, omit a second reprehension. They thought once warning a heretic sufficient; a second correction only served to render him more insolent, and more obstinate in his false opinions. Certainly the faith of Christ has been so firmly established, that a man instructed in Scripture and tradition cannot conscientiously remain a heretic; he must be well aware of the crime of disunion; his own judgment, as S. Paul says, must condemn him.

10 A man that is a heretic, after the first and second admonition, avoid:

11 Knowing that he that is such a one, is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned by his own judgment.

12 When I shall send to thee Artemas, or Tychicus, make haste to come to me to Nicopolis: for there I have determined to winter.

13 Send forward Zenas, the lawyer, and Apollo, carefully, that nothing be wanting to them.

14 And let our men also learn to excel in good works for necessary uses: that they be not unfruitful.

15 All that are with me, salute thee: salute them that love us in the faith. The grace of God be with you all. Amen.

VER. 11. Knowing that he that is such a one is subverted: a metaphor, from a house that is thrown down, even to the foundation, by the Greek. He speaks of heretics whose obstinacy seems evident, for no one is properly a heretic but who is obstinate in his errors.—And sinneth, being condemned; or, condemned by his own judgment, when his ignorance cannot be a sufficient plea for him. Wi.—Other offenders are judged and cast out of the Church by the sentence of the pastors of the same Church. Heretics, more unhappy, run out of the Church of their own accord; and by so doing, give judgment and sentence against their own souls. Ch.

VER. 14. Let our men (that is, all Christians) also learn to excel in good and charitable works, by furnishing to others, for necessary uses, according to their wants. Wi.

VER. 15. There is no tie so tender or so strong as that of faith and charity. Nothing unites us truly together, but that which unites us all to God and to Jesus Christ, by an union of the same sentiments of faith, the same emotions of love, and the same inclinations of grace.

* V. 4. Benignitas et humanitas, χρηστότης καὶ φιλευθέρωσις. See Estius.

† V. 5. Lavacrum, λούτρον. See Ephes. v. 26.

‡ V. 8. De his volo te confirmare, περί τούτων βούλομαι σε διαβεβαιώσθαι: on which S. Chrys. says, (λόγ. στ' p. 406.) τούτοις, τὰτα διαλύσθαι; I would have to declare these things, &c.

§ V. 11. Subversus est, ἐξίστραπται, eversus est.

§ Ibid. Proprio judicio condemnatus, αὐτοκατάκριτος.

THE

EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO PHILEMON.

PHILEMON was a rich man, of high birth. He had been converted by S. Paul, when he was preaching at Ephesus, or by his disciple Epaphras. His house was become not unlike a church. Onesimus, his slave, far from profiting by the excellent example set before him, became more wicked; he plundered his master, and flew to Rome, where S. Paul was detained in prison for the first time. He received the poor fugitive charitably, and wrote to his master in his behalf.—The letter seems to have been written in the year sixty-one, during S. Paul's first imprisonment at Rome. It contains, as S. Chrys. observes, divers profitable instructions, and marks of S. Paul's charity towards a poor fugitive servant. Erasmus says Cicero never wrote with greater eloquence. Wi.

CHAP. I.

He commends the faith and charity of Philemon; and sends back to him his fugitive servant, whom he had converted in prison.

PAUL, a prisoner of Christ Jesus, and Timothy, our brother: to Philemon, our beloved and fellow-labourer,

2 And to Appia, our dearest sister, and to Archippus, our fellow-soldier, and to the church which is in thy house.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. Our . . . fellow-labourer, or coadjutor. He calls him so, because of the charity and zeal with which he promoted the gospel. Wi.

VER. 2. And to the Church, or congregation of the faithful which is in thy house. Wi.

VER. 5. Thy charity and faith . . . in the Lord Jesus, and towards all the saints.*

3 Grace to you, and peace from God, our Father, and from the Lord Jesus Christ.

4 I give thanks to my God, always making a remembrance of thee in my prayers,

5 Hearing of thy charity and faith, which thou hast in the Lord Jesus, and towards all the saints:

6 That the communication of thy faith may be made evident in the acknowledgment of every good work, which is in you in Christ Jesus.

In the Greek is towards Jesus Christ, and towards all the saints. By the saints he seems to mean, as elsewhere, all Christians; so that the sense may be, of thy faith towards Christ, and of thy charity towards all the saints or Christians. Wi.

VER. 6. That the communication of thy faith That is, charitable contributions, done with a lively faith, may become evident,† and the good works known, which are 7 For I have had great joy and consolation in thy charity: because the bowels of the saints have been refreshed by thee, brother.

8 Wherefore, having much confidence in Christ Jesus to command thee that which is to the purpose:

9 For charity sake I rather beseech, thou being such a one, as Paul an old man, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ:

10 I beseech thee for my son, Onesimus, whom I have begotten in my chains, 11 Who heretofore was unprofitable to thee, but now profitable both to me and to thee.

12 Whom I have sent back to thee. And do thou receive him as my own bowels:

13 Whom I would have retained with me, that for thee he might have ministered to me in the bands of the gospel:

14 But without thy counsel I would do nothing, that thy good deed might not be as it were of necessity, but voluntary.

15 For perhaps he, therefore, departed for a season from thee, that thou mightest receive him for ever:

in you; that is, done among you. This seems the sense by the following verse, where S. Paul expresseth his joy in hearing of Philemon's charity towards the saints. Wi.

VER. 8. Wherefore, though I might have much confidence, &c. Now S. Paul disposeth Philemon to grant his request, I am persuaded I might command thee, and thou wouldst not take it amiss. Wi.—To command thee, &c. As an apostle of Jesus Christ, I have the power even of ordering thee to forgive Onesimus, and to receive him again into favour; likewise as Paul, the aged, respect and regard being always due in a particular manner to old men; or again, as a prisoner of Jesus Christ, suffering here out of love for Jesus Christ and the faithful: I might here make use of all these different reasons to induce thee to pardon a poor fugitive slave, but I will not; I merely as a poor humble suppliant, forgetting all the dignity due to my apostleship, my grey hairs, or my chains, beseech thee to pardon him. Nor can I for a moment doubt of obtaining my request, when I consider the great charity thou hast in Jesus Christ towards all the saints. Calmet. A.

VER. 9. I rather beseech thee, thou being such a one, &c. as Paul. That is, united to him in spirit, by the same faith and charity; I am therefore confident thou wilt not refuse the request of Paul, now an aged man, and a prisoner, for the sake of Jesus Christ. Wi.

VER. 10. I beseech thee, &c. He at length tells Philemon what his request is, and names the person Onesimus, but in such terms as shew how much S. Paul has this affair at heart, and that he will look upon the favour he asks as done to himself. It is, that thou wilt pardon Onesimus, whom I look upon and love as my son, and a most dear son, whom I have begotten, a prisoner, and in my chains. Wi.—How great is the ingenuity shewn by S. Paul in this epistle, in obtaining for Onesimus the pardon of his master, Philemon. Having in the preceding verse endeavoured by every argument which a real tenderness and compassion could inspire, and making use of every expression that could conciliate the favour of Philemon, to obtain his charitable request, he in this verse for the first time dares mention Onesimus by name; a name which he was sensible must sound harsh in the ears of one who had received an injury from him. See how he endeavours to prevent so unhappy an effect, by adding to the name every epithet that could any way tend to soften all feelings of asperity, and excite compassion and pity. I beseech thee then for my son, whom I have begotten, and that in my chains. Calmet.—The pardon I crave is not for your slave, but for my son. If in all antiquity there be any thing in the persuasive kind of eloquence truly admirable, it is this short epistle in which there are contained almost as many arguments as words.

VER. 11. Who heretofore was unprofitable to thee, in taking and spending what belonged to thee, yet now, after a sincere conversion, is profitable both to me and thee; to me, by the services he has done me in prison; and the joy I have had by his conversion; and also to thee, because I know thou wouldst have been glad to have rendered me all possible services thyself, and he has done them for thee; he hath supplied thy place. For these reasons I could have wished to have detained him with me: but I have sent him back, thou being his master, nor would I do any thing in regard of thy servant, without thy advice and consent, that if thou thinkest it fitting to send him back again to me, and to give him his freedom, it may be without any constraint upon thee, without any necessity, thy 16 Not now as a servant, but instead of a servant, a most dear brother, especially to me: but how much more to thee, both in the flesh, and in the Lord?

17 If, therefore, thou count me a partner, receive him as myself:

18 And if he hath wronged thee in any thing, or is in thy debt: put it to my account.

19 I, Paul, have written with my own hand: I will repay it: not to say to thee, that thou owest me thy own self also.

20 Yea, brother; may I enjoy thee in the Lord: refresh my bowels in the Lord.

21 Trusting in thy obedience, I have written to thee: knowing that thou wilt do even more than I say.

22 But withal prepare me also a lodging: for I hope that through your prayers I shall be given unto you.

23 Epaphras, my fellow-prisoner in Christ Jesus, salutes thee,

24 Mark, Aristarchus, Demas, and Luke, my fellow-labourers.

25 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with your spirit. Amen.

voluntary and charitable act and deed. Wi.—S. Paul here makes an allusion to the word Onesimus, signifying useful in the Greek. He was before unprofitable, he says, to thee, contrary to the import of his name; but now he is truly an Onesimus, or useful, both to you and to me; to you indeed, by his conversion, and the resolution he now makes to serve you faithfully the remainder of his life; to me also, by the services he renders me in my chains. Calmet.—S. Jerom observes that some hypocrites pretended that this subject was not deserving the solicitude of an apostle, and on that account questioned its author; but this reasoning is unworthy of those who adore a God who did not refuse to die for rebellious and impious slaves. It shews pastors how solicitous they should always be for the salvation of the meanest of their flock; yes, though they may appear obdurate, and dead and buried in the pit of sin.

VER. 12-15. Do thou receive him as my own bowels. That is, as myself. Perhaps by the permission of God's providence (who never permits evil, but for some greater good) he departed from thee for a little while, that thou mightest receive him for ever, being now after his conversion in a way of being made partaker with thee of the same eternal happiness. Wi.

VER. 16. Receive him not now as a servant, but also as a most dear brother, especially to me. Nay I may say, how much more dear even to thee, both in the flesh, having been a Gentile as thou thyself wast, and having been also a servant in thy family. And secondly, he ought now to be dear to thee in our Lord, he who was thy servant, being now united to thee by the same faith, and by an union of charity. See Estius. Wi.

VER. 17. If, therefore, thou count me a partner, as a brother in Christ, as a member of Christ with thee, receive him as myself. Wi.

VER. 18. If he hath wronged thee in any thing, as he confesses, put it to my account, to my debtor, I will repay it, and satisfy thee for it. Wi.

VER. 19. I, Paul, have written, and testified this with my own hand. Some think he wrote the whole letter with his own hand, to make it more acceptable to Philemon.—Not to say to thee, that thou owest me thy own self, the eternal salvation of thy soul, by thy conversion to the faith of Christ. Wi.

VER. 20. Yea, brother: may I enjoy thee in the Lord, enjoy the fruits of thy friendship and love for me, and rejoice with thee. In this refresh my bowels in the Lord, grant me this satisfaction. I have written freely, and with confidence in thy obedience; that is, ready compliance, in giving him and me more than I ask, to wit, his freedom. After this, he was made a deacon, and, as some say, a bishop and a martyr. See S. Jerom, and Tillemont in his art. 45. on S. Paul, and his notes 70, 71. Wi.

* V. 5. Charitatem tuam et fidem, quam habes in Domino Jesu, et in omnes Sanctos; πρὸς τὸν κύριον Ἰησοῦν, καὶ εἰς πάντας τοὺς ἁγίους.

† V. 6. Ut communicatio, ἡ κοινωνία. See S. Paul, 1 Cor. i. 9. &c.

‡ Ibid. Evidens; ut Greek copies, ἐναργής, efficax, but in some, ἐναργής.

§ V. 9. Cum sis talis ut Paulus senex; τοιοῦτος ὡς Παῦλος πρεσβύτερος.

|| V. 11. Ὁνήσιμος, utilis, but he useth ἀχρηστός and εὐχρηστός. See Corn. a Lapide.

¶ V. 16. A little while. Lit. ad horam, πρὸς ὥραν.

 V. 17. As a partner, ut socium, κοινωνόν.

THE EPISTLE OF S. PAUL, THE APOSTLE, TO THE HEBREWS.

THE Catholic Church hath received and declared this Epistle to be part of the Canonical Scriptures of the New Testament, though some doubted of it in the first ages, especially in the Latin Church, witness S. Jerom on the 8th chap. of Isaias; Luther and most of his followers reject it, but the Calvinists and the Church of England have received it. Others, who received this Epistle in the first ages, doubted whether it was written by S. Paul, but thought it written by S. Barnaby, or by S. Clement, or S. Luke, or at least that S. Paul only furnished the matter and the order of it, and that S. Luke wrote it, and S. Paul afterwards read it and approved it. It was doubted again, whether this Epistle was first written in Hebrew (that is, in Syro-Chaldaic, then spoken by the Jews) or in Greek, as Estius pretends. The ancient writers say it was written in Hebrew, but that it was very soon after translated into Greek either by S. Luke or S. Clement, pope and martyr. Cornelius a Lapide thinks the Syriac which we have in the Polyglot to have been the original; but this is commonly rejected. See Tillamont on S. Paul, Art. 46, and note 72; P. Allenan on the first to the Hebrews, &c. S. Paul wrote this letter about the year 63, and either at Rome or in Italy. See C. xii. 24. He wrote it to the Christians in Palestine, who had most of them been Jews before. This seems the reason why he puts not his name to it, nor calls himself their apostle, his name being rather odious to the Jews, and because he was chosen to be the apostle of the Gentiles. The main design is to shew that every one's justification and salvation is to be hoped for by the grace and merits of Christ, and not from the law of Moses, as he had shewn in his Epistles to the Galatians and the Romans, where we may observe this kind of difference: To the Galatians he shews, that true justice cannot be had from circumcision and the ceremonies of the law; to the Romans, that even the moral precepts and works of the law were insufficient without the grace of Christ: and in this to the Hebrews, he shews that our justice could not be had from the sacrifices of the old law. As to the chief contents: He exhorts them to the faith of Christ, by shewing his dignity and pre-eminence above the Angels, and above Moses, C. i, ii, iii.; that Christ's priesthood was above that of Aaron, from the 4th to the 8th chap. v. 6; that the new law and testament is preferable to the old, from thence to the middle of chap. x.; he commends faith by the example of the ancient Fathers, C. xi. and in the beginning of the twelfth: then he exhorts them to patience, constancy, brotherly love, &c. The like exhortations are mixed in other parts of this Epistle. Wi.—We must here remark, that our separated brethren, relying solely upon tradition, admit in general this Epistle into their canon of Scriptures, though they are necessitated to allow that for some centuries great doubts were entertained on the subject. According to Mr. Rogers, in his Defence of the Thirty-nine Articles, whilst several among the Protestants have rejected as apocryphal the Epistle to the Hebrews, that of James, the 2d and 3d of John, and Jude, others have as strenuously maintained that they ought to be admitted into the sacred canon. The Catholic Church admits them as deuterocanonical books, and of equal authority with the proto-canonical books. . . . After the arguments had been justly weighed on both sides, they seem to have been admitted by the general consent of the Latin Church, as they had all along been admitted by the Greek Church. The canon, as it now stands, both of the Old and New Testament, we find enumerated in Pope Innocent's letter to Exuperius, bishop of Toulouse, an. 405, in S. Austin, (l. ii. de doct. christ. c. viii.) and in the decrees of an African Council, an. 419, consisting of 217 bishops, who declare that in giving a catalogue of the Holy Scriptures, they only confirm and ratify what they had received of their Fathers. This canon is attributed to the third Council of Carthage, an. 397. Dr. Cosin, an eminent Protestant divine, tells us in his canon of Scripture, p. 4, "that to know the books of Scripture, there is no safer course to be taken than to follow the public voice and the universal testimony of the Church." The sixth of the thirty-nine articles gives a similar rule, which excludes private judgment. And "what is this," asks Hooker, "but to acknowledge ecclesiastical tradition?" The mind of man, naturally fickle and unsettled, stands in need of a guide in the road to eternal life. I shall never hesitate, says a spirited author, to take for my guide the Catholic Church, which contains in herself the authority of past and future ages. The Syriac version of the Old and New Testament, which is deservedly allowed to be of the greatest antiquity and authority, comprises the same deuterocanonical books as the canon of the Council of Trent; a convincing proof that the Church of Syria, immediately after the times of the apostles, considered them as part of the sacred canon, no less than the Catholics of the present day. For a very satisfactory account respecting the authenticity and inspiration of this Epistle, as also for an excellent commentary with notes moral, doctrinal, and critical, see a late work entitled, An Explanation of S. Paul's Epistle to the Hebrews, by the Rev. Henry Rutter.—What can be the reason why Protestants admit the deuterocanonical books of the New and reject those of the Old Testament?—This Epistle merits the particular attention of Christians of every denomination, since it points out to them their various duties in respect to the necessity of faith and the practice of a holy life. In opposition to the Socinians, it tends to shew not only the divinity of Jesus Christ, but also that his death was a true and real sacrifice of atonement for the sins of mankind. See C. i, v. 6, &c. In opposition to other sectarists, it proves that the bloody sacrifice of Christ, once offered on the cross, though a full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice of redemption, does not exclude the unbloody sacrifice of the Mass, by which he is a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech. See C. v, &c. It is no less applicable to Catholics, in order to confirm them in the faith once delivered to the saints, and to point out the dreadful consequences of abandoning that religion which Jesus Christ came to establish in the world. The just man lives by faith, but if he draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. Let us, therefore, hold fast the confession of our hope, without wavering, or forsaking our assembly, the Catholic Church, as many have done to follow Luther, Calvin, Wesley, and other separatists. But we, says the apostle, are not of them who draw back unto perdition, but of them who have faith unto the saving of the soul. Heb. x. 39.

CHAP. I.

God spoke of old by the prophets, but now by his Son, who is incomparably greater than the Angels.

GOD having spoken at different times and in many ways, in times past, to the fathers, by the prophets: last of all,

2 In these days hath spoken to us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the world:

3 Who being the splendour of his glory, and the figure of his substance, and upholding all things by the word of his power, making purgation of sins, sitteth on the right hand of the majesty on high:

* Wisd. vii. 26.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. At different times, and in many ways.* The first word signifies that God revealed the incarnation of his Son, as it were, by parcels, and by degrees, at different times, and to different persons, to Adam, to Abraham, to Moses, to David, &c. The latter word expresseth the different ways and manners, as by angels, by immediate inspirations, and revelations, by types, figures, and ceremonies. †—Last of all, by his Son, his true, natural, eternal Son, of whom we must always take notice, that being both true God, and true man, by the union of the divine and human nature to one and the same divine person. S. Paul speaks of him sometimes as God, sometimes mentions what applies to him as man, sometimes as our Redeemer, both God and man. This must necessarily happen in speaking of Christ; but when we find things that cannot be understood of one that is a pure or mere man only, or that cannot be true but of him, who is truly God, these are undeniable proofs against the errors of the Arians and Socinians. Wi.

VER. 2. Whom he hath appointed heir of all things. Heir is here not taken for one that succeeds another at his death, but for the same as Master or Lord. And though Christ be inseparably God and man, yet this applies to him, as man, because, as God, he was not constituted in time, but was always from eternity, Lord of all things, with the Father and the Holy Ghost: by whom also he made the world. That is, all created beings, and in such a manner, that all creatures were equally produced by the three divine persons. See Jo. i. 3, and the annotations on that place. Wi.

VER. 3. Who being the splendour,† or brightness of his glory, not as beams or rays are derived from a lightsome body, but by a necessary and eternal communication of the same substance, and of the whole light; in which sense the council of Nice understood the eternal Son of God to be light of light. This partly helps us to conceive the eternal generation of the Son from the Father, because the brightness is at the same time with the sun, though all comparisons

4 Being made so much better than the Angels, as he hath inherited a more excellent name than they.

5 For, to which of the Angels hath he said at any time: *Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again: ^bI will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son?

6 And again, when he introduceth the first begotten into the world, he saith: *And let all the Angels of God adore him.

7 And to the Angels indeed he saith: ^aHe that maketh his Angels, spirits: and his ministers, a flame of fire.

8 But to the Son: *Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a sceptre of justice is the sceptre of thy kingdom.

9 Thou hast loved justice, and hated iniquity:

* Ps. ii. 7.—^b 2 Kings vii. 14.—^c Ps. xcvi. 7.—¹ Ps. ciii. 4.

fall short of this mystery. Wi.—We may here observe the two natures of Christ. As God, he is the Creator of all things; as man, he is constituted heir of the goods of God. Not content to possess the inheritance of his Father in his own person, he will have us as coheirs to share it also with him. May we so live as to hear one day that happy sentence: Come, ye blessed of my Father, &c.—And the figure of his substance. In the Greek is the character of his substance; which might be translated, the express image. There are different ways by which a thing may be said to be a figure or image of another: here it is taken for such a representation of the substance of the Father, that though the Father and Son be distinct persons, and the Son proceed from the Father, yet he is such a figure and image, as to have the same nature and substance with the Father, as the Catholic Church always believed and declared against the ancient heretics, and particularly against the Arians. Their words may be partly seen in Petavius, l. ii. de Trin. c. 11. l. iv. c. 6. l. vi. c. 8. being too prolix for these short notes. And this may be understood by the following words concerning the Son: and upholding or preserving all things by the word of his power. As he had said before, that all things were made by him, so all things are preserved by him, equally with the Father. See Col. i. 16, 17. See also v. 10. of this chapter, and the annot. Jo. i. 3. Wi.—Figure. This does not exclude the reality. So Christ's body in the eucharist, and his mystical death in the mass, though called a figure, image, or representation of Christ's visible body and sacrifice upon the cross, yet may be and is the self-same substance. B.—Sitteth on the right hand of the majesty on high. This also may be taken to express the equality of the Son with the Father, if considered as God; but this sitting on the right hand of God, both here, in S. Mark, c. xvi. and in the apostles' creed, express what agrees with Christ, as our Redeemer, God made man by his incarnation, and who as man is made the head of his Church, the judge of the living and of the dead; and so S. Stephen said, (Acts vii.) I see the heavens open, and the Son of man standing at the right hand of God. Wi.

VER. 4. Being made so much better, &c. The Arians pretended from hence that Christ was made, or created. But the apostle speaks of Christ as man, and tells us that Christ, even as man, by his ascension was exalted above the Angels. —As he hath inherited a more excellent name. That is, both the dignity and name of the Son of God, of his only Son, and of his true Son. See 1 Jo. v. 20. Wi.

VER. 5. Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. These words, though commonly expounded of the eternal generation of the Son of God in the day or moment of eternity, yet may be truly applied either to Christ made man by his incarnation, or to Christ risen from the dead, as they are used by S. Paul, (Acts xiii. 83.) because the same Christ both these ways is the Son of God. It was the only true and natural Son of God, who was made flesh, who was made man, who rose from the dead; and the eternal Father manifested his eternal Son by his incarnation, and shewed him triumphing over death by his resurrection. —I will be to him a father, &c. Although these words might be literally spoken of Solomon, yet in the mystical sense (chiefly intended by the Holy Ghost) they are to be understood of Christ, who in a much more proper sense is the Son of God. Wi.

VER. 6. Let all the Angels of God adore him. These words seem to be cited out of Ps. xcvi. 7. according to the Sept. And they seem to be an invitation, and a command to the Angels to adore Jesus Christ, when at the end of the world he shall come to judgment. This is one of the proofs which S. Paul here brings, to shew that the Angels are inferior to Christ, because they are commanded to adore him. Wi.—God shews the superiority of his divine Son over the Angels, in ordering the latter to adore him. Wherever the person of Christ is, there it ought to be adored by both men and Angels, therefore in the blessed sacrament.

VER. 7. Maketh his Angels, spirits: and his ministers, a flame of fire. S. Aug. on Ps. ciii. and S. Greg. hom. xxxiv. in Evang. would have the sense and construction of the words to be, who maketh the blessed spirits to be also his Angels, or messengers to announce and execute his will: (messengers and Angels signify the same in the Greek) Calvin and Beza by spirits, here understand the winds, as if the sense was only, who maketh the winds and flames of fire, that is, thunder and lightning, the messengers and instruments of his divine will, in regard of men, whom he punisheth. But this exposition agrees not with the rest of the text, nor with the design of S. Paul, which is to shew Christ above all the Angels, and above all creatures. S. Paul therefore is to be understood of therefore, God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy partners.

(1582)

10 And: 'Thou in the beginning, O Lord, hast founded the earth: and the heavens are the works of thy hands.

11 They shall perish, but thou shalt continue: and they shall all grow old as a garment:

12 And as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed: but thou art the self-same, and thy years shall not fail.

13 But to which of the Angels said he at any time: *Sit on my right hand, until I make thy enemies thy footstool?

14 Are they not all ministering spirits, sent to minister for those, who shall receive the inheritance of salvation?

* Ps. xlv. 7.—† Ps. ci. 26.—‡ Ps. cix. 1. 1 Cor. i. 25.

Angels or angelic spirits: but then the sense may be, who maketh his Angels like the winds, or like a flame of fire, inasmuch as they execute his divine will with incredible swiftness, like the winds, and with a force and activity not unlike that of fire. Wi.

VER. 8-9. But to the Son. That is, to his Son Jesus Christ, he saith, Thy throne, O God, is for ever and ever, and lasts for eternity.—A sceptre, or rod of equity, is the sceptre of thy kingdom. That is, O Christ, God and man, head of thy Church, judge of all mankind, thou shalt reward and punish all under thee with justice and equity, as thou hast loved justice, and hated iniquity: therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee. Many here understand God first named, to be in the vocative case, and that the sense is: therefore thee, O God, thy God, hath anointed: thus Christ is called God. Others take God in both places to be in the nominative case, and to be only a repetition of God the Father; and the sense to be, thee Christ, God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness, above them that are partakers with thee: by which spiritual unction, some understand graces infused into Christ's soul at his incarnation, by a greater plenitude of graces than was ever given to any saints whom he made partakers of his glory in heaven; others expound it of an unction of greater glory given to Christ in heaven as man, because by his sufferings and merits he had destroyed and triumphed over sin. See Estius, A. Lapide, &c. Wi.

VER. 10, &c. And again: thou in the beginning, O Lord, hast founded the earth, &c. The text, as well as the authority of interpreters, shew these words to be still spoken of the Son of God, of Christ, who was both true God and man. And though part of Ps. ci. from which these words are taken, contain a prayer to God for the restoring of the city of Jerusalem, yet in this psalm is chiefly signified the glory of Christ, and of his Church, which will be spread over all nations. See S. Chrysa. Estius, A. Lapide, &c.—As a vesture shalt thou change them, &c. The apostle, in the second verse of this chapter, had said that the world was made by the Son of God: now he tells us that all created things shall wax old like a garment, shall decay and perish, (at least from their present state and condition) shall be changed; but thou, who art both God and man, art always the same, without decay or change. Wi.—The apostle here applies the work of the creation to the Son of God, and thus furnishes a clear and striking proof of his divinity, against the Unitarians. To elude this proof, some of them pretend that these verses have been fraudulently added; but they are found in all the Greek copies, and in all ancient versions of this epistle. Others try to give forced interpretations to these verses, but the words are convincingly clear to all who do not purposely shut their eyes.

VER. 13-14. Sit on my right hand, &c. The ancient Jews themselves understood this 109th psalm of their Messias, nor could they answer Christ's words, (Matt. xxii. 45.) when he shewed them by these same words, that their Messias was not only the Son of David, but also the Lord of David, of whom it was said: the Lord said to my Lord, sit thou on my right hand, until I make thy enemies thy footstool. See also 1 Cor. xv. 25. and in this epistle, C. x. 13. —Are they not all ministering spirits? &c. The apostle, in this chapter, not only shews how much the dignity of Christ is superior to that of the highest Angels, but also his divinity; and that he is both true God and true man, as the ancient Fathers took notice against the Arians. Wi.—The holy Angels, says S. Austin, to whose society we aspire, help us without difficulty, because their notion is pure and free. De Civit. l. 11. c. xxxi. Having then Jesus Christ for our advocate and mediator at the right hand of God, and his Angels for our guardians, ministering spirits, what can we wish for more?

* V. 1. Multifariam, πολυμερῶς; which signifies, that God revealed the coming of his Son as it were by parts and parcels, or by degrees, first revealing some things and then others.

† Ibid. Novissime, ἐν ἑξάρου, which reading Dr. Wells prefers before that in the ordinary Greek copies, which have ἐν ἑξάρου τῶν ἡμεῶν, followed by the Prot. translation and Mr. N.

‡ V. 3. Splendor gloriæ, ἀπαύραμα, refulgentia, effulgentia, &c.

§ Ibid. Figura substantiæ, χαρακτήρ τῆς οὐσιότητος. Hypostasis signifies person, substantia, and also substantia.

¶ V. 7. 'Ο πῶς τῶν Ἀγγέλων αὐτοῦ πνεύματα, not τὰ πνεύματα, the Greek article being put before Angels, and not before spirits, may seem to favour that exposition, which compares Angels to the winds and to a flame of fire.

CHAP. II.

The transgression of the precepts of the Son of God is far more condemnable than of those of the Old Testament, given by Angels.

THEREFORE ought we more diligently to observe the things which we have heard: lest perhaps we should let them slip.

2 For if the word spoken by the Angels became steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward:

3 How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation? which having begun to be declared by the Lord, was confirmed to us, by them that heard,

4 *God also bearing them witness by signs and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will.

5 For God hath not put in subjection to the Angels the world to come, of which we speak.

6 But one in a certain place hath testified, saying; *What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?

7 Thou hast made him a little less than the Angels: thou hast crowned him with glory and honour: and hast set him over the works of thy hands.

8 *Thou hast put all things in subjection under his feet. For in that he subjected all things to him, he left nothing not subject to him. But now we see not as yet all things subject to him.

* Mark xvi. 20.—b Ps. viii. 5.—c Matt. xxviii. 18. 1 Cor. xv. 26.—d Philip. ii. 8.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Lest perhaps we should let them slip away, or run out, like water out of leaking vessels, which is lost, and cannot be taken up again. According to the letter it is, lest we run out; the sense must be, lest we do not sufficiently attend to these truths.* Wi.

VER. 2. For if the word spoken by the Angels, &c. That is, if the law delivered to Moses by Angels, became firm and was to be obeyed, and the transgressors punished, how much more is this true of the new law delivered by our Lord Jesus Christ himself, and preached by his disciples that heard him, and which hath been confirmed by so many miracles, and by so many gifts of the Holy Ghost, which the believers have received! Wi.

VER. 4. The miraculous powers the Almighty bestowed in the early ages of the Church, for the establishment and propagation of the faith, became afterwards less frequent, as there was less need of them; but they have never been totally withdrawn, as some pretend, nor has there passed a single age from that of the apostles down to the present time, in which several most evident and stupendous miracles have not been wrought in the Catholic Church.

VER. 6. God hath not put in subjection to the Angels that world to come. By the world to come, is meant the Church of Christ to the end of the world, and succeeding to the state of those who served God under the old law. The former world, under the law of Moses, might be said to be subject to Angels, by whom that law was delivered; but the church of the new law is subject to Christ, its author and publisher. Wi.

VER. 8. But one; to wit, the author of the 8th Psalm said, what is man, &c. that is, man, or mankind, considered in his own frail nature, corrupted by sin, guilty of eternal death, that thou shouldst be mindful of him, restore him to thy favour, and bestow such graces upon him! But the words of the psalm, and of S. Paul in this place, though they may be understood of every man, yet are to be taken as particularly spoken of Christ as man, or of the human nature of Christ, exalted by the real union with the divine person of the Son of God. Wi.—If the sacred humanity of Jesus Christ spoke in this manner, when visited by the eternal word, with what humility ought a sinner to say: What is man?

VER. 7. Thou hast made him a little less than the Angels. Man's nature, even the human nature of Christ in itself, is inferior to the nature of Angels, though raised to a degree of dignity above other creatures. Wi.

VER. 8. He left nothing not subject to him. He speaks here of Christ, to whom God hath made all creatures subject, whether in heaven, earth, or hell; whether they have been, or shall be hereafter, as to the judge and the head of all.—But now we see not as yet all things subject to him. This will only be at the end of the world. At present the devils and the wicked make opposition against Christ and his elect. Wi.

VER. 9. But we see (by faith) Jesus, who as man, by his sufferings and death, was made less than the Angels, nay, despised as the last of men; now, by his glorious resurrection and ascension, and by the submission all nations pay to him, who believe in him and worship him, crowned with glory and honour. And he submitted himself willingly to all those sufferings, even to the death of the cross, that by the grace of God he might taste death for all; or, as we read in the Syriac version, for every man: therefore not only for the predestinate or the elect, who are saved. Wi.

VER. 10. For it became him, &c. He gives the reasons for which the Son of God would become man and suffer death, not that this was absolutely necessary, 9 *But we see Jesus, who was made a little less than the Angels, for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour: that through the grace of God he might taste death for all.

10 For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, who had brought many children into glory, to make the author of their salvation perfect by suffering.

11 For both he who sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of one. For which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, saying:

12 *I will declare thy name to my brethren: in the midst of the church I will praise thee.

13 And again: *I will put my trust in him: And again: *Behold I, and my children, whom God hath given me.

14 Forasmuch then as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself in like manner partook of the same: that, *through death, he might destroy him who had the empire of death, that is to say, the devil:

15 And might deliver them, who, through the fear of death, were all their lifetime subject to slavery.

16 For nowhere doth he take hold of the Angels but of the seed of Abraham he taketh hold.

17 Wherefore it behoved him in all things to be made like to his brethren, that he might become a

* Ps. xxi. 23.—b Ps. xvii. 8.—c Isai. viii. 18.—d Osee xlii. 14. 1 Cor. xv. 51.

but a convenient means to manifest the goodness, the wisdom, and the justice of God, by the incarnation and death of his Son; that having decreed to bring many sons, or children, to eternal glory, he was pleased to send his divine Son to become man, and so to consummate the Author of man's salvation by suffering; i. e. to make him a perfect and consummate sacrifice of expiation for the sins of all men, and to satisfy the justice of God in the most perfect manner. Wi.—By suffering, Christ was to enter into his glory, (Luke xxiv. 26,) which the apostle here calls being made perfect. Ch.—In this and the above verses we may observe three different states of Jesus Christ. The first, that of his humiliation by his passion and death; the second, that of his glory at his resurrection and ascension into heaven; the third, that of his consummated glory in heaven after the last judgment. In his first state, viz. his passion, he was made not only less than the Angels, but as the last of men; novissimus virorum. In his second, all power was given to him in heaven and earth; but this power he will not fully exercise till after the general judgment, when all things, without exception, will be made subject to him; and this is the third state, the permanent state of his glory, which is never to end. To thy sovereign power, O divine Jesus, subject my mind, will, and heart, and make my hitherto rebellious heart in all things conformable to thy sacred and loving heart.

VER. 11. For both he who sanctifieth, (i. e. our Redeemer, who sanctifieth, or has obtained sanctification for all, by sacrificing himself on the cross) and they who are sanctified, are all of one; have the same human nature, and are from the same first parent Adam, whose Son, (Christ) as man, was; on which account he calls men his brethren. See Jo. xx. 17. and Psalm xxi. 23. in which is a clear prediction of Christ's sufferings, where it is said: I will declare thy name to my brethren, &c. Wi.

VER. 13. Christians are the disciples and children of Jesus Christ, begotten upon the cross, and offered with him and through him to his Father. Happy they who ratify this offering, and consummate this sacrifice, by works of mortification and penance!

VER. 14. That, through death, he might destroy the power of him who had the empire of death, who, by tempting men to sin, had made them slaves to him and to eternal death; so that they lived always slaves to the devil, under a miserable fear of death, and liable to eternal death. Wi.

VER. 15. The devil, by exciting men to sin, made them liable to a temporal and eternal death; he was, therefore, the prince of death, both as to soul and body. Jesus Christ, the life and the source of life, has by his death destroyed sin and vanquished the devil; he has, at once, triumphed over the prince of death, and death itself; and by the assurance which he has given us of eternal life, has delivered us from the terrible apprehensions of dying. To a good Christian, death is the termination of misery and the beginning of eternal happiness; why, therefore, should we be afraid to die? We ought rather, with S. Paul, to say: I desire to be dissolved, and to be with Christ.

VER. 16. For nowhere doth he take hold of the Angels; Lit. that he apprehendeth, or layeth hold on the Angels; that is, according to the common interpretation, we nowhere find that he hath united their nature to his divine person to save them, though a great part of them had also sinned and fallen from heaven. But he taketh the seed of Abraham; i. e. he became man of the seed or race of Abraham, to redeem or save mankind. Wi.—Nowhere, &c. That is, he never took upon him the nature of Angels, but that of the seed of Abraham. Ch.

merciful and faithful high priest with God, to expiate the sins of the people.

18 For in that, wherein he himself hath suffered and been tempted, he is able to succour those also who are tempted.

CHAP. III.

Christ is more excellent than Moses: and therefore we must adhere to him by faith and obedience.

WHEREFORE, holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly vocation, consider the apostle and high priest of our profession, Jesus:

2 Who is faithful to him who appointed him, as was also * Moses in all his house.

3 For he was deemed worthy of greater glory than Moses, by so much as he who hath built the house, hath greater honour than the house.

4 For every house is built by some man: but he who created all things, is God.

5 And Moses indeed was faithful in all his house, as a servant, for a testimony of those things which were to be spoken:

6 But Christ, as a Son in his own house: which house are we, if we retain firm the confidence, and the glory of hope unto the end.

7 Wherefore, as the Holy Ghost saith: ^bTo-day, if you shall hear his voice,

8 Harden not your hearts, as in the provocation, in the day of temptation in the desert,

9 Where your fathers tempted me, proved, and saw my works,

10 Forty years: For which cause I was offended

* Num. xii. 7.—^b Ps. xciv. 8. Infra iv. 7.

VER. 17. To be made like to his brethren in all things; (sin always excepted) i. e. to be tempted, to suffer, to die, that having the true nature of a suffering man, he might become a merciful high priest, fit to compassionate us in our sins, in our temptations and sufferings. Wi.

* V. 1. Ne forte pereffluamus, μήποτε παραρρήνῳμεν.

† V. 5. Orbem terræ futurum, τὴν οἰκουμένην τὴν μέλλουσαν.

‡ V. 10. Authorem salutis eorum per passionem consummare, not consummari, τελειῶσαι.

§ V. 16. Nusquam enim Angelos apprehendit, sed semen Abrahæ apprehendit, ἐπιλαμβάνεται, assumit, vel assumpsit.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. The high priest of our profession. That is, of the faith we confess, or profess. Christ is also here called our apostle, i. e. sent by his Father. Wi.—Jesus Christ is not only our apostle, he is the doctor, the legislator of the religion we profess. He is our high priest, who offered himself in sacrifice for the sanctification of his Church, and who is now exercising at the right hand of his Father the office of the priesthood in our behalf, both in heaven and on earth. We here see our dignity: we have a God for the apostle and high priest of our religion.

VER. 2. Faithful to him, &c. To be made, may apply to Christ as man; but here the sense is, who made him head over all his Church. Wi.

VER. 3. Of greater glory, &c. The apostle shews Christ to be greater than Moses several ways. 1. Christ is as much above Moses, as an architect above the house which he has made; for Christ (who, as God, made all things) is the builder of that very house, that is, of the house of Israel, of which Moses was only a part of a member. 2. Moses was only employed in the house, as a servant, to give testimony to others, as he was ordered. Wi.

VER. 6. Christ, as a Son in his own house; which house, or Church of the faithful are we: and Christ is our only Lord and Master, equally with the Father, and the Holy Ghost; but we are all members, and profitable members, if we retain firm the confidence in him, and the glory of hope, or a glorious hope unto the end. Wi.—Hitherto S. Paul endeavours to detach the Hebrews from Moses and the law, to attach them to Christ and his gospel. What follows, is an exhortation to persevere in the faith, lest we come to be cast off like the Jews.

VER. 8. This alludes to the 17th chapter of Exodus, where the history of the provocations and contradictions of the Israelites is related at large.

VER. 11. As I have sworn in my wrath: * if they shall enter into my rest. But if here implies the same as they shall not. See Mar. viii. 12. And that this is the sense here, appears by the 18th verse, where it is expressly said, they should not enter into his rest; i. e. to rest in the land of Chanaan, promised to them. Wi.

VER. 12. Take heed, &c. Not to imitate their incredulous obstinacy, lest you never enter into the place of eternal rest, by departing from God by sin. Wi.—

with this generation, and I said: They always err in heart. And they have not known my ways, 11 As I have sworn in my wrath: If they shall enter into my rest.

12 Take heed, brethren, lest perhaps there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, to depart from the living God:

13 But exhort one another every day, whilst to-day is named: lest any one of you be hardened by the deceitfulness of sin.

14 For we are made partakers of Christ: yet so if we hold the beginning of his substance firm unto the end.

15 While it is said: To-day, if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts, as in that provocation.

16 For some who heard did provoke: but not all who came out of Egypt by Moses.

17 And with whom was he offended forty years? Was it not with those who sinned, * whose carcasses fell in the desert?

18 And to whom did he swear that they should not enter into his rest: but to them that believed not.

19 And we see that they could not enter in, because of unbelief.

CHAP. IV.

The Christian's rest: we are to enter into it through Jesus Christ.

LET us, therefore, fear, lest perhaps forsaking the promise of entering into his rest, any of you be thought to be wanting.

2 For to us also it hath been declared as well as to them, but the word of hearing did not profit them,

* Num. xiv. 37.

To abandon Christ is to abandon God, since Christ is God. He who denies the Son, believes not the Father, who has wrought so many miracles & sanctioned his mission. 1 John ii. 23. It is of little consequence to eternity whether it be the doctrine of faith or the life of faith we reject, if persons are equally lost by either practical or speculative infidelity.

VER. 13. To day. The duration of the present life may be accounted but a day, which God destines for the trial of our faith and obedience; we ought, therefore, to labour hard during the short time of the present day, that we may live and reign with God for all eternity. We cannot too often entertain this truth in our hearts, if we wish to square our lives after the gospel. The heart of man becomes insensibly hardened to Christian truths, when its natural corruption is not courageously attacked.

VER. 14. You have already been made partakers of the benefits of Christ, at your conversion and baptism, to the beginning of his substance,† by which seems to be understood the faith of Christ. Wi.—If to subsist in Jesus Christ, to be washed in his blood, to be animated with his spirit, to be nourished with his flesh, is but a sketch, a seed of that union with him which on a future day is to be effected, how comes it that we are so attached to this earth, how can we hazard for such a mere trifle such immense felicity?

VER. 15. From the 6th and 14th verses we learn the great happiness conferred on us at baptism; but all this, happily, we are taught is dependent on faith, the foundation of our spiritual and divine being.

VER. 16. Let us not flatter ourselves with having quitted Egypt by our baptism, unless we also quit that opposition, and that disobedience of our heart to the laws and maxims of the gospel. The Israelites, under the guidance of Moses, left Egypt for the promised land, and after travelling in the desert for the space of two years, found themselves on the confines of the so much desired country; but the possession of it was denied them, and they were left to perish in the desert, because they distrusted God's promises, and were incredulous to his word. All that happened to this chosen people, says S. Paul, was a figure of what was to happen to us. Here then we may read our destiny, if, like them, we prove ungrateful to God.

VER. 17. Whose carcasses were laid, or buried in the desert? None of those who were reckoned up (Num. xiv.) entered the land of Chanaan, except Josue and Caleb; but then we may take notice, that none were there numbered under twenty years of age, nor the Levites, nor the women. Wi.

* V. 11. Si introibunt, εἰ εὐδοκίῳσιν.

† V. 14. Initium substantiæ ejus, τὴν ἀρχὴν τῆς ὑποστάσεως. See C. xi. 1. Et fides sperandarum substantiarum rerum, ἐλπίδες τῶν ἐνδοξαίων.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Let us, therefore, fear, &c. S. Paul continues his exhortation to them, not to be like the incredulous Jews, and so to be excluded from the place of eternal rest. Wi.

not being mixed with the faith of those things which they heard.

3 For we who have believed, shall enter into rest; as he said: "As I have sworn in my wrath: If they shall enter into my rest: and this when the works from the foundation of the world were finished.

4 For in a certain place he spoke of the seventh day thus: "And God rested the seventh day from all his works.

5 And in this place again: If they shall enter into my rest.

6 Seeing then it remaineth that some are to enter into it, and they, to whom it was first preached, did not enter in because of unbelief:

7 Again he limiteth a certain day, saying in David: To-day, after so long a time, as it is above said: "To-day, if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

8 For if Jesus had given them rest, he would never have afterwards spoken of another day.

9 There remaineth, therefore, a rest for the people of God.

10 For he who is entered into his rest: he also hath rested from his works, as God from his.

11 Let us hasten, therefore, to enter into that rest: lest any man fall into the same example of unbelief.

12 For the word of God is living and effectual, and more penetrating than any two-edged sword: and

* Ps. xciv. 11.—b Gen. ii. 2.—c Supra iii. 7.

VER. 2. To us . . . hath been declared, as well as to them. That is, as the riches of the country of Chanaan, was told by Josue and Caleb to the people, but they would not believe them; so the happiness of the kingdom of heaven has been preached by us to you: but the word they heard (lit. the word of hearing) did not profit them, not being mixed, or received with faith: let not this be your case. Wi.—As the want of a firm faith was the cause of the punishment of the Israelites, of their privation of a promised inheritance, so Christians will be eternally excluded from the kingdom promised them, unless they steadily believe and obey the gospel of Jesus Christ. The reason why so few profit of the word, is because few take care to meditate on it, to digest it, and as it were, incorporate it with themselves by proper considerations.

VER. 3, &c. It is faith that opens heaven; but faith animated by charity, nourished by good works, and perfected by mortification of the senses. God only enters into his rest after the accomplishment of his works, and shall we expect to enter before we accomplish what he has given us to do! Let us fear, but in hoping; let us hope, but in labouring.—The works . . . were finished. Wi.—This place is the same, and equally obscure in the Greek as in the Latin text. The apostle here examines what David, as a prophet, could mean, when he said of some: they shall not enter, or, if they shall enter into my rest. His argument is this: David could not prophesy of that rest, by which God, after he had created all things, (Gen. ii. 2.) is said to have rested the seventh day, when he had finished the works of the creation. Nor could David speak of that other time of resting, which was promised and given to the Israelites, when, having conquered all their enemies, they were introduced by Jesus, or Josue, into the promised land of Chanaan; for these two rests were passed long before his prophecy: therefore David must speak of some rest that was to come afterwards, when he said: To-day, if you shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts, &c. Therefore it must needs follow that some day of rest, some sabbatism, as he calls it, after his time, must remain for the people of God, that should not harden their hearts: and from hence he concludes that David had in view that eternal rest of happiness which the Messiah was to obtain for us, a rest without end in the kingdom of heaven.—Let us hasten, therefore, or as it is in the Greek, let us make it our endeavour, to gain that place of rest, by our persevering in faith and good works, and take heed not to be excluded with the unbelievers. Wi.

VER. 12. For the word of God is living, &c. Some understand by the word of God, the eternal word, or Son of God: (to whom may apply all in the 12th and 13th verses) but others rather expound it of the words, promises, and menaces of God, either foretold by the prophets, or preached by the apostles. Wi.—All this language is metaphorical, but perfectly well understood by the Jews. In their sacrifices, the Levites made use of a two edged knife to separate from the victim what was for God, what was for the priests, and what was for the people. Thus in sacrificing sinners to the justice of God, Jesus Christ, like a two-edged knife, will separate what is for God, and what is for man; i. e. whatever is good or evil in the whole of man's conduct.

VER. 13. In his sight, or to the eyes, must signify in the sight of God. Wi.—If the word of God in Jesus Christ be so terrible, what will Jesus Christ be himself, when he comes to judge us according to the severity of his justice!

VER. 14. Having, therefore, as I told you before, a great high priest, Christ, reaching unto the division of the soul and the spirit, of the joints also, and the marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

13 "Neither is there any creature invisible in his sight: but all things are naked and open to the eyes of him, to whom our speech is.

14 Having, therefore, a great high priest who hath penetrated into the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God, let us hold fast our confession.

15 For we have not a high priest, who cannot have compassion on our infirmities: but one tempted in all things like as we are, without sin.

16 Let us go, therefore, with confidence to the throne of grace: that we may obtain mercy, and find grace in seasonable aid.

CHAP. V.

The office of a high priest. Christ is our high priest.

FOR every high priest taken from among men is appointed for men in the things that appertain to God, that he may offer up gifts and sacrifices for sins:

2 Who can have compassion on them who are ignorant, and err: because he himself also is encompassed with infirmity:

3 And therefore he ought, as for the people, so also for himself, to offer for sins.

4 "Neither doth any man take the honour to himself but he that is called by God, as Aaron was.

* Ps. xxxiii. 16. Eccl. xv. 20.—Exod. xxviii. 1. 2 Par. xxvi. 18.

who ascended into heaven, who can compassionate our infirmities, let us with a firm confidence approach the throne of grace, by faith, hope, charity, and good works. Wi.

VER. 16. Let us often contemplate Jesus Christ on his two thrones, that of his mercy, and that of his justice; of his mercy, where at present he is seated as our compassionate high priest, to bestow on us the riches of his grace; of his justice, where he will one day sit as judge, to examine most rigorously both our faith and our practice. Our separated brethren pretend to prove from this text that we need no help of saints to obtain any favour. But by this argument they may as well take away the helps and prayers of the living for one another. For we do not require the help of either the saints in heaven, or of our brethren on earth, through any mistrust of God's mercy, but on account of our own unworthiness, convinced that the prayer of a just man availeth more with Him, than the desire of a grievous sinner; and of a number making intercession together, rather than of one alone. This they cannot deny, except they deny the holy Scriptures. Neither do we come less to Him, or with less confidence, when we come accompanied with the prayers of Angels, saints, priests, or just men, with us, as they fondly imagine and pretend; but with much more confidence in his grace, mercy, and merits, than if we prayed ourselves alone. B.

* V. 3. Operibus ab institutione mundi perfectis, καὶ τοὶ τῶν ἔργων ἀπὸ καταβολῆς κόσμου γεννηθέντες.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. Every high priest. He speaks first of the office of priests in general, before he speaks of Christ's priesthood. A priest is chosen and preferred before other men, as qualified for the divine ministry, to offer up gifts, oblations, sacrifices, in order to obtain forgiveness of his own sins and those of the people, who, by the experience he has of his own infirmities, may compassionate others who offend through frailty or ignorance, every priest (excepting our Saviour, Christ) being a sinner. Nor must he take upon himself rashly and inconsiderately, for temporal motives, this sacred ministry, formidable (says S. Gregory) even for the shoulders of Angels; he must consult God by prayer, follow the advice of his spiritual guides and pious parents; by these means to know whether he has a call from God to this ministry, as Aaron had. Wi.—The priest and pastor should never forget that he is a man and a sinner; that he is honoured with this divine ministry, to offer sacrifice both for his own sins and for the sins of the faithful; that prayer should be his delight, the altar his centre, and the sacrifice of the body and blood of Christ his supreme felicity. "This sacrifice of the Eucharist," says S. Austin, "has succeeded to all the ancient victims that were immolated of old, to signify the future sacrifice." 1. 10. c. xx. de Civit. Dei. As to the word mass, it was in use to signify this holy sacrifice of the altar above thirteen hundred years ago. See the second C. of Carthage, can. 3. S. Jerom upon the Prov. c. xi. S. Ambrose, l. 2. ep. 14. Missam facere cœpi; I began to say mass. It was introduced into this country with Christianity itself. See V. Bede's history, c. xxvii. & b. 4. c. xiv.

VER. 4. See in 3 Kings xiii. 2 Paralip. xxvi. and 1 Kings xvi. the manifest punishments of the Almighty on laics that impiously and sacrilegiously attempted the ministry of priests. In the Christian dispensation, archbishop Cranmer, the very soul of the pretended reformation, dictatorially pronounced, "he 5 So also Christ did not glorify himself to be made a high priest: but he that said to him: *Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee.

6 As he saith also in another place: ^bThou art a priest forever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

7 Who in the days of his flesh, offering up prayers and supplications, with a strong cry and tears to him, that was able to save him from death, was heard for his reverence.

8 And whereas indeed he was the Son of God, he learned obedience by the things which he suffered:

9 And being consummated, he became the cause of eternal salvation to all that obey him, that is appointed to be a bishop or priest, needeth no consecration:" words quoted by Dr. Stillington from his own handwriting, in his Irenicum, p. 391, 2d ed. But the Catholic Church has given a very different decision, which is confirmed by the testimony of Scripture, apostolical tradition, and the unanimous consent of the Fathers. See Acts vi. 6. and xiii. 3. and xiv. 22. 1 Tim. iv. 14. &c. See in the history of Soerates, who lived in the fifth century, how the usurpation of Iechyraa, in taking upon himself the name and office of a priest without receiving holy orders, was reprobated as a crime worthy of death. l. 1. c. xxvii. Ed. Val.

* Ps. ii. 7.—^b Ps. cix. 4.

VER. 5. So also Christ, as man, did not glorify himself, by assuming this dignity of high priest, but had it conferred upon him by the divine decrees of his eternal Father, who said to him: Thou art my Son, and thou art a priest forever, &c. Wi.

VER. 6. Some may perhaps wonder why S. Paul does not dwell more in this epistle on the eucharistic sacrifice; but until the Hebrews understood the bloody sacrifice on the cross, they could not be supposed to understand the unbloody sacrifice of the altar. The holy Fathers observe, that the sacrifice of Melchisedech, (Gen. xiv. 18.) offered in bread and wine, prefigured the unbloody sacrifice offered by Jesus Christ at his last supper. See Clemens Alex. l. 4. Strom. c. viii. S. Cyp. l. 2. ep. 3. ad Cæciliæ. Euseb. of Cæsar. l. 5. Dem. Evang. c. iii. S. Jerom ad Marcel. S. Aug. ep. 95. ad Inn. Pap. S. Amb. Epip. Chrys. &c. apud Bellarm. l. 1. de missa. c. vi. Hence it follows, that the holy Eucharist is truly and properly a sacrifice as well as a sacrament, as the paschal lamb or passover of the old law was both a sacrament and sacrifice. For either our Saviour offered sacrifice at his last supper under the forms of bread and wine, or he cannot be called a priest forever according to the order of Melchisedech. For the different orders of priests are chiefly distinguished by their sacrifice; (see v. 1.) and if it be supposed that our Saviour only offered a bloody sacrifice, he would with more propriety have been called a priest according to the order of Aaron, and not of Melchisedech. See S. Aug. l. 16. de Civitat. Dei. c. xxii.

VER. 7. Who in the days of his flesh, of his mortal and suffering condition, even with strong and fervent crying out, and tears, offering up as man, prayers and supplications to him, to God, who could save him from death; to wit, in the garden of Gethsemani, and on the cross, yet with a perfect resignation and conformity of his human will to the divine will, was heard for his reverence.* I leave this translation, which is in the Rhemes Testament, very literal from the Latin Vulgate, and which cannot be said to be any ways disagreeable to the Greek. As to the sense, there are two expositions in the best interpreters. S. Chrysostom and many others understand, that he was heard as to every prayer that he made absolutely, and not conditionally only, (as when he prayed that the cup of his sufferings might pass from him) and he was heard for that reverence, or reverential regard, and just consideration which the eternal Father had for him, who was his true Son. This interpretation agrees better with the Greek text, in which is left out the word his. Others by his reverence, understand that he was heard on account of that reverential fear, that respectful submission and piety, which he always had towards his eternal Father. And if it be asked in what Christ was not heard, and in what he was heard: he was not heard when he said, let this cup of sufferings, or this death, pass from me, because it was not what he asked and prayed for with an absolute desire, but only thereby expressed the natural fear which, as man, he had of death, and therefore presently added, but not my will but thine be done, expressing what he knew to be the divine will. And to shew this, S. Chrys. on these words, brings all those sentences by which our Saviour, Christ, had declared that he had power to lay down his life, and power to take it up again; that no one taketh it from him, but that he laid it down of himself. See John x. 18. and S. Chrys. nom. vii. p. 475. But Christ was heard in all he prayed for with an absolute will, according to what he said to his Father, I know that thou always hearest me. Jo. xi. 42. He was heard as to all that he asked with an absolute will, either for himself or his Church. Wi. —What excellent dispositions these of Jesus Christ in his sacrifice, which we learn from his apostles. How truly worthy are these tears both of our love and our adoration! Hence it appears, that Jesus Christ in his prayer both in the garden and on the cross shed tears, though the evangelists are silent on this head. Menochius

VER. 8. He that was truly the Son of God, and knew all things, learnt practically, and taught us perfect obedience in suffering and dying a cruel death on the cross. Wi.

VER. 9. And being consummated, or perfected as man in all kinds of virtues, and at the same time true God by his divine person, became the author of salvation to all those who both believe in him and obey him. Wi.

VER. 10. There is but one eternal Pontiff, one universal Priest given by God; all others are his vicars, but not successors, whom he associates to his priesthood, to continue those same functions on earth which he himself exercises in heaven, and which had been prefigured in Melchisedech.

10 Called by God a high priest, according to the order of Melchisedech.

11 Of whom we have great things to say, and hard to be intelligibly uttered: because you are become weak to hear.

12 For whereas for the time you ought to be masters; you have need to be taught again what are the first rudiments of the oracles of God: and you are become such as have need of milk, and not of solid food.

13 For every one that is a partaker of milk, is unskilful in the word of justice: for he is a little child.

14 But solid food is for the perfect: for those who by use have their senses exercised to the discerning of good and evil.

VER. 11. Of whom, i. e. of his high priesthood, according to the order of Melchisedech, we have mighty things to say, and very hard to be expounded or understood by you, at least many of you, who, though you ought to be masters after the gospel hath been so long preached, and even by the apostles of Christ, yet you are weak as to understanding it; (the Greek also signifies slothful and negligent) you stand in need of being taught the first elements and principles of the Christian faith, like children, who are rather to be fed with milk than with more solid meats. How many are there now in the like condition, who are for reading and expounding all the holy Scriptures according to their own way of thinking? Wi.

* V. 7. Exauditus est pro sua reverentia, εὐλαβηθεὶς ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβίας. Even the last Protestant translation, though much more exact than any of the former, puts, and was heard in that he feared. If the Rhemes translation, which I have not changed, be obscure, I much doubt whether theirs can be better understood. I will not suppose that they mean with Calvin, that Christ was so abandoned on the cross as to be driven to despair, and that he feared and felt the punishments of the damned, from which he begged to be freed, and was heard. Beza, says Calvin, was the first author of this exposition, that is, of this blasphemy. I will rather suppose that the Protestant translators only meant, that Christ, as man, feared death. How then was he heard in that he feared? not so as to be freed from death, which he willingly underwent, but was heard so as to triumph over death, and shortly after to rise and ascend triumphant into heaven. Dr. Wells, in his amendments to the Protestant translation, has changed it in this manner, was heard so as to be delivered from his fear; and in his paraphrase expounds it thus, namely, by an Angel sent on purpose to strengthen him: so that he expounds this text of the fear and prayer of Christ in the garden, from which fear he was freed at the appearing of the Angel. Luke xxii. 43. I pretend, notwithstanding, that the Protestant translation, was heard in that he feared, though we take it with the additions made by Dr. Wells, was heard so as to be delivered from his fear, is far from being exact, nor can it be looked upon as a proper and literal translation from the Greek text, ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβίας. First, where is there any thing in the Greek for he feared, or his fear? or that he was delivered from his fear? This is to add in the text itself a particular exposition, which at the same time is contrary to what divers interpreters take to be the literal sense of these words, ἀπὸ τῆς εὐλαβίας, who by εὐλαβίας understand that great respect and regard which was in the Father towards Christ, because he was his Son. S. Chrysostom understood the force of the Greek text as well as any one, and this seems the meaning of these his words: (ἀγ. ἡ. p. 475, linea 20. Ed. Sav.) ὡσαύτῃ ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰδέσθαι αὐτὸν τὸν θεόν. Nor does the Latin translator of S. Chrysostom, Mutius Scholasticus, in the edition of Fronto Ducemus, seem to have mistaken the sense of S. Chrysostom, where we find, (hom. viii. p. 1478) tanta fuit ejus reverentia, ac pietas, ut ideò eum revereat Deus. Others indeed expound it of the reverential and godly fear, or piety, that was in Christ, as man, towards God, his Father, and that his prayers were heard on this account: but this will not justify the Protestant translation, that he was heard in that he feared, nor the paraphrase of Dr. Wells, so as to be delivered from his fear, as if by εὐλαβία were understood merely a natural fear and apprehension. I find Mr. Legh, in his Critica Sacra, on the word εὐλαβία, says that the Syriac version has from fear: but he is mistaken, as may be seen in Walton's Polyglot: the Syriac has only, he was heard, without any mention at all of any kind of fear, which is left out Mr. Legh says, Nazianzen and Theodoret follow this sense. He cites not the words nor the places. It must be again his mistake. Theodoret has nothing like it in his commentary on this passage, nor S. Greg. (orat. xxxvi.) where he cites these words of S. Paul. It is true εὐλαβία, especially in profane authors, has sometimes the same signification as timor, or metus. It is, says Scapula, timi ditas circumspēctā; but also, even in profane writers, the same as, religio, pietas in Deum. See also what examples Scapula brings on εὐλαβισμαι and εὐλαβίς; or which he says, apud Ecclesiasticos Scriptores, et in Test. Novi libris, circumspēctus et cautus circa ea quæ ad cultum divinum pertinent, religiosus, pius, ut Luc. 2. I know also, that in Heb. xi. 7. it is said of Noe, ματὴν, in the vulgar Latin, for εὐλαβηθεὶς; and Acts xxiii. 10. Tribunalis timens, εὐλαβηθεὶς; but neither of these two examples shew that in this place, where mention is made of our Saviour Christ, εὐλαβία can be properly and literally translated by fear, or that the sense is that Christ was heard so as to be delivered from his fear. For first, this exposition of fear and apprehension of death agrees not with the common exposition of the ancient Fathers, neither with S. Chrys. and those who follow him, nor with the others, as I have shewn already. Secondly, this translation agrees not with the Protestant translation in other places. As for the substantivum, εὐλαβία, it is only found in one other place in the New Testament, to wit, Heb. xii. 28. μετὰ φόβου, καὶ εὐλαβίας, where the Prot. translation has with reverence and godly fear; and for the adjective, εὐλαβής, where old Simeon is called εὐλαβής

CHAP. VI.

He warns them of the danger of falling by apostasy; and exhorts them to patience and perseverance.

WHEREFORE, leaving the word of the beginning of Christ, let us go on to things more perfect, not laying again the foundation of penance from dead works, and of faith towards God,

2 Of the doctrine of baptisms, and of the imposition of hands, and of the resurrection of the dead, and of eternal judgment.

3 And this we will do, if God will permit.

4 ^aFor it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, have tasted also the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost,

5 Have moreover tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come,

6 And are fallen away, to be renewed again unto penance, crucifying again to themselves the Son of God, and making a mockery of him.

7 For the earth that drinketh in the rain which cometh often upon it, and bringeth forth herbs useful for them by whom it is tilled, receiveth blessing from God.

8 But that which bringeth forth thorns and briers,

^a Mat. xii. 45. Infra x. 26. 2 Pet. ii. 20.

in the common Greek copies, (Luke ii. 25.) they have translated, a devout man. Acts viii. 2. the men that buried S. Stephen, ἀνδρες εὐλαβεῖς, are translated devout men, as also Acts ii. 5. Thirdly, the ancient Arabic version signifies propter reverentiam ejus, and the Ethiopic ob justitiam ejus, as they are in the translations of Walton, which agree with the Latin Vulgate, but not with that sense in which the English Protestants have translated the Greek. In fine, it must be observed that ἀπὸ here, according to these versions, bears the sense of ob or propter, and not of ab or ex, of which signification see many examples in Estius. Wi.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1-2. Wherefore leaving the word, &c. This is to be taken as connected with what he had said in the last chapter, (v. 12.) of the elements, or rudiments of Christian faith, concerning which, though some seemed not sufficiently instructed, yet he thinks it here enough to name them, and pass them over: to wit, 1. Penance, or the dispositions of a sincere repentance. 2. Faith, when they are come to the years of being instructed. 3. The doctrine of baptisms, which he expresseth in the plural number, either because all the faithful must be baptized once, if we speak of Christian baptism; or he means that persons ought to know they cannot receive Christ's baptism over again. Or, in fine, he means that the baptisms used by the Jews, which they so frequently repeated, could not make them justified. 4. The doctrine of imposition of hands, by which is commonly expounded that which was given in the sacrament of confirmation. 5. Of the resurrection of the dead. 6. Of the judgment, by which God would judge all mankind. Of these things he supposeth them already instructed. Wi.—We see here the order in which the apostles taught the Christian doctrine to the catechumens: 1. They excited them to sorrow for their sins. 2. They required of them acts of faith in God and his Son Jesus Christ. 3. They explained the nature of Christ's baptism, its virtue, and difference from the baptism of the Baptist and others. 4. After baptism, they laid their hands on them, that they might receive the strengthening grace of the Holy Ghost in confirmation; and finally, they excited them to perseverance, by the hope of a glorious resurrection, and of eternal life, and by setting before their eyes eternal damnation as the consequence of apostasy.

VER. 3. And this we will do, meaning what he said in the first verse, that his design was to proceed to things more perfect, which, after some admonitions, he comes to in the next chapter, when he speaks of the priesthood of Christ. Wi.

VER. 4. &c. For it is impossible, &c. This is an obscure place, differently expounded, which shows how rash it is for the ignorant to pretend to understand the holy Scriptures. Many understand these words, it is impossible, &c. of the sacrament of penance, or of returning to God by a profitable repentance, especially after such heinous sins as an apostasy from the true faith. But then we must take the word impossible, to imply no more than a thing that is very hard to be done, or that seldom happens, as when it is said, (Matt. xix. 26.) that it is impossible for rich men to be saved: and (Luke xvii. 1.) it is impossible that scandals should not come. For it is certain that it is never impossible for the greatest sinners to repent by the assistances which God offers them, who has also left the power to his ministers to forgive in his name the greatest sins. But others (whose interpretation seems preferable) expound this of baptism, which can only be given once. The words here in the text very much favour this exposition, when it is said, who were once enlightened. For baptism in the first ages was called the sacrament of illumination. See S. Denis de celesti Hierar. c. iv. S. Greg. Naz. &c. The following words also agree with baptism, when they are said to have been made partakers of the Holy Ghost; to have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come; all which signify the interior graces, the miraculous gifts, and power of working miracles, which they who were bap-is rejected; and very near to a curse, whose end is to be burnt.

9 But my dearly beloved, we trust better things of you, and nearer to salvation: though we thus speak.

10 For God is not unjust, that he should forget your work, and the love which you have shewn in his name, you who have ministered, and do minister to the saints.

11 And we desire that every one of you shew forth the same carefulness to the accomplishing of hope unto the end:

12 That you become not slothful, but followers of them, who through faith and patience shall inherit the promises.

13 For God promising to Abraham, because he had no one greater by whom he might swear, swore by himself,

14 Saying: ^bUnless blessing, I will bless thee, and multiplying, I will multiply thee.

15 And so after he had patiently endured, he obtained the promise.

16 For men swear by one greater than themselves; and an oath, for confirmation, is the end of all their controversy.

^b Gen. xxii. 16.

tized frequently received in those days.—They cannot be renewed again unto penance. That is, they cannot be renewed again by baptism, which is also called a renovation. Tit. iii. 5. Their sins may indeed be forgiven them in the sacrament of penance, but this is not a renovation like that in baptism, in which both the guilt, and all pain due to past sins, is remitted; whereas in the sacrament of penance, though the guilt, and the eternal punishments due to sins be remitted, yet many times, temporal punishments, to be undergone either in this world or the next, still remain due to such as have been great sinners, to them who by relapsing into the same sins, have crucified again to themselves the Son of God, making a mockery of him; i. e. who, insensible of the favours received, have ungratefully renewed sin; to take away which Christ suffered, was mocked, crucified, &c. Wi.—Macknight observes that Beza, without any authority from ancient MSS. hath inserted in his version Si, if they shall fall away, that this text might not appear to contradict the Calvinistic doctrine of the assurance of salvation. The English translators have followed Beza. The biblical student will be glad to find Dr. Wells, in his elegant edition of the New Testament, frequently restoring and preferring those readings which agree with the Latin Vulgate. The same just tribute is paid to the Vulgate by Walton, Mills, Gerard, Griesbach, Harwood, and others. Indeed the Vulgate has been declared authentic in a general council, and probably expresses more of the true reading of the original or autograph, than any Greek edition that is now to be found, and certainly much more than modern versions, which are strained more or less by the preconceived sentiments of the translators.—For the earth that drinketh in the rain, &c. He bringeth this comparison, to give them a horror of abusing God's graces and favours, and of making themselves guilty of hell fire. Wi.

VER. 9, &c. We trust better things of you, &c. That is, though I have admonished you in this manner, I hope the best, especially knowing how charitable many of you have been to your Christian brethren. Wi.—Faith begins the work of salvation; good works from a principle of charity continue it; perseverance in virtue, and patience under afflictions complete it. To assert the contrary is not to derogate so much from the work of man, as from the grace of God, which is the cause and ground of all that is good in man. "Mark," says S. Austin, "that he to whom our Lord gave grace, hath our Lord also his debtor. He found him a giver in the time of mercy: he hath him his debtor in the time of judgment." In Ps. vi.—It is certain God, who is not unjust, will reward these good works, if you continue in the same, to the accomplishing of hope even to the end,† for the obtaining the happiness you hope for. Be not therefore slothful, and negligent; it is by faith, patience, and perseverance, that you will inherit God's promises. Wi.

VER. 13, &c. For God promising to Abraham, to bless all nations in his seed i. e. by the coming of Christ, swore by himself, having no greater to swear by, &c. He shews them how certain they may be of eternal happiness, unless they be slothful. First, it is God himself, who hath promised to make them happy. Secondly, he promised it with an oath; and these are two unchangeable things in God, who cannot lie. And the oath was: unless blessing, I will bless thee, &c. The sense is, unless I give thee great blessings, let me not be esteemed the true God. By this God hath given the strongest consolation to us, who have fled from the imperfect works of the former law of Moses, by believing and hoping in Christ. This hope is as a sure and firm anchor of our souls, amidst all persecutions and dangers, which will make us enter in, even within the veil, as it were into that part of the temple called the holy of holies, which was a figure of heaven, into which Christ Jesus himself entered first, by his glorious ascension after his sufferings. He entered as our high priest, and to prepare us there a place. Wi.

17 Wherein God, meaning more abundantly to shew to the heirs of the promise the immutability of his counsel, interposed an oath :

18 That by two immutable things, in which it is impossible for God to lie, we may have the strongest comfort, who have fled for refuge, to hold fast the hope set before us :

19 Which we have as an anchor of the soul, sure and firm, and which entereth even within the veil,

20 Where the forerunner, Jesus, is entered for us, made a high priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

CHAP. VII.

The priesthood of Christ, according to the order of Melchisedech, excels the Levitical priesthood, and puts an end both to that and to the law.

FOR ^a this Melchisedech, king of Salem, priest of the most high God, who met Abraham returning from the slaughter of the kings, and blessed him :

2 To whom also Abraham divided the tithes of all : who indeed first by interpretation is king of justice : and then also king of Salem, that is, king of peace,

3 Without father, without mother, without genealogy, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life,

^a Gen. xiv. 18.

* V. 4. Impossible, ἀδύνατον. See Corn. a Lapide and Estius, who say of this exposition of baptism, Sic omnes Græci, et Latinorum maxima pars. Baptism is often called, πρόρочια. See S. Greg. Naz. orat. xxxix. in Sta Lumina.

† V. 11. Ad expletionem spei usque ad finem, πρὸς τὴν πληροφροσιν. See the signification of this word, Lu. i. 1.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. This Melchisedech. If we look for the construction, Melchisedech may be joined with what follows, (v. 3.) continueth a priest for ever. Wi.—The excellency of this personage was so transcendent, that some of the ancients took him to be an Angel, and some the Holy Ghost. This the Fathers condemn ; for had he not been a man, a king, and a priest, he would not have been so worthy a type of our Saviour.

VER. 2. King of justice, according to the signification of the word Melchisedech, and of peace, signified by the place Salem, of which he was king. By Salem is commonly expounded Jerusalem, though S. Jerom thinks it was a town in Samaria afterwards called Sichem. This king was also a priest of the Most High ; i. e. of the true God. He blessed Abraham, after he had defeated Chodorahomor and the other kings ; (Gen. xiv.) and Abraham gave him the tithes of all things which he had taken from his enemies. He is said (v. 3) to have been without father, without mother, without any genealogy, without beginning of days or end of life, inasmuch as we have no account in the Scripture of these particulars. He is said in Genesis to have brought out, inasmuch as he was a priest, that is, to have offered up a sacrifice to God of bread and wine. The apostle here shews two things, that Melchisedech was greater than Abraham, and that he is a figure of Christ, who is a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech. Ps. cix. 4. Wi.

VER. 3. Without father, &c. Not that he had no father, &c. but that neither his father, nor his pedigree, nor his birth, nor his death, are set down in Scripture. Ch.—Not that he was without father and mother, says S. Jer. (ep. cxxxvi) for Christ himself was not without a Father according to his divinity, nor without a Mother in his humanity ; but because his genealogy is not given in Genesis, as that of the other patriarchs is, but he is abruptly introduced without any mention of either his birth or death. In Melchisedech all was prophetic and figurative of Jesus Christ ; and Abraham undoubtedly in this patriarch saw Jesus Christ in spirit, and exulted that all the nations of the earth were to be blessed in him. Abraham, your father, greatly desired, says our Lord to the Jews, to see the day of my coming : he saw it, and was filled with joy. Jo. viii. 56.

VER. 4. Consider how great this man (Melchisedech) was, and greater than our great patriarch, Abraham : 1. Because Abraham, of his own accord, paid tithes to this priest of all the chief things he had : which was to own himself inferior to him ; as the rest of the Jewish people are inferior to the sons of Levi, the descendants of Aaron, who being raised to the dignity of the priesthood by the command of God, have a right to take tithes or tenths of the people ; and so are honoured above the rest. 2. This Melchisedech blessed, or gave a benediction to our great father Abraham, to whom the promises of blessing all nations was made. Now he that gives a blessing to another, must be better or greater than he to whom the blessing is given ; therefore Melchisedech was greater than Abraham. 3. To shew another pre-eminence of the priesthood of Melchisedech (which was a figure of the eternal priesthood of Christ) above the priesthood of Aaron, the apostle takes notice that the sons of Levi, the priests of the ancient law, to whom tithes were to be paid, were no more than mortal men, always dying, whereas the Scripture only witnesseth of Melchisedech that he liveth ; he is represented as one that hath neither beginning nor end of his days. This agrees chiefly with Christ, who by the psalmist is called, a priest for ever. And, though Christ also died for us, for it was chiefly by his death that he offered his sacrifice, yet he presently rose again, and continues for ever a priest, but likened unto the Son of God, continueth a priest for ever.

(1588)

4 Now consider how great this man is, to whom also Abraham, the patriarch, gave tithes out of the chief spoils.

5 And indeed they of the sons of Levi, who receive the priesthood, have a commandment to take tithes of the people according to the law, that is, of their brethren : though they themselves also came out of the loins of Abraham.

6 But he, whose pedigree is not numbered among them, received tithes of Abraham, and blessed him, who had the promises.

7 And without all contradiction, that which is less, is blessed by the better.

8 And here indeed, men who die, receive tithes : but there he of whom it is testified, that he liveth.

9 And (as it may be said) even Levi, who received tithes, paid tithes through Abraham :

10 For he was yet in the loins of his father, when Melchisedech met him.

11 If then perfection were by the Levitical priesthood, (for under it the people received the law) what without a successor as to his priesthood, and as to the sacrifice of expiation for the sins of mankind. His priesthood, his sacrifice, and oblation for our redemption, lasts for ever. 4. Another reason that shews the priesthood of Melchisedech (and of our Saviour, Christ) to be above the Aaronical priesthood, is, that not only Abraham, but even Aaron and Levi, and all their successors, may be said in the person of Abraham to have paid tithes to Melchisedech, because we may consider them as yet in the loins of Abraham, from whom they descended ; though it cannot be said, in like manner, that Christ himself was in the loins of Abraham, because though he was Son of Abraham, yet his conception was not in the ordinary way of human generation, but by the operation of the Holy Ghost. See S. Aug. l. x. de Gen. ad lit. c. 20. tom. 3. p. 270. nov. edit. 5. S. Paul (v. 11.) brings another reason to shew that the priesthood according to the order of Melchisedech was more perfect, because true justice and sanctification could not be given either by the priesthood of Aaron or by the law of Moses, which began as it were together ; for if the former law and sacrifices offered by the priests of Aaron, had been sufficient for man's justification and salvation, there would have been no necessity of a new priesthood according to the order of Melchisedech. Of this S. Paul speaks elsewhere to the Romans. And, as there is a new priesthood, so there is a new law, by which the former is no longer of force. 6. He takes notice of this difference from the former priesthood, that they were priests of the tribe of Levi, but that Christ, the priest according to the order of Melchisedech, is of the tribe of Juda. 7. Another difference is, that the former law, and all belonging to it, consisted of carnal precepts, (v. 16) in outward ceremonies and sacrifices, with promises of temporal blessings and a long life in this world ; but the new law and sacrifice of Christ, is according to the power of an indissoluble and never-ending life, conferring inward graces, with the remission of sins, by which men are justified and saved, with promises of eternal happiness. 8. He tells us that Christ's priesthood was confirmed by God himself with an oath : not so the priesthood of Aaron. This second testament therefore is much better, and more excellent. 9. The former testament brought nothing to perfection. v. 19. It had nothing but types and figures of what was to be fulfilled under the priesthood of Christ. The priests died, and succeeded one to another ; and there was need of different sacrifices, which they were to offer daily for their own sins and for the sins of the people ; but Christ was innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, (v. 26) could not sin, but by suffering once has redeemed all, has satisfied for the sins of all mankind, and by this one sacrifice can save all that come to him by faith, hope, and love ; he lives for ever to make intercession for us, as our Mediator and Redeemer. As he remains for ever, he is a priest for ever ; and by virtue of that one sacrifice on the cross, all that believe in him and obey him may be saved, and be happy for eternity. Christ's sacrifice and oblation on the cross, is that one sacrifice of the new law which remains and will be continued by his ministers, the priests of the new law, to the end of the world, the manner only being different, but not the sacrifice. This is the doctrine of the Catholic Church, delivered to the faithful in the Council of Trent,* (sess. 22. cap. 2.) where it is declared, that in the Mass is continued the same sacrifice and oblation which Christ offered, who is still the chief priest, in whose name only his ministers, the bishops and priests, speak and act as his instruments. The Victim that is offered is also the same, to wit, the body and blood of Christ, after a spiritual and unbloody manner, according to his command at his last supper. The oblation at the Mass is indeed a true and proper sacrifice, yet not a new or different sacrifice of expiation for the sins of mankind, but an application of Christ's satisfactions and merits, which, though of infinite value, and more than sufficient to satisfy for the sins of the whole world, yet by the will of God are to be applied to us by faith, by the sacraments, by the same sacrifice of Christ's body and blood, offered at the mass, &c. Wi.

^b Deut. xviii. 2. Josue xiv. 4.

further need was there that another priest should rise, according to the order of Melchisedech, and not be called according to the order of Aaron?

12 For the priesthood being translated, it is necessary that a translation also be made of the law.

13 For he, of whom these things are spoken, is of another tribe, of which no one gave attendance at the altar.

14 For it is evident that our Lord sprung out of Juda: in which tribe Moses spoke nothing concerning priests.

15 And it is yet far more evident: if, according to the similitude of Melchisedech, there arise another priest,

16 Who is made not according to the law of a carnal commandment, but according to the power of an indissoluble life:

17 For he testifieth: *Thou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech.

18 There is indeed an abrogation of the former commandment, because of the weakness and unprofitableness thereof:

19 For the law brought nothing to perfection: but the introduction of a better hope, by which we approach to God.

20 And inasmuch as it is not without an oath, (for the others indeed were made priests without an oath:

21 But he with an oath, by him that said to him:

VER. 12. After giving a decided preference to Melchisedech and his priesthood, over the Levitical priesthood, S. Paul proves the abrogation of the latter, and even of the law, by the introduction of a new priesthood, according to the order of Melchisedech.

VER. 20. The old law was good in itself, being established by God, who does nothing in vain; but it was weak and imperfect, and the shadow and figure of that which was to come. It was preparatory to a more perfect dispensation under Jesus Christ, who, as our new high priest, was to finish by the gospel what Moses began by the law.

VER. 28. Many priests, &c. The apostle notes this difference between the high priests of the law, and our high priest, Jesus Christ; that they being removed by death, made way for their successors; whereas our Lord Jesus is a priest for ever, and hath no successor; but liveth and concurteth for ever with his ministers, the priests of the New Testament, in all their functions. Secondly, that no one priest of the law, nor all of them together, could offer that absolute sacrifice of everlasting redemption, which our one high priest, Jesus Christ, has offered once and for ever. Ch.

VER. 25. Make intercession. Christ, as man, continually maketh intercession for us, by representing his passion to his Father. Ch.

VER. 27. Jesus Christ offered himself but once in a bloody manner on the cross; but, besides this bloody offering, he still continues to offer himself in an unbloody manner. This he does both in heaven and upon earth; in heaven, by presenting his sacred humanity continually to his Father; and on earth, by daily offering himself, under the appearances of bread and wine, on our altars. Hence this eucharistic sacrifice is both a commemoration and continuation of the sacrifice of the cross. To understand this, it must be observed, that the essence of a sacrifice includes several actions, the principal of which are the immolation of the victim, and the oblation of the victim when immolated. Now the sacrifice of Jesus Christ on the cross, ended only as to the bloody immolation, the same victim is still immolated mystically, by the separate consecration of the bread and wine, and continues as to the oblation. Jesus Christ, in quality of the eternal high priest, has carried his victim, i. e. his body, into heaven, and there offers it continually to his Father. He continues also his sacrifice here on earth, by the ministry of his priests: who to the end of time will offer to God the same immolated victim, present on our altars under the appearance of bread and wine—a sacrifice infinitely perfect, since a God is the priest, and a God the victim. The chief-priest who offers it is a God-man; the victim offered is a Man-God: a God the victim, offered by a God the priest! Behold a sacrifice truly worthy of God—a sacrifice capable of atoning not only for our sins, but for the sins of ten thousand worlds. What confidence then ought Christians to have in such a sacrifice! How solicitous ought they to be to assist daily at these awful, or, to use S. Chrysostom's expression, these tremendous mysteries! Let us now examine the sentiments of learned Protestant divines: "It is certain," says Dr. Grabe, "that Irenæus and all the Fathers, either cotemporary with the apostles, or their immediate successors, whose writings are still extant, considered the blessed Eucharist to be the sacrifice of the new law, and offered bread and wine on the altar, as sacred oblations to God the Father; and that this was not the private opinion of any particular Church or teacher, but the public doctrine and practice of the universal Church, which she received from the apostles, and they from Christ, is expressly shewn by Irenæus, and before him by Justin

* The Lord hath sworn, and he will not repent: thou art a priest for ever:)

22 By so much is Jesus made a surety of a better testament.

23 And the others indeed were made many priests, because they were prevented by death from continuing:

24 But he, because he continueth for ever, hath an everlasting priesthood.

25 Whereby he is able also to save for ever them that approach to God by himself: always living to make intercession for us.

26 For it was fitting that we should have such a high priest, holy, innocent, undefiled, separated from sinners, and made higher than the heavens:

27 Who needeth not daily as the priests, *to offer sacrifices first for his own sins, and then for the people's: for this he did once, by offering up himself.

28 For the law maketh men priests, who have infirmity; but the word of the oath, which is after the law, the Son who is perfected for evermore.

CHAP. VIII.

More of the excellence of the priesthood of Christ, and of the New Testament.

NOW of the things spoken, the sum is: We have such an high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of majesty in the heavens;

2 A minister of the holies, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord hath pitched, and not man.

* Psal. cix. 4.—* Psal. cix. 4.—* Lev. xvi. 6.

Martyr and Clement of Rome." Nota in Irenæum. p. 823.—"The elements being really changed from ordinary bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, mystically present, as in a sacrament, and that by virtue of the consecration, not by the faith of him that receives, I am to admit and maintain whatever appears duly consonant with this truth, viz. that the elements so consecrated are truly the sacrifice of Christ upon the cross, inasmuch as the body and blood of Christ are contained in them. . . . And the sacrifice of the cross being necessarily propitiatory, and impetratory both, it cannot be denied that the sacrament of the Eucharist, inasmuch as it is the same sacrifice with that upon the cross, is also both propitiatory and impetratory." Thorndike Epil. p. 44 and 46. —"The holy Fathers frequently say, that in the Eucharist is offered and sacrificed the very body of Christ, as is evident in almost innumerable places." Rp. Forbes' de Euch. l. iii. c. 2. sect. 10.—"The sacrifice of the supper is not only propitiatory, and may be offered up for the remission of our daily sins, but likewise is impetratory, and may be rightly offered for the obtaining all blessings. Although the Scripture does not plainly and in express words teach this, yet the holy Fathers with universal consent have thus understood the Scripture, as has been demonstrated by many; and all the ancient liturgies prescribe, that in time of the oblation, prayers be offered for peace, &c. as is evident to all." Id. Sect. 12.—"The Church, commemorating the sacrifice of Christ with the usual rites and words, in this also sacrificeth and offereth that which is her own, given to her by Christ; that she placeth before the eyes of God; by that she beseecheth God; and it is the same sacrifice that Christ offered; the same one, true, and singular sacrifice, as S. Austin calls it; a sacrifice of memory according to Eusebius; a spiritual sacrifice, according to others. After that the faithful offer themselves according to the example of Christ, &c. In all this what is there new, what deformed, what hurtful? But minds once distracted, distract all things into a depraved meaning, and then are glad to find a hint for it in any of the schools." Grotius of Christian sacrifice.—To these we may add the authority of Ed. Burke, in his speech to the electors of Bristol: "The mass is church service in the Latin tongue, not exactly like our liturgy, but very near and contains no offence whatever against the laws of good morals." p. 29.

* V. 4. Una eademque est Hostia, idem nunc offerens sacerdotum ministerio, qui seipsum tunc in cruce obtulit, sola offerendi ratione diversa. Sess. 22 c. 2. Can. 1. Si quis dixerit in missa non offerri verum et proprium sacrificium, &c. anathema. Can. 3. Si quis dixerit missæ sacrificium tantum esse laudis, et gratiarum actionis, aut nudam commemorationem sacrificii in cruce peracti, non autem propitiatorium, vel soli prodesse sumenti, &c. Anathema sit.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. Of the things spoken the sum is.* This word sum, many expound, as if S. Paul said: I will sum up, and give you an abridgment or recapitulation of what I have said. But S. Chrys. and others, by the Greek would rather understand the chief, or greatest thing of all, when he adds, that Christ is our high priest, who is set on the right hand of the throne of majesty in the heavens. Wi.

VER. 2. A minister of the holies. Lit. of the holy places, and of the true tabernacle: he adds true, to signify that though he speaks with an allusion to the sanctuary, and the priests of the former law, yet that Christ hath now entered into the true holy of holies; that is, into heaven, of which the Jewish

3 For every high priest is appointed to offer gifts and sacrifices: wherefore it is necessary that he also should have something to offer:

4 If then he were on earth, he would not be a priest: since there would be others who should offer gifts according to the law,

5 Who serve unto the example and shadow of heavenly things. As it was answered to Moses, when he was to finish the tabernacles: See* (saith he) that thou make all things according to the pattern which was shewn thee on the mount.

6 But now he hath obtained a better ministry, by how much also he is the mediator of a better testament, which is established on better promises.

7 For if the former had been faultless, there should not indeed a place have been sought for a second.

8 For finding fault with them, he saith:.^b Behold the days shall come, saith the Lord, when I will make a new testament with the house of Israel and with the house of Juda,

9 Not according to the testament which I made with sanctuary was only a type or figure.—Which the Lord hath pitched, and not man; i. e. all the parts of the Jewish sanctuary was the work of men's hands; but heaven, the habitation prepared for the saints, is the work of God. Wi.—The Old Testament was a figure of the New; but the tabernacle of Moses, and the temple of Solomon, were in particular an image and figure of the Christian Church. v. 5. The Church triumphant in heaven is the true sanctuary; the Church militant on earth is the true tabernacle; and Jesus Christ is the sovereign priest of both the one and the other, and exercises his priesthood both in heaven and upon earth.

* Exod. xxv. 40. Acts vii. 44.—^b Jer. xxxi. 31.

VER. 3. For every high priest, &c. That is, as all priests are ordained to offer up to God some gifts and sacrifices; so Christ, a priest for ever, has now in heaven something to offer to his eternal Father; to wit, the infinite merits and satisfactions of his death and passion. This he doth in heaven, and also by the ministry of his priests on earth, who offer the same in his name. Wi.—This is the daily sacrifice of Christians, foretold plainly by Malachi, c. i. 10. 11. This is also clearly mentioned by St. Justin, Dial. cum Tryphone. Tert. co. M. l. iii. c. 21. Iren. l. iv. c. 32. Cyp. l. i. adv. Jud. Eus. l. i. Dem. Evang. Chrys. in Ps. xcv. Aug. l. xviii. de civ. Dei. c. 35, &c. &c. For authorities see annotations on chap. x of this epistle. The apostate Courayer, who pretending to remain a Catholic, ended by becoming a Socinian or Unitarian, taught that persons were at liberty to deny the real presence, and admit with Catholics a commemorative or representative sacrifice, which applies to us the merits of Christ's death. But this system was condemned by the Gallican church, as contrary to the doctrine of the Council of Trent, which has defined the mass to be not merely a commemorative and representative sacrifice, but a true and real offering of a victim, really present, and actually offered to God by the priest. "By his last sacraments, (published by Dr. Bell) it appears, says the New Gen. Biogr. Dict. edited by Chalmers, an. 1814, vol. lxxx. art. Courayer, that although he professed to be a member of the Roman Catholic Church, he could not well be accounted a member of that, or of any other established Church. In rejecting the doctrine of the Trinity, he became nearly, if not quite, a Socinian, or modern Unitarian; he denied also the inspiration of the holy Scriptures, as to matters of fact; and as to baptism, seems to wish to confine it to adults. In 1811 a more full exposure of his sentiments was published by Dr. Bell, in a posthumous work of Courayer, on the Divinity of Jesus Christ, 8vo. a publication we have little hesitation in saying ought never to have appeared. It could not be wanting to illustrate the wavering, unsettled character of the author. The creed of innovators is never fixed; and when once they cast off the authority of the Church, they are carried about, like children, with every wind of doctrine."

VER. 4. If then he were on earth, he would not be a priest. He speaks of a priest according to the custom of the Jews, where none were priests but of the tribe of Levi, and Jesus Christ was of the tribe of Juda: and if the law of Moses was to continue, there would not be wanting priests to offer sacrifices according to their worship, though such priests were only employed about things that were types and shadows of heavenly things in the new law after Christ's coming, and of the sacrifice by which he offered himself on the cross. And this God doubtless revealed to Moses, when he said to him: take heed "thou make all things according to the pattern which was shewn thee on the mount." Wi.—Earth, &c. That is, if he were not of a higher condition than the Levitical order of earthly priests, and had not another kind of sacrifice to offer, he should be excluded by them from the priesthood, and its functions, which by the law were appropriated to their tribe. Ch.

VER. 5. Who serve unto, &c. The priesthood of the law and its functions were a kind of an example, and shadow of what is done by Christ in his Church militant and triumphant, of which the tabernacle was a pattern. Ch.

VER. 6. But now Christ, the Messiah, being come, hath ordained a more excellent ministry and priesthood, being the great Mediator betwixt God and man of a better and more excellent testament, accompanied with greater graces and blessings, and established with better and more ample promises, not of temporal blessings, as the former, but of eternal happiness. Wi.

their fathers, on the day when I took them by the hand to lead them out of the land of Egypt: for they continued not in my testament: and I regarded them not, saith the Lord.

10 For this is the testament which I will make to the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord: I will give my laws into their mind, and I will write them in their heart: and I will be their God, and they shall be my people:

11 And they shall not teach every man his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying: Know the Lord: for all shall know me, from the least to the greatest of them:

12 Because I will be merciful to their iniquities, and their sins I will remember no more.

13 Now in saying a new, he hath made the former old. And that which decayeth and groweth old, is near its end.

CHAP. IX.

The sacrifices of the law were far inferior to that of Christ.

THE former indeed had also ordinances of worship, and a worldly sanctuary.

VER. 7. For if that first testament had been faultless: if it had not been imperfect, and all those sacrifices and ceremonies insufficient for the justification, salvation, and redemption of mankind, there would have been no need of a second. Wi.

VER. 8. For finding fault with them. It is not said here, blaming the law, says S. Chrys. which in itself was good, just, and holy, (see Rom. vii. 12.) but blaming the breakers and transgressors of it; not but that men were saved in the time of the law, who by God's grace believed in their Redeemer that was to come, and lived well. And the mercies of God were so great, even towards sinners, that he made them a solemn promise, clearly expressed in the prophet Jeremy, (C. xxxi. 31. &c.) The days shall come, saith the Lord, and I will make a new covenant, . . . not according to the covenant (or not such a one) as I made to their fathers, at the time when I took them as it were by the hand to lead them out of . . . Egypt, &c. with signs and prodigies: I then made choice of them to be my people, but they were always transgressing against this testament, this covenant, which I had made with them: and for their transgressions I neglected them, punished them from time to time, and what was the greatest punishment of all, permitted such ungrateful and obstinate offenders to run on in their own sinful ways to their own ruin. Wi.

VER. 10. For this is the testament which I will make with the house of Israel, and with all nations, as I promised to Abraham, I will give (lit. by giving) my laws into their mind, and I will write this new law, not as the former, in tables of stone, but in their hearts, and to them I will be a merciful God, and they shall be my elect people. Wi.—The Jews were like slaves, and God ruled them as a master; Christians are his children, and God rules them as a father: and so great is the efficacy of this divine teacher, that by means of a short and easy catechism, children are now taught to know God more perfectly than the first sages of antiquity by their abstruse and erudite disquisitions. We moreover observe under the new law the grace and spirit of love, engrafted in the hearts of the faithful by the Holy Ghost working in the sacraments and sacrifice of the new law to that effect. . . This covenant was made at the last supper, and ratified the next day by the death of the Testator on the cross, when he exclaimed, "consummatum est," all is consummated.

VER. 11. They shall not teach, &c. So great shall be the light and grace of the new testament, that it shall not be necessary to inculcate to the faithful the belief and knowledge of the true God, for they shall all know him. Ch.—All shall know me, &c. This seems to signify that by the truths which Christ preached, and which the apostles published to all nations, the faithful in the new law should have a greater knowledge of God, of the true manner of worshipping him, and of heavenly things, and also greater and more abundant graces than they had before Christ's coming. They shall also serve God with greater fidelity, by considering his mercy in sending them a Redeemer to free them from the slavery of sin and damnation, of which they stood guilty. Wi.

VER. 13. In calling this testament a new one, he hath made the former old. This is to put the Hebrews in mind that the former law, as to its ceremonies and sacrifices, is now to be laid aside, and the new law or testament to be received and complied with. Wi.—Thus the first alliance was to end according to the testimony of Scripture itself, and make place for the second, which is infinitely more perfect. To be fully satisfied of this, it is merely necessary to compare the one with the other. V.

* V. 1. Capitulum super ea quæ dicuntur, κεφάλαιον ἐπὶ τοῖς λεγομένοις. Beza and others reprehend here the ancient Latin interpreter. They have as much reason to blame the Greek original. S. Aug. observes that the Latin interpreter was more solicitous to follow exactly the sense than to write proper Latin.

† V. 4. Exemplari et umbræ deservunt, σπουδαίονται, καὶ ἐκτὸς λατρείωνται. It signifies, that they served God by those things that were types and figures of more perfect and heavenly things.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. *The former. In the ordinary Greek copies is ex-

2 *For the first tabernacle was made, wherein were the candlesticks, and the table, and the setting forth of loaves, which is called the holy.

3 And after the second veil, the tabernacle, which is called the holy of holies:

4 Having the golden ^bcenser, and the ark of the covenant covered about on every part with gold, in which was the golden urn that had the manna, and the rod of Aaron that had blossomed, and the ^ctables of the testament.

5 And over it were the cherubims of glory overshadowing the propitiatory: of which it is not needful to speak now particularly.

6 Now these things being thus ordered: into the first tabernacle the priests indeed always entered, accomplishing the rites of the sacrifices:

7 But into the second, the high priest alone, ^donce

* Exod. xxvi. 1. and xxxvi. 8.—^b Lev. xvi. Num. xxvi.

pressed the former tabernacle; but even the Prot. translators have abandoned that reading, and understand the former testament or covenant, which they have put in a different character.—Worldly sanctuary, or a temporal sanctuary, to last only for a time, like the things of this world. Wi.—The word ordinances (δουλοπαρα) is frequently used for the laws and ordinances of God, because the observance of the laws is the justification of man; see particularly in the 118th Ps. the legal rites justified in regard to the outward policy of the Jews.

VER. 2. First tabernacle. By this word is signified, the sanctuary or place for worshipping God, ordained by Moses, which was an oratory to be moved from place to place with the Israelites, which they kept afterwards, and had a resemblance of it in the temple. This tabernacle consisted of two parts, which S. Paul here calls the first and second. The first part was called the holy, which was separated from the rest of the temple by a veil. In this first part were the candlesticks, i. e. one candlestick, as it is called, Exod. xxv. 37. having seven branches in which were placed lamps; and a table, on which were placed twelve loaves, according to the number of the Jewish tribes, to be changed every week. Wi.

VER. 3. And after the second veil, or partition, was the second or inward part, or that part called the holy of holies. Wi.—The first veil was at the entrance of the holy place, and separated it from the outward court; the second veil separated the holy place from the holy of holies.

VER. 4. Having the golden censer. What is meant by this is uncertain, no mention being made of a golden censer in either part of the tabernacle made by the order of Moses, which the apostle here speaks of. Some say that the high priest, when he entered once a year into the holy of holies, made use of a golden censer, which he left there; but this is merely a conjecture. Others think that by the golden censer is meant the altar of perfumes, or where perfumes were burnt, which was, as it were a large censer, and is called by the same Greek word by Josephus, the historian; but then there occurs this difficulty, that this altar was in that first part called the holy, not in the holy of holies, to which the same interpreters answer, that this altar was placed just at the entrance into the holy of holies, and so may be looked upon as belonging to the holy of holies: nor does the text say it was in the holy of holies, but only having, &c. as a town may be said to have fortifications which are not within the town itself.—And the tables of the testament, or covenant. The ark was certainly in the holy of holies, in which was the golden urn, with a measure of manna, and Aaron's rod that budded, and the tables of the testament, or the tables of stone, on which were engraven the ten commandments. Nothing but these tables were within the ark; (see 3 K. viii. and 2 Par. v. 10.) so that when it is said, in which was the golden urn and the rod of Aaron, the meaning seems to be, that they were indeed in the holy of holies with the ark, but not within the ark. Wi.—In the Greek it is easy to confound the word θυμιατήριον, which signifies altar, with θυμιατήριον, which means censer. It was placed adjoining the inward veil, so that the clouds of the incense filled the holy of holies; and hence it is mentioned by S. Paul as contained therein.—The apostle describes these things as they were in the tabernacle which Moses constructed in the desert. V.—We see with what great and continued respect and veneration the manna and Aaron's rod, &c. were kept by the Jews, and shall not Christians be allowed to preserve with equal respect the monuments of God's mercies, and the tokens of Christ's passion? See S. Cyril, (l. vi. cont. Julianum) where he defends against the apostate, the keeping and honouring the cross on which Christ died. See also in S. Jer. (ep. xvii. c. 5.) and in S. Paulinus, (ep. 11.) what reverence the faithful in those early periods of the Church paid to the sepulchres of Christ and his martyrs, as also to their relics. "We reverence and worship," says the latter, "the sepulchres of the martyrs; and, if we can, we apply the holy ashes to our eyes and mouth."

VER. 5. And over it (the ark) were the cherubims of glory, or glorious cherubims, (in what shape they were represented, is not certain) overshadowing the propitiatory, or seat of mercy, which was all of gold, of the same size as the ark, and like a cover to it. Just over this propitiatory were placed the two cherubs, spreading their wings looking towards one another, and upon the propitiatory. See Exod. xxxvi. and xxxvii. From this place God made known his presence, and the effects of his mercy to the people. Here he was said to be seated on the cherubims, and that the ark was his footstool. Ps. xcvi. Adore his footstool; i. e. prostrate before his ark. These two images of cherubs, shew that God did not absolutely forbid images at that time, when the people were so ada year; not without blood, which he offereth for his own, and the people's ignorance:

8 The Holy Ghost signifying this, that the way of the holies was not yet made manifest, whilst the former tabernacle was yet standing.

9 Which is a parable of the time then present: according to which gifts and sacrifices are offered, which cannot, as to the conscience, make him perfect that serveth only in meats and in drinks,

10 And divers washings, and carnal ordinances, enjoined until the time of correction.

11 But Christ coming, a high priest of the good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands, that is, not of this creation:

12 Neither by the blood of goats, or of calves, but by his own blood, entered once into the sanctuary, having obtained eternal redemption.

* 3 Kings viii. 9. 2 Par. v. 10.—^d Exod. xxx. 10. Lev. xvi. 2.

dicted to idolatry, but only to adore them. Wi.—How futile is it to object from the commandment that it is forbidden to use holy images in the Church, when we here behold even amongst the people most prone to idolatry, most gross in their ideas of spiritual things, and to whom the receipt was specially given not to make any graven idols, the same God commanding these images of angels to be made and set in the most holy place of the tabernacle or temple.

VER. 6. The rites of the sacrifices. The priests, as he tells us, entered every day, that is, by turns, (see Luke i. 5.) to make the offering of incense morning and night, also to change the loaves, take care of the lamps, &c. But we must not think that they offered in that place victims or holocausts of sheep, lambs, oxen, &c. This was not done in any part of the sanctuary, neither before nor after the building of the temple, but in a place or court adjoining the tabernacle, upon a large altar of five cubits long and as many broad. See Exod. xxvii. and xxxviii. Wi.

VER. 7. Into the second part of the sanctuary, (i. e. the holy of holies) no one entered but the high priest, and he but once a year, on the feast called of expiation, to make an aspersion of blood upon the ark and round about, which he offereth for his own and the people's ignorance, or ignorances, as in the Greek; that is, for all his and their sins. See Lev. x. Wi.—He offered the blood of a calf for his own sins and those of his family, and the blood of a goat for the sins of the people. Lev. xvi.

VER. 8. The Holy Ghost signifying this. Here the apostle begins to tell us in what manner the sanctuary was a figure of things in the new law of Christ. The holy of holies was a figure of heaven, and this prohibition of any one going into it, was to signify that the way to heaven was not to be made manifest, nor to be opened, as long as the former tabernacle and law subsisted; that it was not to be opened till Christ, the high priest of the new testament, first entered, by shedding his blood on the cross, and by his glorious ascension. Wi.—But when Christ expired, the veil of the temple was rent asunder, to shew that the way to heaven was now laid open to mankind.

VER. 9-10. Which is a parable of the time then present; or, unto the present time, as in the Greek. By the present time, according to the common exposition, is not meant the time of the new law, as some would have it, but the time of the former law; so that the sense is, which parable or type was a representation of things as they were to be performed, and to last during the time of the law, which was before present.—According to which. Some understand, according to which time; others, according to which parable, type, or typical worship of the former law, gifts and sacrifices are (i. e. were, and are) still-offered by those who adhere to the Jewish law and ceremonies, which cannot of themselves make such worshippers perfect in conscience; i. e. can never give true interior sanctification, being only in meats, and drinks, and baptisms, &c. These words must not be referred to gifts and sacrifices, but to the worshipper; (lit. server) and the sense is, that to the priests, who worshipped and served God in the sanctuary and in offering sacrifices, was not prescribed an interior purity and sanctity, as in the new law, but only that legal sanctity which consisted in abstaining from such meats or drinks as were called unclean, or made them unclean. See Lev. x. 9. where the priests are forbidden to drink wine when they were to enter into the tabernacle of the testimony.—In divers washings, &c. These precepts and ceremonies were only to last till the time of their correction, by the coming of Christ under the new and better law and testament. Wi.—Of correction; viz. when Christ should correct and settle all things. Ch.

VER. 11. Christ coming; is a high priest of the good things to come; of things which we hope for in heaven.—He has entered by a more perfect tabernacle; i. e. not passing, like the priests of the former law, into a tabernacle made by human art and hands, but by the tabernacle of his own body or flesh, says S. Chrys. framed by the Holy Ghost. Wi.

VER. 12. By the blood of goats, &c. This is another difference and pre-eminence of Christ above the priests of the law of Moses, that they could only offer the blood of beasts; but Christ entered into heaven by the effusion of his own precious blood in his sufferings, and on the cross, by this having found an eternal redemption for mankind, having satisfied for the sins of all men in the sight of God, which the former priests, with all their sacrifices, could not do. Wi.—Eternal redemption. By that one sacrifice of his blood, once offered on the cross, Christ our Lord paid and exhibited, once for all, the general price and 13 *For if the blood of goats and of oxen, and the ashes of a heifer, being sprinkled, sanctify such as are defiled, to the cleansing of the flesh :

14 ^bHow much more shall the blood of Christ, who, through the Holy Ghost, offered himself without spot to God, cleanse our conscience from dead works, to serve the living God?

15 And, therefore, he is the mediator of the new testament: *that by means of his death, for the redemption of those transgressions, which were under the former testament, they who are called may receive the promise of eternal inheritance.

16 For where there is a testament, the death of the testator must of necessity intervene.

17 For a testament is of force, after men are dead: otherwise it is not yet of force, whilst the testator liveth.

18 Whereupon neither was the first indeed dedicated without blood.

19 For when every commandment of the law had been read by Moses to all the people, he took the blood of calves and goats, with water and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book itself and all the people,

* Lev. xvi. 15.—^b 1 Pet. i. 19. 1 John i. 7. Apoc. i. 5 ransom of all mankind; which no other priest could do. Ch.—The force of the apostle's reasoning is to convince the Jews of the inefficacy of the legal sacrifices, and of the virtue of the Christian sacrifice.

VER. 13-14. For if the blood of goats, &c. Another main difference betwixt the sacrifices in the old, and that of Christ in the new law. Those imperfect carnal sacrifices could only make the priests and the people reputed clean, so that they were no longer to be treated as transgressors, and liable to punishments, prescribed and inflicted by the law: but the sacrifice of Christ has made our consciences interiorly clean, and sanctified them even in the sight of God. Having offered himself unspotted to God by the Holy Ghost, the divine Spirit of the Holy Ghost moving Christ as man to make this oblation of himself, though free from all sin, and incapable of sinning. And being this oblation, made by him, who was God as well as man, it was an oblation of infinite value, which repaired the injury done to God by sin, and redeemed mankind from the slavery of sin. Wi.—Here we have an abstract of the passion of Jesus Christ, or of the sacrifice of the cross. We see who is the priest, and who is the victim; we see the virtue and efficacy of this sacrifice, and why it was offered; also by what signs we may know whether we partake of it, viz. if dying to sin and to the world, we live to God, and serve him in spirit and truth. Calvin makes Jesus Christ a priest and mediator, according to his divinity; but in that case Christ would be inferior to his Father, not only as man, but according to his divinity: for the priest is inferior to the God to whom he offers sacrifice, which is an expression of supreme excellence. See Dr. Kellison's survey of the Protestant religion.

VER. 15. And therefore he is the mediator of the new testament. The mediator, so as to be our Redeemer, which applies only to our Saviour, Christ. Moses is called a mediator betwixt God and his people. See Gal. iii. 19. and 1 Tim. ii. 5. &c. The saints in heaven, and men on earth, may be called mediators in an inferior and different sense: but Christ alone is the mediator who reconciled God to men, by satisfying for their sins, and by a redemption from the slavery of sin. This sense, in which Christ is the mediator of the New Testament, is expressed in these following words: that by means of his death, for the redemption of those transgressions which were under the former testament, they who are called may receive the promise of eternal inheritance; that is, Christ by his death, redeemed all men. He names in particular the sins of those under the former testament, to shew them that the sacrifices of the Mosaic law could not of themselves obtain a remission of sins, so that all saved from Adam, or that shall be saved to the end of the world, have their sins forgiven, and obtain salvation by virtue of Christ's sacrifice upon the cross. He paid the ransom of their sins, and is the Redeemer of all. Wi.

VER. 16. For where there is a testament, the death of the testator, &c. The same Greek word, corresponding to the Hebrew word Berith, is often used both in the books of the old and new Scriptures. The ancient Latin interpreter puts for it testamentum, a testament; but others would rather have the Hebrew and Greek word to signify any agreement, bargain, alliance, or covenant, which last word is generally put in the English Prot. translations, followed also by Mr. N. We do not deny but the Hebrew and Greek word have this signification, but not exclusively: this place of S. Paul shews evidently that they also signify what both in Latin and English is called a testament or last will, which is only of force by the death of the testator. The Protestants, therefore, here find themselves obliged to translate testament, contrary to their custom, and to apply this word not only to the promises and blessings God made to Christians, of which Christ is the mediator, and which were confirmed by his blood and by his death, but also to the former alliance and promises or blessings God made to the Israelites, when he chose them to be his elect people, and gave them his law (1532)

20 Saying: *This is the blood of the testament, which God hath enjoined unto you.

21 The tabernacle also and all the vessels of the ministry, in like manner, he sprinkled with blood.

22 And almost all things, according to the law, are cleansed with blood: and without the shedding of blood, there is no remission.

23 It is necessary, therefore, that the patterns of heavenly things should be cleansed with these; but the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices than these.

24 For Jesus hath not entered into the holies made with hands, the patterns of the true: but into heaven itself, that he may appear now in the presence of God for us:

25 Nor yet that he should offer himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holies every year with the blood of others:

26 For then he ought to have suffered often from the beginning of the world: but now once at the end of ages, he hath appeared for the destruction of sin, by the sacrifice of himself.

27 And as it is appointed for men once to die, and after this the judgment:

* Gal. iii. 15.—^d Exod. xxiv. 8.

and his commandments under Moses. It is true God is immortal in his own nature, cannot die, and therefore cannot make a testament that shall be confirmed by his own death. But as for the new alliance, or New Testament, as here it must be called, it was confirmed by the death of the Son of God; that is, of God made man, by which it is true to say that God died for us, though he did not die, nor could die, as God. And as for the former alliance, or first testament, as it is called here, (v. 18.) that, says S. Paul, (which was only a figure of the second or new testament) was not made nor ratified without the blood of so many victims as used to be offered and sacrificed. Wi.

VER. 20. This is the blood of the testament, which God hath enjoined unto you; (Exod. xxiv.) that is, this is to confirm that testament. Christ made use of the like words, when he bequeathed us the divine legacy of his Body and Blood, at his last supper, saying: (Mat. xxvi. 28.) This is my blood of the new testament. And as the words in Exodus were understood of the true blood of the victims offered, so the words of Christ signify the true blood of Christ, there really present in the sacrament, in a spiritual manner, and to be shed in a bloody manner upon the cross. Wi.—The correspondence of words, in dedicating both testaments, proveth the real presence of blood in the cup or chalice.

VER. 22. S. Paul speaks here of legal purifications and remissions, which (v. 10.) he calls carnal justices and ordinances, (v. 13.) purifying the flesh. How then, it may be asked, were sins remitted under the law? I answer, by true repentance, joined with faith and hope in the promised Messiah. As to the cleansings and expiations of the Mosaic law, they were generally effected by water and animal blood, and were typical of the real cleansing of the conscience by the water of baptism, and by the blood of Jesus Christ. The flowing, therefore, of the pure water and blood from the wound in Christ's side, denoted that the real expiation was now complete, and the cleansing font set open; and on this account, they are appealed to by S. John, as two of the three terrestrial witnesses, whose testimony is so efficacious for the confirmation of our faith, that the crucified Jesus was the Christ foretold by the prophets. And thus "the old law confirms the new, and the new fulfils the old." S. Paulinus.

VER. 23. It is, or was necessary that the patterns of heavenly things (i. e. the former tabernacle and sanctuary) should be cleansed with these; that is, by the blood of such victims then offered.—But the heavenly things themselves with better sacrifices. By the heavenly things, may be understood the faithful, who are the members of Christ's Church: to whom heaven is prepared, and who must be cleansed by better sacrifices—that is, by the blood of Christ, and by his sacrifice on the cross. Wi.

VER. 25. Should offer himself, &c. He takes notice that Christ, by virtue of his sacrifice, and his dying once on the cross, satisfied for the sins of all men that ever were from the beginning of the world. It was decreed from eternity that the Son of God should come to redeem mankind: the ransom that was not yet paid was accepted; and all might be saved who believed in their Redeemer who was to come, and who, by the graces that God offered and gave them, lived well. Wi.—Christ shall never more offer himself in sacrifice, in that violent, painful, and bloody manner, nor can there be any occasion for it; since by this one sacrifice upon the cross, he has furnished the full ransom, redemption, and remedy for all the sins of the world. But this hinders not that he may offer himself in the sacred mysteries in an unbloody manner, for the daily application of that one sacrifice of redemption to our souls. Ch.

VER. 26. He came at the end of the ages, as it were in the last age of the world, to the putting away or abrogating of sin. Wi.—Though less, viz. a single tear, might have satisfied the justice of God, nothing less than his own precious blood could satisfy the charity of Jesus Christ. By his death, as S. Austin ob-

28 *So also Christ was offered once to exhaust the sins of many; the second time he shall appear without sin to them that expect him unto salvation.

CHAP. X.

Because of the insufficiency of the sacrifices of the law, Christ, our high priest, shed his own blood for us, offering up once for all the sacrifice of our redemption. He exhorts them to perseverance.

FOR the law having a shadow of the good things to come, not the very image of the things: can never with those same sacrifices, which they offer continually every year, make the comers thereunto perfect:

2 For then they would have ceased to be offered: because the worshippers once cleansed should have no conscience of sin any longer:

3 But in them a remembrance of sins is made every year.

4 For it is impossible that with the blood of oxen and goats sin should be taken away.

5 Therefore coming into the world, he saith: ^b Sacrifice and oblation thou wouldst not: but a body thou hast fitted to me:

6 Holocausts for sin did not please thee.

* Rom. v. 9. 1 Pet. iii. 18.—^b Ps. xxxix. 7.

serves, Christ has bound the devil in a chain, so that he can tempt us no further than we are able to resist: he may bark, he may tempt, he may solicit us; but he can bite none, except those that wilfully cast themselves within his reach. Serm. 1. post Trin.

VER. 28. To exhaust the sins of many. That is, of all, according to the style of the Scriptures. When he came first, he took upon him the load of our sins; but at his second coming, at the end of the world, he will come in a quite different manner, not as laden with our sins, not after the similitude of a sinful man, not to redeem us, but with great power and majesty to judge all men. Wi.—To exhaust. That is, to empty or draw out to the very bottom, by a plentiful and perfect redemption. Ch.

* V. 1. Habuit & prius, ἀρχὴ ἡ πρῶτη. Though almost all Greek copies have καὶ, tabernacle: yet even the Prot. translators add in a different print, covenant, as if διαθήκη was understood. Ibid. Sanctum sæculare, καθαρὸν. This Greek word is only found in one other place in the New Testament, Tit. ii. 12. sæcularia desideria.

† V. 4. Habens thuribulum aureum, χρυσοῦν θυρεῖον θυμιατῆριον. Josephus useth the same word for the altar of perfumes, lib. 6. de Bello. c. vi. and lib. 3. Antiq. c. vii. Ibid. In qua, ἐν ᾗ. It may signify the same as cum qua.

‡ V. 11. Christus assistens, παρουσιάζουσιν, which may signify being come, and present. Ibid. Tabernaculum, σκηνή, by which S. Chrys. expounds his body or flesh, τὴν σκηνὰ ἐνθάδε λέγει λόγ. c. p. 518.

§ V. 15. Novi Testamenti, διαθήκης καὶ νόμος. The Prot. translators here found it necessary to put, not covenant, as in other places, but testament, even when the apostle speaks of the first, or old διαθήκη, (V. 18. and 20.) might they not then as well have translated Testament in the last chapter, especially when mention was there made of the New Testament in the prophecy of Jer.† might they not as well have translated, (Gal. iv. 24.) for these are two testaments, as these are two covenants? and so in other places, where there is the same Greek word διαθήκη. Mr. N. has followed the Prot. translation. The Sept. put διαθήκη for the Hebrew word Berith, which indeed is expounded to signify fœdus or pactum; that is, any agreement, alliance, or covenant, which in the Greek is rather συνθήκη than διαθήκη. See Scapula. We may, I believe, safely say that Berith also signifies testament, or a last will and testament, till they who are translating it by covenant, can shew us some other Hebrew word for testamentum, which I think they have not hitherto done. I find that Mr. Legh, in his Crit. Sac. on the primitive Hebrew words, writes thus: Berith significeth both συνθήκη, a compact or covenant between parties, as Aquila translatheth; and διαθήκη, a testament, or disposition of one's last will, as the Sept. translate. He cites in the Margin Drusius and Mercerus.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. The law having a shadow of the good things to come.* The apostle continues till the 19th verse to shew the insufficiency of the former law, as to the redemption and salvation of mankind. By the good things to come, some understand heaven itself, and the happiness of the elect there, of which the law was but a shadow, whereas we have a much more perfect image and knowledge of heaven in the new law, than they who were under the former law. Others by good things to come, understand the blessings of interior graces, with a remission of our sins in the sight of God, and true sanctification, of which all the sacrifices and sacraments of the old law, without faith in Christ, were but a shadow: and now in the new law we have an express image of them, i. e. we have these blessings themselves. Wi.

VER. 2. Then they would have ceased to be offered. That is, if they could have made the worshippers perfect; to wit, in such a manner as the one sacrifice of Christ, who was the Lamb of God that took away the sins of the world, by making a full reparation to the divine justice for the sin of Adam, and of all his 7 Then said I: Behold I come: *in the head of the book it is written of me: that I should do thy will, O God.

8 In saying before: Sacrifices and oblations, and holocausts, for sin thou wouldst not, neither are they pleasing to thee, which are offered according to the law.

9 Then said I: Behold, I come to do thy will, O God: he taketh away the first, that he may establish the second.

10 In which will, we are sanctified by the oblation of the body of Jesus Christ once.

11 And every priest indeed standeth daily ministering, and often offering the same sacrifices, which can never take away sins:

12 But he offering one sacrifice for sins, for ever sitteth on the right hand of God, 13 From henceforth expecting *until his enemies be made his footstool.

14 For by one oblation he hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified.

15 And the Holy Ghost also doth testify to us. For after he said:

* Ps. xxxix. 8.—^a Ps. cix. 2. 1 Cor. xv. 25.

offspring. For we must take notice that he compares the sacrifice of Christ, which wrought a general redemption, with the sacrifices of the former law, which could never make any sufficient atonement to the majesty of God offended by sin, and which, by the decree of heaven, were to cease as soon as Christ's sacrifice of a general redemption was made: for then the worshippers would be so cleansed from sin, that they would stand in need of no more, but that the merits and satisfactions of Christ, their Redeemer, should be applied to them, according to the order of God's providence; that is, by faith in Christ, by his sacraments, by a true repentance, and the practice of virtue and good works. Wi.—If they had been of themselves perfect to all the intents of redemption and remission, as Christ's death is, there would have been no occasion of so often repeating them; as there is no occasion for Christ's dying any more for our sins. Ch.

VER. 3-4. But in them a remembrance of sins is made every year. For it is impossible that with the blood of oxen and goats sin should be taken away. The sacrifices of the former law, even that great sacrifice on the day of expiation, when victims were offered for the ignorances or sins of the priests, and of all the people, were only types and figures of Christ's sacrifice upon the cross, it was impossible that they themselves should take away sin, like that one oblation of Christ, though in them was made a remembrance of sins, and of the same sins for which so many victims had been offered. Wi.

VER. 5-9. Therefore, Christ as it were, coming into the world, he saith, by the psalmist, (Ps. xxxix. 7. 8.) Sacrifice and oblation thou didst not desire, &c. That is, such sacrifices as were offered in the former law, they could not please thee, appease thy anger, nor make a sufficient reparation for sin.—But a body thou hast fitted to me. Thou didst decree I should be made man, to suffer and die upon a cross to redeem mankind. And I as willingly undertook the work of man's redemption.—Behold I come: in the head of the book it is written of me. That is, in the volumes of the Scriptures.—He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second. That is, he taketh away what I first mentioned, the imperfect sacrifices of the law of Moses, that to them might succeed the sacrifice of Christ. Wi.

VER. 10. The source and primary cause of our sanctification is the will of God, who so loved the world as to give us his only Son; the meritorious cause of our sanctification is the voluntary oblation of Jesus Christ, sacrificed for us upon the cross. Methodists shamefully misrepresent the tenets of Catholics, as if we excluded Christ from the work of our salvation, or hoped to be saved not by the merits of Christ, but by our own.

VER. 14. By one oblation, he hath perfected or consummated for ever them that are sanctified, or justified, because this one oblation was sufficient to sanctify all men. He repeats this, to shew them the excellency of Christ's sacrifice above those of the former law. Wi.

VER. 15-18. The Holy Ghost also doth testify to us, and assures us of this, by the prophet Jeremy, (C. xxxi. 33.) in the words above cited, (C. viii. v. 8.) when he promises to give a new testament, and that he will remember no more their sins.—Now where there is remission of these, there is no more an oblation for sin. That is, there is no need of any other oblation to redeem us from sin, after the price of our redemption from sin is paid. There is no need of any other different oblation; all that is wanting, is the application of the merits and satisfactions of Christ. No need of those sacrifices, which were ordered in the law of Moses. To convince them of this, is the main design of S. Paul in this place. The pretended reformers, from several expressions of S. Paul in this chapter, think they have clear proofs that no sacrifice at all ought to be offered after Christ's one sacrifice on the cross; and that so many sacrifices and oblations of masses, are both needless and against the doctrine of the apostle, who says, that Christ by one oblation hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified. v. 14. And again, that where there is a remission of sins, now there is no more an oblation for sin. This objection, which is obvious enough, was not first invented by the 16 *And this is the testament which I will make unto them after those days, saith the Lord, I will give my laws in their hearts, and in their minds I will write them:

17 And their sins and iniquities I will remember no more.

18 Now where there is remission of these, there is no more an offering for sin.

19 Having therefore, brethren, a confidence in the entering into the sanctuary by the blood of Christ,

20 A new and living way, which he hath dedicated for us through the veil, that is to say, his flesh,

21 And a high priest over the house of God:

22 Let us draw near with a true heart in fulness of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with clean water.

23 Let us hold fast the confession of our hope without wavering (for he is faithful who hath promised),

24 And let us consider one another to provoke unto charity and to good works:

25 Not forsaking our assembly as some are accus-

* Jer. xxxi. 38. Supra viii. 8.—^b Supra vi. 4.—^c Deut. xvii. 6. Mat. xviii. 16.

Calvinists against them they nickname Papists: the same is found in the ancient Fathers; and by their answers, and what they have witnessed concerning the daily sacrifice of the mass, they may find their doctrine of a religion without a continued sacrifice evidently against the doctrine and practice of the Catholic Church from the first ages of the Christian religion, till they came to be reformers, not of manners, but of the Catholic belief. Hear S. Chrys. (hom. xvii.) in his commentary on this very chapter: "What then, saith he, do not we offer up (or make an oblation) every day? We offer up indeed, but with a remembrance of his death. And this oblation is one, and not many. How is it one, and not many? . . . because, as he that is offered many times, and in many places, is the same body, not many and different bodies, so is it one sacrifice. He (Christ) is our high priest, who offered this sacrifice, by which we are cleansed: we now offer up the same. . . He said: Do this in remembrance of me. We do not offer a different sacrifice, but the very same, as then our high priest." S. Chrys. here says, and repeats it over and over again, that we offer up a sacrifice. 2. That we offer it up every day. 3. That the sacrifice which we daily offer is one and the same oblation, one and the same sacrifice, which our high priest, Christ, offered. 4. That in offering this sacrifice, which in all places, and at all times, is the same body of Christ, and the same sacrifice, we do, and offer it, as he commanded us at his last supper, with a remembrance of him. Is this the practice, and is this the doctrine of our dear countrymen, the English Protestants? But at least it is the constant doctrine, as well as practice, of the whole Catholic Church. The council of Trent, as we have already cited the words, (c. vii.) teacheth the very same as S. Chrys. who never says, as some one of late hath pretended, that what we offer is a remembrance only. As the sacrament of the Eucharist, according to the words of Christ in the gospel, is to be taken with a remembrance of him, and yet is not a remembrance only, but is his body and blood, so the sacrifice is to be performed with a remembrance of his benefits and sufferings, by his priests and ministers, but at the same time is a true and propitiatory sacrifice, the priests daily sacrifice, and offer up the same sacrifice, the manner only being different. The sacrifice and mass offered by Peter, is not different in the notion of a sacrifice or oblation from that of Paul, though the priests and their particular actions be different; the same sacrifice was offered by the apostles, and in all Christian ages; and the same sacrifice, according to the prophecy of Malachy, (c. i. v. 11.) shall be offered in all nations to the end of the world. This doctrine and practice is not only witnessed by S. Chrys. but generally by the ancient Fathers and interpreters, as we have taken notice in short in the annotations on S. Matt. See S. Ignatius, in his epistle to the people of Smyrna; S. Justin, in his dialogue with Tryphon; S. Iren. l. 4. c. xxxii. and xxxiv.; Tertull. lib. de Velundis Virg. Euseb. l. 1. de demonst. Evang. c. ult. S. Jerom. ep. ad Evangelum; S. Amb. in Ps. xxxviii. and on 1 chap. of S. Luke; S. Aug. l. 16. de civ. Dei. c. xxii. l. 1. cont. Advers. legis c. xx. and lib. ix. Confess. c. xii.; S. Chrys. hom. lx. ad Pop. Antiochenum. et hom. lxxii. in Matt. The first gen. coun. of Nice.—But from this one oblation on the cross and remission of sins, obtained by our Saviour Christ, will our adversaries pretend insisting on the bare letter, that Christ has done all for us, and that we need do nothing, unless perhaps endeavour to catch hold of the justifying cloak of Christ's justice by faith only? At this rate the love of God and of our neighbour, a life of self-denials, such as Christ preached to every one in the gospel, the practices of prayer, fastings, alms-deeds, and all good works, the sacraments instituted by our Saviour Christ may be all safely laid aside; and we may conclude from hence, that all men's sins are remitted before they are committed. Into what extravagances do men run, when their private spirit pretends to follow the letter of the Holy Scriptures, and when they make their private judgment the supreme guide in matters of divine faith? It is very true, that Christ hath paid the ransom of all our sins, and his satisfactions are infinite; and to partake of the benefit of his general redemption, the merits and satisfaction of Christ are to be applied to our souls, and this by the order of Providence is to be done not only by faith but by other virtues, by good works, by the sacraments, and by repeating the oblation and the same sacrifice, the manner only being different, according to the tomed, but comforting one another, and so much the more as you see the day approaching.

26 ^bFor if we sin wilfully after having received the knoweldge of the truth, there is now left no sacrifice for sins,

27 But a certain dreadful expectation of judgment and the rage of a fire, which shall consume the adversaries.

28 A man making void the law of Moses, dieth without any mercy under *two or three witnesses:

29 How much more, do you think he deserveth worse punishments, who hath trodden underfoot the Son of God, and hath esteemed the blood of the testament unclean, with which he was sanctified, and hath offered an outrage to the Spirit of grace?

30 For we know him who hath said: "Vengeance is mine, and I will repay. And again: The Lord shall judge his people.

31 It is a dreadful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

John viii. 17. 2 Cor. xiii. 1.—^d Deut. xxxii. 35. Rom. xii. 19.

doctrine and practice of the Catholic Church from the apostle's time. Wi.—Where there is a full remission of sins, as in baptism, there is no more occasion for a sin-offering to be made for such sins already remitted; and as for sins committed afterwards, they can only be remitted in virtue of the one oblation of Christ's death. Ch.

VER. 19. Having therefore, brethren, a confidence. Here begins as it were the second part of this epistle, in which the apostle exhorts the Hebrews to the practice of Christian virtues, to a firm hope, and confidence of entering with Christ into the holy of holies; i. e. into heaven. Wi.

VER. 20. A new and living way; that is, having a new way, which he hath traced out and opened for us, by entering himself first into heaven, through the veil, i. e. through his flesh, or by taking upon him, our flesh or human nature. He speaks with an allusion and comparison with the high priest of the former law, who to enter into the sanctuary, was to pass through the veil of separation. He compares Christ's flesh or body to this veil, inasmuch as Christ entered into the sanctuary of heaven by his sufferings in the flesh, and by the death of his body on the cross; or, inasmuch as the divinity of Christ was hidden from us by the veil of his human nature, as the sanctuary was hidden from the people by its veils. Wi.

VER. 21. And a high priest; i. e. and having a great priest, to wit, Christ, over the house of God, that is, over the Church, or over all the faithful, both in the Church militant on earth and in the Church triumphant in heaven. Wi.

VER. 22. Let us draw near with a full and firm faith, our hearts being cleansed and sprinkled from sin. He again alludes to that ceremony, by which the high priest of the Jews on the feast, called of expiation, sprinkled the people with the blood of the victim offered. Wi.—Εν πληροφωρίᾳ πιστεύετε. The Prof. version gives erroneously, in full assurance of faith. See Ward's Errata.

VER. 25. Not forsaking our assembly. S. Chrys. understands the assemblies of Christians, where they met to celebrate the divine mysteries. Others expound it of not leaving the faith and communion of the Catholic Church by turning apostates: this is confirmed by the following words: for if we sin wilfully, . . . there is now left no sacrifice for sins. The Novatian heretics understood no pardon for sins after baptism. S. Chrys. and others understood no second baptism, wherewith to be cleansed in the same manner as before; but the most probable interpretation, and most agreeable to the text and doctrine of S. Paul, seems to be, that now remained no sacrifice for sins, i. e. no other sacrifice but that of Christ, which the apostate renouncing, by quitting and abandoning his faith, thereby cuts himself off from the very groundwork and foundation of salvation, as long as he continues in his apostasy. So that nothing remains for him but a dreadful expectation of God's just and severe judgments. Wi.

VER. 26. If we sin wilfully. He speaks of the sin of wilful apostasy from the known truth; after which, as we cannot be baptized again, we cannot expect to have that abundant remission of sins, which Christ purchased by his death, applied to our souls in that ample manner as it is in baptism; but we have rather all manner of reason to look for a dreadful judgment; the more, because apostates from the known truth seldom or never have the grace to return to it. Ch.

VER. 28-29. A man making void, &c. He brings this comparison from the manner that transgressors were dealt with under the law of Moses, to shew how much greater punishments Christians deserve when they are ungrateful to Christ after much greater benefits, when they may be said to have trodden under foot the Son of God by despising him, who was the author of their salvation, by shedding his blood upon the cross. Wi.—What is here said of the crime of apostasy, may in some measure be applied to every deadly sin committed after baptism or the sacrament of penance; for a Christian by returning to sin, treads under foot the Son of God, despises the adorable blood by which he was sanctified, and offers a heinous affront to the spirit of grace. Apostasy, though enormous, like all other sins can be forgiven by true repentance; but the apostle declares, there is no victim for the guilt of a person who perseveres and dies in apostasy.

VER. 31. Man is mortal, and therefore cannot extend his vengeance beyond death; God is immortal, and, as he lives eternally, can punish eternally; and he 32 But call to mind the former days, wherein, being illuminated, you sustained a great conflict of afflictions,

33 And on the one part indeed, by reproaches and tribulations made a spectacle: and on the other, made companions of them that were so treated.

34 For you also had compassion on those who were in chains, and received with joy the plundering of your goods, knowing that you have a better and permanent substance.

35 Do not therefore lose your confidence, which hath a great reward.

36 For patience is necessary for you: that doing the will of God, you may receive the promise.

37 For yet a very little while, and he that is to come will come, and will not delay.

38 *But my just man liveth by faith: but if he withdraw himself, he shall not please my soul.

39 But we are not the children of withdrawing unto perdition, but of faith to the salvation of the soul.

CHAP. XI.

What faith is: its wonderful fruits and efficacy, demonstrated in the fathers.

NOW faith is the substance of things to be hoped for, the evidence of things that appear not.

* Habac. ii. 4. Rom. i. 17. Gal. iii. 11.—† Gen. i. 4.—‡ Gen. iv. 4.—§ Mat. xxiii. 35.

who during life despises a God who died for him, will at death experience the rigour of a God always living to punish him.

VER. 32. But call to mind the former days, &c. After having laid before them the severity of God's judgments, he comforts them with the hopes they may have of their eternal salvation, from what they had already suffered soon after they received the light of the gospel, and were illuminated by baptism. Wi.

VER. 35. He encourages them to patience in the short time of this mortal life. Wi.

VER. 37. Yet a very little while, and the judge that is to come, and who is to judge every one, will come. Wi.—Ο ἔρχόμενος, he who is coming. It is observed by commentators, that this is the appellation given by the Jews to the Messias. See Matt. xi. 3. and xxi. 9.

VER. 38. But my† just man, he that liveth according to the doctrine I have taught, liveth by faith, which is the groundwork and foundation of a good life.—But if he withdraw himself, and fall from this faith of Christ, he shall not please my soul. It is a Hebrew way of speaking, and as it were in the person of God. Wi.—Luther and Calvin teach that faith alone is sufficient for justification, and they define this faith to be an assured confidence that their sins are forgiven them wholly by Christ's passion. No text, however, in Scripture teaches that a man is justified by faith only. In Romans, (ii.) Luther makes S. Paul say that a man is justified by faith only, without the works of the law: the authorized Protestant version has omitted the word only, foisted into the German translations. Solidians vainly cite this text, as its obvious meaning is, that neither the works of the written law, done by the Jew, nor the works of the law of nature, done by the Gentile, before either of them believe in Christ, can without faith in Christ justify any one. Saving faith is a faith working through charity in Jesus Christ, a faith which includes hope, love, repentance, and the use of the sacraments. Hence S. James (C. ii.) declares, that a man may have faith but not works, but that faith without works will not save him. S. Paul teaches the same, 1 Cor. xiii. 2. "If I should have all faith, so as to move mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing;" where we should observe the word all faith.

VER. 39. But we are not the children of withdrawing; ‡† i. e. we are not such as withdraw ourselves in this manner from the true faith to perdition, but remain constant in the faith and law of Christ. Wi.

* V. 1. Umbram, . . non ipsam imaginem rerum, σκῆν, οὐκ αὐτὴν τὴν εἰκόνα. It seems hard to take εἰκόνα for the things themselves represented; but only to signify, expressum imaginem.

† V. 2. Alioquin cessasset offerri. In the ordinary Greek copies, ἐκεῖ δὲ οὐκ ἐπαύσαντο προσφερόμεναι; but in other MSS. οὐκ is left out.

‡ V. 5. Corpus autem aptasti mihi; σῶμα δὲ καταρτίσω μοι; i. e. according to the Sept. but in the Heb. aures perfodisti, or as in the Latin, (Ps. xxxix. 7.) perfecisti mihi. How these different expressions agree, see Estius, Corn. a Lapide, &c.

§ V. 7. In capite libri, ἐν κεφαλίδι βιβλίου. The Greek and Latin seems to signify no more than in the volume, or book itself; κεφαλὴς, says Suidas, ὅπερ τινος ἑλέμα, alicujus involucrium, ab ἀλέω. No need of translating, in the front of the book.

|| V. 14. Unā oblatione, &c. μὴ προσφορᾷ. See S. Chrys. (ἀδγ. ιζ. p. 523 lin. 20. ut seq.) τί οὐν ἡρεῖς καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν οὐ προσφέρουσιν; προσφέρουσιν μὲν, ἀλλ' ἀνάνηται ποιοῦμενοι τοῦ θανάτου αὐτοῦ. καὶ μία ἵστιν αὐτῇ, καὶ οὐ πολλὰ . . . τὸν γὰρ αὐτὸν αἶψι προσφέρουσιν . . . ὥστε πολλὰ τοῦ προσφερόμενου ἂν σῶμα ἵστιν. καὶ οὐ πολλὰ σώματα, οὕτω καὶ μία θυσία (et unum, sive idem sacrificium) δ' Ἀρχιερεὺς ἡμῶν ἐκτείνος ἵστιν, δὲ τὴν θυσίαν καθάρονται ἡμᾶς προσενεγκῶν. ἐκτείνων προσφέρειεν καὶ νῦν, τὴν τότε προσενεχθείσῃ, &c.

2 For by this the ancients obtained a testimony.

3 ^bBy faith we understand that the world was framed by the word of God; that from invisible things visible things might be made.

4 ^cBy faith Abel offered to God a sacrifice exceeding that of Cain, ^dby which he obtained a testimony that he was just, God giving testimony to his gifts, and by it he being dead, yet speaketh.

5 ^eBy faith Henoch was translated, that he should not see death, and he was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had testimony that he pleased God.

6 But without faith it is impossible to please God. For he that cometh to God, must believe that he is, and is a rewarder of them that seek him.

7 ^fBy faith Noe having received an answer concerning those things which as yet were not seen, moved with fear, framed the ark for the saving of his family, whereby he condemned the world: and was instituted heir of the justice which is by faith.

8 ^gBy faith he that is called Abraham, obeyed, to go out into a place which he was to receive for an inheritance: and he went out not knowing whither he went.

* Gen. v. 24. Eccli. xlv. 16.—† Gen. vi. 14. Eccli. xlv. 17.—‡ Gen. xii. 1.

¶ V. 25. Non deserentes collectionem nostram, μὴ ἐγκαταλείποντες τὴν ἐπισυναγωγὴν λαῶν, collectionem, congregationem.

 V. 27. Ignis æmulatio, πυρὸς ζήλος, thus attributing zeal and rage to an inanimate thing.

†† V. 38. Justus meus, δικαίος; in some Greek MSS. μου, as also in the Sept. Habac. ii. 4.

‡† V. 39. Non sumus subtractionis filii, οὐκ ἐσμὲν ὑποσταλῆς, subaudi υἱοί.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. All this chapter is a commendation and recommendation of faith, which is the *substance of things hoped for, giving as it were a subsistence in our minds to such things as we are in hopes and in expectation of hereafter, and making them present to us before they come to pass.—It is also a sure conviction† of things that appear not. For when God has revealed things, and we believe them upon the divine and infallible authority of the revealer, we have a greater certainty of them than any demonstration can afford us. By this virtue of faith, they of old, our forefathers, obtained‡ a testimony from God that their actions were pleasing to him. Wi.—Faith is the basis, the foundation supporting our hope; for unless there be faith, there cannot possibly be any hope. Menochius.

VER. 3. The faith so highly commended here is not that special faith of sectarists, by means of which persons of various and contradictory tenets pretend to assure themselves that their sins in particular are pardoned for Christ's sake, but a firm and lively belief of all that God has revealed or promised.

VER. 4. A sacrifice.§ Lit. a greater sacrifice than his brother Cain, offering to God the best and fattest cattle he had, by which he obtained a testimony (a mark of God's approbation) that he was just, and his piety pleasing to God. S. Jerom, from a tradition among the Hebrews, thinks that this mark was, that fire descended from heaven upon Abel's sacrifice and not upon that of Cain.—And by it, he being dead, yet speaketh. By it, in construction, may be either referred to his faith or to his sacrifice. Some expound it, that by reason of his faith, or of his sacrifice, his memory still lives after his death, and he is commended by all good men. Others think that the apostle alludes to the words which God spoke to Cain, (Gen. iv. 10) "The voice of thy brother's blood crieth to me from the earth," and that in this manner he is said to have spoken after his death. Wi.—Men of all religions, whether true or false, have offered sacrifice, as being the supreme act of religion; and therefore we may conclude, that what is so general and universal, must have come from the instinct and light of our nature, and be a kind of first principle implanted in us by God himself.

VER. 5. Hench was translated, so as not to die nor see death. In Ecclesiasticus (C. xlv.) he is said to be translated into paradise. By these words, that he should not see death, it is the general exposition of the ancient interpreters, that he is not dead; but in what place, or in what manner God preserveth him, we know not. See S. Aug. l. de pec. orig. c. xxiii. S. Chrys. &c. Wi.

VER. 6. He proves that Henoch was translated by faith, or on account of faith, thus: Henoch was translated because he pleased God; now he could not please God but by faith; therefore by faith he was translated. Menochius.

VER. 7. Having received an answer, . . . moved with fear;|| i. e. with a religious fear: by the Greek, prepared the ark, by which he condemned the rest of the incredulous world, who would not take warning nor believe. Wi.—Noe warned impenitent sinners of impending judgments; but unbelievers and scoffers, they only laughed at Noe's credulity: thus worldlings, who laugh at the simplicity of the few, who work out their salvation with fear and trembling, will one day see their error, when the former shall perish in their infidelity, and the latter shall triumph in the midst of a falling world.

9 By faith he dwelt in the land of promise, as in a strange country, dwelling in cottages, with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise.

10 For he looked for a city that hath foundations: whose builder and maker is God.

11 *By faith also Sara herself, being barren, received strength to conceive seed, even past the time of age: because she believed that he was faithful who had promised.

12 For which cause there sprung, even from one (and him as dead) as the stars of heaven in multitude, and as the sand which is by the sea-shore, innumerable.

13 All these died according to faith, not having received the promises, but beholding them afar off, and saluting them, and confessing, that they are pilgrims and strangers on the earth.

14 For they that say these things, do signify that they seek a country.

15 And truly if they had been mindful of that from whence they came out, they had doubtless time to return:

16 But now they desire a better, that is to say, a heavenly one. Therefore God is not ashamed to be called their God: for he hath prepared for them a city.

17 ^bBy faith Abraham, when he was tried, offered Isaac; and he who had received the promises, offered up his only begotten son:

18 To whom it was said: *That in Isaac shall seed be called to thee:

19 Accounting that God is able to raise up even

* Gen. xvii. 19.—^b Gen. xxii. 1. Eccl. xlv. 21.—^c Gen. xxi. 12. Rom. ix. 7.
^d Gen. xxvii. 27. 39.—^e Gen. xlviii. 15.

VER. 8. By faith he that is called Abraham, &c. He commends his faith, who believing God, left his own country, lived in Chanaan as in a strange country, waiting for the promises and for a city, whose builder and maker is God; i. e. for an habitation in the kingdom of heaven. Wi.

VER. 10. The Patriarchs, who lived to a great age, dwelt not in fixed dwellings, but in moveable tents, as pilgrims; whereas their descendants, the period of whose existence is greatly curtailed, pass their time in building and planning as if they were never to die. This earth is the place of our exile, heaven is our true country: let us then live here as strangers and pilgrims, looking forward with anxious desires for our true country, the land of the living, in the bosom of our God.

VER. 11. By faith also Sara, &c. Though Sara seemed at first incredulous, yet she presently believed, and conceived Isaac when she was past the age of having children. Wi.

VER. 12. Him as dead: dead in a manner in that respect, and incapable of having children by Sara. Wi.

VER. 13. All these died in the faith of God's promises; that is, of their posterity, being to be introduced into the promised land of Chanaan, but chiefly into the happy country of heaven. For had they only aspired and wished for the country of Chaldean, out of which Abraham came, they had time enough to have returned thither. Wi.—A metaphor taken from sailors, who, after a long and dangerous voyage, no sooner desery their native country, but they hail it with transports of joy: thus in Virgil:

Italiam, Italiam, primus conclamat Achates.

Thus the Patriarchs, when beholding at a distance, and through faith, their heavenly country, hailed it with joyous and repeated accents, eagerly desiring to reach the envied port.

VER. 17. By faith Abraham . . . offered up Isaac; i. e. was ready and willing to do it, when Isaac was his only son, by whom God had promised to give him a numberless progeny, but by faith he considered that God, who had miraculously given him a son, could if he pleased raise him to life again. Wi.

VER. 19. *Whence also he received him for a parable. Some understand by this, that both Abraham and his son became hereby an example of a perfect obedience to God, which all nations should admire. S. Ohrys. says, that Abraham received again his son safe in a figure, by being ordered to sacrifice for him a ram, which was a figure of Isaac. Others, that Abraham received again his son Isaac, who was a figure of Christ sacrificed on the cross, and risen again. Christ carried the cross on which he was to suffer, as Isaac carried the wood up to the mountain where he was to have been offered. Wi.—Parable; that is, as a figure of Christ slain and coming to life again. Oh.

VER. 21. Jacob . . . worshipped the top† of Joseph's rod, or staff of command, or of his sceptre. See Gen. xlvii. Jacob, by bowing to Joseph and his sceptre, acknowledged and revered the power of Joseph, whom Pharaoh called the saviour of the world; and it is probable that Jacob, by the spirit of prophecy, from the dead: from whence also he received him for a parable.

20 ^aBy faith also Isaac blessed Jacob and Esau concerning things to come.

21 *By faith Jacob, when dying, blessed each of the sons of Joseph: 'and worshipped the top of his staff.

22 ^aBy faith Joseph, when dying, made mention of the going out of the children of Israel: and gave commandment concerning his bones.

23 ^aBy faith Moses when he was born, was hid three months by his parents, because they saw he was a comely infant, 'and they feared not the king's edict.

24 ^aBy faith Moses, when he was grown up, denied himself to be the son of Pharaoh's daughter,

25 Choosing rather to be afflicted with the people of God, than to have the pleasure of sin for a time;

26 Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasure of the Egyptians: for he looked to the reward.

27 By faith he left Egypt, not fearing the fierceness of the king: for he endured as seeing him that is invisible.

28 ^bBy faith he celebrated the pasch, and the shedding of the blood: that he, who destroyed the first-born, might not touch them.

29 ^mBy faith they passed through the Red Sea, as by dry land: which the Egyptians attempting, were swallowed up.

30 ^aBy faith the walls of Jericho fell down, by the going round them seven days.

^a Gen. xlvii. 31.—^s Gen. i. 23.—^b Exod. ii. 2.—^c Exod. i. 17.—^d Exod. ii. 11.
^e Exod. xii. 21.—^m Exod. xiv. 22.—ⁿ Josue vi. 20.

knew Joseph to be a figure of Christ, and his power to be a figure of the spiritual power of the Messias. Wi.—The apostle here follows the ancient Greek Bible of the seventy interpreters, (which translates in this manner, Gen. xlvii. 31.) and alleges this fact of Jacob, in paying a relative honour and veneration to the top of the rod or sceptre of Joseph, as to a figure of Christ's sceptre and kingdom, as an instance and argument of his faith. But some translators, who are no friends to this relative honour, have corrupted the text, by translating it, he worshipped, leaning upon the top of his staff; as if this circumstance of leaning upon his staff were any argument of Jacob's faith, or worthy the being thus particularly taken notice of by the Holy Ghost: (Ch.) Besides, if Jacob's staff, and not Joseph's rod or sceptre, had been spoken of, the Greek would have been abrov, sum, not abrov, ejus: but this relative honour or worship is not pleasing to them.

VER. 22. Concerning his bones. That is, that when the Israelites should leave Egypt, they should take with them his bones, to be buried in Chanaan with his ancestors. This shews he had faith in God's promises, that he would give the Israelites the land of Chanaan. Wi.

VER. 23. By faith Moses . . . was hid three months, &c. It is not improbable what Josephus relates, (l. ii. Antiq. c. 5) that the parents of Moses, by revelation from God, or by some extraordinary marks, were persuaded that he should deliver the Israelites from their slavery in Egypt, and conduct them into the land of promise. Wi.

VER. 24–26. By faith Moses . . . chose rather to be afflicted with the people of God, than to be honoured as the son of Pharaoh's daughter, and to enjoy short sinful pleasures in the court of the king.—Esteeming the reproach of Christ: by which seems to be signified, that Moses, to whom Christ and his sufferings were revealed, chose rather to endure such reproaches and contradictions from his brethren, the Israelites, as Christ was to suffer from the Jews, than to have all the short pleasures of what is called a happy life. See S. Chrys. hom. xxv.—For he looked unto the reward; not any temporal reward or advantage in this life, but a reward from God in heaven, or rather where God himself would be his reward. Wi.

VER. 27. He left Egypt. Some understand this, when he fled to Madian, after he had killed the Egyptian; but it was rather fear than faith which made him flee at that time. We may rather expound it of his going away with all the people, when by faith he trusted that God would deliver him and the people from the known fierceness of king Pharaoh, as it also happened.—For he endured, as seeing him that is invisible.†† That is, seeing by the eyes of faith the invisible God to be his protector, he endured and overcame all difficulties with courage and constancy. Wi.

VER. 30. The following examples are clear enough, if we look into the history and particular actions of those here named. It was a faith in God's mercies and promises that gave them courage, resolution, and perseverance amidst all dangers and difficulties, against all afflictions and persecutions, that made them despise the short happiness of this mortal life, in hopes of an immortal happiness

31 *By faith Rahab the harlot perished not with the unbelievers, receiving the spies with peace.

32 And what shall I yet say? For the time would fail me to tell of Gedeon, of Barac, of Samson, of Jephthe, of David, of Samuel, and of the prophets:

33 Who by faith subdued kingdoms, wrought justice, obtained the promises, stopped the mouths of lions,

34 Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness regained strength, became valiant in war, put to flight the armies of foreigners:

35 Women received their dead raised to life again: but others were racked, not accepting deliverance, that they might find a better resurrection.

36 And others had trial of mockeries and stripes, moreover also of bands and prisons:

37 They were stoned, they were cut asunder, they were tempted, they were put to death by the sword, they wandered about in sheep skins, in goat skins, being in want, distressed, afflicted:

38 Of whom the world was not worthy: wandering in deserts, in mountains, and in dens, and in caves of the earth.

39 And all these being approved by the testimony of faith, received not the promise, 40 God providing something better for us, that they should not be perfected without us.

CHAP. XII.

Exhortation to constancy under their crosses. The danger of abusing the grace of the new testament.

AND therefore we also having so great a cloud of witnesses over us, ^blaying aside every weight, and the sin that surroundeth us, let us run by patience to the fight proposed to us:

^a Josue ii. 3. James ii. 25.—^b Rom. vi. 4. Ephes. iv. 22.

hereafter. Yet they who are so much commended and approved for their faith, received not the great promise of entering into the kingdom of heaven; and they who lived and died well, were indeed in a place of rest, but their souls were not admitted to the beatifical vision, to see and enjoy God in heaven, till our blessed Saviour, at his glorious ascension, entered first, and opened as it were heaven's gates for others to enter. In this God provided something better for us, who, after his coming, if we die without sin, and without any temporal punishments due to sin, our souls are presently happy with God in heaven. Wi.

VER. 37. Μῆλον signifies a sheep; μηλωτή signifies a sheep skin, with the wool on it. This, or a goat skin, was the usual covering of poor people, and as such was adopted by the ancient prophets, mortified to all the luxuries of life. Thus Elias is called uir pillosus, a hairy man, not for his beard or hair, but for his shaggy or hairy covering.

* V. 1. Substantia, ὑπόστασις, substantia.

† Ibid. Argumentum, ἔκχυος. Convictio, ostensio. It does not seem well translated evidence, as by the Prot. and Mr. N. because faith is an obscure knowledge, though it be the most certain, because of the infallible authority of God, who has revealed those obscure mysteries.

‡ Ibid. Ἐμαρτυρήσαντες, testimonium consecuti sunt. This expression, which is repeated v. 4, 5, and 39, signifies an approbation or commendation.

§ V. 4. Plurimam hostiam, πλεονα θυσιαν, majorem.

|| V. 7. Metuens, εὐλαβηθεὶς, which signifieth a fear with reverence. See Heb. v. 7.

¶ V. 12. Et hoc emortuo: the ordinary Greek copies have, καὶ ταῦτα νεκρωμένους; i. e. secundum hæc, or in this respect dead, being incapable of having children by Sara.

 V. 19. Eum in parabolam accepit, ἐν παραβολῇ, in typo, in similitudine. S. Chrys. says, τοιούτοις ἐν ὑποδείγματι.

†† V. 21. Adoravit fastigium virgæ ejus, προσκύνησεν ἐπὶ τὸ ἄκρον τῆς ῥάβδου αὐτοῦ ἐπὶ does not change the signification. See S. Chrys. and Estius.

‡‡ V. 27. Invisibilem enim tanquam videns sustinuit: ἐκράτησεν, i. e. sustinuit non Deum, sed animositatem regis.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. Laying aside every weight; * i. e. all that may hinder us when we run in the way of virtue.—To the fight proposed to us. In the Greek it is more clear: let us run the proposed race. He compares the condition of Christians to those who run a race, who fight or strive for a prize in the Olympic games, who strip themselves, and make themselves as light as possible, the better to run and fight. Wi.—The Christian's life is both a race and a combat. In 2 Looking on Jesus the author and finisher of faith, who having joy proposed to him, underwent the cross, despising the shame, and sitteth on the right hand of the throne of God.

3 For reflect upon him who endured such opposition from sinners against himself: that you be not wearied, fainting in your minds,

4 For you have not yet resisted unto blood, striving against sin:

5 And you have forgotten the consolation which speaketh to you, as to children, saying: *My son, neglect not the discipline of the Lord: neither be thou wearied whilst thou art rebuked by him.

6 For whom the Lord loveth he chastiseth: and he scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.

7 Persevere in discipline. God offereth himself to you as to sons: for what son is there, whom the father doth not correct?

8 But if you be without discipline, whereof all are made partakers: then are you bastards, and not sons.

9 Moreover we have had indeed for instructors, the fathers of our flesh, and we revered them: shall we not much more obey the Father of spirits and live?

10 And they indeed for a few days instructed us according to their own will: but he, for our profit, that we might be partakers of his holiness.

11 Now all discipline for the present indeed seemeth to bring not joy, but sorrow: but afterwards it will yield to them that are exercised by it, the most peaceable fruit of justice.

12 Wherefore lift up the hands which hang down, and the feeble knees, Coloss. iii. 8. 1 Pet. ii. 1. and iv. 2.—* Prov. iii. 11. Apoc. iii. 19.

baptism we enter the lists; therefore we must fight in running to Jesus Christ, for he is the term, the goal, and the prize. To run well, we must be as light and disengaged as possible: and the same if we hope to combat with success. We should look up to the battles fought by our captain, Jesus Christ, and contemplate the glory he now enjoys on that account; for this he means to share with us, if we imitate his virtues: let us then rejoice to suffer with our Captain (ἀρχηγόν) here, and we shall be glorified with him hereafter.

VER. 2. Who having joy proposed to him, underwent the cross. The sense seems to be, who by reason of the joy he had to perform the will of his eternal Father, for which he knew he should be exalted above all creatures, underwent willingly the ignominy and death of the cross. Wi.

VER. 4. You have not yet resisted unto blood. Though you have met with some persecutions, you have not yet shed your blood for his sake who laid down his life, and shed every drop of his blood for you. Wi.

VER. 5. You have forgotten the consolation, &c. He puts them in mind, that it ought to be a subject of great comfort to them, that God calls them his children, his sons, and treats them as his true and legitimate children, when he admonished them to live under discipline and obedience to him, when, to correct their disobedient and sinful ways, he sends them afflictions and persecutions in this world, which they ought to look upon as marks of his fatherly tenderness; for this is what a prudent kind father does to his legitimate children, of whom he takes the greatest care: and, not to use these corrections, is to neglect them, as if they were illegitimate children. We reverence the fathers of our flesh, (v. 10.) our parents in this world, when they instruct and correct us, how much more ought we to obey the Father and Creator of spirits, (i. e. of our souls) that being truly sanctified by him, we may live and obtain life everlasting. Wi.

VER. 8. In these last four verses we may observe as many subjects of consolation under afflictions. God, our Father, is the author of them; the chastisement he inflicts is the proof of his love; it is the sign or mark of our divine adoption; it is a necessary condition to our being adopted.

VER. 11. It is true all discipline, all corrections, and sufferings in this present life, are disagreeable to our nature, because they bring not joy, but trouble and grief with them; yet afterwards, they who have been exercised with them, will reap the most peaceable fruit of justice, eternal peace and happiness in heaven. Wi.—We must not judge of sufferings by the smart they occasion, but by the fruits of peace, justice, and eternal glory they produce in such as submit to them with patience.

VER. 12–14. Wherefore lift up the hands, &c. Be fervent in piety, walk firmly in the way of virtue, make straight steps, without declining to one side or the other, without halting or going astray, and strive to be healed from your 13 And make straight steps with your feet: that no one halting may go astray, but rather be healed.

14 ^a Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see God:

15 Looking diligently, lest any man be wanting to the grace of God: lest any root of bitterness springing up do hinder, and by it many be defiled.

16 Lest there be any fornicator, or profane person ^b as Esau: who for one mess sold his first birth-right:

17 For know ye that ^c afterwards when he desired to inherit the blessing, he was rejected: for he found no place of repentance, although with tears he had sought it.

18 ^d For you are not come to a mountain that might be touched, and a burning fire, and a whirlwind, and darkness, and tempest,

19 And the sound of a trumpet, and the voice of words, which they that heard excused themselves, that the word might not be spoken to them.

20 For they did not endure that which was said: ^e And if a beast shall touch the mountain, it shall be stoned.

21 And so terrible was that which was seen, Moses said: I am frightened, and tremble.

22 But you are come to Mount Sion, and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to the company of many thousands of Angels,

23 And to the church of the first born, who are

^a Rom. xii. 18.—^b Gen. xxv. 33.—^c Gen. xxvii. 38.—^d Ex. xix. 12. and xx. 21.—^e Ex. xix. 18.

zine by his grace.—Follow and seek peace, as much as lies in you, with all men, and ^f purity of life, without which no man shall see and enjoy God. Wi.

VER. 15. Be wanting to the grace of God, by resisting and abusing his favours, or by falling from the grace of God received.—Lest any root of bitterness, &c. He means scandalous wicked persons, by whom others are infected, defiled, and corrupted. Wi.

VER. 16. Or profane person, as Esau, who had so little regard for the blessing, and inheritance of his father, that he sold his right of first-born for one mess of broth, and afterwards found no place for repentance, although with tears he had sought for it; that is, he could not make his father repent or change what he had once done, though he endeavoured with his tears and lamentable outcries. Or if any one will have repentance referred to Esau himself, still the Novatian heretics can have no advantage in favour of their error, when they deny that sinners can repent, because Esau's tears might only be for a temporal loss, not for God's sake, nor for the guilt of his sins, so that he wanted the dispositions of a true penitent and of a contrite heart. Wi.—Βέβηλος, profane, like Esau, who for a trifling meal could forfeit his right of primogeniture, and the honour of priesthood thereto attached. Oh, how many give up all right to a heavenly and eternal inheritance for even a more trifling consideration! And how will they one day, with Esau, regret the same inflexibility on the part of God, their Father!

VER. 17. He found, &c. That is, he found no way to bring his father to repent, or change his mind, with relation to his having given the blessing to his younger brother, Jacob. Ch.

VER. 18. For you are not come to a mountain, &c. That is, to a mountain on earth that can be touched; to wit, to Mount Sinai, where the law was given to Moses, where the mountain seemed all on fire, with dreadful thunder and lightning, whirlwinds, darkness, tempests, sounding of trumpets, voices, &c. which they who heard excused themselves, begging that Moses only, and not God, might speak to them, for they could not without exceeding consternation think of what was then said; that if any man, or even beast, should touch the mountain, he should be stoned to death. Ex. xix. 15. Nay Moses himself, trembling, was frightened. This particular is nowhere mentioned in the Scripture, but the apostle might know it by revelation, or by some tradition among the Jews. Wi.

VER. 22. But you are come to Mount Sion, where not a law of fear, like that of Moses, but a new law of love and mercy hath been given you, preached by our Saviour himself, and by his apostles, testified by the coming of the Holy Ghost, and by the effusion of God's spirit upon the believers. Here you are called to the city of the living God, (to the Christian Church on earth) and even to the celestial Jerusalem, there to be for ever happy in the company of many millions of Angels; to the church of the first-born, who are written in heaven, (v. 23.) to be happy with those who have been chosen by a special mercy of God, and blessed with an endless happiness; to be there in the presence of God, the judge of all men, with all the celestial spirits and souls of the just and perfect in the kingdom of God. Jesus Christ is the mediator of this new testament, the redeemer of mankind by his death on the cross, by the sprinkling and effusion of written in heaven, and to God, the judge of all, and to the spirits of the just made perfect, 24 And to Jesus, the mediator of the new testament, and to the sprinkling of blood, which speaketh better than that of Abel.

25 See that you refuse not him who speaketh. For if they escaped not who refused him that spoke upon earth; much less we, who turn away from him that speaketh to us from heaven.

26 Whose voice then moved the earth: but now he promiseth, saying: ^f Yet once: and I will move not only the earth, but heaven also.

27 And in that he saith: Yet once: he signifieth the translation of the moveable things, as of things that are made, that those things may remain which are immoveable.

28 Wherefore receiving an immoveable kingdom, we have grace: whereby let us serve, pleasing God with fear and reverence.

29 ^g For our God is a consuming fire.

CHAP. XIII.

Divers admonitions and exhortations.

LET fraternal charity abide in you.

2 ^h And hospitality do not forget, for by this some, ⁱ being not aware of it, have entertained Angels.

3 Remember them that are in bands, as if you were bound with them: and them that are afflicted, as being yourselves also in the body.

^f Agg. ii. 7.—^g Dent. iv. 24.—^h Rom. xii. 13. 1 Pet. iv. 9.

ⁱ Gen. xviii. 3. and xix. 2.

his blood, which speaketh better than that of Abel: the blood of Abel cried to heaven for vengeance, and the blood of Christ for mercy and pardon. Wi.

VER. 25. Refuse not then to hearken to him; for if the Jews escaped not God's severe judgments, for being deaf to his admonitions, given by an Angel to Moses on Mount Sinai, and by him to the people, much less shall we escape, if we turn away our minds, and harden our hearts against the instructions of our Redeemer, who came from heaven to speak to us, and teach us the way to our eternal salvation. Wi.

VER. 26. Whose voice then moved the earth, by such signs and prodigies on Mount Sinai: but now he promiseth, saying by the prophet Aggeus: yet once; and I will move not only the earth, but heaven also. These words of the prophet are commonly understood of Christ's first coming at his incarnation, when at his birth a star appeared, Angels were sent, and sung his praises, when the heavens opened at his baptism, when the earth trembled at his resurrection, when the sun and moon were darkened at his death, &c. Yet others expound these words of Christ's coming to redeem mankind, so as to comprehend all the time of the law of grace, and even his second coming to judge all men, at the end of the world, of which may particularly be understood those words, (v. 27.) of the translation of the moveable things; that is, of the elements, and of the heavens changed to a more perfect state. See here S. Chrys. S. Aug. l. 18. de civ. Dei. c. xxxv. p. 517. Nov. Editionis. Wi.

VER. 27. Some refer these words to the tabernacle, to the ark, the altar, and other parts of the Jewish religion; which, as figures were to be altered and to be replaced by the more lasting and more perfect dispensation of the gospel. Estius.

* V. 1. Omne pondus, πάντα ὄγκον, omnem sarcinam.

† V. 2. Curramus ad propositum nobis certamen, τρέχωμεν τὸν προκείμενον ἡμῖν ἀγῶνα, without πρὸς, ad. Certamen is not only pugnando, but contendeude cursu, &c.

‡ V. 5. Ergo adulteri, et non filii, ἄρα νόθοι ἐστέ, καὶ οὐχ υἱοί, adulterini, non germani filii.

§ V. 12-14. Remissas manus, παρεμμένας, which signifies hands hanging down in a lazy posture.

|| Ibid. Gressus rectos facite, προεχθεὶς ὁρθὰς ποιεῖσθαι, which is to advance in a straight line, not turning aside, nor tottering.

¶ Ibid. Sanctimoniam, ἀγιασμόν.

 V. 18. Ad tractabilem montem, ψηλαφημένον ὄρει, palpabilem.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 2. And hospitality do not forget, . . . some being not aware of it, have entertained Angels. They imagined they received men, when they were Angels. The Latin interpreter followed exactly the Greek, though the expression be unusual in both languages. It is meant of Abraham, (Gen. xviii. 2.) and of Lot, Gen. xix. 1. Wi.

VER. 3. As being yourselves also in the body. That is, liable to troubles and afflictions as long as you are in a mortal body. Wi.

VER. 4. Marriage honourable in all.† It is doubtful both in the Latin and 4 Marriage honourable in all, and the bed undefiled. For God will judge fornicators and adulterers.

5 Let your manners be without covetousness, contented with such things as you have: for he hath said: "I will not leave thee, neither will I forsake thee."

6 So that we may confidently say: "The Lord is my helper: I will not fear what man shall do unto me."

7 Remember your prelates, who have spoken to you the word of God: reflecting on the end of their conversation, imitate their faith.

8 Jesus Christ yesterday, and to-day, and the same for ever.

9 Be not led away with various and strange doctrines. For it is best to establish the heart with grace, not with meats: which have not profited those that walk in them.

10 We have an altar, whereof they have no power to eat who serve the tabernacle.

11 "For the bodies of those beasts, whose blood is brought into the sanctuary for sin by the high priest, are burned without the camp."

12 Wherefore Jesus also, that he might sanctify the people with his own blood, suffered without the gate.

13 Let us go forth, therefore, to him without the camp, bearing his reproach.

^a Josue ii. 5.—^b Ps. cxvii. 6.

Greek, whether the sense be, marriage is honourable, or let it be accounted honourable, as it rather seems to be by the rest of the text. Again it may be doubted whether the sense be honourable in all persons, or in all things, and in all respects; as it seems to be the obvious signification that persons do nothing to dishonour their state, as they do who violate by adulteries the fidelity they owe to one another, who regard not the sanctity of this sacrament, who love not each other, who take not care of the education of their children. It does not follow from hence, that all persons without any exception, even those who have already made a vow to God to lead a single life, may lawfully marry. Such persons, by pretending to marry, incur their damnation. See 1 Tim. v. 12. Wi.—Or, let marriage be honourable in all. That is, in all things belonging to the marriage state. This is a warning to married people, not to abuse the sanctity of their state, by any liberties or irregularities contrary thereunto. Now it does not follow from this text that all persons are obliged to marry, even if the word omnibus were rendered, in all persons, instead of in all things: for if it was a precept, S. Paul himself would have transgressed it, as he never married. Moreover those who have already made a vow to God to lead a single life, should they attempt to marry, would incur their own damnation. Ch.—As marriage is a great sacrament, (Eph. v.) married persons should be careful to honour and respect it, by chaste and prudent behaviour; (see 1 Peter iii. and 1 Thess. iv.) but it too often happens that by criminal incontinence they change a great sacrament into a great sacrilege.

VER. 5. I will not leave thee, neither will I forsake thee. It is an exhortation to covetous persons not to be too solicitous, but to trust in Providence. Wi.

VER. 7. Remember your prelates, &c. who have been placed over you to be your guides and directors in what belongs to the service of God; he seems to mean the two SS. James, the apostles, who perhaps had already suffered martyrdom for the gospel. Wi.

VER. 8. Yesterday, and to-day, and the same for ever. That is, Christ is the same merciful and powerful advocate and protector, in regard of all that serve him faithfully to the end of the world. Wi.

VER. 9. With various and strange doctrines. Such as the disciples of Simon Magus had begun to teach; nor with the false doctrine of those among you, who would make you subject to the ceremonies and sacrifices of the former law, which never of themselves profit those who walk in them, so as to give true sanctification, and which now are no longer obligatory. Wi.—The grace of Jesus Christ is the true support of our hearts, and this grace is conveyed to us by means of the sacraments, especially the holy Eucharist. Hence S. Ignatius addresses the Ephesians as follows: "Brethren, stand fast in the faith of Jesus Christ; in his passion and resurrection; breaking that one bread, which is the medicine of immortality, the antidote against death, and the means of living in God by Christ Jesus; the medicament that expels all evil."

VER. 10. We, Christians, have at present an altar; and consequently a sacrifice, whereof they have no power to eat, who serve the tabernacle, confiding in the law and in Moses, not in Christ and the gospel. He does not say, we had an altar. Wi.—S. Paul has often mentioned the high priest and victim; here he tells us we have an altar, and of course a sacrifice. Let us then go out of ourselves to offer to God by, with, and in Jesus Christ, this his beloved Son, in the holy Eucharist, for this is a victim of praise worthy of God, and let us not forget to offer ourselves to our eternal Father daily, in union with our great high 14 For we have not here a permanent city, but we seek one to come.

15 By him, therefore, let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is the fruit of lips glorifying his name.

16 And do not forget to do good, and to impart: for by such sacrifices God's favour is obtained.

17 Obey your prelates, and be subject to them. For they watch, as being to render an account of your souls, that they may do this with joy, and not with grief: for this is not expedient for you.

18 Pray for us: for we trust that we have a good conscience, being willing to behave ourselves well in all things.

19 And I beseech you the more to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner.

20 And may the God of peace, who brought again from the dead the great pastor of the sheep, our Lord Jesus Christ, in the blood of the everlasting testament, 21 Make you perfect in every good work, that you may do his will: working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ: to whom is glory for ever and ever. Amen.

22 And I beseech you, brethren, that you suffer the word of consolation. For I have written to you in few words.

^c Lev. xvi. 27.—^d Mich. ii. 10.

priest and victim, Jesus Christ; 1st, on the cross; 2dly, in the Eucharist; and 3dly, in heaven, the immaculate Lamb slain as it were from the beginning before the throne of God.

VER. 11. This is commonly interpreted of the sacrifice of the Eucharist, by which is continued (though in a different manner) Christ's sacrifice on the cross, of which he speaks in the following words, telling them that the bodies of those beasts, with the blood of which the sanctuary was sprinkled on the feast of expiation, (see Levit. xvi. 29. and xxiii. 27. and Numb. xxix. 8.) were burnt without the camp, not eaten as the other victims. Wherefore Jesus, when he fulfilled this figure, and offered himself on the cross, a sacrifice of expiation for the sins of all mankind, and to obtain for them true sanctification, was pleased to suffer out of the gate of Jerusalem. Wi.

VER. 13. Let us go forth, therefore, to him without the camp. It is an exhortation to them to be willing to suffer with Christ reproaches, persecutions, and death itself, if they desire to partake of the benefit of Christ's redemption. Wi.—Bearing his reproach. That is, bearing his cross. It is an exhortation to them to be willing to suffer, with Christ, reproaches, persecutions, and even death, if they desire to partake of the benefit of his suffering for man's redemption. Ch.

VER. 14-15. We have not a permanent city in this world, but are like pilgrims or banished men, seeking for our happy country of heaven; but in the mean time must offer to God a sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, which is done chiefly in the holy sacrifice of the Eucharist, also by confessing his name, and praying to him with our lips and hearts; and by a kind of sacrifice of charity, by doing good to every one, and of communication to others; lit. of communion, or union with our neighbours. Wi.—When we read in the psalms, and in the old Scripture, of a sacrifice of praise, we may look upon it as a prophecy of the Christian Eucharist or sacrifice of praise, of which S. Austin says: "What is a more holy sacrifice of praise, than that which consisteth in thanksgiving, which the faithful offer now in the sacrifice of the Church." l. 1. cont. Advers. leg. and proph. c. xviii. And again c. xx. "The Church from the time of the apostles, by an uninterrupted succession of prelates, offers to God in the body of Christ the sacrifice of praise."

VER. 16. For by such sacrifices God's favour is obtained; and a recompense or a reward from him. Wi.—In the Protestant version, God is well pleased: If God be well pleased and shew favour for them, then are they meritorious, and faith alone is not the sole cause of God's favour to man.

VER. 17-18. Obey your prelates, &c. Join the sacrifice of obedience to your bishops and pastors, whom God has placed over you, who must render an account even of your souls, i. e. whether they have discharged their duty towards you, and whether it be not by their neglect that you have remained in your sins. Follow their commands and instructions, with such a ready willingness, that you do not contristate them, but that you may be a subject of comfort and joy to them, in their heavy and dangerous employments.—Fail not to pray for me, who am such a minister of God. Wi.

VER. 20-21. Who brought, or raised from the dead, the great pastor of the sheep, of all the faithful, Jesus Christ, in the blood of the everlasting testament: in the testament that is to last for ever, not for a time, like the former testament made to the people of Israel. These words, in the blood, may either be joined with brought from the dead his son, as man, by the merits of his blood, which he had shed on the cross, as it is said Philip. ii. 8. Or they may be joined with the great pastor, and then the sense will be, that God raised Jesus Christ, who, by 23 Know ye that our brother, Timothy, is set at liberty: with whom (if he come shortly) I will see you.

24 Salute all your prelates, and all the saints. The brethren of Italy salute you.

25 Grace be with you all. Amen.

his blood shed on the cross, became the great shepherd of all the faithful. Working in you by his grace every good work, &c. Wi.

VER. 22. Bear with the word of consolation, with what I have written to exhort and comfort you in a very few words, considering the importance of the subject, and the sublime mysteries. Wi.

VER. 23. Our brother, Timothy, is set at liberty. From which we may conjecture that Timothy had been a prisoner, though it is not known where, nor on what occasion. Wi.

* V. 2. Per hanc enim latuerunt quidam Angelis hospitio recepti, διὰ τούτων γὰρ ἔλαθόν τινες ἐνίσταντες Ἀγγέλους, i. e. hospitio recipiendo Angelos. The Latin has exactly followed the Greek.

† V. 4. Honorabile connubium in omnibus, τίμιος ὁ γάμος ἐν πᾶσι.

† V. 10. Habemus altare, θυσιαστήριον, sacrificatōrium: θυσιαστήριον is not used for the oblation itself.

§ V. 16. Promeretur Deus. This word is taken passively in several good Latin authors. See Grotius.

THE

CATHOLIC EPISTLE OF S. JAMES,

THE APOSTLE.

ON THE CATHOLIC EPISTLES.

THE seven following Epistles have been called Catholic or general, not being addressed to any particular Church or person, if we except the Second and Third of S. John. They are called also Canonical, having been received by the Church as part of the canon of the New Testament, and as writings of divine authority. It is a matter of fact allowed by every one, that five of these epistles, to wit, this of S. James, the Second of S. Peter, the Second and Third of S. John, that of S. Jude, as also the Epistle of S. Paul to the Hebrews, and the Apocalypse or Revelation of S. John, were doubted of, and not received always and every where in the three first ages, till the canon and catalogue of Scripture books was examined by tradition, and determined by the authority of the Catholic Church, the supreme judge of all controversies in matters of faith and religion, according to the appointment of our Saviour, Christ, expressed in many places in the holy Scriptures. But I could never learn upon what grounds they who deny the Catholic Church and General Councils to be of an infallible authority, and who deny Christ's promises to guide his Church in all truth to the end of the world, can be certain which Scriptures or writings are canonical, and which are not. I could never understand what construction to put on the sixth of the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion of the Church of England. We there meet with this declaration: In, or by the name of the holy Scripture, we understand those canonical books of the Old and New Testament of whose authority was never any doubt in the Church. These I have mentioned were certainly for some time doubted of; they are still doubted of by some of the late reformers: Luther, the great doctor of the reformation, is not ashamed to say that this epistle of S. James is no better than straw, and unworthy of an apostle. These writings therefore, according to the said declaration, ought not to be accounted and received as canonical; and yet before the end of the said sixth article, it is again declared, that all the books of the New Testament, as they are commonly received, we do receive and account canonical. And in all New Testaments of the Church of England, all these are received for canonical in the same manner as the four gospels, without any remark or advertisement to the contrary.—The first of the seven epistles was written by S. James, surnamed the lesser, and James of Alphaeus, (Mat. x. 3.) one of the twelve apostles, called the brother of our Lord, (Gal. i. 19.) who was made bishop of Jerusalem. His mother is thought to have been Mary, sister to the blessed Virgin Mary, and to have been married first to Alphaeus, and afterwards to Cleophas; to have had four sons, James, Joseph, Simon, (or Simeon) and Jude, the author of the last of these epistles. All these four being cousins-german, are called brothers of our Lord, Mat. xiii. 55. How great a veneration the Jews themselves had for this apostle and bishop of Jerusalem, see not only Hegisippus apud Euseb. l. ii. hist. c. 23. and S. Jer. de viris Illustribus, also the same S. Jer. in Gal. i. 19. (tom. iv, p. 237, l. 1. cont. Jovin. tom. iv, part 2. p. 182.) but even Josephus, (l. xxviii. Antiq. c. 8.) where he calls him the brother of Jesus, surnamed the Christ. This epistle was written about the year 62. The chief contents are: 1. To shew that faith without good works will not save a man, as S. Aug. observed, i. de fid. et oper. c. iv.; 2. He exhorts them to patience, to beg true wisdom, and the divine grace; 3. He condemns the vices of the tongue; 4. He gives admonitions against pride, vanity, ambition, &c.; 5. To resist their disorderly lusts and desires, which are the occasions and causes of sin, and not Almighty God; 6. He publisheth the sacrament of anointing the sick with oil; 7. He recommends prayer, &c. S. Jerom, in a letter to Paulinus, (t. iv, part 2, p. 574.) recommends all these seven epistles in these words: James, Peter, John, and Jude, published seven epistles . . . both short and long, short in words, long as to the contents; Jacobus, Petrus, Joannes, Judas, septem epistolus ediderunt . . . breves pariter et longas, breves in verbis, longas in sententiis. Wi.—S. Gregory Nazianzen remarks, that the faithful were not agreed as to the number of these epistles; some admitted seven and some only three, viz. this of S. James, the first of S. John, and the first of S. Peter:

Καθολικῶν Ἐπιστολῶν

Τινές μὲν ἐπὶ τὰς φάσιν, οἱ δὲ τρεῖς μόνas

Χρῆναι δέχεσθαι τὴν Ἰάκωβου μίαν,

Μίαν δὲ Πέτροῦ, τήν τε Ἰωάννου μίαν.—Næz. Carm. de Script. Canon.

We shall state at the beginning of each epistle, the reason why they have been adopted into the canon of the Scripture. C.—The object of these epistles was, according to the remark of S. Augustine, to refute the rising errors of Simon Magus, the Nicolaites, and other such heretics, who abusing the liberty of the gospel, and perverting the meaning of S. Paul's words in his epistle to the Romans, pretended that faith alone, without good works, was sufficient for salvation; although S. Paul expressly requires of Christians, a faith working by charity, Gal. v. 6. and 1 Cor. xiii. where he uses these emphatic words: "If I should have all faith, so as to remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing." S. Aug. lib. de fide et operibus, c. xiv. C.—As to what regards the authenticity of S. James' epistle, although Luther with his usual boldness asserts that many with good reason denied this epistle to be canonical, and affirmed that it was unworthy the pen of an apostle, yet, admitting that some individuals in the first ages of the Church doubted of its authority, we are nevertheless assured from certain monuments that it was always considered as sacred and inspired both by the Latin and Greek Churches. This is evident from the sixtieth canon of the council of Laodicea; from the forty-seventh of the council of Carthage, in 397; from Origen, hom. vii. in Joue; from S. Athanasius in synopsi, Epiphanius hæresi 76; from S. Jerom, ad Paulinum Epis.; from S. Austin, lib. ii. de Doc. Chris. c. viii; from S. Gregory Nazianzen, tom. iii, p. 98; from Amphilochus, apud Greg. Nazian. tom. ii, p. 194; from Innocent I. Epis. ad Decentium; from Rufinus, Exposit. Symboli; and from Gelasius I. who in the fifth age, in a council of seventy bishops, at Rome, settled the canon of the genuine books of the holy Scripture, and distinguished them from what are spurious. Cal. et Habert de Sac. Eccl. Un.—S. Jerom and S. Austin quote frequently this epistle as the undoubted work of this apostle; and since their time, its authenticity has never been called in question by Catholics. It is believed S. James wrote this epistle in Greek, as he quotes the Scripture according to the version of the Septuagint, as C. iv. 6; and as this language was commonly spoken in the East by the dispersed Jews, to whom he wrote. His style is concise and sententious, like that of Solomon in his proverbs, and like the maxims of the Orientals even to the present day. C.

CHAP. I.

The benefit of tribulations. Prayer with faith. God is the author of all good, but not of evil. We must be slow to anger; and not hearers only, but doers of the word. Of bridleing the tongue; and of pure religion.

JAMES, a servant of God, and of our Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes which are dispersed, greeting.

2 My brethren, count it all joy, when you shall fall into divers temptations:

3 *Knowing that the trying of your faith worketh patience.

4 And patience hath a perfect work: that you may be perfect and entire, deficient in nothing.

5 But if any of you want wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all abundantly, and upbraideth not: and it shall be given him.

6 ^bBut let him ask in faith, nothing wavering: for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, that is moved and carried about by the wind

7 Therefore let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.

8 A double-minded man is inconstant in all his ways.

9 But let the brother of low condition glory in his exaltation:

10 But the rich, in his being low ^abecause as the flower of the grass he shall pass away:

^a Rom. v. 3.—^b Mat. vii. 7. and xxi. 32. Mark xi. 24. Luke xi. 9. John xiv. 13. and 16.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. James, a servant of God, and of our Lord Jesus Christ. Some have doubted whether the author of this epistle was S. James, the apostle, because he does not call himself an apostle. By the same weak argument we might reject all the three epistles of S. John and his Apocalypse, and the epistle of S. Jude. Nor does S. Paul give himself this title in those to the Thessalonians, to the Philippians, to Philemon, or to the Hebrews—To the twelve tribes, which are dispersed. Lit. which are in the dispersion. That is, to the Jews converted in all nations.—*Greeting. Lit. salvation. Which comprehendeth much the same as, when S. Paul says, grace, peace, mercy, &c. Wi.

VER. 2. Into divers temptations. The word temptation, in this epistle, is sometimes taken for trials by afflictions or persecutions, as in this place; sometimes for a tempting, enticing, or drawing others into sin. Wi.

VER. 3-4. The trying of your faith worketh patience. S. Paul seems to assert the reverse: (v. 3.) when he says, patience worketh a trial. They are easily reconciled. Here S. James teacheth us, that patience is occasionally obtained, and strengthened by sufferings, the meaning of S. Paul is, that patience worketh, sheweth itself, and is found perfect in the sight of God by trials. Wi.

VER. 5. And upbraideth not. That is, God does not think much, nor reproach us with the multitude of his benefits and favours: and if he puts sinners in mind of their repeated ingratitude, it is for their good and conversion. Wi.

VER. 7. Let not that man think that he shall receive. He that has not a lively faith and firm hope, wavering with a distrust of God's power or goodness, must not imagine to receive what he so faintly asks. Wi.

VER. 8. Such a one, is as it were a double-minded man,† divided betwixt God and the world, halting betwixt two, and becomes inconstant in all his ways, always rising and falling, beginning and relapsing. Wi.

VER. 9-12. The brother of low condition. Lit. humble.† See Luke i. 48. The sense is, that a Christian, of never so low and poor a condition, may glory, and rejoice even in his poverty, that he is not only the servant, but even the adoptive son of God. But the rich, in his being low. Some word must be here understood to make the sense complete. If we understand, let the rich man glory, it must be expounded by irony, by what follows, of his passing away like a flower. But others rather understand some other word of a different signification; as, let the rich man lament the low condition that he must come to; for he must quickly fade away like grass.—The beauty of the shape thereof is perished. So the Hebrews say, the face of the heavens, the face of the earth, &c. Wi.

VER. 13. God is not a tempter of evils, and he tempteth no man. Here to tempt, is to draw and entice another to the evil of sin, which God cannot do. The Greek may also signify, he neither can be tempted, nor tempt any one. But every one is thus tempted by the evil desires of his corrupt nature, which is called concupiscence, and which is not properly a sin of itself, but only when we yield to it. Wi.

VER. 15. When concupiscence hath conceived, (man's free will yielding to it) it bringeth forth sin, our perverse inclinations become sinful, and when any grievous sin is completed, or even consented to, it begetteth death, it maketh the soul guilty of eternal death. It may not be amiss here to observe with S. Gregory, &c. that there are three degrees in temptations; the first, by suggestion only; the second, by delectation; the third, by consent. First, the devil, or our own frail nature, tempts us by a suggestion of evil thoughts in our imagination: to have such thoughts and imaginations may be no sin at all, though the things and objects represented be never so foul and hideous, though they may continue never so long, 11 For the sun rose with a burning heat, and parched the grass, and the flower thereof fell off, and the beauty of the shape thereof perished: so also shall the rich man fade away in his ways.

12 ^aBlessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he hath been proved, he shall receive the crown of life, which God hath promised to them that love him.

13 Let no man, when he is tempted, say, that he is tempted by God: For God is not a tempter of evils: and he tempteth no man.

14 But every man is tempted, being drawn away by his own concupiscence, and allured.

15 Then when concupiscence hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: But sin, when it is completed, begetteth death.

16 Do not err, therefore, my dearest brethren.

17 Every best gift, and every perfect gift, is from above, coming down from the Father of lights, with whom there is no change, nor shadow of vicissitude.

18 For of his own will hath he begotten us by the word of truth, that we might be some beginning of his creatures.

19 You know, my dearest brethren: ^aAnd let every man be swift to hear; but slow to speak, and slow to anger.

^a Eccl. xiv. 18. Isai. xl. 6. 1 Pet. i. 24.—^b Job v. 18.—^c Prov. xvii. 27.

and return never so often. The reason is, because we cannot hinder them. On the contrary, if our will remains displeased with them, and resist them, such a resistance is meritorious, and by the mercies of God will purchase us a reward. Second, these representations may be followed with a delight or delectation in the senses, or in the body only; and if by an impression made against the will, which we no ways consent to, there is again no sin. There may be also some neglect in the person tempted, by not using sufficient endeavours to resist and repel those thoughts, which if it be only some small neglect, the sin is not great: but if the person tempted hath wilfully, and with full deliberation, taken delight in evil thoughts, either of revenge, or of fornication, or adultery, or about any thing very sinful, such a wilful delight is a grievous and deadly sin, though he hath not had a will or design to perform the action itself. The reason is, because he then wilfully consents in mind and heart to a sinful delight, though not to the execution or action. And the sin may be great, and mortal, though it be but for a short time: for a temptation may continue for a long time and be no sin; and there may be a great sin in a short time. The reason again is, because we are to judge of sin by the dispositions and consent of the will, not by the length of time. Third, when the sinner yields to evil suggestions and temptations, so that his will fully consents to what is proposed, and nothing can be said to be wanting but an opportunity of putting his sinful desires in execution, he has already committed the sin; for example, of murder, of fornication, &c. in his heart, as our blessed Saviour taught us. Mat. v. 28. Wi.

VER. 6-17. Do not err, nor deceive yourselves by yielding to temptation, beg of God his supporting grace, for every good gift is from him. Wi.

VER. 18. By the word of truth. Some, with S. Athanasius, understand the eternal word made man. Others commonly understand the word of the gospel, by which we have been called to the true faith, &c.—Some beginning of his creatures, (or as the Greek signifies) such a beginning as are the first-fruits; and perhaps S. James may so call the Jews, as being the first converted to believe in Christ. Wi.

VER. 19. You know, or you are sufficiently instructed in these things.—Let every man be swift to hear the word of God, but slow, or cautious in speaking, especially slow to anger, or to that rash passion of anger, which is never excusable, unless it be through a zeal for God's honour, and against sin. Wi.—S. James in this epistle does not aim at a regular discourse: he proposes a diversity of moral sentences, which have not much connection with each other. He here instructs the faithful how to behave in conversation. He recommends to them modesty and prudence in their discourses; and rather to be fond of hearing much, than of speaking much; and of practising the truth, than of preaching it to others. "For not those who understand the law, nor those who preach it, are justified before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified before God." Rom. c. ii. 13. C.—A wise man is known by the fewness of his words. Sapiens verbis innotescit paucis. Regl. S. Ben. c. vii. With hearing, the wise man will become wiser. Sen. lib. ii. de Ira. c. 28.—Anger is a short madness. The best cure is to permit it to subside, and to let our reason have time to reflect upon the propriety of doing what we are at first inclined to. The first motions to anger are frequently indeliberate, and consequently not sinful: but we must be careful to resist as soon as we perceive them, lest they should become too violent, and obtain the consent of our will. C.—Learn of me, says our Saviour, because I am meek and humble of heart. Mat. c. xii. 29. If, says S. Francis de Sales, being stung and bit by detractors and enemies, we fly out, swell, and are enraged, it is a great 20 For the anger of man worketh not the justice of God.

21 Wherefore casting away all uncleanness, and abundance of malice, with meekness receive the engrafted word, which is able to save your souls.

22 *But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only, deceiving yourselves.

23 For if a man be a hearer of the word, and not a doer; he shall be compared to a man beholding his natural countenance in a glass:

24 For he beheld himself, and went his way, and presently forgot what manner of man he was.

25 But he that shall look into the perfect law of liberty, and continue in it, not becoming a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work; this man shall be blessed in his deed.

26 But if any man think himself to be religious, not bridling his tongue, but deceiving his own heart, this man's religion is vain.

27 Religion, pure and immaculate with God and the Father, is this: To visit the fatherless and widows in their tribulation, and to keep one's self immaculate from this world.

* Matt. vii. 21. and 24. Rom. ii. 13.

sign that neither our humility nor meekness are true and sincere, but only apparent and artificial. It is better, says S. Austin, writing to Profuturus, to deny entrance to just and reasonable anger, than to admit it, be it ever so little; because, being once admitted, it is with difficulty driven out again; for it enters as a little twig, and in a moment becomes a beam: and if it can once but get the night of us, and the sun set upon it, which the apostle forbids, it turns into a hatred, from which we have scarcely any means to rid ourselves; for it nourishes itself under a thousand false pretences, since there was never an angry man that thought his anger unjust. Introduction to a devout life, p. 3. c. viii.

VER. 20. The anger of man, &c. Let us not then be angry with each other on the way to eternal life, but rather march on with the troop of our companions and brethren meekly, peaceably, and lovingly; nay, I say to you absolutely and without exception, be not angry at all, if it be possible, and admit no pretext whatsoever to open the gate of your heart to so destructive a passion: for S. James here tells us positively, and without reservation, "the anger of man works not the justice of God." S. Francis, ibidem.—The patient man is better than the valiant; and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh cities. Prov. c. xvi. 32. The anger of man is the daughter of pride, the mother of enmities, the enemy of peace and harmony, and the source of stubbornness and blindness of mind and heart. The justice of God is humility, meekness, charity, peace, docility, and forbearance. How great the contrast!

VER. 21. All uncleanness.†† The Greek shews that hereby is meant a sordid, filthy uncleanness, infecting and defiling the soul.—The engrafted†† word. The word and doctrine of Christ, by the labours of his preachers, and chiefly by his divine grace engrafted and fixed in your souls. Wi.

VER. 23. He shall be compared to a man, &c. The sense is, that it is not enough for a man to examine and look into his interior, and the state of his conscience in a negligent and superficial manner, no more than one that goes to a looking-glass, but does not take care to take away the dirt or spots which he might discover. Wi.

VER. 25. The law of Christ, called here the perfect law of liberty, as it is distinguished from the Jewish law of fear and slavery, is as it were a looking-glass, which may make us know ourselves, and discover and correct our failings. Wi.

VER. 26. If any man think, &c. He here blames those hot disputes, which seem to have been frequent amongst the converted Jews, concerning the necessity of observing the legal rites. In vain, says he, do you pique yourselves upon the rigorous observance of the law, and your zeal to unite its ceremonial rites with the practice of the gospel. If you be void of the essence of Christianity, which is charity, prudence, and moderation, your religion will avail you nothing. C.—This may also be understood of those devotees who are fond of making a parade of their virtues, and who, as S. Gregory says, (hom. xii. in Mat.) afflict their bodies indeed with fasting, but for this they expect to be esteemed by men. A.—A man must not imagine himself to be religious, and perfect in the way of virtue, unless he governs and bridles his tongue from oaths, curses, calumnies, detractions, lies, of which more in the third chapter. Wi.

VER. 27. Religion pure and unspotted, &c. S. James may use the word pure, as a proper admonition to the Jews, who were generally mostly solicitous to avoid legal uncleannesses, such as were incurred by eating meats forbidden in their law as unclean, by touching a dead body, &c. He therefore tells them that the Christian religion is known by acts of charity, by visiting and assisting widows, the fatherless, and such as are under afflictions, and in general by keeping our consciences interiorly clean, unspotted, and undefiled from this world, from the corrupt maxims and sinful practices so common in this wicked world. Wi.

* V. 1. Salutem, καταρ, salvare, salvos esse.
(1602)

CHAP. II.

Against respect of persons. The danger of transgressing one point of the law. Faith is dead without works.

MY^b brethren, have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ of glory with respect of persons.

2 For if there come into your assembly a man having a gold ring, in splendid attire, and there come in also a poor man in mean dress,

3 And you fix your eyes on him that is clothed with the splendid robe, and say to him: Sit thou here in a good place: and say to the poor man: Stand thou there, or sit under my footstool:

4 Do you not judge within yourselves, and are become judges of unjust thoughts?

5 Harken, my dearest brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which God hath promised to them that love him?

6 But you have dishonoured the poor. Do not the rich oppress you by might; and do not they draw you before the judgment-seats?

7 Do not they blaspheme the good name that is invoked upon you?

^b Lev. xix. 15. Deut. i. 17. and 16. Prov. xxiv. 23. Eccli. xlii. 1.

† V. 8. Duplex animo, διπλὸν ἐν ψυχῇ, quasi habens duas animas, dubius, incertus, potius quam hypocrita.

† V. 9. Humilia, and in humilitate, ταπεινός, ταπεινώσει. See Luke i. 48.

§ V. 11. Decor vultus ejus, ἐμπέπεια τοῦ προσώπου; the Hebrews say, faciem, coeli, terræ, gladii, &c.

|| V. 13. Deus enim intentator, i. e. non tentator; by the Greek, ἀνίπατος; which may signify intentabilis, qui non potest tentari.

¶ V. 15. Generat mortem, ἀποκτίνει θάνατον; ἀποκτίνει is facrum emittens, and generare, as it is also here again used v. 18.

 V. 18. Initium aliquod creaturæ ejus, ἀπαρχήν τινα. See Rom. xi. 16. 1 Cor. xv. 20. and xvi. 15. &c.

†† V. 21. Immunditiam, βυκαρίαν, from βέκος, sordes, spurcitia.

†† Ibid. Insitum verbum, ἐμφυτον λόγον.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. With respect of persons. This partial respect of persons is several times condemned both in the Old and New Testament. S. James here speaks of it as it was committed in the assemblies, by which many understand the meetings of Christians, in* synagogues and places where they celebrated the divine service, or met to keep the charitable feast, called Agape. Others expound it of meetings where causes were judged. If it be meant of Church meetings, the apostle might have even greater reason to condemn such a partiality at that time than at present; for when the poorer sort of people, of which was the greatest number of converts, saw themselves so neglected and despised, and any rich man when he came thither so caressed and honoured, this might prove a discouragement to the meaner sort of people, and an obstacle to their conversion. But if we expound it of meetings where causes were judged betwixt the rich and others of a lower condition, (which exposition the text seems to favour) the fault might be still greater, when the judges gave sentence in favour of great and rich men, biassed thereunto by the unjust regard they had for men rich and powerful. This was a transgression of the law: (Lev. xix. 15.) Respect not the person of the poor, nor honour the countenance of the mighty. But judge thy neighbour according to justice. See also Deut. i. 17. Wi.—Respect, &c. The meaning is, that in matters relating to faith, the administering of the sacraments and other spiritual functions in God's Church, there should be no respect of persons: but that the souls of the poor should be as much regarded as those of the rich. C. i. 17. Ch.

VER. 4. Are become judges of (or with) unjust thoughts.† When against justice you favour the rich. Or, if in Church assemblies you discover a wrong and partial judgment in your minds and thoughts, by the high value and esteem you shew to the rich on account of their riches, and the contempt you have for poverty and of the poor, when they are perhaps more deserving in the sight of God, who hath chosen them who are rich in faith, whom he hath made his adoptive children and heirs of his kingdom. These are much the greater riches: this is a dignity far surpassing that of the greatest king or emperor. And you have less reason to shew such distinguishing marks of honour and esteem for the rich of this world, since it is they who by might and violence oppress you, draw you to judgment-seats: and they are less worthy of your honour and esteem, when by their scandalous behaviour they blaspheme, or cause to be blasphemed and ill-spoken of, the good and holy name of God, which is invoked upon you. Wi.

VER. 8. If then you fulfil the royal law, . . . thou shalt love, &c. you do well. By these words, the apostle explains what he had said before of the particular respect paid to rich and powerful men, that if these were no more than some exterior marks paid them without any injustice or interior contempt of such as were poor, so that they took care to comply with that royal precept given to every one by Almighty God, the King of kings, thou shalt love thy neighbour, that 8 If then you fulfil the royal law, according to the Scriptures: *Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself: you do well.

9 ^b But if you have respect to persons, you commit sin, being reprov'd by the law as transgressors.

10 ^c Now whosoever shall keep the whole law but offend in one point, is become guilty of all.

11 For he that said, Thou shalt not commit adultery, said also, Thou shalt not kill. Now if thou do not commit adultery, but shalt kill: thou art become a transgressor of the law.

12 So speak ye, and so do, as being to be judged by the law of liberty.

13 For judgment without mercy, to him that hath not done mercy: and mercy exalteth itself above judgment.

14 What shall it profit, my brethren, if a man say he hath faith, but hath not works? Shall faith be able to save him?

* Lev. xix. 18. Mat. xxii. 39. Mark xii. 31. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 14.

^b Supra 1. Lev. xix. 15.

is, every one without exception, as thyself; in this you do well; and the respect of persons was less blameable. Wi.

VER. 10. Is become guilty of all. It is certain these words are not to be taken merely according to the letter, nor in the sense which at first they seem to represent, as if a man by transgressing one precept of the law transgressed and broke all the rest: this appears by the very next verse, that a man may commit murder by killing another, and not commit adultery. And it is certain, as S. Aug. observes, that all sins are not equal, as the Stoic philosophers pretended. See S. Aug. Epist. elxvii. (nov. ed. tom. 2, p. 595) where he consults S. Jerom on this very place out of S. James, and tells us that such a man may be said to be guilty of all, because by one deadly sin he acts against charity, † (which is the love of God and of our neighbour) upon which depends the whole law and all its precepts; so that by breaking one precept, he loseth the habit of charity, and maketh the keeping, or not breaking of all the rest, unprofitable to him. Secondly, it may be added, that all the precepts of the law are to be considered as one total and entire law, and as it were a chain of precepts, where by breaking one link of this chain the whole chain is broken, or the integrity of the law, consisting of a collection of precepts. Thirdly, it may be said, that he who breaks any one precept, contemns the authority of the lawgiver, who enjoined them all, and under pain of being for ever excluded from his sight and enjoyment. A sinner, therefore, by a grievous offence against any one precept, forfeits his heavenly inheritance, becomes liable to eternal punishments, as if he had transgressed all the rest: not but that the punishments in hell shall be greater against those who have been greater sinners, as greater shall be the reward in heaven for those who have lived with greater sanctity and perfection. Wi.—Guilty, &c. That is, he becomes a transgressor of the law in such a manner, that the observing of all other points will not avail him to salvation; for he despises the lawgiver, and breaks through the great and general commandment of charity, even by one mortal sin. Ch.

VER. 12. By the law of liberty; i. e. by the new law and doctrine of Christ. Wi.

VER. 13. For judgment without mercy, &c. It is an admonition to them to fulfil, as he said before, the royal precepts of the love of God and of our neighbour, which cannot be without being merciful to others. Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy. Mat. v. 7.—And mercy exalteth itself above judgment. Some understand this as a confirmation of God's infinite mercies, out of Ps. cxliv. 9. where it is said that his "mercies are over all his works;" that is, though all his perfections be equally infinite, yet he is pleased to deal with sinners rather according to the multitude of his mercies than according to the rigour of his justice. Others expound these words of the mercy which men shew to one another, and that he exhorts them to mercy, as a most powerful means to find mercy; and the merciful works done to others will be beneficial to them, and make them escape when they come to judgment. Wi.—Similar to this are the words of old Tobias to his son: "Alms deliver from all sin, and from death, and will not suffer the soul to go into darkness. Alms shall be a great confidence before the most high God, to all them that give it." Tob. iv. 11, 12. "Blessed are the merciful," says our divine Judge, "for they shall obtain mercy." Mat. v. 7. C.—And the definitive sentence of Christians, at the day of judgment will be favourable or not, as they have complied in life with the calls of charity.

VER. 14, &c. Shall faith be able to save him? He now comes to one of the chief points of this epistle, to shew against the disciples of Simon, the magician, that faith alone will not save any one. We may take notice in the first place, that S. James in this very verse, supposes that a man may have faith, a true faith without good works. This also follows from v. 12. where he says: Thou believest that there is one God: thou dost well. And the same is evident by the words Jo xii. 42. where it is said, that many of the chief men also believed in him, (Christ) . . . but did not confess it, that they might not be cast out of the synagogue. Now that faith alone is not sufficient to save a man, S. James declares by this example: If any one say to the poor and naked, go in peace, be you warmed and filled, and give them nothing, what shall it profit? Even so faith, if it have not

15 ^a And if a brother or sister be naked, and want daily food,

16 And one of you say to them: Go in peace, be you warmed and filled: yet give them not those things that are necessary for the body, what shall it profit?

17 Even so faith, if it have not works, is dead in itself.

18 But some men will say: Thou hast faith, and I have works: shew me thy faith without works; and I will shew thee my faith by works.

19 Thou believest that there is one God. Thou dost well: the devils also believe and tremble.

20 But wilt thou know, O vain man, that faith without works is dead?

21 ^c Was not Abraham, our father, justified by works, offering up Isaac, his son, upon the altar?

22 Seest thou that faith did co-operate with his works: and by works faith was made perfect?

23 And the Scripture was fulfilled, saying: 'Abra-

^a Deut. i. 18. Mat. v. 19.—^d 1 John iii. 17.—^e Gen. xxii. 9.

^f Gen. xv. 6. Rom. iv. 3. Gal. iii. 6.

works is dead, &c. i. e. such a faith, though it be not lost and destroyed, yet it remains in a soul that is spiritually dead, when it is not accompanied with charity and grace, which is the life of the soul, and without which faith can never bring us to eternal life. In this sense is to be understood the 20th and 26th verses of this chapter, when faith is again said to be dead without good works. This is also the doctrine of S. Paul, when he tells us that a saving faith is a faith that worketh by charity, Gal. v. 6. When he says, that although faith were strong enough to remove mountains, a man is nothing without charity. 1 Cor. xiii. 2. When he teacheth us again, that not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers of the law shall be justified. S. John teacheth the same (1 Jo. iii. 14.) He that loveth not, remaineth in death. But of this elsewhere, Wi.—Grotius in this place makes a very candid and remarkable profession of his faith, very different from that of his associates in the pretended reformation, called Solid-deans: "There are some who say, 'My works indeed are not as they ought to be,' but my faith is firm, my salvation is therefore out of danger. This opinion, which has sprung up in this our unhappy age, and recommends itself under the name of reformed doctrine, ought to be opposed by every lover of piety, and all who wish well to their neighbour's salvation . . . no faith has ever availed any man, unless it were accompanied by such works as he had time and opportunity to perform." His words are: "Opera quidem mea non recta sunt, sed fides recta est, ac propterea de salute non periclitor . . . Renata est hoc infelici seculo ea sententia et quidem sub nomine repurgatæ doctrinæ, cui omnes qui pietatem et salutem proximi amant, se debent opponere . . . ceterum nulla cuiquam fides profuit, sine tali opere, quale tempus permittebat." &c. In vain do we glory in our faith, unless our lives and works bear testimony of the same. Faith without charity is dead, and charity cannot exist without good works. He who bears the fruits of Christian piety, shews that he has the root, which is faith; but the root is dead, when it affords no produce. Works are to faith what the soul is to the body. See the remainder of this chapter.

VER. 18. Some men will say: Thou hast faith, and I have works. Shew me thy faith, &c. He confutes the same error, by putting them in mind that one can shew that he has faith, which is an interior virtue, only by good works, and that good works in a man shew also his faith; which is not to be understood, as if good works were merely the marks, signs, and effects of faith, as some would pretend, but that good works must concur with faith to a man's salvation by an increase in grace. Wi.

VER. 19. The devils also believe, and tremble. S. James compares indeed faith without other virtues and good works, to the faith of devils: but comparisons must never be stretched farther than they are intended. The meaning is, that such a faith in sinners is unprofitable to salvation, like that of devils, which is no more than a conviction from their knowledge of God; but faith which remains in sinners, is from a supernatural knowledge, together with a pious motion in their free will. Wi.

VER. 21. Was not Abraham . . . justified by works? We may observe, that S. James here brings the very same examples of Abraham and Rahab, which it is likely he knew some had misconstrued in S. Paul, as if the great apostle of the Gentiles had taught that faith alone was sufficient to salvation. But S. Paul neither excludes good works done by faith, when he commends faith, excluding only the works of the law of Moses, as insufficient to a true justification. See Rom. xiii. 27. And S. James by requiring good works does not exclude faith, but only teacheth that faith alone is not enough. This is what he clearly expresseth here in the 22d and in the 24th verse. Man, says he, is justified, and not by faith only. And (v. 22.) seest thou that faith did co-operate with Abraham's works, and by works faith was made perfect. In fine, we must take notice, that when S. James here brings the example of Abraham offering his son Isaac, to shew that he was justified by works, his meaning is not that Abraham then began first to be justified, but that he then received an increase of his justice. He was justified at least from his first being called, and began then to believe and to do good works. It is true his faith was made perfect, and his justice increased, when he was willing to sacrifice his son. Wi.

ham believed God, and it was reputed to him to justice, and he was called the friend of God.

24 Do you see that by works a man is justified, and not by faith only?

25 ^a And in like manner also Rahab, the harlot, was not she justified by works, receiving the messengers, and sending them out another way?

26 For as the body without the spirit is dead, so also faith without works is dead.

CHAP. III.

The evils of the tongue. Of the difference between the earthly and heavenly wisdom.

BE ^b not many masters, my brethren, knowing that you receive the greater judgment.

2 For in many things we all offend. If any man offend not in word; the same is a perfect man. He is able also with a bridle to lead about the whole body.

3 For if we put bits into the mouths of horses that they may obey us, and we turn about their whole body.

4 Behold also ships, whereas they are great, and are driven by strong winds, yet are they turned about with a small helm, whithersoever the force of the governor willeth.

5 Even so the tongue is indeed a little member, and boasteth great things. Behold how small a fire kindleth a great wood.

6 And the tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity. The tongue is placed among our members, which defileth the whole body, and inflameth the wheel of our nature, being set on fire by hell.

7 For every kind of beasts and of birds, and of serpents, and of the rest, is tamed, and hath been tamed by mankind.

* V. 2. In conventum vestrum, εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν ὑμῶν. Synagogue is also taken for a meeting of kings, judges, &c. See Mat. x. 17.

† V. 4. Judices cogitationum iniquarum: it is the same in the Greek, κρίται διλογισμῶν πονηρῶν: the sense is, Judices inique cogitantes.

‡ V. 10–11. S. Aug. Ep. lxxvii. num. 16. p. 600. An fortè quia plenitudo legis charitas est, qua Deus, proximusque diligitur, in quibus præceptis charitatis tota lex pendet et propheta, meritò fit reus omnium, qui contra illam facit ex qua pendet omnia.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Be not many masters, teachers, and preachers. An admonition to all those who are not called, or not qualified to undertake this high ministry, lest they incur a greater condemnation. Wi.

VER. 2. *For in many things we all offend, fall into many, at least lesser failings.—If any man offend not in word, the same is a perfect man. He that in all occurrences can govern his tongue, has attained to a great degree of perfection.—He is able also with a bridle to lead about the whole body. He alludes to the comparison in the following verse; and the sense is, that when he has once perfectly subdued this unruly adversary, it may be presumed he can govern himself as to other passions, and the whole body of his actions. Wi.

VER. 3. If we put bits, &c. By the help of a bridle, a skilful rider can turn and guide horses never so headstrong and unruly. An experienced pilot sitting at the helm, steers the course of the vessel in a storm, turns and guides the ship what way he thinks most proper; so must a man learn, and use his utmost endeavours to bridle and govern his tongue. Wi.

VER. 5–6. The tongue is indeed a little member, yet doth great things:† causeth great evils and mischiefs, when it is not carefully governed; as a little fire,‡ it kindleth and consumeth a great wood. It is a world of iniquity, the cause of infinite evils, dissensions, quarrels, seditions, wars, &c. It defileth the whole body, even the body politic of kingdoms. This fire, kindled by hell, sets all in a flame during the course of our lives, (lit. the wheel of our nativity) from our cradle to our grave. Wi.

VER. 7. Is tamed, &c. The wildest beasts may be tamed, lions and tigers, and the rest,§ and so managed as to do no harm. Wi.

VER. 8. But the tongue no man can tame, without the special assistance of God. Wi.—Wherefore we are to understand, says S. Austin, that as no one is able of himself to govern his tongue, we must fly to the Lord for his assistance. S. Aug. ser. 4. de verb. Mat. vi.—It is an unquiet evil,|| which cannot be stopt. It is full of deadly poison, which brings oftentimes death both to men's bodies and souls. Wi.

VER. 9–13. By it we bless God, &c. Such different effects from the same cause, as of blessing God, and cursing men, created to the likeness of God, seem contrary to the ordinary course of nature; for a fountain from the same source doth not send forth both sweet and bitter streams.—Who is a wise man, and endued (1604)

8 But the tongue no man can tame: a restless evil, full of deadly poison.

9 By it we bless God and the Father; and by it we curse men, who are made after the likeness of God.

10 Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be.

11 Doth a fountain send forth through the same passage sweet and bitter water?

12 Can the fig-tree, my brethren, bear grapes, or the vine, figs? So neither can the salt water yield sweet.

13 Who is a wise man, and endued with knowledge among you? Let him shew, by a good conversation, his work in the meekness of wisdom.

14 But if you have bitter zeal, and there be contentions in your hearts: glory not, and be not liars against the truth.

15 For this is not wisdom, descending from above: but earthly, sensual, diabolical.

16 For where envying and contention is, there is inconstancy, and every evil work.

17 But the wisdom which is from above, first indeed is chaste, then peaceable, modest, easy to be persuaded, consenting to the good, full of mercy, and good fruits, without judging, without dissimulation.

18 And the fruit of justice is sown in peace, to them that make peace.

CHAP. IV.

The evils that flow from yielding to concupiscence, and being friends to this world. Admonitions against pride, detraction, &c.

FROM whence are wars and contentions among you? Are they not hence? from your concupiscences, which war in your members?

* Jos. ii. 4. Heb. xi. 81.—b Mat. xxiii. 8.

with knowledge among you? &c. This seems to be connected with the admonition given at the beginning of the chapter, be not many masters; let none pretend to this but who have wisdom and knowledge, which also may be known by their prudent and mild conversation.

VER. 14–18. But if you have bitter zeal. He hints at that bitter, false zeal, which many teachers among the Jews, even after their conversion, were apt to retain against the converted Gentiles, pretending with lies, and against the truth of the Scriptures, that they are not to be made partakers of the blessings brought to all nations by the Messiah.—Glory not, boast not in this pretended wisdom, which descendeth not from above, from God, but which is earthly, sensual, diabolical, from an evil spirit, which fomenteth these jealousies and divisions; and where there are such emulations and divisions, there is nothing but inconstancy, and all kind of evils. Wi.

VER. 17–18. But the true wisdom, which is from above, . . . is chaste, and pure, peaceable, modest, free from such divisions, tractable, easy to be persuaded¶ of the truths foretold in the Scriptures, &c. Now the fruit and effect of such justice, piety, and sanctity, is sown in peace, with peaceable dispositions, in those who with sincerity seek true peace, and who hereby shall gain the reward of an eternal peace and happiness. Wi.—S. Paul gives a similar character of charity. 1 Cor. c. xiii. "Charity is patient, is kind, . . . is not ambitious, seeketh not her own, is not provoked to anger, thinketh no evil, . . . believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things."—Easy to be persuaded. A good lesson for those devotees, who are not few in number, who are so obstinate and so wedded to their own opinions and ways, as to be unwilling to be controlled, even by those whom God has placed over them, for the direction of their souls. A.—Without judging. That is, it does not condemn a neighbour upon light grounds, or think evil of him. It puts the best construction upon every thing he says or does, and never intrudes itself into the concerns of others. C.—"Judge not, and you shall not be judged," says the Saviour of our souls; "condemn not, and you shall not be condemned." S. Luke, vi. 37. "No," says the holy apostle, (1 Cor. iv. 5.) "judge not before the time until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the counsels of the heart."

* V. 2. Offendimus, πταίμεν, we stumble, rather than fall.

† V. 5. Et magna exaltat, μεγαλυνεῖ; which is not only magnified loqui et gloriori, but also magna facere.

‡ Ibid. Quantus ignis, for quantulus by the Greek, ὀλίγος πῦρ.

§ V. 7. Et cæterorum, by which the ancient interpreter had read τῶν ἄλλων though in the present Greek copies we read, καὶ ἑαλίων, et Marinorum.

|| V. 8. Inquietum malum; so in divers Greek MSS. ἀκατάστατον, though in others, ἀκατάκτων, quod coerceri non potest.

¶ V. 17. Suavisibilis, εὐκαταῖς; which may either signify easy to be persuaded or who can easily persuade.

2 You covet, and have not: you kill, and envy, and cannot obtain; you contend and war, and you have not, because you ask not.

3 You ask, and receive not: because you ask amiss; that you may consume it on your concupiscences.

4 Adulterers, know you not that the friendship of this world is the enemy of God? Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of this world, becometh an enemy of God.

5 Or do you think that the Scripture saith in vain: To envy doth the spirit covet, which dwelleth in you?

6 But he giveth greater grace. Wherefore he saith: *God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble.

7 Be subject, therefore, to God, but resist the devil, and he will fly from you.

8 Approach to God, and he will approach to you. Cleanse your hands, ye sinners; and purify your hearts, ye double minded.

9 Be afflicted, and mourn, and weep: let your laughter be turned into mourning, and your joy into sorrow.

10 Be humble in the sight of the Lord, and he will exalt you.

11 Detract not one another, brethren. He that detracteth his brother, or he that judgeth his brother,

* Prov. iii. 34. 1 Pet. v. 6.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Whence are wars and contentions*, in all kinds, but from your lusts and disorderly passions, coveting to have and enjoy what you have not, as to pleasures, riches, honours, &c. Wi.

VER. 2. You covet, and have not. Though God has promised that whosoever asks shall receive, (Mat. vii. 8.) yet no wonder: you receive not, because you ask amiss, by asking such temporal things as would be prejudicial to your soul, or because you ask not with humility, devotion, and perseverance. Wi.

VER. 4. Adulterers: which is here taken in a figurative sense for those who love creatures more than God, the true spouse of their souls; who reflect not that the love and friendship of this world is an enemy to God, and the true manner of serving him. Wi.

VER. 5. Do you think that the scripture saith in vain: To envy doth the spirit covet, which dwelleth in you?† This verse is obscure, and differently expounded. By some, of an evil spirit in men, by which they covet and envy others for having what they have not. Others understand God's spirit inhabiting in them; and then it is an interrogation, and reprehension, as if he said: Doth God's spirit, which you have received, teach or excite you to covet and envy others, and not rather to love and wish their good? And to enable men to do this, God is not wanting, who gives us greater grace, especially to the humble that ask it, though he resists the proud. Wi.—It is not evident to what part of Scripture S. James here alludes, the exact words are nowhere in the sacred writings. That which seems the most like this text, and the most adapted to his subject, is a passage from Ezèchiel, "I will set my jealousy against thee;" (Ezech. xliii. 25.) i. e. I have loved thee with the love of jealousy, and I will revenge upon thee my slighted affections. C.

VER. 6. But he giveth greater grace. The Holy Spirit which dwelleth in you, giveth you graces in proportion to your fidelity in complying with them, and according to your humility and the love which you bear to your neighbour. C.—S. James may also mean by these two verses, to exhort the Jews and Gentiles, who were rather jealous of each other, to nourish no jealousy against one another, nor be troubled at the blessing which their neighbour enjoyed from the bountiful hand of the Almighty. Then will God deal to us with a more liberal hand, and will bestow upon us greater graces in proportion as we lay aside all ill-will towards our neighbour. But that he will withhold his hand from the envious man, because he resists the proud, and gives his grace to the humble. Glory is the exclusive property of heaven; whoever, therefore, assumes it to himself, makes God his enemy. There is nothing in man since his fall; there is nothing in holy writ which does not preach to us this truth.—N. B. These last words, "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble," are only in the Septuagint edition. Prov. iii. 34. The Heb. and Vulg. read in this place, "He shall scorn the scornors, and to the meek he will give grace." C.

VER. 7. Be subject therefore to God; humble yourselves in his sight, considering your own nothing. Wi.

VER. 8. Purify your hearts from the love of creatures, so that your affections be not divided betwixt God and this world, like persons of two minds† or two souls. Wi.

VER. 9. Be afflicted and mourn, and deplore your sins against his divine majesty; punish yourselves, and think not that a mere change of life is sufficient after so many sins committed. Wi.

VER. 11. Detract not one another, (nor judge rashly) brethren. Though he spoke so much against the evils of the tongue, he gives them a special admonition against the vice of detraction, so common in the world, as also against rash judgments, which happen so frequently where there are dissensions and divisions. He that detracteth, judgeth, and rashly condemneth his brother, may be said to detract and judge the law, inasmuch as he seems to condemn and condemn the law, by which these sins are forbidden; when, instead of obeying and complying with the law, he rather takes upon himself to act as a judge, without fear of the law and of God, the only lawgiver, who is to judge all our actions, and who alone is able to destroy, or to free us and deliver us from the punishments we have deserved. Wi.

12 There is one law-giver, and judge, who is able to destroy and to deliver.

13 But who art thou, who judgest thy neighbour? Behold now, you who say: To-day or to-morrow we will go into such a city, and there we will spend a year, and will traffic, and make gain:

14 Whereas, you know not what shall be on the morrow.

15 For what is your life? It is a vapour which appeareth for a little while, and afterwards shall vanish away. For that you should say: If the Lord will; and, if we shall live, we will do this or that.

16 But now you glory in your arrogancies. All such glorying is wicked.

17 To him, therefore, who knoweth to do good, and doth it not, to him it is sin.

CHAP. V.

A woe to the rich that oppress the poor. Exhortations to patience, and to avoid swearing. Of the anointing the sick, confession of sins, and fervour in prayer.

GO to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you.

† Rom. xiv. 4.

tion against the vice of detraction, so common in the world, as also against rash judgments, which happen so frequently where there are dissensions and divisions. He that detracteth, judgeth, and rashly condemneth his brother, may be said to detract and judge the law, inasmuch as he seems to condemn and condemn the law, by which these sins are forbidden; when, instead of obeying and complying with the law, he rather takes upon himself to act as a judge, without fear of the law and of God, the only lawgiver, who is to judge all our actions, and who alone is able to destroy, or to free us and deliver us from the punishments we have deserved. Wi.

VER. 13. To-day or to-morrow, &c. An admonition against that presumption, when persons forget the uncertainty of life, and the vanity of all things in this world, which vanish like a vapour, and can never be relied upon, so as to count upon years and the time to come. All things here appear and disappear in a moment. Take heed, therefore, not to glory or boast in your arrogancies; (v. 16.) lit. pride: like the rich man, (Lu. x.) who thought of nothing but a long and merry life, and was cut off that very night. And being now admonished, reflect that it is sinful to know what is good, what is your duty, and not to comply with it. Wi.

VER. 15. For what is your life? it is a vapour. We frequently meet with these beautiful comparisons in holy writ. "Remember that my life is but wind. . . . As a cloud is consumed, and passeth away; so he that shall go down to hell, shall not come up." Job vii. 7, 9. "Man is like to vanity, his days pass away like a shadow." Ps. cxliii. 4. Similar expressions also frequently occur in profane authors.

Nemo tam Divos habuit faventes

Crastinum ut possit sibi polliceri. Seneca.

With reason then did our Saviour say, "Be you then also ready, for at what hour you think not, the Son of Man will come." Lu. xii. 40. C.

* V. 1. Unde bella et lites? πόλεμοι καὶ μάχαι, as also v. 2, litigatis et beligeratis, μάχεσθε, καὶ πολεμεῖτε. I see no reason to translate it, by lawsuits and pleadings, as Mr. N.

† V. 5. Ad invidiam concupiscit Spiritus, qui habitat in vobis: πρὸς φθόνου ἐκινῶσιν τὸ πνεῦμα ὁ κατῴκησεν (habitarit) ἐν ὑμῖν. Ven. Bede expounds it, nunc quid Spiritus Gratias . . . hoc concupiscit ut invidetis alterutrum?

‡ V. 8. Duplices animo, διψυχος.

§ V. 9. Miseri estote, ταλαίπωροι ἐστέ.

|| V. 11. Parens . . . exterminabitur. φανομένη, ἀφανισθήσεται.

CHAP. V. VER. 1-6. Go now rich men, &c. In the first six verses, he gives admonitions to those among the Christians who were rich, not to rely on riches, nor value themselves on this account. You must look upon your riches and treasures as if they were already putrefied and corrupted, your gold and silver eaten and consumed with rust: and their rust shall rise in testimony and judgment against you, for not making better use of them. As your coin is eaten with rust, so shall your bodies be hereafter as it were eaten and consumed by fire. You heap up to yourselves a treasure in the day of wrath, while through covetousness, and hard heartedness, you defraud labourers of their hire, living at the same time in feasting and luxury, as in the day of slaughter. That is, feasting as men are accustomed to do, on the days when victims are slaughtered, offered, and eaten with great rejoicing. Others expound it, as if you were feeding, and making yourselves fit sacrifices and victims for God's anger and indignation.

2 Your riches are corrupted and your garments are moth-eaten.

3 Your gold and silver is rusted: and the rust of them shall be for a testimony against you, and shall eat your flesh as fire. You have stored up to yourselves wrath against the last days.

4 Behold the hire of the labourers, who have reaped your fields, of which you have defrauded them, crieth out: and the cry of them hath entered into the ears of the Lord of sabaoth.

5 You have feasted upon earth, and in luxuries you have nourished your hearts in the day of slaughter.

6 You have condemned and put to death the just one, and he resisted you not.

7 Be patient, therefore, brethren, until the coming of the Lord. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, patiently bearing till he receive the early and the latter rain.

8 Be you, therefore, also patient, and strengthen your hearts: for the coming of the Lord draweth near.

9 Murmur not, brethren, one against another, that

Wi.—You have feasted, &c. The Greek is, "you have lived in delicacies and in laucheries, and have feasted upon your hearts as for the day of sacrifice." Ἐπεφύγατε, καὶ ἐσπαλάγατε ἰσχυρὰ τὰς καρπίας ὑμῶν ὡς ἐν ἡμέρᾳ θυσίας. That is, you have fattened yourselves with good cheer and sensual pleasures, like victims prepared for a solemn sacrifice. C.—Others among you have unjustly oppressed, accused, and brought to condemnation the just one, by which seems to be understood just and innocent men, who are divers times deprived of their fortunes, and even of their lives, by the unjust contrivances of powerful wicked men. Wi.

VER. 7-11. Be patient, &c. He now in these five following verses turns his discourse from the rich to the poor, exhorting them to patience till the coming of the Lord to judgment, which draweth near; his coming to judge every one is at his death. Imitate the patience of the husbandman, waiting for fruit after that the earth hath received the timely and *early rain soon after the corn is sown, and again more rain, that comes later to fill the grain before it comes to be ripe. This seems to be the sense by the Greek: others expound it, till he receive the early and latter fruits. Wi.—Behold the judge standeth before the door. This expression is synonymous with that in the foregoing verse. "The coming of the Lord is at hand." This way of speaking is not uncommon in Scripture. Thus God said to Cain: "If thou hast done evil, shall not sin forthwith be present at the door?" S. James is here speaking of the approaching ruin of Jerusalem, the destruction of the temple, and the dispersion of the Jews by the Romans. C.—Call to mind for your encouragement the trials and constancy of the prophets: the patience of Job, after which God rewarded him with great blessings and property, and you have seen the end of the Lord; that is, what end the Lord was pleased to give to Job's sufferings. But S. Aug. Ven. Bede, &c. would have these words, the end of the Lord, to be understood of the death of our Lord Jesus Christ on the cross, for which God exalted him, &c. Wi.

VER. 12. But above all things... swear not, &c. This earnest admonition is against all kind of oaths in common conversation, (not against oaths made on just and necessary occasions) and in the very same words, as our blessed Saviour warned all people against this sin of swearing. Mat. c. v. How unaccountably is this commandment of God contemned! And what a dreadful account will some day be exacted for so many oaths, curses, and blasphemies, which are now so common, that we may rather wonder at the patience of God, and that already exemplary punishments have not fallen upon whole cities and kingdoms for this continued profanation of the holy name of God! Wi.—S. James here repeats the injunctions of our Saviour, not to swear at all. Mat. v. 34. See the annotations in that place.

VER. 14-16. Is any man sick among you? &c. or in danger of death by sickness, let him call, or bring in the priests of the Church, &c. The apostle here enjoins the constant use of the sacrament, called extreme unction, or the last anointing with oil, instituted, (as were all the sacraments of the Church) by our Saviour Christ, and which is here fully and clearly delivered in plain words, expressing, 1. the persons to whom this sacrament is to be administered; 2. the minister; 3. the form; 4. the matter; 5. the effects. As to the first, is any man sick among you? This sacrament then is to be given to every believing Christian, who is in danger of death by sickness. 2. Bring in the priests, one or more, they are the ministers of this sacrament. The Protestant translation has the elders; yet in their book of common prayer, he who is called in to assist and pray with the sick, is called either the minister, the curate, or the priest, never the elder. Dr. Wells has not changed the word elders in his translation; but in his paraphrase he expounds it of those ministers of the church who are above deacons. 3. And let them pray over him. Besides other prayers, the form of this sacrament is by way of prayer, let the Lord forgive thee, &c. 4. Anointing him with oil. The oil with which he is anointed by the priest, is the outward visible sign, and the matter of this sacrament, as water is the matter of baptism. 5. And the prayer of faith shall save the sick man, &c. All the sacraments of the new law have their virtue from the merits of our Saviour, Christ, you may not be judged. Behold the judge standeth before the door.

10 Take, brethren, for an example of suffering evil, of labour and patience, the prophets, who spoke in the name of the Lord.

11 Behold we account them blessed, who have endured. You have heard of the patience of Job, and you have seen the end of the Lord, that the Lord is merciful and compassionate.

12 But above all things, my brethren, *swear not, neither by heaven, nor by the earth, nor by any other oath. But let your speech be; yea, yea: no, no; that you fall not under judgment.

13 Is any of you sad? Let him pray. Is he cheerful in mind? Let him sing.

14 Is any man sick among you? Let him bring in the priests of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil, in the name of the Lord:

15 And the prayer of faith shall save the sick man: and the Lord shall raise him up: and if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him.

* Matt. v. 34.

and therefore must be ministered and received with faith in our Redeemer. Wi.—Is any man sick? &c. The Greek expression in this place is equivalent to, "Is any one dangerously ill amongst you?" Ἄσθενει τις ἐν ὑμῖν. The primary intention of this sacrament of extreme unction, is to confer a special grace upon the dying Christian, to strengthen him in his last and dreadful conflict, when the prince of darkness will exert his utmost to ruin his poor soul. But besides this, it was also intended to free man from venial sin, and likewise from mortal, if guilty of any, provided he were contrite and not able to have recourse to the sacrament of penance. But the sacrament of penance being the only regular means of obtaining pardon for mortal sin committed after baptism, a person must first have recourse to this sacrament, if he be able, as a necessary preparation for the sacrament of extreme unction. Other effects of this sacrament are, that it lessens the temporal punishment due to sin, and restores health to the worthy receiver, if it be expedient for the good of his soul. S. Aug. serm. 215. C. Theol. Petav. Habert. Bailly, &c. de Extrem. Unct.—How great then is the folly of such persons as are afraid to receive this sacrament, imagining it to be the irrevocable sentence of impending dissolution! whereas one of the very effects of this sacrament is to restore health, if it be expedient for the soul; and who would wish for health upon any other conditions? A.—The anathemas pronounced by the council of Trent against those who deny the existence of this sacrament, are sufficient to establish the belief of it in the minds of Catholics. See scss. 14. can. 1. 2. and 3. of the council of Trent. It may be proper, however, to observe, in confirmation of our belief of this sacrament, that whenever the ancient Fathers have had occasion to speak of extreme unction, they have always attributed to it all the qualities of a sacrament, as S. Chrys. who proves from this text of S. James the power which the priest has to forgive sins; (lib. 3. de Sacerdotio. S. Aug. ser. 215.) not to mention Origen, who wrote at the beginning of the third century, (hom. ii. in Levit.) enumerating the different ways by which sins are forgiven in the new law, says, "That they are remitted when the priests anoint the sick with oil, as is mentioned in S. James." When Decentius, bishop of Eugenium in Italy, in 416, wrote to Innocent I. upon this sacrament, he makes no question whether it was a sacrament, but only consults him concerning the manner of administering; whether a bishop could give it, or whether priests were the only administrators of this sacrament, as S. James says, "Let them call in the priests of the Church;" and whether it could be given to penitents before they had been reconciled by absolution. To the former question, the pope replied there could be no doubt, as S. James could never mean that bishops were excluded as being higher than priests; but that he supposed them to be taken up with other things. We might add to this, that the word presbyter was then used indiscriminately for both bishops and priests. A.—As to the next question, whether penitents could receive this sacrament before absolution, he answered in the negative. "For," says he, "can it be thought that this one sacrament can be given to those who are declared unworthy of receiving the rest?" Innocent I. in epist. ad Decent. c. viii. Habert. de Extre. Unct.—If it be objected that mention is not more frequently made of this sacrament in the writings of the ancients, we will answer with Bellarmine, that the most evident things were not always written, but only as occasion offered, that many of the mysteries were kept secret, to preserve them from the ridicule of the infidels. That in the times of persecution it was more difficult to administer this sacrament and less necessary, as the greatest part of Christians died not by sickness but by martyrdom. Theol. Petav. de Extre. Unct.—Ven. Bede in Lu. ix. speaketh thus: "It is clear that this custom was delivered to the holy Church by the apostles themselves, that the sick should be anointed with oil consecrated by the bishop's blessing."—Let him bring in, &c. See here a plain warrant of Scripture for the sacrament of extreme unction, that any controversy against its institution would be against the express words of the sacred text in the plainest terms. Ch.—And the Lord, by virtue of this sacrament, or if you will, sacramental prayer, shall raise him up, shall give him spiritual strength and vigour to resist the temptations which at that hour are most dangerous. He shall also 16 Confess, therefore, your sins one to another; and pray for one another, that you may be saved: for the continual prayer of a just man availeth much.

17 *Elias was a man passible like unto us: and with prayer he prayed that it might not rain upon the earth, and it rained not for three years and six months.

* 8 Kings xvii. 1. Luke iv. 25.

raise him up, by restoring him his corporal health, when God sees it more expedient for the sick man.—And if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him, not merely by prayer, but by this sacrament. Wi.

VER. 16. Confess, therefore, your sins, &c. Divers interpreters expound this of sacramental confession, though, as the authors of the annotations on the Rheims Testament observe, this is not certain. The words one to another, may signify that it is not enough to confess to God, but that we must also confess to men, and not to every man, but to those whom God appointed, and to whom he hath given the power of remitting sins in his name. I cannot but observe that no mention at all is made, "in the visitation and communion of the sick," in the Prot. common prayer book, of this comfortable passage out of S. James, of calling in the priest of the Church, of their anointing him with oil. . . and that his sins shall be forgiven him. Perhaps having laid aside that sacrament, it seemed to them better to say nothing of those words. But such a confession as is practised by all Catholics, is at least there advised. "The sick person," saith the book of common prayer, "here shall be moved to make a special confession of his sin."

After which confession, the priest shall absolve him, after this sort. Our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath left power to his Church to absolve all sinners, who truly repent, forgive thee . . . and by his authority committed to me, I absolve thee from all thy sins, in the name of the Father, &c. Here is a special confession, or a confession of particular sins; here is a power of forgiving sins in God's name, acknowledged to be given to the Church, and to priests; here are the very same words used by every Catholic priest in the sacrament of penance. This is clearly ordained in their liturgy: how far it is complied with, I know not. Wi.—One to another. That is, to the priests of the Church, whom (v. 14) he had ordered to be called for, and brought in to the sick: moreover, to confess to persons who had no power to forgive sins, would be useless. Hence the precept here means that we must confess to men whom God hath appointed, and who, by their ordination and jurisdiction, have received the power of remitting sins in his name. Ch.—Pray for one another. Here is recommended prayer in general, as a most necessary Christian duty. He encourages them to it by the example of Elias. Wi.

VER. 20. He who causeth a sinner to be converted, &c. S. James concludes his epistle with a work of charity, one of the most acceptable to Almighty God, and most beneficial to our neighbour, when any one becomes instrumental in converting others from their errors, or from a wicked life; for it is only God that can convert the heart. But he who with a true and charitable zeal, animated with the love of God and of his neighbour, makes this the chief business of his life, has this comfort here given him, that this will cover in the sight of God a multitude of sins, which he may have contracted through human frailty. The Church of England, when they modelled the articles of their reformation, received this epistle of James as canonical. They profess to follow the holy Scriptures as the only rule of their belief: they find in the 14th and 16th verses of this chapter these words: "Is any man sick among you? Let him bring in the priests of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil. . . and if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him." In these words they find all that they themselves require, to be a sacrament of the new law; to wit, a precept or injunction, clear and unlimited as to time, a visible sign, with a promise of invisible grace, in remitting of sins, the minister of it, and the persons specified who are to receive it. They also found this practised at the time of the reformation by the Universal Church, by all Catholics, both in the east and west, both by the Latin and by the Greek Churches; and that all Christian Churches received it as a sacrament; and yet they thought fit to lay it quite aside, as if it was neither a sacrament nor a holy ceremony, nor a pious custom fit to be retained. They must have judged that they had convincing proofs both to contradict in other things the judgment and belief of the Catholic Church, and also in this particular; as to which latter case, I shall examine the reasons which they bring. I presume it may be needless to insist upon the groundless imagination of Wycliff, and some heretics about that time, who denied this to be a sacrament, fancying it was prescribed by S. James, because the oil of Palestine was a sovereign remedy to cure diseases. If so, any physician, any old woman or nurse to the sick, might have applied oil full as well, if not better than the priests. Calvin, and the reformation writers, give us the following reasons or conjectures, that this anointing, as well as that, (Mark vi. 13.) was only to be used for a time, by those who had the gift of curing diseases miraculously; so that like other miraculous gifts, (as the speaking of tongues, prophesying, &c.) it was but to last during the first planting of the Christian faith. Dr. Fulk, against the Rheims Testament, and Mr. Baxter, &c. affirm boldly, that Christ "appointed his apostles to anoint those with oil whom they cured." And Dr. Hammond says, "that the anointing with oil, was a ceremony used by Christ and his apostles in their miraculous cures." They assert this, as if it was taught by the Scripture itself. They are no less positive that this anointing soon ceased, and was laid aside with the gift of miraculous cures, given sometimes to the first Christians at their baptism, or when they received the Holy Ghost in the sacrament of confirmation. Dr. Fulk, besides this, is positive that "the Greek Church, never to this day received this anointing and praying over the sick as a sacrament." These are their arbitrary, groundless, and false expositions, which they bring against a clear text of the holy Scriptures. It might be sufficient to oppose the judgment and authority of the Church to their private judgment. But to answer in short each particular: we find by the evangelists, (Mat. x. 8. Mark vi. 13. Luke x. 9.) that Christ gave to his twelve apostles, and afterwards to his seventy-two disci-

18 And he prayed again: and the heaven gave rain, and the earth yielded her fruit.

19 My brethren, if any of you shall err from the truth, and any one convert him.

20 He must know, that he who causeth a sinner to be converted from the error of his way, shall save his soul from death, and shall cover a multitude of sins.

ples, in their first mission before his death, (which was only into the cities of Israel) a power of casting out devils, of raising the dead, of curing diseases in his name. And S. Mark tells us, that they cast out many devils, and anointed many sick with oil, and cured them. But when Dr. Fulk and others add, that our Saviour appointed, ordered, or commanded them to anoint with oil those whom they cured, no such thing is said, nor insinuated, neither by S. Mark nor by any of the evangelists, nor any where in the holy Scriptures. And how Dr. Hammond could tell us that this "anointing with oil was a ceremony used by Christ himself," I cannot imagine. As for the apostles and disciples, they might cure many, making use of oil, and many without it by laying hands upon them, by a prayer, or by calling upon the name of Jesus, as the seventy-two disciples returned to him with joy, (Luke x. 17.) saying, Lord, even the devils are subject to us in thy name. Neither is it judged probable by the interpreters that the apostles, in their miraculous cures, were tied up or confined to the use of oil: especially since we find that after Christ's resurrection, in their second mission to all nations, Christ foretells (Mat. xvi. 18.) that they who believe in him, shall have this miraculous gift of healing the sick, but mentions only the laying of hands upon them: they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall be well. Besides had Christ appointed or given orders to his disciples to make use of oil in such miraculous cures, it would scarce have happened but we should have some examples of it in the Acts of the Apostles, where so many miraculous cures are related to have been done by S. Peter, by S. Paul, and others, but no mention of this ceremony of oil. We agree with our adversaries that this gift of miraculous cures, of which S. Paul speaks, (1 Cor. xii.) was common only for a short time, like the other gifts of the Holy Ghost, which were only necessary, as S. Aug. takes notice, at the first planting of the Christian faith; and so that anointing with oil, merely as it was made use of in miraculous cures of the body, soon ceased, perhaps even before our Saviour's death; but we believe as our Saviour appointed water to be the matter of the sacrament of baptism, so he would have oil to be the matter of the sacrament of extreme unction, which he instituted to strengthen the souls of the sick, against the dangers and temptations at the approach of death, and of which S. James here speaks near upon thirty years after Christ's ascension. And the anointing in S. Mark, used in corporal diseases, may be looked upon as a figure of the sacrament of extreme unction in S. James, as the frequent washings or baptisms, as they are called, of the Jews, and especially the baptism of S. John, was a figure of the baptism of Christ. The miraculous gift of healing, as well as other gifts of the Holy Ghost, was often given with the sacraments, which were to be always continued, and not to cease, with those gifts. We may also take notice, that neither they who had this gift of healing, had any command or advice to make use of it to all that were sick, nor were all that were sick ordered to seek for a cure of those who had this gift; whereas here S. James orders every one to send for the priests of the Church to anoint him, and pray over him for spiritual relief. S. Timothy had frequent infirmities, as we read 1 Tim. v. 23. nor yet did S. Paul, who had that gift, cure him. The same S. Paul left Trophimus sick at Miletan. 2 Tim. iv. 20. Epaphroditus, S. Paul's companion in his labours, was sick, when he had S. Paul with him, even unto death; that is, so as to be at the point of death (Philip. ii. 27.); nor yet did S. Paul, but God, restore him to his health. And if S. James had spoken of a miraculous restoring of corporal health by that anointing, he should rather have said: bring in those who have the gift of healing; for we may reasonably suppose that many had this gift who were not priests, and we have no reason to suppose that all priests had this gift. Our adversaries tell us with great assurance, that this anointing mentioned by S. James was soon laid aside; which, say they, we may gather from the silence of the writers in the three following ages. To this merely negative argument the Catholics answer: 1. That it is enough we have the tradition and practice of the Church, witnessed by the writers in the ages immediately succeeding. 2. That the greatest part of the writings in those ages are not extant. 3. The writers of those times seldom mentioned those things which were sufficiently known among the Christians by daily use, especially what related to the sacraments and mysteries of the Christian religion, which (as it appears by the writings that they were able to preserve) they made it their particular endeavour to conceal from the heathens, who turned them to derision and contempt. In the mean time, had not this anointing been always retained and continued, the ages immediately following would not have conspired every where to practise it, and to look upon it as a sacrament. Not to insist on the authority of Origen, § in the beginning of the third age, (hom. ii. in Levit.) who numbering up the different ways by which sins are forgiven in the new law, says, that they were remitted when priests anoint the sick with oil, as in the epistle of S. James; S. Chrys. § in the end of the fourth age, (in his third book de Sacerdotio, tom. 1. p. 384. Nov. Ed. Ben. written before the end of the fourth age, about the year 375) says, that priests (and his word expresseth sacrificing priests, not elders) have now a power to remit sins, which he proves from those words in S. James, Is any man sick among you? &c. This shews, as do also Origen's words, that this custom was then continued in the East, in the Greek Church, and that it was believed a sacrament, of which the priests only were the ministers. Innocent I. § in his answers to Decentius, bishop of Eugenium, in Italy, at the beginning of the fifth age, an. 416, calls this anointing and prayer over the sick, set down in S. James' epistle, a sacrament in the same sense as other sacraments in the new law. See Labbe's Councils, tom. ii. p. 1218. And as to what Innocent I. and Ven. Bede relate of a custom by which lay persons, when a priest could not be had, anointed and prayed over a person in danger, it was only to testify their desire of having the sacrament: as it was likewise a pious custom in some places for sinners to make a confession to a layman, not that they then looked upon it as a sacrament, but only that they hoped God would accept of their private devotions and humiliation, when they could not have a priest to administer the sacraments to them. It is needless to mention authors in the following ages. S. Greg. (Sacramentarium, lib. 5. in Cæna Domini) describes the ceremony of blessing oil to be used in the anointing of the sick. Theodore, made archbishop of Canterbury, an. 668, among other decrees, ordains that sick persons receive the holy unction, set down by S. James. The Capitularia of Charles the Great, say that no one, when about to depart out of this world, ought to want the anointing of the sacrament of oil. The same is ordained in a council of Chalons, an. 813, can. 48; by a council at Aix la Chapelle, an. 830, can. 6; by the council of Mayence, an. 847, can. 26, &c. Now since we find this anointing made use of as a sacrament at least from the fourth age, let our adversaries tell us when this anointing prescribed by S. James was left off, and when and how it came to be taken up again. They have no manner of proofs for either; and yet we have a right, as the authors of the annotations on the Rhem. Testam. observe, to demand clear and convincing proofs in this case, when the Scripture seems so clear for us and against them. Dr. Fulk affirms boldly, that this anointing was never to this day received in the Greek Church as a sacrament. This only shews how little credit is to be given to him. He might have found great reason to doubt of his bold assertion, since neither Photius, in the ninth age, nor Michael Cerularius, in the eleventh, ever objected this difference betwixt their Greek and the Latin Church, at a time when they reckoned up even the most minute differences either in doctrine or discipline, so as to find fault with the Latins for shaving their beards. He might have found it by what happened at the time of the council of Lyons, in the thirteenth age, when the pope, in his letter to the emperor of Constantinople, wrote that the Latin Church, and all in communion with him, acknowledged seven sacraments, which the Greeks never blamed. He might have observed the same when the Greeks and Armenians came to an union in the council of Florence, in the fifteenth age. The same Dr. Fulk, who wrote about the year 1600, could scarce be ignorant of the ill success the Augsbourg confession met with among the Greeks, to whom, when the Lutherans had sent copies of their faith and of their reformation, Jeremy, the patriarch of Constantinople, with a synod of the Greeks, condemned their articles, and among other points, declared that they held "in the orthodox Catholic Church seven divine sacraments," the same as in the Latin Church, baptism . . . and the holy oil. Had Dr. Fulk lived a little longer, he must have been more and more ashamed to find other Greek synods condemning him and all the said reformers. For when Cyrillus Lucaris, advanced to the see of Constantinople by the interest of the French Calvinists, began to favour and support the doctrine of the Calvinists, the Greeks in several synods under their patriarchs, (an. 1639, 1642, 1671, and 1672) condemned Cyril and the new doctrine of the said reformers, and expressly declared that they held seven sacraments. See M. Arnauld, tom. iii. Perpetuité de la Foy; and the dissertations of M. Le Brun, tom. iii. p. 34, and 672, dissert. 12, where he shews that all the churches of the East, and all the Christian churches of the world, though separated from the communion and subordination to the Pope, agree with the Latin Church, as to the sacrifice of the Mass, as to the real presence of Christ in the Eucharist, and as to the seven sacraments. Wi.—If, with holy Scripture, we must allow that charitable persons on earth may prove instrumental, under God, to their neighbour's salvation, why are we to deny this to the saints in heaven, whose charity for man is much greater?

* V. 7. Temporaneum et Serotinum. In most Greek MSS. ἑρὸν πρῶτον καὶ ὀψιμὸν, pluviam priorem et posteriorem.

† V. 10. Exemplum accipite, exitus mali, et laboris, et patientiæ, κακοῦ θείας καὶ μακροθυρίας. There is nothing in the Greek for laboris, which the Latin interpreter may have added to express the full sense.

‡ V. 14–15. Infirmatur, ἀδυνατεῖ τις; infirmum, ἀδυνατον, laborantem; alleviabit, ὑπερτί, suscitabit.

§ V. 20. Origen, in hom. ii, in Levit. (p. 68. Ed. Par. an. 1574) where he numbers the different ways by which sins are remitted in the new law, and speaking of penance, says, In quo impletur et illud quod Apostolus dicit, Si quis artum infirmatur, vocet presbyteros ecclesiæ.

¶ Ibid. S. Chrys. ἐπίτις . . . ἔχουσιν ἱερωσύνην, habent potestatem.

¶ Ibid. Innoc. I. Pœnitentibus istud infundi non potest, quia genus est Sacramenti, nam quibus reliqua Sacramenta negantur, quomodo unum genus potatur concedi? By chrisma, Innocent I. understands, oleum ad ungendum.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF S. PETER, THE APOSTLE.

THIS first Epistle of S. Peter, though brief, contains much doctrine concerning faith, hope, and charity, with divers instructions to all persons of every state and condition. The apostle commands submission to rulers and superiors, and exhorts all to the practice of a virtuous life, in imitation of Christ. This epistle is written with such apostolical dignity, as to manifest the supreme authority with which its writer, the prince of the apostles, had been invested by his Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. He wrote it at Rome, which figuratively he calls Babylon, about fifteen years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—S. Peter, otherwise called Simon, son of John or Jonas, was from Bethsaida, a city of Galilee. He was married, and lived at Capharnaum, and was employed with his brother Andrew, as fishermen, when our Lord called them. S. Peter on every occasion testified a more than usual zeal for his Master, and hence our Lord shewed him a very particular and very marked attention. He would have Peter present at his transfiguration; (Luke ix. 28.) and at another time declared that he was a rock, upon which he would build his Church, against which the gates of hell should never prevail. Mat. xvi. 18. Although S. Peter had the misfortune or weakness to deny Jesus Christ in his passion, our Lord, after his resurrection, gave him fresh proofs of his regard. Mat. xvi. 7. He continued him in his primacy over all, and appointed him in the most explicit manner visible head of his Church, when thrice asking Peter: "lovest thou me more than these?" and S. Peter as often answering, Christ said to him: "feed my lambs, feed my sheep." John xxi. 15.—This epistle was always received in the Church as canonical, and as written by S. Peter, prince of the apostles. It is commonly agreed that it was written from Rome, which S. Peter calls Babylon, (C. v. 13.) and directed to those in the provinces of Pontus, Galatia, &c. (v. 1) who were before Jews or Gentiles, and had been converted to the Christian faith. It is certain this letter was not written till after the true believers had the name of Christians. C. iv. 16. Many think it was written before the year 49; but this is not certain. Others judge not till after the year 60, and some not till a short time before he wrote his second epistle. See Tillem. t. i. Art. 31. on S. Pet. and tom. ii. on S. Mark, p. 89. The main design is to confirm the new converts in the faith of Christ, with divers instructions to a virtuous life. Wi.—Grotius, Erasmus, and Estius, discover in this epistle, a strength and majesty worthy the prince of the apostles. Est autem epistola profecto digna Apostolorum Principe, plena autoritatis et majestatis Apostolicæ: verbis parca, sententiis referta.

CHAP. I.

He gives thanks to God for the benefit of our being called to the true faith, and to eternal life; into which we are to enter by many tribulations. He exhorts to holiness of life, considering the holiness of God, and our redemption by the blood of Christ.

PETER, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers dispersed through Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, elect,

2 According to the foreknowledge of God, the Father, unto the sanctification of the Spirit, unto the obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ: Grace unto you, and peace be multiplied.

3 * Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his great mercy hath regenerated us unto a lively hope, through the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead,

* 2 Cor. i. 3. Ephes. i. 3.

It appears here to be understood, since Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, and Bithynia are also contained in the provinces of Asia Minor. V.

VER. 2. Unto the obedience and sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ; i. e. to be saved by the merits of his death and passion. Wi.—All the three divine Persons conspire in the salvation of the elect. The Father as principle of their election, by his eternal prescience; the Son as victim for their sins, and the CHAP. I. VER. 1. Peter, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to the strangers dispersed. Lit. of the dispersion; i. e. to the Jews or Gentiles now converted, who lived dispersed in those countries, chosen or elected according to the foreknowledge and eternal decrees of God unto the sanctification of the spirit.* Wi.—Asia is taken for one of the four quarters of the globe, or for Asia Minor, or for that province of Asia Minor of which Ephesus is the capital. It is in this latter sense (1608)

3 If yet you have tasted that the Lord is sweet.

4 To whom approaching the living stone, rejected indeed by men, but chosen and honoured of God:

5 Be you also as living stones built up, a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ.

6 Wherefore it is contained in the Scripture: *Behold I lay in Sion a chief corner-stone, elect, precious: And he that shall believe in him, shall not be confounded.

7 To you, therefore, that believe honour: but to them that believe not, ^bthe stone which the builders rejected, the same is made the head of the corner:

8 And a stone of stumbling, and a rock of scandal to them, who stumble at the word, neither do believe whereunto also they are set.

9 But you are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a purchased people, that you may declare his virtues, who hath called you out of darkness into his admirable light.

10 *Who in time past were not a people: but are now the people of God: who had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy.

11 ^dDearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, to refrain yourselves from carnal desires, which war against the soul,

12 Having your conversation good among the Gentiles: that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, considering you by your good works, they may glorify God in the day of visitation.

* Isai. xxviii. 16. Rom. ix. 23.—^b Ps. cxvii. 22. Isai. viii. 14. Mat. xxi. 42. Acts iv. 11.—^c Osee ii. 24. Rom. ix. 25.

body and blood, his soul and his divinity, that we may thereby grow up to salvation.

VER. 4. The living stone, rejected, &c. Christ is the chief foundation of his Church, the corner-stone of the building, whom the Jews, and other obstinate unbelievers, reject to their own condemnation and destruction. See Isai xxviii. 16. Mat. xxi. 42. Acts iv. 11. Rom. ix. 32. Wi.

VER. 5. You also . . . a holy priesthood; and, as he saith again, (v. 9.) a royal priesthood. 1. Because they had ministers of God, who were truly and properly priests, of whom Christ is the chief. 2. Every good Christian in a less proper sense may be called a priest, inasmuch as he offers to God what in a less proper and metaphorical sense may be called sacrifices and oblations; that is, the sacrifice of an humble and contrite heart, (Ps. 1.) the sacrifice of self-denials and mortifications, of prayer, almsdeeds, &c. And it is called a royal priesthood, as Christians may be called metaphorically kings, by governing their passions, or because they are invited to reign with Christ in his kingdom, to sit on his throne, &c. See Apoc. iii. 21. &c. Wi.

VER. 8. Whereunto also they are set, or placed, i. e. by God's permission; not that God is the cause of their sins or damnation, (whose will is that every one be saved) but his justice has appointed and decreed punishments against those who, by their own wilful malice, refuse to believe and to follow his doctrine: their stumbling against this stone is wilful and obstinate. Wi.

VER. 9. You are . . . a purchased people, whom Christ purchased, bought and redeemed with the price of his precious blood.—That you may declare his virtues; i. e. the excellencies and perfections of God, who hath called you, and now made you his people, which you were not, at least in this matter before, neither you that were Jews, nor especially you that were Gentiles. Wi.

VER. 11. I beseech you . . . to refrain, &c. from all unlawful and disorderly passions, that the Gentiles not yet converted may have nothing to blame in your lives and conversation, but may be edified and induced to praise God. Wi.

VER. 12. In the day of visitation. God is said to visit his people, sometimes by afflictions and punishments, and sometimes by graces and favours. Some think S. Peter here, by the day of visitation, means the approaching destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and that the sense is, that the heathen Romans seeing your peaceable dispositions and pious conversations, may have a favourable opinion of the Christian religion, and be converted. Others, that you and they to whom the gospel is preached, may glorify God when he visits them with graces and favours, whether exterior or interior. Wi.—Be careful not to give occasion to scandal. Detraction is the life of the world, and piety is most exposed to its shafts, because it most condemns the maxims of its followers.

VER. 13. To every human creature, || to every one whom the order of Providence has placed over you, whether it be to emperors or kings, who have the supreme power in kingdoms, or to governors of provinces; obey your temporal princes, though heathens and idolaters, (as the Roman emperors were at that time enemies to the Christian religion) in all that is not sinful and against the 13 *Be ye subject, therefore, to every human creature for God's sake: whether it be to the king as ex-celling:

14 Or to governors, as sent by him for the punishment of evil doers, and for the praise of the good:

15 For so is the will of God, that by doing well you may silence the ignorance of foolish men:

16 As free, and not as making liberty a cloak for malice, but as the servants of God.

17 Honour all men: ^flove the brotherhood: fear God: honour the king:

18 *Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear, not only to the good, and gentle, but also to the froward.

19 For this is praiseworthy, if for conscience towards God, a man endure sorrows, suffering wrongfully.

20 For what glory is it, if sinning and being buffeted you suffer it: But if doing well you suffer patiently; this is praiseworthy before God.

21 For to this you have been called: because Christ also suffered for us, leaving you an example that you should follow his steps.

22 ^hWho did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth:

23 Who when he was reviled, did not revile: when he suffered, he threatened not: but delivered himself to him that judged him unjustly:

24 ⁱWho his ownself bore our sins in his body upon the tree: that we being dead to sins, should live to justice: by whose stripes you were healed.

^d Rom. xiii. 14. Gal. v. 16.—^e Rom. xiii. 1.—^f Rom. xii. 10.—^g Ephes. vi. 5. Colos. iii. 22. Tit. ii. 9.—^h Isai. liii. 9.—ⁱ Isai. liii. *

law of God: for this is the will of God, and all power is from God. See Rom. xiii. In like manner (v. 18) servants must be subject and obey their masters, though they be infidels. See 1 Cor. vii. By this you will silence the ignorance and calumnies of foolish men, who pretended that the Christian religion taught them to be disobedient to princes, and to be subjects of Christ only, their supreme spiritual king. Wi.

VER. 16. As free; to wit, from the slavery of sin, but take care not to make this Christian freedom and liberty a cloak for malice, as they do, who pretend that this makes subjects free from their obedience to temporal princes and magistrates; or servants free from the obedience due to their masters, even when they are froward, || ill-humoured, or cross to them. Wi.—There were some heretics in the days of S. Peter, as there are at present, who under pretext of evangelica liberty seek to be free from all even lawful subjection, and thus set themselves above the ordinances of both civil and ecclesiastical power.

VER. 19. Take notice that this is praiseworthy, an effect of God's grace, a thing acceptable to God, when you suffer injuries patiently; whereas it is no glory, nothing that deserves commendation or reward, either before God or man, to suffer for doing ill, as a malefactor, who deserves punishments. But it is glorious and meritorious for you to suffer as Christians, and for the Christian faith: be not then ashamed to suffer in this manner. These sufferings are marks of God's favour towards you, and you have the example of Christ, which you must imitate. Wi.

VER. 23. Christ, who was incapable of sinning, did not *revile them that reviled him; he suffered all with patience; he willingly gave himself up to Pontius Pilate, that judged him, and condemned him unjustly†† to the death of the cross; and remember that all he suffered was to satisfy for your sins, that he bore our sins in his own body on the tree of the cross. Remember always this great benefit of your redemption, and of your being called to believe in him, and to be eternally happy by following his doctrine; that all of you were as sheep going astray, lost in your ignorance and in your sins, but that by his grace and by his merits you are now called and converted to Jesus Christ, the great pastor and bishop of your souls. You are happy if you live under his care, inspection, and protection. Wi.

* V. 2. Rationabile sine dolo lac: τὸ λογικὸν ἄδολον γάλα: both the adjectives agree with milk.

† V. 5. Ἱεράτευμα ἁγίων βασιλείων. See S. Amb. in Psal. cxviii. S. Aug. l. x. de lib. c. 6. &c.

‡ V. 8. In quo et positi sunt: εἰς δ, in quod, ἐτίθεισθαι, which cannot agree with λόγος, or γίθος, but seems to agree with the whole sentence, which is to be understood of God's permission and punishment for their obstinacy.

§ V. 9. Virtutes ejus, τὰς ἀρετὰς, not δυνάμεις, and so should not be translated powers, as by Mr. N.

|| V. 13. Omni humanæ creaturæ, κτίσει, which the Protestants here translate, to every ordinance; but they translated, creature, Mark xvi. 15. Col. i. 15.

25 For you were as sheep going astray: but you are now converted to the pastor and bishop of your souls.

CHAP. III.

How wives are to behave to their husbands: what ornaments they are to seek. Exhortation to divers virtues.

IN ^alike manner also, let wives be subject to their husbands: that if any believe not the word, they may be gained without the word, by the conversation of the wives,

2 Considering your chaste conversation with fear.

3 ^bWhose adorning let it not be the outward plaiting of the hair, or the wearing of gold, or the putting on of apparel:

4 But the hidden man of the heart, in the incorruptibility of a quiet and a meek spirit, which is rich in the sight of God:

5 For after this manner heretofore also the holy women, hoping in God, adorned themselves, being subject to their own husbands.

6 ^cAs Sara obeyed Abraham, calling him lord: whose daughters you are, doing well, and not fearing any trouble.

7 ^dYe husbands, likewise dwelling with them according to knowledge, giving honour to the woman, as to the weaker vessel, and as to the coheirs of the grace of life: that your prayers be not hindered.

8 And finally be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, loving the brotherhood, merciful, modest, humble:

9 ^eNot rendering evil for evil, nor railing for rail-

* Ephes. v. 22. Coloss. iii. 18.—^b 1 Tim. ii. 9.—^c Gen. xviii. 12.—^d 1 Cor. vii. 3.
* Prov. xvii. 13. Rom. xii. 17.

¶ V. 16. Dyscolis, σκολοις, pravis, curvis, &c.

 V. 23. Cum malediceretur, non maledicebat, λοιδόρευμενος, convitiis appetitus; improperly translated, curse, by Mr. N.

† Ibid. Judicanti se injusto. In the present Greek we read δικαιος, just, as also some Latin Fathers read. S. Aug. (tract. 21. in Joan.) Commendabat autem judicanti juste; and so the sense is, that he commended and committed his cause to God, the just judge of all.

CHAP. III. VER. 1. Let wives, &c. In the first six verses he gives instructions to married women. 1. By their modest and submissive dispositions to endeavour to gain and convert their husbands, shewing them such a respect as Sara did, (whose daughters they ought to esteem themselves) who called Abraham her lord, or master; (Gen. xviii. 12) 2. To be modest in their dress, without vanity; 3. That women take the greatest care of the hidden man, i. e. of the interior disposition of their heart, which he calls the incorruptibility of a quiet and a meek spirit; 4. Not fearing any trouble, when God's service or the duty to their husbands require it. Wi.

VER. 7. Husbands, &c. His advice to husbands: 1. To carry themselves towards their wives with knowledge, prudence, and discretion; 2. Not in any imperious manner, but treating their wives with respect and honour, though a wife be the weaker vessel both in body and mind; 3. Considering themselves and their wives to be joint heirs with them of God's graces and favours, both in this world and the next; 4. That their prayers and duty to God be not hindered, neither by too great a fondness and compliance, nor by disagreements and dissensions. Wi.

VER. 8. Be ye all of one mind. These instructions are not only for man and wife, but for every one, to whom in general these virtues are recommended. And every one's duty is comprised in these few words of Ps. xxxiii. "Turn away from evil, and do good. . . . The eyes of the Lord are upon the just. . . . But the countenance of the Lord is against them that do evil things," &c. Nothing can hurt you, and you need fear no menaces, no terrors, if with zeal you follow and adhere to what is good. Wi.

VER. 15. Always ready to satisfy, &c.* S. Peter would have every Christian, according to his circumstances and capacity, ready to give general reasons of his faith and hope of salvation, both to infidels and heretics that refuse to believe. Wi.

VER. 18. Christ . . . being put to death indeed in the flesh, dying on the cross for our sins, but brought to life by the spirit.† By the spirit here some understand Christ's divine spirit, and power of his divinity, by which he soon raised himself again from death to an immortal life by his glorious resurrection. But others by the spirit rather understand Christ's soul, by which he never died, which always remained united to his divine person, and which the third day he again reunited to his body. Wi.

VER. 19. In which (to wit, soul or spirit) also he came, and preached to those ing; but on the contrary, blessing: for unto this are you called, that you may inherit a blessing.

10 ^aFor he that will love life, and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil, and his lips that they speak no guile.

11 ^bLet him decline from evil, and do good: let him seek peace, and pursue it:

12 Because the eyes of the Lord are upon the just, and his ears unto their prayers: but the countenance of the Lord against them that do evil things.

13 And who is he that can hurt you, if you be zealous of good?

14 ^bBut if also you suffer any thing for justice sake blessed are ye. And be not afraid of their terror, and be not troubled,

15 But sanctify the Lord Christ in your hearts, being always ready to satisfy every one that asketh you a reason of that hope which is in you.

16 ^aBut with modesty and fear, having a good conscience: that whereas they speak evil of you, they may be ashamed who falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ.

17 For it is better doing well (if such be the will of God) to suffer, than doing ill.

18 ^bBecause Christ also died once for our sins, the just for the unjust, that he might offer us to God, being put to death indeed in the flesh, but brought to life by the spirit.

19 In which also coming, he preached to those spirits who were in prison:

1 Thess. v. 15.—^a Psal. xxxiii. 18.—^b 1 Pet. i. 16.—^c Mat. v. 10.—^d Supra ii. 12.
* Rom. v. 6. Hebr. ix. 25.

spirits who were in prison. The true and common interpretation of this place seems to be, that the soul of Christ, after the separation from the body and before the resurrection, descended to a place in the interior parts of the earth, called hell in that which we call the apostles' creed, (sometimes called Abraham's bosom, sometimes Limbus Patrum, a place where were detained all the souls of the patriarchs, prophets, and just men, as it were in prison) and preached to these spirits in this prison; i. e. brought them this happy news, that he who was their Redeemer was now come to be their deliverer, and that at his glorious ascension they should enter with him into heaven, where none could enter before our Redeemer, who opened as it were heaven's gates. Among these were many who had been formerly at first incredulous in the time of Noe, who would not take warning from his preparing and building the ark, but it may be reasonably supposed that many of them repented of their sins when they saw the danger approaching, and before they perished by the waters of the deluge, so that they died at least not guilty of eternal damnation; because, though they were sinners, yet they worshipped the true God, for we do not find any proofs of idolatry before the deluge. These then, and all the souls of the just, Christ descended to free from their captivity, from their prison, and to lead them at his ascension triumphant with him into heaven. The Church of England cannot quarrel with this exposition, which seems altogether conformable to the third of their thirty nine articles, which at present runs thus: "As Christ died for us, and was buried, so also it is to be believed that he went down into hell." It is thus expressed in the articles under queen Elizabeth, an. 1562; and in the articles put out ten years before, an. 1552, in the fourth year of king Edward the sixth, the words were: "that the body of Christ lay in the grave until his resurrection, but the spirit which he gave up was with the spirits which were detained in prison, or in hell, and preached to them, as the place in S. Peter testifieth." Dr. Pearson on the fifth article of the creed, writes thus: "There is nothing which the Fathers agree in more, than as to a local and real descent of the soul of Christ into the infernal parts, unto the habitation of the souls departed. . . . This was the general opinion of the Church, as may appear by the testimonies of those ancient writers, who lived successively and wrote in several ages, and delivered this exposition in such express terms as are not capable of any other interpretation." Thus Dr. Pearson. He cites the Fathers. See the edition, an. 1683, p. 237. Wi.—Prison. See here a proof of a third place, or middle state of souls: for these spirits in prison, to whom Christ went to preach after his death, were not in heaven, nor yet in the hell of the damned; because heaven is no prison, and Christ did not go to preach to the damned. Ch.—S. Austin, in his 99th epistle, confesses that this text is replete with difficulties. This he declares is clear, beyond all doubt, that Jesus Christ descended in soul after his death into the regions below, and concludes with these words: Quis ergo nisi infidelis negaverit fuisse apud inferos Christum? In this prison souls would not be detained unless they were indebted to divine justies, nor would salvation be preached to them unless they were in a state that was capable of receiving salvation.

20 Who in time past had been incredulous, * when they waited for the patience of God, in the days of Noe, when the ark was a building: in which a few that is, eight souls, were saved by water.

21 Whereunto baptism being of the like form, now saveth you also: not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the examination of a good conscience towards God, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

22 Who is on the right hand of God, swallowing up death, that we might be made heirs of eternal life: he being gone into heaven, the Angels, and powers and virtues being made subject to him.

CHAP. IV.

Exhortation to cease from sin: to mutual charity; to do all for the glory of God; to be willing to suffer for Christ.

CHRIST, therefore, having suffered in the flesh, be you also armed with the same thought, for he that hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sins:

2^b That now he may live the rest of his time in the flesh, not after the desires of men, but according to the will of God.

3 For the time past is sufficient to have fulfilled the will of the Gentiles, for them who have walked in riotousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and unlawful worshipping of idols.

4 Wherein they think it strange, that you run not with them into the same confusion of riotousness, blaspheming.

5 Who shall render an account to him, who is ready to judge the living and the dead.

6 For this cause was the gospel preached also to the dead: that they might be judged indeed, according to men in the flesh, but may live according to God in the Spirit.

7 But the end of all is at hand. Be prudent, therefore, and watch in prayers.

8 But before all things have constant mutual charity among yourselves: * for charity covereth a multitude of sins.

9^d Using hospitality towards one another * without murmuring.

10^e As every man hath received grace, ministering the same one to another, as good^e stewards of the manifold grace of God.

11 If any man speak, as the words of God: if any man minister, as by the power which God supplieth: that in all things God may be honoured through Jesus Christ: to whom is glory, and dominion, for ever and ever. Amen.

12 Dearly beloved, think not strange the burning heat which is to try you, as if some new thing happened to you:

13 But partaking of the sufferings of Christ, rejoice that also in the revelation of his glory ye may rejoice with exultation.

14 If you be reproached for the name of Christ, you shall be happy: for that which is of the honour, glory, and power of God, and that which is his spirit, resteth upon you.

15 But let none of you suffer as a murderer, or a thief, or a railer, or as coveting the goods of others.

16 But if as a Christian, let him not be ashamed: but let him glorify God in that name.

17 For it is time that judgment should begin at the

* Gen. vi. 14. and vii. 7. Mat. xxiv. 37. Luke xvii. 26.—^b Ephes. iv. 23.—^c Prov. x. 12.

^d Rom. xii. 13. Heb. xiii. 2.—^e Phil. ii. 14.—^f Rom. xii. 6.—^g 1 Cor. iv. 1.

VER. 21. Baptism, &c. That is, the ark was a figure of baptism, which saveth you from the death of the soul; and as no one was saved from the waters of the deluge but those few eight persons who were in the ark, so no one can enter into heaven if he hath not been baptized, or hath had a desire of it when come to the use of reason. And such persons as are capable of knowing what they receive, must come with the dispositions of faith and a true repentance, which is here called the examination (lit. the interrogation) of a good conscience, who therefore are examined whether they believe in one God and three Persons, &c. Wi.—Baptism is said to be of the like form with the water by which Noe was saved, because the one was a figure of the other.—Not the putting away, &c. As much as to say, that baptism has not its efficacy, in order to salvation, from its washing away any bodily filth or dirt; but from its purging the conscience from sin: when accompanied with suitable dispositions in the party, to answer the interrogations made at that time, with relation to faith, the renouncing of Satan with all his works, and the obedience to God's commands. Ch.

VER. 22. Jesus now as our Redeemer, and as man, siteth on the right hand of God, (see Mark xvi. 19. Coloss. i. Heb. i. 3. &c.) having swallowed up (devoured or destroyed) death; having conquered and triumphed over the devil, sin, and death, that by his grace and his merits we might become heirs of eternal life; and is gone into heaven, Angels, &c. being made subject to him. Wi.

* V. 15. Ad satisfactionem, πρὸς ἀπολογία, ad defensionem.

† V. 18. In quo (spiritu) ἐν ᾧ (πνεύματι) veniens περὸν αἰῶν, profectus. As to the different expositions of this place, see Estius, Corn. a Lapide, &c. which also Dr. Pearson sets down at large. The late Protestant writers, as may be seen in Dr. Hammond and Dr. Wells, expound this place so as to signify no real descent of Christ's soul into hell, or to any infernal place, but only that his divine spirit sent Noe to preach to the spirits in the prison of their body, (i. e. to those wicked men who lived in the days of Noe) to exhort them to repentance. But this exposition, as Dr. Pearson observed, is against the general opinion of the Church and the ancient Fathers; and of which S. Aug. said, (Epi. 163. tom. 2, p. 674) Quis nisi infidelis negaverit, fuisse apud inferos Christum?

‡ V. 21. Conscientiæ bonæ interrogatio, ἐπερωτήσα. See Estius.

§ V. 22. Deglutens mortem, ut vitæ æternæ hæredes efficeremur. These words, found in all Latin copies, and cited by the Latin Fathers, are scarce found in any Greek MS. and so are omitted in the Prot. translation.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. He that hath suffered in the flesh, hath ceased from sins. Some expound these words of Christ: but he never had committed the least sin. The true sense is, that every one who suffers by Christ's example, leaves off a sinful life, so as not to fall into great sins. Wi.

VER. 3. For the time past is sufficient, &c. As if he said, you who were Gentiles, have already lived too long in vices before your conversion; so that they who are not yet converted, admire at the change they see in you, make a jest of you, talk against you for your not running on with them in the same wicked and shameful disorders: but they shall render an exact account of all to the just Judge of the living and the dead. For as I told you before, in the last chap. (v. 19.) for this cause (i. e. because Christ is judge of all) he descended to the place where the souls of the dead were, and preached to them, shewing himself their Redeemer, who judgeth and condemneth those who had lived according to the flesh, but gave life to those who had lived well, or done penance according to the spirit of God. Wi.

VER. 8. Charity covereth a multitude of sins. It is a great means to atone for them; or it may signify, that a charitable mind excuses many sins in others. Wi.

VER. 10. As good stewards of the manifold grace of God. An admonition to the ministers of the gospel, to employ well their talents and the graces received to the honour and glory of God. Wi.

VER. 12. Think not strange, &c. Be not surpris'd, nor discouraged that a hot and sharp persecution is come upon you at this time, as if it were a new and an extraordinary thing. It is what you must expect and be ready to receive with patience, and even with joy, when you suffer as Christ did before you, and for his sake: this is the way to eternal happiness in heaven. Wi.

VER. 14. Which is of the honour, glory, &c. He gives them the reason why they must rejoice and look upon themselves happy to suffer for the name of Christ, because to suffer for God's sake is glorious, is a mark that the glorious, the honourable, and the powerful spirit of God rests upon them: for as Paul said, (Heb. xii. 6.) "For whom the Lord loveth, he chastiseth; and he scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Nothing then is more honourable, nothing more advantageous, than to suffer for being a Christian. This word is only found here, and Acts xi. 26. Wi.

VER. 15. Or a railer. The Greek here signifies one that does evil, or a malefactor.—Or as coveting the goods of others. The Greek rather signifies one curiously prying into the affairs of others, which Protestants translate a busy body. Wi.

VER. 17. The time is that judgment should begin at the house of God. Try judgment seems to be here understood afflictions, persecutions, and trials in this world; and the sense is, that the time of this life is a time of suffering.—And if first at us. That is, if the justice of God deal in this manner with his friends whom he loves, much greater will be hereafter the punishments of sinners, and of those who have refused to believe in Christ. Wi.

VER. 18. Scarcely. That is, not without much labour and difficulty. Ch.

house of God. And if first with us: what shall be the end of those who believe not the gospel of God?

18 *And if the just man shall scarcely be saved, where shall the wicked and the sinner appear?

19 Therefore let them who suffer according to the will of God, also commend their souls in good deeds to the faithful Creator.

CHAP. V.

He exhorts both priests and laity, to their respective duties, and recommends to all humility and watchfulness.

THE ancients, therefore, that are among you, I beseech, who am myself also an ancient and a witness of the sufferings of Christ: as also a partaker of that glory which is to be revealed in time to come.

2 Feed the flock of God which is among you, taking care thereof not by constraint, but willingly, according to God: nor for the sake of filthy lucre, but voluntarily:

3 Neither as domineering over the clergy, but being made a pattern of the flock from the heart.

4 And when the Prince of pastors shall appear, you shall receive a never-fading crown of glory.

5 In like manner, ye young men, be subject to the ancients. ^bAnd do ye all insinuate humility one to another, ^afor God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble.

^a Prov. xi. 31.—^b Rom. xii. 10.—^c James iv. 6.—^d James iv. 10.

* V. 8. In quo admirantur, ἐξέσονται, from ἐξος, hospes, peregrinus. The same word is used v. 12, nolite peregrinari in fervore, μὴ ἐκείσθε ἐν τῇ ἐν ἑμὶν πυρώσει: in ustione, meaning the heat of persecutions.

† V. 16. Maledictus, κακοποιός, malefactor.

‡ Ibid. Alienorum appetitor, ἀλλοτρίων ἐπισκόπος, aliorum inspector.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. The ancients, therefore, that are among you, I beseech, who am myself also an ancient, &c.* According to the letter, the senior, I, a fellow senior; or, the elders, I, a fellow elder. Mr. Nary, and also the French translators, commonly put, the priest, I, your fellow priest. Or even it might be, the bishops, I, your fellow bishop. The Latin word, senior, and the Greek word presbyteros, which here are in the text, if we should follow their derivation only, signify elderly men, or men advanced in years; but since by a received use, they signify and represent to us offices and dignities, either ecclesiastical or civil, either belonging to the Church or state, which in other languages are now generally known by other words, we may however be permitted to use, even in translating the holy Scriptures, those words and names by which now are represented to us those offices and dignities. It cannot be doubted but the Greek and Latin words, which we find in this verse, were applied, after the establishment of the new law of Christ, to signify such ministers of God and the Church which are now called priests and bishops: and it is for this reason that I judged it better to put the word priest, and fellow priest, (meaning priests of the higher order, commonly known by the name of bishops) than to use the words seniors, elders, or presbyters. I should not blame the Prot. translators for translating always the Greek word, presbyter, by the English word elder, nor the Rhemes translators for putting it here senior, if these words were sufficiently authorised by an ecclesiastical use and custom to signify priests or bishops; which I think can scarce be said, to say nothing that the word elders hath been used by fanatical men, who admit of no ordination of bishops or priests by divine institution, and who have affixed it to their lay elders, who are appointed and degraded as it seemeth good to their congregations. Though the Protestants of the Church of England always translate elders for presbyters in the New Testament, yet I do not find this word once used in their liturgy or common prayer book, when any directions are given to those that perform the church office, who are called priests, bishops, curates, or ministers.—And a witness of the sufferings of Christ. S. Peter being called and made the first or chief of the apostles soon after Christ began to preach, he was witness of what Christ suffered, both during the time of his preaching and of his passion.—Glory. Some think that S. Peter only means, that he was present at his transfiguration, where was shewn some resemblance of the glory which is to come in heaven. Others think, that he expresseth the firm hopes he had of enjoying the glory of heaven. Wi.

VER. 2. Feed the flock. This shews he speaks of bishops and priests, and not of elders in years only. Wi.

VER. 3. Neither as domineering over the clergy.† This may not only signify over the inferior ministers, who were subject to the bishops or priests, but also over the particular flocks which fell to their share, or to their lot to take care of. See the Greek. Wi.

VER. 5. Ye young men, not only younger in age, but employed in offices inferior to those of the bishops and priests, be subject to the ancients. But even all of you by your carriage insinuate, practise, and give examples of humility one to another: for God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. S. James (C. iv. 6.) repeats the same doctrine and the same words. See also James ii. 12. Wi.

6 ^aBe you humbled, therefore, under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in the time of visitation:

7 ^bCasting all your solicitude upon him, for he hath care of you.

8 Be sober, and watch: because your adversary, the devil, as a roaring lion, goeth about, seeking whom he may devour:

9 Whom resist ye, strong in faith; knowing that the same affliction befalleth your brethren who are in the world.

10 But the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory, in Christ Jesus, when you have suffered a little, will himself perfect, and confirm, and establish you.

11 To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

12 By Silvanus a faithful brother unto you, as I think, I have written briefly: beseeching and testifying, that this is the true grace of God, wherein you stand.

13 The church, which is in Babylon, co-elected, saluteth you: and my son, Mark.

14 Salute one another with a holy kiss. Grace unto you all, who are in Christ Jesus. Amen.

^a Psal. liv. 23. Mat. vi. 25. Luke xii. 22.

VER. 12. I have written briefly, considering the importance of such mysteries, and necessary instructions. Wi.

VER. 13. The church, which is in Babylon, (at Rome, say Euseb. S. Jerom, &c.) so called not only on account of the extent of its empire, but also for its idolatry and vices.—Mark, my son: generally thought to have been S. Mark, the evangelist. Wi.—See the unjust prepossession of certain seceders. In this text, where all the lights of antiquity understand Rome by Babylon, they deny it; and in the book of Revelations, where all evil is spoken of Babylon, there they will have it signify nothing else but Rome: yes, and the Church of Rome, not (as the holy Fathers interpret it) the temporal state of the heathen empire.

* V. 1. Seniores, πρεσβύτεροι; consenior, συμπρεσβύτερος. It is certain that in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and in other languages, such as have a superiority and command over others, in the Church or in the commonwealth, have been called by words that by their derivation express men advanced in age and years; because men chosen to such offices were commonly, though not always, advanced in age. Yet whether old or young, we give them the names which use and custom hath affixed to their dignities; for example, in English, the chief magistrate of a town we call the mayor or major, not the greater of such a town; those who rule with him, we call the aldermen, not the elderly men according to the derivation. The like might be said of senate, senators, and many other names of offices and dignities; and, as the authors of the annotations on the Rhem. Test. observed, it would be ridiculous to translate such words according to their etymologies. We must not translate πολιτεὺς, a bridge-maker; λαῖος, a hurt fool, &c. Ἀστέρολος, by its derivation, signifieth only one sent, or a messenger; ἐπίσκοπος, an overseer, or inspector; δούλος, a servant, or waiter; yet Protestants as well as Catholics translate, apostles, bishops, deacons; and where πρεσβύτεροι, or seniors, signify men now known by these words, priests or bishops, why may we not in translating give them these names? It is true a particular difficulty occurs, because (as S. Jerom, S. Chrys. and others have taken notice) the Greek word, πρεσβύτερος, is used in the New Testament sometimes for those who by their dignity were priests only, sometimes for bishops, and many times in the gospels for those who were governors among the Jews, or members of their great council or sanhedrim and sometimes only for those who by their age were elder or more advanced in years. This makes it impossible, in translating, to represent the signification of this Greek word always in Latin or in English by the same Latin or English word, which a translator should endeavour to do as much as possible. The Prot. translators have indeed always rendered the Greek πρεσβύτερος by the English word elder; they adhere to the derivation of the word without regard to the different offices signified by that one word, and for which we have different words in English. I take notice that the Latin interpreter of the old Vulgate, though generally very exact, has not followed this rule of translating πρεσβύτερος by the same Latin word: for example, Acts xv. 2. he puts presbyteros, and yet in the same chap. (v. 4, 6, 22, and 23) he puts seniores. Acts xx. 17. for πρεσβύτεροι he puts maiores natu; and these same persons, by the 28th verse, are called episcopi, ἐπίσκοποι. In the epistles to Timothy and Titus, as also in those of SS. James, Peter, and John, for the same Greek word we sometimes find presbyteri, and sometimes seniores. A late English translation from the Latin, (an. 1719. by C. N.) for seniores and presbyteri sometimes puts elders, sometimes priests, whether it be seniores or presbyteri in the Latin; and when mention is made of the ministers of the gospel, (as Acts xv. 4.) for seniores he translates elders, and yet in the same chapter (v. 6, 22, and

23) for the same word he puts priests, &c. The translators of the Rhem. Testament were more exact, for generally speaking of seniores they put the ancients, when mention was made of those who were πρεσβύτεροι among the Jews; when seniores were applied to the ministers of the gospel, they put seniors; and for presbyteri, they translate priests. Yet they have gone from this in one or two places; for Acts xi. 30. where we read mittentes ad seniores, they put to the ancients; and also, Acts xvi. 4. for senioribus we again find ancients. For my part I judged it best, for distinction sake, to put elders in the gospels for seniores, or πρεσβύτεροι of the Jews. I had put in the Acts of the Apostles seniors where I found seniores, speaking of the ministers of the new law; and where I have found the Latin, presbyteri, I have translated priests; and Acts xx. 17 I have translated the seniors. I have also been in a doubt here in this place of S. Peter, and also in the 2d and 3d of S. John, whether to put seniors or priests: I have put ancient priests, not doubting but that S. Peter and S. John speak of themselves as priests of the first order, or as they were bishops.

† V. 3. In cleris, τῶν κληρῶν. Though I have followed the Rhem. Testament, and translated over the clergy, I believe κληροί, in the plural number, is scarce used for clerici, or for men, but rather for shares and parts of Christ's flock, to signify that every bishop or priest should not domineer over those under him, whether inferior ministers or lay persons.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF S. PETER, THE APOSTLE.

THIS Epistle, though not at first received as canonical, was acknowledged as such about the end of the fourth age. See Euseb. l. iii. Hist. c. 3. S. Jer. de Vir. Illust. Tillein. art. 33. The design, as it appears, C. i. 13. and C. iii. 1. was to give them admonitions and instructions against teachers of false doctrine, particularly against the Simonites. It seems to have been written a little before his martyrdom, about the year 66. Wi.—In this epistle S. Peter says, (C. iii.) “Behold this is the second epistle I write unto you:” and before, (C. i. 14.) “Being assured that the putting off of this my tabernacle is at hand.” This shews that it was written a very short time before his martyrdom, which was about thirty-five years after our Lord's ascension. In this epistle he admonishes the faithful to be mindful of the great gifts they received from God, and to join all other virtues with their faith. He warns them against false teachers, by describing their practices and foretelling their punishments. He describes the dissolution of this world by fire, and the day of judgment. Ch.—This epistle may be considered as the spiritual testament or last will of the apostle, as it contains his last admonitions to the faithful. He first calls their attention to the care they should have of their sanctification and perfection, next to the perils that concern the Church on the part of heretics, those that menaced her in her infant state, and those that will assail her in the latter days, which includes an invincible proof of her perpetuity; for it is the same infallible and indefectible Church that is to encounter the latter as the former trials, but always with promised success. Hence the great S. John Chrysostom says: the same day that shall see the Church of God ended, shall see the end of the world; and to these continued struggles shall succeed perfect peace, to be enjoyed through a blissful eternity. If some are still found to object, that the present epistle was not written by S. Peter, on account of the marked difference of the style, S. Jerom removes this objection thus: S. Peter employed different interpreters, sometimes Glaucias, and sometimes S. Mark; hence the difference of the style, from the diversity of his scribes. S. Mark was with him when he penned the first, but was not with him when he dictated the present. The present epistle contains, as we said above, an account of the last dreadful trials that are to assail the faithful before the end of time; but all that faith teaches us on that subject is: first, That the world will have an end; secondly, that it will end by fire; and thirdly, that the world will not be destroyed, but changed and perfected. Hence all that is said with regard to the duration of the world; on the nature and quality of the fire that is to burn and purify the world; if it be to precede or follow the last judgment, all is problematical, all is doubtful. Hence the Christian knows a good deal, who knows how to entertain proper doubts.

CHAP. I.

He exhorts them to join all other virtues with their faith: in order to secure their salvation.

SIMON Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them who have obtained equal faith with us, in the justice of our God and Saviour Jesus Christ.

2 May grace and peace abound to you in the knowledge of God, and of Christ Jesus, our Lord.

3 According as all things of his divine power, which appertain to life and piety, are given to us, through the knowledge of him who hath called us by his own proper glory and virtue,

4 By whom he hath given us very great and precious promises: that by these you may be made partakers of the divine nature: flying the corruption of that concupiscence which is in the world.

5 And you, giving all diligence, join with your faith, virtue, and with virtue, knowledge,

6 And with knowledge, abstinence, and with abstinence, patience, and with patience, piety,

7 And with piety, brotherly love, and with brotherly love, charity.

8 For if these things be with you, and abound, they will make you to be neither empty, nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

9 For he that hath not these things with him, is blind, and groping, forgetting his being purged from his old sins.

10 Wherefore, brethren, labour the more, that by good works you may make sure your vocation and election: for doing these things, you shall not sin at any time.

11 For so an entrance shall be ministered to you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

12 For which cause I will begin to put you always in remembrance of these things: though indeed you know them, and are confirmed in the present truth.

13 But I think it just as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by reminding you:

CHAP. I. VER. 1. In the justice (or by the justice) of our God and Saviour, Jesus Christ. As justice and sanctification are equally attributed to God and to Jesus Christ, it shews that the Son was equally and the same God with the Father. Wi.

VER. 3. *Glory and virtue. By the Greek text, virtue is not here the same as power, as commonly in other places, but signifies God's goodness, mercy, and clemency. Wi.

VER. 4. Partakers of the divine nature. Divine grace infused into our souls, is said to be a partaking of the divine nature by an union with the spirit of God, whereby men are made his adoptive children, heirs of heaven, &c. Wi.

VER. 5. Join with your faith, virtue: think not that faith alone will save you without the practice of virtues and good works. By abstinence or temperance, is understood that virtue which helps to moderate the inordinate love of sensuality, pleasures, and to govern all disorderly passions and affections. Wi.

VER. 9. Groping, † like one that is blind. The Greek may signify one who hath his eyes shut, or that is like a blind mole. Wi.

VER. 10. By good works you may make sure, &c. without diving into the hidden mysteries of predestination, &c.—You shall not sin at any time. Those words evidently suppose, that the graces and assistances of God will not be wanting; for it would be in vain to command, unless a man had both free will and capacity to perform. But, as it follows, these helps shall be abundantly ministered to you. Wi.

14 Being assured that the laying aside of this my tabernacle is at hand, even according as our Lord Jesus Christ hath *signified to me.

15 And I will endeavour, that you frequently have after my decease, whereby you may keep a memory of these things.

16 ^b For we have not by following artificial fables, made known to you the power, and presence of our Lord Jesus Christ; but we were eye-witnesses of his majesty.

17 For he received from God the Father honour and glory; this voice coming down to him from the excellent glory: *This is my beloved Son, in whom I am pleased; hear ye him.

18 And this voice we heard brought from heaven, when we were with him in the holy mount.

19 And we have the surer word of prophecy: to which you do well to attend, as to a light shining in a dark place until the day dawn, and the morning star rise in your hearts:

20 ^a Understanding this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is made by private interpretation.

21 For prophecy came not by the will of man at any time; but the holy men of God spoke, inspired by the Holy Ghost.

CHAP. II.

He warns them against false teachers, and foretells their punishment.

BUT there were also false prophets among the people, even as there shall be lying teachers among you, who shall bring in sects of perdition, and deny the

* John xxi. 19.—^b 1 Cor. i. 17.—^c Matt. xvii. 5.—^d 2 Tim. iii. 16.

VER. 12. I will begin.† That is, by the Greek, I will take care. Wi.

VER. 13. As long as I am in this tabernacle: to wit, of the body, in this mortal life. Wi.

VER. 14. The laying aside, § or dissolution; i. e. my death is at hand. Wi.

VER. 15. That you frequently have after my decease, || &c. Some expounded these words to signify: I will have you frequently in my thoughts, and remember you, praying for you after my death. But this does not seem the true and literal sense, nor do we need such arguments to prove that the saints pray for us. Wi.

VER. 16. We have not by following artificial fables. Lit. learned fables, ¶ invented to promote our doctrine. We, I with others, were eye-witnesses of his glory on Mount Thabor. Wi.

VER. 19. And we have the surer word of prophecy, or to make our testimonies and preaching of Christ more firm. The revelations of God made to the prophets, and contained in the holy Scriptures, give us of all others the greatest assurance. Though the mysteries in themselves remain obscure and incomprehensible, the motive of our belief is divine authority. Wi.—If our testimony be suspicious, we have what you will certainly allow, the testimony of the prophets: attend then to the prophets as to a lamp that illumines a dark place, till the bright day of a more lively faith begins to illumine you, and the day-star arises in your heart: till this faith, which is like the day-star, give you a perfect knowledge of Jesus Christ. It is by the divine oracles you will acquire this knowledge, provided you pursue them with proper dispositions.

VER. 20. No prophecy of the scripture is made by private interpretation; or, as the Protestants translate it from the Greek, is of any private interpretation, i. e. is not to be expounded by any one's private judgment or private spirit. Wi.—The Scriptures cannot be properly expounded by private spirit or fancy, but by the same spirit wherewith they were written, which is resident in the Church.

VER. 21. For prophecy came not by the will of man at any time. This is to shew that they are not to be expounded by any one's private judgment, because every part of the holy Scriptures is delivered to us by the divine spirit of God, wherewith the men were inspired who wrote them; therefore they are not to be interpreted but by the spirit of God, which he left, and promised to his Church to guide her in all truth to the end of the world. Our adversaries may perhaps tell us, that we also interpret prophecies and Scriptures; we do so; but we do it always with a submission to the judgment of the Church, they without it. Wi.

* V. 3. Et virtute, καὶ ἀρετῆς.

† V. 9. Manu testans, μανθάνων.

§ V. 12. Incipiam, οὐκ ἀρχήσω, non omittam, non negligam, &c.

|| V. 14. Depositio, ἡ ἀπόθεσις.

¶ V. 16. Dabo operam et frequenter habere vos, post obitum meum, ut horum memoriam faciatis ὅπως . . . τῶν ῥημάτων μνησθῆναι ποιεῖσθαι.

Lord who bought them, bringing upon themselves swift destruction.

2 And many shall follow their luxuries, through whom the way of truth shall be blasphemed:

3 And through covetousness with feigned words they shall make merchandise of you: whose judgment now of a long time ceaseth not, and their destruction slumbereth not.

4 ^a For if God spared not the Angels that sinned, but delivered them, drawn down with infernal ropes into hell to be tormented, to be reserved unto judgment.

5 And spared not the original world, but preserved Noe, the eighth person, a preacher of justice, bringing in the deluge upon the world of the impious.

6 ^b And reducing the cities of the Sodomites, and of the Gomorrhites into ashes, condemned them to be overthrown; making them an example to those that should after act wickedly:

7 And delivered just Lot, oppressed by the injustice and lewd conversation of the wicked:

8 For in sight and hearing he was just: dwelling among them, who from day to day tortured the just soul with wicked works.

9 The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation; but to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be tormented:

10 And especially those who walk after the flesh in the lust of uncleanness, and despise authority, audacious, self-willed, they fear not to bring in sects, blaspheming:

* Job iv. 18. Jude i. 6.—^c Gen. vii. 1.—^d Gen. xix. 25.

¶ V. 16. Non doctas fabulas, ὡς ἀσέβητους μύθους. Some copies had in-doctas, on which account the Rhem. Testam. issued before the corrections of Sixtus V. and Clemens VIII. has unlearned.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. Lying teachers among you, some of which were already come, and many more were to follow, *who shall bring in sects, (heresies) leading to perdition, and deny the Lord who bought them, denying the divinity of Jesus Christ, our Redeemer; such were the disciples of Simon, and many after them. Wi.—Sects of perdition; that is, heresies destructive of salvation. Ch.

VER. 2. Many shall follow their luxuries, or lasciviousness, such as are related of the Nicolaites and Gnostics, by reason of whom the way of truth shall be blasphemed, or ill spoken of, by those who made no distinction betwixt true and false Christians. Wi.

VER. 3. They shall make merchandise of you, preaching such lying doctrine as might please the people, but through a motive of covetousness, and for their own gain. Wi.

VER. 4. If God spared not the Angels, &c. S. Peter here brings these examples of God's justice. 1. Towards the rebellious angels that fell from heaven; 2. that of the general flood, or deluge; 3. when he destroyed Sodom and those other cities. First, angels that sinned, God by his justice delivered them, drawn down with infernal ropes into hell to be tormented, and to be reserved even for greater torments after the day of judgment. This seems to be the literal sense of this fourth verse, which is obscure, and has divers readings in the Greek. In the examples of the deluge and of Sodom, S. Peter shews not only the severity of God's judgments upon the wicked, but also his merciful providence towards the small number of the just, as towards Noe, a preacher of justice, the eighth and chief of those who were preserved in the ark, when he spared not the world that was of old, (lit. the original world) or wicked of those ancient times. When he delivered that just man, Lot, at the time he reduced Sodom and those other cities to ashes: for Lot was just both in sight and hearing, without being corrupted by what he saw and heard; chaste as to his eyes and ears, or as to all that could be seen or heard of him, when the wicked among whom he lived vexed and grieved his just soul by their impious deeds. God, therefore, who knows and approves the ways of the godly, preserves them by his providence amidst temptations. Wi.

VER. 9. To reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment, &c. That is, God many times does not punish the wicked in this life, he suffers them to run on in the ways of iniquity, with prosperity as to the enjoyment of a short and vain happiness in this world, but his judgments are most of all to be dreaded, when the punishments are reserved till the next life, as it will appear at the day of general judgment: and from the time of their death they shall be tormented in hell. Wi.

VER. 10. Especially those who walk after the flesh, &c. Such were the Gnostics, and divers of the first heretics, as well as many of them in after ages, who despise authority, condemn the laws, both of church and state; self-willed, full of 11 Whereas Angels, though they are greater in strength and power, bring not an execrable judgment against themselves.

12 But these men, as irrational beasts, naturally tending to the snare, and to destruction, blaspheming those things which they know not, shall perish in their corruption.

13 Receiving the reward of injustice, counting the delights of the day to be pleasure; stains and blemishes, flowing in delicacies, rioting in their feasts with you,

14 Having eyes full of adultery, and of never ceasing sin: alluring unstable souls, having their heart exercised with covetousness, children of malediction:

15 Forsaking the right way, they have gone astray, having followed the way of Balaam, of Bosor, who loved the wages of iniquity:

16 But was rebuked for his insane folly: the dumb beast, subject to the yoke, speaking with the voice of man, forbad the folly of the prophet.

17 These are fountains without water, and clouds tossed with whirlwinds, to whom the mist of darkness is reserved.

18 For, speaking proud things of vanity, they allure in the desires of the flesh of lust, those who escape for a while such as live in error:

19 Promising them liberty, while they themselves are slaves of corruption: for by whom a man is overcome, of the same also he is the slave.

20 For if flying from the defilements of the world through the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, being again entangled in them, they are over-

^a Jude i. 12.—^b Num. xxii. 28.—^c Jude i. 12.—^d John viii. 84.
Rom. vi. 16. and 20.—^e Heb. vi. 4.

self-love, lovers of their own infamous pleasures; blaspheming against God, his ministers, and against those who serve God. Wi.

VER. 11. Whereas angels, &c. By comparing this place with what we read in S. Jude, (v. 9) he speaks of the good angels whom God employed to banish the rebellious angels out of heaven, and on other occasions, who, though they had greater strength and power given them by the Almighty, yet did not bear execrable judgment against themselves; i. e. one against another, or against those who at first had been happy spirits with them in heaven; did not exult over them with injuries and reviling reflections, but executed their commands in the name of God, saying, let the Lord command you. See Jude, v. 9. Wi.—Bring not an execrable judgment, &c. That is, they use no railing, nor cursing sentence; not even in their conflicts with the evil angels. Ch.

VER. 12. But these men, &c. These infamous heretics of whom he speaks, like brutes, void of reason, naturally following the disorderly inclinations of their nature corrupted by sin, tend, or run headlong into the snares of the devil, to their own destruction and perdition, blaspheming against the mysteries of religion, and against what they do not understand. Wi.

VER. 13. Counting the delights of the day to be pleasure; such is their impiety and their folly, that they have no regard to all the punishments they make themselves liable to, if they can but pass their days in this short life, or even one day, in shameful pleasures and delights. They may be called the stains and blemishes, the shame and disgrace of mankind, on account of the abominations they practise in their rioting and banquetings.† See what S. Epiphanius relates of Gnostics. Wi.—Delights; that is, the short delights of this world, in which they place all their happiness. Ch.

VER. 14. And what is still an aggravation to the weight of their sins, they entice and allure others, unstable souls, not sufficiently grounded in faith and virtue, by promising them liberty and happiness, though they themselves be miserable slaves to their passions. At the same time they make dupes of them out of covetousness, to get a share of their money and riches. Wi.

VER. 15. In this they are like Balaam, of Bosor, (a town of the Madianites) who coveting the reward promised him, (Judg. xi.) was willing, if God had permitted him, to have cursed the people of Israel: but God put a check to his madness, by making the ass which he rode upon speak with a human voice. Wi.

VER. 17. These are fountains without water. The like lively description is given of the manners of these heretics by S. Jude, so that the text of one of these apostles helps to expound the other. Wi.

VER. 20. For if flying, and been happily freed from the pollutions, the abominations, and corruptions of a wicked world, be upon your guard, and take great care not to be entangled again in these dangerous snares and nets, lest your latter condition (as Christ said, Matt. xii. 45.) be worse than the former, lest you be come: their latter state is become unto them worse than the former.
(1616)

21 For it had been better for them not to have known the way of justice, than after they have known it, to turn back from that holy commandment which was delivered to them.

22 For, that of the true proverb hath happened to them: 'The dog is returned to his own vomit, and the sow that was washed, to her wallowing in the mire.

CHAP. III.

Against scoffers, denying the second coming of Christ, he declares the sudden dissolution of this world; and exhorts to holiness of life.

THIS second epistle behold I write to you, dearly beloved, in which I excite by admonition your sincere mind:

2 That you may be mindful of those words which I told you before from the holy prophets, and of your apostles, of the precepts of the Lord and Saviour.

3 Knowing this first, that in the last days there shall come scoffers with deceit, walking according to their own lusts,

4 Saying: 'Where is his promise, or his coming? For, since the fathers slept, all things continue so from the beginning of the creation.

5 For this they are wilfully ignorant of, that the heavens were before, and the earth, out of water and through water, consisting by the word of God:

6 Whereby the world that then was, being overflowed with water, perished.

7 But the heavens which now are, and the earth, by the same word are kept in store, reserved for fire unto ^f Mat. xii. 45.—^g Prov. xxvi. 11.—^h 1 Tim. iv. 1. 2 Tim. iii. 1.

Jude i. 18.—ⁱ Ezech. xii. 27.

like a dog that returns to his vomit, or like a sow that is washed and wallows again in the mire. Wi.

* V. 1. Sectas introducere, δόξας, as this Greek word sometimes signifies; witness Aristotle, 4. Eth. where he puts as apposite, κατὰ δόξαν, καὶ κατ' ἀλήθειαν.

† V. 4. Rudentibus inferni detractos in tartarum tradidit cruciandos, in judicium reservari, σκαπὶς ἰσθμῶν (some few copies, ἰσθμῶν) ταραπῶσας, ταρῶσεν εἰς κελὶν ταρῶσινους; other MSS. ταρῶσινους. Ταραπῶς must signify cast into a place, called ταρῶσας, derived from ταρῶσσω, turbo. The Rhem. Test. hath, with ropes of hell drawn down; but the sense rather seems to be, delivered into chains, or into prison. Some would have ταραπῶσας to signify, cast down into this region of the air. It is true divers of the ancient Fathers were of opinion, that devils are dispersed in the airy region, where they are punished and tormented; but these same Fathers do not deny, that there is in the inferior parts of the earth a place of torments for the devils and damned souls, into which (called also the abyss) the devils begged not to be sent and confined there. Lu. viii. 31. This is the place called hell, tartarus, &c.

‡ V. 18. In conviviis, ἀνδρας, which reading Dr. Wells prefers before ἀνδρας, the common reading: in the Prot. translation, with their own deceivings.

CHAP. III. VER. 3. Scoffers with deceit*, (such as make a jest of all revealed religion) walking according to their own lusts, as if they might indulge themselves in every thing which their inclinations prompt them to, saying: where is his promise, or his coming? They have no belief nor regard for what has been revealed concerning the coming of Christ to judge every one, to reward the good, and punish the wicked. Such were the Sadducees, who believe not the immortality of the soul, nor the resurrection; such were at all times those atheistical men, who endeavoured to persuade themselves that all religion is no more than a human and politic invention; of this number are they who some in our days call free-thinkers. S. Peter here gives us the words of these unbelieving libertines, whom he calls scoffers: where, say they, is his promise? those pretended promises of God, those predictions and menaces in the Scriptures! what appearance of Christ's coming to judge the world! for, since the Fathers slept, ever since the death of the patriarchs and prophets, all things continue. Wi.

VER. 5. For this they are wilfully ignorant of. The ignorance of these unbelievers is wilful and inexcusable, when they question the existence of a Supreme Being, of a future state, wherein God will reward the good and punish the wicked; when they laugh at all the miracles, and all the extraordinary effects of God's power and justice, such as was the general flood or deluge, by which God destroyed the wicked by an inundation of waters. And as our blessed Saviour said of those, who would not believe in the days of Noe, "They were the day of judgment, and of the perdition of wicked men.

8 But be not ignorant, my beloved, of this one thing, that one day with the Lord is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

9 The Lord delayeth not his promise, as some imagine: but acts patiently for your sake, not willing that any should perish, but that all should return to penance.

10 ^a But the day of the Lord shall come as a thief, in which the heavens shall pass away with great violence, and the elements shall be melted with heat, and the earth, and the works that are in it, shall be burnt up.

11 Seeing then that all these things are to be dissolved, what manner of people ought you to be in holy conversation and godliness,

12 Expecting, and hastening unto the coming of the day of the Lord, by which the burning heavens shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with the heat of fire?

^a 1 Thess. v. 2. Apoc. iii. 8. and xvi. 15.

eating and drinking, marrying, and giving in marriage, . . and they knew not till the flood came, and took them all away: so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Mat. xxiv. 38, 39. Wi.

VER 10. The heavens, &c. He puts the faithful in mind not to regard these profane scoffers, but to be convinced of the truths revealed, and that the world shall be destroyed a second time by fire. Reflect that the time of this life, and all the time that this world shall last, is nothing to eternity, which has no parts, no beginning, nor end; so that in the sight of God, who is eternal, a thousand years are no more to be regarded than one day, or one moment. The long time that hath hitherto passed, must not make you think that God is slack as to his promises, or that they shall not infallibly come to pass at the time and moment appointed by his divine providence. God's infinite mercy, and his love for mankind, bears patiently with the provocations of blind and unthinking sinners, not willing that any of them should perish, but that they should return to him by a sincere repentance and true penance, and be saved. But watch always, according to the repeated admonition of our blessed Redeemer. Mark. xiii. 37. &c. For both the day of your death, and the day of the Lord to judge the world, will come like a thief, &c. Wi.

VER 11. Seeing then that all these things are to be dissolved, that the world, and all things in the world, shall pass in a short time, set not your affections upon them: let your life and conversation be holy. According to the divine promises, look for new heavens, and a new earth, where justice is to dwell, whither sinners shall not enter, but the just only, in a new state of never-ending happiness. Make it then your endeavour to be found in the sight of God spotless

13 ^b But we look for new heavens and a new earth according to his promise, in which justice dwelleth.

14 Wherefore, dearly beloved, expecting these things, endeavour diligently, that you may be found before him spotless and blameless in peace,

15 ^c And account the long-suffering of our Lord, salvation: as also our most dear brother, Paul, according to the wisdom given him, hath written to you,

16 As also in all his epistles, speaking in them of these things: in which are some things hard to be understood, which the unlearned and unstable wrest, as also the other Scriptures, to their own perdition.

17 You therefore, brethren, knowing these things before, beware; lest, being led away by the error of the unwise, you fall from your own steadfastness.

18 But increase in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and unto the day of eternity. Amen.

^b Isai. lxxv. 17. and lxxvi. 22. Apoc. xxii. 1.—^c Rom. ii. 4.

and blameless; and look upon the long forbearance of God, who defers to punish sinners as they deserve, to be an effect of his mercy, and for your salvation. Wi.

VER 15-16. As also our most dear brother, Paul, . . . hath written to you. He seems to mean in his epistle to the Hebrews or converted Jews, (C. x. 37.) where he says: yet a little while, . . . and he that is to come, will come, and will not delay.—In which are some things hard to be understood, especially by unlearned, ignorant people, unstable, inconstant, not well grounded in faith, and which they wrest,† as they do also the other scriptures, by their private interpretations, to their own perdition. Wi.

VER 17. Being forewarned, therefore, and knowing these things before, take heed not to be led away by the errors of such false and unwise teachers, whatever knowledge they boast of, as did the Gnostics. But make it your serious endeavour to increase in grace by God's assistance, in the true knowledge of our Lord God and Saviour, Jesus Christ, to whom, as being one God with his eternal Father and the Holy Ghost, be glory now, and for all eternity. Amen. Wi.

* V. 3. In deceptione illusores; the true reading in the Greek is, as Dr. Wells has restored it, ἐν ἐπαγγελίᾳ ἑπαίταται, illusiones illudentes.

† V. 16. Depravant, στρεβλοῦσιν, detorquent. It is a speech, says Mr. Legh, on στρεβλῶν, borrowed from torturers, when they put an innocent man on the rack, and make him speak what he never thought. They deal, says he, with the Scriptures as chemists sometimes deal with natural bodies, torturing them to extract out of them what God and nature never put in them.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF S. JOHN, THE APOSTLE.

THIS Epistle was always acknowledged for canonical, and written by S. John, the apostle and evangelist. At what time and place, is uncertain. It is sometimes called the Epistle to the Parthians, or Persians. The chief design is to set forth the mystery of Christ's incarnation against Cerinthus, who denied Christ's divinity, and against Basilides, who denied that Christ had a true body; with zealous exhortations to love God and our neighbour. Wi.—The same vein of divine love and charity towards our neighbour which runs throughout the gospel, written by the beloved disciple and evangelist, S. John, is found also in his epistles. He confirms the two principal mysteries of our faith: the mystery of the Trinity, and the mystery of the incarnation of Jesus Christ, the Son of God. The sublimity and excellence of the evangelical doctrine he declares: "And this commandment we have from God, that he who loveth God love also his brother;" (C. iv. 21.) and again, "For this is the charity of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not heavy." C. v. 3. He shews how to distinguish the children of God from those of the devil; marks out those who should be called antichrists; describes the turpitude and gravity of sin. Finally, he shews how the sinner may hope for pardon. It was written, according to Baronius's account, sixty-six years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—The effect of all is to prove the certainty of the Catholic faith, and to renounce all heretics and schismatics, who entice persons from the true saving faith.

CHAP. I.

He declares what he has seen and heard of Christ, (who is the life eternal) to the end that we may have fellowship with God, and all good through him: yet so if we confess our sins.

THAT which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the word of life:

2 For the life was manifested: and we have seen, and do bear witness, and declare unto you the eternal life, which was with the Father, and hath appeared to us:

3 That which we have seen and have heard, we declare unto you, that you also may have fellowship with us, and our fellowship may be with the Father, and with his Son, Jesus Christ.

4 And these things we write to you, that you may rejoice, and your joy may be full.

5 And this is the declaration which we have heard from him, and declare unto you: ^aThat God is light, and in him there is no darkness.

6 If we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth.

7 But if we walk in the light, as he also is in the light, we have fellowship one with another; ^band the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin.

8 ^cIf we say that we have no sin: we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

^a John viii. 12.—^b Heb. ix. 14. 1 Pet. i. 19. Apoc. i. 5.—^c 8 Kings viii. 46.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. The first two verses and part of the third have a great conformity with the beginning of S. John's gospel. The construction is somewhat obscure, unless we observe that the second verse is to be taken by way of a parenthesis, and the sense is not complete till these words, we declare to you, &c. The whole may be expressed in this literal paraphrase: We declare and preach to you the eternal and always living word, which was from the beginning, (for this word which was with the Father from eternity, hath appeared,† and manifested himself to us, when he took upon him our human nature, and was made flesh). This word I say, incarnate, we have seen with our eyes, we have heard him preach his gospel, we have touched his true body with our hands, as we witness and declare to you, that you may have fellowship with us, and be made partakers of the graces which God came from heaven to bestow upon mankind, to make us his adoptive sons and heirs of heaven. Wi.

VER. 5. God is light,† &c. We cannot have this fellowship with God the Father and his Son Jesus Christ, if we walk in the darkness of sin: we must walk as the children of light. Wi.

VER. 8. Not that we say or pretend we have no sin;§ thus truth would not be in us, and we should even make God a liar, who has declared all mankind guilty of sin. We were all born guilty of original sin; we have fallen, and still frequently fall into lesser sins and failings. We can only except from this number our Saviour Christ, who, even as man, never sinned, and his blessed Virgin Mother, by a special privilege, preserved from all kind of sin; and of whom S. Aug.‡ says, "that for the honour of our Lord, when we speak of the holy Virgin Mary, he will have no mention at all made of any sin." Wi.

* V. 1. Quod fuit ab initio; in Greek, quod erat, ὃ ἦν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς. This answers to, in principio erat verbum.

† Ibid. Et vita manifesta est. This corresponds to, in ipso vita erat, and apparuit nobis Verbum Caro Factum est. And it was true to say that they had seen the eternal word, not as God, but under the veil of human nature.

‡ V. 5. Deus lux est; (John i.) erat lux vera.

§ V. 8. Quoniam peccatum non habemus, &c. By which are confuted the errors of the Pelagian heretics, who denied original sin, and pretended that men by their natural strength could and did live free from all sins.

¶ Ibid. S. Aug. l. de Nat. et Gra. c. xxxvii. Excepta S. V. Maria, de qua propter honorem Domini, nullam proreus, cum de peccato agitur, haberi volo mentionem.

CHAP. II. VER. 1. That you may not sin, or not lose the grace of God by any considerable sin.—But if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the eternal Son of the Father, who being made man to redeem us from sin, is our great Advocate, our chief Mediator, and only Redeemer, by whose merits and grace we have been reconciled, after we had lost and forfeited the grace and favour of God by our offences. He is the only propitiation for the sins of the whole world; for, as S. Paul says, (Heb. x. 14.) Christ, by one oblation on the cross, hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified. All remission of sins, all sanctification, is derived from the merits and satisfaction of our Redeemer, Jesus Christ; not but that the Angels and saints in heaven, and virtuous persons upon earth, when they pray to God for us, may be called advo-

9 If we confess our sins: he is faithful and just, to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all iniquity.

10 If we say that we have not sinned: we make him a liar, and his word is not in us.

CHAP. II.

Christ is our advocate: we must keep his commandments, and love one another. We must not love the world, nor give ear to new teachers, but abide by the Spirit of God in the Church.

MY little children, these things I write to you, that you may not sin. But if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Just:

2 And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for those of the whole world.

3 And in this we know that we have known him, if we keep his commandments.

4 He that saith he knoweth him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a liar, and the truth is not in him.

5 But he that keepeth his word, in him the charity of God is truly perfect: and by this we know that we are in him.

6 He that saith he abideth in him, ought himself also to walk even as he walked.

7 Dearly beloved, I write not a new commandment to you, but an old commandment, which you had from the beginning: The old commandment is the word which you have heard.

8 ^dAgain, a new commandment I write to you, which

2 Par. vi. 86. Prov. xx. 9. Eccle. vii. 21.—^d John xiii. 34. and xv. 12.

cates, mediators, and intercessors (though not redeemers) in a different sense, and in an inferior manner, without any injury, but on the contrary with an honour done to Christ; because what they pray and ask for us, is only begged and hoped for through Christ, and by his merits. S. Aug.* in his commentary on this epistle, on these very words, we have an advocate, &c. prevents and answers this very objection of the late pretended reformers: (tom. iii. part 2. p. 831. Nov. Edit.) "Some one will say: therefore the saints do not ask for us, therefore the bishops and governors of the Church do not ask for the people." He denies that this follows, the saints being advocates in a different sense. Though God be our protector and defender from dangers, this does not hinder us from owning the Angels to be our defenders in an inferior manner under God, as the Church of England acknowledges in the common prayer book on the feast of S. Michael, and all Angels, which runs thus: "mercifully grant, that as thy holy Angels always do thee service in heaven, so by thy appointment they may succour and defend us on earth through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen." Wi.—The calling and office of an advocate is in many things proper to Christ, and in every condition more singularly and excellently applying to him than to any Angel, saint, or living creature, though these also may be truly so called without any derogation from Christ. To him solely it belongs to procure us mercy before God, by the general ransom of his blood for our delivery; hence he is our only advocate of redemption, though others may be and are advocates of intercession. Hence Irenæus (l. iii. c. 33. et l. v. post med.) says: "the obedient Virgin Mary is made the advocate of the disobedient Eve." Our Saviour declares that Angels are deputed for the protection of infants; (Mat. xviii.) and frequent are the examples we find in the old Scripture, such as Gen. xlviii. 16. Tob. v. 27. and xii. 12. Dan. x. See also the common prayer book, in the collect of Michaelmas day.

VER. 3. We have known him, if we keep his commandments. He speaks of that practical knowledge by love and affection, which can be only proved by our keeping his commandments; and without which we cannot be said to know God, as we should. Ch.

VER. 4. He that says he knoweth him, &c. To know, in this and many other places, is not taken for a speculative knowledge alone, but is joined with a love of God, and an earnest desire of serving him and keeping his commandments. Wi.

VER. 5. The charity of God is truly perfect.† Notwithstanding his lesser failings, he retains the habit of charity and grace, by which he remains united to God.—And by this we know that we are in him; i. e. we are morally, though not absolutely, certain that we are in the state of grace. Wi.

VER. 7-8. An old commandment . . . and again, a new commandment. He means the commandment of charity, or of the love of God and the love of our neighbour. This he calls both an old and a new precept. It may be called old, not only as being a precept of the law of nature, and always obligatory, but because S. John and the apostles had delivered it to them long ago, i. e. when these persons were first converted. It may also be called a new precept, S. John recommending it anew to them in this epistle, and declaring it to be enjoined in a particular manner by our Saviour Christ, after it had been misconstrued and neglected, especially as it regards our neighbour, that is, every one without exception; so that if any one hate another, it is in vain that he pretends to walk thing is true both in him, and in you: because the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth.

9 He that saith he is in the light, and hateth his brother, is in darkness even until now.

10 * He that loveth his brother, abideth in the light, and there is no scandal in him.

11 But he that hateth his brother, is in darkness, and walketh in darkness, and knoweth not whither he goeth: because the darkness hath blinded his eyes.

12 I write to you, little children, because your sins are forgiven you for his name's sake.

13 I write to you, fathers, because you have known him, who is from the beginning. I write to you, young men, because you have overcome the wicked one.

14 I write to you, infants, because you have known the Father. I write to you, young men, because you are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and you have overcome the wicked one.

15 Love not the world, nor those things which are in the world. If any man love the world, the charity of the Father is not in him:

16 For all that is in the world, is the concupiscence of the flesh, and the concupiscence of the eyes, and the pride of life: which is not of the Father, but is of the world.

17 And the world passeth away, and the concupiscence thereof. But he that doth the will of God, abideth for ever.

18 Little children, it is the last hour: and as you have heard that antichrist cometh, and now there are many antichrists: whereby we know that it is the last hour.

19 They went out from us, but they were not of us. For if they had been of us, they would certainly have remained with us: but that they may be manifest, that they are not all of us.

* Infra iii. 14.

in the light of the gospel. Wi.—A new commandment; viz. the commandment of love, which was given in the old law, but was renewed and extended by Christ. See John xiii. 33. Ch.

VER. 12. I write to you, little children, &c. S. Aug. and divers others think that by these different words, he only means Christians more or less instructed and advanced in the knowledge and practice of the Christian faith. Others expound it with a regard also to their different ages and advancement in years. Wi.

VER. 15. If any man love the world, this wicked world, or any thing in it, as pleasures, riches, honours, so that his affections be more upon these than upon God, the charity of the Father (or of God) is not in him. Wi.

VER. 16-17. All that is in the world, is the concupiscence of the flesh, under which is comprehended all that pleaseth the senses, or the concupiscence of the eyes; i. e. a longing after such things which enter by the eyes, as of riches in gold and silver, in apparel, in houses and palaces, train and equipage, &c. curiosity as to vain arts and sciences; or, the pride of life, as to honours, dignities, and preferments. But the world passeth away, and all these things that belong to it.—He that doth the will of God, abideth for ever, with God in heaven. Wi.

VER. 18. It is the last hour. That is, according to the common interpretation, the last age of the world, from the coming of Christ to the day of judgment, and the end of the world, which S. Paul calls the end and consummation of ages. Heb. ix. 26.—And as you have heard that antichrist (the great antichrist) cometh, or is to come in this last age: now there are already many antichrists; i. e. as the word signifies, many adversaries to Christ, who are forerunners of the great and last antichrist. Wi.—Many antichrists; that is, many heretics, enemies of Christ and his Church, and forerunners of the great antichrist. Ch.—S. Cyprian says all are called antichrists that have divided themselves from the charity and unity of the Catholic Church. Ep. lxxvii. ad Magnum—Whereby we know that it is the last hour, it being foretold that many false prophets should rise in the latter days. Mat. xxiv. 11. &c. Wi.

VER. 19. They were not of us, true and profitable members; though it can scarce be doubted but that some of them, at least for some time, truly believed: and by their going off, God was pleased to make it manifest that they were not of his faithful members. Such were Simon Magus, Cerinthus, Ebion, Nicolas of Antioch, &c. Wi.—They, &c. That is, they were not solid, steadfast, genuine Christians, otherwise they would have remained in the Church. Ch.—The true note or mark of heresy, is the going out of or leaving the Catholic Church. God permitteth some to go out, that the true and tried faithful may be known.

20 But you have an unction from the Holy One, and you know all things.

21 I have not written to you as to those who know not the truth, but as to those who know it: and that no lie is of the truth.

22 Who is a liar, but he who denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist, who denieth the Father, and the Son.

23 Every one that denieth the Son, hath not the Father either. He that confesseth the Son, hath the Father also.

24 Let that which you have heard from the beginning, abide in you: If what you have heard from the beginning abide in you, you also shall abide in the Son, and in the Father.

25 And this is the promise which he hath promised us, eternal life.

26 These things have I written to you concerning them that seduce you.

27 And let the unction, which you have received from him, abide in you. And you have no need that any one should teach you: but as his unction teacheth you concerning all things, and it is true, and is not a lie. And as it hath taught you: abide in him.

28 And now, little children, abide in him: that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be confounded by him at his coming.

29 If you know that he is just, know ye that every one also who doth justice is born of him.

CHAP. III.

Of the love of God to us: how we may distinguish the children of God, and those of the devil. Of loving one another, and of purity of conscience.

BEHOLD what manner of charity the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called, and should be the sons of God. Therefore the world knoweth us not: because it hath not known him.

2 Dearly beloved, we are now the sons of God: and

VER. 20. You have an unction from the holy one. You are sufficiently instructed by the grace and spirit of God against such false teachers. Wi.—An unction, &c. That is, grace and wisdom from the Holy Ghost. Ch.—And you know all things, as to what you ought to believe and practise, and therefore I have not written to you as to ignorant persons. Wi.—The true children of God's Church, remaining in unity, under the guidance of their lawful pastors, partake of the grace of the Holy Ghost, promised to the Church and her pastors; and have in the Church all necessary knowledge and instruction, so as to have no need to seek it elsewhere, since it can be only found in that society of which they are members. Ch.

VER. 22-23. He who denieth that Jesus is the Christ? He is antichrist: is in a special manner an adversary to Christ and the Christian religion, when he denies Jesus to be the Messiah, or to have been from eternity the true Son of God.—He who denieth him to be the Son, neither hath he the Father. He who denies either of these truths denieth both. He who denies the Son of God to be the eternal Son, denies the Father to be the eternal Father. Wi.

VER. 24. Let that (faith) which you have heard from the beginning, abide in you: when you received the Christian faith, and were baptized in the name of the three divine Persons. The promise which was then made to you, was life everlasting. Wi.

VER. 27. You have no need, &c. You want not to be taught by any of these men, who, under pretence of imparting more knowledge to you, seek to seduce you, (v. 26) since you are sufficiently taught already, and have all knowledge and grace in the Church, with the unction of the Holy Ghost, which these new teachers have no share in. Ch.—His unction teacheth you concerning all things. Unction here signifies the doctrine which they received together with the Holy Ghost or Spirit of God; in which he exhorts them to remain, as being sufficient for their instruction, and to make them avoid the new teachers of false doctrine. Wi.

* V. 1. Sed dicet aliqui, says S. Aug. on this place, ergo sancti non petunt pro nobis. Ergo episcopi et præpositi non petunt pro populo; sed attendite scripturas, &c.

† V. 5. Perfecta est, τελειώται. This must only be understood of charity so perfected as to be true charity, but not a perfect degree of charity.

it hath not yet appeared what we shall be. We know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like to him: because we shall see him as he is.

3 And every one that hath this hope in him, sanctifieth himself, as he also is holy.

4 Every one who committeth sin, committeth also iniquity: and sin is iniquity.

5 And you know that he appeared to take away our sins: and in him there is no sin.

6 Whosoever abideth in him, sinneth not: and whosoever sinneth, hath not seen him, nor known him.

7 Little children, let no one deceive you. He that doth justice, is just: as he also is just.

8 ^b He that committeth sin is of the devil: for the devil sinneth from the beginning. For this purpose the Son of God appeared, that he might destroy the works of the devil.

9 Every one that is born of God, doth not commit sin: for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God.

10 In this the children of God are manifest, and the children of the devil. Every one who is not just, is not of God, and he that loveth not his brother:

11 For this is the declaration, which you have heard from the beginning, ^c that you should love one another.

12 Not ^d as Cain, who was the wicked one, and killed his brother. And for what cause did he kill him? Because his own works were evil: and his brother's just.

13 Wonder not, brethren, if the world hate you.

14 We know that we have passed from death to life, because we love the brethren. ^e He that loveth not abideth in death:

15 Whosoever hateth his brother, is a murderer.

^a Isai. liii. 9. ¹ Peter ii. 22.—^b John viii. 44.—^c John xiii. 34. and xv. 12.
^d Gen. iv. 8.—^e Lev. xix. 17. Supra ii. 10.

hath bestowed upon us. S. John had said in the last verse of the foregoing chap. that every one who doth justice, is born of him; i. e. is the Son of God by adoption. But the world knoweth us not, nor esteems and values us as such: and no wonder, because they have not known, nor acknowledged, nor revered God as they ought. We indeed are the sons of God; we believe it, because God has assured us of it; but it hath not yet appeared what we shall be, (v. 2) to what glory or happiness we shall thereby be exalted hereafter, for neither the eye hath seen, nor the ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of man, what things God hath prepared for those who love him. 1 Cor. ix. 2. We only know this, that his elect shall be like to him, because they shall see him as he is, when they shall enjoy him in heaven. Wi.

VER. 4. *Committeth also iniquity. By the Greek text, iniquity is here taken for a transgression or prevarication of the law, which makes the sense clearer. Wi.—Iniquity; (ἀνομία) transgression of the law. Ch.

VER. 6. Whosoever abideth in him, complying with his law, sinneth not; and whosoever sinneth, hath not seen him, nor known him; that is, with such a knowledge as is joined with love. Wi.—Sinneth not; viz. mortally. See C. i. 8. Ch.

VER. 8. The devil sinneth from the beginning: not that he was created in sin, but sinned soon after he was created. Wi.

VER. 9. Doth not commit sin. That is, as long as he keepeth in himself this seed of grace, and this divine generation, by which he is born of God. But then he may fall from this happy state by the abuse of his free-will, as appears from Rom. xi. 20. 21. 22. 1 Cor. ix. 27. and x. 12. Phil. ii. 12. Apoc. iii. 11. Ch.—He cannot sin, because he is born of God. The meaning of this can be no more, than that he cannot sin as long as the seed of grace remaineth in him, and as long as he is the adoptive son of God. But it is evident he may fall from this happy condition, and from the grace of God, otherwise S. John would not so often in this epistle have exhorted them not to sin. Wi.

VER. 14–15. We know that we have passed from death to life; i. e. from the death of sin to the life of grace: we know it by a moral certainty, when we experience in our heart a love of our neighbour—He that loveth not God and his neighbour, abideth in death. He that hateth his brother with a mortal hatred, or to a considerable degree, is a murderer. Wi.

VER. 16. The charity of God,† because he hath laid down his life for us. Jesus Christ, therefore, who laid down his life for us, was God. It is true at present

And you know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in himself.

16 ^f In this we have known the charity of God, because he hath laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.

17 ^g He that hath the substance of this world, and shall see his brother in need, and shall shut up his bowels from him: how doth the charity of God abide in him?

18 My little children, let us not love in word, nor in tongue, but in deed, and in truth.

19 In this we know that we are of the truth: and in his sight we shall persuade our hearts.

20 For if our heart reprehend us, God is greater than our heart, and knoweth all things.

21 Dearly beloved, if our heart do not reprehend us, we have confidence towards God:

22 ^h And whatsoever we shall ask, we shall receive of him: because we keep his commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

23 ⁱ And this is his commandment: that we should believe in the name of his Son, Jesus Christ: and love one another, as he hath given commandment unto us.

24 ^k And he that keepeth his commandments, abideth in him, and he in him: and in this we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us.

CHAP. IV.

What spirits are of God, and what not. We must love one another, because God has loved us.

DEARLY beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

2 By this is the spirit of God known: every spirit which confesseth Jesus Christ to have come in the flesh, is of God:

^f John xv. 18.—^g Luke iii. 11. James ii. 15.—^h Mat. xxi. 22.—ⁱ John vi. 29. and xvii. 2.—^k John xiii. 34. and xv. 12.

the words of God are wanting in most Greek MSS: yet the Prot. translation has them. Wi.

VER. 19–20. And in his sight we shall persuade our hearts. That is, if we love God and our neighbour in deed, as he said before, we may rest satisfied in conscience that we follow the ways of truth, and may have a well-grounded confidence in God.—But if our hearts reprehend us, for not complying with this duty and precept of charity, God is still greater than our heart; i. e. he sees and knows the interior dispositions of our heart, even better than we know ourselves, and therefore we have more reason to fear him, especially when even our heart and conscience reprehend us. Wi.

VER. 24. We know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us. These words may be either referred to the body of the Church in general or to the apostles, or to every one in particular. It is certain that God gave his Spirit to his Church and to the apostles, by the coming of the Holy Ghost in a visible manner, and by the miraculous gifts bestowed upon the apostles; but every one in particular has only a moral certainty that he has the Spirit of God, and his sanctifying grace in his soul. Wi.

* V. 4. Et peccatum est iniquitas, καὶ ἡ ἀνομία ἵστίς ἡ ἀνομία, transgressio.

† V. 16. Charitatem Dei, τοῦ Θεοῦ: scarce in any MSS. nor read by S. Aug. in his commentary on this verse.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. Try the spirits; i. e. every doctrine that you hear: for now are many false teachers, false doctors, and false prophets. Wi.—Try, &c. viz. by examining whether their teaching be agreeable to the rule of the Catholic faith and the doctrine of the Church. For, as he says, (v. 6) “He that knoweth God, heareth us: (the pastors of the Church) . . . by this we know the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.” Ch.—The Church only, not every private man, hath to prove and discern spirits.

VER. 2. By this is the Spirit of God known. He gives the new converts first this general mark, by which they might have good grounds to think that the teachers they met with in those days had a good spirit, and were of God, if they confessed and acknowledged Jesus Christ to have come from heaven and to have been made flesh, or made man; i. e. to be truly God and truly man. But if (v. 3) they met with teachers of such a spirit as dissolveth Jesus, by denying him either to be the Messiah or to be truly God, or to be a true man, they might

3 And every spirit, that dissolveth Jesus, is not of God, and this is antichrist, of whom you have heard that he cometh, and he is now already in the world.

4 You are of God, little children, and have overcome him, because greater is he that is in you, than he that is in the world.

5 *They are of the world: therefore of the world they speak, and the world heareth them.

6 We are of God. He that knoweth God, heareth us: He that is not of God, heareth us not: by this we know the Spirit of truth, and the spirit of error.

7 Dearly beloved, let us love one another: for charity is of God. And every one that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God.

8 He that loveth not, knoweth not God: for God is charity.

9 ^bBy this hath appeared the charity of God in us, because God hath sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live by him.

10 In this is charity: not as if we had loved God, but because he first loved us, and sent his Son a propitiation for our sins.

11 Dearly beloved, if God hath so loved us, we ought also to love one another.

12 °No man hath seen God at any time. If we love

* John viii. 47.—^b John iii. 16.— John i. 18. 1 Tim. vi. 16.

conclude for certain that such men had not a true spirit, but were heretics, antichrists, and forerunners of the great antichrist. Such, even in S. John's time, was Simon the magician, who, according to S. Epiphanius (hær. xxi. p. 55. Ed. Petav.) pretended among his countrymen, the Samaritans, that he himself was God the Father, and among the Jews that he was God the Son, and that Jesus suffered death in appearance only. His disciple also, Menander, said he was sent from heaven for the salvation of men. See S. Epiphanius hær. xxii. p. 61. S. Cerinthus, as also Carpooras, held that Jesus was a mere man, born of Joseph and Mary, and also different from Christ. See S. Epiphanius hær. xxxvii. and xxix. p. 162. and 110. 4. Ebion held much the same. See the same S. Epiphanius hær. xxx. p. 142. These heretics and divers of their followers divided Jesus, and destroyed the faith and mystery of the incarnation. Wi.—Every spirit which confesseth, &c. Not that the confession of this point of faith alone, is at all times and in all cases sufficient; but that with relation to that time, and for that part of the Christian doctrine, which was then particularly to be confessed, taught, and maintained against the heretics of those days, this was the most proper token by which the true teachers might be distinguished from the false. Ch.

VER. 3. That dissolveth Jesus, viz. either by denying his humanity or his divinity. Ch.—This is antichrist; † i. e. such is the spirit of antichrist, of whom you have heard that he cometh, or is to come in the latter times.—And he is now already in the world, not the chief and great antichrist, but his precursors, in whom he may be said to come. Wi.—Ibid. Not in his person, but in his spirit, and in his precursors. Ch.

VER. 4. You . . . little children, born anew in Christ by baptism, have overcome him, (i. e. every such antichrist) not by your own strength, but by the grace of Christ, because greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world; i. e. the Spirit of God in you is above all your enemies. Wi.

VER. 5. They are of the world. Such antichrists and heretics are guided by a worldly spirit, teaching men to follow the corrupt customs and inclinations of the world and the flesh, therefore the world heareth them, and men are more easily seduced by them. Wi.

VER. 6. We (Christians) are of God, have received the Spirit; we, the apostles of Christ, were lawfully sent by him.—He that knoweth God, heareth us, &c. That is, they who love and serve God, and comply with the doctrine of his Son, Jesus Christ, hear and follow the doctrine which we were commissioned by him to teach.—He that is not of God, heareth us not. They are not of God, who refuse to hear and obey the voice of the Church and those whom Christ appointed to govern his Church, as hath been observed elsewhere.—By this we know the Spirit of truth and the spirit of error. Here S. John gives them the second general mark and rule, to preserve them and all Christians from errors and heresies to the end of the world. He that knoweth God, heareth us Apostles, whom he sent, and heareth our successors, invested with the same mission and authority, whom Christ sent, as his heavenly Father sent him, whom he appointed to govern his Church, and with whom he promised to remain to the end of the world. Wi.

VER. 7. Let us love one another. This is the repeated admonition of S. John, the evangelist, both in this epistle and to the end of his life, as S. Jerom relates in his Epist. ad Galat. (cap. vi. tom. 4, part 1, p. 414) that the apostle being very old, and when carried to Church meetings of the Christians, being desired to give them some exhortation, he scarce said any thing, but "love one another;"

one another, God abideth in us, and his charity is perfected in us.

13 By this we know that we abide in him, and he in us: because he hath given us of his Spirit:

14 And we have seen, and do testify, that the Father hath sent his Son, the Saviour of the world.

15 Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God abideth in him, and he in God

16 And we have known, and have believed the charity, which God hath to us. God is charity: and he that abideth in charity, abideth in God, and God in him.

17 In this is the charity of God perfected with us, that we may have confidence in the day of judgment: because as he is, we also are in this world.

18 Fear is not in charity: but perfect charity casteth out fear; because fear hath pain: and he that feareth is not perfect in charity.

19 Let us, therefore, love God, because God first hath loved us.

20 If any man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar. For he that loveth not his brother whom he seeth, how can he love God, whom he seeth not?

21 ^dAnd this commandment we have from God, that he who loveth God, love also his brother.

^d John xiii. 84. and xv. 12. Ephes. v. 2.

and it being tedious to his disciples to hear always the same thing, they desired some other instruction, to whom (says S. Jerom) he gave this answer, worthy of S. John: that this was the precept of our Lord, and that if complied with, it was sufficient.—Charity is of God, is love, is the fountain and source of all goodness and mercy, infinitely good in himself, and in his love and mercy towards mankind. This love and charity of God hath appeared by his sending his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. See Jo. i. 14.—Thus God having first loved us, (v. 10) when we were sinners, and his enemies, let us not be so ungrateful as not to love him, and to love one another after his example. Wi.

VER. 12. No man hath seen God at any time. No mortal man hath seen God and the perfections of his divine Majesty in such a manner as the blessed in heaven, but we have powerful motives to love and serve him, and to love our neighbour for his sake. Wi.

VER. 17. The charity of God (which may either signify the love by which we love God, or by which God loves us) perfected with us, or in us, and so possesseth our souls, as to give us an humble confidence of our salvation, when we shall appear before his tribunal at the day of judgment: because as he is, we also are in this world. These words are differently expounded. They may signify, that as God is always loving us, and giving us marks and effects of his love, so we in this world by his grace are always loving him and our neighbour, and increasing in this love, which gives us a confidence of our salvation. Or they may bear this sense, that as Jesus Christ was suffering in this world for us, so we are suffering for his sake. Wi.

VER. 18. Fear is not in charity, &c. By the fear, which a perfect charity and love of God excludes, we may understand a fear of temporal losses in this world, of the loss of goods, of banishment, of torments, of death itself, which the love of God made so many glorious martyrs contend; or an anxious servile fear of punishment in the next world, for the more perfect charity and the love of God is, so much the more doth it banish this imperfect and servile fear; but as perfect charity does not exclude a love, and constant desire of loving God as our last end, for whose enjoyment we were created, so it does not exclude a fear of displeasing, offending, and losing him by sin. Wi.—Perfect charity, or love, banisheth human fear, that is, the fear of men; as also all perplexing fear, which makes men mistrust or despair of God's mercy; and that kind of servile fear, which makes them fear the punishment of sin more than the offence offered to God. But it no way excludes the wholesome fear of God's judgments, so often recommended in holy writ, nor that fear and trembling with which we are told to work out our salvation. Phil. ii. 12. Ch.

VER. 20. He that loveth not his brother, whom he seeth, how can he love God, whom he seeth not? By this is signified, that it is more easy and natural to love the things that we see, and that enter by the senses. Pretend not then to love the invisible God, whose perfections are hidden from you in this life, unless you love your brother whom you see. But he adds another reason to prove that no man can love God unless he love his brother; because, saith he, (v. 21.) this is God's express command, that he who loveth God love also his brother: so that a man cannot love God unless he also love his neighbour. Wi.

* V. 2. Qui solvit Jesum. Karatus is read in some MSS. and must have been the reading which the Latin interpreter followed. We read the same in S. Iren. l. 3. c. xviii. p. 197. Ed. Feuardentii; in Tertul. l. 5. cont. Marcion. c. (1621)

CHAP. V.

Of them that are born of God, and of true charity. Faith overcomes the world. Three that bear witness to Christ. Of faith in his name, and of sin that is, and is not to death.

EVERY one who believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God. And every one that loveth him that begot, loveth him also who was born of him.

2 In this we know that we love the children of God, when we love God and keep his commandments.

3 For this is the charity of God that we keep his commandments: and his commandments are not heavy.

4 For whatsoever is born of God, overcometh the world: and this is the victory which overcometh the world, our faith.

5 "Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?"

6 This is he that came by water and blood, Jesus Christ; not in water only, but in water and blood. And it is the spirit that testifieth, that Christ is the truth.

7 For there are three that give testimony in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.

8 And there are three that give testimony on earth:

^a 1 Cor. xv. 57.

xvi. p. 481. Ed. Rigaltii; in S. Aug. in his commentary on these words, trac. 6, p. 871.

† V. 8. Et hic est antichristus, καὶ τοῦτο (πνεῦμα) τὸ τὸ ἀντιχρίστου. By the Greek hic cannot agree with the man, and so the construction in Latin must be, hic est ille spiritus antichristi.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. That Jesus is the Christ, the promised Messiah, the Redeemer of the world, is born of God, is made his adoptive son by his grace in baptism. Wi.—Is born of God; that is, is justified, and become a child of God by baptism; which is also to be understood, provided the belief of this fundamental article of the Christian faith be accompanied with all the other conditions, which, by the word of God and his appointment, are also required for justification; such as a general belief of all that God has revealed and promised; hope, love, repentance, and a sincere disposition to keep God's holy law and commandments. Ch.—Loveth him that begot; i. e. the eternal Father.—Loveth him also who was born of him; i. e. loveth him who is his only begotten and eternal Son. Wi.*

VER. 2. In this we know that we love the children of God, (that is, all men, and especially the faithful, who are made his adoptive children) when we love God, and keep his commandments, for these two branches of charity, the love of God and of our neighbour, are inseparable: the one is known and proved by the other. Wi.

VER. 3. And his commandments are not heavy; not burdensome. Not but that they comprehend what seems hard to human frailty, and especially to men carried away with the love of vanities in this world, who think it hard to comply with Christ's doctrine of self-denials, of renouncing their inclinations, of suffering death, sooner than to sin against God, or to renounce their faith; but the love of God, and the promises of an eternal happiness in the next life, with the assistances which God gives them, make the yoke of Christ sweet, and his burden light. See Mat. xi. 30. How different is this doctrine from that of those late heretics, who pretend that God's commandments are impossible, even to just men, when they employ all their endeavours. See the first proposition of Jansenius, and this heresy of Calvin condemned by the council of Trent, sess. 6, cap. xi. can. 18. Wi.

VER. 4. This is the victory which overcometh the world, our faith. That is, a lively faith, working by charity, makes a man victorious over the greatest temptations, and over all the adversaries of his salvation. Wi.—Our faith; Not a bare speculative or dead faith, but a faith working by charity. Gal. v. 6. Ch.

VER. 6. Came by water and blood. The sense seems to be, by water, with which he ordered every one to be baptized and made Christians; 2dly, by his blood shed on the cross for our redemption. Wi.—Blood: not only to wash away our sins by the water of baptism, but by his own blood. Ch.—And it is the Spirit that testifieth that Christ is the truth. By the Spirit, which is not here called the Holy Spirit, or the Holy Ghost, as in the next verse, is either meant the Spirit or soul of Christ, which dying he recommended into the hands of his Father, and which shewed that he was truly man, against Cerinthus, and some heretics of those times; or else it may signify the spirit of grace, given in this world to the faithful, in the same sense as S. Paul says, (Rom. viii. 16.) that the Spirit himself giveth testimony to our Spirit, that we are the sons of God: and of which may be understood what is said here, (v. 10.) He that believeth in the Son of God, hath the testimony of God in himself. Wi.

VER. 7. There are three that give testimony in heaven: the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one: i. e. one in nature, in substance, and in all perfections, in the same sense as when Christ himself said, (Jo. x. 30.)

the spirit, and water, and blood: and these three are one.

9 If we receive the testimony of men, the testimony of God is greater: for this is the testimony of God, which is greater, because he hath testified of his Son.

10 "He that believeth in the Son of God, hath the testimony of God in himself. He that believeth not the Son, maketh him a liar: because he believeth not in the testimony which God hath testified of his Son."

11 And this is the testimony, that God hath given to us eternal life: and this life is in his Son.

12 He that hath the Son, hath life: he that hath not the Son, hath not life.

13 These things I write to you, that you may know that you have eternal life, who believe in the name of the Son of God.

14 And this is the confidence which we have in him: that whatsoever we shall ask, according to his will, he heareth us.

15 And we know that he heareth us whatsoever we ask: we know that we have the petitions which we request of him.

16 He that knoweth his brother to sin a sin which is not unto death, let him ask, and life shall be given to ^b John iii. 36.

I and the Father are one, or one thing. The Socinians object that this verse is wanting in many Greek manuscripts; and even Erasmus in one edition, and Mr. Simon in his Critica, have questioned it, or rejected it, as a false reading, but without any sufficient proofs and grounds, as hath been shewn by many learned Catholics, and also by Protestant writers, who receive in their translations this verse as canonical. It is easy to account for the omission of this verse; for as both the seventh and eighth verse, begin and end with the same words, this gave occasion to the oversight and omission of the transcribers, whereas it is not credible that such a whole verse could be added. And that it was only by the mistake and oversight of transcribers may further appear, because we find part of the seventh verse, to wit, and these three are one, cited by Tertul. 1. cont. Praxeum. c. xxiii. p. 515. Ed. Rig. and twice by Cyprian, Epist. 78. ad Jutta-num. p. 125. Ed. Rig. in the Oxford Edition, p. 310. and in his Treatise de Unit. Ecclesiae, p. 181. Ed. Rigal. and in the Oxford Ed. p. 79, where also Dr. Fell defends this verse of S. John to be genuine. Tertul. and Cyp. wrote long before the dispute with the Arians. The Socinians also object that this passage is not brought by S. Athanasius and some other fathers against the Arians, which they could scarce have omitted had they read this verse, but this only proves that this omission had happened in some MSS. in their time, or, as some conjecture, that the Arians had corrupted some copies. S. Fulgentius made use of it against the Arians, and also others about that time. See the Benedictines of S. Maur against Mr. Simon, in the first tome of S. Jerom, p. 1670. Both Catholics and Protestants, after a diligent examination, have received this verse, which is found in the best MSS. See Greek Test. at Amsterdam, an. 1711. The three divine Persons, who are present everywhere, though said to be in heaven, gave testimony concerning Christ. The Father by a voice from heaven, both at his baptism (Mat. iii. 17.) and at his transfiguration, (Mat. xvii. 5.) saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased, hear ye him;" and also by all the miracles wrought by the same power of all the three divine Persons. 2. The Son testified to the Jews on many occasions, that he was sent from God, that he was the only Son of God, that he and his Father were one, &c. as in the annot. on John iii. The Holy Ghost confirmed the same, particularly by coming down upon the disciples on the day of Pentecost, and inspiring them to teach the same doctrine concerning Jesus Christ. Wi.—An express proof of the three distinct persons and unity of nature and essence in the blessed Trinity.

VER. 8. And there are three that give testimony on earth: the Spirit, the water, and the blood; and these three are one. This is a repetition of what was before said, v. 6, to be expounded in the same manner. But when it is added, these three are one, the sense is, that they witness one and the same truth. Wi.—As the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, all bear witness to Christ's divinity; so the spirit, which he yielded up, crying out with a loud voice upon the cross, and the water and blood that issued from his side, bear witness to his humanity and are one; that is, all agree in one testimony. Ch.

VER. 10. He that believeth not the Son, maketh him (God) a liar, by refusing to believe the testimonies given by the three divine Persons, that Jesus was the Messiah and the true Son of God, by whom eternal life is obtained and promised to all that comply with his doctrine. In him we have also this lively confidence, that we shall obtain whatever we ask, according to his will, when we ask what is for our good with perseverance and in the manner we ought. And this we know and have experience of, by having obtained the petitions that we have made. Wi.

VER. 16. A sin which is not unto death . . . and life shall be given to him. It is hard to determine what S. John here calls a sin which is not unto death, and a sin which is unto death. The difference cannot be the same as betwixt him, that sinneth not to death. There is a sin unto death; I do not say that any one should ask for it.

17 All iniquity is sin: and there is a sin unto death.

18 We know that every one, who is born of God, sinneth not: but the generation of God preserveth him, and the wicked one toucheth him not.

* Luke xxiv. 45.

sins that are called venial and mortal; for he says, that if a man pray for his brother who commits a sin that is not unto death, life shall be given to him: therefore such a one had before lost the life of grace, and been guilty of what is commonly called a mortal sin. And when he speaks of a sin that is unto death, and adds these words, I do not say that any one should ask for that sin, it cannot be supposed that S. John would say this of every mortal sin, but only of some heinous sins which are very seldom remitted, because such sinners very seldom repent. By a sin therefore which is not unto death, interpreters commonly understand a wilful apostasy from the faith, and from the known truth, when a sinner hardened by his own ingratitude becomes deaf to all admonitions, will do nothing for himself, but runs on to final impenitence. Nor yet does S. John say that such a sin is never remitted, or cannot be remitted, but only has these words, I do not say that any one should ask for the remission of that sin; that is, though we must pray for all sinners whatsoever, yet man cannot pray for such sinners with such a confidence of obtaining always their petitions, as S. John said before, v. 14. Whatever exposition we follow on this verse, our faith teaches us from the holy Scriptures, that God desires not the death of any sinner, but that he be converted and live. See Ezech. xxxiii. 11. Though men's "sins be as the scarlet, they shall be made as white as snow." Isaias i. 18. It is the will of God that every one come to the knowledge of truth and be saved. See John vi. 40. There is no sin so great but which God is willing to forgive, and has left power in his Church to remit the most enormous sins; so that no sinner need despair of pardon, nor will any sinner perish but by his own fault. Wi.—A sin unto death. Some understand this of final impenitence, or of dying in mortal sin, which is the only sin that never can be remitted; but, it is probable, he may also comprise under this name the sin of apostasy from the faith, and some other such heinous sins as are seldom and hardly remitted: and therefore he gives little encouragement to such as pray for these sinners, to expect what they ask. Ch.

V. 17. All iniquity is sin. The sense here is, that sin is always an injury or an injustice done to God; but though every sin implies such an injury and an offence against God, yet there are different degrees in such injuries, which are not always such an injustice as S. John calls the sin unto death. W

19 We know that we are of God; and the whole world is seated in wickedness.

20 And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us understanding, that we may know the true God, and may be in his true Son. He is the true God, and eternal life.

21 Little children, keep yourselves from idols. Amen.

VER. 18. Sinneth not. See the annotation on chap. iii. 6. &c. Ch.—The generation of God preserveth him, (i. e. the grace of adoption, as long as it remains in the soul; see C. iii. 9.) and the wicked one (i. e. the devil) toucheth him not. Wi.

VER. 19. And the whole world is seated in wickedness; ¶ i. e. a great part of the world. It may also signify, is under the wicked one; meaning the devil, who is elsewhere called the prince of this world, that is, of all the wicked. Jo. xii. 31. Wi.

VER. 20. And may be in his true Son. This is the true God, and eternal life. Which words are a clear proof of Christ's divinity, and as such made use of by the ancient Fathers.

VER. 21. Keep yourselves from idols. An admonition to the new converted Christians, lest, conversing with heathens and idolaters, they might fall back into the sin of idolatry, which may be the sin unto death here mentioned by S. John. Wi.

* V. 1. Eum qui genuit, τὸν γεννησαντα, generantem; which, in English, may be translated, the Father.

† V. 6. Quoniam Christus est veritas; in most Greek copies is now read, ἐν τῷ πνεύματι ἵστι ἡ ἀλήθεια, quoniam Spiritus est veritas.

‡ V. 8. Hi tres unum sunt. Divers Greek copies, εἰς ἓν εἶεν, in unum sunt; and so the Prot. translation hath, and these three agree in one; though in the seventh verse they follow the MSS. which there have, are one, καὶ οἱ τρεῖς ἐν εἰς.

§ V. 17. Omnis iniquitas, πάντα ἀδικία, properly injustitia. It is not here ἀνομία, as C. iii. 4.

|| V. 18. Sed generatio Dei: Some MSS. γίνεαις; others, ὁ γεννηθεὶς ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, qui genitus est ex Deo.

¶ V. 19. In maligno positus est, ἐν τῷ πονηρῷ αἵραις.

 V. 20. In vero Filio ejus, hic est verus Deus, ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ, ὁ αἰὶς ἵστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς Θεός, with the Greek article. S. Athan. S. Amb. S. Hilar. S. Aug. S. Cyr. by this sentence prove Christ truly God. See Petavius, l. 2. de Trin. c. ix. num. 8.

THE SECOND EPISTLE OF S. JOHN, THE APOSTLE.

THIS Second and Third Epistles of S. John were not at first received as canonical by all Churches. See Euseb. and S. Jerom, in Catalogo, and Tillemont, art. 9, on S. John, p. 349. The style sufficiently shews they were written by S. John the evangelist. The time and place whence they were written is uncertain. The design in both is to exhort those he writes to, to stand firm in the faith of Christ against all seducing heretics, to love one another, &c. Wi.—But though these last two Epistles of the beloved apostle were frequently contested till the fourth or fifth century, from that period they have been regularly received; and even during the first ages, they were frequently cited by many of the holy Fathers as Catholic Scripture. This short Epistle may still be divided into two parts. The first, a congratulation to the lady he styles Elect, in which he felicitates her on account of the faith and virtue he had discovered in some of her children. He exhorts both them and their mother to be more and more confirmed in charity, as the essential and fundamental precept of Christianity, and of which the unequivocal mark is the observance of the other commandments. This part is from the beginning to v. 6, inclusive. The second, which begins with v. 7, and continues to the end, is to put them on their guard against the errors of Simon, of Cerinthus, of the Gnostics, and of Basilides, and prescribes the manner how they are to behave themselves towards these seducers. Though the time and place be uncertain, there is some appearance that it was written from Ephesus, when the apostle governed this Church and all the others of Asia.

He recommends walking in truth, loving one another, and to beware of false teachers.

THE ancient, to the lady Elect and her children, whom I love in truth, and not I only, but also all they who have known the truth,

2 For the sake of the truth, which abideth in us, and shall be with us for ever.

CHAP. I. VER. 1. The ancient priest, or bishop. See 1 Pet. v. 1.—To the lady Elect. Some conjecture that elect might be the name of a family, or of a particular church; but the common opinion is, that it was the proper name of a virtuous lady.—Whom I love in truth, with a sincere Christian charity as well as her children. By reason of the truth, or the true faith, that abideth in us. Wi.

3 Grace, mercy, and peace be with you, from God the Father, and from Christ Jesus, the Son of the Father, in truth, and charity.

4 I was exceeding glad, that I found of thy children walking in truth, as we have received a commandment from the Father.

5 And now I beseech thee, lady, not as writing a new

VER. 6. This is the rule of a Christian and Catholic to walk in that faith and worship which he hath received from the beginning, and which we now call according to the Scriptures, the tradition of the apostles. Thus shall the faithful avoid seducers that start up in every age, teaching new doctrines. B.

VER. 7. Many seducers are gone out into the world; antichristia, who confess (1623) commandment to thee, but that which we have had from the beginning, *that we love one another.

6 And this is charity, that we walk according to his commandments. For this is the commandment, that as you have heard from the beginning, you should walk in it:

7 For many seducers are gone out into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh: this is a seducer and an antichrist.

8 Look to yourselves, that you lose not the things which you have wrought: but that you may receive a full reward.

* John xiii. 34. and xv. 12.

not Christ to have come in the flesh. These were the disciples of Simon, the Cerinthians, Ebionites, &c. See 1 John ii. 18. Wi.

VER. 8-9. We here see the reward for adhering to the Catholic faith, and the condemnation for revolting from the received truth. The apostles, and their lawful successors in the ministry, determine the true doctrine in points which innovators call into controversy, when being once done and declared to the faithful, they need no other mark to know a false teacher, but that he cometh with another doctrine than that which has been delivered.

VER. 10 Nor say to him, Hail: or peace be to you, God speed you, all hail;

9 Every one who recedeth, and continueth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God: he that continueth in the doctrine, he hath both the Father and the Son.

10 If any man come to you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into the house, nor say to him, Hail.

11 For he that saith to him, Hail, communicateth with his wicked works.

12 Having more things to write unto you, I would not by paper and ink: for I hope that I shall be with you, and speak face to face: that your joy may be full.

13 The children of thy sister Elect salute thee.

or use any form of saluting him, as you would a friend, much less receive or entertain him in your house: this admonition is in general to forewarn persons of the dangers which may arise from a familiarity with heretics, and such as teach evil doctrine. But by this is not forbidden civility, kindness, and a sincere charity for all men, by which we ought to wish and pray for the eternal salvation of every one. I translate Ave by peace be to you, because this was the usual salutation among the Jews, and in those times, as we see Luke xxiv. and John xx.

THE THIRD EPISTLE OF S. JOHN, THE APOSTLE.

S. JOHN commends Gaius for his faith, charity, and hospitality towards strangers and the ministers of the gospel, to whom he would have every one to give a kind reception, and such charitable assistance as they can afford, and which others want. Wi.—Gaius, to whom this epistle is addressed, is apparently one of the two disciples of S. Paul, who bore this name. The best known is that of Corinth, with whom S. Paul lodged, and who had been converted and baptized by S. Paul. Others, with greater probability, suppose it was Gaius, of Derbe, mentioned in Acts xx. 4. All that we know for certain of this Gaius is, that he was a great friend of S. John, that he exercised hospitality with great zeal and generosity, notwithstanding the harshness and severity of Diotrephes, who appears to have been his bishop, and who was not willing that hospitality should be shewn to the brethren converted from Judaism. S. John promises to visit Gaius, and to reprimand Diotrephes. There is great probability that this letter was carried by the converted Jews, who travelled to diffuse the gospel, and who made a religious point not to enter among the Gentiles, and not to receive any thing from them. It may then be considered as a recommendatory letter in favour of these apostolic men. It appears that great pains were taken to remove the antipathy that existed between these two parties, even after their conversion. The same seeds of division are discernible in S. Paul's epistles between the Jews and the converted Gentiles: and one of the earliest concerns of this apostle was, to suppress in the Jews all sentiments of vanity and self-sufficiency, which made them prefer themselves to the Gentiles; and in Gentiles a different kind of pride, which caused them to despise the Jews. In the first part of this letter S. John congratulates Gaius on his good works, and recommends to him certain evangelical preachers, who were to deliver him this letter as they called upon him, v. 1, 8. In the second part he complains of Diotrephes, who affected independence, and proposes to Gaius the example of Demetrius, the faithful servant of Jesus Christ, v. 9. ad finem.

He praises Gaius for his walking in truth, and for his charity: complains of the bad conduct of Diotrephes, and gives a good testimony to Demetrius.

THE ancient to the dearly beloved Gaius, whom I love in truth.

2 Dearly beloved, concerning all things I make my prayer that thou mayest prosper, and enjoy health, as thy soul doth prosperously.

3 I was exceeding glad when the brethren came, and gave testimony to the truth in thee, even as thou walkest in truth.

4 I have no greater grace than this, to hear that my children walk in truth.

CHAP. I. VER. 4. No greater grace. That is, nothing that gives me greater joy and satisfaction. Ch

VER. 7. Taking nothing of the Gentiles. These ministers and preachers of the gospel, whom S. John recommends, took care, as S. Paul did, not to take any thing of the Gentiles, to whom they preached, lest they should be thought

5 Dearly beloved, thou dost faithfully whatsoever thou dost for the brethren, and that for strangers,

6 Who have given testimony of thy charity in the sight of the church: whom, thou shalt do well, to bring forward on their way in a manner worthy of God.

7 Because, for his name's sake they went forth, taking nothing of the Gentiles.

8 We, therefore, ought to receive such: that we may be fellow-helpers of the truth.

9 I had written perhaps to the church: but Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence among them, doth not receive us.

10 Wherefore, if I come, I will admonish his works to preach to get money by it. But he puts Gaius in mind, that by assisting such men, he would become a fellow labourer in the gospel, and have a share in their reward. Wi.

VER. 9-10. Diotrephes . . . doth not receive us, nor those we recommend, but prattles and talks against me. We know no more of this man, nor of Demetrius, which he doth, prating against us with malicious words: and as if these things were not enough for him, neither doth he himself receive the brethren: and those that do receive them he forbiddeth, and casteth out of the church.

11 Dearly beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. He that doth good, is of God: he that doth evil, hath not seen God.

of whom S. John gives so favourable a character. Wi.—It seemeth, saith Ven. Bede, that he was an arch heretic, or proud sect master—ἡγεμὼν. I will rebuke them, and make them known to be wicked. Bede.

12 To Demetrius testimony is given by all, and by the truth itself, yea, and we also give testimony: and thou knowest that our testimony is true.

13 I had many things to write unto thee: but I would not by ink and pen write to thee.

14 But I hope speedily to see thee, and we will speak face to face. Peace be to thee. Our friends salute thee. Salute the friends by name.

VER. 14. This was a very usual salutation among the Jews, by which they wished every possible blessing might come upon their friends they thus saluted. Menochius.

THE CATHOLIC EPISTLE OF S. JUDE, THE APOSTLE.

THIS Epistle, as we find by Euseb. (l. iii. Hist. c. xxv.) and S. Jerom. (in Catal.) was not everywhere received as canonical till about the end of the fourth age. It is cited by Origen, hom. vii. in Josue; by Tertul. l. de cultu fœminarum; by Clem. Alex. l. iii. Pædag.; by S. Athan. in Synopsi; by S. Greg. Naz. Carm. xxxiv.; by S. Cyr. of Jerusalem, Catech. 4ta.; by the councils of Laodicea and the third council of Carthage; by S. Aug. l. ii. de Doct. Christiana, c. viii. See Tillemont, and Nat. Alex. in his preface to this epistle. The time when it was written is uncertain, only it is insinuated v. 17 that few of the apostles were then living, perhaps only S. John. The design was to give all Christians a horror of the detestable doctrine and infamous practices of the Simonites, Nicolaites, and such heretics, who having the name of Christians, were become a scandal to religion and to all mankind, as may be seen in S. Irenæus and S. Epiphanius. He copies in a manner what S. Peter had written in his third Epistle, C. ii. Wi.—S. Jude in the first part of his Epistle, (v. 1 to 16) writes against certain heretics of his day, known in history by the name of Gnostics, whose extravagant opinions and shameful and criminal disorders have been described by S. Epiphanius, S. Irenæus, and other Fathers. In the second part, he seems to have principally in view such as were to arise in the latter times; and he exhorts such of the faithful as should live to see those days, to remain firm in the faith which they had received, applying themselves to prayer, persevering in charity, and awaiting the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ and eternal life, which He has promised them. S. Jude in thus exerting himself, like S. Peter, against the first and last heresies, has invincibly established the perpetuity of the Catholic Church. With regard to the doubts of certain authors relative to the authenticity of this Epistle, we can oppose Origen, who says that S. Jude wrote a letter, which in the few lines it contains, includes discourses full of force and heavenly grace—Ἰούδας ἐγράψεν ἐπιστολὴν ὀλιγοστιχὸν μὲν, πεπληρομένην δὲ τῶν τῆς ἐκκλησίας χάριτος ὑψηλῶν λόγων.—And S. Epiphanius says, that he believed the Holy Ghost inspired S. Jude with the design of writing against the Gnostics in the letter he has left us. . . . We find it inserted in the ancient catalogues of sacred Scripture, as in that of the council of Laodicea, can. lx; of Carthage, can. xlvii; nor can there be any reasonable doubt at present for admitting it into the canon of Scripture. It is received by the Catholic Church, and has been received ever since the fourth age. What gave doubts relative to the authenticity of this Epistle, was the author's quoting a prophecy of Enoch, which seemed to have been taken from a spurious work published under the name of this patriarch, and a fact concerning the death of Moses, not found in the canonical books of the Old Testament; but the apostle might have cited the prophecy of Enoch, and the fact concerning Moses, on the faith of some ancient tradition, without a reference to any book. Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. l. iii. c. xxv.) bears testimony that this Epistle, though not frequently cited by the ancients, was publicly read in many Churches. Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, and the later Fathers, have admitted it as a part of canonical Scripture. Hence Luther, the Centuriators of Magdeburg, and the Anabaptists, have no just reason to look upon this Epistle as doubtful. Le Clerc, in his Hist. Eccles. (an. 90.) acts more candidly in admitting it without any scruple. As for the exception Grotius takes from S. Jude not assuming the quality of apostle, and from its not being universally received in the first ages, we can answer, that S. Peter, S. Paul, S. John, did not take the title of apostles at the head of all their letters, and that some Churches have doubted at first of the authenticity of other writings, which have afterwards been universally acknowledged as authentic and canonical.

He exhorts them to stand to the faith first delivered to them; and to beware of heretics.

JUDE, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James: to them that are beloved in God the Father, and preserved in Jesus Christ, and called.

2 Mercy unto you, and peace and charity be fulfilled.

3 Dearly beloved, taking all care to write to you concerning your common salvation, I was under a

CHAP. I. VER. 1. And brother of James, the apostle and bishop of Jerusalem; he might have added, the brother of Christ, as he and the same S. James are so styled; i. e. cousin Germans.—And called. That is, to all converted to the faith of Christ, whether they were Jews or Gentiles. Wi.

VER. 3. Being very solicitous to discharge my duty of an apostle, in writing and instructing you in the common concern of your salvation, I judge it necessary at present to write this letter, to exhort you to contend earnestly,* and stand firm in the Christian faith. Wi.

VER. 4. For there have crept in some men, impious men, (who were of old foretold that they should fall into this condemnation, by their own obdurate malice) the disciples of Simon, and the Nicolaites, who endeavour to turn the grace of our God, and the Christian liberty into all manner of infamous lasciviousness; who, by their ridiculous fables, deny the only sovereign Ruler, and our Lord Jesus Christ. Some by the only sovereign, or master of all things, under-necessity to write to you: to beseech you to contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints.

4 For there have crept in some men, (who were written of long ago unto this judgment) impious, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only sovereign Ruler, and our Lord Jesus Christ.

5 But I will admonish you, that once knew all stand God the Father, and our Lord Jesus Christ, who, according to his divine Person, is the same God, Master, and Lord with him, and the Holy Ghost. But many interpreters think the true sense and construction is this, denying Jesus Christ, our only sovereign master, § and Lord. The reasons for this exposition are: 1. That this verse of S. Jude seems correspondent to that of S. Peter (2 Ep. ii. 1.) where he says of the same heretics, that they deny the Lord who bought them, or deny him that bought them, to be Lord. 2. Because the disciples of Simon denied Jesus Christ to be truly Lord God, but denied not this of the Father. 3. Because the Greek text seems to denote one and the same to be the sovereign master and the Lord. See Cornet. a Lapide. Wi.

VER. 5. But I will admonish you, that once (that is, some time ago, when you were converted and instructed) knew all things that were necessary as to the Christian faith, I will then put you in mind of the judgments and chastisements that such sinners may expect, that Jesus, not as man, but as God, hav-these things, that Jesus, having saved the people out of the land of Egypt: ^adid afterwards destroy those, who believed not:

6 And the angels, who kept not their principality, but forsook their own habitation, ^bhe hath reserved in everlasting chains under darkness, unto the judgment of the great day.

7 As Sodom and Gomorrha, and the neighbouring cities, in like manner having given themselves over to fornication, and going after other flesh, were made an example, suffering the punishment of eternal fire.

8 In like manner these men also defile the flesh, and despise dominion, and blaspheme majesty.

9 ^cWhen Michael, the Archangel, disputing with the devil, contended about the body of Moses, he durst not bring a judgment of blasphemy: but said: The Lord command thee.

10 But these men blaspheme whatsoever things they know not: and what things soever they naturally know, like dumb beasts, in these they are corrupted.

11 Wo to them, for they have gone in the way of ^dCain, and have poured out themselves after the ^eerror of Balaam for a reward, ^fand have perished in the contradiction of Core:

12 These are spots in their banquets, feasting together without fear, feeding themselves, ^gclouds without water which are carried about by winds, trees of the autumn, unfruitful, twice dead, plucked up by the roots,

13 Raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own confusion, wandering stars: to whom the storm of darkness is reserved for ever.

14 Now of these Enoch also, the seventh from Adam, prophesied, saying: ^hBehold, the Lord cometh with thousands of his saints,

15 To execute judgment upon all, and to reprove all the impious for all the works of their impiety, whereby they have done impiously, and of all the hard things which impious sinners have spoken against God.

16 These are murmurers full of complaints, walking according to their own desires, ⁱand their mouth speaketh proud things, admiring persons for gain's sake.

17 But you, dearly beloved, be mindful of the words, ^kwhich have been spoken before by the apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ, 18 Who told you, that in the last time there should come mockers, walking according to their own desires in impieties.

19 These are they, who separate themselves, sensual men, having not the spirit.

20 But you, dearly beloved, building yourselves up on your most holy faith, praying in the Holy Ghost, 21 Keep yourselves in the love of God, waiting for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto life everlasting.

^a Num. xiv. 37.—^b 2 Pet. ii. 4. Gen. xix. 20.—^c Zach. iii. 2.

^d Gen. iv. 8.—^e Num. xxii. 23.

^f Num. xvi. 32.—^g 2 Pet. ii. 17.—^h Apoc. i. 7.—ⁱ Pa. xvi. 10.—^j 1 Tim. iv. 2.
^k 2 Tim. iii. 1. 2 Pet. iii. 3.

ing saved the people of Israel from their slavery in Egypt, did afterwards on several occasions punish and destroy those among them, who believed not; who were rebellious and incredulous to his promises. Wi.—The Greek, and after it the Protestant version, have the Lord saved; the Vulgate has Jesus, which signifies Saviour, and may in this place be understood of the Word, who from his incarnation took the name of Jesus. V.—Menochius says it means Josue, who is thus styled by the seventy interpreters.

VER. 6-7. Principality. That is, the state in which they were first created, their original dignity. Ch.—Having given themselves over to fornication, or to excessive uncleanness.—Going after other flesh, and seeking unnatural lusts, with those of the same sex. Wi.—Impurity punished by fire and sulphur. Fire is a punishment proportioned to the criminal passion of the voluptuous. That of Sodom was most dreadful, but then it was of short duration. There is another fire that will never be extinguished.

VER. 8. In like manner these men (heretics) also defile the flesh with their horrid abominations, despise just dominion, all lawful authority, as well ecclesiastical as civil; blaspheme majesty, speak ill, and rail both against the majesty of God, and those whom he hath invested with power derived from him. Wi.—Blaspheme, &c. Speak evil of them that are in dignity; and even utter blasphemies against the divine majesty. Ch.—The justice of God generally punishes the pride of heart, by abandoning the body to shameful and humiliating abominations, and this we observe in the chief heresiarchs. Their pride makes them rebel against authority; and when once they have got free of this yoke, every other restraint is laughed at.

VER. 9. When Michael, &c. We do not find this in any other canonical Scripture, so that S. Jude must either have had it from some tradition among the Jews, or from some writing which he, by the Spirit of God, knew to be true. It is not expressed on what account this dispute or strife was, betwixt S. Michael and the devil, about the body of Moses. The common interpretation is, that S. Michael conveyed the body of Moses out of the way, and from the knowledge of the Israelites, lest they should pay it to some idolatrous worship; whereas the devil, for that end, would have it buried, so that the people might know the place and adore it. See Deut. xxiv. 6. where it is said, "and no man hath known of his sepulchre until this present day." Wi.—Contended about the body, &c. This contention, which is no where else mentioned in holy writ, was originally known by revelation, and transmitted by tradition. It is thought the occasion of it was, that the devil would have had the body buried in such a place and manner, as to be worshipped by the Jews with divine honours.—Command thee; or, rebuke thee. Ch.

VER. 10. These men blaspheme whatsoever things they know not, as it is the custom of false and ignorant teachers: and as to things which they know by their senses, in these they are corrupted, following, like brute beasts, their natural lusts and appetites. Wi.

VER. 11. They have imitated, or gone in the way of Cain, who murdered his brother; and they have a mortal hatred against the faithful. They have imitated Balaam†† and his covetousness, (see 2 Peter ii. 15.) and Core, (Num. xvi.) who with others opposed Moses; and as these sinners perished, so will they. Wi.—Way, &c. Heretics follow the way of Cain, by murdering the souls of their (1626) brethren; the way of Balaam by putting a scandal before the people of God, for their own private ends; and the way of Core or Korah, by their opposition to the church governors of divine appointment. Ch.

VER. 12-13. These are spots in their banquets; (see 2 Pet. ii. 13.) in which they commit unheard of abominations, twice dead, which signifies no more than quite dead, clouds without water, &c. All these metaphors are to represent the corrupt manners of these heretics. Wi.

VER. 14. Enoch, &c. Though the ancient writers mention an apocryphal book of Enoch's prophecies, yet S. Jude might know by tradition, or by the Spirit of God, what Enoch truly prophesied concerning God's coming with thousands of his saints, to judge, condemn, and punish the wicked for their impieties and blasphemies. Wi.—Prophecies. This prophecy was either known by tradition, or from some book that is since lost. Ch.

VER. 15. Nothing more terrible than a God avenging in the majesty of his power his own cause. Then the impious libertine, in proportion as he has studied to extinguish in himself and to stifle in others the light of faith, the more shall he be confounded and overwhelmed with the glory of God in the day of just retribution.

VER. 16. Speaketh proud things, admiring persons for gain's sake. It is a part of the character of these heretics to seem to admire and flatter others when they can gain by it. Wi.

VER. 17. Be mindful, &c. He now exhorts the faithful to remain steadfast in the belief and practice of what they had heard from the apostles, who had also foretold that in after times (lit. in the last time,)†† there should be false teachers, scoffing and ridiculing all revealed truths, abandoning themselves to their passions and lusts, who separate themselves from the Catholic communion by heresies and schisms; sensual men,§§ carried away, and enslaved by the pleasures of the senses. Wi.

VER. 20-21. Building yourselves. That is, raising by your actions a spiritual building, founded 1. upon faith; 2. on the love of God; 3. upon hope, whilst you are awaiting for the mercies of God, and the reward of eternal life; 4. joined with the great duty of prayer. Wi.

VER. 22. And some indeed reprove, being judged. He gives them another instruction to practise charity in endeavouring to convert their neighbour, where they will meet with three sorts of persons. 1. With persons obstinate in their errors and sins, these may be said to be already judged and condemned, they are to be sharply reprehended, reprov'd, and, if possible, convinced of their errors. 2. As to others, you must endeavour to save them, by snatching them as it were out of the fire, from the ruin they stand in great danger of. 3. You must have compassion on others in great fear, when you see them, through ignorance or frailty, in danger of being drawn into the snares of these heretics; with these you must deal more gently and mildly, with a charitable compassion, hating always, and teaching others to hate the carnal coat, which is defiled, their sensual and corrupt manners, that defile both the soul and body. Wi.

VER. 24-25. Now to him, &c. S. Jude concludes his epistle with this doxology of praising God, and praying to the only God, our Saviour, which may either signify God the Father, or God as equally agreeing to all the Three Persons, who are equally the cause of Christ's incarnation and man's salvation through Jesus 22 And some indeed reprove, being judged.

23 But others save, snatching them out of the fire. And on others have compassion in fear: hating also the spotted garment, which is carnal.

24 Now to him, who is able to preserve you without sin, and to present you spotless before the presence of Christ, our Lord, who being God from eternity, took upon him our human nature, that he might become our Redeemer. Wi.—To whom, O Lord, can we give the glory of our salvation, unless to thee, to whom all is due? To whom can we consecrate our hearts, but to to him who has redeemed them with his blood, sanctified them by his Spirit, and who is to make them happy by his glory? Reign there, O Lord, as on thy throne, now by thy love; that you may reign there hereafter with glory, magnificence, and sovereignty in heaven.

* V. 8. To contend earnestly, sup-er-certari, which has an active sense, of which there are divers examples. See Estius and P. Alleman, επαγασσασθαι.

† V. 4. Who were foretold; præscripti, προεγγραμμένοι, prædicti. It is not well translated appointed, by Mr. N., especialy since Calvin and Beza pretended, from this expression, that God was the cause of their resisting the truth.

‡ Ibid. Luxuriam ἀσέλγεια.

his glory with exceeding joy in the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ:

25 To the only God our Saviour, through Jesus Christ our Lord, be glory and magnificence, dominion and power before all ages, both now and for ever and ever. Amen.

§ Ibid. Solum Dominatorem, & Dominum nostrum, Jesum Christum negantes. The ordinary Greek τὸν μόνον δεσπότην Θεόν, καὶ Κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἀρνούμενοι.

|| V. 5. Scientes semel omnia, εἰδότας ὅσα ἔειπεν. Semel, pro jamdudum, says Estius.

¶ Ibid. Quoniam Jesus, some would have here meant Josue; they seem not to reflect, that it was not Josue, but Moses that saved the people out of Egypt.

 V. 6-7. Given themselves over to fornication, exornicatio, ἐκπαυσσασθαι, excessive fornications, the signification being stronger, and increased by ἐκ.

†† V. 11. Errore Balaam mercede effusi sunt, ἐλεχόμενοι, decepti sunt simili avaritia & spe mercedis.

‡† V. 17. In novissimo tempore, ἐν ἑσχάτῳ χρόνῳ, i. e. in this last age of the world.

§§ Ibid. Animales, ψυχικοί, ab anima. Tertullian turned Montanist, called the Catholics, Psychicos.

THE APOCALYPSE OF S. JOHN, THE APOSTLE.

IGNORANT some in the first ages doubted whether this book was canonical, and who was the author of it, (see Euseb. l. 7. Hist. c. xxv.) yet it is certain much the greater part of the ancient fathers acknowledged both that it was a part of the canon, and that it was written by S. John, the apostle and evangelist. See Tillemont in his ninth note upon S. John, where he cites S. Justin, S. Irenæus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertull. S. Cyp. S. Athan. Enobius, S. Amb. S. Jerom, S. Aug. &c. It was written in Greek to the churches in Asia, under Domitian, about the year 96 or 97, long after the destruction of Jerusalem, when S. John was banished to the island of Patmos, in the Ægean Sea. It is by some called the prophecy of the New Testament, and the accomplishment of the predictions of all the other prophets, by the first coming of Christ at his incarnation, and by his second coming at the end of the world. As to the time when the chief predictions should come to pass, we have no certainty, as appears by the different opinions, both of the ancient fathers, and late interpreters. Many think that most things set down from the fourth chapter to the end, will not be fulfilled till a little time before the end of the world. Others are of an opinion, that a great part of them, and particularly the fall of the wicked Babylon, happened at the destruction of paganism, by the destruction of heathen Rome, and its persecuting heathen emperors. Of these interpretations, see Aleazar in his long commentary, the learned Bossuet, bishop of Meaux, in his treatise on this book, and P. Alleman, in his notes on the same Apocalypse, tom. xii, who, in his preface, says, that this in a great measure may be now looked upon as the opinion followed by the learned. In fine, others think that S. John's design was in a mystical way, by metaphors and allegories, to represent the attempts and persecutions of the wicked against the servants of God, the punishments that should in a short time fall upon Babylon, that is, upon all the wicked in general; the eternal happiness and reward which God had reserved for the pious inhabitants of Jerusalem, that is, for his faithful servants, after their short trials and tribulations of this mortal life. In the mean time we meet with many profitable instructions and admonitions, which we may easily enough understand; but we have no certainty, when we apply these predictions to particular events; for as S. Jerom takes notice, the Apocalypse has as many mysteries as words, or rather mysteries in every word. Apocalypsis Joannis tot habet sacramenta quot verba . . . parum dixi, in verbis singulis multiplices latent intelligentie. Ep. ad. Paulin. t. iv. p. 574. Edit. Benedict. Wi.—In the first, second, and third chapters of this book are contained instructions and admonitions which S. John was commanded to write to the seven bishops of the churches in Asia. And in the following chapters, to the end, are contained prophecies of things that are to come to pass in the Church of Christ, particularly towards the end of the world, in the time of antichrist. It was written in Greek, in the island of Patmos, where S. John was in banishment by order of the cruel emperor Domitian, about sixty-four years after our Lord's ascension. Ch.—This is the last in order of the sacred writings, and contains, in twenty-two chapters, revelations, as the name imports, extremely obscure it must be acknowledged, yet undoubtedly of the utmost importance to the Christian Church, if we may judge from the dignity of the author, who was the beloved disciple, or the grandeur and majesty of the ideas, which pervade every chapter of the work. Being a sealed book, or a hidden mystery, in the beginning of the Church, when nothing of this important prophecy had yet been fulfilled, it is no wonder we are deprived of the usual lights which we have hitherto followed in expounding the Scripture, viz. the works of the fathers. So little was it indeed understood at that time, that by many it was long considered as a revelation, and an extravagant composition, though the most learned always looked upon it as an inspired work. One reason, which may have led the faithful to class this among the apocryphal works, was the number of fables and illusions published by the misguided piety of the ignorant. We know at least, that on account of the heresy of Cerinthus, which was filled up with illusion and fanaticism, this book was not circulated among the faithful: a few copies were kept with care in the archives of the Churches, to be perused only by the bishop, or such as he thought not likely to abuse it. With regard to the interpretation of it, it will not be expected that it should be attempted in a work of this kind. We shall therefore only give a short account of the principal commentators, and their plans, that the enlightened reader may consult their works, if he wish to enter deeper into the subject. But it should never be forgotten, that the connection of sublime and prophetic ideas which compose this work, has at all times been a labyrinth, in which the greatest geniuses have lost themselves, and a rock on which most commentators have split, the great Sir Isaac Newton not excepted. Hence Scaliger's praise of Calvin; Calvinus sapuit, quia non scripsit in Apocalypsin. 1. The fathers living before the accomplishment of the events, have of course given us no interpretation. Those, therefore, who have written on it at all, have explained it in a mere moral sense, and drawn from it useful parables and instructions. None of them have given a regular systematic explanation. It must, however, be observed, as a circumstance of some moment, that many of them, particularly SS. Augustine and Jerom, thought the Apocalypse contained prophecies regarding the whole time of the existence of the Church of Christ, till its triumphant state in the new Jerusalem. 2. Among the moderns we have abundant interpreters of the Apocalypse in all the reformed Churches. It has indeed grown into a mania among them, the only difference being their respective degrees of absurdity. This has been to all of them the common quarry, whence they have hewn the stones to cast at their mother Church. For to this day they have continued to disgrace themselves and Christianity, by depicting the Church of Rome as the scarlet woman of Babylon, popery the beast, and the pope antichrist. We must, however, except Grotius and Hammond, who have given historical interpretations, and some few others. 3. Among Catholic expositors stands eminently conspicuous the learned bishop of Meaux, Bossuet. This light of the Gallican Church has improved upon and filled up the outlines which Grotius had only sketched. The first three chapters, according to him, regard only the Churches of Asia, to which they are addressed; the other chapters, to nineteen, have been fulfilled in the persecutions which the Church endured under the pagan emperors. The last three are merely allegorical of the triumphs which the Church finally gained over her persecutors. 4. Du Pin has taken a wider range. The last three chapters regard the final judgment, and the establishment of the Church in heaven. And all the chapters between the first three and last three, are mere general descriptions of persecutions, fall of tyrants, heresies, &c. which shall happen in the Church; represented under the various figures which the rich imagination of S. John supplied. This system certainly removes all difficulties at once, by saving the trouble of comparing each figure with corresponding historical facts; but substitutes a vague and indeterminate sense, which we do not expect in a prophecy. 5. Calmet does not vary a great deal in the outlines with Bossuet; but their applications of the text to the history are in many points widely different. He conceives the intermediate chapters between the first three and last three to have been fulfilled in the general persecution begun by Dioletian, in 303, and the destruction of Rome, in 410, by Alaric. The last three chapters give the triumph of the martyrs at that period, as well as many things, which are to take place at the coming of antichrist, and the dissolution of the world. 6. Conceiving that all the above commentators had too much contracted the time for the accomplishment of the prophecy, by limiting it to the establishment of Christianity, Monsieur de la Chetardie established a new system, upon the supposition that the Apocalypse includes the whole history of Christ's Church upon earth. In doing this he had the authority of S. Austin, and other fathers. Observing, therefore, upon an attentive perusal of this work, that there were seven seals, seven trumpets, seven vials, and that at the opening of each seal a new revelation was made, he ingeniously concluded, that the history of the whole Church was divided into seven periods or ages, and that to each period belonged one seal, one trumpet, and one vial. Six of these periods he conceives to be already accomplished, the seventh yet remains concealed in the womb of futurity. 7. Ingenious as is this system of Chetardie, it was not adopted, since Calmet, who wrote after him, preferred his own, which resembled that of Bossuet. It has, however, been renewed by the late bishop Walmisley, under the name of Signor Pastorini, who has taken up the idea and general outline from Chetardie, but illustrated the same with his own interpretation and application to historical facts. The erudition with which the latter author has clothed this system, and the striking aptness of his comparisons of the words of the prophecy to the events which have passed, have gained a very general approbation, and he is almost exclusively followed in the interpretation of this sealed book. How far he has succeeded in his explanation of the seventh age of the Church, cannot be determined by us, since it is shut up in the dark recess of futurity. Posterity will decide. To him we refer the English reader for any further information on the subject, convinced that his researches will be amply gratified, his education wonderfully improved. For, says the illustrious prelate Bossuet, "notwithstanding the obscurities of this book, we experience in its perusal an impression so sweet, and at the same time so magnificent, of the majesty of God; such sublime ideas present themselves of the mystery of Jesus Christ, such noble images of his victories and his reign, and such terrible effects of his judgment, that the soul is quite moved and penetrated. All the beauties of the Scriptures are collected in this book. Whatever there is melting, lively, and majestic in either the law or the prophets, acquires in this book an additional lustre." O truly adorable truths contained herein! of which God is the plenitude and eternal source; of which Jesus Christ is the prophet, the teacher and master; truths which have the angels for servants and ministers; the apostles and bishops for witnesses and depositaries; and all faithful souls, v. 8. for children and disciples. Let us prepare our hearts to hear Jesus Christ arisen from the dead, discovering to us the mysteries of his kingdom, and the truths of the gospel of his glory. Let us hear his warning voice, and prepare for his speedy coming by a strict observance of every duty. Happy, thrice happy that Christian whom the death of sin, and the sleep of tepidity shall not render deaf to this voice!

CHAP. I.

S. John is ordered to write to the seven churches in Asia: the manner of Christ's appearing to him.

THE Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave to him to make known to his servants the things which must shortly come to pass: and signified, sending by his Angel, to his servant, John,

2 Who hath given testimony to the word of God, and the testimony of Jesus Christ, what things soever he hath seen.

3 Blessed is he, that readeth and heareth the words of this prophecy: and keepeth those things which are written in it: for the time is at hand.

4 John to the seven churches which are in Asia. Grace be unto you, and peace from him, * who is, and who was, and who is to come, and from the seven spirits which are before his throne:

5 And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful witness, ^b the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the

* Exod. iii. 14.—^b 1 Cor. xv. 20. Coloss. i. 18.—^c Heb. ix. 14. 1 Pet. i. 19.
1 John i. 7.—^d Isai. iii. 18.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1-3. The Apocalypse, or Revelation. I rather prefer the word Apocalypse, which the Latin interpreter did not think fit to change.—Of Jesus Christ . . . by his Angel, sent to his servant John. So that these things were immediately revealed to S. John by an Angel, who represented and spoke in the person of Christ.—Which must shortly come; and it is again said, (v. 8.) the time is at hand. This cannot be meant of all things in the Apocalypse, where mention is also made of the day of judgment, and of the glory of heaven at the end of the world. It can only mean, that some things were to happen shortly, i. e. what is said of the seven churches. C. ii. and iii. Or the persecutions foretold should begin shortly. Or else these expressions are only to signify, that all time is short, and that from the coming of the Messias, we are now in the last age, or the last hour. See 1 Jo. ii. 18. Wi.—S. John excites their attention by the most pressing motives, the approach of the events. Whatever explanation be given of this book, it is equally true in all, that the time is at hand, when it will begin to be accomplished. To find our consolation and happiness in this sacred book, according to the promise of the Holy Spirit, we must peruse it with faith and humility, receive the interpretation of the Church with submission and docility, and practise the truths contained with fidelity and promptitude. What is the life of man, since ages are but moments that escape us! Eternity is but a moment, but a moment that will never end.

Ver. 4-6. John to the seven churches, afterwards named; and by them, to be understood of all churches, bishops, and people in the like dispositions.—From him, who is, and who was, and who is to come.* As these words are only applied, and applicable to him, who is truly God and eternal, Alcazar (p. 176) applies them to God the Father. Others think them to be spoken of God, as the word God agrees to all the three divine persons, who are one and the same God. See Ribera.—And from the seven spirits. Alcazar understands them of seven of kings of the earth: who hath loved us, and washed us from our sins * in his own blood,

6 And hath made us a kingdom, and priests to God and his Father: to him be glory and empire, for ever and ever. Amen.

7 Behold, he cometh with the clouds, and every eye shall see him, and they that pierced him. And all the tribes of the earth shall bewail themselves because of him: Even so: Amen.

8 I am Alpha, and Omega, the beginning and the end, saith the Lord God, who is, and who was, and who is to come, the Almighty.

9 I John, your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom, and patience in Christ Jesus, was in the island, which is called Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus:

10 I was in spirit on the Lord's day, and heard behind me a great voice, as of a trumpet,

11 Saying: What thou seest, write in a book: and

Mat. xxiv. 30. Jude i. 14.—^a Isai. xli. 4. and xlv. 6. and xlviii. 12.
Infra xxi. 6. and xxii. 18.

God's attributes, or perfections, but, by the common exposition, are meant seven of the chief created spirits, who in a special manner assist at the throne of God, employed to execute God's commands, as Raphael saith, (Tob. xii. 15.) I am one of the seven who stand before God. Wi.—Spirits, &c. Some understand this of the Holy Ghost, on account of his seven gifts; but the most literal interpretation is of the principal Angels, who always surround the throne of God, and are his ministering spirits. Calmet.—And from Jesus Christ,† made man, and the Redeemer of mankind, whom S. John here names after the seven spirits, because he continues his discourse about Christ, who is the faithful witness; testified and approved of God by so many miracles, prophecies, &c. He is the chief of the martyrs or witnesses, as the Greek word signifies.—The first begotten of the dead, both first in dignity, and first that rose to an immortal life.—The prince of the kings of the earth, whose power is infinitely greater than all theirs; and this to put the suffering Christians in mind, that they needed not to fear the persecuting emperors, who have no power after this life.—And Christ hath made us a kingdom, inasmuch as by his grace he has made us members of his true Church, called the kingdom of God, and promised us to reign with him in his glorious kingdom in heaven.—And hath made us priests to God, and his Father, to offer up spiritual sacrifices. See 1 Pet. ii. 9.—To him be, or is due, glory and empire, for ever and ever. Amen. That is, to Jesus Christ. Wi.

Ver. 7. Behold he cometh, or is to come at the day of judgment. Wi.
Ver. 8. I am Alpha, and Omega. These, the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet, signify the same as what follows, the beginning, and the end, the first cause and last end of all intelligent beings, who is, and who was, and who is to come, the Almighty. These words agree only to him, who is the true God, and here are applied to our blessed Redeemer, who is to come and judge all. Wi.

Ver. 10. On the Lord's day,† Not on the Jewish sabbath, which is on send to the seven churches which are in Asia, to Ephesus, and to Smyrna, and to Pergamus, and to Thyatira, and to Sardis, and to Philadelphia, and to Laodicia.

12 And I turned to see the voice that spoke with me: and being turned, I saw seven golden candlesticks,

13 And in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, one like to the Son of man, clothed with a long garment, and girded about the paps with a golden girdle:

14 And his head and hair were white, like white wool, and as snow, and his eyes were as a flame of fire,

15 And his feet like unto fine brass, as in a burning furnace, and his voice as the sound of many waters:

16 And he had in his right hand seven stars: and from his mouth came out a sharp two-edged sword: and his face as the sun shineth in his strength.

17 And when I had seen him, I fell at his feet as dead. And he laid his right hand upon me, saying: Fear not: ^aI am the first and the last,

18 And alive, and was dead; and behold I am living for ever and ever, and have the keys of death and of hell.

19 Write, therefore, the things which thou hast seen, and which are, and which must be done hereafter.

20 The mystery of the seven stars, which thou sawest in my right hand, and the seven golden candlesticks: the seven stars are the Angels of the seven

^a Isai. xli. 4. and xlv. 6. and xlviii. 12. Infra xxi. 6. and xxii. 13.

Saturday, but on the Christian sabbath, our Sunday, called the Lord's day. The Church, in the apostle's time, changed the day of rest, on which the Jews were commanded to rest and sanctify that day, from Saturday to Sunday, from the last day of the week to the first. They judged this only to be an indispensable precept, that some day or some time should be appointed, in a special manner, for God's service and worship, on which Christians should also abstain from servile works, that were not of necessity: as to the determination of such a day of the week, they judged that the Church had power to change the day. The late pretended reformers have all agreed with us in this change. And if they would have all that is expressed in this commandment, to be of an indispensable and unchangeable obligation, according to the letter of the law, they ought certainly to observe, to sanctify, and to abstain from all servile works on Saturdays, or on the Jewish sabbath.—A great voice, as of a trumpet. To signify the importance of things to be revealed. Wi.—Voice, &c. This was most likely S. John the Baptist, who calls himself the voice of one crying in the desert, and who in Malachi is called the Angel of the Lord, as he is also styled in the first verse of this chapter. Pastorini.

VER. 12. I saw seven golden candlesticks, which, by the last verse of this chapter, represented the seven Churches of Asia. We may suppose these candlesticks to have been shewn to S. John, like what is described, Exod. xxv. 81. For in these visions of S. John are frequent allusions to the former tabernacle, and to things relating to the service and worship of God, which Moses was ordered to make. Wi.

VER. 13. And in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks, i. e. walking among the candlesticks, like unto Christ, as he many times called himself the Son of man, and at other times told the Jews he was the Son, the only begotten Son of God. By this walking among the candlesticks is signified his providential care over all the particular Churches, which make up one Catholic Church.—With a long garment, &c. and a golden girdle, with a resemblance of the habit of the priests. Wi—Jesus Christ is in the midst of his Church to enlighten it, to defend and sanctify it, the true model of pastors, who should reside in the midst of their flock, be clothed with sanctity and justice, and girt with the golden girdle, i. e. with singular purity, always ready for combat and labour, by their charity and zeal.

VER. 15. His feet like unto fine brass, to signify the purity and steadfastness of his steps and actions.—His voice as the sound of many waters, the sound of his preaching by himself, and by his apostles, has been heard throughout all nations of the world. Wi.

VER. 16. In his right hand seven stars, which, as it is said (v. 20.) were the Angels, i. e. the bishops of the seven churches, by this comparison is expressed their dignity.—And from his mouth came out a sharp two-edged sword. The word of God preached is compared to a two-edged sword. Ephes. vi. 17. and Heb. iv. 12. It also signifies God's severity in punishing sinners. Wi.

VER. 17. I am the first and the last. These are the words of the Son of man, or of him that represented our Saviour, Christ, to S. John. To be the first and last, is another expression agreeing only to him who is the true God, as it is divers times applied by the prophet Isaiah. Wi—From the 12th verse to this churches, and the seven candlesticks are the seven churches.

CHAP. II.

Directions what to write to the Angels or bishops of Ephesus, Smyrna Pergamus, and Thyatira.

TO the Angel of the church of Ephesus write: These things, saith he who holdeth the seven stars in his right hand, who walketh in the midst of the seven golden candlesticks:

2 I know thy works, and thy labour, and thy patience, and how thou canst not bear the wicked: and thou hast tried them, who say they are apostles, and are not, and hast found them liars:

3 And thou hast patience, and hast endured for my name, and hast not fainted.

4 But I have against thee, that thou hast left thy first charity.

5 Be mindful, therefore, from whence thou art fallen: and do penance, and do the first works. Or else I come to thee, and will remove thy candlestick out of its place, unless thou do penance.

6 But this thou hast, that thou hatest the deeds of the Nicolaites, which I also hate.

7 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches: To him that overcometh, I will give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the paradise of my God.

8 And to the Angel of the church of Smyrna write: These things saith the First and the Last: who was dead, and liveth:

place we have a description of the Son of man, i. e. Christ. The different emblematical descriptions of his countenance, his dress, &c. are similar to what are used by other prophets, and easily explained of his attributes, his eternity, vengeance, &c. &c. Omnes passim.

VER. 18. And alive, and was dead; always living as God, and as man was dead, died on the cross for the salvation of all men, rose again, triumphed over hell, death, and sin, and am living for ever and ever, and have the keys of death and of hell, power over all, all things being made subject to me, even as man, or as God and man. Wi.

VER. 20. Angels. These are the seven bishops of the churches. Christ's having them in his right hand, shews the care he takes of his Church. Calmet

* V. 4. Ab eo qui erat, & qui est, & qui venturus est, ἀπὸ τοῦ ὃς ὦν, καὶ ὃ ἔν, καὶ ὃ ἐρχόμενος, as if it was said, ἀπὸ τοῦ ὃς λέγεται ὁ ὢν, &c.

† V. 5. Qui est testis fidelis, ὁ μάρτυς ὁ πιστός. Martyr ille fidelis.

‡ V. 10. In Dominica die, ἐν τῇ κυριακῇ ἡμέρᾳ.

§ V. 13. Vestitum podere, ἐνδεδυμένον ποδήρη. See Exod. xxviii. 51. Daniel x. v

CHAP. II. VER. 1-7. To the Angel of the church of Ephesus. The great S. Timothy, who was bishop of Ephesus, died a glorious martyr about this time. But as for the admonitions and reprehensions given in these letters, we must take notice, that they are given to the faithful of each church, and not only to the bishops, as it appears by the words so often repeated. Wi.—Angel. This could have been no other than S. Timothy, who was then bishop of Ephesus. We must not suppose the faults, which are reproved by S. John, to belong individually to S. Timothy, but to some members of the Church. Bo-suet, et alii.—These things, saith he, who holdeth, &c. That is, Christ, or the Angel who represented Christ, as appeareth by his titles repeated out of the last chapter.—And hast not failed, or fainted, in opposing the teachers of false doctrine.—Thou hast left thy first charity, or first fervour, a common, yet a very dangerous disposition, and especially in a bishop, changed with the care of those under him.—Do penance . . . practise the first works, return to thy first fervour, or I will remove thy candlestick out of its place. The church of Ephesus is threatened, as in danger to lose its faith, which faith should be transplanted and received in other places. It is what God has divers times permitted, that churches flourishing in the profession of the true Christian faith should be perverted by infidelity and heresy, while the faith hath been planted in other kingdoms of the world. I need not bring instances, where candlesticks have been removed out of their places. Wi—The Nicolaites were an infamous sect, who disturbed the rising Church by the superstitions and all the impurities of paganism. See S. Aug. de heresib.—To him, to every one that overcometh, I will give to eat of the tree of life, (that is, eternal happiness, differently expressed in these letters) which is in the paradise of my God. It is spoken in the person of Christ, as man. Wi.

VER. 8-11. To the Angel of the church of Smyrna. To S. Polycarp, or some bishop there before him. No reprehension is given to this bishop, or to his church, but a commendation for suffering in poverty and tribulation, when they were rich in grace. Wi—Poverty. He was poor in temporal things, but rich 9 I know thy tribulation and thy poverty, but thou art rich: and thou art blasphemed by those who say they are Jews, and are not, but are the synagogue of Satan.

10 Fear none of those things which thou shalt suffer. Behold, the devil shall cast some of you into prison, that you may be tried: and you shall have tribulation ten days. Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life.

11 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches: He that shall overcome, shall not be hurt by the second death.

12 And to the Angel of the church of Pergamus write: These things saith he that hath the sharp two-edged sword:

13 I know where thou dwellest, where the seat of Satan is: and thou holdest fast my name, and hast not denied my faith. And in those days Antipas was my faithful witness, who was slain among you, where Satan dwelleth.

14 But I have a few things against thee: because thou hast there them that hold the doctrine of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a stumbling block before the children of Israel, to eat, and commit fornication:

15 So hast thou also them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaites.

16 In like manner do penance: if not, I will come to thee quickly, and will fight against them with the sword of my mouth.

17 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches: To him that overcometh, I will give the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone; and in the stone a new name written, which no man knoweth but he that receiveth it.

* Num. xxiv. 2. and xxv. 2.

in grace and merits.—Thou art blasphemed by those false teachers, who call themselves Jews and Israelites, and the chosen people of God, waiting for the coming of the Messiah, but are not to be looked upon as such; having refused to own their true Messiah, Jesus Christ, they are the Synagogue of Satan, the greatest enemies of the true faith.—You shall have tribulation ten days, which several here understand for a long time, others for a short time, ten times being used in both senses. Wi.—The first death is that of the body, the second of the soul. Ven. Bede.

VER. 12-17. To the Angel of the church of Pergamus. This church is exhorted to do penance, and reprehended, as the seat or throne of Satan. It is only said, that the bishop lives where this satanical seat is, that he had not denied the faith, even under the persecution, when S. Antipas suffered martyrdom, of whom see Tillemont in the persecution under Domitian, tom. ii, p. 119, and note 523; and Boilandus, April 11th; though the acts themselves be not of great authority.—Thou hast them that hold the doctrine of the Nicolaites, which is compared to that of Balaam, who taught Balac to cast a scandal before the children of Israel, by which they were seduced by the women of the Moabites, and fell into the sin of fornication and idolatry. Num. xxiv. and xxxi. 16.—To him that overcometh, I will give the hidden manna; a happiness in heaven, which the eye hath not seen, &c.—And a white stone, with a new name written, as a mark of the happiness promised to all those who shall conquer. An allusion to the custom of giving a white stone to those that were tried and acquitted, and also to persons promoted to a dignity; and a black stone to such as were found guilty. See Acts xxvi. 10. Wi.—This new name is the eternal recompense, unknown and despised by worldlings, but esteemed by the faithful, who know the excellence of the rewards promised by God. Calmet.

VER. 18-20. To the Angel of the church of Thyatira. Here is first a commendation of their constancy in the faith, in good works, charity, patience, and ministry, which chiefly regards their bishop, whoever he was at that time. The heretics, called Alogians, who rejected the Apocalypse, (chiefly because of the clear proofs of the divinity of the Word, or Son of God) pretended that there was no church at Thyatira, when S. John is supposed to have written his Apocalypse. They have no proof of this. This same church was afterwards perverted by the Montanists. See S. Epiphanius. hæc. li. p. 455. Here follows a reprehension that they permitted the woman, (here called by the name of Jezebel) as was called the wife of Achaz, who persecuted the true prophets, and protected the false ones, 3 Kings, xviii.: to seduce the servants of God, to commit fornication, and eat of things offered to idols. There is no probability that this Jezebel was wife to the bishop of that church. Had this been true, the bishop

18 And to the Angel of the church of Thyatira write: These things saith the Son of God, who hath eyes as a flame of fire, and his feet like fine brass:

19 I know thy works, and thy faith, and thy charity, and ministry, and thy patience, and thy last works which are more than the former.

20 But I have a few things against thee: because thou permittest the woman, Jezebel, who calleth herself a prophetess, to teach and to seduce my servants, to commit fornication, and eat of things offered to idols.

21 And I gave her time to do penance: and she will not repent of her fornication.

22 Behold, I will cast her into a bed: and they that commit adultery with her, shall be in very great tribulation, unless they do penance from their deeds.

23 And I will kill her children with death, and all the churches shall know, that I am he who searcheth the reins and hearts: and I will give to every one of you according to your works. But I say to you,

24 And to the rest who are at Thyatira: Whosoever have not this doctrine, and who have not known the depths of Satan, as they say, I will not put upon you any other burden:

25 Yet that which you have, hold fast till I come.

26 And he that shall overcome, and keep my works unto the end, I will give him power over the nations;

27 And he shall rule them with a rod of iron, and as the vessel of a potter they shall be broken, 28 As I also received from my Father: and I will give him the morning star.

29 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

b 1 Kings xvi. 7. Psal. vii. 10. Jer. xi. 20. and xvii. 10. and xx. 12.

would have deserved a reprehension much more severe than is here given him. Alcazar thinks that by this woman was meant some heretical sect, or the corrupt synagogue of the Jews; but interpreters commonly understand some powerful woman thereabout among the infamous Nicolaites, who by her authority and artifices, brought many to embrace that sect.—I give her time to do penance; and she will not, or would not repent. It is Christ who speaks as God, for who but God gives sinners time to repent.—Behold, I will cast her into a bed, &c. Some understand a bed of sickness; others of corporal death, others eternal torments in hell, where she, and they that sin with her, shall be in very great tribulation, unless first they do penance.—All the churches shall know that I am he, who searcheth the reins and hearts, which God alone can do. See Ps. vii. 10. Jer. xvii. 10. &c. It is God also who will give to every one . . . according to his works. See Ps. lxi. 13. Prov. xxiv. 12. Rom. ii. 6. and in divers other places.—I will not put upon you any other weight, &c. That is, not the insupportable burden of the Jewish ceremonies, to which teachers of false doctrines would have you subject. Wi.—Whoever does not give in to this new doctrine of the Nicolaites and Gnostics, and does not approve the deep and abstruse doctrines of Satan, which they teach, shall have no new weight or punishment. Let them keep the doctrine once delivered. Calmet.—Yet in the faith which you have already learnt, remain steadfast, till I come.—To them who shall overcome, &c. I will give power over or above all nations. This shews that the saints, who are with Christ our Lord in heaven, receive power from him to preside over nations, and provinces, as patrons; and shall come with him at the end of the world to execute his will against those who have not kept his commandments. Ch.—End. This alludes to the day of judgment, when the faithful shall sit on thrones with Christ. And he shall inherit the morning star of perpetual bliss, that shall never set.—They shall triumph over all the wicked world, and under me shall rule them, as it were, with a rod of iron, being so much exalted above them.—As the vessel of a potter, shall all their present greatness be broken. To every such faithful servant, I will give the morning star, another expression to signify eternal light, or eternal happiness. Wi.

* V. 17. Calculum candidum, ψῆφον λευκόν. See Acts xvi. 10.

† V. 20. Mulierem Jezebel, τὴν γυναῖκα Ἰεζαβὴλ. Dr. Wells, in his amendments to the Prot. translation, has put thy wife, and in the Greek γυναικὶ σου which he says is found in the Alexandrian and several other MSS. But neither the Oxford edition of 1675, nor that at Amsterdam of 1711, take notice of this reading in any one MS. As for that one MS. of Alexandria, I guess by Walton's Polyglot, that it cannot well be read in that place. And though it is likely that

CHAP. III.

Directions what to write to Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicea.

AND to the Angel of the church of Sardis write: These things, saith he who hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven stars: I know thy works, that thou hast the name of being alive, and thou art dead.

2 Be watchful, and strengthen the things that remain, which are ready to die. For I find not thy works full before my God.

3 Have in mind, therefore, in what manner thou hast received and heard; and observe, and do penance. If then thou shalt not watch, * I will come to thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know at what hour I will come to thee.

4 But thou hast a few names in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments: and they shall walk with me in white, because they are worthy.

5 He that shall overcome, shall thus be clothed in white garments, and I will not blot his name out of the book of life, and I will confess his name before my Father, and before his Angels.

6 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

7 And to the Angel of the church of Philadelphia write: These things, saith the Holy One and the True One, ^b who hath the key of David: he that openeth, and no man shutteth: shutteth, and no man openeth:

* 1 Thess. v. 2. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Infra xvi. 15.

the author of the Syriac version may have found that reading, yet there is no thing for it in the Arabic or Ethiopic, nor in the vulgar Latin, which, as Dr. Wells himself takes notice on 1 Jo. v. 7. is more ancient than any other version or Greek MSS. And though we find uxorem tuam in S. Cyprian ad Antonianum, edit. Rig. p. 72, and in the edition of Dr. Feil, published at Amsterdam, an. 1701, p. 248, where he says in the note marked a, cui interpretationi favent illa Græca exemplaria, quæ legunt, γυναικά σου, but he did not think fit to tell us where any such MSS. were to be found, nor have I heard that they have been seen by any one. It is certain S. Epiphanius did not find sov, nor think this the true reading, when in the heresy of the Alogians, by Jezabel, he understands Maximilla, Friscilla, or Quintilla, in Marcion's time.

CHAP. III. VER. 1-6. To the Angel of the church of Sardis. He begins with this severe reprehension, thou hast the name of being alive, and thou art dead, which we may understand of the greatest part of them, and of being dead by the worst of deaths, which is that of sin. Wi.—In the style of the sacred writers, to live, is to be in the state of grace, and to bring forth good works, as, to be dead, is to live in sin, and in the neglect of Christian duties. Calmet.—Here we see that the opinion of men is no advantage to us, when our internal dispositions are not correspondent to our external appearance. For what we are in thy sight, O Lord, so much we are, and no more, says S. Austin.—The bishop is charged with this fault, that he did not watch and take care of his flock. He is admonished to repent, and to strengthen those that were not dead, but ready to die.* Wi.—God does not seek to surprise us and lay snares for us. But when he tells us that he will come like a thief, it is only to admonish us not to slumber. Had he wished to take us unawares, he never would have admonished us beforehand. Calmet.—But thou hast a few names, &c. That is, a few persons not yet defiled, neither as to their consciences, souls, nor bodies.—They shall walk with me in white apparel, &c. It is a new way of expressing the happiness of heaven. Wi.—White is the color of joy, festivity, and triumph. The Angels always appeared clothed in white. Calmet.

VER. 7-13. To the Angel of the church of Philadelphia. There were several towns of this name; here is understood that which was near Sardis, in Lydia. Here is no more than an admonition to persevere, to hold that which thou hast. Christ takes the title of the Holy One, and True One, who hath the key of David; i. e. being the son of David, and the promised Messias, hath supreme power in the Church: who opens the gate of salvation, and no one shuts it against his elect. Wi.—By the key in this place may be understood either the key of the Church, or of the kingdom of heaven. Jesus Christ has both, he opens and shuts the heavens by his infinite power. But in the Church on earth he has entrusted this key (his power) to his apostles and ministers; whatever is bound or loosened by them is ratified by him in the kingdom of his glory. Calmet.—I have set before thee a door open, by giving thee graces to save thee, which no one shall be able to hinder, because thou hast of thyself little power or strength,† and hast kept my word, and not denied the faith. Wi.—I have sent you to preach, and have given my blessing to your labours. You shall, notwithstanding all your adversaries, eventually succeed. S. Paul makes use of the same manner of expression. 1 Cor. xvi. I see a great door is open to me, and at the same time many adversaries: and again, 2 Cor. ii. and Coloss. iv. On account of 8 I know thy works. Behold, I have given before thee an open door, which no man can shut: because thou hast a little strength, and hast kept my word, and hast not denied my name.

9 Behold, I will give of the synagogue of Satan, who say they are Jews, and are not, but do lie: Behold, I will make them to come and adore before thy feet: And they shall know, that I have loved thee.

10 Because thou hast kept the word of my patience, I will also keep thee from the hour of temptation, which shall come upon the whole world to try them that dwell upon the earth.

11 Behold I come quickly: hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

12 He that shall overcome, I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go out no more, and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, the new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God, and my new name.

13 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

14 And to the Angel of the church of Laodicea write: * These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness, who is the beginning of the creation of God.

15 I know thy works: that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot:

† Isai. xxii. 22. Job xii. 14.— John xiv. 6.

your little strength, your want of talents, eloquence, supernatural gifts, &c. I have not exposed you to great trials. Thus does the Almighty always proportion the trials he sends, and the temptations he permits in his servants, to the graces and strength he has given them.—Those who were neither Jews nor Christians, shall come and adore at your feet their former errors, and shall evidently perceive that you are strengthened by me. Calmet.—Christ also promises that he will make the false abandoned Jews subject to the bishop and his Church, and to own them to be the beloved and chosen people. God promises to preserve them in the hour or time of temptation and persecutions, which should happen to all the inhabitants of the earth. Wi.—He here advertises him of the persecution which was about to take place, and by which he would try the fidelity of his servants. In v. 12. he relates the triumph and everlasting beatitude of the martyrs.—He that overcomes, I will make him a pillar, &c. so as to stand firm against his enemies, and to be secure of his endless happiness.—I will write upon him the name of my God, a subscribed citizen of the celestial Jerusalem, with the new name of Jesus, the Saviour and Redeemer of mankind. He alludes to the custom of writing names upon pillars, palaces, &c.—From the words my God, the Socinians pretend that Christ is not the true God, as we may find in the disputes which Servetus had with Calvin. Calvin answered the Socinians, as all Catholics do, that Christ was both God and man: this and divers things were spoken of Christ as he was man, but that many things in the Scriptures could not apply to him, unless he was also truly God. And by such places is clearly confuted the blasphemy and error of the Arians and Socinians. The argument concludes in the principles of the Catholics, who allow the authority of the Church in expounding the sense of the Scriptures; but the Calvinists, and all other pretended reformers, having shaken off that authority, and having allowed that the holy Scriptures are to be interpreted according to every man's private judgment or spirit, this set Calvin and Servetus, every Calvinist and Socinian, upon the same level. Wi.

VER. 14-22. The seventh and last letter is to the Angel of the church of Laodicea. Christ here takes the title of the Amen,† as if he said, I am the Truth.—The beginning of the creation, or of the creatures of God, to which is added in the first chapter, the beginning and the end.—Thou art neither cold nor hot, but lukewarm. A dreadful reprehension, whatever exposition we follow. According to the common interpretation, by the cold are meant those who are guilty of great sins; by the hot, such as are zealous and fervent in piety and the service of God; by the lukewarm or tepid, they who are slothful, negligent, indolent as to what regards Christian perfection, the practice of virtue, and an exact observance of what regards the service of God. On this account they are many times guilty in the sight of God of great sins, they forfeit the favour and grace of God, fancying themselves good enough and safe, because they live as others commonly live, and are not guilty of many scandalous and shameful crimes, to which they see others addicted.—I would thou wert either cold or hot. This is not an absolute wish; because the condition of the cold is certainly worse in itself; but it is to be taken with regard to the different consequences, which oftentimes attend these two states, and to signify to us that the lukewarm may be farther from a true conversion, inasmuch as they are less sensible of the dangers to which they remain exposed, than such as commit greater sins. Their careless indolence becomes habitual to them, they live and die with a heart divided betwixt God

16 But because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will begin to vomit thee out of my mouth.

17 Because thou sayest: I am rich, and made wealthy; and I have need of nothing: and thou knowest not, that thou art wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked.

18 I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, that thou mayest be made rich, and mayest be clothed in white garments, and the shame of thy nakedness may not appear: and anoint thy eyes with eyesalve, that thou mayest see.

19 *Those whom I love, I rebuke and chastise. Be zealous, therefore, and do penance.

20 Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man shall hear my voice, and open to me the gate, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

21 To him that shall overcome, I will give to sit with me on my throne: as I also have overcome, and have sat with my Father on his throne.

and the world; whereas greater and more shameful sinners are not without an abhorrence of such vices which they commit; a fear of punishment, of hell and damnation, strikes them by the mercies of God offered even to sinners, and makes them enter into themselves like the prodigal son; they detest their past lives, and by the assistance of God's graces become both fervent and constant in the duties of a Christian life. Wi.—Tepidity in a Christian life, and in the service of God, is oftentimes more dangerous than absolute wickedness. The open sinner is easily made sensible of his danger; he experiences the stings and reproaches of conscience, whilst the tepid Christian lives without remorse, fear, or apprehension, and listens not to those who wish to shew him the danger of his situation. I dare venture to affirm, says S. Aug. that to fall into some public and manifest sin would be of advantage to the proud, that so those who by their self-complacency had so often fallen before, may now become displeased with themselves and humble. Calmet.—To the lukewarm it is said, I will begin to vomit thee out of my mouth; i. e. if thou continue in that state, I will permit thee to run on and be lost in thy sins. Thou blindly sayest within thyself, I am rich, &c. A false conscience generally attends a lukewarm soul and those who serve God by halves; they flatter themselves that all goes well enough with them, when they see they are not so vicious, as many others; but here the spirit of God, who penetrates the secret folds and windings of slothful souls, admonisheth them of their dangerous mistakes, that they are wretched, poor, blind, and naked, when God, by his grace, does not inhabit their souls, though they may have millions of gold and silver in this world. I counsel thee to buy of me gold tried in the fire, the love of God purified by trials and troubles in this life, to recover thy lost innocence, to be clothed with the habit of grace, to anoint the eyes with eyesalve, by a serious reflection on what regards thy eternal salvation.—I chastise those whom I love. He concludes all the former admonitions by telling them: first, that to be under trials and troubles, is a mark of God's favour and his paternal care; secondly, to hearken to the voice of God, when he knocks at the door of their heart; and thirdly, he promises them the reward of eternal happiness—he that overcomes, shall sit with me on my throne: though this does not imply an equality of happiness, not even to all the saints, much less with God himself, but only that the elect shall be in the throne as it were of heaven, and partakers of heavenly happiness according to their past good works.—I should not here mention the wild and ridiculous fancies of one Mr. Brightman, when he pretends to expound to all men these letters to the seven bishops of Asia, were it not to shew how the obscure predictions in S. John's revelation have been turned and abused by the loose interpretations of some of the late reformers, as may be seen more at large, when we mention their arbitrary fancies about the whore of Babylon and the popish antichrist. I shall here with Dr. Hammond, give the reader a taste of such licentious expositions of the divine oracles. The Calvinist, Mr. Brightman, pretended he had his expositions by divine inspirations, and so gave his commentary the title of Revelation of the Revelation. I shall quote his words out of Dr. Hammond. "Mr. Brightman assures his readers, that by the churches of Sardis, Philadelphia, and Laodicia, were meant Germany, France, and Britain. He says a most heavy trial was now suddenly to invade the Christian world . . . that the three said churches were most favourably admonished of this tempest by the epistles written to them by name, nomination . . . that he found and understood this to be so by divine inspiration, from the inscriptions of these letters, and so should be guilty of a sin against the Divine Majesty, if he concealed them." Not to tire the reader with his fancies about Ephesus and Pergamus, which may be seen in Dr. Hammond. Rev. ii. 18. "on those words, in those days was Antipas, &c. Mr. Brightman has this wanton fancy on the name Antipas, that it doth denote that the martyrs of his time (which was after Luther) should be antipapae, or antipopes;" i. e. adversaries to the popes and popery. Dr. Hammond (p. 928) gives us Mr. Brightman's conceit on the name Thyatira, which must be taken for the same as Thy-gathira, signifying a young daughter, and so denotes the growth of piety in the Church from the year 1300, from Wycliffe's time to 1520, that is, till it came to perfection in Luther's days. Page 932. note a, "Sardis, according to Mr. Brightman," says Dr. Hammond, "is the first reformed church in the antitype, to wit, (1632)

22 He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches.

CHAP. IV.

The vision of the throne of God, the twenty-four ancients, and the four living creatures.

AFTER these things I saw: and behold a door opened in heaven: and the first voice which I heard, was as it were, of a trumpet speaking with me, saying: Come up hither, and I will shew thee the things which must come to pass hereafter.

2 And immediately I was in the spirit: and behold there was a throne set in heaven, and one sitting upon the throne.

3 And he that sat, was to the sight like the jasper and the sardine-stone: and there was a rainbow round about the throne, in sight like unto an emerald.

4 And round about the throne were four and twenty seats: and upon the seats, four and twenty ancients sitting, clothed in white garments, and golden crowns on their heads.

* Prov. iii. 12. Heb. xii. 6.

that of Germany, which began at Wittenberg, by Luther, an. 1517. And the proof is, that Sardis is more to the south than Thyatira, and so must have more of truth in it; or, because there is no mention made of Balaam and Jezebel, which he resolved must signify the doctrines of Christian Rome, the absence of which must signify a breaking off from the Romish communion; or, that she (the German Church) had a name to be living, but was dead, by the doctrine of consubstantiation among the Lutherans, even after the reformation. This," says Dr. Hammond, "were a strange way of interpreting dreams, which no oneirocritic would allow, but a much stranger of explaining prophecies." Page 933, "Philadelphia, says Mr. Brightman, must needs be the Helvetian, Swedish, Genevan, French, Dutch, and Scotch reformed Churches. No reason again for it, but that the city of Philadelphia was yet farther south than Sardis, and so must needs signify more increase of reformation; 2. that the name of Jezebel was not in it; 3. that the word Philadelphia, signifying brotherly love, cannot be applied to any but this pattern of all piety (to which Mr. Brightman had so much kindness) the Church of Helvetia and Geneva. And the reformed Church of England must be that of Laodicia, . . . because episcopacy was here retained, and so a mixture of cold with that of heat, and consequently is the lukewarm Church that is found fault with." O the profound interpretations and bright inventions of Mr. Brightman! Wi.

* V. 2. Et ceteræ quæ moritura erant, et hæc sunt hæc illi apostolici, meaning persons, not things.

† V. 8. Virtutem, δύναμιν, strength.

‡ V. 14. Hæc dicit Amen; ταῦτα λέγει ὁ Ἀμήν. Ille qui est Amen.

CHAP. IV. VER. 1. No sooner had S. John received in the preceding vision the documents he was to transmit to the seven Churches of Asia, when, behold, a new scene displays itself. Heaven opens, and S. John is invited up thither by the voice which had spoken to him before, and is told he shall see what is to happen in future ages. On a sudden appears a throne, and the Almighty himself seated upon it. The rainbow which surrounds the throne, denotes the covenant of reconciliation and peace between God and man. Walmsley.—Behold a door open. Here begins what may be looked upon as the second part of the Apocalypse, and from hence to the two last chapters are contained wars and victories of the Church over all its enemies, the devil, Jews, heathens, and heretics. These visions are so differently expounded, when applied to different events, that this alone may convince us how uncertain are those various interpretations. The servants of God are taught that they must expect to meet with many trials, afflictions, and persecutions; but this ought to be a great subject of consolation to the faithful, that they are assured of victory if they fight manfully, and of a recompense of endless happiness for their short labours. Such visions and majestic descriptions shew that S. John was inspired by the same spirit of God, as the ancient patriarchs and prophets.—I will shew thee the things that must come to pass hereafter; i. e. after the things already revealed concerning the seven Churches, and therefore after the destruction of Jerusalem, which was about twenty years before S. John wrote this Apocalypse. Wi.

VER. 2. I was in the spirit, rapt as it were in an ecstasy into heaven, and saw a throne, and one sitting, representing God the Father. Wi.

VER. 3. And he . . . was to the sight like the jasper,* or had the appearance of jaspers, as to the colours with which he appeared, &c. Wi.

VER. 4. About the throne were four and twenty seats, or lesser thrones, with twenty-four seniors or senators upon them, representing the illustrious saints both of the Old and New Testament, clothed in white garments, in token of their innocence, and crowns of gold, signifying the glory of the heavenly inhabitants. Wi.—These four and twenty elders sitting round the throne of God, represent the judgment which the Almighty was about to pass upon the enemies of his Church. Thus in Daniel, when he was about to pronounce sentence against Antiochus Epiphanes, "thrones were placed, and the ancient of days sat, . . . the judgment sat, and the books were opened." Dan vii 9, 10.

5 And from the throne proceeded lightnings, and voices, and thunderings: and seven lamps were burning before the throne, which are the seven spirits of God.

6 And before the throne there was as it were a sea of glass like crystal: and in the midst of the throne, and round about the throne were four animals full of eyes before and behind.

7 And the first animal was like a lion, and the second animal like a calf, and the third animal having the face as of a man: and the fourth animal was like an eagle.

8 And the four animals had each of them six wings: and round about and within they are full of eyes. And they rested not day and night, saying, "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, who was, and who is, and who is to come."

9 And when these animals gave glory, and honour, and benediction to him that sitteth on the throne, who liveth for ever and ever,

10 The four and twenty ancients fell down before him that sitteth on the throne, and adored him that liveth for ever and ever, and cast their crowns before the throne, saying:

11 Thou art worthy, O Lord our God, to receive glory and honour and power: because thou hast created

* Isai. vi. 8.

They represent kings and priests who attend on the Sovereign Judge. It appears as if God intended to designate by the number the ancient patriarchs and the twelve apostles, who judge with the Lord, and condemn the injustices of their persecutors. Calmet.

VER. 5. Lightnings, a symbol of God's majesty and power.—Seven lamps burning, which signify the seven spirits of God, the chief spirits that attend his throne. See C. I. 4. Wi.—The lightnings, loud voices, and thunders, which come from the throne of God, announce alarms and severe hardships, such as persecutions, heresies, calamities, &c. by which he tries the fidelity of his servants on earth. And the seven spirits of God, who appear under the form of burning lamps, are seven Angels, as before mentioned, (C. I. 4.) standing ready to execute the divine commands. Walmsley.

VER. 6. A sea of glass, like crystal, calm and transparent, and may signify that the saints had passed a boisterous sea of troubles in this world, which is now changed into everlasting tranquillity.—Four living creatures, or animals. Alcazar (p. 364) takes notice of thirty different expositions of these animals. He understands the apostles, bishops, and preachers of the Christian faith; others, four of the chief Angels or celestial spirits. Several others expound them of the four evangelists: yet this was before S. John himself had written his gospel. Wi.—The extensive sea of glass, here described transparent as crystal, represents what may be called the floor of heaven. Before the throne and round it stand four living creatures, of an extraordinary shape, which denote the four great prophets, Isaias, Jeremias, Ezechiel, and Daniel. Their bodies are described full of eyes, both before and behind, an emblem of their prophetic sight, that penetrates into all ages past, present, and to come. And their being also full of eyes within, indicates that their extensive knowledge arises from an interior divine inspiration. They have each six wings, in the same manner as the seraphim appeared to the prophet Isaias. C. vi. 2. Some have imagined these four symbolical animals to represent the four evangelists; but we think improperly, as S. John was still living and there present in person. The first animal is here said to resemble a lion, the king of beasts, because the prophet Isaias, represented by it, was descended of the royal race of David. The second animal resembles a calf, and represents the prophet Jeremias in his character of priest; the calf, which was the principal victim in Jewish sacrifices, being on that account the emblem of the priesthood. The third animal, exhibiting Ezechiel, has the countenance of a man; because God, in speaking to that prophet, always addresses him by the name of son of man. The fourth animal, denoting Daniel, resembles a flying eagle, on account of the sublime oracles of this prophet, who soars to the highest objects, and views the succession of all the great empires that were to rise up in the world to the end of time. Probably these four principal prophets are to be understood to represent all the prophets of the old law. Walmsley.

VER. 7. Like a lion, &c. The qualities in these animals are observed to be courage and strength in the lion; profit to human life, by the calf; reason and wisdom, by the face of man; soaring high, and rapidity or swiftness, by the eagle; whether we understand those spiritual perfections to belong to blessed spirits, or to the apostles in general, or to the four evangelists. Wi.

VER. 8. Each of them six wings. See the like visions, Ezech. i. 4. Isai. vi. 2. These signify their swiftness in executing God's just commands.—Full of eyes: a symbol of knowledge and watchfulness.—They rested not day and night: There is no night in heaven; but hereby is signified, that they praised God without intermission for all eternity, saying: Thou art worthy, O Lord, our all things, and for thy will they were, and have been created.

CHAP. V.

The book sealed with seven seals is opened by the Lamb, who thereupon receives adoration and praise from all.

AND I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne, a book written within and without, sealed with seven seals.

2 And I saw a strong Angel, proclaiming with a loud voice: Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?

3 And no man was able neither in heaven, nor on earth, nor under the earth, to open the book, nor to look on it.

4 And I wept much because no man was found worthy to open the book, nor to see it.

5 And one of the ancients said to me: Weep not; behold the lion of the tribe of Juda, the root of David, hath conquered to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof.

6 And I saw: and behold in the midst of the throne, and of the four animals, and in the midst of the ancients, a Lamb standing as it were slain, having seven horns and seven eyes: which are the seven spirits of God, sent forth into all the earth.

7 And he came: and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat on the throne.

God, &c. Wi.—They repeat the word holy three times, probably in honour of the blessed trinity. And the four and twenty elders prostrate before the throne, in token of their acknowledging all their happiness and pre-eminence to be his gift. Walmsley.

VER. 10. Nothing is so well adapted to give us an idea of the infinite majesty of God, and of the sovereign respect which is due to him, as this description. How ought Christians to appear in the presence of the God of armies, if what is most august and most elevated in heaven acknowledges its lowness and nothing before this tremendous Majesty! Calmet.

* V. 3. Similis erat aspectui jaspidis, ὅμοιος ἔπιδειν ἰάσπιδος.

† V. 11. Dignus est Domine Deus. God is wanting in many copies, but Dr. Wells restored it as the true reading.

CHAP. V. VER. 1. *A book written within and without. Books were then skins, membranes, or parchments, and when written on both sides part of the writing appeared, though they were rolled up.—Sealed with seven seals, as containing mysteries and secrets of high importance. Wi.

VER. 3. No man was able, &c. As to the contents, some understand the prophecies and mysteries both of the Old and New Testament; others, the events that should afterwards happen to the Church of Christ, as various persecutions against Christians. Alcazar would have the sense of these words to be, that only Christ and his Spirit could open the book to others, and make them believe and know the punishments prepared for the wicked, and the reward reserved for God's faithful servants. Wi.

VER. 5. Behold the lion, of the tribe of Juda, &c. viz. Jesus Christ, who was descended from that tribe, denominated a lion on account of his great power, by which title we find him designated also in the prophecy of Jacob. Gen. xlix. 9. Calmet.—It is he who has merited by his triple victory over death, sin, and hell, the great honour of opening the book, and revealing the secrets therein contained.

VER. 6. I saw . . . a lamb standing as it were slain, with the prints and marks of its wounds. It was of this lamb (i. e. of our Saviour Jesus Christ) that S. John Baptist said: "Behold the Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world." Jo. i. 29. Wi.—Here again Jesus Christ is plainly marked out, the Lamb of God, the victim of expiation, who by his death has reconciled us with his Father; and who, even in heaven, bears the marks of his passion, and by the wounds therein received continually inclines his Father to shew us mercy. He has seven horns, as so many crowns and marks of his omnipotence; and seven eyes, to represent his infinite knowledge and wisdom. Calmet.—Having seven horns and seven eyes, (to signify his power and his knowledge) which are the seven spirits subject to Christ. See C. I. 4. It is observed that in the Revelation of S. John, the number seven is divers times applied to signify a multitude, and a number implying perfection, and three and a half for a small number. Thus are represented the seven candlesticks, seven churches, seven spirits, seven seals, seven trumpets, seven vials, &c. Wi.

VER. 7-8. He . . . took the book, &c. . . . and when he had opened it, or was about to open it, (in the Greek is only, he took it: which was a sign that he would open it) . . . the four and twenty ancients fell down before the Lamb, to adore him, as appears by what follows, v. 13.—Having every one of them harps to celebrate his praise, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of the saints: which shews that the saints in heaven offer up before the throne of 8 And when he had opened the book, the four animals, and the four and twenty ancients fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of the saints:

9 And they sung a new canticle, saying: Thou art worthy, O Lord, to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: because thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God, in thy blood, out of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation:

10 And hast made us to our God a kingdom, and priests: and we shall reign on the earth.

11 And I saw, and I heard the voice of many Angels round about the throne, and the living creatures and the ancients: and the number of them was "thousands of thousands,

12 Saying, with a loud voice: The Lamb that was slain is worthy to receive power, and divinity, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory, and benediction.

13 And every creature, which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and the things that are therein, I heard all saying: To him that sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb, benediction, and honour, and glory, and power for ever and ever.

* Dan. vii. 10.

the Divine Majesty the prayers of the faithful. Wi.—Harps, &c. These harps are symbols of the praise which good men render to God; and the vials full of odours, represent the prayers of the saints. In conformity with this idea, S. John wishes to represent these four and twenty ancients as so many senators, who present to the Almighty the prayers and homages of good men on earth. Estius. Clemens Alex.—This also is an imitation of what was practised in the temple, in which were always around the altar, in times of sacrifice, Levites with musical instruments, priests with vials to contain the wine and blood, and censers to hold the incense. Calmet.—The prayers of the saints. Here we see that the saints in heaven offer up to Christ the prayers of the faithful upon earth. Ch.

VER. 9. They sung a new canticle, &c. called new, as belonging to the New Testament or alliance of the new law of Christ. Wi.—Canticle; that is, excellent. The Scripture generally attaches the epithet new to canticles. New canticles are always more agreeable, says Pindar. Grotius.—And hast redeemed, &c. The twenty-four ancients here may well represent all, who are in possession of beatitude. They all acknowledge it is to Jesus Christ they are indebted for the felicity they enjoy; it is he that has assembled at the foot of God's throne all the nations of the world, faithful souls from every tribe and tongue, and people and nation, by his blood. Calmet.

VER. 10. And hast made us to our God, &c. See 1 Pet. ii. 5, 9. Wi.—All Christians may justly be styled kings and priests of God, by the spiritual empire they possess over their passions and the world; and by the continual offering they make on the altar of their hearts, by means of the prayers they daily offer up to God. Origen.—Thus they say, we shall reign on the earth by the empire we shall exercise over our passions; and by the union we shall have with Jesus Christ and his Church, triumph over all who have persecuted us. Estius. Andreas.

VER. 11. The number of them was thousands of thousands. In the Greek also, ten thousand times ten thousand. Wi.

VER. 12. The Lamb is worthy... to receive power and divinity, &c. The Socinians and new Arians from hence pretend that the Lamb, Jesus Christ, is not the same true God with the Father, but only deserved divinity, or to be made God in an inferior and an improper sense. The argument is of no force at all in the ordinary Greek, where for divinity is read riches. The sense is, thou art worthy to have thy power and divinity acknowledged and praised by all creatures both in heaven and earth: and the following words are a confutation of the Socinians, "I heard all saying: To him that sitteth on the throne, and to the Lamb, benediction, and honour, and glory, and power, for ever and ever," where the same divine power is attributed to the Father and to the Son of God, Jesus, true God and true man. Wi.

* V. 1. Intus et foris, ἰωθεν καὶ ὀπισθεν; on the back side.
† V. 3. Aperire librum, neque videre illum, βλέπειν καὶ ἀναγνῶναι, legere.
‡ V. 7-8. Ὡς ἀπερυσσετ: in the present Greek only, ὥς ἔλαβ; and in one or two MSS. of the Marquis de Velez, ἡνῶσε.
§ V. 11. Millia millium, ἑκατὸν χιλιάδων, καὶ χιλιάδες χιλιάδων.
|| V. 12. Accipere virtutem et divinitatem: in the Greek, instead of divinitatem, πλοῦτον. In one or two MSS. of the Marquis de Velez, βέλτεια.

CHAP. VI. VER. 1. I saw that the Lamb had opened one of the seven seals, (1634)

14 And the four animals said: Amen: And the four and twenty ancients fell down on their faces, and adored him that liveth for ever and ever.

CHAP. VI.

What followed upon the opening six of the seals.

AND I saw that the Lamb had opened one of the seven seals, and I heard one of the four animal: saying, as with a voice of thunder: Come, and see.

2 And I saw: and behold a white horse, and he that sat on him had a bow, and a crown was given to him, and he went forth conquering that he might conquer.

3 And when he had opened the second seal, I heard the second animal, saying: Come, and see.

4 And another red horse went forth: and it was given to him who sat thereon, to take away peace from the earth, and that they should kill one another, and to him was given a great sword.

5 And when he had opened the third seal, I heard the third animal, saying: Come thou, and see. And behold a black horse, and he that sat on him had a pair of scales in his hand.

6 And I heard as it were a voice in the midst of the four animals, saying: Two pounds of wheat for a penny, and thrice two pounds of barley for a penny, and hurt not the wine, and oil.

7 And when he had opened the fourth seal, I heard the voice of the fourth animal, saying: Come, and see.

or the first seal. The interpreters are much divided in expounding what is to be understood by the sealed up contents, and in applying them to such and such persecutions, persons, and events, by all which it appears that there is no certainty as to such applications and expositions, even of particular ancient fathers; though at the same time it is both certain and evident that many pretended interpretations, (that is, arbitrary inventions, from the private spirit of heretics) are both false and groundless, contradictory to the unexceptionable authority (to use Dr. W.'s words) of the primitive fathers, and inconsistent with the doctrine and belief of the Catholic Church, as I may have occasion to shew that the ridiculous fable is of this number, of so many popes being antichrist, and the beast of this Apocalypse. I shall, for the satisfaction of the Christian reader, as I hinted in the preface of this book, give a short account of those expositions that are not improbable. Wi.

VER. 2. A white horse, such as conquerors used to ride upon at a solemn triumph. This is commonly understood of our Saviour, Christ, who, by himself, and by his apostles, preachers, martyrs, and other saints, triumphed over all the adversaries of his Church. He had a bow in his hand, the doctrine of his gospel, piercing like an arrow the hearts of the hearers; and the crown given him, was a token of the victory of him who went forth conquering, that he might conquer. Wi.—He that sitteth on the white horse is Christ, going forth to subdue the world by his gospel. The other horses that follow represent the judgment and punishment, that were to fall on the enemies of Christ and his Church: the red horse signifies war; the black horse famine; and the pale horse (which has death for its rider) plagues or pestilence. Ch.—White horse; viz. Jesus Christ, who came to subdue all nations to the faith. The bow signifies the gospel, and the word of God, those powerful arms, of which S. Paul so often speaks, as being so necessary for all who are engaged in bringing souls to the faith of Christ. The crown marks the sovereign power of Jesus Christ, and the assurance of conquest. Cornelius. Bossuet. Du Pin.

VER. 3-4. Opened the second seal, &c. portending wars and shedding of blood, and so he is said to have power to take away peace from the earth. Wi.—Another red horse. This red horse signifies the cruel persecutions, which the Roman emperors carried on against the Christian religion. For this end, it is said immediately after, one sat thereon, to take peace from the earth, and kill one another; for this purpose was a great sword given to him. Andreas. Menochius. Grotius.

VER. 5. The third seal... a black horse. This is also commonly expounded of wars and persecutions, and particularly of famine, by the scales in the rider's hand, and by two pounds of wheat being sold for a penny: a great price, considering the value of money at that time. Wi.—The black horse represents the public miseries, famines, &c. which, particularly the latter, the Roman empire frequently experienced during the reign of the persecuting emperors. The balance, which the rider is said to hold in his hand, represents the strict manner in which people would measure out whatever they sold during the time of famine. Andreas. Hamm. Bossuet.

VER. 7-8. The fourth seal... a pale horse, the rider's name death. It is also expounded of trials, afflictions, persecutions, and especially of plagues, over four parts of the earth, by which may be denoted the great power and extent of the Roman empire. In the Greek we read, over the fourth part of the earth; which some reconcile, by observing that the Roman empire had dominions under it. all the four parts of the world, east, west, north, and south; and that its dominions might be said to comprehend the fourth part of the world. Wi.—By the 8 And behold a pale horse, and he that sat upon him, his name was death, and hell followed after him; and power was given to him over the four parts of the earth, to kill with sword, with famine, and with death, and with the beasts of the earth.

9 And when he had opened the fifth seal, I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held.

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying: How long, O Lord, (holy and true) dost thou not judge and revenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth?

11 And white robes were given, to each of them one: and it was said to them, that they should rest yet for a little time, till their fellow servants, and their brethren, who were to be slain even as they, should be filled up.

12 And I saw, when he had opened the sixth seal: and behold, there was a great earthquake, and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair: and the whole moon became as blood:

13 And the stars from heaven fell upon the earth, as the fig-tree casteth its green figs when it is shaken by a great wind:

14 And the heaven withdrew as a book rolled up:

* Isai. ii. 19. Osee x. 8. Luke xxiii. 30.

pale horse, and the rider, death, who sat upon it, followed by hell, are meant that dreadful mortality which ever attends famines, &c. He had power to kill with sword, with famine, &c. All these evils came upon the Roman people, and history has preserved the memory of them, to shew the truth of the prophecy here delivered by S. John. Grotius. Calmet.

VER. 9, &c. After the opening of the fifth seal, the souls of the martyrs under the altar cried aloud for justice, saying, how long, &c. Out of zeal for God's honour, and the good of the Church, they pray that the enemies of Christ, and of the Christian faith, may be humbled, and that all may acknowledge and fear the justice of God, by the punishment of his enemies, and the reward of his faithful servants. S. Jerom, by under the altar, understands Christ himself, under whom, as under their head, are all the martyrs. Some who doubted or held that the blessed were not admitted to see God in heaven before the day of general judgment, have turned this expression, under the altar, or at least the expressions of some of the fathers upon these words, as if they were favourable to their error, which is sufficiently disproved, even by the words that follow, that white robes were given to each of them one, in which they are said to walk with him wherever he goeth. C. iii. 4. and C. xiv. 4. Wi.—Under the altar. Christ, as man, is this altar, under which the souls of the martyrs live in heaven: as their bodies are here deposited under our altars.—Revenge our blood. They ask not this out of hatred to their enemies, but out of zeal for the glory of God, and a desire that the Lord would accelerate the general judgment, and the complete beatitude of all his elect. Ch.—These holy souls, who had been slain for the word of God, do not beg the Almighty to revenge their blood, through any hatred to their enemies, but through the great zeal with which they were animated, to see the justice of God manifested: that by this severity they might be moved to fear him, and be converted to him. Thus in the Scripture we often read of the prophets beseeching the Almighty to fill their enemies with confusion, to humble them, &c. Perer. Bossuet. Du Pin, &c.—And white robes. To console them, they each had given them a white robe, as a mark of their innocence, and as an assurance that on account of it they would in due time receive the full measure of beatitude. They should rest yet a little while, most probably to the day of final retribution, when the number of those destined to be their brethren in bliss should be completed. Then they should altogether receive full recompense and their persecutors be covered with confusion. S. Aug. serm. xi. de sanctis Greg. Mag. lib. ii. Moral. cap. iv.

VER. 12. At the opening of the sixth seal . . . a great earthquake, &c. Many think that these dreadful signs, of the sun turning black, &c. are not to happen till the time of antichrist, a little before the end of the world. See Matt. xiv. Luke xxi. Isaias xiii. and xxxiv. Ezeck. xxxii. Dan. xii. &c. Others apply these prodigies to God's visible chastisements on the heathen emperors and persecutors of the Christians, before the first Christian emperor, Constantine. Wi.—And I saw. The sixth seal being opened, S. John sees painted before him the severe and terrible manner in which the Almighty would revenge himself on his enemies. It may refer either to the time of Constantine, when we behold the Christian religion triumphing on the ruins of paganism, and after his death, and that of his sons, the empire of Rome given up a prey to barbarians, Rome itself taken and pillaged, and all the provinces thrown into dreadful disorder and consternation; or it may likewise refer to the day of general judgment, when the Almighty will make sinners drink the wine of his indignation, in presence of all the just; of which dreadful time of vengeance all other particular judgments are only imperfect figures. Victorin. Bede. Tichon.—S. John, in imitation of the ancient prophets, makes use of the earthquake, &c. hyperbolicaland every mountain, and the islands were moved out of their places.

15 And the kings of the earth, and the princes, and the tribunes, and the rich men, and the strong men, and every bond-man, and every free-man hid themselves in the dens, and in the rocks of the mountains:

16 And they say to the mountains and to the rocks: * Fall upon us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth upon the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb:

17 For the great day of their wrath is come: and who shall be able to stand?

CHAP. VII.

The number of them that were marked with the seal of the living God; and clothed in white robes.

AFTER these things I saw four Angels standing on the four corners of the earth, holding the four winds of the earth, that they should not blow upon the earth, nor upon the sea, nor on any tree.

2 And I saw another Angel ascending from the rising of the sun, having the seal of the living God: and he cried with a loud voice to the four Angels, to whom it was given to hurt the earth and the sea,

3 Saying: Hurt not the earth, nor the sea, nor the trees, till we seal the servants of our God in their foreheads.

ly, to mark more strongly the dreadful and horrible evils with which the Roman empire, in the time of Constantine, so great was the revolution, that mountains appeared, as it were, moved out of their places; islands shifted from their accustomed situations. We behold at one time seven persons, Maximin Galerius, Maxentius, Severus Cæsar, Maximin, Alexander, Maximin Hercules, and Licinius, all aiming at the empire. The first six perished in nine years, from 305 to 314: Licinius was strangled in 324. All these were enemies of the Christian religion. Constantine, who supported it, remained sole master of the empire. Calmet.

VER. 14. And every mountain. In the dreadful confusion of the Roman empire, in the time of Constantine, so great was the revolution, that mountains appeared, as it were, moved out of their places; islands shifted from their accustomed situations. We behold at one time seven persons, Maximin Galerius, Maxentius, Severus Cæsar, Maximin, Alexander, Maximin Hercules, and Licinius, all aiming at the empire. The first six perished in nine years, from 305 to 314: Licinius was strangled in 324. All these were enemies of the Christian religion. Constantine, who supported it, remained sole master of the empire. Calmet.

CHAP. VII. VER. 1. I saw four Angels, &c. Though some understand here evil spirits, whom God may make use of as instruments to punish the wicked, yet we may rather, with other interpreters, understand good angels sent from God to guard and protect his faithful servants both from evil spirits and wicked men. Wi.

VER. 2. Having the seal. This sign is generally supposed to be the sign of the cross. In the East, it was the custom to impress some indelible mark upon the soldiers. This sign amongst the ancient Christians was used on every occasion. Calmet.

VER. 3. Hurt not the earth, &c. Some understand Christ himself, who gives his commands in this manner to the Angels; others, an Angel of a higher rank or order.—Till we seal the servants of our God in their foreheads, which may be expounded, let not persecutions and trials come upon them till they are strengthened by the spirit and grace of God, with which S. Paul sometimes says the servants of God are signed and sealed. See 2 Cor. i. 22. Ephes. i. 13. He alludes to the passages of Ezech. (C. ix. 4.) where God bids an Angel mark with the letter Tau the foreheads of those who should not be hurt by the judgments that were to fall upon Jerusalem; so God would protect the faithful Christians, who believed and put their trust in Christ crucified, and who from the first ages, in testimony of this faith, used to sign themselves by making the sign of the cross on their foreheads, of which the letter Tau was a figure or resemblance. See Tertul. lib. de Corona militis. I beg the reader's patience, if I here set down what I find in the great Synopsis Papiæ, in folio, put out by Mr. Andrew Willet, and dedicated first to queen Elizabeth, and afterwards to king James the first. Among his demonstrations, as he calls them, that the pope is antichrist, (Controv. iv. q. 10. p. 232 and 233) he tells us in plain terms, "that the sign of the cross is one of the visible signs of antichrist. And who," saith he, "hath taught the papists that the sign of the cross is to be borne or made on men's foreheads? And that with crossing the forehead we are preserved from dangers? The superstitious marks of the cross had their beginning from the beast's name, since the number of the beast's name in the Revelation of S. John is by these Greek letters, χϞς. The first letter, χ, is a cross; the middle letter, Ϟ, (in Latin, X) is also a side long cross; and the last letter, Ϟ, contains both χ and Ϟ, (1635)

4 And I heard the number of them that were sealed, an hundred forty-four thousand sealed, of all the tribes of the children of Israel.

5 Of the tribe of Juda, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Ruben, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Gad, twelve thousand sealed.

6 Of the tribe of Aser, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Nephthali, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Manasses, twelve thousand sealed:

7 Of the tribe of Simeon, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Levi, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Issachar, twelve thousand sealed:

8 Of the tribe of Zabulon, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Joseph, twelve thousand sealed: Of the tribe of Benjamin, twelve thousand sealed.

9 After this I saw a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and tribes, and peoples, and tongues: standing before the throne, and in sight of the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands:

10 And they cried with a loud voice, saying: Salvation to our God, who sitteth upon the throne, and to the Lamb.

11 And all the Angels stood round about the throne, and the ancients, and the four living creatures: and they fell down before the throne, upon their faces, and adored God, 12 Saying: Amen. Benediction and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, honour, and power, and strength to our God for ever and ever. Amen.

* Isai. xlix. 10.—^b Isai. xxv. 8. Infra xxi. 4.

of which the latter is called a headless cross:" and then Mr. Willet concludes in these words, "And thus it plainly appears, that the marks whereby the papists say they honour Christ, are rather a dishonour to him, and are in very deed the cognizance of antichrist." Such an ingenious, and at the same time learned fancy, may perhaps outvie even those we have cited out of Mr. Brightman, and may be equally serviceable to any country parson on the fifth of November, or on any day when he shall think fit to hold forth against the pope or popery. I suppose that Mr. Willet did not know that the Christians in the first ages (as all Catholics to this day) made so frequent use of the sign of the cross, as it is witnessed by Tertullian above two hundred years before even any Protestant pretended that the popes began to be antichrists, or the great antichrist. And this, says he, they do by a tradition from father to son. At every setting forward or going about any thing, at coming home or going out, at putting on our clothes, at going to bathe, to table, to light a candle, to bed, to sit down, to any thing, we make the sign of the cross on our foreheads. And this is a tradition. The like is witnessed by S. Chrys. S. Cyril of Jerusalem, and many of the Fathers. At the same time that with our hand we make the sign of the cross, we say these words, "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;" the words used when any one is made a Christian, according to the command of Christ. So that the action itself puts us in mind that Jesus Christ died for us on the cross; and by the words, we make a profession of our Christian faith, that we believe in one God and three Persons. Can we do this too often? Dare we be ashamed of doing it? Was ever any thing more ridiculous than to call this in very deed the cognizance of antichrist? What must Mr. Willet have thought of the Protestants, or what can they think of him, and such like folio scribblers, to prove the popes the beast in S. John's Revelation? What must, I say, Mr. Willet think of the public liturgy, or the book of common prayer, approved and used by the Church of England in his time, and which ordains that the sign of the cross shall be made by the priest on the forehead of every one that is baptized? This, according to Mr. Willet, is (when any one is made a Christian) to give him the badge and visible sign of antichrist, to the dishonour of Christ, and what in very deed is the cognizance of antichrist. Wi.

VER. 4. I heard the number of them that were sealed. By these determinate numbers need only be understood a great number of Jews converted and saved, though much greater was the number of the saved taken from among the Gentiles of all nations, of which it is said, I saw a great multitude, which no man could number, &c. Wi.—The number of one hundred and forty-four thousand is not to be taken in a literal and strict sense, but to express in general terms the great number of the elect; for it appears that the tribe of Dan, which certainly must have produced some elect, is not mentioned, and the tribe of Joseph is put in lieu of that of Ephraim; so that if it be supposed that these numbers must be taken literally, the tribe of Joseph would have produced a double number to that of any other tribe, since Manasses was his son, and the tribe of Dan would have produced none. Ven. Bede.

VER. 10. Salvation to our God; i. e. our salvation is from God, to whom be praise for ever, Amen, benediction, or blessings, thanksgiving, &c. Wi

(1636)

13 And one of the ancients answered and said to me: Who are these that are clothed in white robes, and whence came they?

14 And I said to him: My lord, thou knowest. And he said to me: These are they who are come out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and have made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

15 Therefore they are before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple; and he that sitteth on the throne, shall dwell over them.

16 *They shall not hunger nor thirst any more, neither shall the sun fall on them, nor any heat.

17 For the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall rule them, and shall lead them to the fountains of the waters of life, ^b and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

CHAP. VIII.

The seventh seal is opened: the Angels with the seven trumpets.

AND when he had opened the seventh seal, there was silence in heaven, as it were for half an hour.

2 And I saw seven Angels standing in the presence of God: and to them were given seven trumpets.

3 And another Angel came, and stood before the altar, having a golden censer: and there was given to him much incense, that he should offer of the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar, which is before the throne of God.

4 And the smoke of the incense of the prayers of the saints ascended up before God, from the hand of the Angel.

VER. 14. White in the blood of the Lamb. That is, they have been cleansed and purified from sin, by the death, merits, and grace of Christ crucified. Wi.—The whole of this verse must be understood in a mystical sense, for we are said to make our garments white in the blood of the Lamb, when we enter into his Church by baptism, or wash away our sins by penance or martyrdom. Calmet.

VER. 15. Therefore they are before the throne of God . . . in his temple; i. e. therefore are they now happy in heaven, where the temple was represented to be, as observed before.—He that sitteth on the throne shall dwell, or dwell with them. Wi.

VER. 17. The Lamb which is in the midst of the throne, God and man, shall rule* them as a shepherd does his flock. By the Greek, And shall lead them unto fountains of living waters; † lit. to the fountains of life of waters; shall bless them with everlasting happiness. Wi.—He represents the happiness of the saints, under the idea of being exempt from all the wants and evils of this life. For we are not able, according to truth itself, to conceive the happiness that is prepared for us; wherefore we must content ourselves with considering what it is not, rather than what it is. He, nevertheless, seems to compare heaven to a temple or palace, in which we observe ministers and servants all in their proper order, his counsellors (if we may be allowed the expression) and friends seated in presence of their prince, and the souls of the just singing the praises of the Most High. Car.

* V. 17. Reget eos, καταρτί, &c.

† Ibid. Ad vitæ fontes aquarum, ἐν ζωῆς πηγῶν ὕδατι; not ζώσας, as in some MSS.

CHAP. VIII. VER. 1. There was silence in heaven: which is to represent as it were a general consternation, and an expectation of dreadful events at the opening of the seventh seal, and when seven Angels stood prepared to sound seven trumpets. Wi.

VER. 3. Stood before the altar, having a golden censer. In the visions is an allusion to the tabernacle and its parts. The altar of perfumes was in the sanctuary, hard by the entrance into the sanctum sanctorum, and here the golden altar is said to be before the throne of God. The incense from the censer is said to be the prayers of all the Saints, which the Angel offered up. The altar seems to signify our Saviour Christ, as the prayers of all the faithful are always made through the merits of Christ, our only chief Mediator or Redeemer. By the fire cast upon the earth, (v. 5.) is signified the fire of divine charity, now to be exercised by the ways of justice, to draw persons to their conversion by punishments. Wi.—We may observe both in this and other places of the Apocalypse, that S. John makes continual allusions to what was done in the temple of Jerusalem, for which he gives us symbolical reasons. Thus on the present occasion, the incense which was offered morning and evening in the temple, on the golden altar, is represented as done here in heaven. Calmet.

5 And the Angel took the censer, and filled it with the fire of the altar, and cast it on the earth, and there were thunders, and voices, and lightnings, and a great earthquake.

6 And the seven Angels who had the seven trumpets, prepared themselves to sound the trumpet.

7 And the first Angel sounded the trumpet, and there was hail, and fire mingled with blood, and it was cast on the earth, and the third part of the earth was burnt up, and the third part of the trees was burnt up, and all green grass was burnt up.

8 And the second Angel sounded the trumpet: and as it were a great mountain, burning with fire, was cast into the sea, and the third part of the sea became blood;

9 And the third part of those creatures died which had life in the sea, and the third part of the ships was destroyed.

10 And the third Angel sounded the trumpet, and a great star fell from heaven, burning as it were a torch, and it fell on the third part of the rivers, and upon the fountains of waters:

11 And the name of the star is called Wormwood: and the third part of the waters became wormwood: and many men died of the waters, because they were made bitter.

VER. 7. The first Angel sounded, &c. From this place to the eleventh verse of chap. xx, the visions are differently expounded. Some interpret them, without applying them to any particular events, as general comminations, in a mystical and allegorical sense of the many persecutions which God permits to happen to his Church. Others think that they are all predictions, which shall not happen till a little time before the end of the world, in antichrist's time, after which will follow the day of general judgment, the punishment of the wicked, and the reward of the just. But there are others, both ancient and later writers, as in particular Aleazar, the bishop of Meaux (Bossuet), Pere Alleman, to whom we may add among the Protestants, Dr. Hammond, whom the bishop of Meaux calls the most learned of all the English Protestants. According to the interpretations which these writers have followed, these predictions of S. John (except the last persecution, when the devil shall be let loose, C. xx, 7, in the time of the great antichrist) have already happened in the three first ages, during the persecutions of the heathen emperors, as I shall briefly take notice. Hail therefore, and fire, blood, falling of stars, &c. some look upon as mystical representations, to signify that a great many trials and persecutions shall happen to the good, and a great many punishments and chastisements shall fall upon the wicked; with this grand difference, that the sufferings of the good shall be short and momentary, and their reward a crown of endless glory; but the wicked, if any of them escape punishments in this world, can never escape eternal torments with the devils in the next. 2. It is also a very common opinion, that all these disasters shall happen in a great measure literally about antichrist's time, a very short time before the end of the world. 3. Others apply all these events to the judgments which God's justice exercised either upon the Jews, in the time of Trajan and Adrian, or upon the heathen Roman emperors, and upon the pagan city of Rome for persecuting the servants of God. Wi.—As these Angels with their trumpets, according to Pastorini, denote the sufferings of the Church during the seven ages that it lasts, it may not be improper to point out the time, according to his opinion, when each Angel sounded the trumpet. Thus the first trumpet denotes the persecutions of the first three centuries, in which the Christians suffered death by the sword, (denoted by blood) by being stoned, (denoted by the hail) and by fire, when the third part of the trees were burnt, that is, the third part of the clergy were destroyed. Pas.

VER. 8. The great mountain denotes the heresy of Arius, which caused the greatest troubles in the Church, and destroyed many churches, which are here denoted by the ships. Pas.

VER. 10. A great star fell. The bishop of Meaux thinks this agrees very well to Cochebas, or Barcochebas, who in Adrian's time pretended to be the true Messiah of the Jews: his name also signifying a star. He was the chief cause of those wars, and of the utter destruction of the Jews. Wi.—The third trumpet points out to us the punishment that falls upon the Roman empire, in its destruction by the northern nations. These people spread themselves over the third part of the rivers and provinces of ancient Rome. The star is called wormwood, from the bitter calamities and miseries which they inflicted on the Roman empire. Pas.

VER. 12. The third part of the sun was smitten. This may signify a third part of men killed in those wars, or (according to the opinion that refers all to antichrist's time) that in those days the sun and moon shall not give above a third part of their light. Wi.—Here we behold a noble figure of the Church, which whilst in its most flourishing state, like the sun, is suddenly obscured, and a third part extinguished by the heresy and schism of the Greeks, under Photius, which began in 866, and infected all orders of Christians, clergy and laity, princes and private individuals, signified by the sun, moon, and stars. Pas.

VER. 13. The voice of one eagle: in divers Greek copies, of an Angel, saying, 12 And the fourth Angel sounded the trumpet, and the third part of the sun was smitten, and the third part of the moon, and the third part of the stars, so that the third part of them was darkened, and a third part of the day shined not, and of the night in like manner.

13 And I beheld, and heard the voice of one eagle flying through the midst of heaven, saying with a loud voice: Wo, wo, wo to the inhabitants of the earth, by reason of the other voices of the three Angels, who are yet to sound the trumpet.

CHAP. IX.

Locusts come forth from the bottomless pit: the vision of the army of horsemen.

AND the fifth Angel sounded the trumpet: and I saw a star fall from heaven upon the earth, and to him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

2 And he opened the bottomless pit: and the smoke of the pit ascended as the smoke of a great furnace: and the sun was darkened, and the air, with the smoke of the pit:

3 And from the smoke of the pit there came out locusts upon the earth, and power was given to them, as the scorpions of the earth have power:

4 And it was commanded them that they should not wo, wo, wo. It is to foretell, in general, greater punishments and miseries. The Prot. translation has followed those Greek copies that read an Angel; but Dr. Wells, in his amendments, has restored that reading of an eagle which the ancient Latin interpreter had met with. Wi.—An eagle, on account of its swiftness, is here represented as chosen to announce by its cry of wo on the three succeeding ages of the Church, greater disasters to be sustained than in the preceding ages. Pas.

CHAP. IX. VER. 1. The fifth Angel . . . and I saw a star, &c. This again may be to represent the confusion of all things in antichrist's time, or it may signify the fall and apostasy of great and learned men from the Christian faith. Bossuet applies it to the fall of Theodotus, of Byzantium, towards the end of the second age; but certainly no great stress can be laid on such arbitrary applications, which it is no hard matter to invent, as may be seen by the different fancies we may meet with about the locusts, &c. Wi.—Here is a description of the rise and progress of the reformation. This trumpet begins with announcing to us the fall of a star from heaven; a very just emblem of the apostasy of Luther, who in quality of a priest and religious man is styled a star, but renouncing his faith and vows, may truly be said to have fallen from heaven upon the earth. Past. hic.—To him (i. e. to the Angel, not to the fallen star) was given the key of the bottomless pit, which properly signifies hell. Wi.

VER. 2. And the smoke, &c. Luther and his followers propagated and defended their new doctrines with such heat and violence, as to occasion every where seditions and insurrections, which they seemed to glory in. Luther openly boasted of it. "You complain," said he, "that by our gospel the world is become more tumultuous; I answer, God be thanked for it; these things I would have so to be, and wo to me if such things were not."—The sun was darkened, &c. The light of faith, which is the word of God, may well be represented by the sun, according to that of the Psalm cxviii. 105. "Thy word, O Lord, is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my paths." And as the air is the spring of man's respiration and life, it may be a just type of morality, which gives spiritual life and worth to all human actions. By the sun, therefore, and air being darkened, we are to understand faith and morality obscured and perverted by the novel doctrines of the reformers. Past. hic.

VER. 3. There came out locusts; devils, in antichrist's time, when the chief devil, Abaddon, the destroyer, shall be as it were let loose. Others by locusts, understand the Goths and those barbarous people that made an irruption into the Roman empire, in the time of Decius, about an. 250. Others again, by locusts, understand heretics, and especially those heretics that sprang from the Jews, and with them denied the divinity of our Saviour Christ, as Theodotus, Praxeas, Noetus, Paul of Samosata, Sabellius, Arius, &c. These were the great enemies of the Christian religion, and instruments of the devil: they tormented and infected the souls of men, stinging them like scorpions with the poison of their heresies. They had power for five months, by which is signified for a short term, but had no power to hurt those who were sealed with the seal of God on their foreheads. God protected, at least from sin, his faithful servants. It is to no purpose to give the reader divers fancies and inventions about their shape, their heads, tails, hair, teeth, &c. nor is it worth my while to confute such writers as Mr. Willet, who, Brightman-like, makes Abaddon the pope, and the locusts to be friars mendicant. With this fifth trumpet ended the first of the three woes, as we are told v. 12. Wi.—The locusts are commonly understood of heretics. They are not able to hurt the green tree; that is, such as have a lively faith, working by charity; but only the reprobate. The latter are represented as prepared to battle, as being ever ready to contend; they wear counterfeit gold on their heads, for all is but pretence and fiction; in shape they are as men, in smoothness of speech as women; in fury and rage against all that opposes them, hurt the grass of the earth, nor any green thing, nor any tree: but only the men who have not the sign of God on their foreheads:

5 And it was given to them that they should not kill them; but that they should torment them five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion when he striketh a man.

6 ^aAnd in those days men shall seek death, and shall not find it: and they shall desire to die, and death shall fly from them.

7 ^bAnd the shapes of the locusts were like to horses prepared for battle; and on their heads as it were crowns like gold: and their faces as the faces of men.

8 And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions:

9 And they had breastplates, as breastplates of iron, and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle:

10 And they had tails like scorpions, and stings were

^a Isai. ii. 10. ^b Osee x. 8. Luke xxiii. 30.—^c Wisd. xvi. 9.

as lions; their breasts and hearts are as hard as iron; they are full of noise and shuffling; the sting of their pestiferous doctrine is worse than that of a scorpion; but their reign is generally but for a short time. Ch.—Heretics are compared to locusts, says S. Jerom, because they are a species of insects extremely hurtful to mankind, as they occasion famine, eat up the harvest, and even strip the trees and the vines. With very great propriety then may the locusts here mentioned be understood of the first reformers, not only on account of their rapacity, but also for their number. Luther was their leader, by allowing every one to be his own interpreter of Scripture, the effects of which we have described by Dudithius, a learned Protestant divine, in his epistle to Beza. "What sort of people are our Protestants, straggling to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, sometimes to this side, and sometimes to that? You may, perhaps, know what their sentiments in matters of religion are to day; but you can never certainly tell what they will be to-morrow. In what article of religion do these churches agree, which have cast off the bishop of Rome? Examine all of them from top to bottom, and you will scarce find one thing affirmed by one which is not immediately condemned by another for wicked doctrine." The same confusion of opinions is thus described by an English Protestant, the learned Dr. Walton: "Aristarchus heretofore could scarcely find seven wise men in Greece, but with us scarce are to be found so many idiots; for all are doctors, all are divinely learned; there is not so much as the meanest fanatic, or jack pudding, who does not give you his own dreams for the word of God." Past. hic.

VER. 4. Nor any green thing. The Greek and Latin texts express it every green thing; meaning, that though the locusts, or the sects of Protestants, are allowed by the Almighty to seduce some of all sorts from the Church, yet that the generality of the faithful will be preserved unhurt. Past.

VER. 7. And the shapes of the locusts. We now come to the description of these locusts, which expresses the spirit of sedition and rebellion that animated the reformers and their proselytes. Luther proclaimed himself the leader in this as well as in other articles of the new discipline: see his works, particularly Contra statum Ecclesie et falsum nominatum ordinem Episcoporum, lib. contra Sylvester, Prieras, De Sæculari potestate et Contra Rusticos, &c. Erasmus thus describes the effects of the inflammatory doctrine of these ministers of evangelical liberty: "I saw them (the people) come forth from their sermons with fierce looks and threatening countenances," like men "that just come from hearing bloody invectives and seditious speeches." Accordingly, we found "these evangelical people always ready to rise up in arms, and equally as good at fighting as at disputing." The learned Protestant historian, Dr. Heylin, in his Cosmography, (B. i.) says of the Calvinists: "Rather than their discipline should not be admitted, and the episcopal government destroyed in all the Churches of Christ, they were resolved to depose kings, ruin kingdoms, and to subvert the fundamental constitutions of all civil states."—And on their heads, &c. These crowns shew clearly their general spirit of independence; and their faces being as the faces of men, indicate the presumption with which they announced themselves as teachers of orthodox and holy doctrine. Past. hic.

VER. 8. And they had hair as the hair of women. This latter allusion, unhappily for the sectaries, betrays too plainly their sensual disposition towards that sex, their shameful doctrine on that score, and the scandalous example of their practice. Luther, in despite of a vow he had solemnly made to God of observing continence, married; and married a nun, equally bound as himself to that sacred religious promise! But, as S. Jerom says, "it is rare to find a heretic that loves chastity." Luther's example had indeed been anticipated by Carlstadtus, a priest and ringleader of the Sacramentarians, who had married a little before; and it was followed by most of the heads of the reformation. Zuinglius, a priest and chief of that sect which bore his name, took a wife. Bucer, a religious man of the order of S. Dominic, became a Lutheran, left his cloister, and married a nun. Ecclampadius, a Brigittin monk, became a Zuinglian, and also married. Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury, had also his wife. Peter Martyr, a canon regular, embraced the doctrine of Calvin; but followed the example of Luther, and married a nun. Ochin, general of the Capuchins, be- (1638) in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months: and they had over them

11 A king, the Angel of the bottomless pit: whose name, in Hebrew, is Abaddon; and in Greek, Appollyon; in Latin, Exterminans.

12 One wo is past, and behold there come two woes more hereafter.

13 And the sixth Angel sounded the trumpet: and I heard a voice from the four horns of the golden altar, which is before the eyes of God,

14 Saying to the sixth Angel, who had the trumpet: Loose the four Angels, who are bound in the great river Euphrates.

15 And the four Angels were loosed, who were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, to kill the third part of men.

16 And the number of the army of horsemen was twenty thousand times ten thousand. And I heard the number of them.

17 And thus I saw the horses in the vision: and they who sat on them, had breastplates of fire, and came a Lutheran, and also married. Beza, the most celebrated minister in the Calvinistic party, being asked in his old age, by an intimate acquaintance of his, (Deshayes, governor of Montargis) what was the leading reason which connected him so closely with the Calvinists? Beza called in his mistress, a beautiful young girl who lived with him, and said: "That is the principal reason which convinces me of the excellence of my religion." Marsollier's life of S. Francis of Sales, book iii.—Thus the principal leaders in the reformation went forth preaching the new gospel, with two marks upon them—apostacy from the faith, and open violation of the most sacred vows. The passion of lust, it is also well known, hurried Henry VIII. of England, into a separation from the Catholic Church, and ranked him amongst the reformers. Past. hic.—Teeth of lions. What is more known than the truth of this representation! Did not the reformers, wherever they got footing, pillage the churches, seize the church possessions, destroy the monasteries, and appropriate to themselves the revenues! Such was the case in Germany, in Holland, in France, in Switzerland, in Scotland, and in England; what a scene of rapine! Let it suffice to say, that in the reign of Henry VIII. were suppressed not less than 645 monasteries, 90 colleges, 110 hospitals, and 2374 chantries and free chapels; (Baker's Chron.) the lands, &c. of all which were confiscated to the king. Is not this to devour with lions' teeth? The whole explication here given of the allegory of the locusts, we presume, appears so consonant with the history of the reformation, that the propriety will not be denied. The application is even so obvious, that the learned Protestant divine, Dr. Walton, used it for describing the multitude of new sectaries that swarmed out of the English Church. Thus he speaks in the preface to his Polyglot: "The bottomless pit seems to have been set open, from whence a smoke has risen, which has darkened the heavens and the stars; and locusts are come out with stings, a numerous race of sectaries and heretics, who have renewed all the ancient heresies, and invented many monstrous opinions of their own. These have filled our cities, villages, camps, houses, nay our pulpits too, and lead the poor deluded people with them to the pit of perdition." Past. Apoc. ix.

VER. 10. And their power was to hurt men five months. The duration of their power is here limited, but we dare not venture to explain what is meant by the dark expression, five months; time to come must clear up the difficulty. A.

VER. 13. At the sounding of the sixth trumpet, are said to be loosed the four angels bound in the river Euphrates. By these four angels, and the two hundred millions of horsemen, many understand the devils and their instruments, men incited by them in antichrist's time, to make war and persecute the Church of Christ, who shall destroy a third part, that is, a great part of men then in the world. Divers others apply this to the Persians, the successors of the Parthians, who about the middle of the third age, in the time of Valerian, a great persecutor of the Christians, passed the Euphrates, which used to be the bounds of the Roman empire to the east, defeated, took, and kept Valerian prisoner, which by its consequences gave a great stroke to the Roman empire. See the bishop of Meaux, Pere Alleman, &c. Wi.

VER. 15. And the four angels were loosed. This seems to indicate the moment in which Satan himself is loosed from the abyss or hell, where, as we shall see Apoc. xx. 2. he was chained up for a thousand years. This is the time of antichrist, whose coming, as S. Paul says, is according to the working of Satan. 2 Thess. ii. 9. The antichristian period is described by the ancient Fathers as the most dreadful of all; and the Apocalypse plainly shews it to be so, as we shall see. But we have this comfort, that his time will be short. He must be loosed a little time. Apoc. xx. 3.

VER. 16. Twenty thousand times ten thousand, or two hundred millions. Such an immense multitude cannot be accounted for, but by supposing a great part of it to consist of the infernal beings in human form, as it is doubtful whether there be that number of men capable of bearing arms upon the whole globe of the earth.

VER. 17. And thus I saw the horses in the vision. The horsemen appeared to S. John with breastplates of fire, and of hyacinth, and of brimstone. By this hyacinth, and brimstone, and the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions: and from their mouths proceeded fire, and smoke, and brimstone.

18 And by these three plagues was the third part of men killed, by the fire, and by the smoke, and by the brimstone, which issued out of their mouths.

19 For the power of the horses is in their mouths, and in their tails. For, their tails are like to serpents, having heads; and with them they hurt.

20 And the rest of the men, who were not slain by these plagues, neither did penance for the works of their hands, that they should not adore devils, and idols of gold, and silver, and brass, and stone, and wood, which neither can see, n. hear, nor walk:

21 Neither did they penance for their murders, nor for their sorceries, nor for their fornication, nor for their thefts.

CHAP. X.

The cry of a mighty Angel: he gives John a book to eat.

AND I saw another mighty Angel come down from heaven clothed with a cloud, and a rainbow upon his head, and his face was as the sun, and his feet as pillars of fire;

2 And he had in his hand a little book, open: and he set his right foot upon the sea, and his left foot upon the land:

3 And he cried out with a loud voice, as when a lion roareth. And when he had cried out, seven thunders uttered their voices.

4 And when the seven thunders had uttered their voices, I was about to write: and I heard a voice from heaven saying to me: Seal up the things which the seven thunders have spoken: and write them not.

expression is indicated the firing of carabines, or such firearms as cavalry use, which are applied to the breast when shot off. S. John took the fire that issued out of the muskets to come from the horsemen's breast, on which the muskets rested, and so thought the horsemen had breastplates of fire. The prophet here even describes to us the composition of gunpowder, with its three ingredients, viz. brimstone or sulphur, fire or charcoal, and hyacinth or saltpetre; because saltpetre, when set on fire, emits a flame of a fine purple colour, similar to the colour of the hyacinth stone. Here then we see revealed to S. John both the composition and use of gunpowder, to which he and all mankind at that time were strangers. Then it is said: And the heads of the horses, &c. Here is pointed out the artillery of the army, or cannon. He saw in this vision the whole army drawn up at a distance, and the artillery placed upon a line with the cavalry. He seemed to confound the cannon with the horses, and the cannons' mouths with the mouths of the horses, as the height of both from the ground is nearly the same. He describes the appearances as he saw in the vision, not the reality. When therefore he says, the heads of the horses were as the heads of lions, it is the same as if he said, the mouths of the cannon were as to the noise they made, like the mouths of roaring lions. Hence it appears that S. John, in this vision, both saw the fire of the cannon, and heard the explosion.

VER. 19. For the power of the horses. The power of the imagined horses or real cannon, lying in their mouths and in their tails, signifies that the mischievous power of the cannon is directed to the object by their mouths, but takes its birth in the tail or breech of the cannon, where the charge is lodged: whence the cannon's breach is here compared to the serpent's head, which contains its venom. Past, hic.

VER. 20. The rest of men, who were not slain by these plagues, which before are metaphorically called fire, smoke, and brimstone, did not for all that do penance, nor repent of their idolatrous worship of devils, and of idols of gold, silver, &c. nor for their sorceries of magic, nor for their fornication, nor for their thefts. This again may be either understood of what shall happen hereafter, a little before the end of the world (see a Lapid); or perhaps of the Roman heathen idolaters, who still persisted in their iniquitous practices. Dr. Hammond expounds it of the Gnostic heretics. But to apply it to popish Christians, is a groundless invention of the late pretended reformers, neither supported by any authority or reason; (though Dr. W. is pleased to join with them) whereas all Catholics (and as he calls them, papists) have constantly declared in their controversies, in all their catechisms, that they adore none but God alone. Of this more hereafter. Wi.

CHAP. X. VER. 1. I saw another mighty Angel. Some expound it of Christ himself: others of an Angel, representing the power of God over the sea and land. Wi.

VER. 2. Seven thunders uttered their voices, to signify the following approaching evils, which S. John is ordered not to write down, though they were shewn

5 *And the Angel whom I saw standing upon the sea, and upon the land, lifted up his hand to heaven:

6 And he swore by him that liveth for ever and ever, who created heaven, and the things which are therein; and the earth, and the things which are therein: and the sea, and the things which are therein. That time shall be no longer:

7 But in the days of the voice of the seventh Angel, when he shall begin to sound the trumpet, the mystery of God shall be finished, as he hath declared by his servants, the prophets.

8 And I heard a voice from heaven speaking to me again, and saying: Go, and take the book, that is open, from the hand of the Angel standing upon the sea, and upon the land.

9 And I went to the Angel, saying unto him, that he should give me the book. And he said to me: ^bTake the book and devour it: and it shall make thy belly bitter: ^cit in thy mouth it shall be sweet as honey.

10 And I took the book from the hand of the Angel, and devoured it: and it was in my mouth sweet as honey: and when I had devoured it, my belly was bitter:

11 And he said to me: Thou must prophesy again to many nations, and peoples, and tongues, and to kings.

CHAP. XI.

He is ordered to measure the temple: the two witnesses.

AND there was given me a reed like unto a rod, and it was said to me: Arise, and measure the temple of God, and the altar, and them that adore in it.

^a Dan. ii. 7. — ^b Ezech. i. 1.

to him; and if he was not to write them, even in such a mystical and prophetic manner as he wrote the other things, who can pretend to know any thing of them? Wi.

VER. 4. And when the seven thunders had, &c. S. John is not permitted to write, but ordered to seal up the things which the seven thunders had spoken; which circumstance seems to insinuate, that the things spoken by the seven thunders were seven particulars of antichrist's persecution, as the word thunder is generally used in the Apocalypse to denote some disaster; and these seven particulars being most dreadful and severe, the Almighty chose to have them sealed up, or kept concealed, lest the foreknowledge of them should too much terrify and damp the human mind.

VER. 5-6. The Angel . . . swore . . . that time shall be no longer. This seems to favour very much the exposition of those interpreters who think that all these things are not to be fulfilled till some short time before the end of the world. Others (of which see Alcazar, &c.) take this to be a prediction of the ruin and destruction of the Jews, particularly under the emperor Adrian. Others (see the bishop of Meaux) understand by this, that the time was approaching when God, by his judgments, would put an end to the idolatry and heathen worship of pagan Rome, and that his providence would make the Christian faith triumph over all its adversaries, and his Church flourish, as foretold by the ancient prophets; that is, this should come to pass when the seventh Angel should sound his trumpet. Wi.

VER. 7. Declared. Lit. evangelized, to signify the good tidings, agreeable to the gospel, of the final victory of Christ, and of that eternal life which should be the reward of the temporal sufferings of the servants of God. Ch.

VER. 9-10. Take the book, and devour it. See Ezech. ii. and iii. It was sweet in my mouth; I was delighted to read and hear the victories and glory of God's faithful servants; but it became bitter in my belly, when I considered the judgments of God upon so many sinners, who by their own wilful blindness were lost for eternity. Wi.—This mysterious book presented to S. John precisely between the sound of the sixth and seventh trumpet, or rather between the irruption announced at the sound of the sixth trumpet, and the persecution which is then to follow and to precede the sound of the seventh trumpet, appears to represent the book of the gospel, which shall be given to the Jews at the end of the sixth age of the Church. This book will be then to them full of sweetness, because they will see in it the tender love of Jesus Christ; but at the same time it will cause bitterness, because they will see in it with grief their infidelity and that of their fathers. V.

VER. 11. Thou must prophesy again: we may understand what still follows in this Apocalypse, or his gospel written afterwards, or his preaching and instructing the Asiatic Churches. Wi.

CHAP. XI. VER. 1. The apostle is ordered to measure the temple. Two prophets are promised, to teach mankind. They are put to death, and in three

2 But the court, which is without the temple, cast out, and measure it not, because it is given to the Gentiles, and the holy city they shall tread under foot forty-two months:

3 And I will give to my two witnesses, and they shall prophesy a thousand two hundred sixty days, clothed in sackcloth.

4 These are the two olive-trees, and the two candlesticks, standing before the Lord of the earth.

5 And if any man will hurt them, fire shall come out of their mouths, and shall devour their enemies: and if any man will hurt them, in this manner must he be killed.

6 These have power to shut heaven, that it rain not in the days of their prophecy: and they have power over waters to turn them into blood, and to strike the earth with all plagues as often as they will.

7 And when they shall have finished their testimony, the beast, that ascendeth out of the abyss, shall make war against them, and shall overcome them, and kill them.

8 And their bodies shall lie in the streets of the great city, which is called spiritually Sodom, and Egypt, where also their Lord was crucified.

9 And they of the tribes, and peoples, and tongues, days and a half after they are raised to life, and ascend to heaven. A great earthquake follows. The seventh Angel sounds the trumpet. The elders give thanks to God.—Measure the temple, &c. This is to signify that divine Providence would always protect his faithful servants, who are called the temple of God; (1 Cor. iii. 17. and 2 Cor. vi. 16.) but by the outward court not to be measured, because it is given to the Gentiles, &c. (v. 2) is commonly understood idolaters, infidels, heretics, who are not in the temple of God, nor in his Church. It is an allusion to the Jewish temple, and the different divisions of it, the Gentiles not being permitted to enter into the temple itself, but only into that outward part called the court of the Gentiles. Wi.—The churches consecrated to the true God, are so much diminished in number, that they are represented by S. John as one church; its ministers officiate at one altar; and all the true faithful are so few, with respect to the bulk of mankind, that the evangelist sees them assembled in one temple, to pay their adorations to the Most High. Pastorini.

VER. 2. *The holy city they shall tread under foot forty-two months. That is, Gentiles and Jews shall be permitted to persecute the Church and the faithful servants of God; but only for a short time, expressed by forty-two months, as elsewhere by twelve hundred and sixty days, and also by a time, and times, and half a time, which, as S. Jerom observes, is for a year, and two years, and half a year, which three different ways of speaking by years, by months, and by days, are only to signify that God never permits his faithful to be under any violent persecution for any long time. Wi.

VER. 3. My two witnesses shall prophesy twelve hundred sixty days. It is a very common interpretation, that by these two witnesses must be understood Henech and Elias, who are to come before the end of the world. It is true this is what we read in several of the ancient Fathers, inasmuch, that Dr. Wells in his paraphrase, calls it the "consent of the primitive fathers," and in his notes says, it is of "unexceptionable authority." This opinion (at least as to Elias) is grounded on those words of the prophet Malachi, (C. iv. 5.) behold, I will send you Elias, the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord; and also on the words of our Saviour, Christ, (Matt. xvii. 11.) where he tells his disciples; Elias indeed shall come, and restore all things. But I cannot say that the consent of the fathers is so unanimous as to Henech: for we find by S. Hilary, that some thought Jeremy was to come with Elias, and he himself thought that with Elias would come Moses. See his commentary on Matt. p. 710, Nov. edit. Secondly, allowing it a received opinion that Henech and Elias are again to come before the day of judgment, yet it is not the constant doctrine of the ancient fathers, that by these two witnesses in this place of the Apocalypse, must be understood Henech and Elias. S. Cyprian expounds it of two sorts of martyrs for the Catholic faith; to wit, they who suffered death, and others who only suffered imprisonment, loss of goods, and the like. Others expound it of the testimonies concerning Christ and his Church, of which some are in the Old Testament, some in the New. To these we must join all those interpreters who expound all the visions and predictions in the Apocalypse, till the 20th chapter, of the persecutions raised by the Jews: or by the heathens against the Church, which have already happened. Of these, both as to ancient fathers and later interpreters, see Alcazar in his Prolegomena, note 6, p. 33, and note 12, p. 48. Wi.—Two witnesses It is commonly understood of Henech and Elias. Ch.

VER. 4. These are the two olive-trees, flourishing with works of piety and mercy, and the two candlesticks shining with faith and good works. Wi.

VER. 5. And if any man will hurt them, &c. These two verses seem to signify both the miracles which God many times wrought by the prayers of his and nations, shall see their bodies for three days and a half: and they shall not suffer their bodies to be laid in sepulchres.

10 And the inhabitants of the earth shall rejoice over them, and make merry: and shall send presents one to another, because these two prophets tormented them that dwelt upon the earth.

11 And after three days and a half, the spirit of life from God entered into them. And they stood upon their feet, and great fear fell upon them that saw them.

12 And they heard a great voice from heaven, saying to them: Come up hither. And they went up into heaven in a cloud: and their enemies saw them.

13 And at that hour there was a great earthquake, and a tenth part of the city fell: and there were slain in the earthquake, names of men seven thousand; and the rest were cast into a fear, and gave glory to the God of heaven.

14 The second wo is past: and behold the third wo will come quickly.

15 And the seventh Angel sounded the trumpet: and there were great voices in heaven, saying: The kingdom of this world is become our Lord's and his Christ's, and he shall reign for ever and ever: Amen.

martyrs, as he had done formerly in the time of Elias, and the exemplary punishments with which from time to time he chastised those by whom they were persecuted, and that he will do the like by Henech and Elias, when they shall come. Wi.—In this and the following verse are expressed the miraculous powers with which the two witnesses will be invested. These powers will be necessary to enable them to prove the truth of their doctrine. Every messenger who appears with a commission from God, is always furnished with means to prove it. Thus our Saviour and his apostles worked miracles in testimony of the Christian religion. And in the Old Testament, Elias convicted the false prophets by a miracle. See 3 K. xviii. Every new teacher consequently, who comes destitute of this sanction, can claim no credit, but is only to be considered as an impostor. Past.

VER. 7. The beast, &c. God, for the greater good and glory of his servants, permits the devil by antichrist, and such like instruments, to torment them, and put them to death; and yet by dying they conquer, to the eternal confusion of their persecutors, who shall behold them going up to heaven, to be there happy with God in his kingdom for ever. Wi.—Antichrist, impelled by Satan, shall kill them. Past.

VER. 8. Their bodies shall lie in the streets. It is what has often happened to the bodies of the martyrs, and may happen to Henech and Elias, for three days and a half, for a short time.—The great city. Some understand any city where Christians are persecuted. Others by the following words, where also their Lord was crucified, will needs have to be understood Jerusalem, which they hold shall be rebuilt in the time of antichrist, and where by him shall be put to death Henech and Elias. But others think it may be expounded of nenthen Rome, which in a mystical sense might be called Sodom for its infamous crimes, and Egypt for its idolatries and superstitions, and where Christ might be said to be crucified, not as to himself, but in his members, according to what he himself said, Mat. xxv. 40. "inasmuch as you did it to one of these, my least brethren, you did it to me." Wi.—City; Jerusalem, which it is supposed will be the residence of antichrist, and filled with a great concourse of people. Menochius.

VER. 10. The inhabitants of the earth shall rejoice, &c. The persecutors rejoice and make merry for a while, when they seem to get the better of the Christians. Dioclesian caused pillars to be erected to him, as if he had destroyed the Christian religion; and when, by his cruelties he saw the faith of Christ, still increase more and more, he fell into a kind of madness, and laid down his empire. See Baron. ad an. Dom. 304, p. 771. Wi.

VER. 11. The spirit of life from God entered into them, &c. It is an allusion to a vision in the prophet Ezechiel, c. xxxvii. Wi.

VER. 12. A great earthquake. By which may be signified the consternation that fell upon the persecutors of Christians, when by God's visible chastisements, seven thousand (i. e. many of them) perished miserably; others were struck with fear, others converted. Wi.

VER. 14. These visions belonged to the second wo, and the third wo is at hand. Wi.—Second wo; the persecution of antichrist.—Third wo, or the day of judgment, is near at hand. Past.

VER. 15. The seventh Angel, &c. The saints and blessed spirits in heaven are represented praising God with loud voices, at the approaching of the kingdom of God; some understand at the end and consummation of the wicked world, after the destruction of antichrist, when the blessed shall reign in heaven: but others expound this of the triumph of the Christian faith and Church, when the providence of God putting an end to the persecutions against the Christian religion, by the miserable end of Dioclesian, Maximian, Maxentius, &c. made the kingdom of this world (the powerful Roman empire) become the kingdom of 16 And the four and twenty ancients, who sit on their seats in the sight of God, fell upon their faces and adored God, saying:

17 We give thee thanks, O Lord God Almighty, who art, and who wast, and who art to come: because thou hast taken thy great power, and thou hast reigned.

18 And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead to be judged, and to render a reward to thy servants, the prophets, and to the saints, and to them that fear thy name, little and great, and to destroy them who have corrupted the earth.

19 And the temple of God was opened in heaven: and the ark of his testament was seen in his temple, and there were lightnings, and voices, and an earthquake, and great hail.

CHAP. XII.

The vision of the woman clothed with the sun; and of the great dragon, her persecutor.

AND there appeared a great wonder in heaven: a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars:

2 And being with child, she cried travailling in birth, and was in pain to be delivered.

3 And there appeared another wonder in heaven: and behold, a great red dragon, having seven heads and ten horns, and on his head seven diadems, our Lord, by his raising Constantine the great to the empire, and under him making the faith of Christ triumph over all its persecutors and adversaries. Wi.

VER. 19. The temple of God was opened . . . the ark of his testament was seen; which P. Alleman applies to the cross that appeared in the air to Constantine. Such applications may be probable, but cannot be called certain. Wi.

* V. 2, &c. Atrium autem quod est foris, τὴν αὐτὴν ἔκλυον, not ἔκλυον, as in some MSS.—Dr. Wells, when he tells us, on the third verse of this chapter, that the consent of the primitive Church and their unexceptionable authority, require that by the two witnesses we understand Enoch and Elias, seems to be convinced of it by the authority (as he imagines) of Dr. Grabe. This we find by his own words, (p. 79) "I shall here," saith he, "adjoin a note of the late most learned and pious divine, Dr. Grabe, in reference to this matter, in a passage of S. Irenæus, i. v. c. v. It is note 4, in p. 405, Oxon. Edit. and runs thus in the doctor's own words: Disputationem de loco in quam Deus transtulerit, et huc usque viventes conservavit Enochum et Eliam Augustinus indicavit ad fidem non pertinere, at cum hic Irenæus doceat Apostolorum discipulos et (N. B.) auditores dixisse, &c. And the note in Dr. Wells ends with these words: Plures alios legendos notes licet. After this Dr. W. adds: I have taken the pains to transcribe all these citations that the reader may see how generally the Fathers do agree in this matter. And the same Dr. Wells a little after: Whereupon, saith he, the good doctor (Grabe) adds in reference to himself: mihi parum tutum videtur aliter nunc sentire. And had all others the like due esteem for the Fathers, and the like modest opinion of themselves, there would quickly be taken away that great and unhappy difference of opinions, which is now in the Church, as to points of religion." I wish, no less than Dr. Wells, that all others had the like due esteem of the Fathers, and the like modest opinion of themselves as the author of this note, and he who writ, mihi parum tutum videtur aliter nunc sentire. By such dispositions of submission to the doctrine delivered or witnessed by the consent of the primitive Fathers, might be quickly taken away the unhappy differences in points of religion betwixt us, and all pretended reformers, who, by setting up their private judgment against the authority of the Catholic Church, have brought in these differences. Luther led the way: I care not, said he, if a thousand Cyprians, a thousand Augustines, are against me, &c. But I am fully persuaded that Dr. W. did not know that all this Latin note, with the citations of the Fathers, and with those words upon them, (mihi parum tutum videtur aliter nunc sentire) are not the words of the learned and pious divine, Dr. Grabe, but are found word for word in the third note of Francisus Feuardentius, in his Paris edition of S. Irenæus, an. 1576, p. 322, from whence they were taken above a hundred years after by Dr. Grabe. Had Dr. W. taken notice that they were the words of so warm an adversary of the pretended reformation as Feuardentius, I doubt whether he would have given such high commendations of the true author, with an N. B. on those words of Feuardentius, mihi parum tutum videtur, &c. But I am glad that Dr. Grabe and Dr. Wells are of the same judgment with the author of the note.

CHAP. XII. VER. 1. A woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet. By this woman, interpreters commonly understand the Church of Christ, shining with the light of faith, under the protection of the sun of justice, Jesus Christ. The moon, the Church, hath all changeable things of this world under her foot, the affections of the faithful being raised above them all.—A woman: the Church of God. It may also, by allusion, be applied to our blessed Lady.

4 And his tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and cast them to the earth; and the dragon stood before the woman, who was ready to be delivered, that, when she should be delivered, he might devour her son.

5 And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with an iron rod: and her son was taken up to God, and to his throne:

6 And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she had a place prepared by God, that there they should feed her a thousand two hundred and sixty days.

7 And there was a great battle in heaven: Michael and his Angels fought with the dragon, and the dragon fought, and his angels:

8 And they prevailed not, neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And that great dragon was cast out, the old serpent, who is called the devil, and Satan who seduceth the whole world, and he was cast forth unto the earth, and his angels were thrown down with him.

10 And I heard a loud voice in heaven, saying: Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: because the accuser of our brethren is cast forth, who accused them before our God day and night.

11 And they overcame him by the blood of the

The Church is clothed with the sun, that is, with Christ: she hath the moon, that is, the changeable things of the world, under her feet; and the twelve stars with which she is crowned, are the twelve apostles: she is in labour and pain, whilst she brings forth her children, and Christ in them, in the midst of afflictions and persecutions. Ch.—Under the figure of a woman and of a dragon, are represented the various attempts of Satan to undermine the Church.—On her head . . . twelve stars, her doctrine being delivered by the twelve apostles and their successors. Wi.

VER. 2. With child, &c. to signify that the Church, even in the time of persecutions, brought forth children to Christ. Wi.—It likewise signifies the difficulties which obstructed the first propagation of Christianity. Past.

VER. 3. Another wonder in heaven; that is, in the Church of Christ, though revealed to S. John, in the visions, as if they were seen in heaven.—A great red dragon; a fiery dragon, with seven heads and ten horns; i. e. many heads and many horns. By the dragon is generally understood the devil, (see v. 7 and 9) and by the heads and horns, kings and princes, who act under him, persecuting the servants of God. Wi.—Dragon, &c. the devil; and by the seven heads and ten horns, are meant those princes and governors who persecute the Church of Christ. Calmet.

VER. 4. His tail drew the third part of the stars: a great part of mankind. This is spoken with an allusion to the fall of Lucifer from heaven, with the rebellious angels, driven from thence by S. Michael. Wi.—According to Pastorini, this passage refers to the angels whom Lucifer drew after him by sin to the earth. Menochius interprets it of those bishops and eminent persons who fell under the weight of persecution, and apostatized.—And the dragon stood before the woman, &c. The devil is always ready, as far as God permits him, to make war against the Church and the faithful servants of God. The woman, the Church, brought forth a man child, or rather many men children, stout and valiant in the profession of the true faith, able to resist and triumph over the attempts of the persecutors in all nations, not of themselves, but by the grace and power of Jesus Christ, their protector, who is able to rule all nations as it were with a rod of iron, to frustrate all their attempts, and turn their hearts as he pleaseth. Wi.

VER. 5. A man child; that is, a masculine race of Christians, willing to confess the name of the Lord, and to fight his battles, who, through the merits of Jesus Christ, should triumph over all the attempts of the world. Calmet.—Her son (or children) was taken up to heaven, guarded by the special favour of God. They always overcome the devil, and all their adversaries, by reason of the blood of the Lamb, by the merits of Christ. And they loved not the life of the body so as to preserve it, by incurring the death of the soul. Wi.

VER. 6. The woman fled into the wilderness. The Church, in the times of persecutions, must be content to serve God in a private manner; but by divine Providence, such persecutions never lasted with violence only for a short time, signified by 1260 days, or as the same is expressed here, (v. 14) for a time, and times, and half a time, i. e. for a year, and two years, and half a year. Wi.—The Christians were accustomed to fly during the times of persecution into the deserts, to avoid the fury of the pagans. This was done by the greatest saints; and S. Jerom remarks that it was this which gave rise to the eremitical state of life.

VER. 10–12. Now is come salvation . . . rejoice, O ye heavens. The blessed in heaven rejoice for the victories of the faithful on earth, and also for the reward and glory which would shortly be given them in heaven. Wi.—Wo to the earth, &c. Both Pastorini and Calmet refer this wo to the persecution of Lamb, and by the word of their testimony, and they loved not their lives unto death.

12 Therefore rejoice, O ye heavens, and you that dwell therein. Wo to the earth, and to the sea, because the devil is come down to you, having great wrath, knowing that he hath but a short time.

13 And after the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman, who brought forth the man child:

14 And there were given to the woman, two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the desert to her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent.

15 And the serpent cast out of his mouth, after the woman, water, as it were a river: that he might cause her to be carried away by the river.

16 And the earth helped the woman, and the earth opened her mouth, and swallowed up the river, which the dragon cast out of his mouth.

17 And the dragon was angry against the woman: and went to make war with the rest of her seed, who keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.

18 And he stood upon the sand of the sea.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the beast with seven heads: and of a second beast.

AND I saw a beast coming up out of the sea, having seven heads and ten horns, and upon his horns ten diadems, and upon his heads names of blasphemy.

2 And the beast which I saw was like to a leopard, and his feet were as the feet of a bear, and his mouth

Dioclesian. The dragon, the devil, is more irritated than ever against the Christians; he therefore stimulates the pagans to exercise their utmost cruelty against them, knowing that a Christian emperor (Constantine) would in a short time extend the reign of Jesus Christ over the whole world.

VER. 14. There were given to the woman two wings of a great eagle. By these two wings, some understand the love of God, and the fear of offending him; others, piety, prudence, &c. Wi.—The Church, on account of the severe pressure of the persecution, obtained from the Almighty a special protection and assistance. Past.

VER. 15. The serpent (the dragon, the devil) came out of his mouth, &c. He endeavoured to destroy the Christian religion; but the earth, that is, the princes of the earth, as God was pleased to turn their hearts, helped to turn away the persecutions. Wi.—As a last effort, the devil raises a more bloody persecution than was ever known before. See Euseb. Hist. Eccles.

VER. 16. And the earth helped the woman. A prince of the earth, Constantine, came to the succour of the Church, and caused the persecution to cease.

VER. 18. *And he stood upon the sand of the sea; i. e. the dragon seemed to be at a stand, to rest a while, not being able to raise any more persecutions. Now as to the time that these things should come to pass, many by seven heads and ten horns understand many powerful wicked kings, who should persecute the good, especially about antichrist's time, when the faithful at different times should be oppressed, and forced to fly as it were into the wilderness to worship God in private. And when the end of the world seems to draw near, the devil with greater malice will persecute God's servants, his time being short. Others apply these predictions to the particular persecutions in the Church by the Jews, and by the heathen emperors in the first three Christian ages before Constantine's time, when idolatry was destroyed, when the face of the Church was changed, and when she became victorious, and publicly triumphed over her former enemies, the heathens; and by the man child, whom God took under his special protection, they will have to be understood Constantine himself. Wi.

* V. 18. Et stetit super arenam maris. The ordinary Greek copies, ἀνέστη, steti, which the Prot. translators followed, beginning chapter xiii. with these words, and I stood upon the sand of the sea, as if S. John spoke of himself. But Dr. Wells, in his amendments, has corrected the Prot. translation, and restored the reading ἀνέστη, steti, as we find it in the Latin Vulgate. I have reckoned near upon a hundred places in the Apocalypse only, wherein Dr. Wells has preferred those readings in the Greek MSS. which are conformable to our Latin Vulgate.

CHAP. XIII. VER. 1. I saw a beast coming out of the sea. By this first beast several understand antichrist, as S. Iren. l. v. c. xxviii. and S. Greg. l. xxi. Moral. c. xli. But this is not certain. By the other beast* coming up out of the earth, (v. 11) many understand antichrist's false prophet, some famous impostor and magician in antichrist's time, who will do great wonders and signs. The seven heads and ten horns, may again signify a great number of kings and princes, who shall be overcome by antichrist, and submit themselves to him. The dragon, or devil, gives that great power to antichrist, signified by the different parts of as the mouth of a lion. And the dragon gave him his own strength, and great power.

3 And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death: and his deadly wound was healed. And all the earth was in admiration after the beast.

4 And they adored the dragon, which gave power to the beast: and they adored the beast, saying: Who is like to the beast? and who shall be able to fight with him?

5 And there was given to him a mouth, speaking great things, and blasphemies: and power was given to him to act forty-two months.

6 And he opened his mouth in blasphemies against God, to blaspheme his name, and his tabernacle, and them that dwell in heaven.

7 And it was given to him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over every tribe, and people, and tongue, and nation:

8 And all that dwelt upon the earth adored him: whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb which was slain from the beginning of the world.

9 If any man have an ear, let him hear.

10 He that shall lead into captivity, shall go into captivity: *he that shall kill by the sword, must be killed by the sword. Here is the patience and the faith of the saints.

11 And I saw another beast coming up out of the earth, and he had two horns, like a lamb, and he spoke as a dragon.

* Gen. ix. 6. Mat. xxvi. 52.

the beast, some like to a leopard, others to a bear, and others to a lion. The head wounded to death and cured, is either antichrist himself or some one of those heads or kings, cured by the devil and diabolical arts after a mortal wound. Wi.—This first beast, with seven heads and ten horns, is probably the whole company of infidels, enemies and persecutors of the people of God, from the beginning to the end of the world. The seven heads are seven kings, that is, seven principal kingdoms or empires; which have exercised, or shall exercise, tyrannical power over the people of God: of these, five were then fallen, viz. the Egyptian, Assyrian, Chaldean, Persian, and Grecian monarchies: one was present, viz. the empire of Rome: and the seventh and the chiefest was to come, viz. the great antichrist and his empire. The ten horns may be understood of ten lesser persecutors. Ch.

VER. 2. M. Bossuet, bishop of Meaux, observes in the emperors Maximian Hercules, Galerius Maximian, and Dioclesian, the distinguishing characters of these three animals. The leopard represents Maximian, a changeable, restless, and cruel prince. The bear figures Galerius Maximian, a man from the north, of cruel and brutal disposition, terrible men, and gigantic stature. Lactantius moreover informs us, that he took a pleasure in feeding bears, which bore so great a resemblance to him in size and brutality. The lion, in fine, is the symbol of Dioclesian, who was cruel and vehement against Christians. Calmet.—The whole of this is by Pastorini applied to the empire of Rome, which was composed of the territories of the three preceding empires, which are represented by Daniel under the figure of these animals. And as the body of the beast was like to a leopard, the centre and capital of the Roman empire, under antichrist will be the Grecian empire, denoted by the leopard, of which Constantinople became the capital. Various interpreters explain the whole of this vision in different ways. A.

VER. 3. One of his heads, &c. Some understand this of the mortal wound which the idolatry of the Roman empire (signified by the sixth head) received from Constantine: which was as it were healed again by Julian the apostate. Ch.

VER. 4. They adored the dragon; i. e. in antichrist's time, they will adore both antichrist and the devil, who will make war against the saints for forty-two months, i. e. a short time, signified also by 1260 days, and by three years and a half. Wi.

VER. 6. His tabernacle, &c. That is, his Church, and his saints. Ch.

VER. 8. Slain from the beginning. In the foreknowledge of God; and in as much as all mercy and grace, from the beginning, were given in view of his death and passion. Ch.

VER. 10. Here is the patience, &c. Here is the motive of the patience and the faith of the saints, or the servants of God in this world. By faith they rely on the promises of God for the reward of their patience, and leave him to vindicate as he may judge fit their cause with respect to their persecutors. Past.

VER. 11. I saw another beast, &c. He had two horns like those of the Lamb, pretending to imitate Christ by an outward sanctity, and by working strange things. Wi.—This second beast with two horns may be understood of the heathenish priests and magicians, the principal promoters both of idolatry and persecution. Ch.

12 And he executed all the power of the former beast in his sight: and he caused the earth, and them that dwell therein, to adore the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed.

13 And he did great signs, so that he made even fire to come down from heaven upon the earth in the sight of men.

14 And he seduced them that dwell on the earth, by the signs, which were given him to perform in the sight of the beast, saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make the image of the beast, which had the wound by the sword, and lived.

15 And it was given him to give life to the image of

VER. 12. He executed all the power of the former beast in his sight, or before him, doing great wonders, as Christ foretold should be done by false prophets, (Mat. xxiv. 24.) making even fire by lightning come from heaven, as the devil was permitted to do in the time of Job. C. i.—He caused men to adore the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed, and the image of the first beast, of antichrist, to be adored, and that no one should buy or sell any thing, unless he had on his forehead, or on his arm, some particular mark, called the character of this false Christ, or antichrist; or his name, or the number of his name, that is, his name which was made up of numeral letters, 666; but as S. Irenæus thinks, in Greek letters or characters, as S. John wrote his Revelation in Greek. According to the application made by the bishop of Meaux, &c. by the first beast with seven horns were signified the cruel persecutors of the Church, Dioclesian and other six persecuting emperors, to wit, Maximian Hercules, Galerius Maximian, Constantius Chlorus, (father to Constantine) Maxentius, Maximinus, and Licinius. These they look upon to have been the seven heads of the first beast, and by this beast they understand the idolatry of the heathen Roman empire; and by the ten horns, a great many barbarous nations, who in their time made irruptions and pillaged the empire, and afterwards brought destruction upon the whole Roman empire, to wit, the Goths, Vandals, and the rest. The resemblances of a leopard, bear, and lion, are introduced with an allusion to what is written by the prophet Daniel, (C. vii.) meaning the four great empires: by the leopard, that of the Chaldeans; by the bear, that of the Persians; by the lion, that of the Grecians and of Alexander the great; lastly that of the Romans, which is not represented by any one beast, but as a compound of the others. When it is said that the beast had received a mortal wound, and was cured again, these interpreters understand the idolatry of the empire, which was in a great measure destroyed by Constantine, but which was again revived and renewed by Julian the apostate. He might well be said to have a mouth speaking great things and blasphemies; but his power lasted only for a short time, signified by forty-two months, though literally he did not reign so long. By the other beast, (v. 11) these interpreters, as also Dr. Hammond, understand the philosophers and magicians, with their auguries and pretended oracles of the heathen gods. For these men, under Dioclesian, and particularly under Julian, were constantly exciting the emperors and the people against the Christians, telling them that the gods required that the religion of the Christians should be utterly destroyed. We find in the histories of those times, that an image or statue was erected to Julian, together with Jupiter, Mars, and Mercury, and orders given to put to death all those who refused to adore that image. See S. Greg. Naz. Orat. 3. cont. Julianum, and Sozomen, l. v. Hist. c. xvii. Under Dioclesian, and also under Julian, meats offered to idols were thrown into fountains; and waters consecrated to idols, were sprinkled upon all things to be sold in the market, to the end that the Christians might be defiled by every thing that they bought or eat. As to the number of the name of the beast, 666, in these Greek letters, χξς, nothing can be produced but mere conjecture. S. Irenæus† (l. v. c. xxx. p. 371. Ed. Feuardentii) says, that according to the testimony of those who had seen S. John, the number of the beast was to be computed by Greek letters. He takes notice that this number of 666 may be found in several names. He produces some examples, and amongst others the word Lateinos; of which he says, it may seem very likely that this is the name, because the last of the four empires, which were spoken of by the prophet Daniel, was then extant, and had this name of the empire of the Latins. Take notice, that he has not a word that hints at the Latin Church, as some of the late pretended reformation would insinuate. But, says he, the word Teitan carries with it a greater probability. Yet, he concludes, that such expositions are uncertain, and he will not venture to say that this will be the name. The bishop of Meaux proposes, Dioclesá VeVstVs; but this is to look for it in Latin letters. Others have produced other names. Such fancies and conjectures seem full of well omitted. Wi.

VER. 18. Six hundred sixty-six. The numeral letters of his name shall make up this number. Ch.

* V. 1. Though S. Irenæus, and also S. Greg. (l. xxxi. mor. c. xli.) by the first of these two beasts understand antichrist, and others would have antichrist to be meant by one of the two, yet this is not to be looked upon as absolutely certain, not being witnessed by the consent of the primitive Fathers. The ancient Fathers, especially in the exposition of obscure prophecies, many times give us no more than their private opinions, or suspicions and conjectures, as S. Aug. expressly takes notice in his 20th book de Civ. Dei, (c. xix. tom. 7. p. 597. Nov. Ed.) where he speaks of antichrist: so that though S. Irenæus had seen S. Polycarp, who was a disciple of S. John the evangelist, yet he delivers us divers things concerning antichrist, which are no more than his private opinions and conjectures, in which others do not agree with him, as that antichrist shall be of the tribe of Dan; that he shall sit in the temple of Jerusalem. He was also in an error as to Christ's reign of a thousand years upon the earth with his elect.

the beast, and that the image of the beast should speak: and should cause, that whosoever will not adore the image of the beast, should be slain.

16 And he shall make all, both little and great, rich and poor, freemen and bondmen, to have a mark in their right hand, or on their foreheads.

17 And that no man might buy or sell, but he that hath the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name.

18 Here is wisdom. He that hath understanding, let him reckon the number of the beast. For it is the number of a man: and his number is six hundred sixty-six.

Arethas, bishop of Cæsarea, in Cappadocia, in the sixth age, in his commentary on the Apocalypse, (tom. vi. Bib. Patrum. Edit. Colon.) speaking of this opinion that some would have the first beast (Apoc. xiii. 1.) to be antichrist, and others the second beast, only says: quidam sic accipiunt, &c.

† V. 11. Vidi aliam bestiam, elon allo theion. Another wild beast. S. Irenæus calls this second beast armigerum primæ, and takes notice that he is also called in other places of the Apocalypse (C. xvi. 13. and xix. 20. and xx. 10.) the false prophet, pseudopropheta of the first beast. By what is said in this chapter, this second beast must live and act at the same time with the first; for it is said, v. 12, that he exercised all the power of the former beast in his sight, ἐν ὁπτι αὐτοῦ; and again, v. 14, that he did wonders in the sight of the first beast, ἐν ὁπτι τοῦ θηρίου. 2. It is said that this second beast made all that dwell on the earth adore the first beast. 3. That he made all persons make an image of the first beast, that was wounded and cured, and that they should be slain who adored not that image. 4. He caused that all persons should have the character of the first beast, and the number of his name, i. e. of the name of the first beast. All those who hold that the first beast in this chap. is antichrist, who is to come a little before the end of the world, hold in like manner that the second beast is not come, but will also come at the same time; and that he is to be a famous impostor and false prophet in antichrist's time. But they who hold the first beast not to be antichrist, but to be the idolatry of heathen Rome, by the second beast understand the philosophers and magicians, who were accustomed to raise the indignation of the pagan emperors against Christians. This exposition of the bishop of Meaux, and of divers Catholic interpreters, I shall here give in Dr. Hammond's words: "By the second beast is meant magic, auguries, and oracles of heathens, made use of to advance idol worship. This beast had two horns, two powers, with some resemblance of Christ, the Lamb; the power of doing some kind of miracles, even of making fire seem to come down from heaven, as Philostratus relates of Apollonius of Tyane, (l. v. c. v.) and the pretended power of prophecy by dubious and obscure oracles; by which also they engaged the emperors to promote idolatry, and to make bloody edicts against Christianity, to force every one to join in their heathen worship, and to shew that they did so by exterior marks and signs, by tickets, to shew that they had sacrificed to idols, otherwise they should be incapable of buying and selling, i. e. of enjoying any particular advantages, or the common benefits of life." Dr. Hammond did not think it worth taking notice of, that so many writers of the pretended reformation would have the second beast to be a great many popes, whom they affirm to be the famous antichrist. Never was there a more groundless or a more malicious invention, without shadow of authority or reason, and evidently contradictory to both, which I may shew as occasion offers, and as far as these short notes will permit. Here I shall only touch upon what relates to that which is said in this chapter. 1. The late reformers, some of them, make the first beast the popish antichrist, (as we may see in the bishop of Meaux, and also in Dr. Wells) and some affirm this of the second beast. The two beasts are quite different: are they both the popish antichrist? 2. Some of them prove the popes to be the second beast, because the pope's mitre has a resemblance of his two horns: does this deserve an answer? See the bishop of Meaux. 3. Is it not as ridiculous to pretend that by fire coming from heaven, is meant the pope's excommunications? Is not the power of excommunication grounded in S. Paul? Do not the Protestants themselves own, and make use of this power? 4. Those Protestants who tell us the second beast is the popish antichrist, say that the first beast was the state of paganism in the Roman empire. This, as they own, was destroyed before the popes began to be antichrist: how does this agree with what is here said of the second beast, antichrist's armiger, that he exercised all his power in the sight and in the presence of the first beast? 5. How can they pretend that the popes ever ordered all to be slain who would not adore the first beast? (that is, heathen idols, or the images of heathen gods, of Jupiter, Mars, &c.) or who did not bear on his forehead or hand the character, the mark, or the number of some of their heathen gods or heathen emperors? 6. If the second beast be the popish antichrist, all those Protestants have been guilty of a grievous oversight, who have endeavoured to prove the popes antichrist by finding the number 666 in their names, or in the word Lateinos; for it is evident by this chapter, (v. 17) that the number of the name belongs to the first beast, and not to the second. 7. This contradicts what the Protestants teach with S. Paul, (2 Thess. ii.) that antichrist is to be the man of sin, who will make himself adored above all that is called or worshipped as God; whereas, in this place of the Apocalypse, the second beast does not make himself, but the first beast, to be adored. Therefore this second beast is not the popish antichrist. Of this more in the following chapters.

† Ibid. Est enim numerus hominis, et numerus ejus sexcenti sexaginta sex; ἀριθμὸς γὰρ ἀνθρώπου ἑξήκοντα καὶ ἑξήκοντα ἑξήκοντα. S. Irenæus, (l. v. c. xxx. p. 370) numerus nominis bestie secundum Græcorum computationem per litteras quæ in eo sunt, sexcentos habebit et sexaginta et sex. Lucæbius (l. v. Histor. c. viii. (1643))

CHAP. XIV.

Of the Lamb, and of the virgins that follow him: Of the judgments that shall fall upon the wicked.

AND I saw: and behold a Lamb stood on Mount Sion, and with him a hundred forty-four thousand having his name, and the name of his Father, written in their foreheads.

2 And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunder: and the voice which I heard, was as of harpers, harping on their harps.

3 And they sung as it were a new canticle, before the throne, and before the four animals, and the ancients, and no man could say the canticle, but those hundred forty-four thousand, who were purchased from the earth.

4 These are they who were not defiled with women: for they are virgins. These follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were purchased from among men, the first-fruits to God, and to the Lamb:

5 And in their mouth was found no lie: for they are without spot before the throne of God.

6 And I saw another Angel flying through the midst of heaven, having the eternal gospel, to preach to them that sit upon the earth, and over every nation, and tribe, and tongue, and people:

7 Saying with a loud voice: Fear the Lord, and give him honour, because the hour of his judgment is come: and adore ye him, * who made heaven, and earth, the sea, and the fountains of waters.

8 And another Angel followed, saying: ^bShe is fallen, she is fallen, that great Babylon, which made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.

* Psal. cxlv. Acts xiv. 14.

Ed. Valesii) citing the words of S. Irenæus, in Greek, p. 172: ὅτι ὁ ἀριθμὸς τοῦ ὀνόματος τοῦ θείου, κατὰ τὴν τῶν ἑλλήνων ψῆφον διὰ τῶν ἐν αὐτῷ γραμμάτων ἐμφαίνεται. But he declares it rash and dangerous to affirm any thing: ἡρεῖς οὖν οὐκ ἀποκινδυνεύομεν, &c. As for the name itself, he proposes first ἐλάνθους; and then of Lateinos says, that valde verisimile est quoniam novissimum regnum (to wit, of the four kingdoms, in Daniel) hoc habet vocabulum. It is evident he speaks of the empire, not of the Christian church of Rome. Latini enim sunt qui nunc regnant, sed non in hoc nos gloriabimur. Sed et Teitan . . . omnium nominum, quæ apud nos inveniuntur magis fide dignum est . . . but adds, nos tamen non periclitabimur in eo, nec asseverantes pronuntiabimus, &c. Dr. Wells in a note observes, that Mr. Mede and Mr. Whiston, without sufficient grounds, take notice of this conjecture of S. Irenæus, as favouring their notion of the pope to be antichrist.

CHAP. XIV. VER. 1. Behold a Lamb, by which is divers times represented our Saviour Christ. Wi.

VER. 2. They sung as it were a new canticle. In these visions, after persecutions, are sometimes introduced rejoicings to encourage the servants of God in their sufferings from the wicked world.—No man could say (or sing) the canticle, but those hundred and forty-four thousand: by which are signified the elect, who were not defiled with women. Some expound this literally of those who always lived virgins; others understand all those who lived or died with a pure and clean heart, exempt from the corruption of vices, and of whom it is said, (v. 5) that in their mouth was found no lie, and that they were without spot before the throne of God. Wi.

VER. 4. These are they, &c. In the style of the prophets, by fornication is meant idolatry, and virginity signifies cleanness from all sacrilegious worship. These, therefore, are virgins in this sense, who have not fallen into the impurities of creature worship. But others, as S. Augustine, understand it of persons who have lived in continency. The first, however, is the more literal sense. Calmet.

VER. 6-7. Another Angel, . . . saying: . . . Fear the Lord.* By this Angel are represented the preachers of the gospel, exhorting all men to the true faith and a good life. Wi.

VER. 8. Another Angel, . . . saying: . . . She is fallen, she is fallen, that great Babylon. By Babylon, as observed before, may very probably be signified all the wicked world in general, whom God will punish and destroy after the short time of this mortal life: or may be signified every great city, and perhaps Rome returned to idolatry in the time of antichrist, a little before the end of the world, or may be signified the idolatry of heathen Rome, in the fourth age, when the Christian religion, under Constantine and his successors, began to triumph over (1644)

9 And the third Angel followed them, saying with a loud voice: If any man shall adore the beast, and his image, and receive his mark on his forehead, or in his hand:

10 He also shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is mingled with pure wine, in the cup of his wrath, and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the sight of the holy Angels, and in the sight of the Lamb:

11 And the smoke of their torments shall ascend up for ever and ever: neither have they rest day or night, who have adored the beast, and his image, and whosoever received the mark of his name.

12 Here is the patience of the saints, who keep the commandments of God, and the faith of Jesus.

13 And I heard a voice from heaven, saying to me: write: Blessed are the dead, who die in the Lord. From henceforth now, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours: for their works follow them.

14 And I saw, and behold a white cloud: and upon the cloud one sitting like to the Son of man, having on his head a golden crown, and in his hand a sharp sickle.

15 And another Angel came out of the temple, crying with a loud voice to him that sat upon the cloud: * Put in thy sickle, and reap, because the hour is come to reap, for the harvest of the earth is ripe.

16 And he that sat on the cloud, put his sickle into the earth, and the earth was reaped.

17 And another Angel came out of the temple, which is in heaven, he also having a sharp sickle.

18 And another Angel came out from the altar, who had power over fire: and he cried with a loud voice paganism, i. e. according to those interpreters followed by Alcazar, Bossuet, P. Alleman, &c. which exposition Dr. Hammond thus expresseth: "the whole impure city of heathen Rome, under the title of Babylon, that old idolatrous city that had lain so heavy upon the people of God . . . should speedily be destroyed, for advancing the heathen worship." Wi.—It is probable that here by the great Babylon is meant the city of the devil; that is, the universal society of the wicked: as Jerusalem is taken for the city and Church of God. Ch.

^b Isai. xxi. 9. Jer. li. 8.— Joel iii. 13. Mat. xiii. 39.

VER. 9-10. The third Angel followed . . . if any man shall adore the beast, . . . he also shall drink of the wine of the wrath of God, which is mingled with pure wine, &c. That is, he shall drink of the bitter cup of God's indignation, not mixed with water, or any thing to diminish its force, but with wine and wine; i. e. with punishments upon punishments for ever and ever. Wi.

VER. 12. Here is the patience of the saints. Here patience is necessary, so as not to be carried away with such pleasures and vanities as are offered in the wicked Babylon, and to remain firm under persecutions with the pious inhabitants of Jerusalem. Wi.

VER. 13. Blessed are the dead (all the dead) who die in the Lord, and not the martyrs only, for their works follow every one. Wi.—It is understood of the martyrs, who die for the Lord. Ch.—For their works follow them. It is just that they rest at length from their labours, and enjoy for eternity the recompense of their fidelity. They land on the shores of their native country, enriched with the treasures of the good works they have done in this lower world. This is said in express contradiction to those who denied the necessity of good works, and maintained the indifference of actions. This seems to have been the doctrine of the Nicolaites and other heretics of those times. Calmet.—The Holy Ghost confirms the sentence of their happiness, not only because at the moment of their departure their hard labours and penitential works cease, but their souls are admitted to a glorious immortality, the recompense of their good works. Past.

VER. 14-20. Like to the Son of man. That is, to our Saviour Christ, sitting on a white cloud, with a crown of gold, and in his hand a sharp sickle. And another Angel, desiring of him to do justice, by putting in his sickle, because the harvest of the earth was ripe, dry, and withered; i. e. the wicked, ripe for punishment. The like is again represented by the sickle, which is said to be put to the clusters of the vineyard: and they were cast into the great wine-press, or lake of the wrath of God, into hell, where the blood is said to come out even up to the horses' bridles, for a thousand and six hundred furlongs: a metaphorical way of expressing the exceeding great torments of the wicked in hell. But to pretend from hence to give the just dimensions of hell, is a groundless conjecture; of which see Corn. a Lapide. Wi.

to him that had the sharp sickle, saying: Put in thy sharp sickle, and gather the clusters of the vineyard of the earth: because the grapes thereof are ripe.

19 And the Angel put his sharp sickle into the earth, and gathered the vineyard of the earth, and cast it into the great wine-press of the wrath of God:

20 And the wine-press was trodden without the city, and blood came out of the wine-press, even up

* V. 6-7. I cannot but admire how Dr. W. after his learned modern divines, Mr. Mede and Mr. Whiston, could hook in the popish antichrist in so many places on this chapter, as v. 7, where it is said fear God, the Christians, says he are forewarned not to fall into any corruptions the visible Church afterwards fell into, particularly popery. According to a great many of our Prot. adversaries, the popes have been the great antichrist ever since the destruction of the heathen Roman emperors in the fourth age, and yet no man ever dreamt of it or suspected it. The Protestants tell the people, they need but open their Bibles and Testaments to see and find the monstrous popish antichrist, the frightful beast with seven heads and ten horns; and what is more strange than all the rest, not any one of the Latin or Greek Church for so many ages could ever see the least appearance of what to them is visible at the first sight. The Greek Church, by an unfortunate schism, was divided from the Latin in the ninth age: they wanted not learned men among them, well read in the Scriptures, who omitted nothing that could be alleged to justify their schism and separation from the pope of Rome. Is it possible that neither Photius nor any one among them should see this truth, so palpable that every Protestant presently discovers it at the opening of his New Testament? This at once would have justified their separation. This invention, which doubtless was suggested by the most subtle adversary of popery, first came, says the bishop of Meaux on the Apocalypse, from the late Manicheans, a sect among the Albigenses, as infamous for their errors as for their morals, (see Nat. Alex. tom. 6. Sæc. 11. et 12. p. 490. et tom. 7. Sæc. 13. p. 66) who, among other detestable blasphemies against God, against Jesus Christ and his blessed Mother, taught the people that pope Silvester in Constantine's time was antichrist, and the Church from that time was become a den of thieves, and the harlot in the Apocalypse. I scarce think the reasons they brought will be approved by the writers of the late reformation, inasmuch, said they, as the Church and ministers of the Church were then permitted to receive ecclesiastical benefices and revenues. These heretics were followed in some points by Wycliffe and his disciples; but perhaps upon a strict examination, they only meant that the pope and bishops taught antichristian doctrine, and so were to be esteemed adversaries of Christ and precursors of antichrist. We may look upon Luther, (though he denied the Apocalypse of S. John to be canonical Scripture) and the Lutherans and Calvinists, to be the true inventors of this empty and incoherent fable of the popish antichrist, twelve hundred years after the popes had successively one after another been the one, great, and famous antichrist. These lovers of novelty, liberty, and Church lands found the obscure revelations in the Apocalypse very convenient for their arbitrary fancies, where they could make the wicked Babylon not signify the heathen Roman empire, with S. Irenæus and the primitive fathers, but to be the Christian popish Rome; and the scarlet whore must be the popes and cardinals who wear scarlet and purple. An argument not inferior to that of Mr. Andrew Willet, who found out the pope to be the angel that opened with a key the bottomless pit, because, said he, who gives the cross keys for his arms but the pope? The last reformers of the faith found their ingenious expositions on the Apocalypse a fit means to stir up kings and princes, as well as the ignorant populace and unthinking mob against the tyranny of this Babylon: it is not my remark, nor that of the bishop of Meaux only, but of their learned Dr. Hammond, who, after he hath given us the extravagant and trifling ravings of Mr. Brightman, says, "that what such writers aim at, is to put the people in mind that they are to pull down antichrist. Nothing (says Dr. Hammond) can be more effectual towards the raising and fomenting of commotions." It is evident the country parson can never be at a loss, or want matter, to excite his parishioners (as occasion offers itself) to a detestation of popery and all papists, if he has but Mr. Brightman's revelations on the seven epistles in the second and third chapters of S. John's Apocalypse, written to the Protestant churches by name. See what we have cited on those chapters. If he keep by him Mr. Willet's expositions of the number of the name of antichrist, whereby he may prove that the three letters are each of them crosses, and that the sign of the cross, still retained by papists, is in very deed the cognizance of antichrist. He may confirm the same by Mr. Willet's evident demonstration, as he himself calls it. Take it in his own words, in his Synop. Papismi. Controv. 4. q. 16. "Antichrist, says he, is the great whore of Babylon, i. e. of Rome; and here, saith Willet devoutly, we are to note the singular providence of God, who suffereth not a jot of his word to fall to the ground: for even so verily, an. 853, next after Leo IV. there was a right whore elected pope, called John, or if you will, Joan VII. who fell in labour in the midst of a solemn procession: thus then by evident demonstration it appeareth that the pope is the whore of Babylon, and consequently antichrist." Is not this witty! No matter if by the same logic every whore that ever lived in Rome may be proved antichrist. But as for the story of pope Joan, David Blondel, a French hugonot, has shewn it to be a fable; for it neither was pope John, nor Joan, that succeeded Leo IV. an. 853. Leo IV. died in July 853, to whom succeeded, in August or September of the same year, Benedict III. so that no place is found for pope John, or Joan, to reign after Leo two years and five months, as the authors of that story pretend. The parson, if need be, may add the expositions on the seven vials of the learned and pious divine, Mr. Mede, as Dr. W. calls him: (though the bishop of Meaux looks upon him as a mere enthusiast) the effusion of the first vial, says Mede, was when the Waldenses and Albigenses, and the followers of Wycliffe, and Hus began to renounce popery. The second vial was completed by what is more eminently styled the reformation, begun by Luther, to the horses' bridles, for a thousand and six hundred furlongs.

CHAP. XV.

They that have overcome the beast, glorify God. Of the seven Angels with the seven vials.

AND I saw another sign in heaven great and wonderful, seven Angels having the seven last plagues: for in them is filled up the wrath of God.

and carried on afterwards by many others. The third vial was completed partly by the laws made here in England in the reign of queen Elizabeth against popish priests, partly by the great overthrow given to the Spanish armada, an. 1588, and also to the Spanish forces in the Netherlands. See the rest in Dr. W. p. 127. But Dr. W. with Mr. Whiston, looks upon the vials to be all still future. I cannot think that the learned men among the Protestants believe the popes to be antichrist, especially since time, that discovers what is true as to matters of fact, that are pretended to be foretold, has confuted the conjectures of de Moulin, Jurieu, Mede, Whiston, &c. I must here do justice to divers learned men of the Protestant communion. Grotius, in a letter (epist. 557.) to the Protestant John Gerard Vossius, tells him, "that they who did not believe the popes to be antichrist, nevertheless judged it necessary to give such interpretations, for the public good of the Protestant religion." See Mons. de Meaux in his advertisement, num. 1. The same Vossius answers, (ep. 571.) "that he himself having told a certain minister of Dort, whom he calls thickskull, (lourde tete) that he should not impose on the people, even against popery, that minister presently asked him if he was for taking the papists' part, whom, said he, we cannot run down too much, that the people may the more detest their Church. This, adds Vossius, is much the same as some others said to me at Amsterdam: why should not we say the pope is antichrist? must we leave off saying so? and make the people leave our communion more and more, as if too many did not leave it already?" This was a secret that was not to be divulged. Of our English Protestants I have read Dr. Hammond's paraphrase and notes, on the second chapter of the Thessalonians; and on the Revelation or Apocalypse, he never pretends that the popes are antichrist. The predictions in S. John, of the beasts, of the fall of Babylon, of the great harlot, he expounds, as fulfilled already, by the destruction of pagan Rome, and of its idolatry, superstitions, auguries, under the heathen emperors, much after the same manner as Alcazar, and as the bishop of Meaux, and other Catholic writers. Mr. Richard Montague, in his Gag. p. 74, writes thus: "Whether the pope be that antichrist or not, the Church (of England) resolveth not, tendereth it not to be believed any way. Some, I grant, are very peremptory indeed that he is. He, for instance, who wrote and printed it, I am as sure the pope is antichrist, that antichrist spoken of in the Scripture, as that Jesus Christ is God: but they that are so resolute, peremptory, and certain, let them answer for themselves. The Church is not tied, nor any one that I know of, to make good their private imaginations. For myself, I profess ingenuously I am not of opinion that the bishops of Rome personally are that antichrist . . . nor yet that the bishops of Rome successively are that antichrist," &c. He only holds the pope and papists to be antichrists improperly in the sense that S. John says, there are many antichrists. He cites for the same opinion Melancthon and others. Mr. Thorndike, in his just weights and measures, (c. ii.) speaking on these two points, that the pope is antichrist, and papists idolaters. "The truth, says he, is they of the Church of Rome have overcharged us, in calling us heretics . . . but they that would have the pope antichrist, and the papists idolaters, have revived it upon them, and taken their revenge beyond the bounds of blameless defence. . . Let them not lead the people by the nose, to believe that they can prove the supposition, which they cannot," &c. The same Mr. Thorndike, in chap. 19, p. 125, &c. shews more at large that their reverencing images in churches is no idolatry. And again, (p. 149) "having shewed, says he, why the Church of Rome cannot be charged with idolatry, I may from hence infer that the pope cannot be antichrist." Yet Dr. W. on the Apocalypse, has another argument to prove that the pope is antichrist, that is, by a new invention, the mystical antichrist, foretold by S. John, and his reign to be twelve hundred and sixty years, only because he supposeth that the pope and papists give divine honour, the honour that is due to God alone, to images, saints, and Angels. This he continually repeats, and takes it for a thing granted. It seems very strange that so learned a doctor, after such mistakes have been canvassed and cleared, as appears by what hath been written by Mr. Thorndike on this subject, should still run on in this groundless supposition, contrary to all the protestations which the Catholics have constantly made. Every little papist boy or girl can assure the doctor, that they have been always taught to give divine honour and worship to God alone: they will recite to him the words of their catechism, that they pray indeed before images, to put them in mind of things thereby represented, but they do not pray to them, because they know they can neither see, nor hear, nor help them: they will tell him that the Angels and saints, even the blessed Virgin Mother of Christ, and the true mother of God made man, is no more than a creature below God, at an infinite distance; and so that the inferior honour that we pay to them, is nothing like to that supreme and divine honour, which we pay to God alone. In a word we know, and have always professed that images, Angels, and saints are but creatures; and as we are not such fools as to think them Gods, so neither are we so senseless as to pay them divine honour.

CHAP. XV. VER. 1. I saw . . . seven Angels, having the seven last plagues. Many by these understand chastisements that will fall upon the wicked a little before the end of the world, and so take these plagues and vials that are poured out, in the next chapter, mostly in a literal sense. Others apply them to different calamities that happened to heathen Rome; but the applications are so different, that they serve to convince us how uncertain they are. In the mean time S. John seems to repeat the same things in a different manner, and some times by way of anticipation, as here the saints are introduced rejoicing, in view

2 And I saw as it were a sea of glass mingled with fire, and them that had overcome the beast, and his image, and the number of his name, standing on the sea of glass, having the harps of God:

3 And singing the canticle of Moses, the servant of God, and the canticle of the Lamb, saying: Great and wonderful are thy works, O Lord God Almighty: just and true are thy ways, O King of ages.

4 * Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and magnify thy name? For thou only art holy: for all nations shall come, and shall adore in thy sight, because thy judgments are manifest.

5 And after these things I saw, and behold, the temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened:

6 And the seven Angels came out of the temple, having the seven plagues, clothed in clean and white linen, and girded about the breast with golden girdles.

7 And one of the four animals gave to the seven Angels seven golden vials, full of the wrath of God, who liveth for ever and ever.

8 And the temple was filled with smoke from the majesty of God, and from his power: and no man was able to enter into the temple, till the seven plagues of the seven Angels were fulfilled.

* Jer. x. 7.

of that happiness in heaven which is prepared for them. Wi.—Here is a new vision, great and wonderful, seven Angels holding the figurative symbols of seven plagues. They are called the last, because in them is completed the wrath of God, being inflicted on mankind in the last period of the world, the period of Christianity. The first of these scourges takes place shortly after the commencement of the Christian era, and the seventh puts an end to the world. Past.

VER. 2. I saw . . . a sea of glass, mingled with fire: by which are signified the storms and dangers which they had happily passed: now they are said to be singing the canticle of Moses after he had passed the Red Sea, Cantemus Domino, "Let us sing to the Lord," &c. As Moses was a figure of Christ, and the Israelites of the Christians, so it is now called the canticle of the Lamb. Wi.—By the sea of glass is meant the firmament that makes the floor of heaven, which is here said to be mingled with fire, in allusion to the troubles and persecutions which the faithful, who are standing on this sea, have sustained. The beast that is here mentioned, is in allusion to idolatry or heresy. Past.

VER. 3. And singing. This sea of glass and fire may also represent the sea which Moses passed in leaving Egypt; and the memory of this famous event, in every respect so similar to the deliverance of the saints from the persecutions to which they had been exposed during their lives, affords them the opportunity of singing the canticle of Moses, at the conclusion of which, they join in the praises of the Almighty for their own particular deliverance. Calmet.—O King of ages. In the common Greek is now read, O King of saints. Wi.

VER. 5. And after these things. Here the scene changes, and is carried back to the period of time that immediately precedes the seven plagues. This removal of the scene S. John insinuates by the unusual circumlocution, "after these things I beheld," and looked on the commencement of this scene. The temple opens, and the seven Angels with the seven plagues proceed from the sanctuary to execute the work they are charged with. Past.—One ought not to be surprised to see the good Angels employed in these kinds of offices, as justice is no less an attribute of the Deity than mercy, and therefore equally the object of the ministry of the Angels. Calmet.—Behold, the temple of the tabernacle . . . in heaven, was opened. We have before observed, that these visions were shewn to S. John as it were in a temple in heaven, and with an allusion to the sanctuary and its parts under Moses. The Angels are seen coming out with clean and white linen, and with golden girdles, being an allusion to the habits of the priests in the ancient law. Wi.

VER. 8. The temple was filled with smoke, &c. as in the time of Solomon. 2 Par. vii. Wi.—The vials are given to the Angels by one of the four animals, that is, by a prophet, because at that time the effects had not happened, but were to happen in time to come, and are therefore announced by way of prophecy; and the temple was filled with smoke, manifesting first the majesty of God, and secondly his power. Pastorini.

CHAP. XVI. VER. 1. I heard a great voice. Bossuet explains the pouring out of the seven vials in this manner. The first he supposes to have taken place under the reign of Valerian and Gallien; the sixth he supposes to have been poured out during the reigns of Valerian, Dioclesian, and Julian; and the seventh under Honorius and the Alani. Bossuet.—All commentators, however, seem to agree that the great city mentioned in the 19th verse, is to be understood of Rome, and that the plagues which are here foretold, are denounced against her. Calmet, Pastorini, &c.—Go and pour out the seven vials, &c. According to the exposition followed by the bishop of Meaux, all these seven vials are already past, being punishments and judgments exercised against the

CHAP. XVI.

The seven vials are poured out: the plagues that ensue.

AND I heard a great voice out of the temple, saying to the seven Angels: Go, and pour out the seven vials of the wrath of God upon the earth.

2 And the first went, and poured out his vial upon the earth, and there fell a sore and most grievous wound upon the men, who had the mark of the beast; and upon them who adored his image.

3 And the second Angel poured out his vial into the sea, and there came blood as of a dead man: and every living soul died in the sea.

4 And the third poured out his vial upon the rivers, and the fountains of waters, and there was blood.

5 And I heard the Angel of the waters, saying: Thou art just, O Lord, who art, and who wast the holy one, who hast judged these things:

6 For they have shed the blood of the saints and prophets, and thou hast given them blood to drink; for they deserve it.

7 And I heard another from the altar saying: Yea, O Lord God Almighty, true and just are thy judgments.

8 And the fourth Angel poured out his vial upon the sun, and it was given to him to afflict men with heat, and fire:

heathen emperors, from the time of Valerian even to the time of Julian, at whose death it might be said, (v. 17.) it is done. Idolatry is destroyed, as to its public worship. Here in particular, by the drying up of the Euphrates, and by the armies of the East, these interpreters understand those of the Persians, who first gave the great shock to the empire in Valerian's time, and by whom afterwards Julian the apostate was defeated, and killed. By the great Babylon they also understood idolatrous Rome; and by the islands and mountains sunk by earthquakes, they understand the destruction of divers kingdoms. According to another interpretation, (which is very common) all these judgments are to come before the end of the world; and will be in a manner literally executed about antichrist's time. At the first vial, men shall be struck with ulcers and wounds, not unlike to the sixth plague of Egypt. At the second and third vial, the sea and fountains shall be turned into blood, as in Egypt. At the fourth vial shall be excessive scorching heats, tormenting men, and burning every thing for their use. At the fifth vial darkness, like that of Egypt. At the sixth vial, (v. 12.) the Euphrates dried up, to open a passage for the armies from the East, to come and join the forces of antichrist. And the three unclean spirits like frogs, may signify devils sent by the dragon, or chief of the devils, to excite the wicked to all manner of unclean abominations. They are here said to be gathered together in a place called Armagedon, perhaps with an allusion to Mageddon, in the tribe of Manasse, where the two kings of Israel, Ochozias and Josias, perished. 4 Kings ix. 21. And they are here brought in only to signify a place of great destruction. See also Zach. xii. 11. At the seventh vial, a voice, it is done, i. e. the reign of the wicked in general, and of antichrist, is at an end. Wi.

VER. 2. And the first. From hence it appears that the first vial was poured out indiscriminately upon the good equally with the wicked. But behold the different consequences that follow: those that have the mark of the beast are afflicted with a sore and grievous wound, which is said in allusion to the madness, fury, and despair with which the wicked were afflicted, whilst S. John's omitting to say any thing of the just, shews that they bore it with resignation and joy. Calmet.

VER. 3. And the second. On pouring out the vial follows the divine judgment. There appears blood, like that of a dead man. This passage, Pastorini is of opinion alludes to the Arian heresy which, like blood, flowed in vigorous circulation whilst in health and strength, gradually retarded its motion, as in a dying man, and was at last totally lost and stopped, like the circulation in a dead man. Hence every living soul died in the sea. Pastorini.—Calmet interprets it as a prediction of the calamities which befell the Roman empire, during the invasion of the Persians on the east, and the Goths and other barbarous nations on the west.

VER. 4. Upon the rivers. That is, on the Roman provinces in Italy and Rome itself. This is the last stroke employed by the Almighty for the total destruction of Rome. The divine judgment being executed, the Angel of the waters, that is, the Angel that presided over the Roman states, cries out, (v. 5. 6.) thou art just, &c. Pastorini.

VER. 8. And the fourth Angel. Here is the punishment of the Greeks during the siege of Constantinople by the Turks, where the fire engines, that were then made use of for the first time, so reduced the Grecian army, that the walls of the city were reduced to ashes, and the whole town to flames. Hence it appears how the Greeks were scorched with great heat; and how they blasphemed the name of God, appears too evident from the history of Notaras, admiral of the Constantinopolitan fleet. Past.

9 And men were scorched with great heat, and they blasphemed the name of God who hath power over these plagues, neither did they penance to give him glory.

10 And the fifth Angel poured out his vial upon the seat of the beast: and his kingdom became dark, and they gnawed their tongues for pain:

11 And they blasphemed the God of heaven, because of their pains, and wounds, and did not penance for their works.

12 And the sixth Angel poured out his vial upon that great river Euphrates: and dried up the water thereof, that a way might be prepared for the kings from the rising of the sun.

13 And I saw from the mouth of the dragon, and from the mouth of the beast, and from the mouth of the false prophet, three unclean spirits like frogs.

14 For they are the spirits of devils working signs, and they go forth unto the kings of the whole earth to gather them to battle against the great day of the Almighty God.

15 *Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame.

16 And he shall gather them together into a place, which is called in Hebrew Armageddon.

17 And the seventh Angel poured out his vial into the air, and a great voice came out of the temple from the throne, saying: It is done.

* Mat. xxiv. 48. Luke xii. 39. Supra iii. 3.

VER. 10. Calmet explains this passage of Rome the seat of idolatry, which was given up to the pillage of the barbarians under Alaric. Calmet.

VER. 12. River Euphrates. That is, a passage is laid open for the potentates of the East to lay their destructive hands upon the countries on this side the Euphrates. For they are the spirits of devils working signs, which are sent forth by the eastern princes, to oblige all to unite in arms against the great day of the Almighty God. Pastorini.

VER. 16. Armageddon. That is, the hill of robbers. Ch.

VER. 18. The seventh vial is poured out upon the air which lies between the earth and the heavens, to indicate that the judgments of God are going to fall upon the whole creation. After which follow these words, it is done. All is over, time is no more; upon which immediately follow lightnings, &c.

VER. 19. Great Babylon came in remembrance before God. The time of God's punishing the wicked world is approaching: for by a third interpretation, Babylon may signify metaphorically all the wicked in general. Wi.

VER. 21. *A great hail like a talent came down, &c. Which need not be taken literally, but only metaphorically, to signify the heavy weight of God's judgments upon sinners. Wi.

* V. 21. Et grando magna sicut talentum, &c. talantida, quasi talentaris. The Prot. and Mr. N. translate hail about the weight of a talent, as if every hail-stone were of that weight.

CHAP. XVII. VER. 1. I must repeat what I have already taken notice of, both in the preface to the Apocalypse, and sometimes in the annotations, that there are three ways of expounding all the visions of this revelation, from the end of chap. iii. to the end of ver. 10. chap. xx. all of which seem grounded on the opinions of the ancient fathers. According to the first, all these visions are only to be fulfilled in antichrist's time, a little before the end of the world. According to the second, the visions may be applied to particular events, which happened in the first three or four ages, under the persecuting heathens, till by Constantine, and the succeeding Christian emperors, idolatry by degrees was extirpated, and the faith of Christ triumphed over all its enemies, whether Jews or pagans. According to the third, by the great city of Babylon, is mystically and metaphorically signified all wicked great cities in the world, all the multitude of the wicked dispersed in all nations, their short and vain happiness, their persecutions and oppressions of the good and faithful servants of God, who live piously in this world, and who are called to be citizens of the celestial Jerusalem in the kingdom of God, where he reigneth for ever with his Angels and saints, and where they all reign with him, happy in his sight and enjoyment. I am more and more inclined to this third exposition, by reading this 17th chapter, with the contents of the 18th, 19th, and 20th chapters, till the 11th verse, and by reading what S. Jerom says in general terms, in his epistle to Marcella, tom. 4, part 1, p. 166, Nov. edit. that all this book (of the Apocalypse) is either to be expounded spiritually or if we follow a carnal interpretation, we must content ourselves with Jewish fables. And especially by reading what S. Aug. has delivered us upon the chief difficulties of the Apocalypse, in his 20th book 18 And there were lightnings, and voices, and thunders, and there was a great earthquake, such as never hath been since men were upon the earth: such an earthquake, so great.

19 And the great city was made into three parts: and the cities of the Gentiles fell, and great Babylon came in remembrance before God, to give her the cup of the wine of the indignation of his wrath.

20 And every island fled away, and the mountains were not found.

21 And great hail like a talent came down from heaven upon men: and men blasphemed God, because of the plague of the hail: for it was exceeding great.

CHAP. XVII.

The description of the great harlot, and of the beast upon which she sits.

AND there came one of the seven Angels, who had the seven vials, and spoke with me, saying: Come, I will shew thee the condemnation of the great harlot, who sitteth upon many waters.

2 With whom the kings of the earth have committed fornication: and they who inhabit the earth, have been made drunk with the wine of her prostitution.

3 And he took me away in the spirit into the desert. And I saw a woman sitting upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns.

4 And the woman was clothed round about with purple and scarlet, and gilded with gold, and precious stones, and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand, de Civ. Dei, from chap. vi. to chap. xvi. and from p. 578, to p. 594. tom. 7. Nov. edit. To expound then these chapters together according to this third interpretation. Wi.—Of the great harlot. Nothing can be better applied than this epithet to ancient Rome, which had conquered almost all the kingdoms of the known world, as it is said in ver. 18 she is the great city, a kingdom which hath dominion over the kings of the earth; ver. 9. it was built upon seven mountains; ver. 6. was watered with the blood of the saints and martyrs of Jesus Christ; and in fine, ver. 5. it was the great Babylon, as S. Peter, in his first epistle, pleases to call it. Calmet.—Come, I will shew thee the condemnation of the great harlot, . . . Babylon . . . the mother of the fornications. By this harlot, and this Babylon, is signified the multitude of all the wicked of all times and places, who have abandoned themselves to sensual pleasures, and sought for their happiness in riches and worldly grandeur; for this reason she is said to carry on her forehead this inscription, a mystery; that is, to be understood in a mystical sense of all the wicked, who make up as it were one city, as S. Aug. observes, which may be called Babylon, the city of confusion, the city of idolatry, and of all manner of vices.—The beast, that is, the devil carries her, whose suggestions the wicked follow. He comes out from the bottomless pit. He was, i. e. had a much greater and more extensive power over the wicked world before Christ's coming and incarnation; and he is not, i. e. according to S. Aug. his power hath been much extenuated and lessened since that time. He is bound or chained up for a thousand years, as it is said, c. xx. 2. By which may be understood all the time from Christ's coming, and the establishing of his Christian Church, till the last and severest persecution under antichrist. See S. Aug. l. xx. de Civ. Dei. c. vii. And when he shall come again, and be let loose, as it were, in antichrist's time, he must continue a short while: for all the ancient fathers agree, by the interpretations they give to the Scripture, that antichrist, and consequently the devil with antichrist, must reign but a short time. The scarlet coloured beast, the devil, called the prince of this world, on whom the harlot gilded with gold sat; that is, all the wicked, and particularly all wicked kings and princes, with their worldly greatness, who were drunk with the wine of her prostitution; that is, who abandoned themselves, and indulged their passions with all sensual pleasures, and contented themselves with the vain and deceitful happiness of this life; to be convinced of which, the Angel is said to have taken S. John in spirit into a wilderness from the company of the wicked world, the better to see and contemplate the vanity of their short and false happiness. This woman, this harlot, this Babylon, this multitude of the wicked, especially the heathen persecuting emperors at Rome, and in all other places, (and they who acted against the Christians under them) are said to be drunk with the blood of the saints, and the blood of the martyr by putting the Christians, the Catholics and the servants of God to death, from the foundation of the world to its consummation, by the instigation of the beast, the devil. The beast, the devil, is represented with seven heads and ten horns; that is, with many heads and many horns, signified by the numbers seven and ten. See S. Aug. c. xxiii. p. 606.—The seven heads, as it is said, v. 9, are seven mountains, and seven kings, i. e. a great many. And also the ten horns, (v. 12.) are ten kings. Wi.

VER. 4. Cup . . . full of the abomination, &c. These are common scriptural (1647) full of the abomination and filthiness of her fornication.

5 And on her forehead a name was written: A mystery: Babylon the great, the mother of the fornications and abominations of the earth.

6 And I saw the woman drunk with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. And when I had seen her, I wondered with great admiration.

7 And the Angel said to me: Why dost thou wonder? I will tell thee the mystery of the woman, and of the beast which carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns.

8 The beast which thou sawest, was, and is not, and shall come up out of the bottomless pit, and go into destruction: and the inhabitants of the earth (whose names are not written in the book of life from the foundation of the world) shall wonder, seeing the beast, that was, and is not.

9 And here is the understanding, that hath wisdom.

* 1 Tim. vi. 15. Infra xix. 16.

expressions for the abominations of idolatry, with which ancient Rome had notoriously polluted herself. For not content with worshipping her own heathenish gods, she adopted those of all the countries and nations she had subdued. In Rome itself there were no less than 420 heathenish temples, so that one of their most famous poets, Ovid, (lib. i. Trist.) says:

Sed quæ de septem totum circumspicit orbem, Montibus Imperii, Roma, Deûmque locus.

VER. 5. A mystery. That is, a secret, because what follows of the name and title of the great harlot is to be taken in a mystical sense.—Babylon. Either the city of the devil in general; or, if this place be to be understood of any particular city, pagan Rome, which then and for 300 years persecuted the Church, and was the principal seat both of empire and idolatry. Ch.

VER. 6. Drunk with the blood of the saints. Such was pagan Rome, for innumerable were the martyrs she put to death, both throughout the extent of her vast dominions, and even in her own bosom, the city itself. These were the victims of the ten persecutions raised by Rome against the Christians. Such was the woman drunk with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus. Pastorini.

VER. 8. The beast which thou sawest. This beast, which supports Babylon, may signify the power of the devil; which was, and is not, being much limited by the coming of Christ, but shall again exert itself under antichrist. The seven heads of this beast are seven mountains or empires, instruments of his tyranny; of which five were then fallen, as above, chap. xiii. ver. 1. The beast itself is said to be the eighth, and is of the seven; because they all act under the devil, and by his instigation, so that his power is in them all, yet so as to make up, as it were, an eighth empire distinct from them all. Ch.

VER. 9. Seven mountains. We have already observed that ancient Rome stood upon seven mountains. The same cannot be said of modern Rome, as some of the hills are not inhabited.—The seven heads . . . are seven kings, or seven Roman emperors, who were particularly distinguished as the chief supporters of idolatry, and the most virulent persecutors of the Christian religion. Their names were Nero, Domitian, Severus, Decius, Valerian, Dioclesian and Antichrist.—Five of them are fallen or gone, viz. Nero, Domitian, Severus, Decius, Valerian, who supported the idolatrous empire for a time; one is, viz. Dioclesian, with whom the reign of idolatry falls; and the other is not yet come, that is, antichrist.

VER. 10. Five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet. The meaning of this is obscure. And perhaps it were better to own with S. Aug. that we do not know the meaning, than to advance suspicions and conjectures. But it is not improbable that by these seven kings may be understood the collection of kings, in what are called the seven ages of the world, from its creation to its consummation. The first age, is reckoned from Adam to Noe, and the deluge: the second age, from Noe to Abraham; the third, from Abraham to Moses; the fourth, from Moses to David; the fifth, from David to Christ. These five were past, and fallen, when S. John wrote. The sixth is, and is to last from Christ to antichrist. And another, the seventh, is not, being the time of antichrist, and only a short time. See A. Lapide on this verse. Wi.

VER. 11. The beast that was, and is not: is the eighth: and is of the seven. The devil reigns with the kings in all these ages: he is of the seven, because he is the prince under whom reign the wicked in all ages: he is also the eighth, inasmuch as he is their prince, and they are only his instruments. Wi.

VER. 12. The ten horns, or ten kings, which thou sawest, as yet have received no kingdom, but shall receive power as kings, one hour after the east; or, as it is in the Greek, with the beast. According to the common interpretation, this must be referred to ten, or many kings, who are different from all the wicked kings that had been, and who should follow and live at the same time with the beast, by which here seem to be signified antichrist. Or, if by these ten kings we understand all the wicked kings, who were to come after S. John wrote, to the end of the world, they had not yet kingdoms, but the kingdoms which they should have, and all their vain happiness, would be very short, (1648)

The seven heads are seven mountains, upon which the woman sitteth, and they are seven kings.

10 Five are fallen, one is, and the other is not yet come: and when he is come, he must remain a short time.

11 And the beast that was, and is not: the same is also the eighth: and is of the seven, and goeth into destruction.

12 And the ten horns, which thou sawest, are ten kings: who have not yet received a kingdom, but shall receive power as kings one hour after the beast.

13 These have one design, and their strength and power they shall deliver to the beast.

14 These shall fight with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; *because he is Lord of lords, and King of kings, and they that are with him are called, and elect, and faithful.

15 And he said to me: The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, are peoples, and nations, and tongues.

and at the same time they would be under the beast, and subject to him. Wi.—Ten horns. These denote ten kings, or ten powers; namely, Goths, Huns, Alans, Vandals, Saxons, Burgundians, Franks, Heruli, Suevi, &c. the chief of the Barbarians that invaded the Roman empire in the fifth century.—They shall receive power as kings, one hour after the beast; that is, they will serve under their own leaders, to assist pagan Rome a little against its enemies; and their one design is afterwards to take the fruitful provinces of Rome to themselves, which we know they did. Pastorini.—Ten kings. Ten lesser kingdoms, enemies also of the Church of Christ; which nevertheless shall be made instruments of the justice of God, for the punishment of Babylon. Some understand this of the Goths, Vandals, Huns, and other barbarous nations that destroyed the empire of Rome. Ch.

VER. 13. These have one design, to make themselves as happy as they can in this world; and their power they shall give to the beast, being always slaves of the devil. Wi.

VER. 14. These shall fight with the Lamb. Their actions and affections being always led away with the love of this world, which is an enemy to Christ and his doctrine: but the Lamb, Christ, shall overcome them, and punish them, when he pleases: for he, Christ, God and man, is Lord of lords, and King of kings: and as S. John says again, (c. xix. 16.) has written on his thigh, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, to signify to us his divinity, or divine nature. Wi.—All these different people were either heathens or heretics, and of course were bitter enemies to the Catholic religion; but the Lamb overcame them, by turning their hearts, and converting them to Christianity.

VER. 15, &c. The waters which thou sawest, where the harlot sitteth, signify the different nations, in all which is a multitude of wicked, especially among the great ones of this world. Wi.—And the ten horns . . . shall hate the harlot. That is, ancient Rome; they will make her desolate, by laying waste all her provinces; they will make her . . . naked, by stripping her of her shining ornaments, her gaudy palaces, Egyptian obelisks, magnificent temples, theatres, triumphal arches, &c.—They will eat her flesh, by plundering her of her wealth and riches, with which she has fed herself by plundering the rest of the world; and lastly, they will burn her with fire; all which we know has been accomplished, even to a title. Past.—Alaric, the Goth, in 410, took the city, pillaged it, and delivered it over to fire and the plunder of his soldiers for three days. The only privileged places that escaped were the churches. Calmet.—Genseric plundered it for fourteen days, in 455, and set fire to it. Odoacer took it, and deposed the emperor in 476; and Totila, in 546, burnt it, and reduced it to a solitude. Procopius says he left not one human creature in the city. Past.—These shall hate the harlot. There is no true love or friendship among them: the wicked hate, envy, make war against the wicked, though they make alliances sometimes one with another.—For God hath put it into their hearts, permits them, and makes use of them as instruments of his justice, against one another: and they give their kingdom to the beast: the wicked reign under the prince of this world, the devil, as long as God pleases, and till his words and judgments be fulfilled. All the contents of the following chapters agree with this exposition. When the Angel cries, (c. xviii.) Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen, the false happiness of the wicked is come to its last period; though S. John speaks sometimes by anticipation, especially when the rejoicings of the saints are represented, and the miseries and consternation of the wicked, to encourage the servants of God to patience and perseverance under their trials and persecutions in this mortal life. Babylon will in a short time be the habitation of devils: and therefore the good are admonished by these words, go out from her, my people, avoid and detest her wicked ways. Almighty God hath remembered her iniquities, the provocations of the wicked, nor can they escape the hand of his justice. They lived as if they were never to be called to an account. Babylon, blinded with sensual delights, pride, and vanity, said in her heart, I sit as a queen above others, and sorrow I shall not see; like the wicked in the psalmist, who is Lord over us? Pa. xi. But all her plagues (c. xviii. 8.) come in one day, at the day of death, or the day of judgment. Then are represented the weeping and mourning of all the 16 And the ten horns, which thou sawest on the beast, these shall hate the harlot, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh, and shall burn her with fire.

17 For God hath given into their hearts, to do that which pleaseth him: that they give their kingdom to the beast till the words of God be fulfilled.

18 And the woman which thou sawest, is the great accomplices of the wicked, like the disappointment of merchants by the burning and destruction of a great city, where they found so great profit in disposing and selling their merchandise. After this, in the 19th chapter, the blessed in heaven sing Allouia, &c. the God Almighty hath reigned, or is about to reign. At the latter end of the 19th chapter, v. 17, it is said, I saw an Angel standing in the sun; saying to all the birds, &c. Here are represented God's judgments on the wicked, as it were after a great battle, in which kings and many noblemen are slain, so that the birds are invited to drink of their blood.—The beast was taken, and with him the false prophet. We may take this as spoken by anticipation of antichrist, and his great impostor, or false prophet. For still after this, (c. xx. 7.) is foretold, according to S. Aug. the last persecution by the devil, and by antichrist with Gog and Magog; for it is then that fire came down from heaven, and was to devour them; and there it is expressed that the devil, who seduced them, and all the wicked, was cast into the lake of fire, into hell, where also the beast, antichrist, and the false prophet shall be tormented for ever and ever. Now to give a short account of the two other expositions. The first of them, followed by a great many, (as may be seen in Alcazar and A. Lapide) holds that all these visions will come to pass in the short reign of antichrist, a little while before the end of the world. These interpreters are divided about the signification of Babylon: some understand Babylon the metropolis of Chaldea, where they think that antichrist will begin to reign; others understand Constantinople, the seat of the Turkish empire, which is also built upon seven hills: but many understand Rome, not Christian Rome, but Rome that was a heathen city in the first ages, and which they think will be heathen Rome again in antichrist's time. See a great number of the fathers and interpreters for this opinion cited by A. Lapide. By the beast that carries her with her idolatry and vices, they understand the devil; and by the seven heads and ten horns, kings, who shall be in the time of antichrist, and submit themselves to him. All these kings and persecutors will receive their power one hour after, or with the beast, by which they rather understand antichrist, whose reign shall be short, as shall be that of the devil, who shall be let loose, and have greater power for a little while. By the eighth, who is of the seven, they understand the devil, because all the seven will be as it were his instruments. The same kings who committed fornication with the harlot, are also said to hate her, and burn her, says Gagneus, by being the cause of her damnation and destruction: for none are greater enemies than sinners' accomplices. As to the other exposition, (for which see Alcazar, the bishop of Meaux, &c.) they look upon all these visions till the last persecution under antichrist, (c. xx. 7. 10.) to be already fulfilled by the destruction of the heathen Roman empire, as they are also expounded by Dr. Hammond. Babylon is the ancient heathen Rome, mother of fornication, i. e. of idolatry and of all kind of vices, sitting upon a scarlet beast, supported by the pagan emperors in all their grandeur, pomp, and vanity. When it is said of her, that she was, and is not, this is not to be taken with a regard to the visions one after another represented to S. John, nor with a regard to the time when he wrote under Domitian. She is said to come again out of the bottomless pit, when the same heathen worship was again renewed by Julian the apostate, who had a design and endeavoured to destroy the Christian religion. The seven heads are ingeniously applied to Dioclesian, Maximian Hercules, Constantine Chlorus, Maximus, and Maxentius, which in a vision of S. John, are said to be the five that are fallen. One, to wit, Maximinus, is the sixth, represented as then in being; and another, the seventh, it is said is not yet come; to wit, Licinius, whose persecution continued but a short time. The eighth, who is called also one of the seven, they take to be Maximian Hercules, who had laid down the empire with Dioclesian, but took it up again, and so was the eighth, but of the seven mentioned before. The ten horns represented as not yet having a kingdom, but who are to receive power as kings, one hour after the beast, or at the fall of the empire, are those kings and princes by whom the Roman empire was destroyed; as the Goths, Vandals, Lombards, Burgundians, Franks, Huns, Alans, Suevi, also Persians and Saracens, who invaded and dismembered different parts of the empire: but no great stress need be laid on the exact number of ten; which, as S. Aug. says, may be taken for a great many. They all come with the same design, (v. 13.) to enrich and settle themselves in the dominions of the empire; yet afterwards they gave their power to the beast, by entering into alliances with the emperors, as Alaric, the Goth, and others did. They at first fought with the Lamb, being then heathens, and afterwards many of them Arians, till the Lamb overcame them, and brought them to the true Christian faith. They are said to have hated the harlot, making her destitute by pillaging Rome and divers other cities; they devoured her flesh, her treasures, God putting it into their hearts, making use of them as instruments to punish these wicked persecuting idolaters; yet they afterwards sometimes agreed to give her their strength by agreements and alliances, till the time that God decreed the empire should be in a manner destroyed. These interpreters conclude that by Babylon must necessarily be understood Rome, because it is said that seven heads, upon which the woman sitteth, are seven mountains; and it is well known that Rome is built upon seven hills; and secondly, because the woman is said to be the city, which hath dominion over the kings of the earth. But first, those seven mountains are also called seven kings; secondly, Constantinople is also built upon seven hills; thirdly, seven may be taken for many. And I cannot but take notice that some expressions in this and in the next chapter, seem to agree better with that exposition, which takes Babylon for the multitude of all the city, which hath dominion over the kings of the earth.

CHAP. XVIII.

The fall of Babylon: kings and merchants lament over her.

AND after these things I saw another Angel coming down from heaven, having great power: and the earth was enlightened with his glory.

2 And he cried out with a strong voice, saying:

wicked: as when we read (c. xviii. 3.) that all nations have drunk of the wine of the wrath of her fornication; (v. 23.) that all nations were deceived by her sorceries; (v. 24.) that in her was found the blood of the prophets, and of the saints, and of all that were slain upon the earth. For though the Roman empire was of so large an extent, yet a greater part of the world was never subject to the Romans: many apostles and martyrs were not put to death at Rome, nor by the Romans, but by the Persians, and in India, &c. so these general expressions are more easily expounded, if by the great city of Babylon we understand the multitude of the wicked in all parts of the world: not but that these visions may also regard heathen Rome as the chief place where such persecutions were acted, and where all kind of vices were practised.—N. B. Some have taken notice, that the English Protestants print the 5th verse of this chapter in capital letters: Mystery Babylon the great, the mother of harlots, and abominations of the earth. I will suppose that these words are only printed in this manner, because they contain an inscription; as when it is said, that he who was called the word of God, had written upon him, the King of kings, and Lord of lords, which words are also printed in great letters: but if our adversaries do this, to make the Church of Rome to be looked upon as the whore of Babylon, and the pope as antichrist, nothing can be more unfair, nothing more ridiculous, as I may shew on the following chapters. Wi.

CHAP. XVIII. In this chapter is a repetition of the fall of Babylon and the mourning of other nations, and their consolation for its sudden destruction, to which may be applied the three mentioned expositions. Among the sorts of merchandise, (v. 13.) are mentioned slaves, and the souls of men. Some of our Prot. adversaries (see Mr. Theophilus Higgon's) tell us, that it is only Popish Rome that deals with this sort of merchandise. But I must needs say, our adversaries have the misfortune to betray a shameful ignorance, whenever they undertake to bring proofs to shew the popes to be antichrist. Here it is so evident that by the souls of men are meant only bond slaves, which merchants used to bring and sell at Rome, that Dr. Wells instead of slaves and souls of men, in the amendments made to the Prot. translation, has translated hired servants and bond servants, as Dr. Hammond had before put in his paraphrase, and proved it in his notes. It is from the mysterious visions of these revelations, especially in the 17th and 18th chapters, that divers Prot. writers would make the people believe that all the popes for above twelve hundred and sixty years have been the detestable antichrist, the great whore of Babylon, the monstrous beast with seven heads and ten horns. This new invention, and their wild fancies upon it, are full as monstrous as the beast. The obscurity of the vision furnishes them with a more convenient handle for their main design, when it is to make the pope and popery odious to the people, where they can with less hazard advance their groundless and licentious expositions: and where the expressions are mystical and allegorical, it is no hard matter, said Dr. Hammond, to transform any thing into any thing, and thus to lead the people by the nose, said Mr. Thorndike on this very subject. Never was there a fable invented by men, that pretend to be interpreters of the holy Scriptures, so empty, so incoherent in its parts, so contradictory to the Scripture, and to the unexceptionable authority of the primitive fathers, to use the words of Dr. Wells, who therefore is pleased to own that he is not so sanguine as divers others of his communion, to think that the popes are the great, literal, and famous antichrist, emphatically so called, but by another new invention, as groundless and as frivolous as the former, he would have above two hundred popes for the same term of twelve hundred and sixty years, to have been the mystical antichrist: he does not only mean antichrist improperly and metaphorically so called, as are all heretics who teach false doctrine, and so are adversaries to Christ, of which S. John said, (1 Ep. ii. 18.) they are become many antichrists. The doctor's mystical antichrist, or antichrists, he pretends were foretold in this revelation of S. John, who were to reign for twelve hundred and sixty days, that is by a new exposition of his learned divines of the reformation, twelve hundred and sixty years, which no one dreamt of before them. I had designed and prepared an appendix to these annotations on the Apocalypse, with a confutation of their arbitrary expositions and groundless arguments; but by the advice of a learned friend, for whose judgment I have the greatest esteem, I shall only give the reader in short what I hope may be sufficient to shew that the popes can neither be that mystical antichrist, nor antichrist emphatically so called: and that both from the authority of the Scriptures and of all the primitive Fathers, both of the Greek and Latin Church, in which we find any thing concerning antichrist. It may be observed that the Fathers, or ancient interpreters, sometimes give us their private conjectures and opinions, as S. Augustine takes notice, in which others do not join with them, as that antichrist is to be of the tribe of Dan, a Jew, and chiefly to be acknowledged by the Jews, who will pretend to be their Messiah, who is to sit in the temple rebuilt at Jerusalem, to overcome three kings, and seven others to submit to him, &c. These are the suspicions and opinions of some; though none of them favour their system of the popish antichrist. But whosoever consults the primitive Fathers, as I make bold to say I have done with all possible exactness, will find that the Scripture and Fathers unanimously agree in these three following points, (utterly destructive of their systems of the popish antichrist) to wit: 1. That antichrist must be one single man; 2. that he shall not come till about the end of the world; 3. that he shall but reign a very short time. In the holy Scriptures, we only find the word itself, antichrist, five times, that is, in the 1st

"Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen: and is become the habitation of devils, and the hold of every un-

* Isai. xli. 9. Jer. li. 8. Supra xiv. 8.

and 2nd Epistle of S. John. In four of these places, he only speaks of antichrists improperly so called, as being seducers and adversaries of Christ; and of the one proper antichrist he only says, (1 Ep. ii. 18.) as you have heard that antichrist cometh, or is to come. But it is generally agreed, even by Protestants, that S. Paul (2 Thessa. ii.) speaks of the great antichrist; and there he is called the man of sin, the son of perdition, he who opposeth and is lifted up above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, &c. S. Paul also there adds, then that wicked one shall be revealed, (i. e. about the time of the day of judgment) whom the Lord Jesus shall kill with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming; from which it follows, both that antichrist is to be one man, and that his coming and the glorious coming of our Saviour shall concur together. If our adversaries will understand the predictions of the prophet Daniel, (C. vii. &c.) of antichrist, and not only of Antiochus, he must also be one particular king, who shall overcome other kings, that little horn that sprang up amidst other ten horns. In the Revelation or Apocalypse of S. John, we no where find the name of antichrist. Secondly, I take notice that divers of the ancient Fathers, as S. Chrysa. S. Cyril of Jerusalem, Theodoret, &c. never bring any passages out of the Apocalypse when they speak of antichrist. Thirdly, nor is this to be wondered at, since divers of them by the great Babylon, and the scarlet whore, understood the devil, or heathen Rome with its heathen Roman emperors, and taught that all those visions till the 20th chapter are fulfilled already, before the coming of antichrist. Dr. Hammond gives their interpretations in these words, in his first note on the Revel. chap. xviii: "What is said of the fall of Babylon cannot belong to Christian Rome, neither to the emperor Honorius, who was then a Christian, and at Ravenna, nor to Innocentius, the pope or bishop of Rome, by the ordering of God's providence. . . rescued like Lot out of Sodom: also at Ravenna, nor generally to the Christians, who survived to restore and re-edify the city, a more Christian city than before, but to the heathen part of the city: so that the sum of the fall of Babylon is the destruction of the wicked and heathen, and the preserving of the pure and Christian Rome, and so in effect the bringing of that city and empire to Christianity." Thus Dr. Hammond. Nothing that the Protestants bring, as I think, has even the face or appearance of an objection, unless it be when they tell us, that by Babylon in S. John's Revelation is meant Rome; therefore, say they, the Church of Rome must be Babylon, and the scarlet whore that sitteth there must be the pope with his cardinals, clothed in scarlet and purple. I answer: All Catholics, and all men of sense, have reason to wonder and ask by what kind of logic they have hooked or drawn into the consequence the Church of Rome. There is not, as the bishop of Meaux desires the Protestants to take notice, in all these visions and predictions the least hint or insinuation of a fallen corrupted church, but of a heathen city and pagan empire. Many by Babylon understand the multitude of the wicked in general: but we will willingly allow that by Babylon was meant Rome, yet not Christian Rome or the Church of Rome, but heathen Rome and its pagan emperors, with their dress of purple and scarlet. Let me again cite to these our adversaries, the paraphrase of their learned Dr. Hammond, p. 985: "I will shew thee the vengeance that is ready to befall the imperial dignity of Rome, fitly styled the great whore . . . for their worship of many heathen gods. I saw a woman, that great whore, the imperial power of heathen Rome, seated on an emperor in a scarlet robe, a great blasphemer against God," &c.—Now as to the ancient Fathers, and what they have witnessed and delivered to us concerning the three above mentioned points. S. IRENEUS, on whose testimony the Protestants seem to lay the greatest stress, tells us, (l. v. c. xxx. p. 361. Ed. Rig.) that antichrist shall be a wicked king . . . who shall overcome ten other kings. He also makes his conjecture on the number of the name of a single man. As to the time of his coming, he says, (p. 563) that it shall be at the end of the world, and when the end of all things shall come. That he shall reign upon the earth three years and six months: or, as he says again, for forty-two months. Rex impius et injustus . . . novissimo tempore . . . quoniam finis fiet . . . regnans annis tribus et sex mensibus, &c. S. CHRYSOSTOM: (tom. 6. Nov. Ed. Ben. p. 238) What is the little horn? I say it is antichrist appearing among some kings, and that he is a man, ἀνθρώπος ἄνθρωπος. See also his 3rd homil. on 2 Thessa. Who is antichrist? a certain man, &c. ἀνθρώπος τις. And hom. iv. Antichrist, says he, will be destroyed by Christ's coming, &c. THEODORET, on Daniel, (C. vii. t. 2, p. 631. Ed. Par. 1642) The little horn is antichrist, &c. And C. xi. He will glorify the god Maazim in this place: which the Protestants may take notice of that he expounds thus: Instead of the gods which his forefathers adored, he will set himself up for the strong and powerful god, signified by the word Maazim. See on Thessa. ii. tom. 3, p. 386. Antichrist is called the man of sin, because by nature a man, who will call himself the Christ, &c. God hath decreed he shall appear at the end of the world: κατὰ τὸν τῆς οὐρανίας καιρῶν. S. CYRIL OF JERUSALEM: (Cat. xv. p. 162. Ed. Par. 1640) The devil will bring a certain man, a magician, falsely calling himself the Christ. And this will come after the time of the Roman empire, and when the end of the world shall approach: τῆς τοῦ κόσμου συντέλειας. He shall be destroyed by the glorious coming of Christ. He will act only for three years and six months: ἐπὶ τρεῖς ἔτη καὶ ἡμίση. He brings proofs, p. 165 and 166, to shew that antichrist's reign will last but three years and a half, being also expressed by months. And these things, says he, we draw from the divine Scriptures, ἐκ θείων γραφῶν, yet does not bring any place out of the Apocalypse. I do not cite Hippolytus on the Apocalypse, because that book we now have with his name is thought not to be his. Theophylact, Eusebius, and Euthymius, follow S. Chrysostom. In the BB. Patrum, (tom. 4. Ed. Colon. p. 517) we have a commentary on the Apoc. of Andreas, bishop of Caesarea, in Cappadocia, and another (tom. 6. p. 59) of Arethas, bishop of the same city, which is in a manner an abridgment of the former. They both agree that the reign of antichrist will last but three years and a half, for which also they cite Hippolytus. S. JOHN DAMASCEN, in the eighth age, (l. 4. Orthod. fid. c. xxviii. Ed. Basil. p. 389) says that antichrist is to come at the end of the world. None of these writers dreamt that the bishops of Rome were antichrist. The Latin Fathers, upon antichrist, deliver us the clean spirit, and the hold of every unclean and hateful bird:

3 Because all nations have drunk of the wine of the very same truths. TERTULLIAN, to omit other places, l. de Resur. carnis. c. xxvii. Those, saith he, in antichrist's time at the end of the world, &c. S. CYPRIAN, in the middle of the third age, (Ep. 56. Ed. Rig. and in other epistles) was apprehensive that the time of antichrist was then approaching, as divers of the Fathers feared the same in their time, but he always joins with antichrist the end of the world. Scire debetis et occasum sæculi, et antichristi tempus appropinquasse . . . prenuuntiata sunt hæc futura in fine sæculi, deficiente jam mundo et antichristo propinquant. See Ep. 68. ad Clerum in Hispania, p. 116. See LACTANTIUS, l. 7. div. Institut. c. xvii: Antichrist, says he, will come; imminens jam tempore conclusio, &c. S. HILARY (or Matt. xxiv. can. or cap. 26) tells us, that antichrist is to come when the day of judgment is at hand. See also can. 33. See S. AMBROSE, (l. 1. de ben. Prophet. c. vii. p. 523) where he also thinks that antichrist will be of the tribe of Dan. See t. 2. in Psal. xlv. p. 1028. S. JEROM (on Dan. vii. tom. 3, p. 1101. Nov. Ed.) says, that by the little horn is meant antichrist. "Let us say what all ecclesiastical writers have delivered to us, that at the end of the world, when the kingdom of the Romans is to be destroyed, there will be ten kings, who will divide among them the Roman world, and the eleventh will rise up, a little king, who will overcome three of those ten. . . and the other seven will submit to the conqueror." Take notice, that these words, "what all ecclesiastical writers have delivered to us," quod omnes ecclesiastici scriptores tradiderunt, in consummatione mundi quando regnum est Romanorum, &c. are not to be extended to every particular in this sentence, but only to what he and other ecclesiastical writers agreed in, to wit, that antichrist was not to come till about the end of the world, and that the heathen Roman empire was first to be destroyed. But it does not follow, that presently after the destruction of the Roman empire, both antichrist and the end of the world (which others also join together) should happen. This was indeed, for some time at least, the particular opinion of S. Jerom and of some other Fathers; but divers others hold that the Roman empire is now long ago destroyed, though antichrist be still to come. S. Jerom also tells us that ten kings shall divide the Roman world; but S. Augustine puts us in mind, that by ten may be signified many. And besides, there are other expositions on these kings and on Babylon, which are very probable, as shewn already. S. Jerom also (on Daniel, p. 1103) says, the reign of antichrist will last but three years and a half. On the 12th chapter, (p. 1133) he takes notice that the same short time is signified by 1260 days. P. 1127, he tells us Antiochus was a figure of antichrist, but that many things in that prophecy agree better with antichrist himself at the end of the world: rectus in fine mundi hæc facturus est antichristus. See also his Ep. to Algasia, tom. 4, part 1, c. 11, p. 200. S. AUGUSTINE began his learned work, de Civ. Dei, soon after the destruction of Rome by Alarie, about an. 410, as he tells us l. 2. retract. c. xliii, though he did not finish these books till about the year 427. He is far from finding any certainty of the approach of antichrist, as I shall have an occasion to shew on chap. xx. of this Apocalypse; and shall only here take notice, that he delivers it as a certain truth, that the reign of antichrist will last but three years and a half, (l. 20, c. xxiii) which he tells us we are the more certain of, the same short time being expressed in the Scriptures by years, by months, and by days: tres annos et semissem, etiam numero dierum aliquando, et mensium numero declaratur. S. GREGORY, in his moral books on Job, (tom. 1) makes frequent mention of antichrist, little dreaming that his predecessors for almost two hundred years, that he himself and his successors for so many ages, were antichrist, foretold in the Apocalypse. L. 12, c. xv, p. 410, he says antichrist will be permitted to be exalted for a little time; parvo tempore. L. 13, p. 32, he calls him that damnable man whom the apostate angel will make use of at the end of the world; in fine mundi: and again, (l. 29, c. vii, p. 925) in mundi termino, &c.—Now to conclude from what has been said. The Scripture, and all both Greek and Latin Fathers, acknowledge no particular antichrist, properly so called, but him who shall be one single man, who is not to come till about the end of the world, who is to reign but a short time. Let our adversaries reconcile this doctrine with their systems of the popish antichrist, whether emphatical or mystical. They tell us that 1260 days, being prophetic days, must be taken for years; and that just so long must reign the popish antichrist. It is true we have two examples in Scripture, and only two, as the bishop of Meaux observes, in which days are put for years, to wit, Num. xiii. 34. and Ezech. iv. 5. and in both places we are admonished that days unusually stand for years. And certainly, unless we have particular proofs to the contrary, days even in the writings of the prophets are to be taken for days, months for months, years for years. Now in this place, since the same term of antichrist's reign both in Daniel (to whom S. John alludes) and in the Apocalypse is also expressed by as many years and months as come to no more than 1260 days, it is manifest that S. John by days means days, and not years. So divers other convincing proofs of this matter in the advertisement of the bishop of Meaux, num. 24. This the ancient Fathers saw very well, and so not one of them understood this of a number of so many years. Yet unless we allow this arbitrary and groundless exposition, that by 1260 days are meant years, the whole system of so many popes being antichrist is utterly destroyed. But let us see what pleasant work they can make of it, if we suppose days to be years; with a second supposition, that above two hundred men are one man; and with a third, that the end of the world, at which antichrist is to come, has now been ending for 1260 years. The popish antichrist, say they, is to last 1260 years and no longer; and they are certain that he began some time in the fifth age, as soon as the Roman empire was destroyed by ten kings; for the popish antichrist was to begin with those kings that began to reign with the beast, and the pope renewed heathenism and idolatry at that very time. From hence they have made different computations: 1. From the year 410, when Alarie, the Goth, pillaged and almost destroyed Rome; add to this number 1260 years, and the antichristian reign of the popes should have come to a period in 1670, or thereabouts. This by the event being found a mistake, others, as Jurieu and Mr. Whiston, found out a new epoch, and dated the beginning of the popish antichrist from the year 456 or 456, under the great, learned, and virtuous S.

wrath of her fornication: and the kings of the earth have committed fornication with her: and the merchants of the earth have become rich by the strength of her delicacies.

4 And I heard another voice from heaven, saying: Go out from her, my people: that you be not partakers of her sins, and that you receive not of her plagues.

5 For her sins have reached even to heaven, and the Lord hath remembered her iniquities.

6 Render to her as she also hath rendered to you: and double ye the double according to her works: in the cup, wherein she hath mingled, mingle unto her double.

7 As much as she hath glorified herself, and hath been in delicacies, so much torment and sorrow give unto her: because she saith in her heart: "I sit a queen, and am not a widow: and sorrow I shall not see.

8 Therefore shall her plagues come in one day, death, and mourning, and famine, and she shall be burnt with fire: because God is strong, who shall judge her.

9 And the kings of the earth, who have committed fornication, and lived in delicacies with her, shall weep, and bewail themselves over her, when they shall see the smoke of her burning:

10 Standing afar off for fear of her torments, saying: Alas! alas! that great city, Babylon, that mighty city: for in one hour is thy judgment come.

11 And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her: for no man shall buy their merchandise any more:

12 Merchandise of gold, and silver, and of precious stones, and pearl, and of fine linen, and purple, and of silk, and scarlet, (and all thyine wood, and all manner of vessels of ivory, and all manner of vessels of precious stone, and of brass, and iron, and marble, 13 And cinnamon) and of odours and ointment, and

* Isai. xlvii. 8.

Leo, when Genserio, the Vandal, again plundered Rome; adding the aforesaid number, and the reign of the popish antichrist was to end in 1715 or 1716. The author of a late book, entitled Charity and Truth, laughs at Mr. Whiston, that he has outlived his nine whimsical demonstrations, by which in his Essay on the Revelation he had shewn that the papacy was to expire in the year 1716. This term being also expired, and the popish antichrist going prosperously on at this present year, (1730) under Benedict XIII. whom even the Protestants themselves commonly allow to be a very holy and virtuous pope or antichrist, some have computed that the beginning of this popish antichrist may be dated from the year 475, when both the dignity and name of the Roman empire ceased under Augustulus: and thus they may hope for the destruction of antichrist, and (as I think they hold) of the end of the world, just five years hence, 1735. Luther, at the beginning of the reformation, made some pretence to prophecies, as the particulars are related by the bishop of Meaux in his excellent History of the Variations, and among the rest, that the antichristian reign of the popes should come to an end in two years time. Luther's preaching was to be looked on as the breath of Christ, by which the man of sin, the popish antichrist, should be destroyed, and that whilst he drank his beer quietly at his fireside with his two friends, Amadorf and Melancthon. See the Hist. of Variations, l. i. and num. ix. if you can—Spectatum admitti risum teneatis. Wi.

VER. 2. Babylon the great is fallen, is fallen. Idolatrous Rome is fallen. That mighty seat of power and dominion is fallen. The long fixed abode of voluptuousness and luxury, for the merchants of the earth have become rich by the strength of her delicacies, and now the hand of God hath struck her. It is utterly destroyed; not a human being in it. Thus it is become an accursed place, given up for an habitation of devils and a hold of every unclean spirit, or of frightful spectres and ghosts, and a hold of every unclean and hateful bird, of owls, ravens, vultures, &c. &c. Past.

VER. 4. Go out from her, my people. The people of God, the Christians, are all here told to leave the falling city, lest they be partakers of her sins, and receive frankincense, and wine, and oil, and fine flour, and wheat, and beasts, and sheep, and horses, and chariots, and slaves, and souls of men.

14 And the fruits of the desire of thy soul are departed from thee, and all fat, and goodly things are perished from thee, and they shall no more find them.

15 The merchants of these things, who were made rich, shall stand afar off from her, for fear of her torments, weeping and mourning,

16 And saying: Alas! alas! that great city, which was clothed with fine linen, and purple, and scarlet, and was gilded with gold, and precious stones, and pearls:

17 For in one hour are so great riches come to nothing: and every ship-master, and every one that sails into the lake, and mariners, and they that work at sea, stood afar off,

18 And cried out, seeing the place of her burning, saying: What city is like to this great city?

19 And they cast dust upon their heads, and cried out, weeping and mourning, saying: Alas! alas! that great city, wherein all were made rich, who had ships at sea, by reason of her prices: for in one hour she is made desolate.

20 Rejoice over her, thou heaven, and ye holy apostles, and prophets: for God hath judged your judgment on her.

21 And a mighty Angel took up a stone, as it were a great mill-stone, and cast it into the sea, saying: With this violence shall Babylon, that great city, be thrown down, and shall now be found no more.

22 And the voice of harpers, and of musicians, and of them that play on the pipe, and on the trumpet, shall no more be heard in thee: and no craftsmen of any art whatsoever shall be found any more in thee: and the sound of the mill shall be heard no more in thee:

23 And the light of the lamp shall shine no more in thee; and the voice of the bridegroom and bride shall of her plagues. At the time of Alaric's sacking Rome, many fled away to S. Jerom, who was then in Judea; others fled into other parts, as many holy fathers testify. S. Jerom says, (Ep. vii) that S. Paula and several illustrious Christian families had left Rome as if by particular inspiration, and retired into Judea. The holy pope Innocent was drawn by a particular providence out of the city as Lot out of Sodom, that he might not see the ruin of a guilty people, says Orosius, lib. 7. c. xxxix. We read likewise that Melania, as if she foresaw the approaching catastrophe, had prevailed upon many Christians to retire with her from a city doomed to destruction. Histor. Laus. c. cxviii. In fine, we all know that when the storm broke out, the Christians took refuge and were saved in the Churches of S. Peter and S. Paul, which Alaric had allowed to be places of safety. A.

VER. 10. Alas! alas! S. Aug. informs us, that the people of the eastern provinces, and the remotest cities, mourned in a public manner on this occasion. De Civ. Dei. l. i. c. xxxiii.

VER. 18. We see here enumerated the articles of the luxury of the pagan Romans in dress, in ornaments, in furniture, in equipage, in the sumptuousness of their tables, &c. &c. Nothing is more remarkable than the extravagant luxury and profusion of some the Roman emperors at their tables. Caligula once spent (according to Seneca) for a supper, 150,000 crowns. Suetonius tells us, that the emperor Vitellius would feast himself thrice, and often four times, in a day, spending 10,000 crowns at each meal. But now they are all gone; they are now the fuel of fire, and in one hour brought to nought. A.

VER. 20. Rejoice . . . heaven, the holy apostles and prophets, and all the holy ministers of the gospel: and holy men are invited here to rejoice, because the divine justice is accomplished in the ruin of that guilty city. Past.—By the words prophets, &c. are not meant those of the old law, as pagan Rome had not been the cause of their deaths, but here only includes all the prophets, saints, and martyrs, who had been put to death for Christ throughout the whole Roman empire. A.

be heard no more in thee: for thy merchants were the great men of the earth, for all nations have been deceived by thy sorceries 24 And in her was found the blood of prophets and of saints: and of all who were slain upon the earth.

CHAP. XIX.

The saints glorify God for his judgments on the great harlot. Christ's victory over the beast, and the kings of the earth.

AFTER these things I heard as it were the voice of many multitudes in heaven, saying: Alleluia: salvation, and glory, and power is to our God:

2 For true and just are his judgments, who hath judged the great harlot, which corrupted the earth with her fornication, and hath revenged the blood of his servants, at her hands.

3 And again they said: Alleluia. And her smoke ascendeth for ever and ever.

4 And the four and twenty ancients, and the four animals, fell down and adored God, that sitteth upon the throne, saying: Amen: Alleluia.

5 And a voice came out from the throne, saying: Praise ye our God all his servants: and you that fear him, little and great.

CHAP. XIX. VER. 1. Here we enter upon a new scene. Babylon the great is fallen. The saints are here represented rejoicing over the woman who was drunk with the blood of the saints. C. xvii. 6. Calmet.—The voice of many multitudes . . . saying: Alleluia. In these visions, when the martyrs have triumphed and overcome persecutors, are sometimes represented their praises of God in heaven. Here in the Protestant translation, are retained both Alleluia and Amen, which, as S. Aug. takes notice, used not to be changed nor translated in any language. Wl.

VER. 6. The voice of a great multitude. Menochius applies this voice to the multitude of Angels and saints, which from its strength may be compared to the voice of many rushing waters, and because of the terror with which it strikes the wicked. Pastorini understands by this voice of many waters, the voices of many Angels that preside over nations, denoted by waters, which had all before groaned under the tyranny of antichrist; and the voice of great thunders, that of the Angel who presides over fire, which, as employed in military engines, by its explosion resembles thunder. It must be observed that the latter author refers it to the last stage of the world.

VER. 7. For the marriage, &c. In the New Testament, the word marriage points out the establishment of the Church, the vocation of different people to the faith, or the reign of the Messias. Calmet.

VER. 8. Fine linen. The symbol of justifications, or the good works and merit of her holy members; the most pleasing attire in which she can present herself to the Lamb. Her robe is glittering and white, because she has been purified as silver in the furnace, and washed white in the waters of tribulation and persecution. Pastorini.—The fine linen, or byssus, here mentioned, is, according to Calmet, a kind of silk produced by a shell-fish, called pinus; though the same learned commentator allows that the Greek authors use this word for fine linen.

VER. 10. And I fell before his feet, to adore him. They of the pretended reformation think they have here a clear proof that no veneration is due to Angels and saints, and that papists in so doing are idolaters. In answer to this: First, they make S. John the apostle guilty of that idolatry which they lay to our charge. For they must suppose and grant that S. John, as to the dispositions of his mind and will, was just ready, or rather falling down, did pay an idolatrous worship to the Angel; and what Christian can believe this of so great an apostle, that after he had been favoured with all those extraordinary visions, he should either be so very ignorant as not to know what was idolatry, or so impious as to become guilty of it, and give divine honour to any creature? And what makes S. John altogether inexcusable, (had it been idolatry) we find him doing the very same a second time, in the last chapter of the Apocalypse; (v. 7 and 8) that is, falling down at the Angel's feet to adore. Secondly, as it would be extravagantly unreasonable to suspect this apostle, this evangelist, this prophet of the new law, to be guilty of what every Christian, every Jew knows to be idolatry; to wit, to give the honour due to God alone to any creature whatsoever; so in reason we cannot but conclude that he was not for giving divine honour to any Angel, knowing them all to be God's creatures. If therefore he was about to pay divine honour, we must either say that he took him who then appeared to him to be our Saviour Christ, God and man, as some expound it; or, which seems more probable, he was only for offering an inferior honour and veneration to the Angel, such as he knew was lawful: and therefore he was for doing it afterwards a second time; though the Angel would not receive it from S. John, to make us the more convinced of the great dignity of this apostle and prophet, who should be raised in heaven to a degree of glory, not inferior to that of the Angels: and thus the Angel tells him, that he is his fellow creature, who with him must adore Almighty God, that by these prophecies they both bear testimony concerning Jesus Christ and his Church, the Angel by revealing them,

6 And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of great thunders, saying: Alleluia: for the Lord our God, the omnipotent, hath reigned.

7 Let us be glad and rejoice: and give glory to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath prepared herself.

8 And to her it is granted, that she should clothe herself with fine linen, glittering and white. For the fine linen are the justifications of saints.

9 And he said to me: Write: *Blessed are they who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb: and he said to me: These words of God are true.

10 And I fell down before his feet to adore him. And he saith to me: See thou do it not: I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren who have the testimony of Jesus. Adore God. For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.

11 And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him, was called Faithful and True, and with justice he judgeth and fighteth.

12 And his eyes were as a flame of fire, and on his

* Mat. xxii. 2. Luke xiv. 16.

and S. John by publishing them, which seems to be the sense of the following words, for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy: or they may be expounded thus, for the testimony that we give concerning Christ and his Church, we both of us receive from the divine spirit of God, who reveals such truths to his prophets. Thirdly, the Protestants are for proving us idolaters from what S. John was about to do, or rather from what he did, expressed in these words, and I fell before his feet to adore him; or, as in the Prot. translation, and I fell at his feet to worship him. Now it is certain and evident that these words neither in the Latin nor in the Greek, express that divine worship and honour which is due, and which is given to God alone, whether we consult the Hebrew or the Sept. of the Old Testament, the very same words are many times used to signify no more than an inferior honour given to creatures. This is a thing well known, and agreed upon by every Protestant as well as Catholic, who has read the Scriptures, or who knows any thing of Latin, Greek, or Hebrew. Fourthly it seems very strange, very unaccountable, that our adversaries will not understand the difference betwixt divine honour due to God alone, and an inferior honour, respect, or veneration given to Angels or saints, to their relics or images, which inferior honour may, in some sense, be called a religious honour, inasmuch as it is paid to persons or things that may be called sacred or holy. Is not honour or veneration certainly different, as the objects or things we pay honour to, and the intention of him that pays this honour, are different, though perhaps the exterior marks of bowing, of kneeling, of prostrating, of kissing, may be the same? We honour the king, and we also honour his courtiers, his officers, and such as are invested with dignities and authority from him: but shall any one think that we pay the same honour to all these persons or things belonging to them? though the eastern people kneel or prostrate themselves before kings or persons in dignities, they neither give nor design to give them divine honour. Why will our adversaries pretend to make us idolaters against our wills, minds, and intentions, when we have always protested that we give divine honour and supreme worship to God alone? that we honour, worship, serve and adore him only as the author of all things? that we never design to pay any thing but an inferior honour to the highest Angels or saints, or to their relics and images. We know, believe, and profess that there is an infinite distance betwixt God the creator, and the highest and most perfect of all created beings; so that the honour we give them is infinitely inferior, as they themselves are, to the honour that with our hearts and minds we pay to God: and must it be said that we give divine honour to creatures, and so become idolaters, when we never design it, when we design quite the contrary? This made Mr. Thorndike, in his book of just weights and measures, tell his Protestant brethren, that the Church of Rome cannot be charged with idolatry for their reverencing images, nor on any other account; and so exhorts them not to pretend to lead the people by the nose, to make them believe suppositions which they cannot prove. See C. ii. and xix. Wi.—Fell before, &c. S. Athanasius and S. Aug. think S. John took the Angel to be Jesus Christ, and as such was desirous of paying him the supreme homage, or arcpia. Calmet.—S. John, in token of gratitude, offers to pay to the Angel such homage as is due to a being of his rank, which the Angel however refuses to accept, giving for reason, that he is a fellow-servant of the apostle, and of the apostle's brethren, who bear testimony to Jesus Christ. Pastorini.—This speech evidently agrees with the character of the Baptist, but not with that of a real Angel.—Testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy. The testimony which you give to Christ, by suffering for his holy name and the profession of his doctrine, is of equal value with the spirit of prophecy which I possess. Past. Calmet.

VER. 11. Behold a white horse. The titles and character given to him that sat on this white horse, shew that hereby was represented Jesus Christ, called also here the word of God, v. 13; and v. 16, and he hath on his garment and on head many diadems, having a name written, which no man knoweth but himself.

13 ^a And he was clothed with a garment sprinkled with blood: and his name is called, THE WORD OF GOD.

14 And the armies which are in heaven followed him on white horses, clothed in fine linen, white and clean

15 And out of his mouth proceedeth a sharp two-edged sword: that with it he may strike the Gentiles. ^b And he shall rule them with a rod of iron: and he treadeth the wine-press of the fury of the wrath of God the Almighty.

16 And he hath on his garment and on his thigh written: ^c King of kings, and Lord of lords.

17 And I saw an Angel, standing in the sun, and he cried with a loud voice, saying to all the birds that were flying through the midst of heaven: Come, and gather yourselves together to the great supper of God:

18 That you may eat the flesh of kings, and the flesh of tribunes, and the flesh of mighty men, and the flesh of horses, and of them that sit on them, and the flesh of all freemen, and bondmen, and of little and great his thigh written: King of kings, and Lord of lords, &c. Wi.—And he that sat, &c. The heavens open and S. John sees Jesus Christ, the Son of God, descending, seated on a white horse. He is known by the peculiar appellations of faithful and true. Faithful, in protecting his servants; and true, by always keeping strictly true whatever he promises. Past.

^a Isai. lxiii. 1. ^b Psal. ii. 5.

VER. 12. Flame, &c. Which shews his indignation.—Diadems; the mark of power. So Ptolemy, the king of Egypt, after he had entered Antiochia, took two crowns, to signify that he was king of two countries, Syria and Egypt. Past.—Which (name) no man knoweth but himself. Some interpreters think S. John alludes to an ancient custom which still obtains among the Orientals, of having a secret name, which they discover to no one. Calmet.—Pastorini understands this to be the name of the word of God, as mentioned in the subsequent verse; which is so comprehensive in its meaning, that human reason cannot fathom it, and no man knoweth but himself.

VER. 18. Sprinkled with blood, &c. Which betokens the carnage made among his enemies.

VER. 14. The armies, &c. The celestial armies of saints follow the Son of God, as their captain and commander; they are all like him, mounted on white horses, and clothed in fine linen, white and clean, a symbol of their merit and glory. Past.

VER. 15. Sharp two-edged sword. The power which Christ exercises over the impious. Menochius.—Wine-press, &c. This painting corresponds to the triumph of Jesus Christ. Calmet.—Some of the attributes here mentioned are also ascribed to Christ, by the prophet Isaiah. C. lxiii. 2, 3. "Why then is thy apparel red, and thy garments like theirs that tread in the wine press? I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the Gentiles there is not a man with me: I have trampled on them in my indignation, and have trodden them down in my wrath, and their blood is sprinkled upon my garments, and I have stained all my apparel." Past.

VER. 17. An Angel . . . in the sun, . . . with a loud voice invites all the birds of the air to a most plentiful entertainment which is preparing for them, where they may fill themselves with human flesh of all kinds; from that of kings to that of bondmen; (v. 18) and with the flesh of horses and that of them that sit on them: an expressive picture of the immense slaughter that is going to be made. It would seem that this bloody scene will terminate in the evening of the day, as the invitation is given to a supper. Past.

VER. 19. We have just now seen the heavenly captain on horseback, at the head of his holy troop, marching to battle; and now we see who are the enemies he comes to encounter. Here is the beast, or antichrist, with prodigious armies gathered from all parts of the earth, and headed by their kings and princes. Past.

VER. 20. The beast, &c. Antichrist is taken alive. Menochius.

^a V. 10. Ceoidi ante pedes ejus ut adorarent illum: ἵππων ἐμπροσθεν τῶν ποδῶν αὐτοῦ προσκυνῆσαι αὐτῷ, προσκυνεῖν, as Mr. Legh shews out of other authors: promiscue de Dei et hominum cultu apud LXX. usurpatur, cui respondet apud Latinos, adorare, quod est qua ad aliquem orare, says Erasmus, capite vel corpore inclinato. We have very many examples in the holy Scripture, where both προσκυνεῖν and λατρεύειν signify not only divine honour, but also the honour paid to men. When God gave the ten commandments, (Ex. xx.) he forbid his people to adore strange gods; non adorabis ea, neque coles; οὐ προσκυνήσεις αὐτοῖς, οὐδὲ μὴ λατρεύσεις αὐτοῖς. Yet the same words are used in a great many places, where it

19 And I saw the beast, and the kings of the earth and their armies gathered together, to make war with him that sat upon the horse, and with his army.

20 And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet: who wrought signs before him, wherewith he seduced them, who received the mark of the beast, and who adored his image. These two were cast alive into the pool of fire burning with brimstone.

21 And the rest were slain by the sword of him that sitteth upon the horse, which proceedeth out of his mouth; and all the birds were filled with their flesh.

CHAP. XX.

Satan is bound for a thousand years: the souls of the martyrs reign with Christ in the first resurrection. The last attempts of Satan against the Church: the last judgment.

AND I saw an Angel coming down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit, and a great chain in his hand.

2 And he laid hold on the dragon, the old serpent, which is the devil and Satan, and bound him for a thousand years:

3 And he cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut is evident that no divine adoration or worship was designed, as we read of Abraham, (Gen. xxvii. 7.) adoravit populum terræ, προσκυνήσας τῷ λαῷ τῆς γῆς; Gen. xlii. 6. of Joseph's brethren, cum adorassent eum fratres sui, προσκύνουσιν αὐτῷ ἐν πόλει σου. See also 1 K. xx. 41. where David is said to have adored Jonathan, cadens pronus in terram adoravit, ἔπεσεν ἐν τῇ γῇ προσκύνων αὐτῷ ἐπὶ τῇ γῇ. See likewise 3 K. i. 16. where Bethsabee is said to have adored old king David, adoravit regem, προσκύνους τῷ βασιλεῖ. Though in these and many other places be the same expressions as when S. John is here said to have fallen at the angel's feet to adore him, or worship him, yet no one can think that in these places is meant the supreme worship due to God alone: did Bethsabee take her old, decayed, dying husband, David, to be God, or design to pay him divine honour? Nothing then is more frivolous than such arguments drawn from the like words, which have different significations.

^c 1 Tim. v. 15. Supra xvii. 14.

CHAP. XX. VER. 2. And bound him for a thousand years. I shall give the reader an abridgment of what S. Augustin has left us on this chapter, in his 20th Book de Civ. Dei. From the 5th to the 16th chap. (t. vii. p. 578 et seq.) he treats upon these difficulties: What is meant by the first and second resurrection; by the binding and chaining up of the devil; by the thousand years that the saints reign with Christ; by the first and second death; by Gog and Magog, &c. As to the first resurrection, c. vi. he takes notice on the 5th verse, that resurrection* in the Gospels, and in S. Paul, is applied not only to the body but also to the soul; and the second resurrection, which is to come, is that of the bodies: that there is also a death of the soul, which is by sin; and that the second death is that of soul and body by eternal damnation: that both bad and good shall rise again in their bodies. On those words, (v. 6) Blessed is he that hath part in the first resurrection; in these the second death hath no power. Such, saith he, (c. ix.) as have risen from sin, and have remained in that resurrection of the soul, shall never be liable to the second death, which is damnation. Cap. vii. p. 580, he says that some Catholics not understanding rightly the first resurrection, have been led into ridiculous fables,† and this by the interpretation which they put on the thousand years; as if the first resurrection implied a resurrection of the bodies of the martyrs and saints, who should live on the earth with Christ for a thousand years before the general resurrection, in all manner of delights. This was the opinion of those called Millenarians: this, saith he, might seem tolerable in some measure,‡ if taken for spiritual delights, (for we ourselves were once in these sentiments) but if for carnal pleasures, it can only be believed by carnal men. He then expounds what may be understood by the binding and chaining of the devil for a thousand years; (Cap. vii. & viii. p. 581) that the thousand years, meaning a long time, may signify all the time from Christ's first coming to his second at the end of the world, and to the last short persecution under antichrist. The devil is said to be bound, that is, his power much lessened and restrained, in comparison of the great and extensive power he had over all nations before Christ's incarnation; not but that he still tempts many,§ and raiseth persecutions, which always turn to their greater good; and that towards the end of the world he shall be let loose, as it were, for a short time, and permitted with his infernal spirits to exercise his malice against mankind, to try the patience of the elect, and to shew the power of God's grace, by which his faithful servants shall triumph over the devil. N. B. What S. Augustine adds divers times in these chapters: "Let no one," says he, "imagine"¶ that even during that short time, there shall be no Church of Christ on the earth: God forbid: even when the devil shall be let loose, he him up, and set a seal upon him. that he should no more seduce the nations, till the thousand years be finished: and after that, he must be loosed a little time.

4 And I saw seats, and they sat upon them: and judgment was given unto them: and the souls of them that were beheaded for the testimony of Jesus, and for the word of God, and who had not adored the beast, nor his image, nor received his mark on their foreheads, or in their hands, and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years.

5 The rest of the dead lived not till the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6 Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: in these the second death hath no power: but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years.

7 And when the thousand years shall be finished, Satan shall be loosed out of his prison, and shall go forth and seduce the nations which are over the four quarters of the earth, *Gog, and Magog, and shall gather them together to battle, whose number is as the sand of the sea.

8 And they ascended upon the breadth of the earth,

* Ezech. xxxviii. 14.

shall not be able to seduce the Church." Cap. ix, p. 586, he expounds those words, (v. 4-5) I saw the souls of them that were beheaded . . . and they lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years . . . This is the first resurrection: i. e. the first resurrection is while the devil is chained up for the space of a thousand years. He takes notice that the present state of the Church is many times called the kingdom of God, and that the Church of Christ reigns now with Christ, both in the living saints and in those who are dead, in the souls of the martyrs, and of others, who having lived and died piously, now reign with Christ, not yet in their bodies, but their souls reign with him. On those words of the 4th verse: who had not adored the beast, nor his image, nor received his mark, he only gives this exposition, as agreeable to the Christian faith, that by the beast may be understood the multitude of wicked sinners in general, and the image of the beast†† those who are of the Church in outward appearance and profession only, and not by their works. When it is said (v. 5) that the rest of the dead lived not till the thousand years were finished: they lived not, says he, as to their souls, when they should have lived; and therefore not being happy in heaven, when their bodies shall rise, it shall not be to life, but to judgment and damnation, which is the second death. Cap. xi, he expounds the 7th and 8th verses, where it is said that Satan shall be loosed . . . and seduce the nations which are over the four quarters of the earth, Gog and Magog,†† and shall gather them together to battle. This, says S. Aug. will be the last persecution at the approach of the day of judgment, which the whole city, or the whole Church of Christ dispersed through the universe, will suffer from the whole city of the devil. Neither need Gog and Magog be taken for a particular§§ barbarous people, but such as are dispersed in a manner in every nation, and who shall then break out by the instigation of Satan into an open hatred and persecution against the faithful servants of God; as it is said, (v. 8.) they ascended upon the breadth of the earth, and surrounded the camp of the saints, where we cannot literally understand one camp, one city, or one place, but the Church every where dispersed. Cap. xii, he expounds the 9th verse, where he takes fire to signify, metaphorically, the firm resistance and constancy of the good, and the fire|| of their zeal, which devoured as it were the wicked; or we may understand with others, the temporal fire of God's judgments in this world against the wicked, but not the last eternal fire; because the eternal fire comes not down from heaven, but the wicked are cast into it below. Cap. xiii, he teacheth that the last persecution ¶ of antichrist, here mentioned, shall last but three years and six months; i. e. a little while. Cap. xiv and xv, he expounds the 10th and following verse, of the devil being cast into the lake of fire, after the last persecution of antichrist. By the beast he understands, as before, the city or multitude of all the wicked; and by the false prophet, either antichrist or the outward appearance of faith in them that have none. Then follows the last judgment, where it is said that the books are opened, and also that another book was opened. By the first book, may be understood men and their consciences; and by the other book, the book of life, that of eternal predestination. Thus far S. Augustine, where we see that he delivers the common Catholic doctrine, that by the thousand years, so often mentioned in this chapter, he understands all that time in which the souls of the martyrs, and of all other saints, reign happy with Christ in heaven, till after the general resurrection they receive a full and complete happiness, both as to soul and body. A false exposition of these thousand years gave occasion to the mistake, the error, and heresy of those called the Millenarians, which Mede and Dr. W. have followed. Papias, who lived soon after, or perhaps with S. John, was the chief promoter of this mistake; a man, says Eusebius, of "little judgment and capacity,"††† who misconstrued the discourses when he heard. He was followed by divers writers in the second, third, and fourth century, who did not hold with Cernthus (1654) and surrounded the camp of the saints, and the beloved city.

9 And fire came down from God out of heaven, and devoured them: and the devil, who seduced them, was cast into the pool of fire and brimstone, where both the beast

10 And the false prophet shall be tormented day and night for ever and ever.

11 And I saw a great white throne, and him that sat upon it, from whose countenance the earth and heaven fled away, and there was no place found for them.

12 And I saw the dead, great and small, standing in presence of the throne, and the books were opened: and another book was opened, which is the book of life: and the dead were judged by those things which were written in the books, according to their works.

13 And the sea gave up the dead that were in it: and death and hell gave up their dead that were in them: and they were judged every one according to their works.

14 And hell and death were cast into the pool of fire. This is the second death.

15 And whosoever was not found written in the book of life, was cast into the pool of fire.

and his followers, that the saints should rise before the general resurrection, and reign with Christ on the earth for a thousand years in all manner of sensual pleasures; but in spiritual delights, in the city of Jerusalem, built anew after that glorious manner described in the next chapter. Now though this opinion had several considerable abettors, of which I find these seven: Papias, S. Justin, S. Irenæus, Tertullian, Nepos, (a bishop, in Egypt; in Euseb. l. vii. c. xxiv.) Victorinus Putabionensis, Lactantius, and Severus Sulpitius; yet were there always other learned Catholic writers who rejected it as a fable. Of this number was Caus, a priest, at Rome, about the end of the second age; Origen, in his prologue to the Canticles; S. Denys, of Alexandrin, who in the third age wrote to confute Nepos; (see Euseb. l. vii. hist. c. xxiv. who treats it as a fable) S. Basil,††† who calls it an old wife's tale, and a Jewish fiction, Epist. 293; S. Greg. Naz. Orat. 52; S. Epiphani. S. Jerom, Philastrius, Theodoret, who place this opinion among the heresies and heretical fables: so that this could never be looked upon as the constant doctrine and tradition of the Church. The bishop of Meaux takes notice, that Mede either mistook or falsified the text of S. Justin,§§§ who, in his Dialogue with Tryphon, holds that opinion of a thousand years reign; but adds, "I also told you, that many who are Christians of pious and sound sentiments do not own this to be true." Thus we read in the Greek, as well as in the Latin translation; but Mr. Mede quite changes the sense, by adding a negative in this manner: but many who are not of this pure and holy doctrine, &c. We may observe that S. Justin says in the next page, that they who own not the resurrection of the body, and say that souls go to heaven without any future resurrection, are not to be accounted Christians, but are to be looked upon as Sadducees and unbelievers. Which is very true. And he adds, that he, and others who think right with him, know that there will be a resurrection of the flesh, and a rebuilding of Jerusalem for a thousand years, which S. Justin himself judged grounded on the prophets, Isaia, Ezechiel, &c. So that not to make S. Justin contradict himself, he mentions three opinions: the first is the heresy of those who absolutely denied the future resurrection of the dead: these were not Christians, but unbelievers, Sadducees, &c. The second was of those who held that the martyrs and saints should rise, and reign for a thousand years in their bodies on the earth; this, which was his own opinion, he calls the right and true doctrine. But thirdly, he does not condemn those pious Christians who, as he had said before, disown this thousand years reign, for this would be to contradict himself. Wi.—In the above chapter, what man can reflect without trembling, that the devil has the rage of a dragon, the cunning of an old serpent, the malice of a calumniator, and that he is a most implacable enemy? On the other hand, what man is there that does not feel consolation in the reflection, that Jesus Christ has vanquished this savage fiend, and bound him in fetters, by limiting the exercise of his rage and malice? Some understand this chaining of the dragon of the reign of Constantine, and particularly after the defeat of Licinius; (see sup. c. xii. 18.) and the thousand years of the intermediate period between Constantine and antichrist, when the devil will again be let loose, but for a short time, only three years and a half. V.—Bound him, &c. The power of Satan has been very much abridged by the passion of Christ; for a thousand years; that is for the whole time of the new testament, but especially from the time of the destruction of Babylon or pagan Rome, till the new efforts of Gog and Magog against the Church, towards the end of the world. During which time the souls of the martyrs and saints live and reign with Christ in heaven, in the first resurrection, which is that of the soul to the life of glory, as the second resurrection will be that of the body, at the day of general judgment. Cl.

* V 2. S. Aug. c. vi. Prima animarum est.

CHAP. XXI.

The new Jerusalem described.

AND ^a I saw a new heaven and a new earth. For the first heaven and the first earth was passed away, and the sea is now no more.

2 And I, John, saw the holy city, the new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband.

3 And I heard a great voice from the throne, saying: Behold the tabernacle of God with men, and he will dwell with them. And they shall be his people: and God himself with them shall be their God:

4 ^b And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and death shall be no more, nor mourning, nor crying, nor sorrow, shall be any more; for the former things are passed away.

5 And he who sat on the throne, said: *Behold, I make all things new. And he said to me: Write, for these words are most faithful and true.

6 And he said to me: It is done: I am alpha and omega, the beginning and the end. To him that thirsteth I will give of the fountain of the water of life, gratis.

7 He that shall overcome, shall possess these things, and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

8 But for the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and fornicators, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars, their portion shall be in the pool burning with fire and brimstone: which is the second death.

9 And there came one of the seven Angels, who had the vials full of the seven last plagues, and spoke with me, saying: Come, and I will shew thee the bride, the wife of the Lamb.

10 And he took me up in spirit to a great and high

* Isai. lxxv. 17. and lxxvi. 22. 2 Pet. iii. 13.—^b Isai. xxv. 8. Supra vii. 17.

† Ibid. C. vii, p. 580. In quasdam ridiculas fabulas.

‡ Ibid. P. 581. Uteunque tolerabilis.

§ Ibid. Mille annos pro annis omnibus hujus sæculi posuit, &c. C. viii, p. 583. A primo adventu Christi usque ad finem sæculi.

|| Ibid. C. viii, p. 583. Alligatio diaboli est non permitti exercere totam tentationem, &c.

¶ Ibid. Ne quis existimet eo ipso parvo tempore, quo solvetur diabolus, in hac terra ecclesiam non futuram, &c. Tales erunt, cum quibus ei belligandum est, ut vinei tanto ejus impetu, insidiisque non possint, &c.

 Ibid. C. ix, p. 586. Quamvis ergo cum suis corporibus nondum, jam tamen eorum animæ regnant cum eo.

†† Ibid. P. 587. Quæ sit ista bestia . . . non abhorret a fide recta, ut ipsa nuptia civitas intelligatur, et populus infidelium contrarius populo fideli, et civitati Dei. Imago vero simulatio ejus mihi videtur . . . fallaci imagine Christiani.

‡‡ Ibid. C. xi, p. 589. De Gog et Magog: hæc erit novissima persecutio, novissimo imminente judicio, quam sancta ecclesia toto terrarum orbe patietur, universa scilicet civitas Christi ab universa diaboli civitate.

§§ Ibid. Gentes istæ, quas appellat Gog et Magog, non sic sunt accipiendæ, tanquam sint aliqui in aliqua parte terrarum barbari constituti . . . non utique ad unum locum venisse, vel venturi esse significati sunt, &c.

|| Ibid. C. xii, p. 589. Bene intelligitur ignis de cælo de ipsa firmitate sanctorum, qua non cessuri sunt sævientiis, quoniam non poterunt attrahere in partes antichristi sanctos Christi.

¶¶ Ibid. C. xiii. Hæc persecutio novissima, quæ futura est ab antichristo (p. 590) tribus annis et sex mensibus erit . . . tempus exiguum, &c.

 Ibid. C. xv, p. 593. Prædestinationem significat eorum, quibus æterna dabitur vita, &c.

††† Ibid. Eusebius (l. 3, c. xxxix) says of Papias, ἐπεκερθὲν τὸν νοῦν; and that he followed μυθώγηρα.

‡‡‡ Ibid. S. Basil (tom. 3, p. 284) says, γραιψάδεις μέθους.

§§§ Ibid. S. Justin, (Ed. Joachimi Perionii, p. 62.) multis autem eorum, etiam qui integræ, pieque sententiæ Christianæ sunt, hæc incognita (seu non agnita) esse tibi exposui. In the Greek of Rob. Stephen, out of a MS. in the king's library, an. 1551, p. 88, πολλοὺς δ' αὖ καὶ τῶν τῆς καθαρῆς καὶ ἐλευθέρου θύρας βασιλέων γυναικας, τοὺς καὶ γυναικας, ἐλευθέρους αὐτοῦ.

mountain, and he shewed me the holy city, Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, 11 Having the glory of God: and the light thereof like to a precious stone, as a jasper stone, as crystal.

12 And it had a wall great and high, having twelve gates: and in the gates twelve Angels, and names written thereon, which are the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel:

13 On the east, three gates: and on the north, three gates: and on the south, three gates: and on the west, three gates.

14 And the wall of the city had twelve foundations, and in them the twelve names of the twelve apostles of the Lamb.

15 And he that spoke with me had a measure, a golden reed, to measure the city and the gates thereof, and the wall.

16 And the city is situate four-square, and the length thereof is as great as the breadth: and he measured the city with the golden reed for twelve thousand furlongs: and the length, and the height, and the breadth of it are equal.

17 And he measured the wall thereof a hundred forty-four cubits, the measure of a man, which is of an Angel.

18 And the building of the wall thereof was of jasper stone: but the city itself pure gold, like to clear glass.

19 And the foundations of the wall of the city were adorned with all manner of precious stones. The first foundation, jasper: the second, sapphire: the third, a chalcedony: the fourth, an emerald.

20 The fifth, sardonyx: the sixth, sardius: the seventh, chrysolite: the eighth, beryl: the ninth, a topaz:

† Isai. xlii. 19. 2 Cor. iii. 17.

CHAP. XXI. From the seventh verse of the foregoing chapter, begins as it were the third part of the Apocalypse containing the coming of antichrist, the great day of judgment, the punishment of the wicked, and the eternal happiness of God's elect in heaven, or in the celestial Jerusalem, which S. John describes in this chapter as if it were like a large city, beautified and enriched with gold and all manner of precious stones, &c. Wi.

VER. 1. New, by their form and qualities, but not by their substance.—The first heaven and first earth was passed away: being changed, not as to their substance, but in their qualities. Ch.

VER. 2. Coming down from God out of heaven. By the city we must understand its citizens, the Angels and saints. Wi.—Justice, innocence, the good works of the saints, are the ornaments of the inhabitants of this new Jerusalem, the Church triumphant. If the world of the old Adam has appeared so beautiful, so magnificent, good God, what will be the riches of that which is made for Jesus Christ, the second Adam, and for his members! O Jesus! Father of the world to come, render us worthy of this new and everlasting world, and give us a disgust, a mortal hatred, for that which perishes, and which is the cause of our perdition.

VER. 3. Behold the tabernacle of God with men, inasmuch as God's elect shall there dwell with him for ever and ever. Wi.

VER. 6. It is done. The state of Christ's Church on earth, and in this world, is now finished; and the time is come to reward the good, and to punish the wicked in the lake burning with fire and brimstone, in hell, with the devils for all eternity. Wi.—This living water is God himself, of which the saints shall be inebriated at the source; i. e. in God himself. Envious moment, when all the designs of God upon Jesus Christ and upon his Church will be accomplished: but how little thought of now! And how can we hope to be inebriated at this source of God above, if we do not aspire after it whilst we are in this dreary desert here below! He who begins and finishes gratuitously here below the work of our faith, crowns it still more liberally in heaven.

VER. 9. I will shew thee the bride, the wife of the Lamb: all the Church triumphant in heaven. Wi.

VER. 16. *The city is situate four-square, and by what follows, so as to be a perfect square, though every thing that is quadrangular is not always a square or perfect square. Wi.

the tenth, a chrysoprasus: the eleventh, a jacinth: the twelfth, an amethyst.

21 And the twelve gates are twelve pearls, one to each, and every several gate was of one several pearl: and the street of the city was pure gold, as it were transparent glass.

22 And I saw no temple in it. For the Lord God Almighty is the temple thereof, and the Lamb.

23 *And the city needeth not sun, nor moon to shine in it: for the glory of God hath enlightened it, and the Lamb is the lamp thereof.

24 And nations shall walk in the light of it: and the kings of the earth shall bring their glory and honour into it.

25 ^bAnd the gates thereof shall not be shut by day: for there shall be no night there.

26 And they shall bring the glory and honour of the nations into it.

27 There shall not enter it any thing defiled, or any one that worketh abomination, or a lie, but they who are written in the book of life of the Lamb.

CHAP. XXII

The water and the tree of life. The conclusion.

AND he shewed me a river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding from the throne of God, and of the Lamb.

2 In the midst of the street thereof, and on both sides of the river, was the tree of life, bearing twelve fruits, yielding its fruit every month, and the leaves of the tree for the healing of the nations.

3 And there shall be no curse any more: but the throne of God, and of the Lamb, shall be in it, and his servants shall serve him.

4 And they shall see his face: and his name shall be on their foreheads.

5 *And night shall be no more: and they shall not need the light of a lamp, nor the light of the sun; for the Lord God shall enlighten them, and they shall reign for ever and ever.

* Isai. lxix. 19.—^b Isai. lx. 11.—^c Isai. lx. 20.—^d Isai. xli. 4. and xlv. 6.

VER. 17. The measure of a man which is of an Angel.† This seems, without doubt, the sense of it. Wi.

VER. 22. No temple in it. No need of a temple for divine worship, where God is in such a perfect manner present to all the blessed, where nothing can distract or divert their souls from endless adorations, praises, &c. Wi.

VER. 23. Needeth not sun nor moon, where there is no vicissitude or succession of day and night, the divine brightness always shining to them. Wi.

VER. 24. The kings of the earth shall bring their glory; the elect, of all states and conditions, shall now be exalted like kings, or rather infinitely above the glory that we can imagine of any kings in this world. Wi.

VER. 27. There shall not enter it any thing defiled. This is what we ought always to remember and have in our minds. Wi.

* V. 16. In quadro, τετραγώνος, quadrangularis.

† V. 17. Mensura hominis, quæ est Angeli; μέτρον ἀνθρώπου, ὃ ἔστιν ἄγγελος.

CHAP. XXII. VER. 1. A river of water of life, or of living water. It is spoken with allusion to the rivers of paradise and to the tree of life. Wi.

VER. 2. For the healing of the nations, or Gentiles, to signify the call of all Gentiles or nations to this heavenly happiness. Wi.

VER. 4. They shall see his face. Thus in a few words is expressed the happiness of the blessed in heaven; they shall see God, from which vision proceed love, joy, and everlasting praises of the divine Majesty. Wi.

VER. 6. These words are most faithful. Here begins the conclusion and close of all these revelations.—The Lord God of the spirits of the prophets sent his Angel to shew, &c. and in the 16th verse it is said: I, Jesus, have sent my Angel to testify: from whence we may understand that Jesus, as to his person, is the same Lord God with the Father, though as man he is the root of the offspring of David, of the race of David, as the Messiah was to be. Wi.

VER. 7. Behold I come quickly. Man's life is short, and at his death he must give an account to God. All time is short, if compared with eternity. S. John (1656)

6 And he said to me: These words are most faithful and true. And the Lord God of the spirits of the prophets sent his Angel, to shew his servants the things which must be done shortly.

7 And behold, I come quickly. Blessed is he that keepeth the words of the prophecy of this book.

8 And I, John, who have heard and seen these things. And after I had heard and seen, I fell down to adore before the feet of the Angel, who shewed me these things:

9 And he said to me: See thou do it not: for I am thy fellow-servant, and of thy brethren, the prophets, and of them who keep the words of the prophecy of this book: Adore God.

10 And he saith to me: Seal not the words of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand.

11 He that hurteth, let him hurt still: and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is just, let him be justified still: and he that is holy, let him be sanctified still.

12 Behold, I come quickly: and my reward is with me, to render to every man according to his works.

13 *I am alpha and omega, the first and the last, the beginning and the end.

14 Blessed are they that wash their robes in the blood of the Lamb: that they may have a right to the tree of life, and may enter in by the gates into the city.

15 Without are dogs, and sorcerers, and the unchaste, and murderers, and those that serve idols, and every one that loveth and maketh a lie.

16 I, Jesus, have sent my Angel, to testify to you these things in the churches. I am the root and stock of David, the bright and morning star.

17 And the Spirit and the bride say: Come. And he that heareth, let him say: Come. And he that thirsteth, let him come: *and he that will, let him take the water of life, gratis.

and xlviii. 12. Supra i. 8. and 17. and xxi. 6.—Isai. lv. 1.

(v. 8) was again for casting himself at the feet of the Angel, though here it is not expressed whether it were to adore God, or whether it were by an inferior veneration to the Angel, often expressed by adoration. Wi.

VER. 8-9. This is the second time the saint wishes to adore the Angel, but not with the supreme worship of latria, as he knew the object of his worship was only an Angel, and of course a mere creature; but the Angel, through respect for S. John, still refuses the proffered honour, (see C. xix. 10.) and to shew the holy society that was hereafter to exist between Angels and men, who were to compose but one and the same family. V.

VER. 10. Seal not the words; as not designed to be kept sealed or secret, but to be delivered to the faithful for their instruction, that they may be prepared to suffer persecutions; that their faith, hope, and charity, may be enlivened and increased by a firm expectation of their happiness in the next world, after short sufferings in this. Wi.

VER. 11. He that hurteth, (by living in sins against God, himself, and his neighbours) let him hurt still: i. e. he shall be permitted. and he that is just, let him be justified still, and increase in virtues by God's assistance. Wi.—It is not an exhortation, or license to go on in sin, but an intimation that how far soever the wicked may proceed, their progress shall quickly end, and then they must expect to meet with proportionable punishments. Ch.

VER. 13. I am alpha and omega. See C. i. 8. Wi.

VER. 14. That they may have a right or power to eat of the tree of life. A right grounded on the promises of God and his graces. Wi.

VER. 15. Without are dogs; meaning unbelievers, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie, i. e. all the wicked, who have not walked in the ways of truth. Wi.

VER. 17. And the Spirit and the bride say: Come. That is, the Spirit of God, who moves us to love and praise him; and the bride, i. e. the Church, the spouse of Christ, which earnestly desires to be happy in the enjoyment of God; and every one that heareth these divine promises, let him with all the affections of his soul, with his whole heart, say: Come. He that thirsteth after justice, the 18 For I testify to every one that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book : If any man shall add to these things, God shall add upon him the plagues written in this book.

19 And if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his Author and Fountain of all justice, let him come and be filled gratis by the bounty and liberality of our merciful God. Wi.

VER. 18-19. I, John, testify and bear witness of all the truths contained in this revelation : If any man shall add to these things, he becomes guilty of sin, and makes himself liable to the punishments and plagues that are written in this book. Wi.

VER. 20-21. He that giveth testimony of these things, i. e. God, and Jesus Christ by an Angel, saith, surely (or even so, or truly these are certain truths) I come quickly, to reward the good and punish the evil. To which words S. John himself replieth with a zealous prayer and earnest desire, saying, Amen, let it be so.

208

part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city and from these things which are written in this book

20 He that giveth testimony of these things, saith Surely, I come quickly : Amen. Come, Lord Jesus.

21 The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen.

—Come Lord Jesus : come, and remain always in my soul by thy grace, and make me partaker of thy glory for ever and ever. Amen. Wi.—CONCLUSION. The Church in sighs and groans, and by the mouth of her children, solicits the coming of Jesus Christ, her divine Spouse. The fruit to be drawn from the perusal of this sacred book, is ardently to desire the kingdom of God, to sigh after the day of eternity, to feel the weight of the yoke of the present life, and the disgrace of our exile, and to live here below as strangers. Enkinde in me, O Lord, this desire ; enable my poor soul to join with the beloved disciple in this prayer : Come, Lord Jesus, that she may go and lose herself in Thee, who art her Centre, her God, her All.

(1657)

AN HISTORICAL AND CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX

TO

THE NEW TESTAMENT.

A.D.

CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX, &c.

- 1 Our Lord Jesus Christ is born of the blessed Virgin Mary, at Bethlehem, and laid in a manger. Luke ii. 7.
An Angel of God informs the shepherds of the birth of Christ. They go to Bethlehem, and adore him, &c. Luke ii. 10. 20. Mat. ii.
After eight days he is circumcised, and called Jesus. Luke ii. 21.
He is presented to the Lord, in the temple. Holy Simeon blesseth Mary and Joseph, and prophesies concerning Christ. Luke ii. 28, 34.
The wise men come from the East to adore the new born Saviour, at which Herod being troubled, sent them to search diligently for the child. They are directed by a star. But they receiving an answer in a vision, that they should not return back to Herod, pursue another way to their own country. Mat. ii. &c.
An Angel of the Lord, appearing to Joseph, orders him to arise, and take the Child and his Mother, and flee into Egypt. Mat. ii. 13.
Herod, perceiving that he was deluded by the wise men, orders his people to destroy all the male children in Bethlehem, and the confines thereof, under two years of age. Mat. ii. 16.
Herod dies, and is succeeded by his son Archelaus, his other dominions being divided among the rest of his sons. Jos. Ant. i. 17. c. x.
Joseph, with Jesus and his Mother, returns into the land of Israel; but hearing that Archelaus reigned in Judea, he retired into Galilee, and dwelt in Nazareth. Mat. ii. 21, 22, 23.
- 12 Joseph and Mary go up to Jerusalem, on the solemn day of the Pasch. Returning from thence, Jesus remains behind. They come back in search of him; when he is found in the temple, disputing with the doctors, who are astonished at the wisdom of his interrogatories and answers. Luke ii. 41, 46, 47.
- 26 At the close of this year, Pontius Pilate is sent procurator in place of Valerius. Jos. Ant. i. 18. c. iii.
- 28 About this time S. John the Baptist preaches and baptizes in the desert, thereby preparing the way of the Lord. God giveth him a sign, whereby he may know Christ: "He upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining upon him, he it is that baptizeth with the Holy Ghost." John i. 33. Luke iii. 3.
- 30 Jesus, entering his thirtieth year, comes to the river Jordan, where he is baptized by John. A most illustrious manifestation is made of the blessed Trinity, by the descent of the Holy Spirit in the form of a dove, and the voice of the Father saying: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." John seeing this, bears record that Jesus is the Son of God. The latter returns from the Jordan, and is led into the wilderness; where he fasts forty days and nights, and is tempted by the devil. He returns into Galilee. Peter, Andrew, James, and John are called, and become his disciples. Mat. iii. and iv. Mark i.
- At a marriage feast, in Cana, Jesus turneth water into wine. John ii.
Jesus coming to Jerusalem at the time of the Passover, scourgeth out of the temple the buyers and sellers. The Jews require a sign from him: Christ bids them destroy that temple, (meaning his body) and in three days he will raise it up. John ii.
Herod casts John the Baptist into prison, for reprehending his incest with his brother's wife, and other evil deeds. Mat. xiv. Mark vi. 17, &c.
Christ discovers himself to the woman of Samaria; goes through Galilee, teaching and working many miracles. John iv. &c.
- 31 Matthew called to be an apostle. Luke v. 27.—Jesus performs wonderful miracles on the sabbath day.
He goes into a mountain, and there passes the whole night in prayer; after which he chooses his twelve disciples, Simon, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Matthew, Thomas, James, Simon, Jude, and Judas Iscariot, the traitor: (Luke vi. 12. &c.) to these he principally directs his admirable sermons, on the mount. Mat. v. vi. and vii.
Jesus raiseth to life the daughter of Jairus. Mat. ix. Mark v. Luke viii.
Also the son of the widow of Naim. Luke vii.
He calms the sea by his word. Mat. viii. Mark iv. Luke viii.
He heals the man thirty-eight years ill of a palsy. John v.
He sends his twelve apostles to preach, with the power of doing miracles. Mat. x. Mark vi. Luke ix.
He teacheth them to pray. Mat. vi. Luke xi.
He makes choice of seventy-two disciples. Luke x.
- 32 John the Baptist, at the instigation of Herodias's daughter, is beheaded, and his head served up in a charger. Mat. xiv. 10.
Christ reproveth the scribes and others. He cures the daughter of the woman of Chanaan, and performs several other miracles. He likewise feeds five thousand persons with seven loaves and a few fishes. Mat. xv

A.D.

SACRED HISTORY.

- 32 Jesus being solicited by the Pharisees and Sadducees to shew them a sign from heaven, refuses them, displaying his divine wisdom in parables.—Our Saviour, knowing the vacillation of the apostles' opinions respecting him, asketh them whom do they think he is? When being answered by Peter, "Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God," he is rewarded with being made head of the one, universal, holy Church, in these emphatic words: "And I say to thee: That thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven. And whatsoever thou shalt bind upon earth, it shall be bound also in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose upon earth, it shall be loosed also in heaven." Mat. xvi. 18, 19.
Jesus relates his parable of the sower and cockle, and that of the mustard seed. He likewise reproves the blindness of the Pharisees, and confutes their attributing his miracles to Satan. He also excuseth his disciples for plucking ears of corn on the sabbath day. Mat. xii. and xiii.
Christ walketh on the sea. John vi. 19.
He promiseth to his disciples to give them his body to be truly meat &c. Many of them leave him, looking upon this doctrine as hard and harsh. John vi.
He teacheth humility, to beware of scandal, and to flee the occasions of sin; to denounce to the Church incorrigible sinners, and to look upon such as refuse to hear the Church as heathens. He promiseth his disciples the power of binding and loosing, and that he will be in the midst of their assemblies to the end of the world: no forgiveness for them that will not forgive. Mat. xviii.
Our Lord is transfigured on the mountain. Moses and Elias are seen to converse with him, and a voice from heaven heard saying: "This is my beloved Son," &c. He cures the lunatic child, foretells his passion, &c. Arriving at Capharnaum, he payeth the tribute by the miracle of the piece of money in the fish's mouth. Mat. xvii. 24, &c.
A village of Samaria refusing Jesus and his disciples entertainment, the latter desiring fire from heaven to consume it, Christ severely reprimands them. Luke ix. 54.
- 33 Our Saviour instructs and sends forth his seventy-two disciples: he teacheth them to pray; raiseth Lazarus to life, who had been buried four days. Caiaphas, the high priest, prophesies concerning Christ's death. The parable of the good Samaritan. Luke x. John xi.
Mary, Lazarus's sister, anoints our Saviour's feet with costly spikenard, wiping them with her hair. John xii. 3.
Zacheus, a publican, entertains Christ, and is converted. Our Saviour rides in triumph to Jerusalem, the multitude spreading their garments before him, and crying out, Hosanna! Coming near to the city, he weeps over it, and foretells its destruction; casts out the buyers and sellers, and heals the blind and lame. He curses the barren fig-tree, and next morning it is dried up. Luke xix. Mat. xxi. 17.
In the beginning of the week that he died upon the cross, he went daily to the temple; and in the evenings retired to Bethania, to pray in the garden of Gethsemani. Luke xxii. &c.
On Wednesday, Judas made a bargain with the chief priests to deliver him up to them for a sum of money. Mat. xxvi. 15.
On Thursday he sent his disciples, in the afternoon, to bring the paschal lamb offered in the temple; which after sunset, he eat with his twelve apostles. Mat. xxvi.
He washed their feet. John xiii.
After supper he instituted the blessed sacrament and sacrifice of the holy Eucharist. Mat. xxvi.
He gives his apostles those excellent instructions set down by S. John. C. xiv. to xvii.
Christ's prayer in the garden three times repeated.
He is there seized, being betrayed by Judas.
He is led away to Annas, and then to Caiaphas.
He is condemned as guilty of blasphemy and death, for owning himself the Son of God. He is spit upon, buffeted, &c.
On Friday morning they deliver him up to the Roman governor, Pontius Pilate, who sees and declares him innocent; yet fearing not to be thought a friend to Caesar, condemns him to the death of the cross.
He dies on the cross, and is buried. For the history of his passion, see Mat. xxvi. xxvii. xxviii. Mark xiv. xv. xvi. Luke xxii. xxiii. xxiv. John xviii. xix. xx.
The miracles at his death. Ibid.
He riseth from the dead the third day. Ibid.

CHRONOLOGICAL INDEX, ETC.

A.D.	SACRED HISTORY.
33	His different apparitions that very day, and others afterwards. Ibid. He gives his apostles power to forgive sins. John xx. 23. He gives to S. Peter the charge over his whole Church. John xxi. He promisetb to be with his Church to the end of the world. Mat. xxviii. 20. After forty days he ascends in their sight into heaven. Acts i. S. Matthias is chosen an apostle in the place of Judas, the traitor. Acts i. On the day of Pentecost, the Holy Ghost descends upon the apostles in the form of cloven tongues, enabling them to speak various languages. Acts ii. 3. A wonderful change wrought in the apostles by the coming of the Holy Ghost: their undaunted courage. At S. Peter's preaching, the same day of the descent of the Holy Ghost, numbers are added to the faith. The extraordinary piety of the first converts. Acts ii. The apostles preach the resurrection of Christ, the necessity of believing in him, and of repenting and doing penance. S. Peter heals a lame man: at which the rulers being offended, they cast him and John into prison. Upon questioning them, they avouch the cure to have been performed in the name of Jesus. After this, they are forbid to speak any more in that name: but they answer that it is fit they should obey God rather than man. They are released from prison by an Angel of the Lord; but being apprehended again, and brought before the council, by Gamaliel's advice they are again set at liberty. Acts v. The new Christians have all things in common, every one's necessities being supplied out of the general stock. Acts ii. 44. Ananias and Saphira, for reserving some part of the money of a field sold and for lying to the Holy Ghost, fall dead at S. Peter's feet. Acts v. The election of the seven deacons. Acts vi. Stephen, one of the seven deacons, having confounded some disputants, they falsely accuse him of blasphemy before the council; where, reprehending them for murdering Christ, they cast him out of the city, and stone him to death. Acts vi. and vii. A great persecution at Jerusalem follows this proto-martyr's death. Acts viii. 3. Philip, another deacon, converts many at Samaria; baptizes the eunuch. He likewise baptizes Simon the magician. The apostles at Jerusalem, upon Samaria believing, send Peter and John. They confer the Holy Ghost. Simon the magician offers money for this power, but is sharply reproved by Peter. Acts viii. 15.
34	Saul, a violent persecutor of the Christians, going to Damascus to apprehend all the faithful, and bring them bound to Jerusalem, is miraculously converted by a vision from heaven. Acts ix. He presently preacheth the faith. After preaching for some time, the Jews consulted together to kill him; He comes to Jerusalem, where seeing Peter and James, he abides with them fifteen days. He disputes with the Jews who spoke the Greek tongue. Acts ix. and xxii. S. Peter cures Eneas at Lydda, and raises to life Tabitha, at Joppa. Acts ix. The very shadow of his body cures all diseases. Acts v. 15.
39	He receives Cornelius, the centurion, and other Gentiles with him, into the Church. Acts x. S. Peter is thought to have gone about this time to Antioch, in Syria, and to have founded the episcopal see.
41	He preached in Pontus, Galatia, &c. S. Barnabas and S. Paul preach at Antioch, where the believers were first called Christians. Acts xiii. 26.
42	Herod Agrippa puts to death S. James, the brother of S. John, and imprisons S. Peter, who was miraculously delivered. Acts xii. About this time S. Matthew and S. Mark wrote their gospels. See pref. Herod, not giving honour to God, is struck by an Angel of the Lord, and eaten up by worms. Acts xii. 23.

(1660)

A.D.	SACRED HISTORY.
43	SS. Paul and Barnabas sent to preach in Pamphylia, Pisidia, and Lycaonia. Afterwards in Pontus, Thracia, &c. Acts xiii. xiv.
48	About this time S. Peter wrote his first epistle. See pref.
49	A dispute takes place between S. Paul and some zealous converts that had been Jews, about the obligation of making even the Gentiles observe the Jewish laws. Acts xv. SS. Paul and Barnabas are sent to Jerusalem, to have this question decided by the apostles, &c. A council of the apostles and bishops decides the question: S. Peter speaking first, and S. James joining with him. The letter of the council to their brethren, the converted Gentiles. Acts xv. S. Paul and S. Barnabas separate. Acts xv. The former goes with Silas into Asia. S. Timothy, and also S. Luke, become his companions. He goes to Philippi, in Macedonia, to Thessalonica to Berea, to Athens. Finds there an altar dedicated to the unknown God. Acts xvii. 23. He is scourged at Philippi.—S. Paul and Silas are thrown into prison. At midnight the prison doors fly open, and their bands are loosed. The gaoler is converted. The magistrates pray them to depart. Acts xvi. S. Paul writes his epistle to the Thessalonians, and his second soon after.
52	He founds the Church of Corinth; and departs, after remaining there eighteen months. Acts xviii. 11.
54	He likewise establishes the Church at Ephesus. The tumult of the silversmiths. Acts xix.
55	After a short visit to the brethren at Jerusalem, he goes to Antioch; and from thence again into Galatia and Phrygia, and stays three years at Ephesus and thereabouts. Acts xix.
56	He writes to the Galatians. See pref. About this time, he likewise writes his first and second epistle to the Corinthians. See pref.
58	He also writes his epistle to the Romans. See pref. He goes up to Jerusalem. Acts xxi. 15. The Jews seize him in the temple. Being beaten, and in danger of being murdered by them, he is rescued by Lysias, the tribune, and his soldiers. Acts xxi. Lysias sends him to Felix, the governor of Judea, then at Cæsarea, where he was kept two years a prisoner. His discourse before king Agrippa, Felix, &c. Acts xxiv. xxv. Having appealed to the tribunal of Cæsar, he is sent to Rome with other prisoners. Acts xxvii.
61	A description of his voyage and shipwreck on the coast of Malta. Every one in the ship are saved, being two hundred and seventy-six persons. Acts xxvii. 44. S. James about this time wrote his Catholic Epistle. S. Paul arrives at Rome. He is kept in custody for two years, with a soldier to guard him. Acts xxviii. He converts Onesimus, and sends him with his letter to Philemon. He writes to the Philippians and Colossians. S. James, bishop of Jerusalem, there martyred. S. Paul being set at liberty, writes to the Hebrews. He goes again into Asia; makes S. Timothy bishop of Asia, and went into Macedonia, from whence he wrote his first epistle to Timothy. S. Peter about this time wrote his second epistle. About this time S. Peter and S. Paul came to Rome. See Tillemont, &c. Not long after they were both put in prison, and suffered martyrdom. S. John about this time came to live in Asia, and governed all those Churches for many years. He was put into a cauldron of boiling oil at Rome, under Domitian, and banished to the island of Patmos, where he had those wonderful visions of his Apocalypse. He returns to Ephesus, under the emperor Nerva. He writes his gospel. He dies at Ephesus, under Trajan, about A.D. 100.
96

TABLES

OF

SCRIPTURE WEIGHTS, MEASURES, COINS, ETC.

MEASURES OF LENGTH.*
	Feet.	Inch.	Dec.
A Cubit.....	1	9	888
A Span.....	0	10	944
A Hand-Breadth.....	0	8	648
A Finger.....	0	0	912
A Fathom.....	7	8	552
Ezekiel's Reed.....	10	11	328
The Measuring Line.....	145	11	040
	Miles.	Paces.	Feet.
Sabbath Day's Journey.....	2000	729	3
The Eastern Mile.....	4000	1	408
Stadium or Furlong.....	400	0	145
Day's Journey.....	96000	33	172

MEASURES OF LIQUIDS.†
	Gal.	Pinta.	Sq. In.
The Homer or Cor.....	75	5	7,6
The Bath.....	7	4	15,2
The Hin.....	1	2	2,5
The Log.....	0	0	24,3
The Firkin (Metretres).....	0	7	4,9

MEASURES OF THINGS DRY.
	Bush.	Pecks.	Pinta.
The Homer.....	8	0 ²	1,6
The Letech.....	4	0	0,8
The Ephah.....	0	3	3,4
The Seah.....	0	1	1,1
The Omer.....	0	0	5,1
The Cab.....	0	0	2,9

A TABLE OF WEIGHTS AND MONEY.
	Weights.	Lb.	Oz.	Gr.
A Shekel.....		0	0	9
The Maneh.....	60 Shek.	2	3	6
A Talent.....	3000	113	10	1
	Money.‡	L.	s.	d.
A Shekel of Silver.....		0	2	3,3
The Bekah.....	half Shek.	0	1	1,7
The Zuzah.....	4th	0	0	6,8
The Gerah.....	20th	0	0	1,4
Maneh or Mina.....	50	5	13	10
A Talent of Silver.....	3000	341	10	4,3
A Shekel of Gold.....		1	16	5,1
A Talent of Gold.....		5464	5	8,6
Golden Daric or Drachm.....		1	1	10,3
		a.	d.	f.
Piece of Silver, (Drachm).....		0	7	3
Trib. Mon. (Didrachm).....	2 Drac.	1	3	2
Piece of Silver (Stater).....	4	2	7	0
Pound (Mina).....	100	64	7	0
Penny (Denarius).....		0	7	3
Farthing (Assarium).....	20th Den.	0	0	1,6
Farthing (Quadrans).....	40th	0	0	0,8
Mite.....	80th	0	0	0

* Note. 5 Feet = 1 Pace. 1056 = 1 Mile.

† Note. 29 Solid inches, equal a Pint nearly.

‡ Note. Silver is here reckoned at 6s. Gold at 4l. per oz.

TABLE OF SCRIPTURE TIME.

MONTHS OF THE YEAR.
1 Nisan, or Abib.....	March, April.
2 Ijar, or Zif.....	April, May.
3 Sivan.....	May, June.
4 Thammuz.....	June, July.
5 Ab.....	July, August.
6 Elul.....	August, September.
7 Tisri, or Ethanim.....	September, October.
8 Marchesvan, or Bul.....	October, November.
9 Chisleu.....	November, December.
10 Tebeth.....	December, January.
11 Shebat.....	January, February.
12 Adar.....	February, March.
13 Veadar, intercalary.

DAYS OF THE WEEK.
1st Day of the Week.....	Sunday.
2d Day.....	Monday.
3d Day.....	Tuesday.
4th Day.....	Wednesday.
5th Day.....	Thursday.
6th Day.....	Friday.
7th Day, or Sabbath.....	Saturday.

HOURS OF THE DAY.
The Day, reckoning from Sun-rise, and the Night from Sun-set, were each divided into 12 equal parts, called The 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, &c. Hours.

WATCHES.
The 1st watch, from Sun-set to the 3d hour of the night.
The 2d or middle watch, from the 3d hour to the sixth.
The 3d watch, or cock-crowing, from the 6th to the 9th.
The 4th, or morning watch, from the 9th hour to Sun-rise.
NOTE.—Nisan had 30 days; Ijar, 29; Sivan, 30; Thammuz, 29; Ab, 30; Elul, 29; Tisri, 30; Marchesvan, 29; Chisleu, 30; Tebeth, 29; Shebat, 30; Adar, 29; Veadar, the end of March.

A USEFUL

TABLE OF REFERENCES,

DIRECTING THE READER TO THE

CATHOLIC TRUTHS HERE DEDUCED OUT OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES

A.

ABSOLUTION of a priest—the excellency of his power above that of princes and Angels—what it is to loose and bind. Mat. xvi. 18, 19.
ABSTINENCE—See Fasting.
ADORATION of God, latria—of creatures, dulia. Mat. iv. 10. Acts x. 25. and xiv. 14. Heb. xi. 21.
 — of the Angel by S. John explained. Apoc. xix. 10.
 — in spirit and truth, what it is. John iv. 23.—Reverence to holy persons, even to kissing their feet. Luke vii. 44. and viii. 47.
ALMS redeem sins. Luke iii. 11. and xi. 41.
 — procure us patrons in heaven. Luke xvi. 9.
 — persons giving them, are made happy. 2 Cor. ix. 10.
 — capable of doing great good to the departed faithful. Acts ix. 36.
 — and hospitality to the priesthood and to holy men. Mat. x. 42. 2 Cor. viii. 14. and ix. 6. Philipp. iv. 18. 2 Tim. i. 19. Heb. xiii. 2.
 — the more able we are to give them, the more they are required of us. Mark xii.
 — when a person is bound to give them. 1 John iii. 17. See Works.
ALTARS, Heb. xiii. 10.
 — sanctified by the sacrifice of Christ's body. Mat. xxiii. 19.
 — dedicated or consecrated with the relics of saints. Apoc. vi. 9.
ANGELS always present with the Father. Mat. xviii. 10.
 — of Churches. Apoc. i. 20.
 — they help us. Heb. ii.
 — offer up prayers for us. Apoc. viii. 3.
 — S. Paul speaketh of them. Coloss. ii. 18.
 — peace from God and them. Apoc. i. 4.
 — nine orders of them. Ephes. i. 21.
 — S. Michael, patron and guardian of the Church. Apoc. xii. 7.
 — fighting with the devil. Ibid.
ANOINTING. See Extreme Unction.
ANTICHRIST, where he shall sit. 2 Thess. ii. 4.
 — called the man of sin, the son of perdition. 2 Thess. ii. 3.
 — shall come near the end of the world. Mat. xxiv. 29.
 — his reign shall be short. Mat. xxiv. 22. Apoc. xx. 7.
 — shall bring great tribulation and distress with him. Mat. xxiv.
 — shall abolish the mass. 2 Thess. ii. 4.
 — shall suffer no worship but that of himself. Ibid.
 — framing letters of him uncertain. Apoc. xiii. 18.
 — heretics the forerunners of him. 2 Thess. ii. 4, &c.
 — his persecution of the Church. Apoc. xii. 6, 15, and xiii. 8, and xx. 8.
 — cannot be the pope. 2 Thess. ii. 3. Apoc. xiv. 6, 7.
 — what sort of men shall follow him. 2 Thess. ii. 9, 10.
APOSTLES, their power. Mat. xiii. 11. and xviii. 18.
 — they receive their name. Luke vi. 13.
 — their number mystical. Mark iii. 14.
 — some higher in power than others. 2 Cor. xii. 12.
 — leave their wives. Luke iv. 38.
 — vowed poverty and perfection. Mat. xix. 29.
 — their learning, wisdom, and constancy. Acts ii. &c.
 — honour and dread of them among men. Acts v. 35, 38, 39.
 — gifts and offices given them. The pope's office called his apostleship. Ephes. iv. 8.
 — traditions. See Traditions.
 — precepts. 1 Cor. vii.
 — style of salutation. Rom. i. 7.
 — heretics usurp to seem like them. Ibid.
 — their salutation gives grace. Rom. xvi.
 — the glory of such as convert souls. 2 Cor. i. 14.

B.

BABYLON. See Apoc. xvii. 5, 18.
BAPTISM ordained by Christ. Mat. xxviii. 19.
 — justifies us. Rom. vi. 2.
 — necessary to salvation. John iii. 5.
 — of infants, necessary. Rom. v. 12.
 — effects of it and confirmation differ. Acts viii. 17.
 — exorcisms and ceremonies of it. Mark vii. 33. Acts viii. 17. 1 Pet. viii. 21.
 — the character of. 2 Cor. i. 21.
 (1662)

BAPTISM, John's inferior to Christ. Mat. iii. 11. Mark i. 8. John iii. 31.

— names given in it. Luke i. 63.

— the water at Jerusalem, a figure of it. John v. 2

BEATITUDES, eight. Mat. v.

BISHOPS, their spiritual power. Mat. xviii. 18.

— their power to punish heretics. Mat. xviii. 17.

— must be obeyed. Titus iii.

— blessing. Mat. x. 12. and xix. 13. Heb. vii. 7.

— they may deal in temporals. Luke xii. 14. 2 Tim. ii. 4.

— superior to priests; distinct in office. Acts viii. 17. Philip i. 1. Titus i. 5

— they only can consecrate priests, &c. Titus i. 5.

— many worthy ones that cannot preach. 1 Tim. vi. 17.

— special virtues required in them. Apoc. xxii.

— of what quality they must be. 1 Tim. iii.

BLESSING of creatures effectual and operative. Mark viii. 7. Mat. xxvi. 26. 1 Tim. iv. 4, 5.

— of bishops and priests. Mat. xix. 15. Heb. vii. 7.

— of parents. Ibid.

— with the sign of the cross. Luke xxiv. 50. 1 Tim. iv. 5.

— of little children by Christ. Mark x.

— of his apostles. John xx.

C.

CATHOLIC parents are a great blessing. 2 Tim. i. 5.

— faith is taken from countries for sin. Apoc. ii. 5.

CEREMONIES used in the Church by Christ's example. John ix. 6.

— external elements in the sacraments. Gal. iv. 3.

CHARITY, the greatest virtue, and more principal in our justification than faith 1 Cor. xiii. 1.

— how faith worketh by it. Gal. v. 6.

CHASTE or SINGLE LIFE angelical. Mat. xxii. 30.

— it is not impossible. Mat. xix. 11.

CHASTITY of virgins, widows, and of married people, differ in dignity. Mat. xiii. 8

CHRIST, our only mediator. 1 Tim. ii.

— maketh intercession for us. Heb. vii. 26.

— following of him differently. Luke v. 27, 28.

— Messiah, anointed, all one. John i. 41.

— his wonderful grace in preaching. Luke iv. 15.

CHRISTIANS, when received their name. Acts xi. 26.

CHURCH, the spouse of Christ, with other titles. 1 Tim. iii. 15.

— Christ's exceeding love and benefits towards her. Ephes. v. 25.

— the wonderful union between them. 1 Cor. xii. 12.

— she was built out of Christ's side. John xix. 34 — gathered out of all nations. Mat. xxviii. 19.

— upheld by his continual protection. Mat. xiv. 31. and xxviii. 20. Apoc. ii. 1

— Catholic, why called so. Luke xxiv. 47. Rom. i. 5. Coloss. i. 6. 1 Tim. iii. 15. 1 John ii. 2.

— the principal creature. Ephes. v. 29.

— the pillar and ground of faith. 1 Tim. iii. 15.

— it is more blindness not to see it, than not to believe in Christ. 1 Cor. x. 17

— heretics more blind than Jews. 2 Cor. iii. 14.

— unity of it. Christ prayeth for that unity. John xvii. 11.

— Christ's coat without seam, a figure of it. John xix. 23.

— can never fail nor err. Mat. v. 23. and xxiv. 2. Luke xviii. 8. John vii. 68 and xiv. 17. and xvii. 17. Ephes. v. 24, 29. 2 Thess. ii. 3. 1 Tim. iii. 15

Apoc. xii. 6.

— always visible. Mat. v. 15. Acts ii. 47. and xi. 24. 1 Tim. iii. 15. Apoc. i. 20

— Elias's words not contrary. Rom. xi.

— her state in antichrist's time. Apoc. xii. 6.

— small in the beginning, and growing great afterwards. Mat. xiii. 32. and xxiv. 14. Mark iv. 27, 31, 32. Luke v. 7, 8, 10, and xxiv. 46. Acts ii. 47.

— her laws, customs, and governors, must be obeyed. Mat. xv. 9. and xviii.

17. Acts xv. 20. 1 Cor. xi. 16. 2 Cor. i. 24. and vi. 19. 1 Thesa. iv. 8. 2 Thesa

iii. 14. Heb. xiii. 17.

— she only hath the true sense of the Scripture. 2 Cor. ii. 6.

— she judges all, and is judged by none. 1 Cor. ii.

— she judges between canonical and not canonical Scripture. Gal. ii. 1.

— she consists of good and bad. Mat. iii. 12. and xiii. 30. and xxi. 10 and

xxv. 32.

— the camp of saints. Apoc. xx. 5.

A TABLE OF REFERENCES, ETC.

Church, proved by succession. John iv. 20. Ephes. iv. 13.
 — Christ left many things to be taught by her. Ephes. iv.
 — the custom of the, a good answer against heretical disputants. 1 Cor. xi. 16.
 — no salvation out of the. John xiii. 48. Ephes. v. 23. 1 John i. 3.
 — Christ head of the. Ephes. ii. 22.
 — conduct of women towards her. 1 Cor. xiv. 34.
 — not to respect her, is to contemn Christ. John xv. 20.
 — militant resembles the triumphant in heaven. Apoc. xix. 4.
 — triumphant called the New Jerusalem. Its state and glory. Apoc. xxi. 10, 11.
 — not to be profaned. Mark xi. 15. John ii. 15.
 — God will be honoured in her rather than elsewhere. Acts vii. 48.

Clergy, their name. 1 Pet. v. 3.
 — different from the laity. Ibid.
 — manner and dignity of calling. Acts xiii. 4.
 — degrees of superiority among themselves, and over others. Luke xxii. 24. 2 Cor. xii. 11. 1 Pet. v. 3.
 — their good life very edifying. Mat. v. 17.
 — their exemption and privileges. Mat. xvii. 26. Rom. xiii. 6.
 — they are not to exercise holy functions for filthy lucre. 1 Pet. v. 2.

Commandments. Luke i.
 — possible to be kept. Mat. xii. 30. Luke x. 28. 1 John iii. 22, and v. 3.
 — profitable and necessary to salvation. Mat. v. 20. Luke x. 28. James ii. 10.
 — man is justified by keeping them. Luke i. 6.
 — of men, what they are; and that they make nothing against the apostles' and Church's traditions. Mark vii. 6. See Traditions.
 — of men are heretical laws and doctrines. Mat. xv. 9. Mark vii. 7.

Communion, going to it against our conscience. 1 Cor. viii. 10.
 — receiving it unworthily. 1 Cor. xi. 30.

Community of life and goods among the primitive Christians. Acts ii. 44.
 — not a commandment but a counsel. Ibid.

Conscience after baptism is of itself no sin without consent. Rom. vi. 12, and vii. 7. James i. 15. 1 John iii. 4.
 — taketh not away free-will. Rom. vii. 15.

Confession in particular. Mat. iii. 6. Mark i. 5. John xx. 23.
 — secret, or auricular, to a priest. Luke xvii. 14. James v. 16.
 — of Christ and his religion highly rewarded. Mat. x. 32.

Confirmation, it is a sacrament. Acts viii. 17.
 — conscience, acting against it. Mat. xxvii. 3. Mark viii. 86, and xv. 15.
 — horror of, at shedding innocent blood. Mat. xxvii. 3.

Contemplation, secret. Mark i. 35.

Continence, priests must be in that state. Titus i. 8.
 — of married people, for prayer-sake. 1 Cor. vii. 5.
 — perpetual, of man and wife. 1 Cor. vii. 29.

Councils, first one held. Acts xv. 6.
 — of what persons they consist. Ibid.
 — they represent the whole Church. Luke x. 16.
 — St. Peter and his successors presidents of them. Acts xv. 7.
 — of no force without their confirmation. Ibid.
 — controversies in religion to be decided by them. Acts xv. 2.
 — assisted by the Holy Ghost. Acts i. 2, and xv. 28. John xv. 26, and xvi. 13, and xx. 22.
 — of Christ. Mat. xviii. 20.
 — all good Christians rest upon their determination. Acts xv. 2, 31.
 — their decrees are diligently to be put in execution. Acts xv. 20.
 — heretics impiously abuse them. Acts xv. 5.

Cross, called the sign of the Son of man. Mat. xxiv. 30.
 — blessing with the sign of the. Luke xxiv. 50. Apoc. vii. 3.
 — why we make this sign on our forehead. Apoc. vii. 3.
 — called holy. John xix. 17.

D.

Days, distinction of them. Rom. xiv. 5.
 — some more holy than others. See Fasts.

Deacons, the election of the seven. Acts vi. 3.
 — their office. Ibid. See Orders.

Devotion, uttered by external signs. Luke xix. 4. Philipp. ii. 10. Rom. xiv. 11. James v. 14.
 — God is served and adored in spirit, notwithstanding external devotion. John iv. 23. Rom. i. 8.
 — of holy women. Mark xvi. 1. Mat. xxviii. 1. Luke xxiv. 1. John xx. 1.
 — of Zachæus towards our Saviour. Luke xix. 4.

Doctors of the Church. Mat. xxiii. 10. John v. 34.
 — we must regard their doctrine. Heb. xii. 7.
 — their crown in heaven. Philipp. iv. 1. 1 Pet. v. 4.

Dulia. See Adoration.

E.

Ecclesiastical censures. 1 Cor. iv. 3, 4, 21.
 — power and jurisdiction. Mat. xvi. 19. John ii. 15. 1 Cor. x. 6.—See Excommunication, Bishops, Clergy.

Elias, yet alive, and shall be the forerunner of Christ's second coming. Mat. xi. 14. Mal. iv. 5. Mark ix. 4. Apoc. xi. 3.—Henoch also yet liveth, and shall preach in antichrist's time with Elias. Apoc. xi. 3.

Eucharist, (blessed) a sacrament. Mat. xxvi. 26.—See Blessed Sacrament.

Excommunication, a spiritual punishment. 1 Cor. v. 5. 2 Cor. ii. 6.
 — most terrible. Mat. xviii. 17. Acts v. 3. 1 Cor. v. 5. Gal. i. 8.
 — excommunicated persons to be avoided. 1 Cor. v. 11. 2 Thess. iii. 14.

Extreme unction, a sacrament. Gal. iv. 3. James v. 14.

F.

FAITH. See Justification, Works.
 — only does not justify. Mat. vii. 21, and ix. 28, and xxii. 40, and xxiii. 15, and xxv. 42. Mark xvi. 16. Luke i. 6, and vii. 50, and x. 28. Rom. i. 17, 18, and ii. 26, and vi. 3. Gal. iii. 11. 1 Tim. i. 5. Heb. v. 9, and xi. 38. 1 Pet. iv. 8. 1 John ii. 4, and iii. 22.
 — may be had and lost again. Luke viii. 13. Rom. xi. 20. Heb. iii. 15.
 — the apostle's analogy, or rescript rule of faith. Rom. xii. 6. Heb. vi. 1.
 — to hold fast that first received of the apostles and fathers. Mat. xiii. 25. Rom. vi. 17, and xvi. 17. 2 Cor. xii. 12. Gal. i. 8. 1 Tim. vi. 20. 2 Tim. i. 5, 14.
 — reward in suffering for the. Mark viii. 35.
 — neutrals, or indifferent men, not professing it. Mat. xii. 30. Apoc. iii. 16.
 — one man's obtains for another. Luke v. 20.

Fasts, or fasting, an act of religion. Luke ii. 37.
 — from certain kinds of meat. Mat. xv. 10, 18. Mark vii. 15. Acts xiii. 8. Rom. xiv. 2. 1 Tim. iv. 3, and v. 23.
 — of Lent, and its origin. Mat. iv. 2. Mark i. 13.
 — public ones. Mat. vi. 16.
 — of St. John Baptist and his disciples. Mat. ix. 14.

Fear, many kinds of it. 1 John iv. 18.
 — just men have. Ibid.
 — of hell profitable. Luke xii. 5.

Feasts, or festival days. Mat. ii. 16. John x. 22. Acts ii. 1, and xxii. 16. Gal. iv. 10. Heb. xiii. 7. 2 Pet. i. 15. Apoc. i. 10.

Free-will. Mat. xvi. 27, and xx. 16, and xxv. 34. Luke ii. 14. John i. 12, and vi. 44. Acts xxvii. 31. Rom. ii. 4, and vii. 15, 19, and ix. 14, 21, and x. 20. 1 Cor. xv. 10. 2 Cor. iii. 5, and vi. 1. Philipp. ii. 13. 1 Tim. ii. 4. 2 Tim. ii. 21. James iv. 8. Apoc. ii. 21. John viii. 36.
 — of man worketh with God's grace. 1 Cor. xv. 10. 2 Cor. iii. 5.
 — predestination, reprobation, &c. taketh it not away. Acts xxvii. 31.
 — the blindness and reprobation of the Jews was owing to it. So was their crucifying Christ, and the treachery and treason of Judas. Acts ii. 23.

Final impenitence. Mat. xii. 31, and xxvii. 5. See Impenitence.

G.

GOD not the author of sin. Mat. vi. 13, and xiii. 15. Mark iv. 12. Luke ii. 24. Acts ii. 23. Rom. i. 26, and ii. 4, and iii. 5, and ix. 17, and xi. 8. Apoc. ii. 21. See Reprobation and Free-will.
 — how the death of Christ was by his determination. Acts ii. 23.
 — nothing impossible to him. Mat. xix. 26.
 — he is to be served before temporal princes. Mark xii. 17.
 — we must make a right use of his gifts. Mat. xxv. 29.

Gospel, the true liberty of it. 2 Cor. iii. 17. Gal. iv. 31, and v. 13. 1 Tim. i. 9. James i. 25. 1 Pet. ii. 16.
 — he suffereth for it, that suffereth for any article of faith. Mark viii. 35.
 — the law and the prophets join with it. Mark ix. 4.

Grace forces not free-will. 2 Cor. vi. 1. See Free-will.
 — the value of merits proceeds from it. See Merit.

H.

HALLOWING, or sanctifying of creatures. 1 Tim. iv. 4, 5.

HEAVEN, the reward of good works. Mat. xxv. 34.
 — shut three years and six months. Luke iv. 25.
 — opened at the baptism of Christ. Mat. iii. 16.
 — difference of reward and merits there. Mat. xiii. 8, and xx. 1, 28. 1 Cor. iii. 8. Philipp. iv. 1. See Merit, Reward, &c.

HELL, the reward of evil works. Mat. xxv. 41.
 — the fear of it profitable. See Fear.
 — understood sometimes for limbus patrum. Luke xxvi. 22. Acts ii. 27.
 — Christ in soul descended into it. Acts ii. 27. 1 Pet. iii. 19.

HENOCH. See Elias.

HERETICS, they should be avoided. Titus iii. 10. 2 John i. 10.
 — marks to know them by. Mat. vii. 16. Acts xx. 29. 1 Tim. i. 7. 2 Tim. iii. 6, 9. 1 John iv. 6.
 — going out of the Church; their punishment. Luke xvii. 1, 2. Acts xv. 24. 1 Tim. iv. 1. 1 John i. 3, and ii. 19.
 — admonition to them, and sect makers. James iii. 1. Mat. xxiii. 10.
 — Nicolaites a pattern of them. Apoc. ii. 6.
 — their dissensions. Mark iii. 24. John iii. 26. Philipp. iii. 15.
 — preaching against and contrary to the faith received. Gal. i. 8. 1 Tim. i. 8.
 — their hypocrisy and sweet words. Mat. xxiv. 4. Luke vi. 26. 2 Cor. xi. 3, 2 Tim. iii. 6. Rom. xvi. 18.
 — their vanity and vain glory in preaching. Luke vi. 26.
 — their painted eloquence. 1 Tim. vi. 4.
 — teaching new doctrine. 1 Tim. i. 4. 2 John i. 7, 10.
 — their novelties to be avoided. 1 Tim. vi. 20.
 — their ignorance and shallow knowledge of the Scriptures. Luke vi. 2. John v. 39. Mark xii. 24. 2 Pet. ii. 12. Jude i. 10.
 — boasting of the spirit. 1 John iv. 1.
 — they corrupt the Scriptures. 2 Cor. ii. 17, and iv. 2.
 — their mockery of the doctors of religion. Acts xvii. 32.
 — their want of faith. John xiv. 10.
 — their inconstancy in faith. 2 Tim. iii. 13.
 — their voluptuousness. Rom. xvi. 18. Jude i. 4, 12.
 — secret conventicles of them. Mat. xxiv. 26. Mark iv. 11. Jude i. 10.
 — their clergy. 1 Tim. iii. 6.
 — how heresies benefit the Church. 1 Cor. xi. 19. 1 John ii. 19.
 — their doctrines, fables, &c. 1 Tim. i. 4.
 — may be forced to the Catholic faith. Luke xiv. 23.
 — heresy is denying Christ. Mat. x. 32. Mark viii. 38. Luke ix. 26, and xii. 8.

A TABLE OF REFERENCES, ETC.

HERETICS, when and on what account you are to converse with them. 2 John i.
 10. Rom. xvi. 17.
 — their books to be burnt. Acts xix. 19.
 — are already judged. John iii. 18.
 — who are easily seduced by them. Apoc. ix. 4.
 — women great promoters of heresy. 1 Tim. ii. 12. 1 Cor. xiv. 34.
 — Simon Magus the father of them all. Acts viii. 18.
 — Abaddon, their king. Apoc. ix. 11.
 — compared to Cain, Balaam, and Core. Jude i. 11. Apoc. ii. 14.
 — compared to the devil. John viii. 44.
 — forerunners of antichrist. Mark xiii. 5. 2 Thess. ii. 3, 8, 9, 10. Apoc. xx. 8.
 1 John ii. 18.
 — are ravenous wolves. Mat. vii. 15. Acts xx. 29.
 — are thieves, not entering by the door. John x. 1.
 — prophesied of, and described in very lively colours, by S. Paul, S. Peter, S. Jude, and S. John. Acts xx. 29. 1 Tim. i. 3. and iv. 1. 2 Tim. iii. and iv. 3.
 2 Pet. iii. 16. Jude i. 18. Apoc. ix.
 — the causes of men falling into heresy. 1 Tim. i. 19. and vi. 10.
HERMITS, why so called. Mat. iii. 2.
 — commended by the example of Elias, S. John Baptist, and Christ himself.
 Mat. iv. 1. and xi. 7. and xiv. 13. Luke i. 80. and xxi. 37.
HOLY places. 2 Pet. i. 18.
 — days. See Feasts.
 — things not to be profaned. See Sacrilege, Pilgrimage, Church.
HOSANNA. Mat. xxi. 9.
HOSPITALITY towards the afflicted for religion. Mat. x. 41, 42. Gal. iv. 14.
 — towards your pastors and teachers; not doing so, is a heinous crime.
 Luke ix. 5. See Alms.
HUMILITY, innocence, and simplicity, commended to us in the state and person of a child. Mat. xviii. 4.

I.

JESUS, his name. Mat. i. 16, 23, 24. John i. 41.
 — his name to be adored and revered. Philipp. ii. 10, 11. Rom. xiv. 11.
 — in his name miracles are worked. Mark ix. 38. Acts iv. 10.
IDSOLS, in all the Bible signify the false gods of the pagans.
 — they are not to be revered or adored. 1 John v. 21. See Images.
 — those of the New Testament are heresies. 1 Cor. x. 21.
IMAGES. Acts xvii. 29. 1 John v. 21.
 — in Solomon's temple were commanded by God. Heb. ix. 5.
 — one set up by the woman miraculously cured by our Saviour of an issue of blood, in honour of the event. Mat. ix. 20.
 — of the blessed Trinity. Acts xvii. 29.
 — one erected to Julian the apostate, with orders to put all to death who did not adore it. Apoc. xiii. 12.
IMPENITENCE. See Final Impenitence.
IMPOSITION OF HANDS, (taken from the use of the old law, Deut. xxxiv. and other places) used in blessing. Mat. xiii. 19. Mark x. 13, 16. Luke xviii. 15.
 — its effect in healing diseases, &c. Mat. xx. 34. Mark v. 41. and vi. 13. and xiii. 25. and xvi. 18. Luke iv. 39, 40. and xiii. 13. Acts ix. 12. and xxviii. 8.
 — its effect in confirmation. John vii. 39. Acts ii. 4. and xix. 6.
 — its effect likewise in giving holy orders. Acts vi. 6. and xiii. 2, 3. 1 Tim.
 iv. 14. and vi. 22. 2 Tim. i. 6.
 — its effect also in extreme unction. Mark vi. 13. James v. 14.
INDULGENCES. See Pardons.
JUSTIFICATION, or to be justified, what it means. Rom. ii. 13. Mat. vii. 21.
 James i. 22.
 — by works. Mat. vi. 1, 2. Luke i. 6. Rom. ii. 13. James ii. 13, 22, 25, 26. 1
 John iii. 7, 22. Apoc. xix. 8.
 — not by faith only. See Faith.
 — what works justify not. Rom. iv. 1, 2, 5. and xi. 6. Gal. ii. 16. Heb. xi. 6, 38.
 — attributed to hope, charity, &c. Rom. viii. 24. Heb. xi. 23.
 — charity the principal virtue in it. Gal. v. 6. 1 Tim. i. 5.
 — why often attributed to faith. Rom. v. 2. Heb. xi. 5.

L.

LADY, our blessed. Mark iii. 33.
 — her perpetual virginity. Mat. i. 23, 24.
 — she vowed virginity. Luke i. 34.
 — her life, &c. Acts i. 14.
 — her blessedness. Luke xi. 28.
 — her excellency, titles, and prerogatives. Luke i. 28, 42, 43. and xi. 28.
 — she is our Advocate. Acts i. 14.
 — and Christ save us. 1 John ii. 1.
 — holy Simeon prophesied of her sorrows. Luke ii. 35.
 — she was always partaker in Christ's sorrows. Ibid.
 — full of deep contemplation. Luke ii. 19.
LAYMEN are not to judge of Scriptures, their pastors, or religious questions. Acts xvii. 11.
 — must not receive the sacrament at their own hand, but from their clergy and pastors. Mat. xiv. 19. See Priests, Clergy.
LIMBUS PATRUM, or Abraham's bosom. Luke xvi. 22. Acts ii. 27. Apoc. v. 5.
 — the souls of the saints, patriarchs, &c. were detained there till Christ's ascension. Luke xvi. 22.
 — Christ descended there at his death to deliver them. See Apostles' Creed, Heaven, Hell.

M.

MARY. See Our Blessed Lady.
MARRIAGE, a sacrament. Mat. xix. 6. Luke xvi. 18. John ii. 2. Ephea. v. 32.
 — honoured by Christ's presence. John ii. 2.

(1864)

MARRIAGE is indissoluble while the parties are living. Mat. v. 33. and xix. 9.
 Mark x. 11. Luke xvi. 18. 1 Cor. vii. 11.
 — of priests and votaries unlawful. See Priests, Vow.
 — Catholics esteem marriage more than heretics. See Chastity, Continence.
MARTYRS, true and false ones. Mat. v. 10. 1 Cor. xiii. 3.
 — their reward and glory. Apoc. ii. 9.
 — how they cry for revenge. Apoc. vi. 10.
 — their cheerful and constant countenance before persecutors. Acts vi. 15.
 — their comfort at the very time of death. Acts vii. 55.
MASS, comparison betwixt the Christian host and the sacrifices of the Jews. 1
 Cor. x. 21.
 — or liturgy of the apostles. Acts xiii. 2.
 — it is agreeable to Christ's institution. 1 Cor. xi. 23, 24, 25, 26.
 — antichrist and his ministers shall abolish it. Mat. xxiv. 15. Mark xiii. 14.
 Dan. ix. 27. 2 Thess. ii. 4. See Sacrifice.
MEDIATOR. Christ is our only one. 1 Tim. ii. 5. 1 John ii. 1, 2. See Saints.
MERIT of works, whence they arise. Rom. viii. 18. and xi. 6. 1 Cor. iii. 8. 2
 Cor. i. 5.
 — difference of it. Mat. xiii. 8. and xx. 23. Luke xix. 17. 1 Cor. iii. 8. 2
 Cor. ix. 6.
MIRACLES necessary to confirm new doctrine. Mat. x. 1. John xv. 24. Acts iii.
 6. 2 Cor. xii. 12.
 — when heretics may work them. Mark ix. 38. Luke ix. 49.
 — forged or lying ones. Mat. xxiv. 24. 2 Thess. ii. 9.
 — wrought by application of the name of Jesus, the apostles, S. Peter's shadow, &c. Mark vi. 13. and ix. 38. John v. and xiv. 12. Acts iii. 6. and v.
 15. and xii. 7. and xix. 12. and xxviii. 5.
 — by touching Christ and whatever belonged to him. Mark iii. 10. and vii. 38 and viii. 22.
 — in one place, and at one time more than another. Luke iv. 23. John v.
 1 Cor. xii. 28.
 — in the Church by imposition of hands. Mark xvi. 18.

N.

NAME of Christians, when first received. Acts xi. 26.
NEOPHYTES. The term explained. 1 Tim. iii. 6.
NOVELTIES of heretics in their words and phrases. 1 Tim. vi. 20. See Heretics.
NUMBERS, mystical. Mark iii. 14. Apoc. i. 4. and xiii. 17, 18.

O.

ORIGINAL SIN. See Sin.
ORDERS, (holy) a sacrament. 1 Tim. iv. 14.
 — instituted by Christ at his last supper. Luke xxii. 19, 20. 1 Cor. xi. 24, 25
 — given by imposition of hands. Acts xiii. 3. and xiv. 22. 1 Tim. iv. 14. 2
 Tim. i. 6.
 — to be given by a bishop, not by the people's voice. Acts xiv. 22. Titus i. 5
 — prayer and fasting to be used at the time of conferring them. Acts xiv. 22
OATHS that are unlawful, not to be kept. Mat. xiv. 9. Acts xxiii. 12.

P.

PARDONS, or Indulgences, grounded upon Christ's own words. 2 Cor. ii. 10.
 — grounded on his own example. Mat. xxiii. 43.
 — practised by S. Paul. 2 Cor. ii. 6, 9, 10, 11.
 — are only a remission of temporal punishment due for sin. Ibid.
 — to whom the authority of giving appertaineth. Mat. xvi. 19. James iv.
 — all of them are given in the virtue and name of Christ. 2 Cor. ii. 10.
PARENTS, our duty towards them. Mark vii. 11. Luke ii. 51.
 — duty towards our spiritual. Philemon i. 19.
PENANCE, a sacrament. John xx. 23.
 — is perfect repentance; that is, not only amendment of life, but implying also confession, sorrowful contrition, and painful satisfaction. Mat. iii. 11.
 — S. Paul chastises his body by it. 1 Cor. ix. 27.
 — temporal pain remaineth due when sin is remitted. Heb. xii. 6.
 — works of. Mat. iii. 8. Luke xiii. 8. Acts viii. 22. 1 Cor. xi. 31. 2 Cor. ii. 6, 7. and vi. 5. Heb. x. 31. Apoc. x. 9.
 — the contempt of it a sin against the Holy Ghost. Mat. xii. 31.
 — all sins may be remitted by this sacrament. Heb. vi. and x.
PERFECTION, double: one in this life, another in that to come. Philipp. ii. 12.
PERSECUTION. Comfort to the faithful during such dreadful times. Mat. x. 28.
 Luke vi. 22, 23. and xxii. 30. 1 Pet. iv. 17. Apoc. ii. 9. and xiii. 10.
 — a great one of the faithful, in the latter days. Mark xiii. 8. Luke xxi. 10.
 Apoc. xvi. 14. See Antichrist.
 — Wise evasions to escape such dangers, by S. Paul's example. Acts xxi. 24 and xxiii. 6. and xxv. 11.
PETER, Cephas, Rock, all one. Mat. xvi. 18. John i. 42.
 — Christ, by giving him this name, designed beforehand, and promises to build his Church upon him. Mat. xvi. 18.
 — Christ prayed that his faith might not fail. Luke xxii. 32.
 — Christ blest him. Mat. xvi. 17.
 — his denial of Christ; his tears and repentance. Mat. xxvi. 72, 75. Mark
 xiv. 71, 72.
 — his manifold dignity and pre-eminence. Mat. x. 2. and xvii. 27. and xviii.
 1. Mark iii. 16. and xvi. 7. Luke v. 10. and vi. 14. and viii. 45. and xxii. 81.
 John xxi. 15, 16. Acts xii. 4. 1 Cor. i. 5. Gal. i. 18. and ii. 7.
 — S. Paul submitteth his doctrine to his approbation. Gal. ii. 2.
 — his ship signifieth the Church. Luke v. 8.
POPE, his place and dignity called his apostleship. 1 Cor. xii. 28. Ephea. v. 32
 See Apostles.
 — his supremacy. See Peter.
 — cannot be antichrist. See Antichrist.
PRAYER, long ones not forbidden. Mat. vi. 7

A TABLE OF REFERENCES, ETC.

PRAYER of our Lord, or Pater noster Mat. vi. 9. Luke xi. 2.
 — one for another, is of great effect. Rom. xvi. 30. Coloss. iv. 3. 2 Thess. iii. 1.
 — public ones are more available than private. 2 Cor. i. 11.
 — those of priests are still more so. Heb. v. 7.
PREDESTINATION and REPROBATION. The mystery of it is to be humbly revered.
 Rom. viii. and ix. 20.
 — no person must, by occasion of it, sink into a degree of apathy, and neglect his salvation. Rom. viii. 32. and ix. 14.
 — good works must concur with God's predestination. 2 Pet. i. 10.
PRIESTS, their office and vocation. Heb. v. 1.
 — their dignity. Heb. v. 6, 5.
 — they are called angels. Apoc. i. 20.
 — they are coadjutors with and under Christ, and act in his name. Mark ii. 10. Luke xvii. 14. 1 Cor. ix. 7. 2 Cor. ii. 10. and v. 19.
 — their authority to remit sins. See Peter, Bishops, Clergy.
 — they (and not laymen) are the dispensers of Christ's mysteries. Mat. xiv. 19. Mark viii. 6. Acts x. 41. 1 Cor. xiv. 34. 2 Cor. v. 19.
 — he that despiseth them, despiseth Christ. Luke x. 16.
 — hospitality and alms towards them. Luke ix. 5. Philipp. iv. 15.
 — their perpetual continence requisite. Luke i. 23. 1 Cor. vi. 18. 1 Tim. iii. 2. and v. 11. 2 Tim. ii. 4. Titus i. 8.
PIRIESTHOOD of Christ eternal; the excellency of it. Heb. vii. 1.
 — the honour of that office. Mat. xxiii. 13. Acts xxiii. 5. 1 Tim. v. 19.
PRINCES, how and wherein to be obeyed. Mat. xxii. 21. Mark xii. 17. Rom. iii. 1 Pet. ii. 13, 17.
 — Christ and his apostles charged with disobedience to them. 1 Pet. ii. 13. Rom. xiii. 1.
 — Peter and John disobeyed the magistrates who commanded them not to preach in the name of Jesus. Acts iv. 18, 19.
 — not to obey them in lawful things is a mortal sin. Rom. xiii. 1.
 — themselves must obey and be subject in matters of faith. Heb. xiii. 17.
PROCESSION on Palm Sunday. Mat. xxi. 8.
PURGATORY. See Limbus Patrum, Hell.

R.

RECONCILIATION to the Catholic Church. Mat. v. 24. 2 Cor. i. 5.
RELIGION; persons not professing any are against Christ. Mat. xii. 30.
 — they are most happy who suffer any loss for it. Mark x. 29; 30.
RELIGIOUS LIFE. Their profession is according to Christ's counsel, and the Apostles' example. Mat. xix. 27. Luke v. 28. and xviii. 22. Acts ii. 44.
RELICS, the touching of them; their virtue, miraculous effect, &c. Mat. ix. 21. Mark v. 28. Acts viii. 2. and xix. 12.
 — the touching of Christ, or the hem of his garment, operated miraculously. Mark iii. 10.
 — Christ's sepulchre. Mat. xxviii. 1. See Miracles.
REPROBATION. See Free-will, God, Predestination.
RESTITUTION of ill-gotten goods. Luke xix. 8.
REWARD, what it signifieth. 1 Cor. iii. 8.
 — for confessing Christ openly. Mat. x. 32. Mark viii. 38. Luke ix. 26. and xii. 8.
 — difference of it in heaven. See Heaven.

S.

SACRAMENTS, seven. See Baptism, Confirmation, Eucharist, Penance, Extreme Unction, Holy Orders, and Marriage.
 — grace is given in and by them. John iii. 5. and iv. 23. and xv. 3. and xx. 22. Acts viii. 17. and xxii. 17. Rom. iv. 11. Gal. iii. 27. Ephes. v. 32. 1 Tim. iv. 14. 2 Tim. i. 6. Titus iii. 5. Heb. x. 1. James v. 14, 15. Mark viii. 13.
 — they flowed out of Christ's side, and thence derive their virtues. John xix. 34.
 — contempt of them damnable. Luke vii. 30. Acts x. 47.
 — Blessed Sacrament. The great mystery and institution of it by our Saviour. Mat. xxvi. 20. Mark xiv. 22. Luke xxii. 15, 19, 20. 1 Cor. xi. 23, 24, 25, 26, 27. Heb. ix. 20, 21. and x. 5.
 — the Angels are present at it. Apoc. iv. 8.
 — it is the substantial bread desired in the Pater noster.
 — its pre-eminence above manna. John vi. 49, 58.
 — the wonderful effects of it in the receivers. John vi. 54.
 — the purity and preparation required to receive it worthily. John xiii. 5. 1 Cor. xi. 27, 28, 29.
 — confession of every mortal sin necessary before receiving it. 1 Cor. xi. 28.
 — the danger and punishment of receiving it unworthily. 1 Cor. xi. 23, 27, 32.
SACRILEGE. Taking away holy things, or profaning them. John ii. 15, 16. Acts v. 2, 3, 4.
 — in what cases holy ornaments and jewels may be broken and otherwise employed. Mat. xxvi. 10. John xii. 3, 6. Mark ii. 25.
SAINTS, they know our actions, and hearts, and hear our prayers. Mat. xxiv. 30. Luke xv. 10. and xvi. 28. 1 Cor. ii. 11. and xiii. 10.
 — they are as Angels. Mat. xxii. 30. Luke xx. 36.
 — they may be present with the living. Mat. xvii. 3. Mark ix. 4.
 — they may be present at our altars, &c. Apoc. vi. 9.
 — praying to them, and that they pray for us. Luke xvi. Acts v. 15. and vii. 35, 60. 2 Cor. i. 11. 2 Pet. i. 15. 1 John ii. 1. Apoc. vi. 9, 10.
 — they are our mediators and advocates. 2 Cor. i. 11.
 — Christ is our only Mediator and Advocate. 1 Tim. ii. 5. 1 John ii. 1. See Christ.
 — canonization of them. Mat. ii. 16.
 — the great honour of them, and that it is no derogation to Christ's honour. Mat. xix. 28. Acts xix. 15. 2 Thess. i. 5. 1 Tim. iv. 16. Philemon i. 5. James v. 20. Apoc. ii. 26, 28. and viii. 4. and xii. 7. and xxi. 12.
 — they are patrons of men and countries. Apoc. ii. 26.

SAINTS, they are called saviours, redeemers, &c. without derogation to Christ. Act. vii. 35. 1 Tim. ii. 5. and v. 16. James v. 20.
 — they are our joy and hope. 1 Thess. ii. 18, 19.
SALVATION, no man sure of it but in hope. John xv. 4. Rom. v. 1, 2. and viii. 20, 38, 39. 1 Cor. ii. 12. and iv. 4. and ix. 27. 2 Cor. xiii. 5. Philipp. ii. 12. See Faith.
SATISFACTION. Satisfactory works of one for another. 2 Cor. ii. 10. Coloss. i. 24 — enjoined. Luke iii. 8. See Penance.
SCANDAL. Mark ix. 42. Acts xxi. 24.
SCHISM prefigured in the Jews' schismatical temple. Luke ix. 53. John iv. 20. 1 Cor. x. 21.
 — contrary to the unity of the Church. 1 Cor. xii. 25. Gal. ii. 9. Ephes. iv. 5.
 — the cause which produces it. Rom. xvi. 18.
 — there is no work in it available to salvation. Mat. v. 24. John xv. 4. 1 Cor. xiii. 1. See Church.
SCHISMATICS, they are to be avoided. 2 Cor. vi. 14. 2 Tim. ii. 20, 21.
 — especially their communion. 1 Cor. viii. 10. and x. 18, 19, 20, 21. See Heretics.
SCRIPTURES canonical and not canonical discerned and judged by the Church. Gal. ii. 1, 2.
 — private interpretation of them. 2 Pet. iii. 16.
 — heretics, and the devil himself, produce them in support of their heretical and diabolical doctrines. Mat. iv. 6. and v. 35, 39. and xii. 48. Luke iv. 10. John xiv. 28. Rom. viii. See Heretics, &c.
 — women great tattlers and talkers of them. 1 Tim. ii. 11. 1 Cor. xiv. 34.
 — they are full of profound mysteries. John v. 39. Gal. v. 24.
 — hard to be understood. Luke vi. 1. Acts viii. 31. Heb. vi. 4. 1 Pet. iii. 19. and iv. 6. 2 Pet. iii. 16. Apoc. xx. 7.
 — the difficulty of the Apocalypse. Apoc. 1.
 — they consist in the true sense of the gospel, which is only in the Catholic Church. 2 Cor. iii. 6. 2 Pet. i. 20.
 — the bare letter of them killeth both Jew and heretic. 2 Cor. iii. 6.
 — who are the little ones that best understand them. Mat. xi. 25. Luke x. 20.
 — humility of the ancient Fathers in reading and expounding them. 2 Thess. ii. 6.
 — the interpretation of them called prophecy. Rom. xii. 6.
 — when the same is according to the rule of faith. Heb. viii. 8.
 — we must neither add to nor diminish them. Apoc. xxii. 19.
 — they have not only a literal sense, but also a mystical and allegorical one. Mat. ii. 15. Gal. iv. 24. Heb. iv. 8. 1 John v. 7.
 — the people are not to judge of the sense of them, nor of their pastor's expositions. Acts xvii. 11.
 — of the translating and reading them in the vulgar tongue, with what humility they ought to be read, and of many other points concerning them, see the general preface to the New Testament.
SIMONY, what it is, and why so called. Acts viii. 18.
 — a heinous sin. Acts viii. 22.
SIN, original and actual. Rom. v. 12. 1 John i. 8.
 — all are conceived and born in original sin, Christ and our blessed Lady excepted. Rom. v. 14.
 — no man liveth without it. Mat. vi. 12. 1 John i. 8.
 — mortal and venial. Mat. v. 23. and vi. 12. Rom. i. 32. James i. 15. 1 John i. 8.
 — not God, but the devil is the author of sin. See God.
 — the devil committed iniquity from the beginning. 1 John iii. 8.
 — concupiscence the cause of. James i. 4.
 — it all proceedeth from three special things, mentioned by S. John. 1 John ii. 16.
 — the law did not cause. Rom. v. 20.
 — mortal ones exclude grace and justice. 1 John iii. 6.
 — venial ones consist with grace and true justice. 1 John i. 8.
 — examples of venial ones. Ibid.
 — how they are taken away without any sacrament. John xiii. 10.
 — how they may be forgiven after death. Mark iii. 28, 29.
 — all remission of them is by the passion of Christ. 1 John i. 7.
 — what is meant by sins covered and not imputed. Rom. iv. 7, 8.
 — against the Holy Ghost. Mat. xii. 31.
 — crying to heaven. James v. 4.
 — what is a sin unto death. 1 John v. 16.
 — the degrees of sin signified by the three dead persons raised to life by our Saviour. Mark v. 41.
SPIRIT. To adore God in spirit and truth. John iv. 23.
 — boasting of the. 1 John iv. 1.
 — not to credit every one relative to it, and how to try them. 1 Thess. v. 21.
 — the Church only hath the gift of discerning in these cases. 1 John iv. 1.
 — its testimony in us. Rom. viii. 16.
SUPEREROGATION. Mat. xix. 21. Luke x. 35. and xviii. 22. 1 Cor. ix. 16. See Works.
SUPERSTITION not allowed in the Catholic Church. Acts xvii. 22.
SUPREMACY of temporal princes in ecclesiastical affairs. See Princes.

T.

TITHES, due to God and His priests. Heb. vii. 1, 2.
TOUCHING, a profitable ceremony. See Imposition of Hands, Relics.
TRADITIONS, (apostolical) not written. Mat. xv. 8, 9. Mark vii. 7. Rom. xii. 6. 1 Cor. xi. 23. and xii. 34. and xv. 3. 2 Cor. iii. 8. 2 Thess. ii. 15. 2 Tim. iii. 9. Heb. vi. 1. James v. 17. Jude i. 9.
 — of the Fathers are called the depositum. 1 Tim. vi. 20.
TRINITY, (holy and blessed) a glorious manifestation of it. Mark i. 10, 11.

V.

VIGILS and Nocturns. Mat. xxvi. 41.

A TABLE OF REFERENCES, ETC.

VIRGINITY better than marriage, and more meritorious and grateful to God, being fitter for his service. Mat. i. 23. and xix. 12. Acts xxi. 9. 1 Cor. vii. 28. Apoc. xiv. 4.

— a counsel, not a command. 1 Cor. vii. 25. See Marriage.

VISIONS recorded in Scripture. Acts ix. 8. and x. 11, 30. and xxvii. 23. 2 Cor. xii. 1. See also the Apocalypse.

— some have been lifted up to see the state of the next life. 2 Cor. xii. 2.

UNCTION. See Extreme Unction.

VOW, an act of sovereign worship. Luke x. 40, 41, 42.

— of virginity, or chastity, both lawful and possible. Mat. xix. 11, 12. 1 Tim. v. See Chastity, Continence.

— our blessed Lady vowed virginity. Luke i. 34. See Blessed Lady.

— the daughters of Philip, the deacon, were virgins by vow. Acts xxi. 9.

— the apostles vowed poverty, and professed the religious state of perfection. Mat. xix. 21, 27.

— the breach of one damnable. Acts v. 4. 1 Cor. vii. 7, 9, 28. 1 Tim. v. 11.

— it is breaking our first faith. 1 Tim. v. 12.

— it is going after Satan. 1 Tim. v. 15.

— it is the highest kind of sacrilege. Acts v. 4.

USURY, not to be used among Christians. Luke vi. 35

W.

WORKS, meritorious of life everlasting. Mat. vi. 20. Luke xii. 21. Rom. ii. 6. 1 Cor. iv. 8. 2 Tim. iv. 8. Heb. vi. 10. Apoc. ii. 23.

— done of themselves meritorious without faith and God's grace. 2 Tim. iv. 8.

— we are not justified by faith only, but by faith and good works. See Maria. (1686)

WORKS, (good) before faith, though not meritorious, are preparatives still to the first justification. Acts x. 2.

— that every man shall be rewarded according to his works, is a common phrase in Scripture. Mat. xvi. 27. Rom. ii. 6. 1 Cor. iii. 8. 1 Pet. i. 17. Apoc. xxii. 12.

— all of a good kind are rewarded in heaven. Luke xviii. 30. Ephes. vi. 8. Coloss. iii. 24. 2 Tim. i. 12.

— heaven is due for them, according to God's justice. 2 Tim. iv. 8. Hab. vi. 10.

— they give great confidence before God. Heb. x. 34.

— may be done in view of reward. Mat. vi. 4. 1 Cor. ix. 23.

— of mercy how acceptable to God. Acts xvi. 33. 1 Pet. iv. 8.

— satisfactory. See Faith, Justification, Merit, Reward.

— heaven prepared only for those who deserve it by good works. Mat. xx. 23. and xxv. 34.

— the book of every man's works opened at the day of judgment. Apoc. xx. 12.

WORLDLY FRIENDS. Mark iii. 33. Luke xii. 51.

Z.

ZEAL against heretics. Apoc. ii. 6. See Heretics.

— in God's cause. Apoc. iii. 16. and xx. 9.

— in religion accounted madness. Mark iii. 21.

— and fervour to hear and follow Christ. Mark viii. 2, 34, 35.

— in saving souls. Luke v. 19. and xv. 4. Philipp. ii. 17.

— against sin. 1 Cor. v. 6.

A T A B L E

OF ALL

THE EPISTLES AND GOSPELS

For all Sundays and Holidays throughout the year; and also, of the most notable Feasts in the Roman Calendar

It must be observed, that the Verses at which the Epistle or Gospel begin and end, are set down after the Chapter

ADVENT, 1 Sund. Ep. Rom. xiii. 11. 14. Ga. Luke xxi. 25. 34.
 2 Sund. Ep. Rom. xv. 4. 13. Ga. Matt. xi. 2. 10.
 3 Sund. Ep. Philip. iv. 4. 7. Ga. John i. 19. 28.
 4 Sund. Ep. 1 Cor. iv. 1. 5. Ga. Luke iii. 1. 6.
 Christmas, 1 Mass, Ep. Tit. ii. 11. 15. Ga. Luke ii. 1. 15.
 2 Mass, Ep. Tit. iii. 4. 8. Ga. Luke ii. 15. 21.
 3 Mass, Ep. Heb. i. 1. 12. Ga. John i. 1. 14.
 St. Stephen, Ep. Acts vi. and vii. 54. 59. Ga. Matt. xxiii. 34. 39.
 St. John, Ep. Eccl. xv. 1. 7. Ga. John xxi. 20. 24.
 H. Innocents, Ep. Apoc. xiv. 1. 6. Ga. Matt. ii. 15. 18.
 St. Thomas, Cant. Ep. Heb. v. 1. 7. Ga. John x. 11. 17.
 St. Silvester, Ep. 2 Tim. iv. 1. 9. Ga. Luke xii. 55. 41.
 New Year, Ep. Tit. ii. 11. 15. Ga. Luke ii. 21. 22.
 Epiphany, Ep. Isai. lx. 1. 7. Ga. Matt. ii. 1. 18.
 1 Sund. Ep. Rom. xii. 1. 6. Ga. Luke ii. 42. 52.
 2 Sund. Ep. Rom. xii. 6. 16. Ga. John ii. 1. 12.
 Name of Jesus, Ep. Acts. iv. 8. 12. Ga. Luke ii. 21.
 3 Sund. Ep. Rom. xii. 16. 21. Ga. Matt. viii. 1. 15.
 4 Sund. Ep. Rom. xiii. 8. 11. Ga. Matt. viii. 23. 28.
 5 Sund. Ep. Coloss. iii. 12. 18. Ga. Matt. xiii. 24. 31.
 6 Sund. Ep. 1 Thes. i. 2. 10. Ga. Matt. xiii. 31. 36.
 Septuagesima, Ep. 1 Cor. ix. 24. x. 5. Ga. Matt. xx. 1. 17.
 Sexagesima, Ep. 2 Cor. xi. 19. xii. 10. Ga. Luke viii. 4. 16.
 Quinquagesima, Ep. 1 Cor. xiii. 1. 13. Ga. Luke xviii. 31. 34.
 Ash-Wednesday, Ep. Joel ii. 12. 20. Ga. Matt. vi. 16. 22.
 1 Lent, Ep. 2 Cor. vi. 11. Ga. Matt. iv. 1. 12.
 2 Lent, Ep. 1 Thes. iv. 1. 8. Ga. Matt. xvii. 1. 10.
 3 Lent, Ep. Ephes. v. 1. 9. Ga. Luke xi. 14. 29.
 4 Lent, Ep. Gal. iv. 22. 31. Ga. John vi. 1. 15.
 Passion-Sunday, Ep. Heb. ix. 11. 15. Ga. John viii. 46. 59.
 Palm-Sunday, Ep. Phil. ii. 5. 11. Ga. Matt. xxi. 1. 10. and chaps. xxvi. xxvii.
 Maunday-Thursday, Ep. 1 Cor. xi. 20. 33. Ga. John xiii. 1. 15.
 Good-Friday, Ep. Exod. xii. 12. Ga. John xviii. xix.
 Holy-Saturday, Ep. Coloss. iii. 1. 4. Ga. Matt. xxviii. 1. 7.
 Easter-Sunday, Ep. 1 Cor. v. 7. 8. Ga. Mark xvi. 1. 7.
 Easter-Monday, Ep. Acts xx. 37. 43. Ga. Luke xxiv. 13. 35.

Easter-Tuesday, Ep. Acts xiii. 26. 33. Ga. Luke xxiv. 36. 47.
 Low-Sunday, Ep. 1 John v. 4. 10. Ga. John xx. 19. 31.
 2 Sund. after Easter, Ep. 1 Pet. ii. 21. 25. Ga. John x. 11. 16.
 3 Sund. Ep. 1 Pet. ii. 11. 18. Ga. John xvi. 16. 22.
 4 Sund. Ep. James i. 17. 21. Ga. John xvi. 5. 14.
 5 Sund. Ep. James i. 22. 27. Ga. John xvi. 22. 30.
 Ascension, Ep. Acts i. 1. 11. Ga. Mark xvi. 14. 20.
 6 Sund. Ep. 1 Peter iv. 7. 12. Ga. John xv. 26. xvi. 4.
 Whit. Sunday, Ep. Acts ii. 1. 11. Ga. John xiv. 23. 31.
 Whit. Monday, Ep. Acts x. 42. 48. Ga. John iii. 16. 21.
 Tuesday, Ep. Acts viii. 14. 17. Ga. John x. 1. 10.
 Trinity-Sunday, Ep. Rom. x. 33. 36. Ga. Matt. xxviii. 18. 30.
 Corp. Christi, Ep. 1 Cor. xi. 23. 29. Ga. John vi. 56. 59.
 2 Sund. Ep. 1 John iii. 13. 18. Ga. Luke xiv. 16. 24.
 3 Sund. Ep. 1 Pet. v. 6. 11. Ga. Luke xv. 1. 10.
 4 Sund. Ep. Rom. viii. 18. 23. Ga. Luke v. 1. 11.
 5 Sund. Ep. 1 Pet. iii. 8. 15. Ga. Matt. v. 20. 24.
 6 Sund. Ep. Rom. vi. 3. 11. Ga. Mark viii. 1. 10.
 7 Sund. Ep. Rom. vi. 19. 23. Ga. Matt. vii. 15. 21.
 8 Sund. Ep. Rom. viii. 12. 17. Ga. Luke xvi. 1. 9.
 9 Sund. Ep. 1 Cor. x. 6. 14. Ga. Luke xix. 41. 47.
 10 Sund. Ep. 1 Cor. xii. 2. 11. Ga. Luke xviii. 9. 14.
 11 Sund. Ep. 1 Cor. xv. 1. 10. Ga. Mark vii. 31. 37.
 12 Sund. Ep. 2 Cor. iii. 4. 9. Ga. Luke x. 23. 37.
 13 Sund. Ep. Gal. iii. 16. 22. Ga. Luke xvii. 11. 19.
 14 Sund. Ep. Gal. v. 16. 24. Ga. Matt. vi. 24. 33.
 15 Sund. Ep. Gal. v. 25. vi. 11. Ga. Luke vii. 11. 16.
 16 Sund. Ep. Eph. iii. 13. 21. Ga. Luke xiv. 1. 11.
 17 Sund. Ep. Eph. iv. 1. 6. Ga. Matt. xxii. 25. 46.
 18 Sund. Ep. 1 Cor. i. 4. 9. Ga. Matt. ix. 1. 8.
 19 Sund. Ep. Eph. iv. 23. 28. Ga. Matt. xii. 1. 14.
 20 Sund. Ep. Eph. v. 15. 21. Ga. John iv. 46. 53.
 21 Sund. Ep. Eph. vi. 10. 17. Ga. Matt. xviii. 23. 25.
 22 Sund. Ep. Philip. i. 6. 11. Ga. Matt. xxii. 15. 21.
 23 Sund. Ep. Phil. iii. 17. 21. Ga. Matt. ix. 18. 26.
 24 Sund. Ep. Col. i. 9. 14. Ga. Matt. xxiv. 15. 35.

ON THE FEASTS OF THE SAINTS.

St. Andrew, Ep. Rom. x. 10. 18. Ga. Matt. iv. 18. 22.
 Conception of the B. V. M., Ep. Prov. viii. 22. 36. Ga. Matt. i. 1. 16.
 St. Thomas, Ep. Eph. ii. 19. 22. Ga. John xx. 24. 29.
 Conv. S. Paul, Ep. Acts ix. 1. 22. Ga. Matt. xix. 27. 29.
 Candlemas, Ep. Malach. iii. 1. 5. Ga. Luke ii. 22. 32.
 St. Matthias, Ep. Acts i. 15. 26. Ga. Matt. xi. 25. 30.
 St. Patrick, Ep. Eccl. xlv. xlv. Ga. Matt. xxv. 14. 23.
 St. Joseph, Ep. Eccles. xlv. 1. 6. Ga. Matt. i. 18. 22.
 Annunciation, Ep. Isai. vii. 10. 16. Ga. Luke i. 26. 38.
 St. George, Ep. 2 Tim. ii. 8. 10. iii. 10. 12. Ga. John xv. 1. 7.
 St. Mark, Ep. Ezech. i. 10. 15. Ga. Luke x. 1. 9.
 SS. Philip and Jacob, Ep. Wis. v. 1. 5. Ga. John xiv. 1. 18.
 Inv. Cross, Ep. Philip. ii. 5. 11. Ga. John iii. 1. 15.
 St. Barnaby, Ep. Acts xi. 21. 27. Ga. Matt. x. 16. 22.
 St. John Bapt. Ep. Isai. xlix. 1. 8. Ga. Luke i. 57. 68.
 SS. Peter and Paul, Ep. Acts xii. 1. 11. Ga. Matt. xvi. 13. 19.
 Visitation B. V. M., Ep. Cant. ii. 8. 14. Ga. Luke i. 39. 47.

St. Mary Magd. Ep. Cant. iii. 2. &c. Ga. Luke vii. 36. 50.
 St. James, Ep. 1 Cor. iv. 9. 15. Ga. Matt. xx. 20. 28.
 St. Ann, Ep. Prov. xxxi. 10. &c. Ga. Matt. xiii. 44. 52.
 Transfiguration, Ep. 2 Pet. i. 16. 19. Ga. Matt. xvii. 1. 9.
 St. Laurence, Ep. 2 Cor. ix. 6. 10. Ga. John xii. 24. 26.
 Assumption, B. V. M., Ep. Eccles. xxiv. 11. 20. Ga. Luke x. 23. 42.
 St. Bartholomew, Ep. 1 Cor. xii. 27. 31. Ga. Luke vi. 12. 19.
 Nativity B. V. M., Ep. Prov. viii. 22. 36. Ga. Matt. i. 1. 16.
 Exalt. Cross, Ep. Phil. ii. 5. 11. Ga. John xii. 31. 36.
 St. Matthew, Ep. Ezech. i. 10. 15. Ga. Matt. ix. 9. 13.
 St. Michael, Ep. Apoc. i. 1. 5. Ga. Matt. xviii. 1. 10.
 Angel-Guardians, Ep. Exod. xxiii. 20. 23. Ga. Matt. xviii. 1. 10.
 St. Luke, Ep. 2 Cor. viii. 15. 24. Ga. Luke x. 1. 9.
 SS. Simon and Jude, Ep. Eph. iv. 7. 13. Ga. John xv. 17. 25.
 All Saints, Ep. Apoc. vii. 2. 12. Ga. Matt. v. 1. 12.
 All Souls, Ep. 1 Cor. xv. 51. 57. Ga. John v. 25. 29.
 Presentation B. V. M., Ep. Eccl. xxiv. 14. 16. Ga. Luke xi. 27. 28.

NOTE. Ep. stands for Epistle, Ga. for Gospel.

THEOLOGICAL HISTORY IN MINIATURE:

BRING

A LIST OF THE POPES, SAINTS, MARTYRS, EMINENT CATHOLICS, WRITERS, COUNCILS, PERSECUTIONS, HERETICS AND SCHISMATICS,

FROM THE EARLIEST PERIOD OF CHRISTIANITY TO THE PRESENT TIME

CAREFULLY

COMPILED FROM ALBAN BUTLER'S SAINTS' LIVES, WARD'S TREE OF LIFE, MISSIONARY PRIESTS, &c. &c.

[illegible]

LET HERETICS INVENT ANY THING LIKE THIS. Confugant tale aliquid Heretici. Tert.

[illegible]

THEOLOGICAL HISTORY IN MINIATURE—Continued.

[illegible]

THEOLOGICAL HISTORY IN MINIATURE—Continued.

HERETICS AND SCHISMATICS.	SAINTS, EMINENT CATHOLICS, MARTYRS, AND PERSECUTORS.	COUNCILS.	POPES.	NATIONS CONVERTED TO THE FAITH.	CATHOLIC WRITERS.	HERETICS AND SCHISMATICS.
Fanatics appear,	S. Oswald, b. of Worcester, S. Mand, (or Mathilda) queen of Germany, S. Edward, king of England, S. Munio, b. of Bonifacio, ab. of ap. of Russia, S. Adelbert, ab. of Wurzburg, S. Myetti, a. S. Bobo, c. S. Ethelwald, b. of Winchester, S. Cormac, k. of Ireland, & b. of Cashel, S. Edith, v. S. Wenceslaus, duke of Bohemia, S. Gerard, a. S. Walslein, c. S. Bernard, a. S. Gerard, count of Auxilley, a. S. Wolfgang, b. S. Harold VI. king of Denmark, S. Nicon, c. S. Conrad, b. of Constance, a. S. Alice, empress, S. Paul of Leutru, hermit , S. Ulrich, (or Wulfrid) b. S. Sigfrid, b. and apost. of Sweden, S. Adelaide, v. S. S. Elphage, ab. and m. Persecutions in Bohemia and Spain.	Constantinople, 920, Ravenna, 967, Rome, 967, 967, England, (synod at Winchester) 963 and 973, Lateran, 993.	BENEDICT IV. LEO V. SERGIUS III. ANASTASIUS III. Lando. JOHN X. LEO VI. STEPHEN VIII. LEO VII. STEPHEN IX. MARTIN III. AGAPETUS II. JOHN XII. LEO VIII. or BENEDICT V. BENEDICT VI. DOMINUS II. BENEDICT VII. JOHN XIV. JOHN XV. or XVI. GREGORY V. or XI. or 999.	(a fierce nation, inhabiting a part of Pomerania, between the rivers Oder and Wipper) about an. 960, by S. Adelbert; Hungarians, Bohemians, and Poland, Harold, k. of Denmark, Muscovy, and Liberius, their duke, Boland, duke of the Normans, Polonia and Miselas, their king, Gotland and Sweden, by S. Sigfride, an Englishman.	Asterius of Mibertia, Leo the philosopher emp. Euthyrius, p. of Alexandria, S. Ado, a. of Cluni, Simeon Metaphrastes, ab. of Vercelli, S. Gerard, b. Constantine Porphyrogenita, S. Odo, ab. of Canterbury, Floard, of Rheims, Luprand, b. of Cremona, Noiger, b. of Liege, S. Ugo, b. of Augsburg, Radulph of Verona, Radulph of the Egyptian, S. Abbo, a. of England, S. Dunstan, ab. of Canterbury, Stephen, b. of Liege, Radulphus, mo. S. Rabbod, b. the grammarian, is supposed to have lived in this age.	the Manichees revive; the Anthropomorphites continue.
Leuteric, bishop of Sens;	S. Jo in Gualbert, a. S. Dominic Loricatus, S. Wulstan, b. of Worcester, c. B. Robert, a. S. Theobald, c. S. Stanislas, b. of Cricon, S. Canute, king of Denmark, S. Margaret, q. of Scotland, S. Henry II. emperor, S. Ladislas, king of Hungary, S. Arnoul, b. of Soissons, S. Stephen, king of Hungary, S. Romualdus, ab. of Camaldoli, S. Cunegunda, empress, S. Lucy, v. S. Olaus, king of Norway, S. Osmund, b. c. S. Hemma, v. S. Malrubius, hermit and m. of Scotland, Persecution in Russia.	Dortmund, 1057; Rheims, 1049, Rome, 1060, Vercelli, 1050, Paris, 1050, Florence, 1054, Rome, 1059, Rouen, 1063, Paderborn, 1076, Rome, 1079, (these last, in Italy, were held against Berengarius) Lyons, 1057, Clermont, 1095, Bari, 1098, Rome, 1099.	SYLVESTER II. JOHN XVII. SERGIUS IV. BENEDICT VIII. JOHN XIX. or XX. BENEDICT IX. ab. GREGORY VI. ab. CLEMENT I. DAMASUS II. S. VICTOR II. STEPHEN X. NICHOLAS II. ALEXANDER II. GREGORY VII. S. VICTOR III. URBAN II. d. 1099.	The Pomeranians, the fallen Hungarians, and their king, some in Prussia, Russians, Livonians, the Transylvanians, by S. Olaus, Sweden and Norway, by S. Ulfrid and Eskilla.	Almo, mo. of Fleury, Hariger of Lobbes, a. Algerius, S. Bruno, ab. of Prussia, Dittman, b. of Meisburg, Bonchard, b. of Worms, S. Fulbertus, b. of Chartres, Ademar, Adaran of Sens, Alexis of Constantinople, Glaber of Cluni, S. Othlo of Cluni, Adelman, b. of Brescia, Herman Contract, mo. Albanus, ab. of Florence, Durand, a. of Troarn, Theophylact, the commentator, Gislebert, b. of Aversa, Lanfranc, ab. of Canterbury, Ingulphus, S. Anselm of Lucca, Hugh, b. of Laugres, Eusebius Bruno, b. of Angers, S. Anselm, ab. of Canterbury, S. Anno, b.	Michael Cerularius, pat. of Constantinople, renews the Greek schism, 1053, (he founded his separation on the most frivolous pretensions and notorious slanders and notoriety slanders) He stated, that if his objections were answered, he could bring a thousand others; by which words he showed a resolution bent obstinately to form a schism at all rates) Roscelin, 1095, Wedlo, the Incestuous, Gilbert.
Basil, chief of the Begonians, 1110; Tanchelin, 1124; Arnold of Brescia, 1139; Peter Abeldard, 1140; the Albigenses, 1147; Henricians, 1147; Peter of Bruls, 1147;	S. Thomas, ab. of Canterbury, S. Laurence, (son to Maurice O'Toole, a powerful prince of Leinster) ab. of Dublin, S. Otho, b. of Bamberg, c. of Eskille, S. Malachy, ab. S. William, ab. of Lincoln, S. William, ab. of Lincoln, S. Isidore, pat. of Madrid, S. Norbert, ab. S. Eric, king of Sweden, S. Stephen, a. S. Albert, ab. S. Cella, ab. of Armingh, S. Helen, m. Hildegardis, v. S. Leopold, marquis of Austria, S. Resilla, v. S. Waltheof, a Charles the good, earl of Flanders, S. Galdin, ab. Persecutions in Spain and Slavonia.	Wetminster, 1102, Rheims, 1119, Soissons, 1121, 9th gen. c. at Lateran, 1123, Troyes, 1129, Rheims, 1134, Pisa, 1134, 10th gen. c. at Lateran, 1139, Sens, 1140, Auxerre, 1147, Tours, 1163, 11th gen. c. at Lateran, 1179.	PASCHAL II. GELASIUS II. CALIXTUS II. HONORIUS II. INNOCENT II. CECILIANUS II. LUCIUS II. EUGENIUS III. ANASTASIUS IV. ALEXANDER III. URBAN III. GREGORY VIII. CLEMENT III. CELESTINE III. d. 1193.	Pomerania fully converted, Livonia, Finland, by S. Henry, the Goths, and Magnus, their king, Norway fully converted, Nicholas Breakpear, an Englishman, afterwards pope Adrian the fourth, preached the Catholic faith there.	S. Stephen, a. of Cilicaz, S. Robert, a. of Molesmo, Siebert, of Glombour, Odo, b. of Canbury, S. Hugh, a. of Cluni, Leo of Merico, ab. S. Robert of Arbrissola, Eadmar, Gilbert of Nogent, S. Bruno of Segul, Alger, mo. S. Hugh of Grenoble, b. Hilbert, ab. Otho, b. of Frisingen, S. Bernard, a. Gratian the canonist, mo. Peter Lombard, b. Richard of S. Victor, John of Salisbury, b. Peter Comestor, Euthymius of Melite-bary, mo. Zonaras, mo. William of Thierry, a. Zonaras, mo. Rupert, b. of Lincoln.	Gilbert of Poere, 1148; Dancertius, 1166; the Publicans, 1167; the Cathari, 1171; Peter Valdo, 1184; the Albigenses revive, Marsilius, the Patens, Ludu, Waldenses, Corcellis, the Petrobrussians.
Amauri, 1200; the Stalings, 1202; the Flagellantes, 1209; the Apostolici, 1287; the Fratres, 1296; (introduced by certain Grey Friars, in the marquisate of Ancona, who made all perfection to consist in a severe poverty; rebelled against the Church, and raised against the pope and other pastors.)	S. Demitric, c. S. Francis, a. S. Gertrude, v. S. Zeta, v. S. Clara, v. S. Lewis, b. of Toulouse, S. Peter, m. S. Helwig, duchess of Poland, S. Albert, pat. of Jerusalem, S. Philip Beniti, a. S. Thomas of Hereford, S. Ferdinand III. king of Castile and Leon, S. Isabel, v. S. Hugh of Lincoln, S. Elizabeth of Hungary, S. Felix of Valois, S. Sylvester of Guzzolino, S. Peter Gonzales, patron of mariners, S. Margaret of Cortona, pen. S. Walter, a. S. Margaret, princess of Hungary, S. Seraphin, m. Persecution in Lithuania.	12th gen. c. at Lateran, 1215, Montpelier, 1215, Oxford, 1222, 13th gen. c. at Lyons, 1245, 14th gen. c. at Lyons, 1274, one in Germany, against the Stalings.	INNOCENT III. HONORIUS III. GREGORY IX. CELESTINE IV. INNOCENT IV. ALEXANDER IV. URBAN IV. CLEMENT IV. GREGORY X. ADRIAN V. JOHN XX. or XXI. NICHOLAS III. MARTIN IV. HONORIUS IV. NICHOLAS IV. PETER CELESTINE, d. 1294.	Several Tartarian dukes, S. Hyacinth preaches the faith to the northern nations, Cassaban, emperor of Tartary, Livonia and Prussia fully converted, Lithuania by the knights of S. Mary, Peter, grand duke of Russia, the Greek Church unites with the Latin, in the 14th c. of Lyons.	Joachim, a. Theodorus Balsamon, Stephen Langton, S. Anthony of Padua, James of Vitri, car. b. of Acon, S. Edmund, ab. of Canterbury, Alexander of Hales, Vincent of Beauvais, Rainierius Sacchi, mo. S. Peter Nolasco, a. Hugh of S. Cher, car. a. Henry of Lusa, Robert Sorbon, William de Saint-Amour, S. Thomas Aquinas, a. Haymo, general of the order of S. Francis, S. Bonaventura, b. d. S. Raymond, c. Martinus Polonus, Albertus Magnus, Henry of Ghent, William Durand, John Vecius, Peter John de Olive, James of Vorace.	Segarellus, 1200; Bogonatus, Herman, David of Dinant, During this century various parts of Europe were deeply infected with the poison of heresies, under the denomination of Cathari, (or New Arians, Bous-Maniches, &c. They committed the greatest impieties and disorders imaginable, thereby becoming enemies to public peace and the laws of civil society.

THEOLOGICAL HISTORY IN MINIATURE—Continued.

HERETICS AND SCHEMATISM.	SAINTS, EMINENT CATHOLICS, MARTYRS, AND PERSECUTIONS.	COUNCILS.	POPES.	NATIONS CONVERTED TO THE FAITH.	CATHOLIC WRITERS.	HERETICS AND SCHEMATISM.
14TH CENTURY.	Beguards and Beguines, 1312; Arnold of Villeneuve, 1317; the Quietists, 1341; Gualtherius, 1373; Raymond Lullus, 1376;	Rome, 1302, 1310, 1312; 15th gen. c. at Vienna, 1312; Avignon, 1337; Dublin, 1351; England, against Wycliff, 1382; 1st national c. of Paris, 1395.	191 BONIFACE VIII. 192 BENEDICT XII. at Avignon. 193 CLEMENT V. 194 JOHN XXII. 195 BENEDICT VI. 196 BENEDICT VII. 197 URBAN VI. 198 GREGORY XI. 199 URBAN VI. at Rome. 200 CLEMENT VII. (doubtful).	Lagello, k. of Lithuania, and eight brothers, the Bosnians, Parmanians, the Cumans and Lipriensians, the Canary islands, Azores, the Emperor of the Turks, the Samogitians.	John Duns Scotus, car. in Moine , Giles of Rome, Durand of S. Porcian, W. Ockham, Nich. de Balthazar, car. b. Henry Suso, mo. S. John Columban, John of Tynemouth, John Rousbrocius, a. Peter Paludanus, B. John of Burgh, Guido the Carmelite, Simon de Cassia, J. Bacon, Richard Middleton, mo. Peter Aureolus, ab. Augustine of Ancona, mo. Hervens Natalia, John Thauler, S. Catharine of Siena, Fr. Petrarca.	John Wycliff, 1377; the Lollards, Michael of Cesena, Dulcinists, Justus and Bonatus, The Templars, Barthold de Borbaca, John de Poliac, Acindynus.
15TH CENTURY.	John Huss, 1402; (several parts of Germany, during this century, were overrun with the followers of this man, committing the most unheard of barbarities, and plundering the whole country. S. J. Capistran wrote against them.)	Pisa, 1409; 16th gen. c. at CONSTANCE, 1414; Paris, 1429; Basil, 1431; removed to Ferrara, 1437; 17th gen. c. at FLORENCE, 1439.	201 BENEDICT XIII. deposed . 202 Doubtful popes at Avignon . 203 INNOCENT VII. 204 GREGORY XII. deposed . 205 ALEXANDER V. 206 MARTIN V. 207 EUGENIUS IV. 208 NICHOLAS V. 209 CALIXTUS III. 210 PIUS II. 211 SIXTUS IV. 212 INNOCENT VIII. di. 1492 .	Zera Jacob, added to the Church, Jews and Moors by S. Vincent Ferrer, the Kingdom of Bontonia, the Greeks united to the Church, Congo, Guinea, Angola, the Armenians.	Peter de Alaco, car. ab. John Gerson, Simon of Thessalonica , Thomas Walden, mo. Alphonsus Tostatus, b. S. Laurence Justinian, first pat. of Venice , c. S. John Capistran, S. Antoninus, ab. Nicholas Panormitanus, pat. of Constantinople , Nicholas of Cusa, car. b. Enea Sylvius , Twarcemata , car. Dionysius Carthusianus, mo. Thomas à Kempis, Reserion , car. ab. Naclerus, Henry Harpinus, a. John Capgrave, a. John Picus of Mirandola, Marsilius Ficinus, Paulus Burgensis, Trithemius, Platina.	Callixtus, Herman Riswick, Horreica, John Koadus, Pickards, the Orphanas, the Russian and Muscovian schism, Tympanists, F. Dresen and Jacobellus, Matthew Palmer.
16TH CENTURY.	Brothers of Bohemia, 1504; LUTHER, 1517; Melancthon, 1518; Carlostadt, 1518; Zuinglius, 1518; Le Clerc, 1523; Geomarpadus, 1524; Muncer and the Anabaptists, 1525; Sacramentarians, 1526; Ubiquitarians, 1527; Bucer, 1528; the Lutherans first called Protestants, 1529; M. Servetus and the Anti-Trinitarians, 1531;	Senome, Peterkau, 1510; Lateran, 1512; Cologne, 1536; 18th gen. c. at Trent, 1542;	214 ALEXANDER VI. 215 PIUS III. 216 JULIUS II. 217 LEO X. 218 ADEMAN VI. 219 CLEMENT VII. 220 PAUL III. 221 JULIUS III. 222 MARCELLUS II. 223 PAUL IV. 224 PIUS V. 225 S. GREGORY XIII. 226 SIXTUS V. 227 URBAN VII. 228 GREGORY XIV. 229 INNOCENT IX. di. 1591 .	Many parts of the Indies, by S. Francis Xavier, South America by S. Lewis Bertrand, emperor of Ethiopia, united to the Church, many of the West India islands, the King of Mexico and Bungo, many about Geneva, parts of China and Africa.	Car. Ximenes, ab. John Fisher, b. S. Thomas More, Ven. John D'Avila, mo. Car. Pole, ab. S. Carlos , Car. Hostia , John Beckius, Nicolaus Sanders, mo. S. Theresa , a. a. Lewis of Granada, mo. Bartholomew de Martyribus, ab. Car. Allen , ab. S. John of the cross, Car. Pignatelli , mo. Harding, pr. Lindanus , b. S. Suetus of Siena, mo. Salmeron, Parsons , mo. Artus Montanus, F. Tortian, Jansenius, D. Erasmus, Reynolds, Em. Sa. Ribera, Richard Bryslow, Car. Cajetan , M. A. Flaminus.	John of Leyden, 1534; CALVIN, 1535; Osmiler, 1550; Valentine Gentilis, 1553; Faustus Socinus, 1561; English Church, 1561; Episcopallians and Presbyterians, 1569; Puritans, 1563; Robert Brown, 1583; Fox, the Martyrologist, John Knox, Parker, Jewell, Cranmer, Horn, Ochinus, Beza.
17TH CENTURY.	Gomar, 1604; Arminius, 1603; Vorstius, 1611; Scots Presbyterians, 1613; the Illuminated, 1623; Jansenists, 1631; Fanatics,	Paris, 1605; Poland, 1725;	231 CLEMENT VIII. 232 LEO XI. 233 PAUL V. 234 GREGORY XV. 235 URBAN VIII. 236 INNOCENT X. 237 ALEXANDER VII. 238 CLEMENT IX. 239 INNOCENT XI. 240 ALEXANDER VIII. 241 INNOCENT XII. di. 1700 .	Many Persians by the Augustines and Carmelites, Siam, America, Paraguay by the Jesuits, Asia, Tibet, &c. the King of Sierra Leone, New France by the Carmelites and Jesuits, W. Indies, &c. more fully.	Vasquez Suarez, mo. Carda , Perron & de Berrulle, Barcinus, Bellarmin , Trinius, Estius , mo. Sylvius, the two Waldenburgs , Labbe, Thos. Ward, Tillemont, Turberville , Petau, Henry Spondas, Jon. Bonfere , J. Gordon, Martiana, Woodhead, Jas. Bonfere , J. Gordon, Martiana, Corn. a. Lapide, Malvenda, Menochius, Mar. Mersema, Jo. Morinus, Pineda, Riccioli, Salten, Trin, Vasseuer, Villalpand, Worthington, Peter de Villars, Allatius and Arcandus, Baker, mo. Talbot , ab. Lewis de Ponte,	Fox and Quakers, 1655; Spinoza, 1670; Molinus and Quietists, Swinkler, Piscator and Tilenus, Hobbes, Independent, Tindists, Solidists, Huguenots, Metaphorists, Bayle.
18TH CENTURY.	Clarke, Unitarians, Wesley and Whitfield, two sorts of Methodist, Hondelein, Scipio de Etolia, (bishop of Pistoria), Priestley, Welsbaup, De la Mennais, Dollinger, Reinkens.	Rome, 1725;	243 CLEMENT XI. 244 INNOCENT XIII. 245 BENEDICT XIII. 246 CLEMENT XII. 247 BENEDICT XIV. 248 CLEMENT XIII. 249 CLEMENT XIV. 250 PIUS VI. di. 1792 .	Some in Cochinchina, Tonquin, many in China, Catholic religion publicly followed in France, parts of the East, English mission.	Fenelon, Huet, Fleury, Babin, Witham, Tournefort, Montfaucon, Hornhold, Masillon, Calnet, Abbas , Bader , Chadon , Hobbes , Berger , Fleischer , Tournefort , Huguenot , O'Leary , Manning , Bourdaine , Gather , Bassat , Collet , Walsley , Rondet , Mic. le Quen , Languet , Duquesne , Du Pin , Berthier , Du Hamel .	Marvians, Swedenborg, Illuminated Philosophers, Quakers, People of no religion, Semiquetists, Voltaire, Rousseau, Atheists, &c.
19TH CENTURY.		Paris, 1811; Baltimore, 1820-25; 254 Pius VIII. 1831; 255 GREGORY XVI. 1831; Pius IX. 1846;	251 PIUS VII. 1800. 252 LEO XII. 1823. 253 PIUS VIII. 1829. 254 GREGORY XVI. 1831. 255 Pius IX. 1846.	Conversions in Armenia, Tonquin, central Asia, Africa, in the Protestant Governments of Europe, and missions opened and carried on in Australasia, and Oceania.	Gahan, pr. Bernalt, Bercastel, Feller, Guénée, Marchetti, Hy. Miner, Doyle, Lingard, Perrove, Troverius, Frayssinous, Car. Wiseman .	Thos. Paine, Southey, Various sects of Illuminated, Irvingites, Tatties, Little Egles, Millerism, Mormonism, Old Catholic heresy, Armenian Schism, &c.

